

✓ Headlam
Domb. coll.
1842. x1.

DISSERTATIONS

ON

THE PROPHECIES,

WHICH HAVE

REMARKABLY BEEN FULFILLED,

AND

AT THIS TIME ARE FULFILLING IN THE WORLD.

By THOMAS NEWTON, D.D.

LATE LORD BISHOP OF BRISTOL.

NEW EDITION.

LONDON:

PRINTED FOR LONGMAN & CO.; JOHN RICHARDSON; J. M. RICHARDSON; HATCHARD & SON; BALDWIN & CRADOCK; J. G. & F. RIVINGTON; HAMILTON
& CO.; J. DUNCAN; WHITTAKER & CO.; BLACK, YOUNG & CO.; SIMPKIN &
MARSHALL; J. DOWDING; R. MACKIE; J. NUNN; AND J. PARKER, OXFORD.

1832.

DISSERTATIONS

THE PROPHETS,

BY

ALMARAHLY BEN TEFERAH

LONDON:

GILBERT & RIVINGTON, PRINTERS,

ST. JOHN'S SQUARE.

BY THOMAS ARNOLD, D.D.

NEW EDITION

LONDON:

THE LONDON & WEST INDIA MERCHANTS, 1, N. B. STREET,
AND THE LONDON & WEST INDIA MERCHANTS, 1, N. B. STREET,
AND THE LONDON & WEST INDIA MERCHANTS, 1, N. B. STREET,
AND THE LONDON & WEST INDIA MERCHANTS, 1, N. B. STREET,
AND THE LONDON & WEST INDIA MERCHANTS, 1, N. B. STREET,

CONTENTS.

INTRODUCTION.

page 1—4.

Prophecies one of the strongest proofs of revelation, 1.—A history of prophecy desired by Lord Bacon, 1.—The consequence plain from the believing of prophecies to the believing of revelation, 1.—The objection that the prophecies were written after the events, groundless, and betrays great ignorance, or something worse, 2.—The truth of prophecy may be proved by instances of things fulfilling at this very time, 3.—The evidence drawn from prophecy, a growing evidence, 3.—Miracles the great proofs of revelation to the first ages, prophecies to the last, 3.—The necessity to which infidels are reduced, either to renounce their senses, or to admit the truth of revelation, 3.—Most of the principal prophecies of Scripture will be comprehended in this work, as well as several of the most material transactions in history, 3, 4.

DISSERTATION I.

NOAH'S PROPHECY.

page 5—17.

Very few prophecies till Noah, 5.—Noah's drunkenness, and the behaviour of his sons thereupon, 5.—In consequence of their different behaviour he was enabled to foretell the different fortunes of their families, 6.—The prophecy, 7, 8.—Not to be understood of particular persons, but of whole nations, 8.—The curse upon Canaan, a curse upon the Canaanites for their wickedness, 7, 8.—The wickedness of the Canaanites very great, 8.—The curse particularly implies the subjection of the descendants of Canaan to the descendants of Shem and Japheth, 8, 9.—The completion of this shown from the time of Joshua to this day, 9, 10.—A different reading proposed of Ham, the father of Canaan, instead of Canaan, 10, 11.—The curse in this larger sense also shown to be fulfilled from the earliest times to the present, 11, 12.—The promise to Shem of the Lord being his God, how fulfilled, 12.—The promise of enlargement to Japheth, an allusion to his name, 13.—How fulfilled both in former and later times, ibid.—The following clause, and he shall dwell in the tents of Shem, capable of two senses, and in both punctually fulfilled, 14.—Conclusion, ibid.—A mistake of Mr. Mede corrected, ibid.—Lord Bolingbroke censured for his indecent reflections on this prophecy, 15.—His ignorance about the Codex Alexandrinus, 16.—His blunder about the Roman historians, ibid.—His sneer about believers refuted, 16, 17.—Condemned by himself, 16.—Had great talents, but misapplied them, 17.

DISSERTATION II.

THE PROPHECIES CONCERNING ISHMAEL.

page 17—29.

Abraham favoured with several revelations, 17.—Those concerning Ishmael or the Ishmaelites, 18.—The promise of a numerous posterity, how fulfilled, 18, 19.—The promise of twelve princes, how fulfilled, 18, 21.—The promise of a great nation, how fulfilled, 19.—The saying that he should be a wild man, how fulfilled, 19.—The saying that his hand should be against every man, and every man's hand against him, how fulfilled, 20.—The saying that he should dwell in the presence of all his brethren, how fulfilled, 20.—The Ishmaelites or Arabians have from first to last maintained their independency, 21.—Against the Egyptians and Assyrians, 21.—Against the Persians, 22, 23.—Against Alexander and his successors, 22.—Against the Romans, 23, 24.—Their state under Mohammed, and since his time, and now under the Turks, 24, 25.—Dr. Shaw's account of them, 25.—Bishop Pococke's, 26.—And Mr. Hanway's, 26.—Conclusion, 26.—Wonderful that they should retain the same manners for so many ages, 26, 27.—More wonderful that they should still remain a free people, 27, 28.—The Jews and Arabs in some respects resemble each other, 28.

DISSERTATION III.

THE PROPHECIES CONCERNING JACOB AND ESAU.

page 29—37.

More prophecies concerning the posterity of Isaac than of Ishmael, 29.—The promise of the blessed seed, how fulfilled, 29.—The promise of the land of Canaan, how fulfilled, 29.—The promise of a numerous posterity, how fulfilled, 29, 30.—The promises concerning Esau and Jacob, 30, 31.—Not verified in themselves, but in their posterity, 31.—Comprehend several particulars, 31.—I. The families of Esau and Jacob two different people and nations, 31, 32.—II. The family of the elder subject to that of the younger, 32, 33.—III. In situation and other temporal advantages much alike, 33, 34.—IV. The elder branch delighted more in war and violence, but subdued by the younger, 35.—V. The elder at one time shook off the dominion of the younger, 35, 36.—VI. In all spiritual gifts and graces the younger superior, and the happy instrument of conveying the blessing to all nations, 36, 37.—Conclusion, 37.—The prophecies fulfilled in the utter destruction of the Edomites, 37.

DISSERTATION IV.

JACOB'S PROPHECIES CONCERNING HIS SONS, PARTICULARLY JUDAH.

page 37—50.

An opinion of great antiquity, that the soul near death grew prophetic, 37, 38.—Jacob upon his death-bed foretold his sons what should befall them in the last days, the meaning of that phrase, 39.—Jacob bequeaths the temporal blessing to all his sons, the spiritual to Judah, 40, 41.—The prophecies concerning several tribes, how fulfilled, ibid.—The temporal blessing, how fulfilled to Judah, 41.—The spiritual blessing, 41, 42.—I. An explanation of the words and meaning of the prophecy, 41—45.—The sceptre shall not depart from Judah, explained, 42.—Nor a law-giver from between his feet, explained, 43.—Shiloh in all the various senses of the word shown to be the Messiah, 44, 45.—Le Clerc's singular interpretation, 44, 45.—Jews as well as Christians have by Shiloh generally understood the Messiah, 45.—And unto him shall the gathering of the people be, capable of three different constructions, 45, 46.—II. The completion of the prophecy, 46—50.—Judah hereby constituted a tribe or body politic, and so continued till the coming of the Messiah and the destruction of Jerusalem, 46—49.—The latter clause fulfilled in the first sense, and the people gathered to Judah, 47, 48.—Fulfilled in the second sense, and the people gathered to the Messiah, 48, 49.—Fulfilled in the last sense, and the people gathered to the Messiah before the sceptre's departure, 49, 50.—The prophecy with regard to Benjamin fulfilled, ibid.—Conclusion that Jesus is the Messiah, 50.

DISSERTATION V.

BALAAH'S PROPHECIES.

page 50—68.

The gift of prophecy not always confined to the chosen seed, or to good men, 50.—Balaam both a heathen and an immoral man, 51.—A ceremony among the heathens to curse their enemies, 51.—The story of Balaam's ass considered, 52, 53.—A proper sign to Balaam, and the prophecies render the miracle more credible, 53.—The style of his prophecies beautiful, 53, 54.—His prophecy of the singular character of the Jewish nation, how fulfilled even to this day, 55.—His prophecy of their victories much the same as Jacob's and Isaac's, 56.—His prophecy of a king higher than Agag, how fulfilled, 56, 57.—His preface to his latter prophecies explained, 57, 58.—His prophecy of a star and sceptre to smite the princes of Moab, how fulfilled by David, 58.—Who meant by the sons of Sheth, 58, 59.—His prophecy against the Edomites, how fulfilled by David, 59, 60.—This prophecy of the star and the sceptre applied by most Jewish and Christian writers to the Messiah, 60, 62.—But principally to be understood of David, 62.—His prophecy against the Amalekites, how fulfilled, 62, 63.—His prophecy against the Kenites, and who the Kenites were, 63.—How fulfilled, 64.—His prophecy of ships from the coast of Chittim, 65.—The land of Chittim shown to be a general name for Greece, Italy, and the countries and islands in the Mediterranean, 65, 66.—How afflict Ashur, 66, 67.—How afflict Eber, and who meant by Eber, 67, 68.—How perish for ever, 68.—Conclusion, 68.

DISSERTATION VI.

MOSES'S PROPHECY OF A PROPHET LIKE UNTO HIMSELF.

page 68—76.

Moses hath not only preserved several ancient prophecies, but hath likewise inserted several of his own, 68.—His prophecy of another prophet like unto himself, 69.—I. What prophet was here particularly intended, 69—72.—The Messiah principally, if not solely, 69, 70.—Proved from the conclusion of the book of Deuteronomy, 70.—From God's declaration to Miriam and Aaron, 70.—From the text itself, 71.—From this prophet's being a lawgiver, 71.—From fact, 71.—II. The great likeness between Moses and Christ, 72—75.—Christ resembled Moses in more respects than any other person ever did, 72.—The comparison between them as drawn by Eusebius, 72, 73.—As enlarged and improved by Dr. Jortin, 73—75.—His conclusion from thence, 75.—III. The punishment of the people for their infidelity and disobedience to this prophet, 75, 76.

DISSERTATION VII.

PROPHECIES OF MOSES CONCERNING THE JEWS.

page 77—87.

Prophecies of Moses abound most in the latter part of his writings, 77.—The 28th of Deuteronomy a lively picture of the state of the Jews at present, ibid.—Prophecy of their enemies coming from far, how fulfilled, 77, 78.—Prophecy of the cruelty of their enemies, how fulfilled, 78.—Of the sieges of their cities, 78, 79.—Of their distress and famine in the sieges, 79.—Of women eating their own children, 80.—Of their great calamities and slaughters, 81.—Of their being carried into Egypt, and sold for slaves at a low price, 81, 82.—Of their being plucked from off their own land, 82, 83.—Of their being dispersed into all nations, 83.—Of their still subsisting as a distinct people, 83.—Of their finding no rest, 83, 84.—Of their being oppressed and spoiled, 84.—Of their children taken from them, 84.—Of their madness and desperation, 85.—Of their serving other gods, 85, 86.—

Of their becoming a proverb, and a by-word, 86.—Of the long continuance of their plagues, 86.—Conclusion, 87.

DISSERTATION VIII.

PROPHECIES OF OTHER PROPHETS CONCERNING THE JEWS.

page 87—105.

Other prophecies relative to the present state of the Jews, 87.—I. The prophecies concerning the restoration of the tribes of Judah and Benjamin, and the dissolution of the ten tribes, 87—93.—The restoration of the two tribes foretold to be after seventy years, 87.—Fulfilled at three periods, 88.—The ten tribes to cease from being a people within sixty-five years, 88.—The prophecy how fulfilled, 124, 125.—What has become of them since, and where are they at present, 90.—Vain conjectures of the Jews thereupon, 90—92.—Not all returned with the two tribes, 92.—Not all swallowed up and lost among the heathen nations, 92.—Whether they remained, or whether they returned, they ceased from being a distinct people, and were all comprehended under the name of Jews, 92.—The reason of this distinction between the two tribes and the ten tribes, 93.—II. The preservation of the Jews, and the destruction of their enemies, 93—95.—The preservation of the Jews one of the most illustrious acts of Divine providence, 93.—Nor less the providence of God in the destruction of their enemies, 94.—Not only nations but single persons, 95.—III. The desolation of Judea; another memorable instance of the truth of prophecy, 95—99.—Foretold by the prophets, 95.—The present state of Judea answerable to the prophecies, 96.—No objection from hence to its having been a land flowing with milk and honey, 96—99.—The ancients, Heathens as well as Jews, testify it to have been a good land, 97.—Maunderell's account of its present state, 97, 98.—Dr. Shaw's, 98, 99.—IV. The prophecies of the infidelity and reprobation of the Jews, how fulfilled, 99—101.—V. Of the calling and obedience of the Gentiles, 101.—This revolution effected by incompetent persons, and in a short time, 102.—The prophecies concerning the Jews and Gentiles have not yet received their entire completion, 103.—What hath been accomplished a sufficient pledge of what is to come, 103.—Conclusion dissuading all persecution, and recommending humanity and charity to the Jews, 104, 105.

DISSERTATION IX.

THE PROPHECIES CONCERNING NINEVEH.

page 105—119.

Some prophecies relating to other nations which had connexions with the Jews, 195, &c.—Want of ancient eastern historians to clear up the prophecies, 106.—The Assyrians terrible enemies to both Israel and Judah, 106.—Isaiah's prophecy against the Assyrians, 107.—Nineveh, the capital of the Assyrian empire, a most ancient city, 107, 108.—An exceeding great city likewise, and the Scripture account confirmed by heathen authors, 108, 109.—Like other great cities very corrupt, but king and people repented at the preaching of Jonah, 110.—Some inquiry who this king was, and at what time Jonah prophesied, 110, 111.—Their repentance of short continuance, for Nahum not long after foretold the destruction of the city, 111.—Some inquiry when Nahum prophesied, 111, 112.—Nineveh accordingly destroyed by the Medes and Babylonians, 112.—Some inquiry, by whom particularly, 112, 113.—Nahum's prophecies of the manner of its destruction exactly fulfilled according to the accounts of Diodorus Siculus, 114, 115.—Nahum and Zephaniah foretold its total destruction contrary to all probability, 116.—These predictions fulfilled according to the accounts of the ancients, 117.—According to the accounts of the moderns, 118.—Conclusion, 118, 119.

DISSERTATION X.

THE PROPHECIES CONCERNING BABYLON.

page 119—136.

Babylon as well as Nineveh an enemy to the people of God, 119.—A very great and very ancient city, 119.—Considerably improved by Nebuchadnezzar, 120.—One of the wonders of the world, 171.—Isaiah and Jeremiah foretold its destruction, 121.—Prophecies of Cyrus, the conqueror of Babylon, fulfilled, 121—123.—The time of the reduction of Babylon foretold, 122.—Several circumstances of the siege foretold, 122.—Besieged by the Medes and Elamites or Persians, 123.—Armenians and other nations united against it, 124.—The Babylonians hide themselves within their walls, 124.—The river dried up, 124.—The city taken during a feast, 125.—The facts related by Herodotus and Xenophon, and therefore no room for scepticism, 126.—The prophets foretold its total desolation, 126, 127.—These prophesies to be fulfilled by degrees, 127.—Its state under Cyrus, 127.—Under Darius, 128.—Under Xerxes, 129.—Under Alexander and afterwards, 129, 130.—The accounts of it since that time by Diodorus, 130.—Strabo, 131.—Pliny, 131.—Pausanias, 131.—Maximus Tyrius and Lucian, 131.—Jerome, 131, 132.—Accounts of later authors, of Benjamin of Tudela, 132.—Texeira, 132.—Rauwolf, 132, 133.—Peter de la Valle, 133.—Tavernier, 133, 134.—Mr. Salmon, 134.—Mr. Hanway, 134.—By these accounts it appears how punctually the prophecies have been fulfilled, 134.—Conclusion; such prophecies a convincing argument of the divinity of the Scriptures, and likewise instances of fine writing, and of the spirit of liberty, 135, 136.

DISSERTATION XI.

THE PROPHECIES CONCERNING TYRE.

page 136—152.

Tyre another enemy to the Jews, its fall predicted by Isaiah and Ezekiel, 136.—The prophecies relate to both old and new Tyre, 137.—A very ancient city, 138, 139.—The daughter of Sidon, but in time excelled the mother, and became a mart of nations, 138, 139.—In this flourishing condition, when the prophets foretold her destruction, for her pride, and wickedness, and cruelty to the Jews, 139.—Several particulars included in the prophecies, 140.—I. The city to be taken and destroyed by Nebuchadnezzar and the Chaldeans, 140—142.—II. The inhabitants to pass over the Mediterranean, but to find no rest, 142—144.—III. The city to be restored after seventy years, 144, 145.—IV. To be taken and destroyed again, 145—147.—V. The people to forsake idolatry, and become converts to the true religion, 147—149.—VI. The city at last to be totally destroyed, and become a place for fishers to spread their nets upon, 149.—These prophecies to be fulfilled by degrees, 149, 150.—A short account of the place from the time of Nebuchadnezzar to the present, 149, 150.—Huetius's account of it, 150.—Dr. Shaw's, 151.—Mr. Maudrell's, 151.—Conclusion, with some reflections upon trade, 151, 152.

DISSERTATION XII.

THE PROPHECIES CONCERNING EGYPT.

page 153—173.

Egypt famous for its antiquity, 153.—No less celebrated for its wisdom, 153.—The parent of superstition as well as the mistress of learning, 154.—Had such connexions with the Jews, that it is made the subject of several prophecies, 154.—The phrase of the burden of Egypt considered and explained, 154, 155.—I. Its conquest by Nebuchadnezzar foretold by Jeremiah and Ezekiel, 155.—How fulfilled, 156, 157.—II. Its conquest by the Persians foretold by Isaiah, and how fulfilled, 157—160.—III. Its conquest by Alexander foretold by Isaiah, and at the same time the spreading of the true religion in the land, 160, 161.—How fulfilled, 161—164.—IV. The prophecy of Ezekiel that it should be a base tributary kingdom, 164, 165.—The truth of it shown by a short deduction of the history from that time to this, 165—171.—Its state under the Babylonians, 165.—Under the Persians, 165—167.—Under the Macedonians, 167, 168.—Under the Romans, 168.—Under the Saracens with the burning of the Alexandrian library, 168, 169.—Under the Mamalucs, 169, 170.—Under the Turks, 171.—No one could have foretold this upon human conjecture, 171.—Conclusion, with some reflections upon the characters of the Egyptians as drawn by ancient and modern authors, 171—173.

DISSERTATION XIII.

NEBUCHADNEZZAR'S DREAM OF THE GREAT EMPIRES.

page 173—191.

Some prophecies relating to more remote nations, 173.—The genuineness of Daniel's prophecies denied by Porphyry and Collins, but sufficiently vindicated, 173, 174.—The credit of Daniel as a prophet established by prophecies fulfilling at this time, 174.—Daniel's first prophecy, his interpretation of Nebuchadnezzar's dream, with the occasion of it, 174, 175.—A great human figure not an improper emblem of human power, and the various parts and metals signify various kingdoms, 176.—I. The head of fine gold, or the Babylonian empire, 177.—The extent of it shown from heathen authors, 177, 178.—II. The breast and arms of silver, or the Medo-Persian empire, 178.—Why said to be inferior, and how long it lasted, 178, 179.—III. The belly and thighs of brass, or the Macedonian empire, 179.—Why said to bear rule over all the earth, 179.—The kingdom of Alexander and of his successors not two different kingdoms, 179, 180.—Spoken of as one and the same by ancient authors, 180.—IV. The legs of iron, and feet part of iron and part of clay, or the fourth empire, 181.—Farther proofs that the kingdoms of the Seleucidæ and Lagidæ cannot be the fourth kingdom, 181.—This description applicable only to the Roman empire, 182.—So St. Jerome explains it, and all ancient writers, both Jewish and Christian, 183.—V. The stone that brake the image, or the fifth empire, 183, 184.—Cannot be the Roman, 184.—Can be understood only of the kingdom of Christ, 184.—Represented in two states, as a stone, and as a mountain, 185.—This interpretation confirmed by ancient writers, both Jews and Christians, and particularly by Jonathan Ben Uziel, who made the Chaldee paraphrase upon the prophets, 185.—The sense of Josephus with Bishop Chandler's reflections upon it, 186, 187.—The ancient Christians give the same interpretation, 187.—St. Chrysostom's comment, 187, 188.—The exposition of Sulpicius Severus, 188, 189.—Conclusion, 189.—Hence we are enabled to account for Nebuchadnezzar's prophecy, and the Delphic oracle, 189, 190.—Hence the distinction of four great empires, and why only these four predicted, 190, 191.

DISSERTATION XIV.

DANIEL'S VISION OF THE SAME.

page 191—215.

What was exhibited to Nebuchadnezzar in the form of a great image, was represented to Daniel in the shape of great wild beasts, and why, 191, 192.—I. The Babylonian empire why compared to a lion, 192.—Why with eagle's wings, 193.—Why with a man's heart, 193.—II. The Persian empire, why compared to a bear, 193, 194.—How it raised up itself on one side, and had three ribs in the mouth, 194.—Its cruelty, 194.—III. The Macedonian empire, why compared to a leopard, 195.—Why with four wings and four heads, and dominion given to it, 195, 196.—IV. The Roman empire compared to a terrible beast without a name, 196, 197.—The kingdoms of the Seleucidæ and Lagidæ can in no respect answer to this description, ibid.—The Roman empire answers exactly, 197.—A memorable quotation to this purpose from Dionysius of Halicarnassus, 198.—This beast had ten horns or kingdoms, and the kingdoms of Egypt and Syria were never so divided, 198, 199.—The notions of Porphyry, Grotius, and Collins refuted, 199.—The ten kingdoms to be sought amid the broken pieces of the Roman empire, 200.—The ten kingdoms according to Machiavel, 200.—According to Mr. Mede, 200.—According to Bishop Lloyd, ibid.—According to Sir Isaac Newton, ibid.—The same number since, 201.—How they stood in the eighth century, 201.—A little horn to rise up among the ten, 201.—The notion of Grotius and Collins, that Antiochus Epiphanes was the little horn, refuted, 201, 202.—An inquiry proposed into the sense of the ancients, 202.—The opinion of Irenæus, 202.—Of St. Cyril of Jerusalem, 203, 204.—Of St. Jerome with Theodoret and St. Austin, 204.—The fathers had some mistaken notions concerning Antichrist, and how it came to pass they had such, 204, 205.—The little horn to be sought among the ten kingdoms of the western Roman empire, 205, 206.—Machiavel himself points out a little horn springing up among the ten, 206.—Three of the first horns to fall before him, 207.—The three according to Mr. Mede, 207.—According to Sir Isaac Newton, 207, 208.—Something to be approved, and something to be disapproved in both their plans, ibid.—The first of the three horns, the exarchate of Ravenna, 208.—The second, the kingdom of the Lombards, 209.—The third, the state of Rome, 209, 210.—The character answers in all other respects, 210, 211.—How long Antichrist to continue, 211.—V. All these kingdoms to be succeeded by the kingdom of the Messiah, 212, 213.—This and the former prophecy compared together, 214.—They extend from the reign of the Babylonians to the consummation of all things, 215.—Will cast light upon the subsequent prophecies, and the subsequent prophecies reflect light upon them again, ibid.—Conclusion, ibid.

INTRODUCTION TO THE LECTURE FOUNDED BY THE HONOURABLE ROBERT BOYLE.

page 216—224.

How and by whom the author was appointed to preach the Boyle's lecture, 216.—Previous to the farther explanation of Daniel, a vindication is proposed of the genuineness of his prophecies against the principal objections of unbelievers, 217.—Collins's eleven objections particularly considered and refuted, 217, &c.—His first objection, relating to the age of Daniel, refuted, 217.—His second objection, relating to the mistake of the king's names, and to Nebuchadnezzar's madness, refuted, 218.—His third objection, relating to Greek words found in Daniel, refuted, 218.—His fourth objection, relating to the version of the Seventy, refuted, 219.—His fifth objection, drawn from the clearness of Daniel's prophecies to the times of Antiochus Epiphanes, refuted, 219.—His sixth objection, drawn from the omission of Daniel in the book of Ecclesiasticus, refuted, 220.—His seventh objection, relating to Jonathan's making no Targum on Daniel, refuted, 220.—His eighth objection, drawn from the style of Daniel's Chaldee, refuted, 221.—His ninth objection, drawn from the forgeries of the Jews, refuted, 221.—His tenth objection, drawn from Daniel's uncommon punctuality in fixing the times, refuted, 221, 222.—His eleventh objection, relating to Daniel's setting forth facts very imperfectly and contrary to other histories, and to his dark and emblematic style, refuted, 222.—The external and internal evidence for the genuineness of the book of Daniel, 222, 223.—The division of the remainder of this work, agreeable to the design of the honourable founder, 223.—From the instance of this excellent person, and some others, it is shown that philosophy and religion may well consist and agree together, 224.

DISSERTATION XV.

DANIEL'S VISION OF THE RAM AND HE-GOAT.

page 224—251.

The former part of the book of Daniel written in Chaldee, the rest in Hebrew, 224.—The time and place of the vision, 225.—Like visions have occurred to others, 225, 226.—The ram with two horns represents the empire of the Medes and Persians, 226.—Why with two horns and one higher than the other, 227.—Why this empire likened to a ram, 227.—The conquests of the ram, and the great extent of the Persian empire, 228.—The he-goat, represents the Grecian or Macedonian empire, 228.—Why this empire likened to a goat, 228, 229.—The swiftness of the he-goat, and the notable horn between his eyes, what signified thereby, 229.—An account of the conquest of the goat, and of the Grecians overthrowing the Persian empire, 230, 231.—The prophecies shown to Alexander the Great, and upon what occasion, 231.—The truth of the story vindicated, 232, 233.—Answer to the objection of its being inconsistent with chronology, 234.—Answer to the objection taken from the silence of other authors, besides Josephus, 234, 235.—Other circumstances which confirm the truth of this relation, 235.—How four horns succeeded to the great horn; or how the empire of the goat was divided into four kingdoms, 236, 237.—The little horn commonly understood of Antiochus Epiphanes, but capable of another and better application, 237, 238.—A horn doth not signify a single king but a kingdom, and here the Roman empire rather than Antiochus Epiphanes, 238.—The particular properties and actions of the little horn agree better with the Romans, as well as the general character, 239.—Reason of the appellation of the little horn, 239.—The time too agrees better with the Romans, 240.—The character of a king of fierce countenance, and understanding dark sentences, more applicable to the Romans than to Antiochus, 240, 241.—Other actions likewise of the little horn accord better with the Romans, 242.—Waxing exceeding great, 242.—Toward the south, 242.—Toward the east, ibid.—And toward the pleasant land, 243.—The property of his power being mighty, but not by his own power, can no where be so properly applied as to the Romans, 243.—All the particulars of the persecution and oppression of the people of God more exactly fulfilled by the Romans than by Antiochus, 244, 245.—It deserves to be considered whether this part of the prophecy be not a sketch of the fate and sufferings of the Christian, as well as of the Jewish church, 245.—Farther reason of the appellation of the little horn, 246.—The little horn to come to a remarkable end, which will be fulfilled in a more extraordinary manner in the Romans, than it was even in Antiochus, 246.—It will farther appear that the application is more proper to the Romans by considering the time allotted for the duration and continuance of the vision, 247.—The 2300 days or years can by no computation be accommodated to the times of Antiochus Epiphanes, 248.—How they are to be computed, 249, 250.—Daniel's concern and affliction for his country, and this a farther argument that not the calamities under Antiochus, but those brought upon the nation by the Romans were the subject of this prophecy, 250, 251.—From this and other examples it may be inferred, that the Scriptures will never abate but rather encourage our love for our country, 251.

DISSERTATION XVI.

DANIEL'S PROPHECY OF THE THINGS NOTED IN THE SCRIPTURE OF TRUTH.

IN TWO PARTS.

PART I.

page 252—284.

This latter prophecy a comment upon the former, 252.—Imparted to Daniel after fasting and prayer, 252.—A prophecy for many days or years, 252.—Of the Persian empire, 253.—The three first kings of Persia after Cyrus, 253.—The fourth far richer than all, 253.—His stirring up all against the realm of Grecia, ibid.—Why no more kings of Persia mentioned, 254.—A short sketch of Alexander's great dominion, 254.—His family soon extinct, and his kingdom divided into four kingdoms, 255, 256.—Of these four, two only have a place in this prophecy, Egypt and Syria, and why, 256.—Why called the kings of the south and the north, 256.—Ptolemy king of the south or Egypt, very strong, but Seleucus king of the north or Syria, strong above him, 256, 257.—The transactions between Ptolemy Philadelphus of Egypt and Antiochus Theus of Syria, 257, 258.—Ptolemy Euergetes of Egypt revenges the wrong of his family upon Seleucus Callinicus of Syria, 259, 260.—The short and inglorious reign of Seleucus Ceraunus of Syria, 261.—Succeeded by his brother Antiochus the Great, who gained great advantages over the king of Egypt, 261, 262.—But Ptolemy Philopater obtains a signal victory over Antiochus at Raphia, 262, 263.—His vicious and shameful conduct afterwards, and cruelty to the Jews, 263, 264.—Antiochus prepares again to invade Egypt in the minority of Ptolemy Epiphanes, 265.—Philip king of Macedonia, and the Jews associate with them, 265, 266.—His success against the king of Egypt, 266, 267.—His favour to the Jews, 268.—His scheme to seize upon the kingdom of Egypt frustrated, 269, 270.—His unhappy war with the Romans, 270, 271.—The latter end of his life and reign inglorious, 271, 272.—The mean reign of his son and successor Seleucus Philopater, 272, 273.—Antiochus Epiphanes, the brother of Seleucus, obtains the kingdom by flatteries, 273, 274.—His freaks and extravagancies, 274.—His successes against his competitors, and removal of the high-priests of the Jews, 274, 275.—His liberality and profusion, 276.—The claims of Ptolemy Philometor, king of Egypt, upon him, and his preparations against Egypt, 276, 277.—He invades and makes himself master of all Egypt except Alexandria, chiefly by the treachery of Ptolemy Philometor's own ministers and subjects, 277, 278.—Ptolemy Philometor and Antiochus Epiphanes speak lies at one table, 278.—Antiochus returns with great spoils, 279.—His cruelty to the Jews, 280.—He invades Egypt again, and is hindered from totally subduing it by an embassy from the Romans, 280, 281.—He returns, therefore, and vents all his anger upon the Jews, 282.—Abolishes the Jewish worship by the instigation of the apostate Jews, 282.—Conclusion to show that this prophecy is more exact and circumstantial than any history, 283, 284.

DISSERTATION XVII.

THE SAME SUBJECT CONTINUED.

PART II.

page 284—314.

More obscurity in the remaining part of the prophecy, 284.—Polluting the sanctuary, taking away the daily sacrifice, and placing the abomination of desolation, more properly applicable to the Romans than to Antiochus Epiphanes, with the reason for passing from Antiochus to the Romans, 285—287.—What follows more truly applicable to the afflicted state of the primitive Christians after the destruction of Jerusalem than to the times of Antiochus, 287, 288.—The “little help” and the persecutions afterwards cannot be applied to the times of the Maccabees, but to the emperors becoming Christian, and the succeeding persecutions, 289—291.—The Antichristian power, the principal source of these persecutions, described, 291, 292.—How long to prosper, 292.—Described here as exerted principally in the eastern empire, 292.—His not regarding the god of his fathers, nor the desire of women, falsely affirmed of Antiochus, but truly of this Antichristian power, 293, 294.—His honouring Mahuzzim with precious gifts, and who they are, 294—297.—Other instances of his regard to Mahuzzim, in glorifying their priests and ministers, 297—300.—The remaining parts more applicable to other events than to the transactions of Antiochus, 300, 302.—After the account of the degeneracy of the church, follows a prediction of its punishment, especially in the eastern part of it by the Saracens and Turks, 300, 302.—Judea and the neighbouring countries to be subdued, but the Arabians to escape, not verified by Antiochus but by the Turks, 302, 303.—The Turks could never subdue the Arabians, but on the contrary pay them an annual pension, 303—305.—The total subjection of Egypt, together with Libya and Ethiopia, not accomplished by Antiochus, but by the Turks, 304—306.—The rest of the prophecy yet to be fulfilled, 306.—Cannot be applied to Antiochus, but belongs to the Othman empire, 306—309.—What the tidings from the east and north, 306, 308.—What meant by going forth to destroy and utterly to make away many, 309.—What by planting his camp between the seas in the glorious holy mountain, 306, 309.—The same things foretold by Ezekiel in his prophecy concerning Gog of the land of Magog, 309.—The great tribulation and the subsequent resurrection cannot be applied to the times of the Maccabees, 309, 310.—An inquiry into the time of these events, 310—313.—A conjecture about the different periods of 1260 years, 1290 years, and 1335 years, 312.—Conclusion to show the vast variety and extent of this prophecy, and from thence to prove that Daniel was a true prophet, 313.

DISSERTATION XVIII.

OUR SAVIOUR'S PROPHECIES RELATING TO THE DESTRUCTION OF JERUSALEM.

IN FOUR PARTS.

PART I.

page 314—334.

Prophecies and miracles continued longer in the Jewish church than in the Christian, and why, 315.—No Christian prophecies recorded, but some of our Saviour and his apostles, particularly St. Paul and St. John, 315.—A short summary of our Saviour's prophecies, 315, 316.—None more remarkable than those relating to the destruction of Jerusalem, which were written and published several years before that event, 316—319.—Our Saviour's tenderness and affection for his country shown in his lamenting and weeping over Jerusalem, 318.—The magnificence of the temple, and particularly the prodigious size of the stones, 318, 319.—The total and utter destruction of the city and temple foretold, and both destroyed accordingly, 319—321.—The purport of the disciples' question and the phrases of the coming of Christ and of the end of the world, shown to signify the destruction of Jerusalem, 321, 322.—The disciples ask two things, first, the time of the destruction of Jerusalem, and secondly, the signs of it; our Saviour answers the last first, 322.—False Christs the first sign, 323.—The next signs, wars and rumours of wars, 323.—Nation rising against nation, and kingdom against kingdom, 324, 325.—Famines, pestilences, and earthquakes in divers places, 325, 326.—Fearful sights and great signs from heaven, 326—329.—These the beginning of sorrows, 329.—From the calamities of the nation he passeth to those of the Christians in particular, 329.—As cruel persecutions, 329, 330.—Apostates and traitors of their own brethren, 330.—False teachers and false prophets, 330.—Lukewarmness and coolness among Christians, 331.—But still he who shall endure to the end, the same shall be saved, 331.—The gospel to be universally published before the destruction of Jerusalem, and was so in Britain as well as other parts, 331, 332.—Reflections upon what hath been said, 333.—The first upon the surprising manner in which these prophecies have been fulfilled, ibid.—Another upon the sincerity and ingenuity of Christ, and the courage and constancy of his disciples, ibid.—A third on the sudden and amazing progress of the gospel, ibid.—A fourth on the signals and presages of the ruin of states, 333, 334.

DISSERTATION XIX.

THE SAME SUBJECT CONTINUED.

PART II.

page 334—352.

After the circumstances which passed before the siege, we are to treat of those which happened during the siege and after it, 334.—The abomination of desolation standing in the holy place, the Roman army besieging Jerusalem, 334, 335.—Then the Christians to fly into the mountains, 335.—Their flight must be sudden and hasty, 336.—Woe unto them that are with child and that give suck in those days, exemplified particularly in the story of a noble woman, who killed and ate her own sucking child, 336, 337.—To pray that their flight be not in the winter, neither on the sabbath day, 337.—Providentially ordered that there were such favourable opportunities of escaping, before the city was closely besieged, 338.—

The great calamities and miseries of the Jewish nation in those days, 338—340.—None of the Jews would have escaped destruction had not the days been shortened for the sake of the Christian Jews, 340, 341.—A more particular caution against false Christs and false prophets about the time of the siege and destruction of Jerusalem, 342.—Their conducting their followers into the desert, or into the secret chambers, 343, 344.—But the coming of Christ will not be in this or that particular place, he will be taking vengeance of the Jews every where, 344, 345.—Some considerations upon the conduct of these false Christs and false prophets, 346, &c.—It may reasonably be inferred from hence, that there hath been a true prophet, a true Christ, 346.—The Messiah particularly expected about the time of our Saviour, ibid.—The Messiah to work miracles, 347.—Jesus alone hath performed the miracles, which the Messiah was to perform, 347.—The difference between the conduct and success of these deceivers and of Jesus Christ, 348.—The force of superstition and enthusiasm in their deluding such numbers, 348.—All are not to be credited who pretend to work miracles, 349, 350.—How we are to judge of miracles, 349—351.—What we are to think of the Pagan, 350.—And what of the popish miracles, 351, 352.

DISSERTATION XX.

THE SAME SUBJECT CONTINUED.

PART III.

page 352—367.

The final destruction of Jerusalem foretold in very figurative language, 352, 353.—The like figures used by the ancient prophets, ibid.—The same figurative style in the following verses, 353.—Dr. Warburton's account of this figurative language, 354, 355.—The number of those who fell by the edge of the sword, 355, 356.—An account of those who were led away captive into all nations, 356, 357.—Jerusalem trodden down of the Gentiles, 357.—A deduction of the history of Jerusalem from the destruction by Titus to the present time, 357—366.—Its ruined and desolate state under Vespasian and Titus, 357.—Rebuilt by Adrian, and the Jews' rebellion thereupon, and final dispersion, 358—360.—Repaired by Constantine, and adorned with many stately edifices and churches, with a farther dispersion of the Jews, 359—361.—Julian's purpose to settle the Jews, and his attempt to rebuild the temple miraculously defeated, 360, 361.—State of Jerusalem under the succeeding emperors, 361.—Taken and plundered by the Persians, 362.—Surrendered to the Saracens, 362.—Passes from the Saracens to the Turks of the Selzuccian race, and from the Turks to the Egyptians, 363.—Taken from the Egyptians by the Franks or Latin Christians, 363.—Recovered by the sultans of Egypt, 364.—Comes under the dominion of the Mameluks, 365.—Annexed to the dominions of the Turks of the Othman race, in whose hands it is at present, 365, 366.—Likely to remain in subjection to the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled, 367.—What the fulfilling of the times of the Gentiles, 367.

DISSERTATION XXI.

THE SAME SUBJECT CONTINUED.

PART IV.

page 368—376.

From the signs our Saviour proceeds to treat concerning the time of the destruction of Jerusalem, 368.—He affirms that it would be in the present generation, ibid.—Some then living would behold and suffer these calamities, 369.—But still the exact time unknown to all creatures, 369.—According to St. Mark unknown to the Son, 370.—The genuineness of that text vindicated, and the sense explained, 370—372.—The destruction of Jerusalem typical of the end of the world, 371, 372.—Reflections upon the whole, 372, &c.—The exact completion of these prophecies a strong proof of revelation, 372—374.—The prophecies plain and easy, taken from Moses and Daniel, but improved and enlarged, 373.—Vespasian and Titus wonderfully raised up and preserved for the completion of these prophecies, and Josephus for the illustration of their completion, 373, 374.—The great use and advantage of his history in this respect, 374.—The cause of these heavy judgments on the Jews, their crucifying of Jesus, 375.—Some correspondence between their crime and their punishment, 375.—Application to us Christians, 375, 376.

DISSERTATION XXII.

ST. PAUL'S PROPHECY OF THE MAN OF SIN.

page 377—406.

St. Paul's and St. John's prophecies copied from Daniel with some improvements, 377.—Two most memorable prophecies of St. Paul, the first of the man of sin, 377.—I. The sense and meaning of the passage, 377.—The coming of Christ in this place, and the day of Christ, not meant of the destruction of Jerusalem, but of the end of the world, 377—379.—Other memorable events to take place before, 380.—What the apostasy, ibid.—Who the man of sin, 380, 381.—His exalting himself, 381.—His sitting in the temple of God, 381.—These things communicated before to the Thessalonians, 382.—What hindered the revelation of the man of sin, 382.—His destruction foretold before his other qualifications, ibid.—His other qualifications described, 383.—II. This prophecy strangely mistaken and misapplied by some famous commentators, 383—392.—Grotius's application of it to Caligula and Simon Magus, refuted, 383—385.—Hammond's application of it to Simon Magus and the Gnostics, refuted, 385—387.—Le Clerc's application of it to the rebellious Jews and Simon the son of Gioras, refuted, 387, 388.—Whitby's application of it to the Jewish nation with their high priest and Sanhedrim, refuted, 388, 389.—Wetstein's application of it to Titus and the Flavian family, refuted, 389—391.—They bid fairer for the true interpretation, who apply it to events after the destruction of Jerusalem, 391.—Application of it to Mohammed, refuted, 391.—Application of it to the Reformation, refuted, 391, 392.—Application to the future Antichrist of the papists, refuted, 392.—III. The true application of this prophecy, 392, &c.—The apostasy charged upon the church of Rome, 393.—The pope shown to be the man of sin, 393—395.—How these things came to be mentioned in an epistle to the Thessalonians rather than to the Romans, 395.—The seeds of popery sown in the apostles' time, 395.—The empire of the man of sin raised on the ruins of the Roman empire, 396.—Machiavel cited to show how this was effected, 396—398.—Miracles pretended in the church of Rome, 398.—The empire of the man of sin will be totally destroyed, 399.—The man of sin the same as the little horn or mighty king in Daniel, 399.—Generally both by ancients and moderns denominated Antichrist, 399.—The ancient fathers give much the same interpretation of this whole passage, 400.—Justin Martyr, Irenæus, and Tertullian in the second century, 400.—Origen in the third century, 401.—Lactantius, Cyril, and Ambrose in the fourth century, 401.—Jerome, Austin, and Chrysostom in the latter end of the fourth, or the beginning of the fifth centure, 401, 402.—Whosoever affected the title of universal bishop, he was Antichrist in the opinion of Pope Gregory the Great, 403.—How the true notion of Antichrist was suppressed, and revived again with the Reformation, 404.—How this doctrine afterwards became unfashionable, but is now growing into repute again, 404, 405.—Conclusion; such a prophecy at once a proof of revelation, and an antidote to popery; the blindness of the papists in this particular, 405.

DISSERTATION XXIII.

ST. PAUL'S PROPHECY OF THE APOSTASY OF THE LATTER TIMES.

page 406—427.

St. Paul much affected with the foresight of the great apostasy of Christians, 406.—Described here more particularly, ibid.—I. The apostasy shown to be idolatry, 407, 408.—Some in Scripture often signifies many, 408, 409.—The apostasy to be great and general, 409.—The same in the Jewish and Christian church, 409, 410.—II. Shown more particularly to consist in the worshipping of dæmons, 410.—Dæmons in the Gentile theology middle powers and mediators between the gods and men, 411.—Two kinds of dæmons, souls of men deified or canonized after death, and separate spirits, 411, 412.—Good and bad dæmons, 413.—The Gentile notion of dæmons has sometimes place in Scripture, 414.—A passage in Epiphanius, that much confirms and illustrates the foregoing exposition, 415, 416.—The worship of saints and angels now the same as the worship of dæmons formerly, 416.—The rise of this worship, 416, 417.—Too much promoted and encouraged by the fathers from Constantine's time, and particularly by Theodoret, 417—419.—The conformity between the Pagan and Popish worship, 419.—III. The worship of the dead to take place in the latter times, 420.—What these latter times are, 420.—IV. The worship of dæmons foretold expressly by the Spirit in Daniel, 421, 422.—V. Propagated and established through the hypocrisy of liars, 422—425.—VI. Forbidding to marry, a farther character of these men, 423.—Who first recommended the profession of single life, 423, 424.—The same persons, who prohibited marriage, promoted the worship of the dead, 425.—VII. The last note of these men, commanding to abstain from meats, 425.—The same persons, who propagated the worship of the dead, impose also abstinence from meats, 426.—This abstinence perverting the purpose of nature, 427.—All creatures to be received with thanksgiving, 427.

DISSERTATION XXIV.

AN ANALYSIS OF THE REVELATION.

IN TWO PARTS.

PART I.

page 428—517.

Very useful to trace the rise and progress of religions and governments, 428.—None more wonderful than that of Rome in its success and prevalence, ibid.—This signified beforehand by the Spirit of prophecy, and particularly in the Revelation, 429.—The objections made to this book by several learned men, 429.—This book difficult to explain, ibid.—A memorable story to this purpose, of Bishop Lloyd of Worcester, 429, 430.—This book not therefore to be despised or neglected, 430.—The right method of interpreting it, 430, 431.—What helps and assistances are requisite, 431.—Hard fate of the best interpreters of this book, ibid.—Great encouragement, however, in the Divine benediction, ibid.

CHAP. I. ver. 1—3. Contain the title of the book, the scope and design of it, and the blessing on him that readeth, and on them that attend to it, 431, 432.—Ver. 4—8. The dedication of the seven churches of Asia, and a solemn preface to show the great authority of the Divine Revealer, 432.—Ver. 9—20. The place, the time, and manner of the first vision, 433.—The place, Patmos, whither St. John was banished in the reign of Nero, more probably than in that of Domitian, 433.—The arguments for this opinion, 433—436.—The Revelation given on the Lord's day, 436.—The manner and circumstances of the first vision, ibid.

CHAP. II. III. Contain the seven epistles to the seven churches of Asia, 437—446. Why these seven addressed particularly, 440.—These epistles not prophetic, but peculiar to the church of that age, 440.—The excellent form and structure of these epistles, ibid.—In what sense they may be said to be prophetic, 441.—Present state of the seven churches, 441—446.—Of Ephesus, 441, 442.—Of Smyrna, 442.—Of Pergamus, 443, 444.—Of Thyatira, 443, 444.—Of Sardis, 444.—Of Philadelphia, 444.—Of Laodicea, 445.—Use that we are to make of these judgments, 446.

CHAP. IV. The preparatory vision of things which must be hereafter, 446, 447.—The scenery drawn in allusion to the encampment of the children of Israel in the wilderness, and to the tabernacle or temple, 447.

CHAP. V. A continuation of the preparatory vision, in order to show the great importance of the prophecies here delivered, 448, 449.—Future events supposed to be written in a book, 449.—This book sealed with seven seals, signifying so many periods of prophecy, ibid.—The Son of God alone qualified to open the seals, ibid.—Whereupon all creatures sing praises to God and to Christ, ibid.

CHAP. VI. ver. 1, 2. Contain the first seal or period, memorable for conquest, 449.—This period commences with Vespasian, includes the conquest of Judea, and continues during the reigns of the Flavian family and the short reign of Nerva, 450.—Ver. 3, 4. The second seal, or period noted for war and slaughter, 451.—This period commences with Trajan, 451.—Comprehends the horrid wars and slaughters of the Jews and Romans in the reigns of Trajan and Adrian, 451, 452.—Continues during the reigns of Trajan and his successors by blood or adoption, 453.—Ver. 5, 6. The third seal or period, characterized by the strict execution of justice, and by the procuration of corn, oil, and wine, ibid.—This period commences with Septimius Severus, ibid.—He and Alexander Severus just and severe emperors, and no less celebrated for procuring corn and oil, &c. 453, 454.—This period continues during the reigns of the Septimian family, 454.—Ver. 7, 8. The fourth seal or period, distinguished by a concurrence of evils, war, and famine, and pestilence, and wild beasts, 455—458.—This period commences with Maximin, 455.—The wars of this period 456.—The famines, ibid.—The pestilences, 456, 457.—The wild beasts, 457, 458.—This period from Maximin to Diocletian, 458.—Ver. 9—11. The fifth seal or period, remarkable for a dreadful persecution of the Christians, 458, 459.—This the tenth and last general persecution, begun by Diocletian, 458.—From hence a memorable æra, called the æra of Diocletian, or æra of martyrs, 459.—Ver. 12—17. The sixth seal or period, remarkable for great changes and revolutions, expressed by great commotions in the earth and in the heavens, ibid.—No change greater than the subversion of the Heathen, and establishment of the Christian religion, 460, 461.—The like figures of speech used by other prophets, 460.—The same thing expressed afterwards in plainer language, 461.

CHAP. VII. A continuation of the sixth seal or period, 462.—A description of the peace of the church in Constantine's time, 463, 464.—And of the great accession of converts to it, 463.—Not only of Jews, but of all nations, 464.—This period from the reign of Constantine the Great to the death of Theodosius the Great, 465.

CHAP. VIII. ver. 1—6. The seventh seal or period comprehends seven periods distinguished by the sounding of seven trumpets, 465.—The silence of half an hour previous to the sounding of the trumpets, 465.—As the seals foretold the state of the Roman empire before and till it became Christian, so the trumpets foreshow the fate of it afterwards, 466.—The design of the trumpets to rouse the nations against the Roman empire, 466.—Ver. 7. At the sounding of the first trumpet Alaric and the Goths invade the Roman empire, twice besiege Rome, and set fire to it in several places, 466, 467.—Ver. 8, 9. At the sounding of the second trumpet Attila, and his Huns, waste the Roman provinces, and compel the eastern emperor, Theodosius the second, and the western emperor, Valentinian the third, to submit to shameful terms, 467, 468.—Ver. 10, 11. At the sounding of the third trumpet Genserich, and his Vandals, arrive from Africa, spoil and plunder Rome, and set sail again with immense wealth and innumerable captives, 469.—Ver. 12. At the sounding of the fourth trumpet Odoacer, and the Heruli, put an end to the very name of the western empire, 470.—Theodoric founds the kingdom of the Ostrogoths in Italy, 470.—Italy made a province of the eastern empire, and Rome governed by a duke under the exarch of Ravenna, 470, 471.—Ver. 13. The three following trumpets are distinguished by the name of the woe-trumpets, and the two following relate chiefly to the downfall of the eastern empire, as the foregoing did to the downfall of the western empire, 471.

CHAP. IX. ver. 1—12. A prophecy of the locusts, or the Arabians, under their false prophet Mohammed, 471—478.—At the sounding of the fifth trumpet a star fallen from heaven opens the bottomless pit, and the sun and air are darkened, 471.—Mohammed fitly compared to a blazing star, and the Arabians to locusts, 472.—A remarkable coincidence, that at this time the sun and air were really darkened, 472.—The command not to hurt any green thing, or any tree, how fulfilled, 473.—Their commission to hurt only the corrupt and idolatrous Christians, how fulfilled, ibid.—To torment the Greek and Latin churches, but not to extirpate either, 473.—Repulsed as often as they besieged Constantinople, ibid.—These locusts described so as to show that not real but figurative locusts were intended, 474.—Likened unto horses, and the Arabians famous in all ages for their horses and horsemanship, ibid.—Having on their heads as it were crowns like gold, 474.—The faces as the faces of men, and hair as the hair of women, 475.—Their teeth as the teeth of lions, their breast-plates as it were breast-plates of iron, and the sound of their wings as the sound of chariots, 475.—Like unto scorpions, 476.—Their king called the destroyer, 476.—Their hurting men five months, how to be understood, 476.—Fulfilled in every possible construction, 477, 478.—Conclusion of this woe, 478.—Ver. 13—21. A prophecy of the Euphratéan horsemen, or Turks and Othmans, 478, 479.—At the sounding of the sixth trumpet the four angels, or four sultanies of the Turks and Othmans, are loosed from the river Euphrates, 479, 480.—In what sense they are said to be prepared for an hour, and a day, and a month, and a year, to slay the third part of men, 480—483.—Their numerous armies, and especially their cavalry, 482.—Their delight in scarlet, blue, and yellow, 482.—The use of great guns and gunpowder among them, 482.—Their power to do hurt by their tails, or the poisonous train of their religion, 483.—The miserable condition of the remains of the Greek church among them, ibid.—The Latin or western church not at all reclaimed by the ruin of the Greek or eastern church, but still persists in their idolatry and wickedness, 484.

CHAP. X. A preparatory vision to the prophecies relating to the western church, 484, 485.—The angel with the little book or codicil to the larger book of the Apocalypse, 485.—This properly disposed under the sixth trumpet, to describe the state of the western church after the description of the state of the eastern, ibid.—Cannot be known what things were meant by the seven thunders, ibid.—Though the little book describes the calamities of the western church, yet it is declared that they shall all have a happy period under the seventh trumpet, 486.—St. John to publish the contents of this little book as well as the larger book of the Apocalypse, 486.

CHAP. XI. ver. 1—14. The contents of the little book, 486, &c.—The measuring of the temple to show that during all this period there were some true Christians, who conformed to the rule and measure of God's word, 487.—The church to be trodden under foot by Gentiles in worship and practice forty and two months, 488.—Some true witnesses, however, to protest against the corruptions of religion, ibid.—Why said to be two witnesses, ibid.—To prophecy in sackcloth, as long as the grand corruption itself lasted, 488.—The character of these witnesses, and of the power and effect of their preaching, 489.—The passion, and death, and resurrection, and ascension of the witnesses, 489—493.—Some apply this prophecy of the death and resurrection of the witnesses to John Huss and Jerome of Prague, whose doctrine revived after their death in their followers, 491.—Others to the protestants of the league of Smalcald, who were entirely routed by the emperor Charles V. in the battle of Mulburg; but upon the change of affairs the emperor was obliged, by the treaty of Passau, to allow them the free exercise of their religion, 491, 492.—Some again to the massacre of the protestants in France, and to Henry the Third's afterwards granting them the free exercise of their religion, 492.—Others again to later events, Peter Jurieu to the persecution of the protestants by Lewis XIV., Bishop Lloyd and Whiston to the duke of Savoy's persecution of the protestants in the valleys of Piedmont, and his re-establishing them afterwards, 492, 493.—In all these cases there may be some resemblance, but none of these is the last persecution, and therefore this prophecy remains yet to be fulfilled, 493, 494.—When it shall be accomplished, the sixth trumpet and the second woe shall end, 494.—An historical deduction to show that there have been some true witnesses, who have professed doctrines contrary to those of the church of Rome, from the seventh century down to the Reformation, 494, 495, &c.—Witnesses in the eighth century, 494, 495.—The emperors Leo Isauricus and Constantine Copronymus, and the council of Constantinople, 494.—Charlemagne and the council of Francfort, 495.—The British churches and Alcuin, 495.—The council of Forojulio, ibid.—Paulinus, bishop of Aquileia, ibid.—Witnesses in the ninth century, 495—497.—The emperors of the east, Nicephorus, Leo Armenius, &c. and the emperors of the west, Charles the Great and Lewis the Pious, 495.—The council of Paris, 496.—Agobard, archbishop of Lyons, ibid.—Transubstantiation first advanced by Paschasius Radbertus, and opposed by many learned men, ibid.—Rabanus Maurus, ibid.—Bertramus, 496, 497.—Johannes Scotus, 497.—Angilbertus and the church of Milan, ibid.—

Claude, bishop of Turin, ibid.—Witnesses in the tenth century, 498—500.—State of this century, ibid.—The council of Troly, 498.—Athelstan, 499.—Elfere, earl of Mercia, ibid.—Heriger and Alfric, 499.—The council of Rheims, and Gerbert, archbishop of Rheims, 500.—Witnesses in the eleventh century, 500—502.—State of this century, 500.—William the Conqueror and William Rufus, 500.—Heretics of Orleans, 500.—Heretics in Flanders, 501.—Berengarius and his followers, ibid.—Ecclesiastics in Germany, &c. 501, 502.—The council of Winchester, 502.—Witnesses in the twelfth century, 502—507.—The constitutions of Clarendon, 502.—Fluentius, ibid.—St. Bernard, ibid.—Joachim of Calabria, 503.—Peter de Bruis and Henry his disciple, 503.—Arnold of Brescia, ibid.—The Waldenses and Albigenses, ibid.—Their opinions, 504, 505.—Testimonies concerning this sect, 505—508.—Of Reinierius, the inquisitor-general, 505, 506.—Of Thuanus, 507, 508.—Of Mezeray, 507.—Witnesses in the thirteenth century, 507—509.—Farther account of the Waldenses and Albigenses, 507, 508.—Almeric and his disciples, 508.—William of St. Amour, 509.—Robert Grossthead or Greathead, bishop of Lincoln, ibid.—Matthew Paris, ibid.—Witnesses in the fourteenth century, 509—511.—Dante and Petrarch, 509.—Peter Fitz Cassiodor, 510.—Michael Cæsenas and William Occam, ibid.—Marsilius of Padua, ibid.—In Germany and England the Lollards, ibid.—The famous John Wickliff, 510.—The Lollards' remonstrance to the parliament, 511.—Witnesses in the fifteenth century, 512—515.—The followers of Wickliff, 512, 513.—William Sawtre, 512.—Thomas Badby, ibid.—Sir John Oldcastle, ibid.—In Bohemia John Huss and Jerome of Prague, 513.—Opinions of the Bohemians or Hussites, 513, 514.—Jerome Savonarola, 515.—In the sixteenth century the Reformation, 515, 516.—Hence an answer to the popish question, Where was your religion before Luther? 516.—Ver. 15—18. A summary account of the seventh trumpet and the third woe, the particulars will be enlarged upon hereafter, 516, 517.—Conclusion of the first part, 517.

DISSERTATION XXV.

AN ANALYSIS OF THE REVELATION.

PART II.

page 518—593.

The right division of the Revelation into two parts, 518.—The latter part an enlargement and illustration of the former, 519.—Ver. 19. of the twelfth chapter should have been made ver. 1. of the twelfth chapter, ibid.

CHAP. XII. ver. 1—6. The church persecuted by the great red dragon, 520—522.—The church represented as a mother bearing children unto Christ, 520, 521.—The great red dragon the heathen Roman empire, 521.—His jealousy of the church from the beginning, ibid.—But yet the church brought many children unto Christ, and in time such as were promoted to the empire, ibid.—Constantine particularly, who ruled all nations with a rod of iron, 522.—The woman's flight into the wilderness here anticipated, cometh in properly afterwards, 522. 525.—Ver. 7—12. The war in heaven represents the contests between the heathen and Christian religions, 522—524.—The Christian prevails over the heathen religion, 523, 524.—Constantine himself and the Christians of his time describe his conquests under the same image, ibid.—Still new woes, though but for a short time, threatened to the inhabitants of the earth, 524.—Ver. 13—17. The dragon deposed still persecutes the church, 524. 526.—Attempts to restore the Pagan, and ruin the Christian religion, 525.—The church now under the protection of the empire, 525.—Her flight afterwards into the wilderness, ibid.—Inundations of barbarous nations excited to overwhelm the Christian religion, 526.—But on the contrary the heathen conquerors submit to the religion of the conquered Christians, 526.—Another method of persecuting the church, ibid.

CHAP. XIII. ver. 1—10. The description of the ten-horned beast successor to the great red dragon, 526—532.—All, both papists and protestants, agree that the beast represents the Roman empire, 527.—Shown to be not pagan but Christian, not imperial but papal Rome, 527, 528.—How successor to the great red dragon, 528.—How one of his heads was, as it were, wounded to death, and his deadly wound was healed, 529.—The world in submitting to the religion of the beast did in effect submit again to the religion of the dragon, 530.—The beast perfectly like the little horn in Daniel, ibid.—A general account of his blasphemies and exploits, and how long to prevail and prosper, 530.—A particular account of his blasphemies, 531.—His making war with the saints, and overcoming them, and so establishing his authority, 531, 532.—An admonition to engage attention, 532.—Something added by way of consolation to the church, ibid.—Ver. 11—18.

The description of the two-horned beast, 533—540.—The ten-horned beast the Roman state in general, the two-horned beast the Roman clergy in particular, 533.—His rise, and power, and authority, 533, 534.—His pretended miracles, 534, 535.—His making an image to the beast, 535, 536.—What this image of the beast is, 536.—His interdicts and excommunications, 536—538.—The number of the beast explained, 538—540.

CHAP. XIV. ver. 1—5. The state of the true church in opposition to that of the beast, 540, 541.—Ver. 6, 7. The first principal effort towards a reformation in the public opposition of emperors and bishops to the worship of saints and images in the eighth and ninth centuries, 541, 542.—Ver. 8. Another effort by the Waldenses and Albigenses, who pronounced the church of Rome to be the apocalyptic Babylon, and denounced her destruction, 543, 544.—Ver. 9—13. The third effort by Martin Luther and his fellow reformers, who protested against all the corruptions of the church of Rome, as destructive of salvation, 544—547.—A solemn declaration from heaven to comfort them, 544.—How the dead were blessed from henceforth, 545, 546.—Ver. 14—20. Represent the judgments of God upon the followers and adherents of the beast under the figures, first of harvest, then of vintage, 547, 548.—These judgments yet to be fulfilled, ibid.

CHAP. XV. A preparatory vision to the pouring out of the seven vials, 548—550.—These seven last plagues belong to the seventh and last trumpet, or the third and last woe trumpet, and consequently are not yet fulfilled, 549, 550.—Seven angels appointed to pour out the seven vials, 550.

CHAP. XVI. ver. 1. The commission to pour out the seven vials, which are so many steps of the ruin of the Roman church, as the trumpets were of the ruin of the Roman empire, 551.—Rome resembles Egypt in her punishments as well as in her crimes, ibid.—Ver. 2. The first vial or plague, ibid.—Ver. 3—7. The second and third vials or plagues, 551, 552.—Ver. 8, 9. The fourth vial or plague, 552.—Ver. 10, 11. The fifth vial or plague, 553.—Ver. 12—16. The sixth vial or plague, 553, 554.—Ver. 17—21. The seventh or last vial or plague, 554, 555.

CHAP. XVII. Having seen how Rome resembles Egypt in her plagues, we shall now see her fall compared to Babylon, 555, 556.—Ver. 1—6. An account premised of her state and condition, 556, &c.—St. John called upon to see the condemnation and execution of the great whore, 557.—This character more proper to modern than ancient Rome, 558.—Her sitting upon a scarlet-coloured beast with seven heads and ten horns, ibid.—Her ornaments of purple and scarlet colour, with gold and precious stone, and pearls, ibid.—Her enchanting cup, 558, 559.—Her inscription upon her forehead, 559, 560.—Her being drunken with the blood of the saints, 560.—Ver. 7—18. The angel explains the mystery of the woman, and of the beast that carried her, 561, &c.—A general account of the beast and his threefold state, 562.—The seven heads are explained primarily to signify the seven mountains on which Rome is situated, 562.—Also to signify seven forms of government, 562, 563.—What the five fallen, 563.—What the sixth, 563.—What the seventh or eighth, 563, 564.—The ten horns explained to signify ten kings or kingdoms, 564.—Their giving their power and strength unto the beast, 565.—The extensiveness of the power and dominion of Rome, 565.—The same kings, who helped to raise her, to pull her down, 566.—The woman explained to signify the great city, or Rome, 566.

CHAP. XVIII. ver. 1—8. A description of the fall and destruction of spiritual Babylon, 567, &c.—To become the habitation of devils and foul spirits, 568.—A warning to forsake her communion, 568.—To be utterly burnt with fire, ibid.—Ver. 9—20. The consequences of her fall, the lamentations of some, and rejoicings of others, 569, 571.—Ver. 21—24. Her utter desolation foretold, 570, 571.

CHAP. XIX. ver. 1—10. The church exhorted to praise God for his judgments upon her, 571—573.—Her smoke to rise up for ever and ever, 572.—God also to be praised for the happy state of the reformed church in this period, 572, 573.—St. John prohibited to worship the angel, 573.—Ver. 11—21. The victory and triumph of Christ over the beast and the false prophet, 573—575.

CHAP. XX. ver. 1—6. Satan is bound, and the famous millennium commences, or the resurrection of the saints, and their reign upon earth for a thousand years, 575, 576.—The millennium not yet fulfilled, though the resurrection be taken figuratively, 576.—But the resurrection to be understood literally, 577.—Other prophets have foretold, that there shall be such a happy period as the millennium, 577, 578.—St. John only, that the martyrs shall rise to partake of it, and that it shall continue a thousand years, 577.—The Jewish and Christian churches have both believed, that these thousand years will be the seventh millenary of the world, ibid.—Quotations from the Jewish writers to this purpose, 578.—From Christian writers, St. Barnabas, Justin Martyr, Tertullian, Lactantius, &c. 578—581.—How this doctrine grew afterwards into disrepute, 582.—Great caution required in treating of it, 582.—Ver. 7—10. Satan to be loosed again, and to deceive the nations, Gog and Magog, 582—584.—How Gog and Magog are to be understood, 583, 584.—The final overthrow of Satan, 584.—Ver. 11—15. The general resurrection and judgment, and the end of the world, 584, 585.

CHAP. XXI. ver. 1—8. The new heaven, the new earth, and the new Jerusalem, 585—587.—The new heaven and the new earth to take place after the millennium, 586, 587.—Ver. 9—27. A more particular description of the new Jerusalem, 587—589.

CHAP. XXII. ver. 1—5. A continuation of the description of the new Jerusalem, 589, 590.—Ver. 6, 7. A ratification and confirmation of the foregoing particulars, with a blessing upon those who keep the saying of this book, 590.—Ver. 8—21. In the conclusion several particulars to confirm the Divine authority of this book, 591, &c.—This book that sure word of prophecy mentioned by St. Peter, 592, 593.—A double blessing on those who study and observe it, 593.

DISSERTATION XXVI.

RECAPITULATION OF THE PROPHECIES RELATING TO POPERY.

page 593—625.

Popery being the great corruption of Christianity, there are more prophecies relating to that than to almost any other distant event, 593, 594.—It is thought proper to represent these in one view, 594.—I. It is foretold that there should be such a power as that of the pope and church of Rome usurped in the Christian world, 594, &c.—A tyrannical, idolatrous, and antichristian power foretold, 594.—A great apostacy in the church foretold, ibid.—This apostacy to consist chiefly in the worshipping of demons, angels, and departed saints, 595.—The same church, that is guilty of this idolatry, to forbid marriage, and enjoin abstinence from meats, 595.—The pope's making himself equal and even superior to God, ibid.—His extending his authority and jurisdiction over several countries and nations, ibid.—The power and riches of the clergy, 596.—The pomp and splendour of their ceremonies and vestments, ibid.—Their policy, and lies, and pious frauds, 596.—Their pretended visions and miracles, ibid.—Their excommunications of heretics, ibid.—Their making war with the saints, and prevailing against them, 596, 597.—Besides these direct, other more oblique prophecies, 597, &c.—Babylon, Tyre, Egypt, the types of Rome, 597.—More frequent intimations of popery in the New Testament, 597.—In our Saviour's caution in giving honour to his mother, and in rebuking St. Peter, ibid.—In his institution of the last supper, 598.—In his reproving so particularly the vices of the Scribes and Pharisees, 598.—In his prohibitions of implicit faith and obedience, of the worship of angels, of all pretences to works of merit and supererogation, of lording it over God's heritage, of the service of God in an unknown tongue, &c. 598.—In St. Paul's admonishing the Romans to beware of apostacy, 599.—In St. Peter's and St. Jude's description of false teachers, ibid.—In St. Paul's prediction of the corruption of the last days, ibid.—II. Not only foretold that there should be such a power, but the place and the persons likewise are pointed out, ibid., &c.—In Daniel's description of the little horn, which only one person in the world can fully answer, 600.—Daniel's character of the blasphemous king, which agrees better with the head of the Roman than with the head of the Greek church, 600, 601.—In St. Paul's portrait of the man of sin, 601.—In St. John's vision of the ten-horned beast, and of the woman riding upon the beast, 601, 602.—Several arguments to show that not pagan but papal Rome was intended, 602, 603.—III. Besides the place and the persons, the time also is signified of this tyrannical power, when, and how long, 603, &c.—To arise in the latter days of the Roman empire, 604.—To prevail 1260 years, 604.—The beginning of these 1260 years not to be dated too early, 605.—To be fixed in the eighth century, and probably in the year 727, 605.—IV. The fall and destruction of this antichristian power, 606, &c.—The second woe of the Othman empire must end, before the third woe can be poured out upon the kingdom of the beast, 606.—The Divine judgments upon the kingdom of the beast displayed under a variety of figures and representations, 607.—Antichrist and his seat both to be destroyed by fire, 608.—About the time of the fall of the Othman empire and of the Christian Antichrist, the conversion and restoration of the Jews, 608.—The proper order of these events, 609.—After the destruction of Antichrist the glorious millennium commences, or the kingdom of Christ upon earth for a thousand years, 609.—Best to forbear all curious enquiries into this subject, 611.—After the thousand years and the general judgment, the world to be destroyed, and the new heaven and the new earth to succeed, 611.—Conclusion; the corruptions of popery being so particularly foretold, we have the less reason to be surprised and offended at them, 611.—The Gospel will finally prevail over all enemies and opposers, 612.

CONCLUSION.

page 613—625.

From these instances of the truth of prophecy may be inferred the truth of revelation, 613.—A summary view of the prophecies now fulfilling in the world, 613, 614.—A large quotation from Dr.

Clarke, tending to confirm and illustrate the same subject, 615—622.—No room for any possible forgery of the prophecies, 622.—The harmony, variety, and beauty of the prophetic writings, ibid.—Though some parts are obscure for good reasons, yet others are sufficiently clear, and the perfect completion will produce a perfect understanding of all the prophecies, ibid.—Human learning requisite to explain the prophecies, and particularly a competent knowledge of history, 622, 623.—The patrons of infidelity are only pretenders to learning and knowledge, 623.—Modern infidelity worse even than that of the Jews, ibid.—So many instances of prophecies and their completions, the strongest attestations of a Divine revelation, 623, 624, &c.—Miracles and other proofs of the truth of the Christian religion, 624.—Prophecies accomplished, the greatest of all miracles, 624.—Conclusion, 625

DISSERTATIONS

ON THE

PROPHECIES,

WHICH HAVE REMARKABLY BEEN FULFILLED, AND AT

THIS TIME ARE FULFILLING IN THE WORLD.

INTRODUCTION.

ONE of the strongest evidences for the truth of revealed religion is that series of prophecies which is preserved in the Old and New Testament; and a greater service perhaps could not be done to Christianity than to lay together the several predictions of Scripture with their completions, to show how particularly things have been foretold, and how exactly fulfilled.¹ A work of this kind was desired by the Lord Bacon in his *Advancement of Learning*¹, and he entitleth it The History of Prophecy, and therein would have “every prophecy of the Scripture be sorted with the event fulfilling the same throughout the ages of the world, both for the better confirmation of faith,” as he saith, “and for the better illumination of the Church, touching those parts of prophecies which are yet unfulfilled: allowing, nevertheless, that latitude which is agreeable and familiar unto Divine prophecies, being of the nature of the Author, with whom a thousand years are but as one day, and therefore they are not fulfilled punctually at once, but have springing and germinant accomplishment throughout many ages, though the height or fulness of them may refer to some one age.”

Such a work, indeed, would be a wonderful confirmation of our faith, it being the prerogative of God alone, or of those who are commissioned by him, certainly to foretel future events; and the consequence is so plain and necessary, from the believing of prophecies to the believing of Revelation, that an infidel hath no way of evading the conclusion but by denying the premises. But why should it be thought at all incredible for God upon special occasions to foretel future events? Or how could a Divine Revelation (only supposing that there was a Divine Revelation) be better attested and confirmed than by prophecies? It is certain that God hath perfect and most exact knowledge of futurity, and foresees all things to come, as well as comprehends every thing past or present. It is certain too, that as he knoweth them perfectly himself, so he may reveal them to others in what degrees and proportions he pleaseth; and that he actually hath revealed them in several instances, no man can deny, every man must acknowledge, who compares the several prophecies of Scripture with the events fulfilling the same.

¹ Book II. in English.

But so many ages have passed since the spirit of prophecy hath ceased in the world, that several persons are apt to imagine that no such thing ever existed, and that what we call predictions are only histories written, after the events had happened, in a prophetic style and manner: which is easily said, indeed, but hath never been proved, nor is there one tolerable argument to prove it. On the contrary, there are all the proofs and authorities, which can be had in cases of this nature, that the prophets prophesied in such and such ages, and the events happened afterwards in such and such ages: and you have as much reason to believe these, as you have to believe any ancient matters of fact whatever; and by the same rule that you deny these, you might as well deny the credibility of all ancient history.

But such is the temper and genius of infidels; they understand neither what they say, nor whereof they affirm; and so betray their own ignorance, rather than acknowledge the force of Divine truth; and assert things without the least shadow or colour of proof, rather than admit the strongest proofs of Divine Revelation. It betrays ignorance indeed, altogether unworthy of persons of liberal education, not to know when such and such authors flourished, and such and such remarkable events happened; and it must be something worse than ignorance to assert things without the least shadow or colour of proof, contrary to all the marks and characters, by which we judge of the truth and genuineness of ancient authors, contrary to the whole tenor of history, both sacred and profane, which in this respect give wonderful light and assistance to each other: and yet these are the men who would be thought to see farther and to know more than other people, and will believe nothing without evident proof and demonstration.

The facts, say they, were prior to the predictions, and the prophecies were written after the histories. But what if we should be able to prove the truth of prophecy, and consequently the truth of Revelation, not by any induction of particulars long ago foretold and long ago fulfilled, the predictions whereof you may therefore suppose to have been written after the histories, but by instances of things which have confessedly many ages ago been foretold, and have in these later ages been fulfilled, or are fulfilling at this very time ; so that you cannot possibly pretend the prophecies to have been written after the events, but must acknowledge the events many ages after to correspond exactly with the predictions many ages before ? This province we will now enter upon,—this task we will undertake, and will not only produce instances of things foretold with the greatest clearness in ages preceding, and fulfilled with the greatest exactness in ages following, if there is any truth in history, sacred or profane ; but we will also (to cut up the objection entirely by the roots) insist chiefly upon such prophecies as are known to have been written and published in books many ages ago, and yet are receiving their completion, in part at least, at this very day.

For this is one great excellency of the evidence drawn from prophecy for the truth of religion, that it is a growing evidence ; and the more prophecies are fulfilled, the more testimonies there are and confirmations of the truth and certainty of Divine Revelation. And in this respect we have eminently the advantage over those who lived even in the days of Moses and the Prophets,—of Christ and his Apostles. They were happy indeed in hearing their discourses and seeing their miracles, and doubtless many righteous men have desired to see those things which they saw and have not seen them, and to hear those things which they heard and have not heard them ; (Matt. xiii. 17.) but yet I say we have this advantage over them, that several things, which were then only foretold, are now fulfilled ; and what were to them only matters of faith, are become matters of fact and certainty to us, upon whom the later ages of the world are come. God in his goodness hath afforded to every age sufficient evidence of the truth. Miracles may be said to have been the great proofs of Revelation to the first ages who saw them performed. Prophecies may be said to be the great proofs of Revelation to the last ages who see them fulfilled. All pretence too for denying the prophecies of Scripture is by these means absolutely precluded ; for how can it be pretended that the prophecies were written after the events, when it appears that the latest of these prophecies were written and published in books near 1700 years ago, and the events have many of them been accomplished several ages after the predictions, or perhaps are accomplishing in the world at this present time ? You are therefore reduced to this necessity, that you must either renounce your senses, and deny what you may read in your Bibles, together with what you may see and observe in the world ; or else must acknowledge the truth of prophecy, and, in consequence of that, the truth of Divine Revelation.

Many of the principal prophecies of Scripture will by these means come under our consideration, and they may be best considered with a view to the series and order of time. The subject is curious as it is important, and will be very well worth my pains and your attention; and though it turn chiefly upon points of learning, yet I shall endeavour to render it as intelligible, and agreeable, and edifying as I can to all sorts of readers. It is hoped the work will prove the more generally acceptable, as it will not consist merely of abstract speculative divinity, but will be enlivened with a proper intermixture of history, and will include several of the most material transactions from the beginning of the world to this day.

DISSERTATIONS

ON THE PROPHECIES.

I.

NOAH'S PROPHECY.

THE first prophecy that occurs in Scripture is that part of the sentence pronounced upon the serpent, which is, as I may say, the first opening of Christianity,—the first promise of our redemption. We read in Genesis (iii. 15.) I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed; it shall bruise thy head, and thou shalt bruise his heel. If you understand this in the sense which is commonly put upon it by Christian interpreters, you have a remarkable prophecy and remarkably fulfilled. Taken in any other sense, it is not worthy of Moses, nor indeed of any sensible writer.

The history of the antediluvian times is very short and concise, and there are only a few prophecies relating to the deluge. As Noah was a preacher of righteousness to the old world, so he was a prophet to the new, and was enabled to predict the future condition of his posterity, which is a subject that upon many accounts requires a particular discussion.

It is an excellent character that is given of Noah, (Gen. vi. 9.) Noah was a just man, and perfect in his generations, and Noah walked with God. But the best of men are not without their infirmities; and Noah (Gen. ix. 20, &c.) having planted a vineyard, and drank of the wine, became inebriated, not knowing, perhaps, the nature and strength of the liquor, or being through age incapable of bearing it; and Moses is so faithful an historian, that he records the failings and imperfections of the most venerable patriarchs, as well as their merits and virtues. Noah in this condition lay uncovered within his tent: and Ham the father of Canaan saw the nakedness of his father; and instead of concealing his weakness, as a good-natured man, or at least a dutiful son would have done, he cruelly exposed it to his two brethren without. But Shem and Japheth, more compassionate to the infirmities of their aged father, took a garment and went backward with such decency and respect, that they saw not the nakedness of their father at the same time that they covered it. When Noah awoke from his wine, he was informed of what his younger son had done unto him. The ¹ word in the original signifies his little son: and some ² commentators therefore, on account of what follows, have imagined that Canaan joined with his father Ham in this mockery and insult upon Noah; and the ³ Jewish rabbins have a tradition, that Canaan was the first who saw Noah in this posture, and then went and called his father Ham, and concurred with him in ridiculing and exposing the old man. But this is a very arbitrary method of interpretation; no mention was made before of Canaan and of what he had done, but only of Ham the father of Canaan; and of him therefore must the phrase of little son or youngest son be naturally and necessarily understood.

In consequence of this different behaviour of his three sons, Noah as a patriarch was enlightened, and as the father of a family, who is to reward or punish his children, was empowered to foretel the different fortunes of their families: for this prophecy relates not so much to themselves as to their posterity, the people and nations descended from them. He was not prompted by wine or resentment; for neither the one nor the other could infuse the knowledge of futurity, or inspire him with the prescience of events, which happened hundreds, nay thousands of years afterwards. But God, willing to manifest his superintendence and government of the world, endued Noah with the spirit of prophecy, and enabled him, in some measure, to disclose the purposes of his providence towards the future race of mankind. At the same time, it was some comfort and reward to Shem and Japheth, for their reverence and tenderness to their father, to hear of the blessing and enlargement of their posterity; and it was some mortification and punishment to Ham, for his mockery and cruelty to his father, to hear of the malediction and servitude of some of his children, and that as he was a wicked son himself, so a wicked race should spring from him.

¹ קטן katan, parvus, minor, minimus. [Little, less, least.]

² Hinc probabiliter colligitur eum fuisse paternæ iniquitatis socium. Piscator apud Polum. [Hence it is inferred, with great probability, that he was a companion with his father in his transgression. See Piscator in Pool's Synopsis on Gen. ix. 25.]

³ Vid. Origen. in Genesim, p. 33, Vol. II. Edit. Benedict. Operosè queritur, cur Chami maledictionem in caput filii Chanaan contorserit. Respondet Theodoretus in Genes. quæst. 57. ab Hebræo quodam se didicisse primum Chanaan avi sui verenda animadvertisse, et patri ostentasse, tanquam de sene ridentem. Et vero tale quid legitur in Beresith Rabba sect. 37. qui liber scriptus fuit diu ante Theodoretum. Bocharti Phaleg. Lib. IV. Cap. 37. col. 308. [Origen on the Book of Genesis, page 33, of Vol. II. in the Benedictine edition. It is a question that has been greatly agitated, why the curse due to Ham should have been denounced by Noah against Canaan. Theodoret answers, in his 57th question on the Book of Genesis, that he had learned from a certain Jew, that Canaan first beheld the nakedness of his grandfather, and in a sneering and contemptuous manner pointed him out to his father. And it is true that this tradition is to be met with in Beresith Rabba, sect. 37, a rabbinical book written long before the time of Theodoret. See Bochart's Phaleg. Book IV. Chap. xxxvii. Col. 308.]

This then was Noah's prophecy; and it was delivered, as 'most of the ancient prophecies were delivered, in metre, for the help of the memory, (Gen. ix. 25, 26, 27.)

Cursed be Canaan.

A servant of servants shall he be unto his brethren.

Blessed be Jehovah the God of Shem;

And Canaan shall be their servant.

God shall enlarge Japheth.

And shall dwell in the tents of Shem,

And Canaan shall be their servant.

Canaan was the fourth son of Ham, according to the order wherein they are mentioned in the ensuing chapter. And for what reason can you believe that Canaan was so particularly marked out for the curse? for his father Ham's transgression? But where would be the justice or equity to pass by Ham himself, with the rest of his children, and to punish only Canaan for what Ham had committed? Such arbitrary proceedings are contrary to all our ideas of the divine perfections; and we may say in this case what was said in another, (Gen. xviii. 25.) Shall not the Judge of all the earth do right? The curse was so far from being pronounced upon Canaan for his father Ham's transgression, that we do not read that it was pronounced for his own, nor was executed till several hundred years after his death. The truth is, the curse is to be understood not so properly of Canaan, as of his descendants to the latest generations. It is thinking meanly of the ancient prophecies of Scripture, and having very imperfect, very unworthy conceptions of them, to limit their intention to particular persons. In this view the ancient prophets would be really what the Deists think them, little better than common fortune-tellers; and their prophecies would hardly be worth remembering or recording, especially in so concise and compendious a history as that of Moses. We must affix a larger meaning to them, and understand them not of single persons, but of whole nations; and thereby a nobler scene of things, and a more extensive prospect will be opened to us of the divine dispensations. The curse of servitude pronounced upon Canaan, and so likewise the promise of blessing and enlargement made to Shem and Japheth, are by no means to be confined to their own persons, but extend to their whole race, as afterwards the prophecies concerning Ishmael, and those concerning Esau and Jacob, and those relating to the twelve patriarchs, were not so properly verified in themselves as in their posterity, and thither we must look for their full and perfect completion. The curse therefore upon Canaan was properly a curse upon the Canaanites. God foreseeing the wickedness of this people, (which began in their father Ham, and greatly increased in this branch of his family,) commissioned Noah to pronounce a curse upon them, and to devote them to the servitude and misery which their more than common vices and iniquities would deserve. And this account was plainly written by Moses, for the encouragement of the Israelites, to support and animate them in their expedition against a people, who by their sins had forfeited the Divine protection, and were destined to slavery from the days of Noah.

¹ The reader may see this point proved at large in the very ingenious and learned Mr. Archdeacon Lowth's Poetical Prælections (particularly Prælect. 18), &c., a work that merits the attention of all who study the Hebrew language, and of the clergy especially.

We see the purport and meaning of the prophecy, and now let us attend to the completion of it. Cursed be Canaan; and the Canaanites appear to have been an abominably wicked people. The sin and punishment of the inhabitants of Sodom and Gomorrah and the cities of the plain are too well known to be particularly specified: and for the other inhabitants of the land, which was promised to Abraham and his seed, God bore with them, till their iniquity was full. (Gen. xv. 16.) They were not only addicted to idolatry, which was then the case of the greater part of the world, but were guilty of the worst sort of idolatry; for every abomination to the Lord, which he hateth, have they done unto their gods; for even their sons and their daughters they have burnt in the fire to their gods. (Deut. xii. 31.) Their religion was bad, and their morality (if possible) was worse; for corrupt religion and corrupt morals usually generate each other, and go hand in hand together. Read the 18th and the 20th chapters of Leviticus, and you will find that unlawful marriages and unlawful lusts, witchcraft, adultery, incest, sodomy, bestiality, and the like monstrous enormities were frequent and common among them. And was not a curse in the nature of things, as well as in the just judgment of God, deservedly entailed upon such a people and nation as this? It was not for their own righteousness that the Lord brought the Israelites in to possess the land: but for the wickedness of these nations did the Lord drive them out: (Deut. ix. 4.) and he would have driven out the Israelites in like manner for the very same abominations. (Levit. xviii. 24, &c.) Defile not yourselves in any of these things; for in all these the nations are defiled which I cast out before you. And the land is defiled; therefore I do visit the iniquity thereof upon it, and the land itself vomiteth out her inhabitants. Ye shall therefore keep my statutes and my judgments, and shall not commit any of these abominations—That the land spue not you out also when you defile it, as it spued out the nations that were before you. For whosoever shall commit any of these abominations, even the souls that commit them shall be cut off from among their people.

But the curse particularly implies servitude and subjection. Cursed be Canaan; a servant of servants shall he be unto his brethren. It is very well known that the word brethren in Hebrew comprehends more distant relations. The descendants, therefore, of Canaan were to be subject to the descendants of both Shem and Japheth: and the natural consequence of vice, in communities as well as in single persons, is slavery. The same thing is repeated again and again in the two following verses, and Canaan shall be servant unto them, or their servant; so that this is, as it were, the burden of the prophecy. Some ¹critics take the phrase of servant of servants strictly and literally, and say that the prediction was exactly fulfilled, when the Canaanites became servants to the Israelites, who had been servants to the Egyptians. But this is refining too much; the phrase of *servant of servants*² is of the same turn and cast as holy of holies, king of kings, song of songs, and the like expressions in Scripture; and imports that they should be the lowest and basest of servants.

We cannot be certain as to the time of the delivery of this prophecy; for the history of Moses is so concise, that it hath not gratified us in this particular. If the prophecy was delivered soon after the transactions, which immediately precede in the history, Noah's beginning to be a husbandman, and planting a vineyard, it was soon after the deluge, and then Canaan was prophesied of before he was born, as it was prophesied of Esau and Jacob, (Gen. xxv. 23.) the elder shall serve the younger, before the children were born and had done either good or evil, as St. Paul saith, (Rom. ix. 11.) If the prophecy was delivered a little before the transactions, which immediately follow in the history, it was a little before Noah's death, and he was enlightened in his last moments as Jacob was, to foretel what should befall his posterity in the latter days. (Gen. xlix. 1.) However this matter may be determined, it was several centuries after the delivery of this prophecy, when the Israelites, who were descendants of Shem, under the command of Joshua, invaded the Canaanites, smote above thirty of their kings, took possession of their land, slew several of the inhabitants, made the Gibeonites and others servants and tributaries, and Solomon afterwards subdued the rest. (2 Chron. viii. 7, 8, 9.) As for all the people that were left of the Hittites, and the Amorites, and the Perizzites, and the Hivites, and the Jebusites, which were not of Israel; but of their children who were left after them in the land, whom the children of Israel consumed not; them did Solomon make to pay tribute until this day. But of the children of Israel did Solomon make no servants for his work: but they were men of war, and chief of his captains, and captains of his chariots and horsemen. The Greeks and Romans too, who were descendants of Japheth, not only subdued Syria and Palestine, but also pursued and conquered such of the Canaanites as were any where remaining, as for instance the Tyrians and Carthaginians, the former of whom were ruined by Alexander and the Grecians, and the latter by Scipio and the Romans. "This fate," says ¹ Mr. Mede, "was it that made Hannibal, a child of Canaan, cry out with the amazement of his soul Agnosco fortunam Carthaginiis, I acknowledge the fortune of Carthage." And ever since the miserable remainder of this people have been slaves to a foreign yoke, first to the Saracens, who descended from Shem, and afterwards to the Turks, who descended from Japheth; and they groan under their dominion at this day.

¹ Noa Chamum execratus prædixerat fore ut ejus posteri servi essent servorum: atque id impletum in Chananæis, tum cum subire coacti sunt Israelitarum jugum qui Ægyptiis diu servierant. Bocharti Phaleg. Lib. I. Cap. i. col. 3, 4. [Noah cursing Ham, foretold that a time should come, when his posterity would be the servant of servants. This prediction was fulfilled in the Canaanites, at that time, when they were compelled to come under the yoke of the Israelites, a people who for a long time had served the Egyptians Bochart's Phaleg. Book I. chap. i. col. 3, 4.]

² S. Pompeius, studiis rudis, libertorum suorum libertus, servorumque servus, speciosis invidens ut pareret humillimis. Velleius Pat. II. 73. Hic vero valet postremus servorum. Vid. Sallust. Fragm. Id. Velleius II. 83. Infra servos cliens.—From some MS. notes of Mr. Wasse's in the hands of Dr. Jortin. [S. Pompey was a man without letters, a freedman of freedmen, and a servant of servants. He envied the great, while he cringed to the basest. Velleius Pat. II. 73. Here indeed the lowest of servants obtains the superiority. A vassal below the condition of servants. See the fragments of Sallust, and also Velleius, Book II. 83.]

Hitherto we have explained the prophecy according to the present copies of our Bible: but if we were to correct the text, as we should any ancient classic author in a like case, the whole perhaps might be made easier and plainer. Ham, the father of Canaan, is mentioned in the preceding part of the story; and how then came the person of a sudden to be changed into Canaan? The ² Arabic version in these three verses hath the father of Canaan instead of Canaan. Some ³ copies of the Septuagint likewise have Ham instead of Canaan, as if Canaan was a corruption of the text. Vatablus and others ⁴ by Canaan understand the father of Canaan, which was expressed twice before. And if we regard the metre, this line Cursed be Canaan, is much shorter than the rest, ⁵ as if something

¹ Mede's Works, Book I. Disc. 50. p. 284. Livy. Lib. 27. in fine.

² Maledictus pater Canaan, &c. Arab. [Cursed be the father of Canaan. See the Arabic version.]

³ Les Septante dans quelques exemplaires au lieu de Canaan, lisent Cham, comme si le texte qui porte Canaan étoit corrompu. Calmet on the text. So Ainsworth too. [The Septuagint in some copies have Ham instead of Canaan, as if Canaan were a corruption of the text.]

⁴ Quidam subaudiunt אבי pater, quod paulo ante bis expressum est, Maledictus Cham pater Chananæorum. Vatab. in locum. [Some suppose that the word אבי father, ought to be understood, because a little above Ham is twice called the father of Canaan. Vatablus on the passage.]

⁵ My suspicion hath since been confirmed by the reverend and learned Mr. Green, fellow of Clare-Hall, in Cambridge; who is admirably well skilled in the Hebrew language and Hebrew metre, and hath given abundant proofs of his knowledge and judgment in these matters in his new translation and commentary on the song of Deborah, the prayer of Habakkuk, &c. He asserts that according to Bishop Hare's metre, the words ham abi are necessary to fill up the verse. He proposes a farther emendation of the text, by the omission of one line, and the transposition of another, and would read the whole prophecy thus, according to the metre.

And Noah said,
Cursed be Ham the father of Canaan;
A servant of servants shall he be to his brethren.
And he said,

was deficient. May we not suppose, therefore, (without taking such liberties as Father Houbigant hath with the Hebrew text) that the copyist by mistake wrote only Canaan, instead of Ham the father of Canaan, and that the whole passage was originally thus? And Ham the father of Canaan saw the nakedness of his father, and told his two brethren without—And Noah awoke from his wine, and knew what his younger son had done unto him. And he said, Cursed be Ham the father of Canaan; a servant of servants shall he be unto his brethren. And he said, Blessed be the Lord God of Shem; and Ham the father of Canaan shall be servant to them. God shall enlarge Japheth; and he shall dwell in the tents of Shem; and Ham the father of Canaan shall be servant to them.

By this reading all the three sons of Noah are included in the prophecy, whereas otherwise Ham, who was the offender, is excluded, or is only punished in one of his children. Ham is characterized as the father of Canaan particularly, for the greater encouragement of the Israelites, who were going to invade the land of Canaan: and when it is said, Cursed be Ham the father of Canaan; a servant of servants shall he be unto his brethren; it is implied that his whole race was devoted to servitude, but particularly the Canaanites. Not that this was to take effect immediately, but was to be fulfilled in process of time, when they should forfeit their liberties by their wickedness. Ham at first subdued some of the posterity of Shem, as Canaan sometimes conquered Japheth; the Carthaginians, who were originally Canaanites, did particularly in Spain and Italy: but in time they were to be subdued, and to become servants to Shem and Japheth; and the change of their fortune from good to bad would render the curse still more visible. Egypt was the land of Ham, as it is often called in Scripture; and for many years it was a great and flourishing kingdom; but it was subdued by the Persians, who descended from Shem, and afterwards by the Grecians, who descended from Japheth; and from that time to this it hath constantly been in subjection to some or other of the

Blessed be Jehovah the God of Shem;
For he shall dwell in the tents of Shem.
God shall enlarge Japheth;
And Canaan shall be their servant.

If you will not allow this emendation to be right and certain, yet I think you must allow it to be probable and ingenious, to render the sense clearer and plainer, and to give every part its just weight and proportion. Or the whole may, with only a transposition and without any omission, be represented thus:—

And Noah said,
Cursed be Ham the father of Canaan.
A servant of servants shall he be to his brethren.
And he said,
Blessed be the Lord God of Shem;
For he shall dwell in the tents of Shem;
And Ham the father of Canaan shall be their servant.
God shall enlarge Japheth,
And Ham the father of Canaan shall be their servant.

posterity of Shem or Japheth. The whole continent of ¹ Africa was peopled principally by the children of Ham; and for how many ages have the better parts of that country lain under the dominion of the Romans, and then of the Saracens, and now of the Turks! In what wickedness, ignorance, barbarity, slavery, misery, live most of the inhabitants! And of the poor negroes how many hundreds every year are sold and bought like beasts in the market, and are conveyed from one quarter of the world to do the work of beasts in another!

Nothing can be more complete than the execution of the sentence upon Ham as well as upon Canaan: and now let us consider the promises made to Shem and Japheth. And he said (ver. 26.) Blessed be the Lord God of Shem; and Canaan shall be his servant: or rather, and Canaan shall be a servant to them, or their servant, that is, to his brethren; for that, as we observed before, is the main part of the prophecy, and therefore is so frequently repeated. A learned critic² in the Hebrew language, who hath lately published some remarks on the printed Hebrew text, saith, that “if it should be thought preferable to refer the word blessed directly to Shem, as the word cursed is to Canaan; the words may be (and perhaps more pertinently) rendered—Blessed of Jehovah, my God, be Shem!” See Gen. xxiv. 31. Or if we choose (as most perhaps will choose) to follow our own as well as all the ancient versions, we may observe that the old patriarch doth not say, Blessed be Shem, as he said, Cursed be Canaan; for men’s evil springeth of themselves, but their good from God: and therefore in a strain of devotion breaketh forth into thanksgiving to God as the author of all good to Shem. Neither doth he say the same to Japheth; for God certainly may dispense his particular favours according to his good pleasure, and salvation was to be derived to mankind through Shem and his posterity. God prefers Shem to his elder brother Japheth, as Jacob was afterwards preferred to Esau, and David to his elder brothers, to show that the order of grace is not always the same as the order of nature. The Lord being called the God of Shem particularly, it is plainly intimated that the Lord would be his God in a particular manner. And accordingly the Church of God was among the posterity of Shem for several generations; and of them (Rom. ix. 5.) as concerning the flesh Christ came.

But still Japheth was not dismissed without a promise, (ver. 47.) God shall enlarge Japheth, and he shall dwell in the tents of Shem; and Canaan shall be servant to them, or their servant. God shall enlarge Japheth. Some render the word (it is so rendered in the margin of our Bibles) God shall persuade or allure Japheth, so that he shall come over to the true religion, and dwell in the tents of Shem. But the 'best critics in the language have remarked, besides other reasons, that they who translate the word by persuade or allure, did not consider, that when it is so taken, it is used in a bad sense, and governs an accusative case, and not a dative as in this place. God shall enlarge Japheth, or unto Japheth, is the best rendering: and in the original there is a manifest allusion to Japheth's name, such as is familiar to the Hebrew writers. As it was said of Noah (Gen. v. 29.) This same shall comfort us, the name of Noah being thought to signify comfort: as it is said of Judah (Gen. xlix. 8.) Thou art he whom thy brethren shall praise, and the name of Judah signifies praise: as it is said of Dan (ver. 16.) Dan shall judge his people, and the name of Dan signifies judging: as it is said of Gad (ver. 19.) A troop shall overcome him, and the name of Gad signifies a troop or company: so it is said here, God shall enlarge Japheth, and the name of Japheth signifies enlargement. Was Japheth, then, more enlarged than the rest? Yes, he was both in territory and in children. The territories of Japheth's posterity were indeed very large, for 'besides all Europe, great and extensive as it is, they possessed the lesser Asia, Media, part of Armenia, Iberia, Albania, and those vast regions towards the north, which anciently the Scythians inhabited, and now the Tartars inhabit; and it is not improbable that the new world was peopled by some of his northern descendants passing thither by the straits of Anian. The enlargement of Japheth may also denote a numerous progeny as well as ample territory: and if you consult the genealogies of the three brothers comprised in the following chapter, you will find that Japheth had seven sons, whereas Ham had only four, and Shem only five: and the northern hive (as Sir William Temple denominates it) was always remarkable for its fecundity, and hath been continually pouring forth swarms, and sending out colonies into the more southern parts, both in Europe and in Asia, both in former and in later times.

¹ Cham licet maledictus, non tamen fuit exclusus a terrenis benedictionibus—Quippe in mundi divisione, illi præter Ægyptum atque Africam universam Syriæ magna pars obtigit, &c. Bocharti Phaleg. Lib. IV. Cap. i. col. 203. [Ham, although cursed, yet was not excluded from earthly blessings—for in the division of the world, besides Egypt and the whole continent of Africa, a large portion of Syria was likewise allotted to him. Bochart’s Phaleg. Book IV. Chap. i. col. 203.]

² See Kennicott’s Dissertation, p. 561.

¹ Bocharti Phaleg. Lib. III. Cap. i. col. 149. Clericus in loc. &c.

² —is omnino assentior, qui per hæc verba volunt Japhetho promitti fore ut in terræ divisione amplissimam illi portionem habitandam Deus assignet. Quod Deum abunde præstitisse statim agnoscet quisquis, præter Europam quanta quanta est, ad Japhethi portionem pertinere cogitabit, Asiam minorem, et Mediam, et Armeniæ partem, et Iberiam, et Albaniam, et vastissimas illas regiones ad Boream, quas olim Scythæ, hodie Tartari obtinent. Ut de novo orbe taceam, in quem per fretum Anianis migrasse Scythas vero non est absimile. Bocharti Phaleg. Lib. III. Cap. i. col. 149. [I altogether agree with those who think that by these words, it was promised to Japheth, that God in the division of the earth would bestow the greatest portion on his posterity. This must be acknowledged by every person, who considers that besides Europe, large as it is, they inhabit the lesser Asia, Media, a part of Armenia, Iberia, Albania, and those most extensive countries towards the north, which formerly the Scythians, but now the Tartars possess; to say nothing of the continent of America, into which, it is highly probable, they found their way by the straits of Anian. See Bochart's Phaleg. Book III. Chap. i. col. 149.]

The following clause, and he shall dwell in the tents of Shem, is capable of a double construction; for thereby may be meant either that God or that Japheth shall dwell in the tents of Shem; in the tents of Shem, saith he, speaking according to the simplicity of those times, when men dwelt in tents and not in houses. They who prefer the former construction, seem to have the authority of the original text on their side; for there is no other noun to govern the verbs in the period, but God; there is no pronoun in the Hebrew answering to the he which is inserted in our English translation: and the whole sentence would run thus, God will enlarge Japheth, and will dwell in the tents of Shem: and the Chaldee of ¹ Onkelos also thus paraphraseth it, and will make his glory to dwell in the tabernacles of Shem. They who prefer the latter construction seem to have done it, that they might refer this 27th verse wholly to Japheth, as they refer the 26th wholly to Shem: but the other appears to me the more natural and easy construction. Taken in either sense, the prophecy hath been most punctually fulfilled. In the former sense it was fulfilled literally, when the Shechinah or divine presence rested on the ark, and dwelt in the tabernacle and temple of the Jews; and when the Word who was with God and was God (John i. 1.) ἐσκήνωσεν, pitched his tent, and dwelt among us, (ver. 14.) In the latter sense it was fulfilled first, when the Greeks and Romans, who sprung originally from Japheth, subdued and possessed Judea and other countries of Asia belonging to Shem; and again spiritually, when they were proselyted to the true religion, and they who were not Israelites by birth, became Israelites by faith, and lived, as we and many others of Japheth's posterity do at this day, within the pale of the Church of Christ.

What think you now? Is not this a most extraordinary prophecy? a prophecy that was delivered near four thousand years ago, and yet hath been fulfilling through the several periods of time to this day! It is both wonderful and instructive. It is the history of the world, as it were, in epitome. And hence we are enabled to correct a mistake of one author, and expose the petulance of another.

1. The first is the learned and excellent Mr. Mede, an author always to be read with improvement, and to be corrected with reverence: but yet I conceive that he hath carried matters too far in ascribing more to this prophecy than really belongs to it. For discoursing of the dispersions and habitations of the sons of Noah, he ² saith that "there hath never yet been a son of Ham, who hath shaken a sceptre over the head of Japheth: Shem hath subdued Japheth, and Japheth hath subdued Shem, but Ham never subdued either:" and this passage hath been cited by several ³ commentators to illustrate this prophecy. But this worthy person surely did not recollect, that Nimrod, the first monarch in the world, was the son of Cush, who was the son of Ham. (Gen. x.) Misraim was another son of Ham; he was the father of the Egyptians, and the Egyptians detained the Israelites in bondage several years. Shishak, king of Egypt, subdued Rehoboam, king of Judah. (1 Kings xiv.) Sesostris king of Egypt (the same probably as Shishak) conquered great part of Europe and of Asia, if there is any faith in ancient history. The Carthaginians too, who descended from the Canaanites, as we noted before, gained several victories over the Romans in Spain and Italy. It was a mistake, therefore, to say that Ham never subdued Shem or Japheth. It is enough if he hath generally and for much the greatest part of time been a servant to them, as he really hath been for two or three thousand years, and continues at present. This sufficiently verifies the prediction; and we should exceed the limits of truth, if we should extend it farther. We might almost as well say (as some have said) that the complexion of the blacks was in consequence of Noah's curse. But though Ham hath, in some instances, and upon some occasions, been superior, yet this is memorable enough, that of the four famous monarchies of the world, the Assyrian, Persian, Grecian, and Roman, the two former were of the descendants of Shem, as the two latter were of the sons of Japheth.

¹ Et habitare faciet gloriam suam in tabernaculis Sem. [Translated in the text.]

² See Mede's Works, Book I. Disc. xlix. and l. p. 283. Edit. 1672.

³ Patrick, &c.

2. The other is the famous author of the Letters on the Study and Use of History, who hath strangely abused his talents in abusing this prophecy. For the true meaning and exact completion of it rightly considered, what room is there for ridicule? and how absurd and impertinent, as well as gross and indecent are his reflections! "The curse," says ¹he, "pronounced in it contradicts all our notions of order and of justice. One is tempted to think that the patriarch was still drunk; and that no man in his senses could hold such language, or pass such a sentence." But such will be the case when men of more parts than judgment talk and write about things which they do not sufficiently understand: and especially in matters of religion, whereof they are by no means competent judges, having either never studied them at all, or studied them superficially and with prejudice. All that he hath written relating to these subjects betrays great weakness in a man of his capacity,—weakness great as his malice; and we might have an easy victory over assertions without proofs, premises without conclusions, and conclusions without premises. But I love not controversy, and will only make two or three reflections, just to give a specimen of the boasted learning and abilities of this writer.

His lordship seemeth to take a particular pleasure in railing at pedants, at the same time that he is himself one of the most pedantic of writers, if it be pedantry to make a vain ostentation of learning, and to quote authors without either reading or understanding them, or even knowing so much as who and what they are. "The Codex Alexandrinus," ¹saith he, "we owe to George the monk." We are indebted, indeed, to George the monk, more usually called Syncellus, for what is entitled Vetus Chronicon, or an old chronicle. But the Codex Alexandrinus is quite another thing; it is, as all the learned know, the famous Greek MS. of the Old and New Testament, brought originally from Alexandria, and presented to Charles I., and now remaining in the king's library, of which it doth not appear that George the monk knew any thing, and it is evident that his lordship knew nothing. If he meant to say the Chronicon Alexandrinum, that is still another thing, and the work of another author.

¹ Lord Bolingbroke's Works, Vol. II. Letter iii. p. 314, 4to. edit.

His lordship is of opinion, ²that "Virgil, in those famous verses, 'Excudent alii,' &c., might have justly ascribed to his countrymen the praise of writing history better than the Grecians." But which are the Roman histories that are to be preferred to the Grecian? Why "the remains,—the precious remains," says his lordship, "of Sallust, of Livy, and of Tacitus." But it happened that ³Virgil died before Livy had written his history, and before Tacitus was born. And is not this an excellent chronologer now to correct all ancient history and chronology, sacred and profane?

His lordship is likewise pleased to say, ⁴that "Don Quixote believed, but even Sancho doubted:" and it may be asserted on the other side, that Sir Isaac Newton believed the prophecies, though his lordship did not; the principal reason of which may be found, perhaps, in the different life and morals of the one and the other. Nay, the wisest politicians and historians have been believers, as well as the greatest philosophers. Raleigh and Clarendon believed; Bacon and Locke believed; and where then is the discredit to revelation, if Lord Bolingbroke was an infidel? A scorner, as Solomon saith, (Prov. xiv. 6.) seeketh wisdom, and findeth it not.

But there cannot be a stronger condemnation of his lordship's conduct, than his own words upon another occasion, in his famous Dissertation upon Parties:—"Some men there are, the pests of society I think them, who pretend a great regard to religion in general, but who take every opportunity of declaiming publicly against that system of religion, or at least against that church establishment which is received in Britain. Just so the men, of whom I have been speaking, affect a great regard to liberty in general; but they dislike so much the system of liberty established in Britain, that they are incessant in their endeavours to puzzle the plainest thing in the world, and to refine and distinguish away the life and strength of

¹ Lord Bolingbroke's Works, Vol. II. Letter i. p. 262, 4to. edit.

² Ibid. Letter v. p. 340, &c.

³ Virgil died A. U. C. 735. Livy, according to Dodwell, finished his history in 745. Tacitus was Consul in 850. See Fabricius.

⁴ Lord Bolingbroke's Works, Vol. II. Letter iv. p. 130, 4to. edit.

our constitution, in favour of the little, present, momentary turns, which they are retained to serve. What now would be the consequence, if all these endeavours should succeed? I am persuaded that the great philosophers, divines, lawyers, and politicians, who exert them, have not yet prepared and agreed upon the plans of a new religion, and of new constitutions in church and state. We should find ourselves, therefore, without any form of religion or civil government. The first set of these missionaries would take off all the restraints of religion from the governed; and the latter set would remove, or render ineffectual, all the limitations and controls which liberty hath prescribed to those that govern, and disjoint the whole frame of our constitution. Entire dissolution of manners, confusion, anarchy, or perhaps absolute monarchy, would follow; for it is possible, nay probable, that in such a state as this, and amidst such a rout of lawless savages, men would choose this government, absurd as it is, rather than have no government at all."

It is to be lamented that such a genius should be so employed; but the misapplication of those excellent talents, with which God had entrusted him, was his reigning fault through every stage,—through every scene of life. That which Lord¹ Digby said of the great Lord Strafford may with more truth and justice be affirmed of him, that the malignity of his practices was hugely aggravated by those rare abilities of his, whereof God had given him the use, but the devil the application.

II.

THE PROPHECIES CONCERNING ISHMAEL.

ABRAHAM was the patriarch of greatest renown next after the times of Noah. He was favoured with several revelations, and from him two very extraordinary nations descended, the Ishmaelites and Israelites, concerning each of whom there are some remarkable prophecies. Ishmael, though the son of the bondwoman, and not properly the child of promise, was yet distinguished by some express predictions for the comfort and satisfaction of both his parents. In the 16th chapter of Genesis, when Hagar fled from the face of her mistress, who had dealt hardly with her, the angel of the Lord found her in the wilderness, and said unto her, Return to thy mistress, and submit thyself under her hands. And the angel of the Lord said unto her, I will multiply thy seed exceedingly, that it shall not be numbered for multitude. And the angel of the Lord said unto her,

¹ Rushworth, Vol. IV. p. 225.

Behold thou art with child, and shalt bear a son, and shalt call his name Ishmael (that is, God shall hear), because the Lord hath heard thy affliction. And he will be a wild man; his hand will be against every man, and every man's hand against him; and he shall dwell in the presence of all his brethren. (ver. 6, 7, 9, 10, 11, 12.) In the following chapter, when Isaac was promised to Abraham, God still reserved a blessing for Ishmael, Behold I have blessed him, and will make him fruitful, and will multiply him exceedingly: twelve princes shall he beget, and I will make him a great nation. (ver. 20.) Afterwards, when Hagar and Ishmael were sent forth into the wilderness, God said unto Abraham, (xxi. 13.) And also of the son of the bond-woman will I make a nation, because he is thy seed. The same is repeated to Hagar, (ver. 18.) I will make him a great nation. And if we are curious to trace the course of events, we shall see how exactly these particulars have been fulfilled, from the earliest to the present times.

I will multiply thy seed exceedingly, that it shall not be numbered for multitude: and again, Behold I have blessed him, and will make him fruitful, and will multiply him exceedingly. These passages evince that the prophecy doth not so properly relate to Ishmael, as to his posterity, which is here foretold to be very numerous. Ishmael married an Egyptian woman, as his mother was likewise an Egyptian; (Gen. xxi. 21.) and in a few years his family was increased so, that in the 37th chapter of Genesis we read of Ishmaelites trading into Egypt. Afterwards his seed was multiplied exceedingly in the Hagarenes, who probably were denominated from his mother Hagar; and in the Nabathæans, who had their name from his son Nebaioth; and in the Itureans, who were so called from his son Jetur or Itur; and in the Arabs, especially the Scenites, and the Saracens, who over-ran a great part of the world, and his descendants, the Arabs, are a very numerous people at this day.

Twelve princes shall he beget. This circumstance is very particular, but it was punctually fulfilled, and Moses hath given us the names of these twelve princes. (Gen. xxv. 16.) These are the sons of Ishmael, and these are their names, by their towns, and by their castles; twelve princes according to their nations: by which we are to understand, not that they were so many distinct sovereign princes, but only heads of clans or tribes. Strabo frequently mentions the Arabian phylarchs, as he denominates them, or rulers of tribes; and Melo, quoted by Eusebius from Alexander Polyhistor, a heathen historian, relates¹ that “Abraham of his Egyptian wife begat twelve sons (he should have said one son who begat twelve sons), who, departing into Arabia, divided the region between them, and were the first kings of the inhabitants: whence, even to our days, the Arabians have twelve kings of the same names as the first." And ever since the people have been governed by phylarchs, and have lived in tribes; and still continue to do so, ¹Thevenot and other modern travellers testify.

¹ ἐκ μὲν τῆς Αἰγυπτίας γεννῆσαι υἱοὺς ἰβ, οὓς δὴ εἰς Ἀραβίαν ἀπαλλογέοντας διελθεῖν τὴν χώραν καὶ πρώτους βασιλεῦσαι τῶν ἐγχωρίων. ὅθεν ἕως καθ' ἡμᾶς δώδεκα εἶναι βασιλεῖς Ἀράβων ὁμωνύμους ἐκείνοις. Ex Ægyptiā liberos duodecim genuisse, qui in Arabiam profecti eam inter se dividerint locique hominibus principes imperarint: ex quo factum sit, ut reges Arabum duodecim primis illis cognomines ad nostra usque tempora numerentur. Euseb. Præpar. Evang. Lib. ix. Cap. xix. p. 421. Edit. Vigeri. [Translated in the text.]

And I will make him a great nation. This is repeated twice or thrice, and it was accomplished as soon as in the regular course of nature it could be accomplished. His seed, in process of time, grew up into a great nation, and such they continued for several ages, and such they remain to this day. They might, indeed, emphatically be styled a great nation, when the Saracens had made those rapid and extensive conquests, and erected one of the largest empires that ever were in the world.

And he will be a wild man. In the original it is a wild ass man, and the learned ²Bochart translates it tam ferus quam onagar, as wild as a wild ass; so that that should be eminently true of him, which, in the Book of Job, (xi. 12.) is affirmed of mankind in general, Man is born like a wild ass's colt. But what is the nature of the creature to which Ishmael is so particularly compared? It cannot be described better than it is in the same Book of Job, (xxxix. 5, &c.) Who hath sent out the wild ass free; or who hath loosed the bands of the wild ass? Whose house I have made the wilderness, and the barren land his dwellings. He scorneth the multitude of the city, neither regardeth he the crying of the driver. The range of the mountains is his pasture, and he searcheth after every green thing. Ishmael, therefore, and his posterity were to be wild, fierce, savage, ranging in the deserts, and not easily softened and tamed to society; and whoever hath read, or known any thing of this people, knoweth this to be their true and genuine character. It is said of Ishmael, (Gen. xxi. 20.) that he dwelt in the wilderness, and became an archer; and the same is no less true of his descendants than of himself. He dwelt in the wilderness, and his sons still inhabit the same wilderness, and many of them neither sow nor plant³, according to the best accounts, ancient and modern. And he became an archer; and such were the Itureans, whose ⁴bows and arrows are famous in all authors; such were the mighty men of Kedar in Isaiah's time; (Isa. xxi. 17.) and such the Arabs have been from the beginning, and

¹ See Part i. Book ii. C. 32. See likewise Harris's Voyages, Vol. II. Book ii. Chap. ix.

² Hierozoic. Pars prior, Lib. iii. Cap. xvi. col. 878.

³ Ammianus Marcellinus, Lib. xiv. Cap. iv. p. 14. Edit. Valesii, Paris, 1681. Harris, Vol. II. Book ii. Chap. ix.

⁴ — Ituræos taxi torquentur in arcus. Virgil, Georg. ii. 448.

[——— the Ituræan yew
Receives the bending figure of a bow.]

Ituræis cursus fuit inde sagittis.

[Here Ituræan arrows wing'd their course.]

Lucan, vii. 230.

are at this time. It was late before they admitted the use of fire-arms among them; ¹the greater part of them still are strangers to them, and still continue skilful archers.

His hand will be against every man, and every man's hand against him. The one is the natural, and almost necessary consequence of the other. Ishmael lived by prey and rapine in the wilderness, and his posterity have all along infested Arabia and the neighbouring countries with their robberies and incursions. They live in a state of continual war with the rest of the world, and are both robbers by land, and pirates by sea. As they have been such enemies to mankind, it is no wonder that mankind have been enemies to them again, that several attempts have been made to extirpate them; and even now, as well as formerly, travellers are forced to go with arms and in caravans or large companies, and to march and watch and keep guard like a little army, to defend themselves from the assaults of these freebooters, who run about in troops, and rob and plunder all whom they can by any means subdue. These robberies they also ²justify, "by alleging the hard usage of their father Ishmael, who, being turned out of doors by Abraham, had the open plains and deserts given him by God for his patrimony, with permission to take whatever he could find there. And on this account they think they may, with a safe conscience, indemnify themselves, as well as they can, not only on the posterity of Isaac, but also on every body else; always supposing a sort of kindred between themselves and those they plunder. And in relating their adventures of this kind, they think it sufficient to change the expression, and instead of I robbed a man of such and such a thing, to say, I gained it."

And he shall dwell in the presence of all his brethren; shall tabernacle, for many of the Arabs dwell in tents, and are therefore called Scenites. It appears that they dwelt in tents in the wilderness so long ago as in Isaiah and Jeremiah's time; (Isa. xiii. 20; Jer. iii. 2.) and they do the same at this day. This is very extraordinary, that his hand shall be against every man, and every man's hand against him, and yet that he should be able to dwell in the presence of all his brethren: but, extraordinary as it was, this also hath been fulfilled, both in the person of Ishmael and in his posterity. As for Ishmael himself, the sacred historian afterwards relates (Gen. xxv. 17, 18.) that the years of the life of Ishmael were an hundred and thirty and seven years, and he died in the presence of all his brethren. As for his posterity, they dwelt likewise in the presence of all their brethren, Abraham's sons by Keturah; the Moabites and Ammonites, descendants of Lot; the Israelites, descendants of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob; and the Edomites, descendants of Abraham, Isaac, and Esau. And they still subsist a distinct people, and inhabit the country of their progenitors, notwithstanding the perpetual enmity between them and the rest of mankind. It may be said, perhaps, that the country was not worth conquering, and its barrenness was its preservation; but this is a mistake, for by all accounts, though the greater part of it be sandy and barren deserts, yet here and there are interspersed beautiful spots and fruitful valleys. One part of the country was anciently known and distinguished by the name of Arabia the happy. And now the proper Arabia is, by the oriental writers, generally divided into five provinces. Of these, the chief is the province of Yaman, which, as a learned writer asserts, upon good authorities, “has been famous from all antiquity for the happiness of its climate, its fertility and riches. The delightfulness and plenty of Yaman are owing to its mountains; for all that part which lies along the Red Sea is a dry barren desert, in some places ten or twelve leagues over, but in return bounded by those mountains, which, being well watered, enjoy an almost continual spring, and besides coffee, the peculiar produce of this country, yield great plenty and variety of fruits, and, in particular, excellent corn, grapes, and spices. The soil of the other provinces is much more barren than that of Yaman; the greater part of their territories being covered with dry sands, or rising into rocks, interspersed here and there with some fruitful spots, which receive their greatest advantages from their water and palm trees.” But if the country was ever so bad, one would think it should be for the interest of the neighbouring princes and states at any hazard to root out such a pestilent race of robbers: and actually it hath several times been attempted, but never accomplished. They have from first to last maintained their independency, and, notwithstanding the most powerful efforts for their destruction, still dwell in the presence of all their brethren, and in the presence of all their enemies.

¹ Thevenot in Harris, Vol. II. Book ii. Chap. ix.

² Sale's Prelim. Discourse to the Koran, Sect. i. p. 30, 31, where he also quotes, Voyage dans la Palest. p. 220, &c.

We find that, in the time of Moses, they were grown up into twelve princes according to their nations; (Gen. xxv. 16.) and they dwelt (saith Moses, ver. 18.) from Havilah unto Shur, that is before Egypt, as thou goest towards Assyria; but yet we do not find that they were ever subject to either of their powerful neighbours, the Egyptians or Assyrians. The conquests of Sesostris, the great king of Egypt, are much magnified by Diodorus Siculus; and probably he might subdue some of the western provinces of Arabia bordering upon Egypt, but he was obliged, as ²Diodorus informs us, to draw a line from Heliopolis to Pelusium, to secure Egypt from the incursions of the Arabs. They were therefore not subjects, but enemies to the Egyptians; as they were likewise to the Assyrians, for they assisted ³Belesis and Arbaces in overturning that empire, assisted them not as fellow-rebels, but as an independent state with their auxiliary forces.

¹ Sale's Prelim. Disc. Ibid. p. 2, 3.

² Diod. Sic. Lib. i. p. 36. Edit. Stephan. p. 52. Edit. Rhodomani.

³ Ibid. Lib. ii. p. 79. Edit. Stephan. p. 111. Edit. Rhod.

The next great conquerors of the east were Cyrus and the Persians; but neither he nor any of his successors ever reduced the whole body of the Arabs to subjection. They might conquer some of the exterior, but never reached the interior parts of the country; and Herodotus, the historian, who lived nearest to those times, saith expressly, that ¹ the Arabs were never reduced by the Persians to the condition of subjects, but were considered by them as friends, and opened to them a passage into Egypt, which, without the assistance and permission of the Arabs, would have been utterly impracticable; and in ² another place he saith, that while Phœnicia, Palestine, Syria, and the neighbouring countries were taxed, the Arabian territories continued free from paying any tribute. They were then regarded as friends, but afterwards they assisted with their forces ³ Amyrtæus, king of Egypt, against Darius Nothus, and ⁴ Euagorus, king of Cyprus, against Artaxerxes Mnemon; so that they acted as friends or enemies to the Persians, just as they thought proper, and as it suited their humour or their interest.

Alexander the Great then overturned the Persian empire and conquered Asia. The neighbouring princes sent their ambassadors to make their submissions. The ⁵ Arabs alone disdained to acknowledge the conqueror, and scorned to send any embassy, or to take any notice of him. This slight provoked him to such a degree, that he meditated an expedition against them, and the great preparations which he made for it showed that he thought them a very formidable enemy; but death intervened and put an end to all that his ambition or resentment had formed against them. Thus they happily escaped the fury of his arms, and were never subdued by any of his successors. Antigonus, one of the greatest of his successors, made two attempts upon them, one by his general Athenæus, and the other by his own son Demetrius, but both without success; the

¹ Ἀράβιοι δὲ οὐδαμᾶ κατήκουσαν ἐπὶ δουλουσίνῃ Πέρσῃσι, ἀλλὰ ξεῖνοι ἐγένοντο, παρέντις Καμβύσεα ἐπ' Αἴγυπτον· ἀεκόντων γὰρ Ἀραβίων, οὐκ ἂν ἐσβάλλοιεν Πέρσαι εἰς Αἴγυπτον. Arabes nunquam a Persis in servitutem redacti sunt, sed hospites extiterunt; quum Cambysi aditum in Ægyptum permisissent: quibus invitis haudquaquam fuissent ingressi Persæ Ægyptum. [The Arabians were never reduced by the Persians to the condition of subjects, but were on hospitable terms with them, when they permitted Cambyses to pass into Egypt. For the Persians never could have made an inroad into Egypt, had the Arabians been unwilling.] Herod. Lib. iii. Sect. lxxxviii. p. 189. Edit. Gale.

² Herod. Sect. xcī. p. 199.—πλὴν μοίρης τῆς Ἀραβίων (ταῦτα γὰρ ἦν ἀτελεία)—præter Arabum partem (hæc enim erat immunitas). [Except the territory of the Arabians, for this was exempt from tribute.]

³ Diodorus Siculus, Lib. xiii. p. 355. Edit. Stephani. Tom. II. p. 172. Edit. Rhodmani. Prideaux Connect. Part i. Book vi. Anno 410.

⁴ Ibid. Lib. xv. p. 459. Edit. Stephani. Tom. II. p. 328. Edit. Rhodmani. Prideaux Connect. Part i. Book vii. Anno 386.

⁵ Strabo, Lib. xvi. p. 1076 and 1132. Edit. Amstel. 1707. Arrian, Lib. vii. p. 300. Edit. Gronovii.

⁶ Diodorus Siculus, Lib. xix. p. 722, &c. Edit. Stephani. Tom. II. p. 730. Edit. Rhodmani.

former was defeated, and the latter was glad to make peace with them, and leave them at their liberty. Neither would they suffer the people employed by Antigonus to gather the bitumen on the lake Asphaltites, whereby he hoped greatly to increase his revenue. The Arabs fiercely attacked the workmen and the guards, and forced them to desist from their undertaking. So true is the assertion of ¹Diodorus, that “neither the Assyrians formerly, nor the kings of the Medes and Persians, nor yet of the Macedonians, were able to subdue them; nay, though they led many and great forces against them, yet they could not accomplish their attempts.” We find them afterwards sometimes at peace, and sometimes at war with the neighbouring states; sometimes joining the Syrians, and sometimes the Egyptians; sometimes assisting the Jews, and sometimes plundering them; and in all respects acting like a free people, who neither feared nor courted any foreign power whatever.

The Romans then invaded the east, and subdued the countries adjoining, but were never able to reduce Arabia into the form of a Roman province. It is too common with historians to say, that such or such a country was conquered, when perhaps only part of it was so. It is thus that ²Plutarch asserts, that the Arabs submitted to Lucullus: whereas the most that we can believe is, that he might subdue some particular tribes; but he was recalled, and the command of the Roman army in Asia was given to Pompey. Pompey, though he triumphed over the three parts of the world, could not yet conquer Arabia. He ³carried his arms into the country, obtained some victories, and compelled Aretas to submit; but other affairs soon obliged him to retire, and by retiring he lost all the advantages which he had gained. His forces were no sooner withdrawn, than the Arabs made their incursions again into the Roman provinces. ⁴Ælius Gallus, in the reign of Augustus, penetrated far into the country, but a strange distemper made terrible havoc in his army, and, after two years spent in this unfortunate expedition, he was glad to escape with the small remainder of his forces. The emperor Trajan reduced some parts of Arabia, but he could never subdue it entirely; and when he besieged the city of the Hagarenes, as ⁵Dion says, his soldiers were repelled by light-

¹ Οὐθ' οἱ Ἀσσύριοι τὸ παλαιὸν, οὐθ' οἱ Μήδων καὶ Περσῶν ἔτι δὲ Μακεδόνων βασιλεῖς ἠδυνήθησαν αὐτοὺς καταδουλώσασθαι, πολλὰς μὲν καὶ μεγάλας δυνάμεις ἐπ' αὐτοὺς ἀγαγόντες, οὐδέποτε δὲ τὰς ἐπιβολὰς συντελέσαντες. Nec Assyrii olim, nec Medi ac Persæ, imo nec Macedonum reges subigere illos potuerunt; qui licet magnis in eos copiis moverint, nunquam tamen incepta ad finem perduxerunt. Diod. Sic. Lib. ii. p. 92. Edit. Steph. p. 131. Edit. Rhod. [Translated in the text.]

² Plutarch in Lucullo passim.

³ Plutarch in Pompeio, p. 640, &c. Edit. Paris, 1624.

⁴ Strabo, Lib. xvi. p. 1126. Edit. Amstel. 1707. Dion Cassius, Lib. liii. p. 516. Edit. Leunclav. Hanov. 1606. Dion calls him by mistake Ælius Largus.

⁵ ἐγένοντο δὲ βρονταί, καὶ ἱριδες ὑπεφαίνοντο, ἀστραπαὶ τε καὶ ζάλη, χάλαζα καὶ κεραυνοὶ τοῖς Ῥωμαίοις ἐνέπιπτον, ὅποτε προσβάλοιεν, καὶ ὅποτε οὖν δειπνοῦν, μυῖαι τοῖς βρώμασι καὶ τοῖς πόμασι προσιζάνουσαι, δυσχερείας ἔπαντα ἐνεπίμπλων, καὶ Τραϊανὸς μὲν ἐκείθεν οὕτως ἀπῆλθε. Ibi cælum tonitru contremuit, irides visæ sunt, nings, thunderings, hail, whirlwinds, and other prodigies, and were constantly so repelled, as often as they renewed their assaults. At the same time, great swarms of flies infested his camp; so that he was forced at last to raise the siege, and retired with disgrace into his own dominions. About eighty years after, the emperor Severus twice besieged the same city with a numerous army and a formidable train of military engines; but he had no better success than Trajan. God, 'says the heathen historian, preserved the city by the backwardness of the emperor at one time, and by that of his forces at another. He made some assaults, but was baffled and defeated, and returned with precipitation as great as his vexation for his disappointment. And if such great emperors and able warriors as Trajan and Severus could not succeed in their attempts, it is no wonder that the following emperors could prevail nothing. The Arabs continued their incursions and depredations, in Syria and other Roman provinces, with equal licence and impunity.

Such was the state and condition of the Arabs to the time of their famous prophet Mohammed, who laid the foundations of a mighty empire; and then for several centuries they were known among the European nations by the name of the Sarraceni or Saracens, the Arraceni ² of Pliny, and the ³ Hagarenes of holy Scripture. Their conquests were, indeed, amazingly rapid; they can be compared to nothing more properly than to a sudden flood or inundation. In a few years the Saracens over-ran more countries, and subdued more people than the Romans did in several centuries. They were then not only free and independent of the rest of the world, but were themselves masters of the most considerable parts of the earth; and so they continued for ⁴ about three centuries, and after their empire fulgura, procellæ, grando, fulmina in Romanos cadebant, quoties in illos impetum facerent; quotiesque cœnarent, muscæ tam esculentis quam potulentis insidentes, cuncta nausæa quadam implebant. Itaque Trajanus inde proficiscitur. Dionis Hist. Lib. lxxviii. p. 785. Edit. Leunclav. Hanov. 1606. [There were thunderings. The rainbow appeared. Flashes of lightning, furious storms, hail and thunderbolts assailed the Romans as often as they attacked them. As often too as they provided a meal, great swarms of flies, sending forth a dreadful stench, perched on their meats and drinks. For these reasons Trajan retired from thence. See Dion's History, Book lxxviii. p. 785, in Leunclavius' Edition, printed at Hanover, 1606.]

¹ καὶ οὕτω θεὸς ὁ ὀνσάμενος τὴν πόλιν, τοὺς μὲν στρατιώτας δυνηθέντας ἀν εἰς αὐτὴν εἰσελθεῖν, διὰ τοῦ Σεβήρου ἀνεκάλεσε, καὶ τὸν Σεβήρον αὐ βουλευθέντα αὐτὴν μετὰ τοῦτο λαβεῖν, διὰ τῶν στρατιωτῶν ἐκώλυσεν. Itaque Deus urbem liberavit, qui per Severum revocavit milites, quum possent in ipsam ingredi; et Severum cupientem eandem postea capere, per milites prohibuit. Ibid. Lib. lxxv. p. 855. [And thus God delivered the city (of the Hagarenes) by the emperor Severus recalling his soldiers, at a time when they had it in their power to take it, and afterwards, when he was desirous of possessing it, he was hindered by the obstinacy of his soldiers. See the same, Book lxxv. p. 855.]

² Plin. Nat. Hist. Lib. vi. Cap. xxxii. ubi vide notam Harduini. [Where see the note of Harduin.]

³ Hagarenes, the descendants of Ishmael. They are called also Ishmaelites and Saracens, &c. Calmet's Dict.

⁴ The Saracens began their conquests A.D. 622, and to reign at Damascus A.D. 637. Their empire was broken and divided A.D. 936. See Dr. Blair's Chronol. Tables, Tab. 33 and 39, and Sir Isaac Newton on the Apocalypse, Chap. iii. p. 304, 305.

was dissolved, and they were reduced within the limits of their native country, they still maintained their liberty against the Tartars, Mamalucs, Turks, and all foreign enemies whatever. Whoever were the conquerors of Asia, they were still unconquered, still continued their incursions, and preyed upon all alike. The Turks have now for several centuries been lords of the adjacent countries; but they have been so little able to restrain the depredations of the Arabs, that they have been ¹ obliged to pay them a sort of annual tribute for the safe passage and security of the pilgrims, who usually go in great companies to Mecca; so that the Turks have rather been dependent upon them, than they upon the Turks. And they still continue the same practices, and preserve the same superiority, if we may believe the concurrent testimony of modern travellers of all nations.

Two of our own nation have lately travelled into those parts, and have written and published their travels, both men of literature, both reverend divines, and writers of credit and character, Dr. Shaw and Bishop Pococke: and in several instances they confirm the account that we have given of this people. "With regard to the manners and customs of the Bedoweens," saith ² Dr. Shaw, "it is to be observed, that they retain a great many of those we read of in sacred as well as profane history; being, if we except their religion, the same people they were two or three thousand years ago, without ever embracing any of those novelties in dress or behaviour, which have had so many periods and revolutions in the Moorish and Turkish cities." And after giving some account of their hospitality, he proceeds thus: "Yet the outward behaviour of the Arab frequently gives the lie to his inward temper and inclination. For he is naturally thievish and treacherous; and it sometimes happens that those very persons are overtaken and pillaged in the morning, who were entertained the night before, with all the instances of friendship and hospitality. Neither are they to be accused for plundering strangers only, and attacking almost every person whom they find unarmed and defenceless, but for those many implacable and hereditary animosities which continually subsist among them, literally fulfilling to this day the prophecy, that Ishmael should be a wild man; his hand should be against every man, and every man's hand against him." Dr. Shaw himself ³ was robbed and plundered by a party of Arabs, in his journey from Ramah to Jerusalem, though he was escorted by four bands of Turkish soldiers; and yet the Turks at the same time paid a stipulated sum to the Arabs, in order to secure a safe passage for their caravans; and there cannot surely be a stronger proof, not only of the independency of the Arabs, but even of their superiority, not only of their enjoying their liberty, but even of their abusing it to licentiousness. Bishop Pococke was the last who travelled into those parts, and he hath informed us that the present inhabitants of Arabia resemble the ancient in several respects; that ¹ they live under tents, and stay in one place as long as they have water and shrubs and trees for their camels to feed on, for there is no tillage nor grass in all this country; that all their riches consist in camels, a few goats, and sometimes sheep, so that they live in great poverty, having nothing but a few dates and a little goats' milk, and bring all their corn eight or ten days' journey from Cairo; that they are in different nations or clans, each obeying the orders of its great chief, and every encampment those of its particular chief; and though seemingly divided, yet they are all united in a sort of league together; that they ² love plunder, and the roving sort of life this disposition leads them to, have good horses, and manage them and their pikes with much address; those on foot use poles, with which they fence off the spear with great art. So that authors, both sacred and profane, Jewish and Arabian, Greek and Roman, Christian and Mohammedan, ancient and modern, all agree in the same account; and if any are desirous of seeing the matter deduced more at large, they may be referred to a dissertation upon the independency of the Arabs by the learned authors of the Universal History.

¹ See Thevenot in Harris, Vol. II. Book ii. Chap. ix, and Demetrius Cantemir's Hist. of the Othman Empire in Ahmed. II. p. 393.

² Shaw's Travels, p. 300, &c.

³ Preface to his Travels, p. vii.

An author, who hath lately published an account of Persia, having occasion to speak of the Arabians, ³ says, "their expertness in the use of the lance and sabre renders them fierce and intrepid. Their skill in horsemanship, and their capacity of bearing the heat of their burning plains, give them also a superiority over their enemies. Hence every petty chief, in his own district, considers himself as a sovereign prince, and as such exacts customs from all passengers. Their conduct in this respect has often occasioned their being considered in no better light than robbers, &c. They generally marry within their own tribe, &c. When they plunder caravans travelling through their territories, they consider it as reprisals on the Turks and Persians, who often make inroads into their country, and carry away their corn and their flocks."

Who can fairly consider and lay all these particulars together, and not perceive the hand of God in this whole affair from the beginning to the end? The sacred historian saith, that these prophecies concerning Ishmael were delivered partly by the angel of the Lord, and partly by God himself; and, indeed, who but God, or one raised and commissioned by him, could describe so particularly the genius and manners, not only of a single person before he was born, but of a whole people, from the first founder of the race to the present time? It was somewhat wonderful, and not to be foreseen by human sagacity or prudence, that a man's whole posterity should so nearly resemble him, and retain the same inclinations, the same habits, the same customs throughout all ages. The waters of the purest spring or fountain are soon changed and polluted in their course; and the farther still they flow, the more they are incorporated and lost in other waters. How have the modern Italians degenerated from the courage and virtues of the Old Romans! How are the French and English polished and refined from the barbarism of the ancient Gauls and Britons! Men and manners change with times; but in all changes and revolutions the Arabs have still continued the same with little or no material alteration. And yet it cannot be said of them, as of some barbarous nations, that they have had no commerce or intercourse with the rest of mankind; for by their conquests they over-ran a great part of the earth, and for some centuries were masters of most of the learning that was then in the world; but, however, they remained and still remain the same fierce savage intractable people, like their great ancestor in every thing, and different from most of the world besides. Ishmael was circumcised, and so are his posterity to this day; and as Ishmael was circumcised when he was thirteen years old, so were the Arabs at the same age, according to ¹ Josephus. He was born of Hagar, who was a concubine, and they still indulge themselves in the use of mercenary wives and concubines. He lived in tents in the wilderness, shifting from place to place; and so do his descendants, particularly those therefore called ² Scenites formerly, and those called Bedoweens at this day. He was an archer in the wilderness, and so are they. He was to be the father of twelve princes or heads of tribes, and they live in clans or tribes at this day. He was a wild man, his hand against every man, and every man's hand against him; and they live in the same state of war, their hand against every man, and every man's hand against them.

¹ Pococke's Description of the East, Vol. I. Book iii. Chap. ii.

² Ibid. Book iv. Chap. iv.

³ Hanway's Travels. Vol. IV. Part. v. Chap. xxix. p. 221, &c.

This, I say, is somewhat wonderful, that the same people should retain the same dispositions for so many ages; but it is still more wonderful, that with these dispositions, and this enmity to the whole world, they should still subsist, in spite of the world, an independant and free people. It cannot be pretended, that no probable attempts were ever made to conquer them; for the greatest conquerors in the world have almost all in their turns attempted it, and some of them have been very near effecting it. It cannot be pretended that the dryness or inaccessibleness of their country hath been their preservation; for their country hath been often penetrated, though never entirely subdued. I know that ³ Diodorus

¹ Antiq. Lib. i. Cap. xii. Sect. ii. p. 29. Edit. Hudson. Vide etiam Pocockii Specimen Hist. Arab. p. 319.

² Scenitæ—vagi—a tabernaculis [ἀπὸ τῶν σκηνῶν] cognominati. Plin. Lib. vi. Cap. xxviii. Sect. xxxii. Edit. Harduin. Pocockii Specimen Hist. Arab. p. 87. [Scenites—wanderers, so called from their tents.]

³ Diodorus Siculus, Lib. ii. p. 92. Edit. Stephani. p. 131. Edit. Rhodmani. et Lib. xix. p. 722. Edit. Steph. p. 730. Edit. Rhod.

Siculus accounts for their preservation from the dryness of their country, that they have wells digged in proper places, known only to themselves, and their enemies and invaders, through ignorance of these places, perish for want of water; but this account is far from being an adequate and just representation of the case; large armies have found the means of subsistence in their country; none of their powerful invaders ever desisted on this account; and therefore that they have not been conquered, we must impute to some other cause. When, in all human probability, they were upon the brink of ruin, then (as we have before seen at large) they were signally and providentially delivered. Alexander was preparing an expedition against them, and an inflammatory fever cut him off in the flower of his age. Pompey was in the career of his conquests, when urgent affairs called him elsewhere. Ælius Gallus had penetrated far into the country, when a fatal disease destroyed great numbers of his men, and obliged him to return. Trajan besieged their capital city, but was defeated by thunder and lightning, whirlwinds and other prodigies, and that as often as he renewed his assaults. Severus besieged the same city twice, and was twice repelled from before it; and the historian Dion, a man of rank and character, though a heathen, plainly ascribes the defeat of these two emperors to the interposition of a Divine power. We who know the prophecies may be more assured of the reality of a Divine interposition; and, indeed, otherwise how could a single nation stand out against the enmity of the whole world for any length of time, and much more for near four thousand years together? The great empires round them have all in their turns fallen to ruin, while they have continued the same from the beginning, and are likely to continue the same to the end; and this, in the natural course of human affairs, was so highly improbable, if not altogether impossible, that as nothing but a Divine prescience could have foreseen it, so nothing but a Divine power could have accomplished it.

These are the only people, besides the Jews, who have subsisted as a distinct people from the beginning, and in some respects they very much resemble each other. The Arabs as well as the Jews are descended from Abraham, and both boast of their descent from that father of the faithful. The Arabs as well as the Jews are circumcised, and both profess to have derived that ceremony from Abraham. The Arabs as well as the Jews had originally twelve patriarchs or heads of tribes, who were their princes or governors. The Arabs as well as the Jews marry among themselves and in their own tribes. The Arabs as well as the Jews are singular in several of their customs, and are standing monuments to all ages of the exactness of the Divine predictions, and of the veracity of Scripture history. We may with more confidence believe the particulars related of Abraham and Ishmael, when we see them verified in their posterity at this day. This is having, as it were, ocular demonstration for our faith. This is proving, by plain matter of fact, that the most High ruleth in the kingdoms of men, and that His truth, as well as His mercy, endureth for ever.

III.

THE PROPHECIES CONCERNING JACOB AND ESAU.

As it pleased God to disclose unto Abraham the state and condition of his posterity by Ishmael, who was the son of the bond-woman, it might be with reason expected that something should be predicted concerning his posterity also by Isaac, who was the son of the free-woman. He was properly the child of promise, and the prophecies relating to him and his family are much more numerous than those relating to Ishmael; but we will select and enlarge upon such only as have reference to these later ages.

It was promised to Abraham before Ishmael or any son was born to him, (Gen. xii. 3.) In thee shall all families of the earth be blessed. But after the birth of Ishmael and Isaac, the promise was limited to Isaac, (Gen. xxi. 12.) for in Isaac shall thy seed be called. And accordingly, to Isaac was the promise repeated, (Gen. xxiv. 4.) In thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed. The Saviour of the world, therefore, was not to come of the family of Ishmael, but of the family of Isaac, which is an argument for the truth of the Christian religion in preference to the Mohammedan, drawn from an old prophecy and promise made two thousand years before Christ, and much more before Mohammed was born.

The land of Canaan was promised to Abraham and his seed four hundred years before they took possession of it. (Gen. xv.) It was promised again to Isaac, (Gen. xxvi. 3.) Sojourn in this land, and I will be with thee, and will bless thee; for unto thee and unto thy seed I will give all these countries, and I will perform the oath which I swore unto Abraham thy father. Now it is very well known, that it was not till after the death of Moses, who wrote these things, that the Israelites got possession of the land under the command of Joshua. They remained in possession of it several ages, in pursuance of these prophecies; and afterwards, when for their sins and iniquities they were to be removed from it, their removal also was foretold, both the carrying away of the ten tribes, and the captivity of the two remaining tribes for seventy years, and likewise their final captivity and dispersion into all nations, till in the fulness of time they shall be restored again to the land of their inheritance.

It was foretold to Abraham that his posterity should be multiplied exceedingly above that of others; (Gen. xii. 2.) I will make of thee a great nation; and (xxii. 17.) in blessing I will bless thee, and in multiplying I will multiply thy seed as the stars of heaven, and as the sand which is upon the sea-shore. The same promise was continued to Isaac, (Gen. xxvi. 4.) I will make thy seed to multiply as the stars of heaven. And not to mention the vast increase of their other posterity, how soon did their descendants by Jacob grow up into a mighty nation! and how numerous were they formerly in the land of Canaan! how numerous were they in other parts of the world, according to the accounts of Philo and Josephus! and after the innumerable massacres and persecutions which they have undergone, how numerous are they still in their present dispersion among all nations! It is computed that there are as many Jews now, or more than ever there were, since they have been a nation. A learned ¹ foreigner, who hath written a history of the Jews, as a supplement and continuation of the history of Josephus, says that “it is impossible to fix the number of persons this nation is at present composed of. But yet we have reason to believe there are still near three millions of people who profess this religion, and as their phrase is, are witnesses of the unity of God in all the nations of the world.” And who could foretel such a wonderful increase and propagation of a branch only of one man’s family, but the same Divine power that could effect it?

But Isaac had two sons, whose families did not grow up and incorporate into one people, but were separated into two different nations; and therefore, as it had been necessary before to specify whether Ishmael or Isaac was to be heir of the promises, so there was a necessity for the same distinction now between Esau and Jacob. Accordingly, when their mother had conceived, the children struggled together within her; (Gen. xxv. 22.) and it was revealed unto her by the Lord, (ver. 23.) Two nations are in thy womb, and two manner of people shall be separated from thy bowels; and the one people shall be stronger than the other people, and the elder shall serve the younger. The same Divine Spirit influenced and directed their father to give his final benediction to the same purpose; for thus he blessed Jacob, (Gen. xxvii. 28, 29.) God give thee of the dew of heaven, and the fatness of the earth, and plenty of corn and wine. Let people serve thee, and nations bow down to thee; be lord over thy brethren, and let thy mother’s sons bow down to thee; cursed be every one that curseth thee, and blessed be he that blesseth thee: and thus he blessed Esau, (ver. 39, 40.) Behold, thy dwelling shall be the fatness of the earth, and of the dew of heaven from above. And by thy sword shalt thou live, and shalt serve thy brother; and it shall come to pass when thou shalt have the dominion, that thou shalt break his yoke from off thy neck. But for greater clearness and certainty, a more express revelation was afterwards made to Jacob; and the land of Canaan, a numerous progeny, and the blessing of all nations, were promised to him in particular, (Gen. xxviii. 13, 14.) I am the Lord God of Abraham thy father, and the God of Israel: the land whereon thou liest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed. And thy seed shall be as the dust of the earth; and thou shalt spread abroad to the west, and to the east, and to the north, and to the south; and in thee, and in thy seed, shall all the families of the earth be blessed.

¹ See Basnage’s History of the Jews, Book vii. Chap. xxxiii. Sect. xv.

We have here a farther and more ample proof of what was asserted before, that these ancient prophecies were meant not so much of single persons, as of whole people and nations descended from them. For what is here predicted concerning Esau and Jacob was not verified in themselves, but in their posterity. Jacob was so far from bearing rule over Esau, that he was forced to fly his country for fear of Esau, (Gen. xxvii.) He continued abroad several years, and when he returned to his native country, he sent a supplicatory message to his brother Esau, (Gen. xxxii. 5.) that he might find grace in his sight. When he heard of Esau's coming to meet him with four hundred men, he was greatly afraid and distressed, (ver. 7.) and cried unto the Lord, (ver. 11.) Deliver me, I pray thee, from the hand of my brother, from the hand of Esau. He sent a magnificent present before him to appease his brother, calling Esau his lord, and himself Esau's servant, (ver. 18.) When he met him, he bowed himself to the ground seven times, until he came near to his brother, (Gen. xxxiii. 3.) And after he had found a gracious reception, he acknowledged (ver. 10.) I have seen thy face, as though I had seen the face of God, and thou wast pleased with me. Jacob then had no temporal superiority over Esau, and therefore we must look for the completion of the prophecy among their posterity. The prophecy itself refers us thither, and mentions plainly two nations and two manner of people, and comprehends these several particulars; that the families of Esau and Jacob should grow up into two different people and nations; that the family of the elder should be subject to that of the younger; that in situation and other temporal advantages they should be much alike; that the elder branch should delight more in war and violence, but yet should be subdued by the younger; that however there should be a time when the elder should have dominion, and shake off the yoke of the younger; but in all spiritual gifts and graces the younger should be greatly superior, and be the happy instrument of conveying the blessing to all nations.

I. The families of Esau and Jacob should grow up into two different people and nations. Two nations are in thy womb, and two manner of people shall be separated from thy bowels. The Edomites were the offspring of Esau, as the Israelites were of Jacob, and who but the Author and Giver of Life could foresee, that two children in the womb would multiply into two nations? Jacob had twelve sons, and their descendants all united and incorporated into one nation; and what an over-ruling Providence then was it, that two nations should arise from the two sons only of Isaac? But they were not only to grow up into two nations, but into two very different nations, and two manner of people were to be separated from her bowels. And have not the Edomites and Israelites been all along two very different people in their manners and customs and religions, which made them to be perpetually at variance one with another? The children struggled together in the womb, which was an omen and token of their future disagreement; and when they were grown up to manhood they manifested very different inclinations. Esau was a cunning hunter, and delighted in the sports of the field: Jacob was more mild and gentle, dwelling in tents, and minding his sheep and his cattle, (Gen. xxv. 27.) Our English translation, agreeably to the ¹ Septuagint and the Vulgate, hath it, that Jacob was a plain man; but he appears from his whole conduct and behaviour to have been rather an artful than a plain man. The ² word in the original signifies perfect, which is a general term; but being put in opposition to the rough and rustic manners of Esau, it must particularly import that Jacob was more humane and gentle, as ³ Philo the Jew understands it, and as Le Clerc translates it. Esau slighted his birth-right and those sacred privileges of which Jacob was desirous, and is therefore called (Heb. xii. 16.) the profane Esau; but Jacob was a man of better faith and religion. The like diversity ran through their posterity. The religion of the Jews is very well known; but whatever the Edomites were at first, in process of time they became idolaters. Josephus ⁴ mentions an Idumean deity, named Koze; and Amaziah, king of Judah, after he had overthrown the Edomites, (2 Chron. xxiv. 14.) brought their gods, and set them up to be his gods, and bowed down himself before them, and burned incense unto them; which was monstrously absurd, as the prophet remonstrates, (ver. 15.) Why hast thou sought after the gods of the people, which could not deliver their own people out of thine hand? Upon these religious differences and other accounts there was a continual grudge and enmity between the two nations. The king of Edom would not suffer the Israelites, in their return out of Egypt, so much as to pass through his territories; (Numb. xx.) and the history of the Edomites afterwards is little more than the history of their wars with the Jews.

II. The family of the elder should be subject to that of the younger. And the one people shall be stronger than the other people, and the elder shall serve the younger, or as the words may be ren-

¹ Ἀπλᾶστος, Sept. simplex, Vulg. [Plain, simple, or without deceit.]

² Ὁλ Integer, perfectus. Integer, Syr. Samar. Perfectus, Onk. Perfectus virtutibus. Arab. [Entire or perfect. In the Syriac and Samaritan this word is rendered entire, by Onkelos it is translated perfect, and in the Arabic, perfect in virtues.]

³ Vide Clericum in locum. Jacobus vero mitis, &c. [See Le Clerc on the passage, "Jacob truly was mild, meek, or gentle."]

⁴ —Κοζέ· θεὸν δὲ τοῦτον Ἰδουμαῖοι νομίζουσιν. Coze; quem Deum existimant Idumæi. [Koze, whom the Edomites consider as a divinity.] Antiq. Lib. xv. Cap. vii. Sect. ix. p. 686. Edit. Hudson.

dered, the greater shall serve the lesser. The family of Esau was the elder, and for some time the greater and more powerful of the two, there having been dukes and kings in Edom before there reigned any king over the children of Israel. (Gen. xxxvi. 31.) But David and his captains made an entire conquest of the Edomites, slew several thousands of them, (1 Kings xi. 16, and 1 Chron. xviii. 12.) and compelled the rest to become his tributaries and servants, and planted garrisons among them to secure their obedience. (2 Sam. viii. 14.) And he put garrisons in Edom; throughout all Edom put he garrisons, and all they of Edom became David's servants. In this state of servitude they continued about ¹ a hundred and fifty years, without a king of their own, being governed by viceroys or deputies appointed by the kings of Judah. In the reign of Jehoshaphat, king of Judah, it is said that there was then no king in Edom; a deputy was king. (1 Kings xxii. 47.) But in the days of Jehoram his son they revolted, and recovered their liberties, and made a king over themselves. (2 Kings viii. 20.) But afterwards Amaziah, king of Judah, slew of Edom in the valley of salt ten thousand, and took Selah by war, and called the name of it Joktheel unto this day, says the sacred historian. (2 Kings xiv. 7.) And other ten thousand left alive, did the children of Judah carry away captive, and brought them unto the top of the rock, whereon Selah was built, and cast them down from the top of the rock, that they were broken all in pieces. (2 Chron. xxv. 12.) His son Azariah, or Uzziah, likewise took from them Elah, that commodious haven on the Red Sea, and fortified it anew, and restored it to Judah. (2 Kings xiv. 22; 2 Chron. xxvi. 2.) Judas Maccabæus attacked and defeated them several times, killed no fewer than twenty thousand at one time, and more than twenty thousand at another, and took their chief city Hebron, and the towns thereof, and pulled down the fortress of it, and burned the towers thereof round about. (1 Macc. v.; 2 Macc. x.) At last his nephew, ² Hyrcanus, the son of Simon, took others of their cities, and reduced them to the necessity of embracing the Jewish religion, or of leaving their country and seeking new habitations elsewhere, whereupon they submitted to be circumcised, and became proselytes to the Jewish religion, and ever after were incorporated into the Jewish church and nation.

III. In situation and other temporal advantages they should be much alike. For it was said to Jacob, God give thee of the dew of heaven, and of the fatness of the earth, and plenty of corn and wine; and much the same is said to Esau, Behold thy dwelling shall be of the fatness of the earth, and of the dew of heaven from above. In this manner the latter clause is translated in ³ Jerome's and the old

¹ From about the year of the world 2960, before Christ 1044, to about the year of the world 3115, before Christ 889. See Usher's Annals.

² Joseph. Antiq. Lib. xiii. Cap. ix. sect. 1. p. 584. Edit. Hudson.

³ In pinguedine terræ, et in rore cœli desuper. [In the fatness of the earth, and in the dew of heaven from above.]

versions; but some modern commentators (¹ Castalio, Le Clerc, &c.) render it otherwise, that his dwelling should be far from the fatness of the earth, and from the dew of heaven; and they say that Idumea, the country of the Edomites, was a dry, barren, and desert country. But it is not probable that any good author should use the ² very same words with the very same prepositions in one sense, and, within a few lines after, in a quite contrary sense. Besides, Esau solicited for a blessing, and the author of the Epistle to the Hebrews saith (xi. 20.) that Isaac blessed Jacob and Esau; whereas had he consigned Esau to such a barren and wretched country, it would have been a curse rather than a blessing. The spiritual blessing, indeed, or the promise of the blessed seed, could be given only to one, but temporal good things might be communicated and imparted to both. Mount Seir and the adjacent country was at first the possession of the Edomites; they afterwards extended themselves farther into Arabia; as they did afterwards into the southern parts of Judea. But wherever they were situated, we find, in fact, that the Edomites in temporal advantages were little inferior to the Israelites. Esau had cattle, and beasts, and substance in abundance, and he went to dwell in Seir of his own accord, and he would hardly have removed thither with so many cattle, had it been such a barren and desolate country, as some would represent it. (Gen. xxxvi. 6, 7, 8.) The Edomites had dukes and kings reigning over them, while the Israelites were slaves in Egypt. In their return out of Egypt, when the Israelites desired leave to pass through the territories of Edom, it appears that the country abounded with fruitful fields and vineyards; Let us pass, I pray thee, through thy country; we will not pass through the fields, or through the vineyards, neither will we drink of the water of the wells. (Numb. xx. 17.) And the prophecy of Malachi, (i. 2.) which is commonly alleged as a proof of the barrenness of the country, is rather an argument to the contrary: And I hated Esau, and laid his mountains and his heritage waste for the dragons of the wilderness: for this implies that the country was fruitful before, and that its present unfruitfulness was rather an effect of war and devastation, than any natural defect and failure in the soil. If the country is barren and unfruitful now, so neither is Judea what it was formerly. The face of any country is much changed in a long course of years; and it is totally a different thing

¹ A terræ pinguitudine aberit. Cast. [He shall be at a distance from the fatness of the earth. See Castalio.] A pinguedine quidem terræ remota erit sedes tua, neque rore cœli fecundabitur.—Nec sane Idumæa fecunda aut pingui solo, aut tempestivis pluviis rigata fuit. Clericus in locum. [Thy habitation shall be remote indeed from the fatness of the earth, nor shall it be fertilized by the dew of heaven.—And truly, the land of Edom was not rich, fertile, or well watered. See Le Clerc on the passage.]

² Ver. 28.

ארץ	ומשמני	השמים	מטל
terræ	pinguedinibus de et,	cœli	rore de.
earth the of	fatness the of and,	heaven of	dew the of Ver. 39.

מעל	השמים	ומטל	הארץ	משמני
desuper	cœli	rore de et,	terræ	pinguedinibus de above from	heaven of	dew the of and,	earth the of	fatness the of when a country is regularly cultivated by inhabitants living under a settled government, than when tyranny prevails, and the land is left desolate. It is also frequently seen that God, as the Psalmist saith, (cvii. 34.) turneth a fruitful land into barrenness for the wickedness of them that dwell therein.

IV. The elder branch should delight more in war and violence, but yet should be subdued by the younger. And by thy sword shalt thou live, and shalt serve thy brother. Esau himself might be said to live much by the sword, for he was a cunning hunter, a man of the field. (Gen. xxv. 27.) He and his children gat possession of Mount Seir by force and violence, by destroying and expelling from thence the Horites, the former inhabitants. (Deut. ii. 22.) We have no account, and therefore cannot pretend to say, by what means they spread themselves farther among the Arabians; but it¹ appears, that, upon a sedition and separation, several of the Edomites came and seized upon the south-west parts of Judea during the Babylonish captivity, and settled there ever afterwards. Both before and after this they were almost continually at war with the Jews; upon every occasion they were ready to join with their enemies, and when Nebuchadnezzar besieged Jerusalem, they encouraged him utterly to destroy the city, saying, Rase it, rase it, even to the foundation thereof. (Psalm cxxxvii. 7.) Even long after they were subdued by the Jews, they still retained the same martial spirit, for² Josephus in his time giveth them the character of “a turbulent and disorderly nation, always erect to commotions and rejoicing in changes, at the least adulation of those who beseech them beginning war, and hastening to battles as it were to a feast.” Agreeably to this character, a little before the last siege of Jerusalem, they came at the entreaty of the zealots to assist them against the priests and people, and there, together with the zealots, committed unheard-of cruelties, and barbarously murdered Ananus the high-priest, from whose death Josephus dateth the destruction of the city.

V. However, there was to be a time when the elder should have dominion, and shake off the yoke of the younger. And it shall come to pass when thou shalt have dominion, that thou shalt break his yoke from off thy neck. The word which we translate have dominion is capable of various interpretations. Some render it in the sense of laying down or shaking off, as the³ Septuagint and the Vulgar Latin, and it shall come to pass that thou shalt shake off, and shalt loose his yoke from off thy neck. Some again render it in the sense of mourning or repenting, as the ¹ Syriac, But if thou shalt repent, his yoke shall pass from off thy neck. But the most common rendering, and most approved, is, when thou shalt have dominion; and it is not said or meant, that they should have dominion over the seed of Jacob, but simply have dominion, as they had when they appointed a king of their own. The ² Jerusalem Targum thus paraphraseth the whole, “And it shall be when the sons of Jacob attend to the law, and observe the precepts, they shall impose the yoke of servitude upon thy neck; but when they shall turn away themselves from studying the law, and neglect the precepts, behold then thou shalt shake off the yoke of servitude from thy neck.” It was David who imposed the yoke, and at that time the Jewish people observed the law. But the yoke was very galling to the Edomites from the first; and toward the latter end of Solomon’s reign, Hadad the Edomite, of the blood royal, who had been carried into Egypt in his childhood, returned into his own country, and raised some disturbances, (1 Kings xi.) but was not able to recover his throne, ³ his subjects being overawed by the garrisons which David had placed among them. But in the reign of Jehoram, the son of Jehoshaphat, king of Judah, the Edomites revolted from under the dominion of Judah, and made themselves a king. Jehoram made some attempts to subdue them again, but could not prevail. So the Edomites revolted from under the hand of Judah unto this day, saith the author of the books of Chronicles; (2 Chron. xxi. 8. 10.) and hereby this part of the prophecy was fulfilled about nine hundred years after it was delivered.

¹ Strabo, Lib. xvi. p. 1103. Edit. Amstel. 1707. Prideaux, Connect. Part i. Book i. Ann. 740.

² “Ατε θορυβωδὲς καὶ ἄτακτον ἔθνος, αἰεὶ τε μετέωρον πρὸς τὰ κινήματα, καὶ μεταβολαῖς χαῖρον, πρὸς ὀλίγην δὴ κολακείαν τῶν δεομένων τὰ ὅπλα κινουῦν, καὶ καθάπερ εἰς ἑορτὴν εἰς τὰς παρατάξεις ἐπειγόμενον. Utpote gentem tumultuosam et ordinis impatientem, ad motus intentam semper et mutationibus gaudentem, ad modicam vero eorum qui supplicant adulationem arma moventem, et ad praelia quasi ad festum properantem. [Translated in the text.] De Bell. Jud. Lib. iv. cap. iv. sect. i. p. 1177. Edit. Hudson. See too the following chapter.

³ “Ἔσται δὲ ἡνίκα ἰὰν καθέλθῃς καὶ ἐκλύσῃς τὸν ζυγὸν αὐτοῦ ἀπὸ τοῦ τραχήλου σου. Sept. tempusque veniet cum excutias et solvas jugum ejus de cervicibus tuis. Vulg. [Translated in the text.]

VI. But in all spiritual gifts and graces, the younger should be greatly superior, and be the happy instrument of conveying the blessing to all nations. In thee, and in thy seed, shall all the families of the earth be blessed; and hitherto are to be referred in their full force those expressions, Let people serve thee, and nations bow down to thee; Cursed be every one that curseth thee, and blessed be he that blesseth thee. The same promise was made to Abraham in the name of God, I will bless them that bless thee, and curse him that curseth thee; (Gen. xii. 3.) and it is here repeated to Jacob, and is thus paraphrased in the ⁴ Jerusalem Targum. “He who curseth thee shall be cursed, as Balaam the son of Beor; and he who blesseth thee shall be blessed, as Moses the prophet, the lawgiver of Israel.” It appears that Jacob was a man of more religion, and

¹ At si pœnitentiam egeris, præteribit jugum ejus a collo tuo. Syr. [Translated in the text.]

² Et erit cum operam dabunt filii Jacob legi, et servabunt mandata, imponent jugum servitutis super collum tuum: quando autem averterint se filii Jacob, ut non studeant legi, nec servaverint mandata, ecce tunc abrumpes jugum servitutis eorum a collo tuo. Targ. Hieros. [Translated in the text.]

³ Joseph. Antiq. Lib. viii. cap. vii. sect. vi. p. 361. Edit. Hudson.

⁴ Quisquis maledixerit tibi, Jacob fili mi, erit: maledictus sicut Balaam filius Beor: quisquis autem benedixerit tibi, erit benedictus, sicut Moses propheta, legislator Israelitarum. Targ. Hieros. [Translated in the text.]

believed the Divine promises more than Esau. The posterity of Jacob likewise preserved the true religion and the worship of one God, while the Edomites were sunk in idolatry. And of the seed of Jacob was born at last the Saviour of the world. This was the peculiar privilege and advantage of Jacob, to be the happy instrument of conveying these spiritual blessings to all nations. This was his greatest superiority over Esau, and in this sense St. Paul understands and applies the prophecy, the elder shall serve the younger. (Rom. ix. 12.) The Christ, the Saviour of the world, was to be born of some one family, and Jacob's was preferred to Esau's out of the good pleasure of Almighty God, who is certainly the best judge of fitness and expedience, and hath an undoubted right to dispense his favours as he shall see proper; for he saith to Moses (as the Apostle proceeds to argue, ver. 15.) I will have mercy on whom I will have mercy, and I will have compassion on whom I will have compassion. And when the Gentiles were converted to Christianity, the prophecy was fulfilled literally, Let people serve thee, and nations bow down to thee; and will more amply be fulfilled, when the fulness of the Gentiles shall come in, and all Israel shall be saved.

We have traced the accomplishment of the prophecy from the beginning; and we find that the nation of the Edomites hath at several times been conquered by and made tributary to the Jews, but never the nation of the Jews to the Edomites, and the Jews have been the more considerable people, more known in the world, and more famous in history. We know indeed little more of the history of the Edomites, than as it is connected with that of the Jews: and where is the name or the nation now? They were swallowed up and lost, partly among the Nabathæan Arabs, and partly among the Jews; and the very name was¹ abolished and disused about the end of the first century after Christ. Thus were they rewarded for insulting and oppressing their brethren the Jews, and hereby other prophecies were fulfilled of Jeremiah, (xlix. 7, &c.) of Ezekiel, (xxv. 12, &c.) of Joel, (iii. 19.) Amos, (i. 11, &c.) and Obadiah. And at this day we see the Jews subsisting as a distinct people, while Edom is no more. For agreeably to the words of Obadiah (ver. 10.) For thy violence against thy brother Jacob, shame shall cover thee, and thou shalt be cut off for ever: and again (ver. 18.) there shall not be any remaining of the house of Esau, for the Lord hath spoken it.

IV.

JACOB'S PROPHECIES CONCERNING HIS SONS, PARTICULARLY JUDAH.

It is an opinion of great antiquity, that the nearer men approach to their dissolution, their souls grow more divine, and discern more of futurity. We find this opinion as early as ¹ Homer, for he represents the dying Patroclus foretelling the fate of Hector, and the dying Hector, denouncing no less certainly the death of Achilles. Socrates, in his Apology to the Athenians, a little before his death, ² asserts the same opinion. "But now," saith he, "I am desirous to prophesy to you who have condemned me, what will happen hereafter. For now I am arrived at that state in which men prophesy most, when they are about to die." His scholar ³ Xenophon introduces the dying Cyrus, declaring, in like manner, "that the soul of man at the hour of death appears most divine, and then foresees something of future events." Diodorus Siculus ⁴ allegeth great authorities upon this subject: "Pythagoras the Samian, and some others of the ancient naturalists, have demonstrated that the souls of men are immortal, and in consequence of this opinion, that they also foreknow future events, at the time that they are making their separation from the body in death." Sextus Empiricus ⁵ confirms it likewise by the authority of Aristotle; "the soul," saith Aristotle, "foresees and foretels future events, when it is going to be separated from the body by death." We might produce more testimonies to this purpose from Cicero, and Eustathius upon Homer, and from other authors, if there was occasion; but these are sufficient to show the great ⁶ antiquity of this opinion. And it is possible, that

¹ See Prideaux, Connect. Part i. Book v. Anno 129.

¹ Hom. Iliad. xvi. 852. et Iliad. xxii. 358.

² Τὸ δὲ δὴ μετὰ τοῦτο ἐπιθυμῶ ὑμῖν χρησιμῶσαι, ὃ καταψηφισάμενοί μου· καὶ γὰρ εἰμι ἤδη ἐνταῦθα ἐν ᾧ μάλιστα ἄνθρωποι χρησιμωδοῦσιν, ὅταν μέλλωσιν ἀποθανεῖσθαι. Jam vero, O vos. qui me condemnastis, cupio vobis earum rerum, quæ vobis sunt eventuræ, casus quasi oraculo prædicere: in illum enim temporis statum jam perveni, in quo homines divinandî facultate maxime pollent, quando nimirum morituri sunt. [Translated in the text.] Platonis Apolog. Socr. Op. Vol. I. p. 39. Edit. Serrani.

³ Ἡ δὲ τοῦ ἀνθρώπου ψυχὴ τότε δήπου θειοτάτῃ καταφαίνεται, καὶ τότε τὶ τῶν μελλόντων προορᾷ· ac hominis animus tum scilicet maxime divinus perspicitur, et tum futurorum aliquid prospicit. [Translated in the text.] Xenoph. Cyrop. Lib. viii. prope finem, p. 140. Edit. Henr. Steph. 1581.

⁴ Πυθαγόρας ὁ Σάμιος καὶ τινες ἕτεροι τῶν παλαιῶν φυσικῶν ἀπεφάναντο τὰς ψυχὰς τῶν ἀνθρώπων ὑπάρχειν ἀθάνατους, ἀκολουθῶν δὲ τῷ δόγματι τούτῳ καὶ προ-γινώσκειν αὐτὰς τὰ μέλλοντα, καθ' ὃν ἂν καιρὸν ἐν τῇ τελευτῇ τὸν ἀπὸ τοῦ σώματος χωρισμὸν ποιῶνται. Pythagoras Samius, et quidam physicorum veterum alii, immortales esse hominum animas confirmarunt: et quod hujus sententiæ consecrarium est, prænoscerere futura, cum, imminente vitæ exitu, jamjam a corpore segregantur. [Translated in the text.] In initio Lib. xviii. Tom. II. p. 586. Edit. Rhodmani.

⁵ Ἡ ψυχὴ, φησιν Ἀριστοτέλης, προμαντεύεται καὶ προαγορεύει τὰ μέλλοντα—ἐν τῷ κατὰ θάνατον χωρίζεσθαι τῶν σωμάτων. [Translated in the text.] Adv. Mathem. p. 312.

⁶ Shakspeare alludes to this notion in Henry IV. First Part.

— O, I could prophesy,
But that the earthy and cold hand of death
Lies on my tongue.

The same notion is also happily expressed in a most excellent Latin poem, De Animi Immortalitate, which is deserving of a place among classic authors, in richness of poetry equals Lucretius, and in clearness and strength of argument exceeds him.

Namque ubi torpescunt artus jam morte propinqua,
Acrior est acies tum mentis, et entheus ardor;
Tempore non alio facundia suavior, atque
Fatidicæ jam tum voces morientis ab ore,

[“For

old experience may in some cases attain to something like prophecy and divination. In some instances also God may have been pleased to comfort and enlighten departing souls with a prescience of future events. But what I conceive might principally give rise to this opinion, was the tradition of some of the patriarchs being divinely inspired in their last moments to foretel the state and condition of the people descended from them; as Jacob upon his death-bed summoned his sons together that he might inform them of what should befall them in the latter days, or the last days; by which phrase some commentators understand the times of the Messiah, or the last great period of the world; and Mr. Whiston particularly² asserts, that it is generally, if not always, a characteristic and κατ'ῆρτον of prophecies, not to be fulfilled till the coming of the Messiah; and accordingly he supposes that these prophecies of Jacob more properly belong to the second coming of the Messiah, at the restoration of the twelve tribes hereafter. But the phrase of the latter days or last days in the Old Testament signifies any time that is yet to come, though sometimes it may relate to the times of the Messiah in particular, as it comprehends all future time in general: and hence it is used in prophecies that respect different times and periods. I will advertise thee, saith Balaam to Balak, (Numb. xxiv. 14.) what this people shall do to thy people in the latter days: but what the Israelites did to the Moabites was done long before the times of the Messiah. I know, saith Moses, (Deut. xxxi. 29.) that after my death ye will utterly corrupt yourselves, and turn aside from the way which I have commanded you, and evil will befall you in the latter days: where the latter days are much the same as the time after the death of Moses. There is a God in heaven, saith Daniel, (ii. 28.) that revealeth secrets, and maketh known to the king Nebuchadnezzar, what shall be in the latter days: but several particulars are there foretold of the four great monarchies of the earth, which were fulfilled before the coming of the Messiah. And in like manner these prophecies of Jacob were, many or most of them, accomplished under the Mosaic economy, several ages before the birth of our Saviour.

Jacob, as we have seen, received a double blessing, temporal and spiritual, the promise of the land of Canaan, and the promise of the seed in which all the nations of the earth should be blessed; which promises were first made to Abraham, and then repeated to Isaac, and then confirmed to Jacob; and Jacob a little before his death

["For when the body oft expiring lies,
Its limbs quite senseless, and half clos'd its eyes,
The mind new force and eloquence acquires,
And with prophetic voice the dying lips inspires."]

¹ Alluding to these lines of Milton,

Till old experience do attain
To something like prophetic strain.

² Boyle's Lectures, Vol. II. p. 311.

bequeaths the same to his children. The temporal blessing or inheritance of the land of Canaan might be shared and divided among all his sons, but the blessed seed could descend only from one; and Jacob accordingly assigns to each a portion in the promised land, but limits the descent of the blessed seed to the tribe of Judah, and at the same time sketches out the characters and fortunes of all the tribes.

He adopts the two sons of Joseph, Manasseh and Ephraim, for his own, but foretels that the younger should be the greater of the two: (Gen. xlviii. 19.) and hath not the prediction been fully justified by the event? The tribe of Ephraim grew to be so numerous, and powerful, that it is sometimes put for all the ten tribes of Israel.—Of Reuben it is said, (Gen. xlix. 4.) Unstable as water, thou shalt not excel: and what is recorded great or excellent of the tribe of Reuben? In number (Numb. i.) and power they were inferior to several other tribes.—Of Simeon and Levi it is said, (ver. 7.) I will divide them in Jacob, and scatter them in Israel: and was not this eminently fulfilled in the tribe of Levi, who had no portion or inheritance of their own, but were dispersed among the other tribes? Neither had the tribe of Simeon any inheritance properly of their own, but only a portion in the midst of the tribe of Judah; (Josh. xix. 1—9.) from whence several of them afterwards went in quest of new habitations, (1 Chron. iv. 39, &c.) and so were divided from the rest of their brethren. A constant tradition too¹ hath prevailed among the Jews (which is also confirmed by the Jerusalem Targum) that the tribe of Simeon were so straitened in their situation and circumstances, that great numbers were necessitated to seek a subsistence among the other tribes, by teaching and instructing their children.—Of Zebulun it is said, (ver. 13.) He shall dwell at the haven of the sea, and shall be for an haven of ships: and accordingly the tribe of Zebulun extended from the sea of Galilee to the Mediterranean, (Josh. xix. 10, &c.) where they had commodious havens for shipping. And how could Jacob have foretold the situation of any tribe, which was determined two hundred years afterwards by casting of lots, unless he had been directed by that Divine Spirit who disposeth of all events?—Of Benjamin it is said, (ver. 27.) He shall ravin as a wolf: and was not that a fierce and warlike tribe, as appears in several instances, and particularly in the case of the Levite's wife, (Judg. xx.) when they alone waged war against all the other tribes, and overcame them in two battles?

In this manner he characterizes these and the other tribes, and

¹ Tradunt quoque Hebræi, scribas, pædотribas, pædagogos, et doctores puerorum fere omnes ex tribu Schimeon fuisse, qui, ut haberent unde viverent, sparsim et oppidatim pueros informare cogeantur. Cui sententiæ adstipulatur et Thargum Hieros, &c. Fagius. [The Jews also have a tradition, that the writers, tutors, schoolmasters, and teachers of youth were almost all of the tribe of Simeon, who, that they might procure a subsistence, were forced to live separately, in the towns and villages of their brethren. This opinion is embraced by the author of the Jerusalem Targum. See Fagius.]

foretels their temporal condition, and that of Judah as well as the rest: Binding his foal unto the vine, and his ass's colt unto the choice vine, he washed his garments in wine, and his clothes in the blood of grapes. His eyes shall be red with wine, and his teeth white with milk: (ver. 11, 12.) and not to mention the valley of Eshcol and other fruitful places, the mountains about Jerusalem, by the accounts of the best travellers, were particularly fitted for the cultivation of the vine, and for the feeding of cattle. "The blessing," says¹ Dr. Shaw, "that was given to Judah, was not of the same kind with the blessing of Asher or of Issachar, that his bread should be fat, or his land should be pleasant, but that his eyes should be red with wine, and his teeth should be white with milk." He farther observes, that "the mountains of the country abound with shrubs and a delicate short grass, both which the cattle are more fond of than of such plants as are common to fallow grounds and meadows. Neither was this method of grazing peculiar to this country; inasmuch as it is still practised all over Mount Libanus, the Castravan mountains, and Barbary; in all which places the higher grounds are set apart for this use, and the plains and valleys for tillage. For besides the good management and economy, there is this farther advantage, that the milk of cattle fed in this manner is far more rich and delicious, as their flesh is more sweet and nourishing.—It may be presumed likewise, that the vine was not neglected, in a soil and exposition so proper for it to thrive in." He mentions particularly "the many tokens which are to be met with, of the ancient vineyards about Jerusalem and Hebron," and "the great quantity of grapes and raisins which are from thence brought daily to the markets of Jerusalem, and sent yearly to Egypt."

But Jacob bequeaths to Judah particularly the spiritual blessing, and delivers it in much the same form of words that it was delivered to him. Isaac had said to Jacob, (Gen. xxvii. 29.) Let people serve thee, and nations bow down to thee; be lord over thy brethren, and let thy mother's sons bow down to thee: and here Jacob saith to Judah, (ver. 8.) Thou art he whom thy brethren shall praise; thy hand shall be in the neck of thy enemies; thy father's children shall bow down before thee. And for greater certainty it is added, (ver. 10.) The sceptre shall not depart from Judah, nor a lawgiver from between his feet, until Shiloh come, and unto him shall the gathering of the people be. I will not trouble the reader or myself with a detail of the various interpretations, which have been put upon this passage, but will only offer that which appears to me the plainest, easiest, and best; I will first explain the words and meaning of the prophecy, and then show the full and exact completion of it. They who are curious to know the various interpretations of the learned, may find an account of them in ² Huetius and ³ Le Clerc: but no one hath treated the subject in a more masterly manner than the present ¹ Lord Bishop of London; and we shall principally tread in his footsteps, as we cannot follow a better guide.

¹ Shaw's Travels, p. 366, 367.

² Demonstratio Evangelica, Prop. ix. cap. iv.

³ Comment. in locum.

I. The sceptre shall not depart from Judah. The word שבט shebet, which we translate a sceptre, signifies a rod or staff of any kind; and particularly the rod or staff which ² belonged to each tribe as an ensign of their authority; and thence it is transferred to signify a tribe, as being united under one rod or staff of government, or a ruler of a tribe; and in this sense it is used twice in this very chapter, (ver. 16.) Dan shall judge his people as one of the tribes or rulers of Israel; and again (ver. 28.) All these are the twelve tribes or rulers of Israel. It hath the same signification in 2 Sam. vii. 7. In all the places wherein I have walked with all the children of Israel, spake I a word with any of the tribes or rulers of Israel (in the parallel place of Chronicles, 1 Chron. xvii. 6. it is judges of Israel) whom I commanded to feed my people Israel, saying, Why build ye not me an house of cedar? The word doth indeed sometimes signify a sceptre, but that is apt to convey an idea of kingly authority, which was not the thing intended here: and the ³ Seventy translate it ἄρχων a ruler, which answers better to a lawgiver in the following clause. It could not with any sort of propriety be said, that the sceptre should not depart from Judah, when Judah had no sceptre, nor was to have any for many generations afterwards: but Judah had a rod or staff of a tribe, for he was then constituted a tribe as well as the rest of his brethren. The very same expression occurs in Zechariah, (x. 11.) and the sceptre of Egypt shall depart away, which implies that Egypt had a sceptre, and that that sceptre should be taken away; but no grammar or language could justify the saying that Judah's sceptre should depart or be taken away, before Judah was in possession of any sceptre. Would it not therefore be better to substitute the word staff or ruler instead of sceptre, unless we restrain the meaning of sceptre to a rod or staff of a tribe, which is all that is here intended? The staff or ruler shall not depart from Judah. The tribeship shall not depart from Judah. Such authority as Judah had then, was to remain with his posterity. It is not said or meant, that he should not cease from being a king or having a kingdom, for he was then no king, and had no kingdom; but only that he should not cease from being a tribe or body politic, having rulers and governors of his own, till a certain period here foretold.

¹ See the Third Dissertation in Bishop Sherlock's Discourses of the Use and Intent of Prophecy.

² Bishop Sherlock hath cited to this purpose Menochius de Repub. Heb. Lib. i. cap. iv. Traductum vero nomen est ad significandum tribum—quod unaquæque tribus suam peculiarem virgam haberet, nomine suo inscriptam, quam tribuum principes—manu gestare consueverant. Cum Dominus Aaronem his verbis alloquitur, sed et fratres tuos de tribu Levi, et sceptrum patris tui sume tecum, intellige sceptrum ipsum, et totam tribum quæ scepro significabatur, et regebatur. [But the name (of a rod) hath been transferred to denote a tribe, because each tribe was in possession of its peculiar rod, with its name inscribed thereon, which the princes of the tribes used to carry in their hand. When the Lord addresseth Aaron in these words, but take thou with thee, both thy brethren of the tribe of Levi and the rod of thy father, we are to understand both the rod itself and the whole tribe, which was signified, and ruled, by the rod.]

³ Οὐκ ἐκλείψει ἄρχων ἐξ Ἰούδα. [A ruler out of Judah shall not be wanting.] Sept.

Nor a lawgiver from between his feet. The sense of the word sceptre will help us to fix and determine the meaning of the other word מֶחֱקֶק mechokek, which we translate a lawgiver. For if they are not synonymous, they are not very different. Such as the government is, such must be the lawgiver. The government was only of a single tribe, and the lawgiver could be of no more. Nor had the tribe of Judah at any time a legislative authority over all the other tribes, no, not even in the reigns of David and Solomon. When David appointed the officers for the service of the temple, (1 Chron. xxv. 1. Ezra viii. 20.) and when Solomon was appointed king and Zadok priest, (1 Chron. xxix. 22.) these things were done with the consent and approbation of the princes and rulers of Israel. Indeed the whole nation had but one law and one lawgiver in the strict sense of the word. The king himself was not properly a lawgiver; he was only to have a copy of the law, to read therein, and to turn not aside from the commandment, to the right hand nor to the left. (Deut. xvii. 18, &c.) Moses was truly, as he is styled, the lawgiver: (Numb. xxi. 18. Deut. xxxiii. 21.) and when the word is applied to any other person, or persons, as Judah is twice called by the Psalmist (Psalm lx. 7; cviii. 8.) my lawgiver, it is used in a lower signification. For it signifies not only a lawgiver, but a judge: not only one who maketh laws, but likewise one who exerciseth jurisdiction: and in the ¹ Greek it is translated ἡγούμενος, a leader or president, in the ² Chaldee a scribe, in the ³ Syriac an expositor, and in our English Bible it is elsewhere translated a governor, as in Judges (v. 14.), Out of Machir came down governors, and out of Zebulun they that handle the pen of the writer. The lawgiver, therefore, is to be taken in a restrained sense as well as the sceptre: and perhaps it cannot be translated better than judge, nor a judge from between his feet. Whether we understand it, that a judge from between his feet shall not depart from Judah, or a judge shall not depart from between his feet, I conceive the meaning to be much the same, that there should not be wanting a judge of the race and posterity of Judah, according to the Hebrew phrase of children's coming from between the feet. They who expound it of sitting at the feet of Judah, seem not to have considered that this was the place of scholars, and not of judges and doctors of the law. As Dan (ver. 16.) was to judge his people as one of the tribes or rulers of Israel; so was Judah, and with this particular prerogative, that the staff or ruler should not depart from Judah, nor a judge from between his feet, until the time here foretold, which we are now to examine and ascertain.

¹ καὶ ἡγούμενος ἐκ τῶν μηρῶν αὐτοῦ. [And a leader from his loins.] Sept.

² neque scriba a filiis filiorum ejus. [Nor a Scribe from his children's children.] Chald.

³ et expositor de inter pedes ejus. [And an expositor from between his feet.] Syr.

Until Shiloh come, that is, until the coming of the Messiah, as almost all interpreters, both ancient and modern, agree. For howsoever they may explain the word, and whencesoever they may derive it, the Messiah is the person plainly intended. The¹ Vulgar Latin translates it, Qui mittendus est, He who is to be sent; and, to favour this version, that passage in St. John's Gospel (ix. 7.) is usually cited, Go wash in the pool of Siloam, which is by interpretation sent: and who was ever sent with such power and authority from God as the Messiah, who frequently speaketh of himself in the Gospel under the denomination of him whom the Father hath sent? The² Seventy translate it τὰ ἀποκείμενα αὐτῷ, the things reserved for him, or according to other copies ὃ ἀπόκειται, he for whom it is reserved: and what was the great treasure reserved for Judah, or who was the person for whom all things were reserved, but the Messiah, whom we have declaring in the Gospel, (Matt. xi. 27.) All things are delivered unto me of my Father, and again, (xxviii. 18.) All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth! The Syriac translates it to the same purpose, is cujus illud est, he whose it is, I suppose meaning the kingdom; and the Arabic cujus ipse est, whose he is, I suppose meaning Judah: and whose was Judah, or whose was the kingdom so properly as the Messiah's, who is so many times predicted under the character of the king of Israel? Junius and Tremellius, with others,³ translate it filius ejus, his son: and who could be this son of Judah, by way of eminence, but the Messiah, the seed in which all the nations of the earth shall be blessed? In the Samaritan text and version it is pacificus, the peace-maker; and⁴ this, perhaps, is the best explication of the word; and to whom can this or any the like title be so justly applied as to the Messiah, who is emphatically styled (Is. ix. 6.) the Prince of Peace, and at whose birth was sung that heavenly anthem, (Luke ii. 14.) Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will towards men?

These are the principal interpretations, and whichever of these you prefer, the person understood must be the Messiah. But the learned Mr. Le Clerc would explain the text in such a manner as utterly to exclude the Messiah, and he was a very able commentator; the best perhaps upon the Pentateuch; but, like other learned men, he was sometimes apt to indulge strange unaccountable fancies. Of this kind, I conceive, is his interpretation of this prophecy, for

¹ As if St. Jerome had read שילוח Shiloach instead of שילה Shiloh, and hath derived it from שלח Shalach misit, the mistake being easy of ח ch for ה h.

² Deriving it from ש sh quod or quæ, and לו lo ei.

³ As if it was derived from שיל Shil profluvium sanguinis or שליה Shilejah secundina, that wherein the infant is wrapped, and thence by a metonymy the infant itself.

⁴ I look upon the word שילה Shiloh to be derived from the verb שלה Shalah tranquilus, pacificus fuit, in the same manner as קטור kitor fumus is formed from קטר katar suffumigavit; and there are other words of that formation.

he ¹ says that Shiloh signifies finis ejus aut cessatio, his end or ceasing, and that it may be referred to the lawgiver, or to the sceptre, or even to Judah himself. But if it be referred to the lawgiver, or to the sceptre, what is it but an unmeaning tautology? There shall be a lawgiver as long as there shall be a lawgiver. There shall not be an end of the sceptre till the end of the sceptre come: if it be referred to Judah or the tribe of Judah, the thing is by no means true; for the tribe of Judah subsisted long after they had lost the kingdom, and were deprived of all royal authority. Not many readers, I imagine, will concur with this learned commentator. The generality of interpreters, Jewish as well as Christian, have by Shiloh always understood the Messiah. The Targum of Onkelos is commonly ² supposed to have been made before our Saviour's time, and he ³ thus expresseth the sense of the passage, "There shall not be taken away one having the principality from the house of Judah, nor a scribe from his children's children, till Messiah come whose is the kingdom." And with him agree the other Targums or Chaldee paraphrases, and the authors of the Talmud, and other ancient and modern Jews, whom the reader may see cited in Buxtorf, upon the word. So that, I think, no doubt can remain, that by the coming of Shiloh is meant the coming of the Messiah.

And unto him shall the gathering of the people be, or obedience of the people, as it is otherwise translated. These words are capable of three different constructions, and each so probable, that it is not easy to say which was certainly intended by the author. For 1. they may relate to Judah, who is the main subject of the prophecy, and of the discourse preceding and following; and by the people we may understand the people of Israel; and then the meaning will be, that the other tribes should be gathered to the tribe of Judah, which sense is approved by Le Clerc and some late commentators. Or 2. they may relate to Shiloh, who is the person mentioned immediately before; and by the people we may understand the Gentiles, and then the meaning will be, that the Gentiles should be gathered or become obedient to the Messiah, which sense is consonant to other texts of Scripture, and is confirmed by the authority of most ancient interpreters; only ⁴ some of them render it, and he shall be the expectation of the nations. Or 3. they may still relate to Shiloh, and yet not be considered as a distinct clause, but be joined in construction with the preceding words, until Shiloh come, the word until

¹ He says that שִׁלֹה Shiloh is the same as שִׁלֹו Shilo, and שִׁל Shil may be derived from שֹׁל Shul, and Shul is the same as שָׁלַח Shalah, which in Chaldee signifies cessare, desinere—finis aut cessatio verti poterit. Hoc posito, finis ejus poterit ad legislatorem aut ad sceptrum referri, aut etiam ad ipsum Judam. [This being supposed, his end may be referred to the lawgiver, or to the sceptre, or even to Judah himself.] Comment. in locum.

² See Prideaux, Connect. Part ii. Book viii. Anno 37.

³ Non auferetur habens principatum a domo Jude, neque scriba a filiis filiorum ejus, usque in seculum; donec veniat Messias, cujus est regnum. [Translated in the text.]

⁴ Et ipse erit expectatio gentium. [Translated in the text.] Vulg. following the Sept. καὶ αὐτὸς προσδοκία ἐθνῶν, who probably derived the word from קוה expectavit.

being common to both parts, and then the sentence will run thus, until Shiloh come and to him the gathering or obedience of the people, that is, until the Messiah come, and until the people or nations be gathered to his obedience, which sense is preferred by the most learned ¹Mr. Mede and some others. And each of these interpretations may very well be justified by the event.

II. Having thus explained the words and meaning of the prophecy, I now proceed to show the full and exact completion of it. The twelve sons of Jacob are here constituted twelve tribes or heads of tribes, (ver. 28.) All these are the twelve tribes of Israel; and this is it that their father spake unto them, and blessed them; every one according to his blessing he blessed them. To Judah particularly it was promised, that the sceptre, or rod of the tribe, should not depart from him, nor a judge or lawgiver from between his feet; his tribe should continue a distinct tribe, with rulers and judges and governors of its own, until the coming of the Messiah. The people of Israel, after this settlement of their government, were reckoned by their tribes, but never before. It appears that they were reckoned by their tribes and according to their families, while they sojourned in Egypt: and the tribe of Judah made as considerable a figure as any of them. In number it was superior to the others: (Numb. i. and xxvi.) it had the first rank in the armies of Israel: (Numb. ii.) it marched first against the Canaanites: (Judg. i.) and upon all occasions manifested such courage as fully answered the character given of it, (ver. 9.) Judah is a lion's whelp; from the prey, my son, thou art gone up: he stooped down, he couched as a lion, and as an old lion; who shall rouse him up? If the first king of Israel was of the tribe of Benjamin, the second was of the tribe of Judah; and from that time to the Babylonish captivity, Judah had not only the sceptre of a tribe, but likewise the sceptre of a kingdom. When it was promised to Judah particularly that the sceptre should not depart from him, it was implied that it should depart from the other tribes: and accordingly the tribe of Benjamin became a sort of appendage to the kingdom of Judah; and the other ten tribes were after a time carried away captive into Assyria, from whence they never returned. The Jews also were carried captive to Babylon, but returned after seventy years: and during their captivity they were far from being treated as slaves, as it appears from the prophet's advice to them, (Jerem. xxix. 5, &c.) Build ye houses, and dwell in them; and plant gardens, and eat the fruit of them, &c. and many of them were so well fixed and settled at Babylon, and lived there in such ease and affluence, that they refused to return to their native country. In their captivity they were still allowed to live as a distinct people, appointed feasts and fasts for themselves, and had rulers and governors of their own, as we may collect from several places in Ezra and Nehemiah. When Cyrus had issued his proclamation for the rebuilding of the temple, then rose up the chief of the fathers, saith Ezra, (i. 5.) so that they had chiefs and rulers among them. Cyrus ordered the vessels of the temple to be delivered to the prince of Judah, (Ezra i. 8.) so that they had then a prince of Judah. And these princes and rulers, who are often mentioned, managed their return and settlement afterwards. It is true that after the Babylonish captivity they were not so free a people as before, living under the dominion of the Persians, Greeks, and Romans; but still they lived as a distinct people under their own laws. The authority of their rulers and elders subsisted under these foreign masters, as it had even while they were in Egypt. It subsisted under the Asmonean princes, as it had under the government of the Judges, and Samuel and Saul; for in the books of Maccabees there is frequent mention of the rulers and elders and council of the Jews, and of public acts and memorials in their name. It subsisted even in our Saviour's time, for in the Gospels we read often of the chief priests and the scribes and the elders of the people. Their power indeed in capital causes, especially such as related to the state, was abridged in some measure; they might judge, but not execute without the consent of the Roman governor, as I think we must infer from this passage, (John xviii. 31.) Then said Pilate unto them, Take ye him, and judge him according to your law: the Jews therefore said unto him, It is not lawful for us to put any man to death. The sceptre was then departing, and in about forty years afterwards it totally departed. Their city was taken, their temple was destroyed, and they themselves were either slain with the sword, or sold for slaves. And from that time to this they have never formed one body or society, but have been dispersed among all nations; their tribes and genealogies have been all confounded, and they have lived without a ruler, without a lawgiver, and without supreme authority and government in any part of the earth. And this a captivity not for seventy years, but for seventeen hundred. "Nor will they ever be able (as the learned ¹ prelate expresseth it) after all their pretences, to show any signs or marks of the sceptre among them, till they discover the unknown country, where never mankind dwelt, and where the apocryphal Esdras has placed their brethren of the ten tribes." (2 Esdras xiii. 41.)

¹ See Mede, Discourse viii. et Gothofr. Valandi Dissert. cui titulus, Prætor e medio civium Jud. ante Messiae imperium universale non abscissurus, Syllog. Dissertat. Vol. I. Mann's Crit. Note in locum.

We have seen the exact completion of the former part of the prophecy, and now let us attend to that of the latter part, And unto him shall the gathering of the people be. If we understand this of Judah, that the other tribes should be gathered to that tribe, it was in some measure fulfilled by the people's going up so frequently as they did to Jerusalem, which was in the tribe of Judah, in order to obtain justice in difficult cases, and to worship God in his holy temple. Whither the tribes go up, (saith the Psalmist, cxxii. 4, 5.) the tribes of the Lord; unto the testimony of Israel, to give thanks unto the name of the Lord. For there are set thrones of judgment; the thrones of the house of David. Upon the division of the kingdoms of Israel and Judah, the tribe of Benjamin, and the priests and Levites, and several out of all the other tribes, (2 Chron. xi. 13. 16.) went over to Judah, and were so blended and incorporated together, that they are more than once spoken of under the notion of one tribe, (1 Kings xi. 13. 32. 36.) and it is said expressly, (1 Kings xii. 20.) there was none that followed the house of David, but the tribe of Judah only; all the rest were swallowed up in that tribe, and considered as parts and members of it. In like manner, when the Israelites were carried away captive into Assyria, it is said, (2 Kings xvii. 18.) there was none left but the tribe of Judah only; and yet we know that the tribe of Benjamin, and many of the other tribes remained too, but they are reckoned as one and the same tribe with Judah. Nay, at this very time there was a remnant of Israel, that escaped from the Assyrians, and went and adhered to Judah: for we find afterwards, that in the reign of Josiah there were some of Manasseh and Ephraim and of the remnant of Israel, who contributed money to the repairing of the temple, as well as Judah and Benjamin, (2 Chron. xxxiv. 9.) and at the solemn celebration of the passover some of Israel were present as well as all Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem. When the people returned from the Babylonish captivity, then again several of the tribes of Israel associated themselves, and returned with Judah and Benjamin; and in Jerusalem dwelt of the children of Judah, and of the children of Benjamin, and of the children of Ephraim and Manasseh. (1 Chron. ix. 3.) At so many different times, and upon such different occasions, the other tribes were gathered to this tribe, insomuch that Judah became the general name of the whole nation; and after the Babylonish captivity they were no longer called the people of Israel, but the people of Judah, or Jews.

¹ Bishop Sherlock's Third Dissertation, p. 351, 5th Edit.

Again; if we understand this of Shiloh, or the Messiah, that the people or Gentiles should be gathered to his obedience, it is no more than is foretold in many other prophecies of Scripture; and it began to be fulfilled in Cornelius the centurion, whose conversion (Acts x.) was, as I may say, the first fruits of the Gentiles, and the harvest afterwards was very plenteous. In a few years the Gospel was disseminated, and took root downward, and bore fruit upward in the most considerable parts of the world then known; and in Constantine's time, when the empire became Christian, it might with some propriety be said, the kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ, and he shall reign for ever and ever. (Rev. xi. 15.) We ourselves were of the Gentiles, but are now gathered unto Christ.

Lastly, if we join this in construction with the words preceding, until Shiloh come, two events are specified as forerunners of the sceptre's departing from Judah, the coming of the Messiah, and the gathering of the Gentiles to him; and these together point out with greater exactness the precise time of the sceptre's departure. Now it is certain that before the destruction of Jerusalem, and the dissolution of the Jewish commonwealth by the Romans, the Messiah was not only come, but great numbers likewise of the Gentiles were converted to him. The very same thing was predicted by our Saviour himself, (Matt. xxiv. 14.) This Gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world, for a witness unto all nations, and then shall the end come, the destruction of Jerusalem, and end of the Jewish constitution. The Jews were not to be cut off till the Gentiles were grafted into the church. And in fact we find that the apostles and their companions preached the Gospel in all the parts of the world then known. Their sound (as St. Paul applies the saying, Rom. x. 18.) went into all the earth, and their words unto the ends of the world. And then the end came, then an end was put to the Jewish polity in church and state. The government of the tribe of Judah had subsisted in some form or other from the death of Jacob to the last destruction of Jerusalem: but then it was utterly broken and ruined; then the sceptre departed ever since. And now even the distinction of tribes is in great measure lost among them; they are all called Jews, but the tribe of Judah is so far from bearing rule, that they know not for certain which is the tribe of Judah; and all the world is witness, that they exercise dominion no where, but every where live in subjection.

Before we conclude, it may not be improper to add a just observation of the learned prelate before cited. As the tribe of Benjamin annexed itself to the tribe of Judah as its head, so it ran the same fortune with it; they went together into captivity, they returned home together, and were both in being when Shiloh came. This also was foretold by Jacob, (ver. 27.) Benjamin shall ravin as a wolf; in the morning he shall devour the prey, and at night he shall divide the spoil. The morning and night here can be nothing else but the 'morning and night of the Jewish state; for this state is the subject of all Jacob's prophecy from one end to the other: and consequently it is here foretold of Benjamin, that he should continue to the very last times of the Jewish state. This interpretation is confirmed by Moses's prophecy, for the prophecy of Moses is in truth an exposition of Jacob's prophecy. Benjamin, saith Moses, (Deut. xxxiii. 12.) shall dwell in safety; the Lord shall cover him all the day long. What is this all the day long? The same certainly as the morning and night. Does not this import a promise of a longer continuance to Benjamin than to the other tribes? And was it not most exactly fulfilled?

¹ Thus some Jewish interpreters, referred to by Bochart, understood the expression, Mane, id est primis Israelitici regni temporibus—Sub vesperam, id est post captivitatis Babylonice tempora. [In the morning, that is, in the first or early times of the Israelitish kingdom.—In the evening, that is, after the time of the Babylonish captivity.] Hierozoic. Pars prior, Lib. iii. cap. x. col. 828.

To conclude; this prophecy, and the completion of it, will furnish us with an invincible argument, not only that the Messiah is come, but also that Jesus Christ is the person. For the sceptre was not to depart from Judah, until the Messiah should come: but the sceptre hath long been departed, and consequently the Messiah hath been long come. The sceptre departed at the final destruction of Jerusalem, and hath been departed seventeen centuries; and consequently the Messiah came a little before that period: and if the Messiah came a little before that period, prejudice itself cannot long make any doubt concerning the person. All considerate men must say, as Simon Peter said to Jesus, (John vi. 68, 69.) Lord, to whom shall we go? thou hast the words of eternal life. And we believe and are sure that thou art the Christ, the son of the living God.

V.

BALAAH'S PROPHECIES.

WONDERFUL as the gift of prophecy was, it was not always confined to the chosen seed, nor yet always imparted to the best of men. God might sometimes, to convince the world of his superintendence and government of the world, disclose the purposes of his providence to heathen nations. He revealed himself to Abimelech, (Gen. xx.) to Pharaoh, (Gen. xli.) and to Nebuchadnezzar, (Dan. ii.) and we have no reason to deny all the marvellous stories which are related of divination among the heathens; the possibility and credibility of which is argued on both sides by Cicero, in his two books of Divination, his brother Quintus asserting it in the first book, and himself labouring to disprove it in the second; but I think all unprejudiced readers must agree, that the arguments for it are stronger and better than those urged against it. Neither was there any necessity that the prophets should always be good men. Unworthy persons may sometimes be possessed of spiritual gifts as well as of natural. Aaron and Miriam, who were inspired upon some occasions, yet upon others mutinied against Moses, and rebelled against God. Jonah for his disobedience to God was thrown into the sea. In the thirteenth chapter of the first book of Kings we read of two prophets, the one a liar and afterwards inspired, the other inspired and afterwards disobedient to the word of the Lord. Yea, our Saviour himself hath assured us, (Matt. vii. 22, 23.) that in the last day many will say unto him, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name? and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works? and yet will he profess unto them, I never knew you: depart from me, ye that work iniquity.

Balaam was a remarkable instance of both kinds, both of a prophet who was a heathen, and of a prophet who was an immoral man. He came from Aram, or Mesopotamia, out of the mountains of the east: (Numb. xxiii. 7. Deut. xxiii. 4.) and the east was infamous for soothsayers and diviners. (Isai. ii. 6.) However, he was a worshipper of the true God, (as were also Melchizedek and Job, and others of the heathen nations) and this appears by his applying to God, (Numb. xxii. 8.) I will bring you word again, as the Lord shall speak unto me; and by his calling the Lord his God, (ver. 18.) I cannot go beyond the word of the Lord my God to do less or more. But his worship was mixed and debased with superstition, as appears by his building seven altars, and sacrificing on each altar, (Numb. xxiii. 1, 2.) and by his going to seek for enchantments, whatever they were. (Numb. xxiv. 1.) He appears too to have had some pious thoughts and resolutions, by declaring, I cannot go beyond the word of the Lord my God to do less or more: and by so earnestly wishing, Let me die the death of the righteous, and let my last end be like his. (xxiii. 10.) But his heart was unsound, was mercenary, was corrupt; he loved the wages of unrighteousness, (2 Pet. ii. 15.) and ran greedily after rewards: (Jude 11.) his inclinations were contrary to his duty; he was ordered to stay, but yet he wished to go; he was commanded to bless, but yet he longed to curse; and when he found that he was overruled, and could do the people no hurt as a prophet, he still contrived to do it as a politician, and taught Balak to cast a stumbling-block before the children of Israel, to eat things sacrificed unto idols, and to commit fornication. (Rev. ii. 14.) So that he was indeed a strange mixture of a man; but so is every man, more or less. There are inconsistencies and contradictions in every character, though not so great perhaps and notorious as in Balaam. If he is called a sooth-sayer in one part of Scripture, (Josh. xiii. 22.) in another part he is called a prophet; (2 Pet. ii. 16.) and his name must have been in high credit and estimation, that the king of Moab and the elders of Midian should think it worth their while to send two honourable embassies to him at a considerable distance, to engage him to come and curse the people of Israel. It was a superstitious ceremony, in use among the heathens, to devote their enemies to destruction at the beginning of their wars, as if the gods would enter into their passions, and were as unjust and partial as themselves. The Romans had public officers to perform the ceremony, and ¹Macrobius hath preserved the form of these execrations. Now Balaam, being a prophet of great note and eminence, it was believed that he was more intimate than others with the heavenly powers, and consequently that his imprecations would be more effectual; for as Balak said unto him, (Numb. xxii. 6.) I wot that he whom thou bleesest is blessed, and he whom thou cursest is cursed.

¹ Saturnal. Lib. iii. cap. ix.

But the strangest incident of all is the part of Balaam's ass. This usually is made the grand objection to the truth of the story. The speaking ass from that time to this hath been the standing jest of every infidel brother. Philo, the Jew, seemeth to have been ashamed of this part of the story; for in the first book of his life of Moses, wherein he hath given an account of Balaam, he hath purposely omitted this particular of the ass's speaking, I suppose not to give offence to the Gentiles; but he needed not to have been so cautious of offending them, for similar stories were current among them. The learned ¹Bochart hath collected several instances, the ass of Bacchus, the ram of Phrixus, the horse of Achilles, and the like, not only from the poets and mythologists, but also from the gravest historians, such as Livy and Plutarch, who frequently affirm that oxen have spoken. The proper use of citing such authorities is not to prove, that those instances and this of Balaam are upon an equal footing, and equally true; but only to prove, that the Gentiles believed such things to be true, and to lie within the power of their gods, and consequently could not object to the truth of Scripture-history on this account. Maimonides and others have conceived, that the matter was transacted in a vision; and it must be confessed, that many things in the writings of the prophets are spoken of as real transactions, which were only visionary; and these visions made as strong impressions upon the minds of the prophets as realities. But it appears rather more probable from the whole tenor of the narration, that this was no visionary, but a real transaction. The words of St. Peter show, that it is to be understood, as he himself understood it, literally: (2 Pet. ii. 14, 15, 16.) Cursed children: Which have forsaken the right way, and are gone astray, following the way of Balaam the son of Bosor, who loved the wages of unrighteousness; but was rebuked for his iniquity; the dumb ass speaking with man's voice, forbad the madness of the prophet. The ass was enabled to utter such and such sounds, probably, as parrots do, without understanding them: and say what you will of the construction of the ass's mouth, of the formation of the tongue and jaws being unfit for speaking, yet an adequate cause is assigned for this wonderful effect, for it is said expressly, that the Lord opened the mouth of the ass; and no one who believes a God, can doubt of his having power to do this, and much more. If the whole transaction was visionary, no reason can be given why it was said particularly, that the Lord opened the mouth of the ass. But it is thought strange that Balaam should express no surprise upon this extraordinary occasion: but perhaps he had been accustomed to prodigies with his enchantments: or perhaps believing the eastern doctrine of the transmigration of human souls into the bodies of brutes, he might think such a humanized brute not incapable of speaking: or perhaps he might not regard, or attend to the wonder, through excess of rage and madness, as the word is in St. Peter; or perhaps (which is the most probable of all) he might be greatly disturbed and astonished, as ¹ Josephus affirms he was, and yet Moses in his short history might omit this circumstance. The miracle was by no means needless or superfluous; it was very proper to convince Balaam, that the mouth and tongue were under God's direction, and that the same divine power which caused the dumb ass to speak contrary to its nature, could make him in like manner utter blessings contrary to his inclination. And accordingly he was over-ruled to bless the people, though he came prepared and disposed to curse them, which according to ² Bochart was the greater miracle of the two, for the ass was merely passive, but Balaam resisted the good motions of God. We may be the more certain that he was influenced to speak contrary to his inclination, because after he had done prophesying, though he had been ordered in anger to depart and flee to his place; (Numb. xxiv. 10, 11.) yet he had the meanness to stay, and gave that wicked counsel, whereby the people were enticed to commit whoredom with the daughters of Moab, and twenty and four thousand died in the plague. (Numb. xxv.)

¹ Hierozoic. Pars prior, Lib. ii. cap. xiv.

This miracle, then, was a proper sign to Balaam, and had a proper effect; and we may the more easily believe it, when we find Balaam afterwards inspired with such knowledge of futurity. It was not more above the natural capacity of the ass to speak, than it was above the natural capacity of Balaam to foretel so many distant events. The prophecies render the miracle more credible; and we shall have less reason to doubt of the one, when we see the accomplishment of the others. His predictions are indeed wonderful, whether we consider the matter or the style; as if the same Divine spirit that inspired his thoughts, had also raised his language. They are called parables in the sacred text: he took up his parable and said. The same word is used after the same manner in the book of Job, (xxvii. 1 ; xxix. 1.) Moreover Job continued his parable, and said. It is commonly translated parable or proverb. Le Clerc translates it figuratam orationem: and thereby is meant a weighty and solemn speech delivered in figurative and majestic language. Such, remarkably such¹ are the prophecies or parables of Balaam. You cannot peruse them without being struck with the beauty of

¹ Antiq. Jud. Lib. iv. cap. vi. sect. iii. ταραττομένον δ' αὐτοῦ διὰ τὴν τῆς ὄνου φωνήν ἀνθρωπίνην οὖσαν, κ. τ. λ. Dum vero ille voce humanâ asinæ attonitus turbatusque, &c. [But while he was astonished and confounded by the ass addressing him in a human voice, &c.] P. 153. Edit. Hudson.

² Rabba in Numeros, sect. xx. Deum asserit os asinæ ideo aperuisse, ut Balaam doceret, os et linguam penes se esse, adeoque os ipsius Balaami, si quæreret Israeli maledicere. Et vero id docuit eventus, cum Balaam iis ipsis invitatus benedixit, quibus maledicturus tanto apparatu venerat, non minore oraculo, aut etiam majore, quam cum asina locuta est. Asina enim erat merè patiens, sed Balaam moventi Deo pro virili obsistebat, ut Saul, cum prophetam egit. Hierozoic. Pars prior, Lib. ii. cap. xiv. [Rabba, in his twentieth section on the Book of Numbers, affirms that God opened the mouth of Balaam's ass to teach him that the mouth and the tongue were in his power, and so those of Balaam himself, if he should go about to curse Israel. And, indeed, the event itself showed the same thing, seeing Balaam, in spite of all that could be done, blessed the very persons whom, with so much parade, he had come to curse. This was even a greater miracle than when the ass spake. For the ass was merely passive, whereas Balaam to the utmost opposed himself to the influences of God, as Saul did when he prophesied.]

¹ See to this purpose Mr. Lowth's Poetical Prælections, particularly Prælect. iv. p. 41 ; Prælect. xviii. p. 173, and his ingenious version of part of Balaam's prophecies into Latin verse, Prælect. xx. p. 206. The learned reader will not be displeased to see it here.

Tuis, Jacobe, quantus est castris decor !
 Tuisque signis, Israel !
 Ut rigua vallis fertilem pandens sinum ;
 Horti ut scatentes rivulis ;
 Sacris Edenæ costi ut in sylvis virent,
 Cedrique propter flumina.
 Illi uda multo rore stillant germina,
 Fætusque alunt juges aquæ.
 Sancti usque fines promovebit imperi
 Rex usque victor hostium.
 Illum subacto duxit ab Nilo Deus,
 Novis superbum viribus ;
 Qualis remotis liber in jugis oryx,
 Fert celsa cælo cornua.
 Vorabit hostes ; ossa franget ; irritas
 Lacerabit hastas dentibus.
 Ut Leo, recumbit ; ut læna, decubat ;
 Quis audeat lacescere ?
 Quæ quisque tibi precabitur, ferat bona !
 Mala quæ precabitur, luat !

[" In proud array thy tents expand,
 O Israel, o'er the subject land :
 As the broad vales in prospect rise,
 As gardens by the waters spread ;
 As cedars of majestic size,
 That shade the sacred fountain's head.

Thy torrents shall the earth o'erflow,
 O'erwhelming each obdurate foe.
 In vain the mind essays to trace
 The glories of thy countless race ;
 In vain thy king's imperial state Shall haughty Agag emulate.

His mighty God's protecting hand
 Led him from Pharaoh's tyrant land.
 Strong as the beast that rules the plain,
 What power his fury shall restrain ?
 Who dares resist, his force shall feel.
 The nations see, and trembling fly,
 Or in th' unequal conflict die ;
 And glut with blood his thirsty steel.

With aspect keen he mark'd his prey,—
 He couch'd—in secret ambush lay.—
 Who shall the furious lion dare ?
 Who shall unmov'd his terrors see ?
 —Blest, who for thee exalts his prayer !
 And curst the wretch who curseth thee !"]—DR. GREGORY.

them. You will perceive uncommon force and energy, if you read them only in our English translation. We shall select only such parts as are more immediately relative to the design of these discourses.

After he had offered his first sacrifice, (Numb. xxiii.) he went to seek the Lord, and at his return he declared, among other things, Lo, the people shall dwell alone, and shall not be reckoned among the nations. (ver. 9.) And how could Balaam, upon a distant view only of a people, whom he had never seen or known before, have discovered the genius and manners not only of the people then living, but of their posterity to the latest generations? What renders it more extraordinary is the singularity of the character, that they should differ from all the people of the world, and should dwell by themselves among the nations, without mixing and incorporating with any. The time too when this was affirmed increases the wonder, it being before the people were well known in the world, before their religion and government were established, and even before they had obtained a settlement any where. But yet that the character was fully verified in the event, not only all history testifies, but we have even ocular demonstration at this day. The Jews in their religion and laws, their rites and ceremonies, their manners and customs, were so totally different from all other nations, that they had little intercourse or communion with them. An ¹ eminent author hath shown, that there was a general intercommunity amongst the gods of Paganism; but no such thing was allowed between the God of Israel and the gods of the nations. There was to be no fellowship between God and Belial, though there might be between Belial and Dagon. And hence the Jews were branded for their inhumanity and unsociableness; and they as generally hated, as they were hated by the rest of mankind. Other nations, the conquerors and the conquered, have often associated and united as one body under the same laws; but the Jews, in their captivities, have commonly been more bigoted to their own religion, and more tenacious of their own rites and customs, than at other times. And even now, while they are dispersed among all nations, they yet live distinct and separate from all, trading only with others, but eating, marrying, and conversing chiefly among themselves. We see, therefore, how exactly and wonderfully Balaam characterized the whole race from the first to the last, when he said, Lo, the people shall dwell alone, and shall not be reckoned among the nations. In the conclusion, too, when he poured forth that passionate wish, Let me die the death of the righteous, and let my last end be like his, (ver. 10.) he had in all probability some forebodings of his own coming to an untimely end, as he really did afterwards, being slain with the five kings of Midian, by the sword of Israel. (Numb. xxxi. 8.)

¹ See the Divine Legation of Moses, Book ii. sect. vi. and Book v. sect. ii.

After the second sacrifice he said, among other things; (Numb. xxiii. 24.) Behold, the people shall rise up as a great lion, and lift up himself as a young lion: he shall not lie down until he eat of the prey, and drink of the blood of the slain: and again to the same purpose after the third sacrifice, (xxiv. 8, 9.) He shall eat up the nations of his enemies, and shall break their bones, and pierce them through with his arrows: He couched, he lay down as a lion, and as a great lion; who shall stir him up? Blessed is he that blesseth thee, and cursed is he that curseth thee. Which passages are a manifest prophecy of the victories which the Israelites should gain over their enemies, and particularly the Canaanites, and of their secure possession and quiet enjoyment of the land afterwards, and particularly in the reigns of David and Solomon. It is remarkable too, that God hath here put into the mouth of Balaam much the same things which Jacob had before predicted of Judah, (Gen. xlix. 9.) Judah is a lion's whelp; from the prey, my son, thou art gone up: he stooped down, he couched as a lion, and as an old lion; who shall rouse him up? and Isaac had predicted of Jacob, (Gen. xxvii. 29.) Cursed be every one that curseth thee, and blessed be he that blesseth thee: there is such analogy and harmony between the prophecies of Scripture.

At the same time Balaam declared, (ver. 7.) His king shall be higher than Agag, and his kingdom shall be exalted. Some copies have Gog instead of Agag, which reading is embraced by the ¹ authors of the Universal History, who say that “as the Samaritan, Septuagint, Syriac, and Arabic read Gog instead of Agag, and Gog doth generally signify the Scythians and northern nations, several interpreters have preferred this latter reading to the first, and not without good grounds.” But it is a mistake to say, that the Syriac and Arabic read Gog: it is found only in the ² Samaritan and the Septuagint, and in Symmachus according to Grotius: the ³ Syriac and Arabic have Agag as well as the Targum of Onkelos and the Vulgate, though this latter with a different sense and construction of the words. Neither have we any account that Gog was a famous king at that time, and much less that the king of Israel was ever exalted above him; and indeed the Scythians and northern nations lay too remote to be the proper subject of a comparison.

¹ See Universal History, Book i. chap. vii. sect. ii. Vol. I. p. 534. Fol. Edit. note Y.

² Extolleturque præ Gog rex ejus. [And his king shall be exalted above Gog.] Samar. Και ὑψωθήσεται ἡ Γὼγ βασιλεία. [And the kingdom of Gog shall be exalted.]

³ Ὑψωθήσεται ὑπὲρ Γὼγ βασιλεὺς αὐτοῦ. [And his kingdom shall be exalted above Gog.] Symm. apud Grot.

⁴ Extolletur præ Agag rege, et exaltabitur regnum. [He shall be extolled above king Agag, and his kingdom shall be exalted.] Syr.

Exaltabitur plusquam Agag rex ejus, extolletur regnum ejus. [More than Agag shall his king be exalted, and his kingdom shall be extolled.] Arab.

Roborabitur magis quam Agag rex ejus, et elevabitur regnum illius. [His king shall be strengthened more than Agag, and his kingdom shall be lifted up.] Onk.

Tolletur propter Agag rex ejus, et auferetur regnum illius. [His king shall be taken away for the sake of Agag, and his kingdom shall be removed.] Vulg.

The reading of the Hebrew copies, his king shall be higher than Agag, is without doubt the true reading: and we must either suppose that Agag was prophesied of by name particularly, as Cyrus and Josiah were several years before they were born: or we must say with ¹ Moses Gerundensis, a learned rabbi quoted by Munster, that Agag was the general name of the kings of Amalek, which appears very probable, it being the custom of those times and of those countries to give one certain name to all their kings, as Pharaoh was the general name for the kings of Egypt, and Abimelech for the kings of the Philistines. Amalek too was a neighbouring country, and therefore is fitly introduced upon the present occasion: and it was likewise at that time a great and flourishing kingdom, for (in ver. 20.) it is styled the first of the nations; and therefore for the king of Israel to be exalted above the king of Amalek was really a wonderful exaltation. But wonderful as it was, it was accomplished by Saul, who smote the Amalekites from Havilah, until thou comest to Shur, that is over against Egypt: and he took Agag the king of the Amalekites alive, and utterly destroyed all the people with the edge of the sword. (1 Sam. xv. 7, 8.) The first king of Israel subdued Agag the king of the Amalekites, so that it might truly and properly be said, his king shall be higher than Agag, and his kingdom shall be exalted, as it was afterwards greatly by David and Solomon.

His latter prophecies Balaam ushers in with a remarkable preface. Balaam the son of Beor hath said, and the man whose eyes are open, hath said; He hath said, which heard the words of God, which saw the vision of the Almighty, falling into a trance, but having his eyes open. (ver. 3, 4. and 15, 16.) Which hath occasioned much perplexity and confusion, but the words rightly rendered will admit of an easy interpretation. Balaam the son of Beor hath said, and the man whose eyes are open hath said: It should be the man whose eye was shut: for the word שָׁטָם shatam is used only here and in Lamentations, (iii. 8.) and there it signifies to shut; and the word סָטָם satam, which is very near of kin to it, I think, hath always that signification. St. Jerome translates it cujus obturatus est oculus: and in the margin of our Bibles it is rendered who had his eyes shut, but with this addition, but now open. It plainly alludes to Balaam's not seeing the angel of the Lord, at the same time that the ass saw him. He hath said, which heard the words of God, which saw the vision of the Almighty; for in this story we read several times, that God came unto Balaam and said unto him; and possibly he might allude to former revelations. Falling into a trance but having his eyes open; in the original there is no mention of a trance; the passage should be rendered, falling and his eyes were opened, alluding to what happened in the way, to Balaam's falling with his falling ass, and then having his eyes opened: And when the ass saw the angel of the Lord, she fell down under Balaam—Then the Lord opened the eyes of Balaam, and he saw the angel of the Lord standing in the way, and his sword drawn in his hand; and he bowed down his head, and fell flat on his face. (xxii. 27, &c.)

¹ Et secundum Mosen Gerundensem, quilibet rex Amalekitarum fuit vocatus Agag, transitque primi regis nomen in omnes posteros solum regni occupantes; sicut a Cæsare primo omnes Romanorum reges Cæsares appellantur. [And according to Moses Gerundensis, every king of the Amalekites was named Agag. And the name of the first king was transferred to all that succeeded him in the throne of the kingdom; as from the first Cæsar all the Roman emperors were called Cæsars.] Munsterus.

A contrast is intended between having his eyes shut, and having his eyes opened; the one answers to the other. The design of this preface was to excite attention: and so Balaam proceeds to advertise Balak what this people shall do to his people in the later days, by which phrase is meant the time to come, be it more or less remote.

He begins with what more immediately concerns the Moabites, the people to whom he is speaking, (ver. 17, 18, 19.) I shall see him, but not now; I shall behold him, but not nigh: or rather, I see him, but not now; I behold him, but not nigh; the future tense in Hebrew being often used for the present. He saw with the eyes of prophecy, and prophets are emphatically styled seers. There shall come a star out of Jacob, and a sceptre shall rise out of Israel. The star and the sceptre are probably metaphors borrowed from the ancient hieroglyphics, which much influenced the language of the east: and they evidently denote some eminent and illustrious king or ruler, whom he particularizes in the following words. And shall smite the corners of Moab, or the princes of Moab according to other versions. This was executed by David, for he smote Moab, and measured them with a line, casting them down to the ground: even with two lines measured he, to put to death; and with one full line to keep alive: that is, he destroyed two-thirds, and saved one-third alive: and so the Moabites became David's servants, and brought gifts. (2 Sam. viii. 2.)

And destroy all the children of Sheth. If by Sheth was meant the son of Adam, then all the children of Sheth are all mankind, the posterity of Cain and Adam's other sons having all perished in the deluge, and the line only of Sheth having been preserved in Noah and his family: but it is very harsh to say that any king of Israel would destroy all mankind, and therefore the ¹ Syriac and Chaldee soften it, that he shall subdue all the sons of Sheth, and rule over all the sons of men. The word occurs only in this place, and in Isaiah (xxii. 5.) where it is used in the sense of breaking down or destroying: and as particular places, Moab and Edom, are mentioned both before and after, so it is reasonable to conclude that not all mankind in general, but some particular persons, were intended by the expression of the sons of Sheth. The ² Jerusalem Targum translates it the sons of the east, the Moabites lying east of Judæa. Rabbi Nathan¹ says that Sheth is the name of a city in the border of Moab. Grotius² imagines Sheth to be the name of some famous king among the Moabites. Our Poole, who is a judicious and useful commentator, says that Sheth "seems to be the name of some then eminent, though now unknown, place or prince in Moab, where there were many princes, as appears from Numb. xxiii. 6. Amos ii. 3: there being innumerable instances of such places or persons sometimes famous, but now utterly lost as to all monuments and remembrances of them." Vitringa, in his commentary upon Isaiah,³ conceives that the Idumeans were intended, the word Sheth signifying a foundation or fortified place, because they trusted greatly in their castles and fortifications. But the Idumeans are mentioned afterwards; and it is probable that as two hemistichs relate to them, two also relate to the Moabites; and the reason of the appellation assigned by Vitringa is as proper to the Moabites as to the Idumeans. It is common in the style of the Hebrews, and especially in the poetic parts of Scripture, and we may observe it particularly in these prophecies of Balaam, that the same thing in effect is repeated in other words, and the latter member of each period is exegetical of the former, as in the passage before us; I see him, but not now: I behold him, but not nigh: and then again, there shall come a star out of Jacob, and a sceptre shall rise out of Israel: and again afterwards, And Edom shall be a possession, Seir also shall be a possession for his enemies. There is great reason therefore to think, that the same manner of speaking was continued here, and consequently that Sheth must be the name of some eminent place or person among the Moabites; and shall smite the princes of Moab, and destroy all the sons of Sheth.

¹ Et subjugabit omnes filios Seth. [And he shall subdue all the children of Seth.] Syr. Et dominabitur omnium filiorum hominum. [And he shall rule over all the children of men.] Chald.

² Hinc Jerosolim. Paraphrastes filios orientis vertit. Moabitæ enim erant ad ortum

And Edom shall be a possession. This also was fulfilled by David; for he put garrisons in Edom; throughout all Edom put he garrisons, and all they of Edom became David's servants. (2 Sam. viii. 14.) David himself, in two of his psalms, hath mentioned together his conquest of Moab and Edom, as they are also joined Judæa. [Hence the Jerusalem paraphrast rendereth it the sons of the east. For the Moabites dwelt on the east of Judæa.] Le Clerc.

¹ R. Nathan dicit Seth nomen urbis esse in termino Moab. Vide Liram. [Rabbi Nathan saith, that Seth was a city in the confines of Moab. See Lira.] Drusius.

² Nihil vero propius quam Seth nominatum fuisse regem aliquem eximium inter Moabitas. [Nothing is more probable, than that Seth was the name of some distinguished king among the Moabites.] Grot.

³ Non desisto ab hac sententia, vocem קרקר karkar in verbis Bileami certo significare destructionem, eversionem, vastationem; etsi hæream in phrasi בני שֵׁת filiorum Seth, per quos secundum circumstantias loci intelligi puto Idumæos, voce שֵׁת appellative sumptâ pro fundamento, sive loco munito, quod illi maxime arcibus ac munimentis suis fiderent. [I am fully persuaded that the word קרקר 'karkar,' in the speech of Balaam, signifies destruction, overthrow, devastation; but I am in some doubt about the phrase, the children of Seth, whom, from the circumstances of the place, I imagine to have been Idumeans: the word Seth, being understood appellatively, as signifying a foundation or fortified place, because the Idumeans placed the greatest trust in their castles and fortifications.] Vitring. in Jesaiam, Cap. xxii. ver. 5. p. 641. Vol. I.

together in this prophecy; Moab is my wash-pot, over Edom will I cast out my shoe, (Psalm lx. 8; cviii. 9.) Seir also shall be a possession for his enemies, that is, for the Israelites. Seir is the name of the mountains of Edom, so that even their mountains and fastnesses could not defend the Idumeans from David and his captains. And Israel shall do valiantly, as they did particularly under the command of David, several of whose victories are recorded in this same eighth chapter of the second book of Samuel, together with his conquest of Moab and of Edom. Out of Jacob shall come he that shall have dominion, and shall destroy him that remaineth of the city; not only to defeat them in the field, but destroy them even in their strongest cities, or perhaps some particular city was intended, as we may infer from Psalm lx. 9; cviii. 10. Who will bring me into the strong city? who will lead me into Edom? And we read particularly that Joab, David's general, smote every male in Edom: for six months did Joab remain there with all Israel, until he had cut off every male in Edom. (1 Kings xi. 15, 16.)

We see how exactly this prophecy hath been fulfilled in the person and actions of David: but most Jewish as well as Christian writers apply it, primarily, perhaps, to David, but ultimately to the Messiah, as the person chiefly intended, in whom it was to receive its full and entire completion. Onkelos, who is the most ancient and valuable of the Chaldee paraphrasts, interprets it of the Messiah. "When a prince," ¹ says he, "shall arise of the house of Jacob, and Christ shall be anointed of the house of Israel, he shall both slay the princes of Moab, and rule over all the sons of men:" and with him agree the other Targums or paraphrases. Maimonides, who is one of the most learned and famous of the Jewish doctors, understands it partly of David, and partly of the Messiah: and with him agree other rabbies, whom you may find cited by the critics and commentators to this purpose. It appears to have been generally understood by the Jews, as a prophecy of the Messiah, because the false Christ, who appeared in the reign of the Roman emperor Adrian, ² assumed the title of Barchochebas, or the son of the star, in allusion to this prophecy, and in order to have it believed that he was the star whom Balaam had seen afar off. The Christian fathers, I think, are unanimous in applying this prophecy to our Saviour, and to the star which appeared at his nativity. Origen in particular saith, that ³ in the law there are many typical and enigmatical references to the Messiah; but he produceth this as one of the plainest and clearest of prophecies: and both ¹ Origen and Eusebius affirm, that it was in consequence of Balaam's prophecies, which were known and believed in the east, that the Magi, upon the appearance of a new star, came to Jerusalem to worship him who was born king of the Jews. The stream of modern Divines and commentators runneth the same way, that is, they apply the prophecy principally to our Saviour, and by Moab and Edom understand the enemies and persecutors of the Church. And it must be acknowledged, in favour of this opinion, that many prophecies of Scripture have a double meaning, literal and mystical, respect two events, and receive a two-fold completion. David, too, was in several things a type and figure of the Messiah. If by destroying all the children of Sheth be meant ruling over all mankind, this was never fulfilled in David. A star did really appear at our Saviour's nativity, and in Scripture he is styled the day-star, (2 Pet. i. 19.) the morning star, (Rev. ii. 28.) the bright and morning star, (xxii. 16.) perhaps in allusion to this very prophecy. Dr. Warburton, who improves every subject that he handles, assigns a farther reason. Speaking of the two sorts of metaphor in the ancient use of it, the popular and common, and the hidden and mysterious, he ² says that "the prophetic writings are full of this kind of metaphor. To instance only in the famous prediction of Balaam—there shall come a star out of Jacob, and a sceptre shall rise out of Israel. This prophecy may possibly in some sense relate to David, but without doubt it belongs principally to Christ. Here the metaphor of a sceptre was common and popular to denote a ruler, like David; but the star, though, like the other, it signified in the prophetic writings a temporal prince or ruler, yet had a secret and hidden meaning likewise. A star in the Egyptian hieroglyphics denoted ³ God: (and how much hieroglyphic writing influenced the eastern languages we shall see presently.) Thus God, in the prophet Amos, reproving the Israelites for their idolatry on their first coming out of Egypt, says, Have ye offered unto me sacrifices and offerings in the wilderness forty years, O house of Israel? But ye have borne the tabernacle of your Moloch and Chiun your images, the star of your God which ye made to yourselves. (Amos v. 25, 26.) The star of your God is here a noble figurative expression to signify the image of your God; for a star being employed in the hieroglyphics to signify God, it is used here with great elegance to signify the material image of a God; the words the star of your God being only a repetition (so usual in the Hebrew to Christ, yet at present I see none, which more plainly and manifestly have an allusion to him, than the one now before us.]

¹ Cum consurget rex de domo Jacob, et ungetur Christus de domo Israel; et occidet principes Moab, et dominabitur omnium filiorum hominum. [Translated in the text.] Onk.

² See Basnage's Hist. of the Jews, Book vi. chap. ix. sect. xii.

³ Τυπικῶς μὲν οὖν καὶ αἰνιγματικῶς ἀναφερόμενα εἰς τὸν Χριστὸν τῶν ἀναγεγραμμένων ἐν τῷ νόμῳ πλείστα ὅσα ἐστὶ εὐρεῖν· γυννότερα δὲ καὶ σαφέστερα ἐγὼ οὐχ ὀρῶ ἐπὶ τοῦ παρόντος ἄλλα τινὰ παρὰ ταῦτα. Quamobrem quam plurima invenire licet scripta in lege tum typice, tum obscure, quæ referantur ad Christum. Apertiora vero alia, et manifestiora præter hæc, ego in præsentia non video. [Wherefore, although in the law, there may be found many things which typically and enigmatically have a reference

¹ Orig. contr. Cels. Lib. i. sect. lx. p. 374. Vol. I. In Numeros Hom. XIII. sect. vii. p. 321. Vol. II. Edit. Benedict. Eusebii Demonstrat. Evangel. Lib. ix. sect. i. p. 417 Edit. Paris, 1628.

² See the Divine Legation, &c. Book iv. sect. iv.

³ 'Ἀστὴρ παρ' Αἰγυπτίους γραφόμενος θεὸν σημαίνει. [The picture of a star among the Egyptians, signifies God.] Horapol. Hierog. Lib. ii. Cap. i.

tongue) of the preceding—Chiun your images; and not (as some critics suppose) the same with your God star, sidus Deum vestrum. Hence we conclude that the metaphor here used by Balaam of a star was of that abstruse mysterious kind, and so to be understood; and consequently that it related only to Christ, the eternal son of God.” Thus far this excellent writer. But though for these reasons the Messiah might be remotely intended, yet we cannot allow that he was intended solely, because David might be called a star by Balaam, as well as other rulers or governors are by Daniel, (viii. 10.), and by St. John: (Rev. i. 20.) and we must insist upon it, that the primary intention, the literal meaning of the prophecy respects the person and actions of David; and for this reason particularly, because Balaam is here advertising Balak, What this people should do to his people in the latter days, that is, what the Israelites should do to the Moabites hereafter.

From the Moabites he turned his eyes more to the south and west, and looked on their neighbours, the Amalekites; and took up his parable and said, (ver. 20.) Amalek was the first of the nations, but his latter end shall be that he perish for ever. Amalek was the first of the nations, the first and most powerful of the neighbouring nations, or the first that warred against Israel, as it is in the margin of our Bibles. The latter interpretation is proposed by ¹ Onkelos and other Jews, I suppose because they would not allow the Amalekites to be a more ancient nation than themselves: but most good critics prefer the former interpretation as more easy and natural, and for a very good reason, because the Amalekites appear to have been a very ancient nation. They are reckoned among the most ancient nations thereabouts, (1 Sam. xxvii. 8.)—the Geshurites, and the Gezrites, and the Amalekites; for these nations were of old the inhabitants of the land, as thou goest to Shur, even unto the land of Egypt. They are mentioned as early as in the wars of Chedorlaomer: (Gen. xiv. 7.) so that they must have been a nation before the times of Abraham and Lot, and consequently much older than the Moabites, or Edomites, or any of the nations descended from those patriarchs. And this is a demonstrative argument, that the Amalekites did not descend from Amalek, the son of Eliphaz and grandson of Esau, as many have supposed only for the similitude of names; (Gen. xxxvi. 12.) but sprung from some other stock, and probably, as the Arabian writers affirm, from Amalek, or Amlak, the son of Ham, and grandson of Noah. Amlak et Amlík, fils de Cham, fils de Noé—C'est celuy que les Hebreux appellent Amalec pere des Amalecites: so saith Herbelot; but it is to be wished that this valuable and useful author had cited his authorities. According to the ² Arabian historians too, they were a great and powerful nation, subdued Egypt, and held it in subjection several years. They must certainly have been more powerful, or at least more courageous, than the neighbouring nations, because they ventured to attack the Israelites, of whom the other nations were afraid. But though they were the first, the most ancient and powerful of the neighbouring nations, yet their latter end shall be that they perish for ever. Here Balaam unwittingly confirms what God had before denounced by Moses, (Exod. xvii. 14.) And the Lord said unto Moses, Write this for a memorial in a book, and rehearse it in the ears of Joshua, for I will (or rather that I will) utterly put out the remembrance of Amalek from under heaven. Balaam had before declared, that the king of Israel should prevail over the king of Amalek; but here the menace is carried farther, and Amalek is consigned to utter destruction. This sentence was in great measure executed by Saul, who smote the Amalekites, and utterly destroyed all the people with the edge of the sword. (1 Sam. xv: 7, 8.) When they had recovered a little, David and his men went up and invaded them; and David smote the land, and left neither man nor woman alive, and took away the sheep, and the oxen, and the asses, and the camels, and the apparel. (1 Sam. xxvii. 8, 9.) David made a farther slaughter and conquest of them at Ziklag: (1 Sam. xxx.) and at last the sons of Simeon, in the days of Hezekiah king of Judah, smote the rest of the Amalekites that were escaped, and dwelt in their habitation. (1 Chron. iv. 41, 42, 43.) And where is the name or the nation of Amalek subsisting at this day? What history, what tradition concerning them is remaining any where? They are but just enough known and remembered to show, that what God had threatened he had punctually fulfilled; I will utterly put out the remembrance of Amalek from under heaven; and his latter end shall be that he perish for ever.

¹ Principium bellorum Israel fuit Amalech. [Amalek was the first that warred against Israel.] Onk.

² See Univers. Hist. Book i. chap. iii. p. 281. Folio Edit. Vol. I.

Then he looked on the Kenites: and took up his parable, and said, (ver. 21, 22.) Strong is thy dwelling place, and thou puttest thy nest in a rock. Nevertheless the Kenite shall be wasted, until Ashur shall carry thee away captive. Commentators are perplexed, and much at a loss to say with any certainty who these Kenites were. There are Kenites mentioned (Gen. xv. 19.) among the Canaanitish nations, whose land was promised unto Abraham; and ¹ Le Clerc imagines that those Kenites were the people here intended: but the Canaanitish nations are not the subject of Balaam's prophecies; and the Canaanitish nations were to be rooted out, but these Kenites were to continue as long as the Israelites themselves, and to be carried captive with them by the Assyrians; and in the opinion of ² Bochart, those Kenites as well as the Kenizzites became extinct in the interval of time which passed between Abraham and Moses, being not mentioned by Joshua in the division of the land, nor reckoned among the nations conquered by him. The most probable account of these Kenites I conceive to be this. Jethro, the father-in-law of Moses, is called in one place the priest of Midian, (Exod. iii. 1.) and in another the Kenite. (Judg. i. 16.) We may infer, therefore, that the Midianites and the Kenites were the same, or at least, that the Kenites were some of the tribes of Midian. The Midianites are said to be confederates with the Moabites in the beginning of the story, and the elders of Midian, as well as the elders of Moab, invited Balaam to come and curse Israel; and one would naturally expect some notice to be taken of them or their tribes in the course of these prophecies. Now of the Kenites, it appears, that part followed Israel: (Judg. i. 16.) but the greater part, we may presume, remained among the Midianites and Amalekites. We read in 1 Sam. xv. 6. that there were Kenites dwelling among the Amalekites, and so the Kenites are fitly mentioned here next after the Amalekites. Their situation is said to be strong and secure among the mountains, Strong is thy dwelling place, and thou puttest thy nest in a rock; wherein is an allusion to the name, the same word in Hebrew signifying a nest and a Kenite. Nevertheless the Kenite shall be wasted, until Asshur carry thee away captive. The Amalekites were to be utterly destroyed, but the Kenites were to be carried captive. And accordingly, when Saul was sent by divine commission to destroy the Amalekites, he ordered the Kenites to depart from among them. (1 Sam. xv. 6.) And Saul said unto the Kenites, Go, depart, get you down from among the Amalekites, lest I destroy you with them: for ye showed kindness to all the children of Israel when they came up out of Egypt; for the kindness which some of them showed to Israel, their posterity was saved. So the Kenites departed from among the Amalekites. This sheweth that they were wasted, and reduced to a low and weak condition; and as the kings of Assyria carried captive not only the Jews, but also the Syrians, (2 Kings xvi. 9.) and several other nations; (2 Kings xix. 12, 13.) it is most highly probable that the Kenites shared the same fate with their neighbours, and were carried away by the same torrent; and especially as we find some Kenites mentioned among the Jews after their return from captivity. (1 Chron. ii. 55.)

¹ Hic antiquiores illi Kenæi intelligendi. Le Clerc in locum. [Here these more ancient Kenites are to be understood. See Le Clerc on the passage.]

² Horum ego nomen deletum fuisse putaverim in eo temporis intervallo, quod inter Abrahami et Mosis ævum intercessit. Id certe necesse est, in obscuro latuisse tempore Josuæ, qui nec in divisione terræ, nec in censu gentium a se devictarum illorum meminit

The next verse, (ver. 23.) And he took up his parable, and said, Alas, who shall live when God doeth this! is by several commentators referred to what precedes; but it relates rather to what follows. And he took up his parable, and said: this preface is used when he uspian. [I am of opinion, that their names perished in the period, which intervened between the times of Abraham and of Moses. This however is certain, that their name lay in oblivion in the time of Joshua, who neither in his division of the land, nor in his enumeration of the nations subdued by the Israelites, any where makes mention of it.] Phaleg. Lib. iv. cap. xxxvi. col. 397.

enters upon some new subject. Alas, who shall live when God doeth this! this exclamation implies, that he is now prophesying of very distant and very calamitous times. And ships, or rather for ships, as the particle ἡ often signifies, and this instance among others is cited by ¹ Noldius. For ships shall come from the coast of Chittim, and shall afflict Asshur, and shall afflict Eber, and he also shall perish for ever. (ver. 24.)

Chittim was one of the sons of Javan, who was one of the sons of Japheth, by whose posterity the isles of the Gentiles (Gen. x. 5.) were divided and peopled, that is Europe, and the countries to which the Asiatics passed by sea, for such the Hebrews called islands. Chittim is used for the descendants of Chittim, as Asshur is put for the descendants of Asshur, that is, the Assyrians: but what people were the descendants of Chittim, or what country was meant by the coasts of Chittim, it is not so easy to determine. The critics and commentators are generally divided into two opinions; the one asserting that Macedonia, and the other that Italy was the country here intended: and each opinion is recommended and authorised by some of the first and greatest names in learning: as not to mention any others, ² Grotius and Le Clerc contend for the former, ³ Bochart and Vitringa are strenuous for the latter. But there is no reason why we may not adopt both opinions, and especially as it is very well known and agreed on all hands, that colonies came from Greece to Italy; and as ⁴ Josephus saith, that all islands and most maritime places are called Chethim by the Hebrews; and as manifest traces of the name are to be found in both countries; the ancient name of Macedonia having been ⁵ Macettia, and the Latins having before been called Ceti. What appears most probable is, that the sons of Chittim settled first in Asia Minor, where were a people called Cetëi, and a river called Cetium, according to ⁶ Homer and Strabo. From Asia they might pass over into the island Cyprus, which ⁷ Josephus saith was possessed by Chethim, and called Chethima; and where was also the city Cittium, famous for being the birth-place of Zeno, the founder of the sect of the Stoics, who was therefore called the Cittiean. And from thence they might send forth colonies into Greece and Italy. This plainly appears,

¹ Noldii Part. 1. 37.

² Grotius in locum et Clericus in locum, et in Genes. x. 4.

³ Bocharti Phaleg. Lib. iii. cap. v. et Vitringa in Iesaiam, xxiii. 1.

⁴ καὶ ἀπ' αὐτῆς νῆσοι τε πᾶσαι, καὶ τὰ πλείω τῶν παρὰ θάλασσαν, Χέθιμ ὑπὸ Ἑβραίων ὀνομάζονται. Et ab ea [Chethima] insulæ omnes, et pleraque loca maritima ab Hebræis Chethim dicuntur. [Translated in the text.] Antiq. Lib. i. cap. vi. p. 17. Edit. Hudson, Vol. I.

⁵ Bocharti Phaleg. Lib. iii. cap. v.

⁶ Homer, Odyss. xi. 520. et Scholiast. ibid. Strabo Geograph. Lib. xiii. p. 915, 916. Vol. II. Edit. Amstel. 1707.

⁷ Χέθιμος δὲ Κέθιμα τὴν νῆσον ἔσχευ. Κύπρος αὐτῇ νῦν καλεῖται. Chethimus autem Chetimam insulam occupavit: ipsa vero nunc Cyprus vocatur. [But Chethim possessed the island of Chethima, which is now called Cyprus.] Antiq. Lib. i. cap. vi. p. 17. Edit. Hudson, Vol. I.

that wherever the land of Chittim or the isles of Chittim are mentioned in Scripture, there are evidently meant some countries or islands in the Mediterranean.

Isaiah, prophesying of the destruction of Tyre by Nebuchadnezzar, saith, (xxiii. 1.) Howl, ye ships of Tarshish, that is, the ships trading from Tyre to Tartessus in Spain; for Tyre is laid waste: from the land of Chittim it is revealed to them; the news is brought first to the countries and islands in the Mediterranean, and from thence it is conveyed to Spain; and afterwards, (ver. 12.) Arise, pass over to Chittim, there also shalt thou have no rest; the inhabitants might fly from Tyre, and pass over to the countries and islands in the Mediterranean, but even there they should find no secure place of refuge; God's judgments should still pursue them. Jeremiah, expostulating with the Jews concerning their causeless revolt, saith, (ii. 10.) Pass over to the isles of Chittim, and see, that is, the isles of the Mediterranean which lie westward of Judea; and send unto Kedar, which was in Arabia and lay eastward of Judea; and consider diligently, and see if there be such a thing; go search east and west, and see if you can find any such instance of apostasy as this of the Jews. Ezekiel, describing the luxury of the Tyrians, even in their shipping, saith, (xxvii. 6.) according to the ¹ true reading and interpretation of the words, they made their benches of ivory inlaid on box, brought out of the isles of Chittim, that is, out of the isles of the Mediterranean, and most probably from Corsica, which was famous above all places for box, as Bochart has proved by the testimonies of Pliny, Theophrastus, and Diodorus. Daniel, foretelling the exploits of Antiochus Epiphanes, saith (xi. 29, 30.) that he should come towards the south, that is, invade Egypt; but the ships of Chittim shall come against him, therefore he shall be grieved and return: the ships of Chittim can be none other than the ships of the Romans, whose ² ambassadors coming from Italy to Greece, and from thence to Alexandria, obliged Antiochus, to his great grief and disappointment, to depart from Egypt without accomplishing his designs. The author of the first book of Maccabees, speaking of Alexander son of Philip the Macedonian, saith (i. 1.) that he came out of the land of Chettim: and afterwards, (viii. 5.) Perseus, the last king of Macedon, he calleth king of the Cittims. By these instances it appears, that the land of Chittim was a general name for the countries and islands in the Mediterranean: and therefore, when Balaam said that ships should come from the coast of Chittim, he might mean either Greece, or Italy, or both, the particular names of those countries being at that time perhaps unknown in the east: and the passage may be the better understood of both, because it was equally true of both, and Greece and Italy were alike the scourges of Asia.

And shall afflict Asshur. Asshur, as we noted before, signifies properly the descendants of Asshur, the Assyrians: but ¹ their name was of as large extent as their empire, and the Syrians and Assyrians are often confounded together, and mentioned as one and the same people. Now it is so well known as to require no particular proof, that the Grecians under the command of Alexander the Great subdued all those countries. The Romans afterwards extended their empire into the same regions; and, as ² Dion informs us, Assyria, properly so called, was conquered by the emperor Trajan.

¹ Bocharti Phaleg. Lib. iii. cap. 5. et Hierozoic. Pars prior, Lib. ii. cap. xxiv.

² Livii Lib. xlv. cap. x. xi. xii. et Polyb. Legat. p. 915, 916. Edit. Casaubon.

And shall afflict Eber. Two interpretations are proposed of the word Eber, either the posterity of a man so called, or the people who dwelt on the other side of the river Euphrates. If by Eber we understand the posterity of Eber, as by Asshur the posterity of Asshur, which appears a very natural construction; then Balaam, who was commissioned to bless Israel at first, prophesied evil concerning them at last, though under another name; but men and manners usually degenerate in a long course of time; and as the virtues of the progenitors might entitle them to a blessing, so the vices of the descendants might render them obnoxious to a curse. However, we may avoid this seeming inconsistency, if we follow the other interpretation, and by Eber understand the people who dwelt on the other side of the river Euphrates, which sense is given by ³ Onkelos, and is approved by several of the ancients, as well as by many of the most able commentators among the moderns, and is particularly enforced by a learned ⁴ professor of eminent skill in the oriental languages. The two members of the period would then better connect together, and the sense of the latter would be somewhat exegetical of the former; and shall afflict Asshur and shall afflict Eber, shall afflict the Assyrians and other neighbouring nations bordering upon the river Euphrates. And this interpretation I would readily embrace, if I could see any instance of a parallel expression. Beyond the river, meaning Euphrates, is indeed a phrase that sometimes occurs in Scripture, and the concordance will supply us with instances: but where doth beyond alone ever bear that signification? I know Gen. x. 21. is usually cited for this purpose; but that text is as much controverted as this, and the question is the same there as here, whether Eber be the proper name of a man, or only a preposition signifying beyond, and beyond signifying the people beyond the river Euphrates: or in other words, whether the passage should be translated the father of all the children of Eber, or the father of all the children of the people on the other side of the river Euphrates. Isaiah's manner of speaking of the same people is by

¹ Tam latè patuit hoc nomen quam latè patuit imperium,—multi veterum Syros et Assyrios pro iisdem habent. [This name extended as widely as their empire. Many of the ancients consider the Syrians and the Assyrians as the same people.] Bocharti Phaleg. Lib. ii. cap. iii. col. 72.

² Dionis Hist. Rom. Lib. lxxviii. p. 783. Edit. Leunclav. Hanov. 1606.

³ Et subijcient trans flumen Euphratem. [And they shall subdue beyond the river Euphrates.] Onk.

⁴ Hyde Hist. Relig. Vet. Pers. cap. ii. p. 52—57.

them beyond the river, by the king of Assyria: (vii. 20.) and one would expect the like here, shall afflict Asshur, and shall afflict them beyond the river. But whichever of these interpretations we prefer, the prophecy was alike fulfilled. If we understand it of the people bordering upon the Euphrates, they as well as the Assyrians were subdued both by the Grecians and Romans. If we understand it of the posterity of Eber, the Hebrews were afflicted, though not much by Alexander himself, yet by his successors the Seleucidæ, and particularly by Antiochus Epiphanes, who spoiled Jerusalem, defiled the temple, and slew all those who adhered to the law of Moses. (1 Macc. i.) They were worse afflicted by the Romans, who not only subdued and oppressed them, and made their country a province of the empire, but at last took away their place and nation, and sold and dispersed them over the face of the earth.

And he also shall perish for ever, that is, Chittim, who is the main subject of this part of the prophecy, and whose ships were to afflict Asshur and to afflict Eber: but this notwithstanding, he also shall be even to perdition, he also shall be destroyed as well as Amalek, for in the original the words are the same concerning both. He in the singular number cannot well refer to both Asshur and Eber. He must naturally signify Chittim, the principal agent: and if by Chittim be meant the Grecians, the Grecian empire was entirely subverted by the Roman; if the Romans, the Roman empire was in its turn broken into pieces by the incursion of the northern nations. The name only of the Roman empire and Cæsarean majesty is subsisting at this day, and is transferred to another country and another people.

It appears, then, that Balaam was a prophet divinely inspired, or he could never have foretold so many distant events, some of which are fulfilling in the world at this time: and what a singular honour was it to the people of Israel, that a prophet called from another country, and at the same time a wicked man, should be obliged to bear testimony to their righteousness and holiness? The commendations of an enemy, among enemies, are commendations indeed. And Moses did justice to himself as well as to his nation in recording these transactions. They are not only a material part of his history, but are likewise a strong confirmation of the truth of his religion. Balaam's bearing witness to Moses is somewhat like Judas's attesting the innocence of Jesus.

VI.

MOSES'S PROPHECY OF A PROPHET LIKE UNTO HIMSELF.

MOSES is a valuable writer, as upon many accounts, so particularly upon this, that he hath not only preserved and transmitted to posterity several ancient prophecies, but hath likewise shown himself a prophet, and inserted several predictions of his own. Among these none is more memorable than that of another prophet to be raised like unto himself. He was now about to leave his people, and comforts them with the promise of another prophet; Deut. xviii. 15. The Lord thy God will raise up unto thee a prophet from the midst of thee, of thy brethren, like unto me; unto him ye shall hearken. The same is repeated at ver. 18. in the name of God, I will raise them up a prophet from among their brethren, like unto thee, and will put my words in his mouth, and he shall speak unto them all that I shall command him. It is farther added at ver. 19. And it shall come to pass, that whosoever will not hearken unto my words which he shall speak in my name, I will require it of him. Plain as this prophecy is, it hath strangely been perverted and misapplied: but I conceive nothing will be wanting to the right understanding both of the prophecy and the completion, if we can show first, what prophet was here particularly intended, if we show secondly, that this prophet resembled Moses in more respects than any other person ever did, and if we show thirdly, that the people have been and still are severely punished for their infidelity and disobedience to this prophet.

I. We will endeavour to show what prophet was here particularly intended. Some have been of opinion,¹ that Joshua was the person; because he is said in Ecclesiasticus (xlv. 1.) to have been successor of Moses in prophecies: and as the people were commanded to hearken unto this prophet, unto him ye shall hearken; so they said unto Joshua, (i. 17.) According as we hearkened unto Moses in all things, so will we hearken unto thee. Some again have imagined,² that Jeremiah was the person; because he frequently applies (say they) the words of Moses; and Abarbinel, in his preface to his commentary upon Jeremiah, reckons up fourteen particulars wherein they resemble each other, and observes that Jeremiah prophesied forty years, as Moses also did. Others, and those many more in number,³ understand this neither of Joshua, nor of Jeremiah, nor of any single person, but of a succession of prophets to be raised up like unto Moses; because (say they) the people being here forbidden to follow after enchanters and diviners, as other nations did, nothing would have secured them effectually from following after them, but having true prophets of their own, whom they might consult upon occasion; and the latter are opposed to the former. But still the propounders and favourers of these different opinions, I think, agree generally in this, that though Joshua, or Jeremiah, or a succession of prophets was primarily intended, yet the main end and ultimate scope of the prophecy was the Messiah: and indeed there appear some very good reasons for understanding it of him principally, if not of him solely, besides the preference of a literal to a typical interpretation.

¹ See Munster, Drusius, Fagius, Calmet, &c.

² See Munster, Fagius, Patrick, Calmet, &c.

³ See Fagius, Poole, Le Clerc, Calmet, &c.

There is a passage in the conclusion of this book of Deuteronomy, which plainly refers to this prophecy, and entirely refutes the notion of Joshua's being the prophet like unto Moses. And Joshua the son of Nun was full of the spirit of wisdom; for Moses had laid his hands upon him: and the children of Israel hearkened unto him, and did as the Lord commanded Moses. And there arose not a prophet since in Israel like unto Moses, whom the Lord knew face to face; In all the signs and the wonders which the Lord sent him to do, &c. We cannot be certain at what time, or by what hand this addition was made to the sacred volume: but it must have been made after the death of Moses; and consequently Joshua was not a prophet like unto Moses in the opinion of the Jewish church, both of those who made and of those who received this addition as canonical Scripture. There arose not a prophet since in Israel; the manner of expression plainly implies, that this addition must have been made at some considerable distance of time after the death of Moses; and consequently the Jewish church had no conception of a perpetual succession of prophets to be raised up like unto Moses: and if this addition was made, as it is commonly believed to have been made, by Ezra after the Babylonish captivity, then it is evident, that neither Jeremiah nor any of the ancient prophets was esteemed like unto Moses. Consider what are the peculiar marks and characters, wherein it is said that none other prophet had ever resembled Moses. There arose not a prophet since in Israel like unto Moses, whom the Lord knew face to face, in all the signs and the wonders which the Lord sent him to do. And which of the prophets ever conversed so frequently and familiarly with God, face to face? which of them ever wrought so many and so great miracles? No body was ever equal or comparable to Moses in these respects, but Jesus the Messiah.

God's declaration too, upon occasion of Miriam's and Aaron's sedition, plainly evinces that there was to be no prophet in the Jewish church, and much less a succession of prophets like unto Moses. Miriam and Aaron grew jealous of Moses, and mutinied against him, saying, Hath the Lord indeed spoken only by Moses? hath he not spoken also by us? (Numb. xii. 2.) The controversy was of such importance, that God himself interposed; and what was his determination of the case? If there be a prophet among you, I the Lord will make myself known unto him in a vision, and will speak unto him in a dream. My servant Moses is not so, who is faithful in all mine house. With him will I speak mouth to mouth, even apparently, and not in dark speeches; and the similitude of the Lord shall he behold: wherefore then were ye not afraid to speak against my servant Moses? (ver. 6, 7, 8.) We see here that a great difference was made between Moses and other prophets, and also wherein that difference lay. God revealed himself unto other prophets in dreams and visions, but with Moses he conversed more openly, mouth to mouth, or, as it is said elsewhere, face to face: and Moses saw the similitude of the Lord. These were singular privileges and prerogatives, which eminently distinguished Moses from all the other prophets of the Jewish dispensation: and yet there was a prophet to be raised up like unto Moses: but who ever resembled Moses in these superior advantages, but Jesus the Messiah?

It is likewise no inconsiderable argument, that the letter of the text favours our interpretation. The word is in the singular number, The Lord thy God will raise up unto thee a prophet; and why then should we understand it of a succession of prophets? why should we depart from the literal construction, without any apparent necessity for it? Other nations hearkened unto enchanters and diviners, but the Lord would not suffer them so to do; he had given them a better guide already, and would raise up unto them another prophet, superior to all the enchanters and diviners in the world: unto him they should hearken.

Moreover, it is implied, that this prophet should be a lawgiver. A prophet like unto thee; not simply a prophet, but a prophet like unto Moses, that is a second lawgiver, as ¹Eusebius explains it. The reason too that is assigned for sending this prophet, will evince that he was to be vested with this character. The people had requested, that the divine laws might not be delivered to them in so terrible and awful a manner, as they had been in Horeb. God approved their request, and promised, therefore, that he would raise up unto them a prophet like unto Moses, a lawgiver who should speak unto them his commands in a familiar and gentle way. This prophet, therefore, was to be a lawgiver; but none of the Jewish prophets were lawgivers, in all the intermediate time between Moses and Christ.

If we farther appeal unto fact, we shall find that there never was any prophet, and much less a succession of prophets, whom the Jews esteemed like unto Moses. The highest degree of inspiration they term the ²Mosaical, and enumerate several particulars, wherein that hath the pre-eminence and advantage above all others. There was, indeed, in consequence of this prophecy, a general expectation of some extraordinary prophet to arise, which prevailed particularly about the time of our Saviour. The Jews then, as well as

¹ Eusebii Demons. Evangel. Lib. i. cap. iii. p. 6; Lib. ix. cap. 11. p. 443. Edit. Paris, 1628.

² See Smith's Discourse of Prophecy, chap. ii. and xi., wherein it is shown from Maimonides, that Moses's inspiration excelled all others in four particulars. 1. All other prophets prophesied in a dream or vision, but Moses waking and standing. 2. All other prophets prophesied by the help or ministry of an angel, but Moses prophesied without the ministry of an angel. 3. All other prophets were afraid, and troubled, and fainted, but Moses was not so, for the Scripture saith that God spake to him as a man speaketh to his friend. 4. None of the prophets did prophesy at what time they would, save Moses.

¹ since, understood and applied this prophecy to the Messiah, the only prophet whom they will ever allow to be as great or greater than Moses. When our Saviour had fed five thousand men by a miracle, like that of Moses, who fed the Israelites in the wilderness, then those men said, This is of a truth that prophet that should come into the world. (John vi. 14.) St. Peter and St. Stephen directly apply the prophecy to him; (Acts iii. 22, 23; vii. 37.) and they may very well be justified for so doing, for he fully answers all the marks and characters which are here given of the prophet like unto Moses. He had immediate communication with the Deity, and God spake to him face to face, as he did to Moses. He performed signs and wonders as great or greater than those of Moses. He was a law-giver as well as Moses. I will raise them up a prophet, saith God; and the people glorified God, saying, That a great prophet is risen up among us. (Luke vii. 16.) I will put my words in his mouth, saith God, in Hebrew, will give my words; and our Saviour saith, I have given unto them the words which thou gavest me. (John xvii. 8.) He shall speak unto them all that I shall command him, saith God; and our Saviour saith, I have not spoken of myself; but the Father which sent me, he gave me a commandment, what I should say, and what I should speak. And I know that his commandment is life everlasting: whatsoever I speak therefore, even as the Father said unto me, so I speak. (John xii. 49, 50.)

II. We shall be more and more confirmed in this opinion, when we consider the great and striking likeness between Moses and Jesus Christ, and that the latter resembled the former in more respects than any other person ever did. Notice hath been taken already of some instances, wherein they resemble each other, of God speaking to both face to face, of both performing signs and wonders, of both being lawgivers: and in these respects none of the ancient prophets were like unto Moses. None of them were law-givers; they only interpreted and enforced the law of Moses. None of them performed so many and so great wonders. None of them had such clear communications with God; they all saw visions, and dreamed dreams. Moses and Jesus Christ are the only two who perfectly resemble each other in these respects. But a more exact and particular comparison may be drawn between them, and hath been drawn by two eminent hands, by one of the best and ablest of the ancient fathers, and by one of the most learned and ingenious of modern divines; and, as we cannot pretend to add any thing to them, we must be content to copy from them.

Eusebius, treating of the prophecies concerning Christ, ² produceth first this of Moses: and then asketh, which of the prophets after Moses, Isaiah for instance, or Jeremiah, or Ezekiel, or Daniel, or any other of the twelve, was a lawgiver, and performed things like unto Moses? Moses first rescued the Jewish nation from Egyptian superstition and idolatry, and taught them the true theology; Jesus Christ in like manner was the first teacher of true religion and virtue to the Gentiles. Moses confirmed his religion by miracles; and so likewise did Christ. Moses delivered the Jewish nation from Egyptian servitude; and Jesus Christ all mankind from the power of evil demons. Moses promised a holy land, and therein a happy life to those who kept the law: and Jesus Christ a better country, that is a heavenly, to all righteous souls. Moses fasted forty days: and so likewise did Christ. Moses supplied the people with bread in the wilderness: and our Saviour fed five thousand at one time, and four thousand at another, with a few loaves. Moses went himself, and led the people through the midst of the sea; and Jesus Christ walked on the sea, and enabled Peter to walk likewise. Moses stretched out his hand over the sea, and the Lord caused the sea to go backward; and our Saviour rebuked the wind and the sea, and there was a great calm. Moses's face shone, when he descended from the mount, and our Saviour's did shine as the sun in his transfiguration. Moses by his prayers cured Miriam of her leprosy; and Christ with greater power by a word healed several lepers. Moses performed wonders by the finger of God; and Jesus Christ by the finger of God did cast out devils. Moses changed Oshea's name to Joshua; and our Saviour did Simon's to Peter. Moses constituted seventy rulers over the people; and our Saviour appointed seventy disciples. Moses sent forth twelve men to spy out the land; and our Saviour twelve apostles to visit all nations. Moses gave several excellent moral precepts; and our Saviour carried them to the highest perfection.

¹ See authorities cited in Bishop Chandler's Defence of Christianity, chap. vi. sect. ii. p. 307, 3d edit.

² Eusebii Demons. Evangel. Lib. iii. cap. ii. p. 90—94. Edit. Paris, 1628.

Dr. Jortin ¹ hath enlarged upon these hints of Eusebius, and made several improvements and additions to them. Moses in his infancy was wonderfully preserved from the destruction of all the male children; so was Christ. Moses fled from his country to escape the hands of the king; so did Christ, when his parents carried him into Egypt: afterwards the Lord said to Moses in Midian, Go, return into Egypt; for all the men are dead which sought thy life; (Exod. iv. 19.) so the angel of the Lord said to Joseph in almost the same words, Arise, and take the young child, and go into the land of Israel; for they are dead which sought the young child's life; (Matt. ii. 20.) pointing him out as it were for that prophet, who should arise like unto Moses. Moses refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter, choosing rather to suffer affliction. Christ refused to be made king, choosing rather to suffer affliction. Moses, says St. Stephen, was learned, ἐπαιδεύθη, in all the wisdom of the Egyptians, and Josephus (Ant. Jud. ii. 9.) says that he was a very forward and accomplished youth, and had wisdom and knowledge beyond his years; St. Luke observes of Christ, that he increased (betimes) in wisdom and stature, and in favour with God and man, and his discourses in the temple with the doctors, when he was twelve years old, were a proof of it. Moses contended with the magicians, who were forced to acknowledge the divine power by which he was assisted; Christ ejected evil spirits, and received the same acknowledgments from them. Moses was not only a lawgiver, a prophet, and a worker of miracles, but a king and a priest; in all these offices the resemblance between Moses and Christ was singular. Moses brought darkness over the land; the sun withdrew his light at Christ's crucifixion: and as the darkness which was spread over Egypt was followed by the destruction of their first-born, and of Pharaoh and his host; so the darkness at Christ's death was the forerunner of the destruction of the Jews. Moses foretold the calamities which would befall the nation for their disobedience; so did Christ. The spirit which was in Moses was conferred in some degree upon the seventy elders, and they prophesied; Christ conferred miraculous powers upon his seventy disciples. Moses was victorious over powerful kings and great nations; so was Christ by the effects of his religion, and by the fall of those who persecuted his church. Moses conquered Amalek by holding up both his hands; Christ overcame his and our enemies when his hands were fastened to the cross. Moses interceded for transgressors, and caused an atonement to be made for them, and stopped the wrath of God; so did Christ. Moses ratified a covenant between God and the people by sprinkling them with blood; Christ with his own blood. Moses desired to die for the people, and prayed that God would forgive them, or blot him out of his book; Christ did more, he died for sinners. Moses instituted the pass-over, when a lamb was sacrificed, none of whose bones were to be broken, and whose blood protected the people from destruction; Christ was that paschal lamb. Moses lifted up the serpent, that they who looked upon him might be healed of their mortal wounds; Christ was that serpent. All Moses's affection towards the people, all his cares and toils on their account, were repaid by them with ingratitude, murmuring, and rebellion; the same returns the Jews made to Christ for all his benefits. Moses was ill used by his own family, his brother and sister rebelled against him; there was a time when Christ's own brethren believed not in him. Moses had a very wicked and perverse generation committed to his care and conduct, and to enable him to rule them, miraculous powers were given to him, and he used his utmost endeavour to make the people obedient to God, and to save them from ruin; but in vain; in the space of forty years they all fell in the wilderness except two: Christ also was given to a generation not less wicked and perverse, his instructions and his miracles were lost upon them, and in about the same space of time, after they had rejected him, they were destroyed. Moses was very meek above all men that were on the face of the earth; so was Christ. The people could not enter into the land of promise till Moses was dead; by the death of Christ the kingdom of heaven was open to believers. In the death of Moses and Christ there is also a resemblance of some circumstances: Moses died, in one sense, for the iniquities of the people; it was their rebellion which was the occasion of it, which drew down the displeasure of God upon him; Moses went up, in the sight of the people, to the top of mount Nebo, and there he died, when he was in perfect vigour, when his eye was not dim, nor his natural force abated: Christ suffered for the sins of men, and was led up, in the presence of the people, to mount Calvary, where he died in the flower of his age, and when he was in his full natural strength. Neither Moses nor Christ, as far as we may collect from sacred history, were ever sick, or felt any bodily decay or infirmity, which would have rendered them unfit for the toils they underwent; their sufferings were of another kind. Moses was buried, and no man knew where his body lay; nor could the Jews find the body of Christ. Lastly, as Moses a little before death promised another prophet, so Christ another Comforter.

¹ Remarks on Ecclesiastical History, Vol. I. p. 203—222.

The great similitude consists in their both being lawgivers, which no prophet ever was besides Moses and Christ. They may resemble each other in several other features, and a fruitful imagination may find out a likeness where there is none. But as the same excellent writer concludes, "Is this similitude and correspondence in so many things between Moses and Christ the effect of mere chance? Let us search all the records of universal history, and see if we can find a man who was so like to Moses as Christ was, and so like to Christ as Moses was. If we cannot find such a one, then have we found him of whom Moses in the law, and the prophets did write, Jesus of Nazareth, the Son of God."

III. There is no want of many words to prove, for it is visible to all the world, that the people have been and still are severely punished for their infidelity and disobedience to this prophet. The prophecy is clear and express; Unto him ye shall hearken: And it shall come to pass that whosoever will not hearken unto my words, which he shall speak in my name, I will require it of him, that is, I will severely punish him for it, as the phrase signifies elsewhere. The antecedent is put for the consequent: judges first inquired, then punished: and the Seventy translate it, ¹ I will take vengeance of him. This prophecy, as we have proved at large, evidently relates to Jesus Christ. God himself in a manner applies it to him: for when he was transfigured, (Matt. xvii. 5.) there came a voice out of the cloud, which said, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased; hear ye him: alluding plainly to the words of Moses, Unto him ye shall hearken, and so pointing him out for the prophet like unto Moses. St. Peter, as we noted before, directly applies it to our Saviour, (Acts iii. 22, 23.) For Moses truly said unto the fathers, A prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you, of your brethren, like unto me; him shall ye hear in all things whatsoever he shall say unto you: And it shall come to pass, that every soul which will not hear that prophet, shall be destroyed from among the people; which is the sense rather than the words of the prophecy. And hath not this terrible denunciation been fully executed upon the Jews? Was not the complete excision of that incredulous nation, soon after Jesus had finished his ministry among them, and his apostles had likewise preached in vain, the fulfilling of the threat upon them for not hearkening unto him? We may be the more certain of this application, as our Saviour himself not only denounced the same destruction, but also foretold the signs, the manner, and the circumstances of it, with a particularity and exactness that will amaze us, as we shall see in a proper place: and those of the Jews who believed in his name, by remembering the caution and following the advice which he had given them, escaped from the general ruin of their country, like firebrands plucked out of the fire. The main body of the nation either perished in their infidelity, or were carried captive into all nations; and have they not ever since persisted in the same infidelity, been obnoxious to the same punishment, and been a vagabond, distressed, and miserable people in the earth? The hand of God was scarce ever more visible in any of his dispensations. We must be blind not to see it: and seeing, we cannot but admire and adore it. What other probable account can they themselves give of their long captivity, dispersion, and misery? Their former captivity for the punishment of all their wickedness and idolatry lasted only seventy years: but they have lived in their present dispersion, even though they have been no idolaters, now these seventeen hundred years, and yet without any immediate prospect of their restoration: and what enormous crime could have drawn down, and unrepented of still continues to draw down, these heavy judgments upon them? We say that they were cut off for their infidelity; and that when they shall turn to the faith, they will be grafted in again. One would think it should be worth their while to try the experiment. Sure we are, that they have long been monuments of God's justice; we believe, that upon their faith and repentance they will become again objects of his mercy: and in the mean time with St. Paul, (Rom. x. 1.) our heart's desire and prayer to God for Israel is, that they may be saved.

¹ ἐγὼ ἐκδικήσω ἐξ αὐτοῦ. [I will take vengeance of him.] Sept.

VII.

PROPHECIES OF MOSES CONCERNING THE JEWS.

It is observable that the prophecies of Moses abound most in the latter part of his writings. As he drew nearer his end, it pleased God to open to him larger prospects of things. As he was about to take leave of the people, he was enabled to disclose unto them more particulars of their future state and condition. The design of this work will permit us to take notice of such only as have some reference to these later ages: and we will confine ourselves principally to the twenty-eighth chapter of Deuteronomy, the greater part whereof we may see accomplished in the world at this present time.

This great prophet and lawgiver is here proposing at large to the people the blessings for obedience, and the curses for disobedience: and indeed he had foretold at several times and upon several occasions, that they should be happy or miserable in the world, as they were obedient or disobedient to the law that he had given them. And could there be any stronger evidence of the Divine original of the Mosaical law? and hath not the interposition of Providence been wonderfully remarkable in their good or bad fortune? and is not the truth of the prediction fully attested by the whole series of their history, from their first settlement in Canaan to this very day? But he is larger and more particular in recounting the curses than the blessings, as if he had a prescience of the people's disobedience, and foresaw that a larger portion and longer continuation of the evil would fall to their share, than of the good. I know that some critics make a division of these prophecies, and imagine that one part relates to the former captivity of the Jews, and to the calamities which they suffered under the Chaldæans: and that the other part relates to the latter captivity of the Jews, and to the calamities which they suffered under the Romans: but there is no need of any such distinction: there is no reason to think that any such was intended by the author; several prophecies of the one part as well as of the other have been fulfilled at both periods, but they have all more amply been fulfilled during the latter period; and there cannot be a more lively picture than they exhibit, of the state of the Jews at present.

1. We will consider them with a view to the order of time rather than the order wherein they lie; and we may not improperly begin with this passage, ver. 49. The Lord shall bring a nation against thee from far, from the end of the earth, as swift as the eagle flieth, a nation whose tongue thou shalt not understand: and the Chaldæans might be said to come from far, in comparison with the Moabites, Philistines, and other neighbouring nations, which used to infest Judea. Much the same description is given of the Chaldæans by

Jeremiah, (v. 15.) Lo, I will bring a nation upon you from far, O house of Israel, saith the Lord: it is a mighty nation, it is an ancient nation, a nation whose language thou knowest not, neither understandest what they say. He compares them in like manner to eagles, (Lam. iv. 19.) Our persecutors are swifter than the eagles of the heaven: they pursued us upon the mountains, they laid wait for us in the wilderness. But this description cannot be applied to any nation with such propriety as to the Romans. They were truly brought from far, from the end of the earth. Vespasian and Adrian, the two great conquerors and destroyers of the Jews, both came from commanding here in Britain. The Romans too, for the rapidity of their conquests, might very well be compared to eagles, and perhaps not without an allusion to the standard of the Roman armies, which was an eagle: and their language was more unknown to the Jews than the Chaldee.

2. The enemies of the Jews are farther characterized in the next verse. A nation of fierce countenance, which shall not regard the person of the old, nor show favour to the young. Such were the Chaldæans; and the sacred historian saith expressly, (2 Chron. xxxvi. 17.) that for the wickedness of the Jews God brought upon them the king of the Chaldees, who slew their young men with the sword, in the house of their sanctuary, and had no compassion upon young man or maiden, old man, or him that stooped for age; he gave them all into his hand. Such also were the Romans; for when Vespasian entered Gadara, ¹ Josephus saith, that “he slew all man by man, the Romans showing mercy to no age, out of hatred to the nation, and remembrance of their former injuries.” The like slaughter was made at Gamala, ² “For nobody escaped besides two women, and they escaped by concealing themselves from the rage of the Romans. For they did not so much as spare young children, but every one at that time snatching up many, cast them down from the citadel.”

3. Their enemies were also to besiege and take their cities, ver. 52. And he shall besiege thee in all thy gates, until thy high and fenced walls come down, wherein thou trustedst, throughout all thy land. So Shalmaneser, king of Assyria, came up against Samaria, and besieged it, and at the end of three years they took it. (2 Kings xviii. 9, 10.) So did Sennacherib, king of Assyria, come up against all the fenced cities of Judah, and took them. (Ibid. ver. 13.) And Nebuchadnezzar and his captains took and spoiled Jerusalem, burnt the city and temple, and brake down the walls of Jerusalem round about. (Ibid. xxv. 10.) So likewise the Romans, as we may read in Josephus's history of the Jewish war, demolished several fortified places, before they besieged and destroyed Jerusalem. And the Jews may very well be said to have trusted in their high and fenced walls, for they seldom ventured a battle in the open field. They confided in the strength and situation of Jerusalem, as the Jebusites, the former inhabitants of the place, had done before them: (2 Sam. v. 6, 7.) insomuch that they are represented saying, (Jer. xxi. 13.) Who shall come down against us? or who shall enter into our habitation? Jerusalem was, indeed, a very strong place, and wonderfully fortified, both by nature and art, according to the description of ¹ Tacitus, as well as of Josephus; and yet ² how many times was it taken! It was taken by Sishak, king of Egypt, by Nebuchadnezzar, by Antiochus Epiphanes, by Pompey, by Sosius and Herod, before its final destruction by Titus.

¹ Καὶ παρελθὼν εἶσω, πάντας ἡβηδὸν ἀναιρεῖ, μηδεμίαν τῶν Ῥωμαίων ἡλικίας ἔλεον ποιουμένων, μισεῖ τε πρὸς τὸ ἔθνος, καὶ μνήμη τῆς κατὰ τὸν Κέστιον αὐτῶν παρανομίας. et deinde in eam ingressus, puberes omnes interfici jussit; Romanis nulli ætati misericordiam adhibentibus, tam ex odio in gentem, quam memoria iniquitatis illorum in Cestium. [“And having entered into it, he ordered all that were grown up to be slain: the Romans showing mercy to no age, both on account of their hatred to the whole nation, and because of their recollection of the wrong which they had done to Cestius.”] Bell. Jud. Lib. iii. cap. vii. sect. i. p. 1128. Edit. Hudson.

² Δεσώθη δὲ πλὴν δύο γυναικῶν οὐδεὶς—διεσώθησαν δὲ, τὰς παρὰ τὴν ἄλυσιν ὄργας Ῥωμαίων λαθοῦσαι· οὐδὲ γὰρ νηπίων ἐφείδοντο, πολλὰ δὲ ἕκαστος τότε ἀρπάζοντες ἐσφενδύων ἀπὸ τῆς ἀκρας. Nemo autem præter duas mulieres interitum effugit—evaserunt autem, quod iræ Romanorum in excidio sese subduxerint. Nec enim infantibus pepercerunt, multos vero singuli eo tempore raptos ex arce projiciebant. [Translated in the text.] Bell. Jud. Lib. iv. cap. i. sect. x. p. 1165. Edit. Hudson.

4. In these sieges they were to suffer much, and especially from famine, in the straightness wherewith their enemies should distress them, ver. 53, &c. And accordingly, when the king of Syria besieged Samaria, there was a great famine in Samaria, and behold they besieged it until an ass's head was sold for fourscore pieces of silver, and the fourth part of a cab of dove's dung for five pieces of silver. (2 Kings vi. 25.) And when Nebuchadnezzar besieged Jerusalem, the famine prevailed in the city, and there was no bread for the people of the land. (2 Kings xxv. 3.) And in the last siege of Jerusalem by the Romans there was a most terrible famine in the city, and Josephus hath given so melancholy an account of it, that we cannot read it without shuddering. He saith particularly, ³ that "women snatched the food out of the very mouths of their husbands, and sons of their fathers, and (what is most miserable) mothers of their infants:" and in ⁴ another place he saith, that "in every house, if there appeared any semblance of food, a battle ensued, and the dearest friends and relations fought with one another, snatching away the miserable provisions of life:" so literally

¹ Taciti Hist. Lib. v. Josephus de Bell. Jud. Lib. v. cap. iv. et v.

² See Josephus de Bell. Jud. Lib. vi. cap. ult. p. 1292. Edit. Hudson.

³ Γυναῖκες γοῦν ἀνδρῶν, καὶ παῖδες πατέρων, καὶ τὸ οἰκτρότατον μητέρες νηπίων ἐξήρπαζον ἐξ αὐτῶν τῶν στομάτων τὰς τροφάς. Siquidem uxores viris, et filii parentibus, et, quod omnium maxime miserabile erat, matres infantibus cibum ex ipso ore rapiebant. [Translated in the text.] Bell. Jud. Lib. v. cap. x. sect. iii. p. 1245.

⁴ Καθ' ἐκάστην γὰρ οἰκίαν, εἰ ποῦ τροφῆς παραφανείη σκιά, πόλεμος ἦν, καὶ διὰ χειρῶν ἐχώρουσι οἱ φίλτατοι πρὸς ἀλλήλους, ἐξαρπάζοντες τὰ ταλαίπωρα τῆς ψυχῆς ἐφόδια. Per singulas quippe domos sicubi vel umbra apparuisset cibi, bellum illico gerebatur et amicissimi quique inter se acriter dimicabant, sibi invicem misera vitæ subsidia eripientes. [Translated in the text.] Lib. vi. cap. iii. sect. iii. p. 1274. Edit. Hudson.

were the words of Moses fulfilled, ver. 54, &c. the man's eye shall be evil toward his brother, and toward the wife of his bosom, and toward his children, because he hath nothing left him in the siege, and in the straitness wherewith thine enemies shall distress thee in all thy gates, and in like manner the woman's eye shall be evil toward the husband of her bosom, and toward her son, and toward her daughter.

5. Nay, it was expressly foretold, that not only the men, but even the women should eat their own children. Moses had foretold the same thing before, Levit. xxvi. 29. Ye shall eat the flesh of your sons, and the flesh of your daughters shall ye eat. He repeats it here, ver. 53. And thou shalt eat the fruit of thine own body, the flesh of thy sons and of thy daughters: and more particularly, ver. 56, &c. The tender and delicate woman among you, who would not adventure to set the sole of her foot upon the ground, for delicateness and tenderness—she shall eat her children for want of all things secretly in the siege and straitness, wherewith thine enemies shall distress thee in thy gates. And it was fulfilled about 600 years after the time of Moses among the Israelites, when Samaria was besieged by the king of Syria, and two women agreed together, the one to give up her son to be boiled and eaten to-day, and the other to deliver up her son to be dressed and eaten to-morrow, and one of them was eaten accordingly. (2 Kings vi. 28, 29.) It was fulfilled again about 900 years after the time of Moses among the Jews in the siege of Jerusalem before the Babylonish captivity; and Baruch thus expresseth it, (ii. 1, &c.) The Lord hath made good his word, which he pronounced against us, to bring us great plagues, such as never happened under the whole heaven, as it came to pass in Jerusalem, according to the things that were written in the law of Moses, that a man should eat the flesh of his own son, and the flesh of his own daughter: and Jeremiah thus laments it in his Lamentations, (iv. 10.) The hands of the pitiful women have sodden their own children, they were their meat in the destruction of the daughter of my people. And again it was fulfilled above 1500 years after the time of Moses in the last siege of Jerusalem by Titus; and we read in Josephus particularly of a noble woman's killing and eating her own sucking child. Moses saith, The tender and delicate woman among you, who would not adventure to set the sole of her foot upon the ground for delicateness and tenderness: and there cannot be a more natural and lively description of a woman, who was according to ¹Josephus illustrious for her family and riches.

¹ Διὰ γένος καὶ πλοῦτον ἐπίσημος genere atque opibus illustris—[illustrious on account of her family and riches] ταύτης τὴν μὲν ἄλλην κτῆσιν οἱ τύραννοι διήρπασαν, κ. τ. λ. Hujus alias quidem facultates jam tyranni diriperant, &c. [The tyrants had plundered her of all her other possessions, &c.]—ἐπειρὶ δὲ πτήσασα τὸ μὲν ἥμισυ κατέσθιεν, τὸ δὲ λοιπὸν κατακαλύψασα ἐφύλαττεν coctum deinde ipsa quidem dimidium ejus comedit, adopertum vero reliquum servabat. [Afterwards having dressed her child, she devoured the one half of him, and covering up the remainder, she reserved it for another time.] Bell. Jud. Lib. vi. cap. iii. sect. iv. Edit. Hudson.

Moses saith, she shall eat them for want of all things: and according to Josephus she had been plundered of all her substance and provisions by the tyrants and soldiers. Moses saith, that she should do it secretly: according to Josephus, when she had boiled and eaten half, she covered up the rest, and kept it for another time. At so many different times and distant periods hath this prophecy been fulfilled; and one would have thought that such distress and horror had almost transcended imagination, and much less that any person could certainly have foreseen and foretold it.

6. Great numbers of them were to be destroyed, ver. 62. And ye shall be left few in number, whereas ye were as the stars of heaven for multitude. Now not to mention any other of the calamities and slaughters which they have undergone, there was in the last siege of Jerusalem by Titus an infinite multitude, saith ¹ Josephus, who perished by famine: and he computes, that during the whole siege, the number of those who were destroyed by that and by the war amounted to eleven hundred thousand, the people being assembled from all parts to celebrate the passover: and the same author hath given us an account of 1,240,490 destroyed in Jerusalem and other parts of Judea, besides 99,200 made prisoners; as ² Basnage has reckoned them up from that historian's account. Indeed there is not a nation upon earth that hath been exposed to so many massacres and persecutions. Their history abounds with them. If God had not given them a promise of a numerous posterity, the whole race would many a time have been extirpated.

7. They were to be carried into Egypt, and sold for slaves at a very low price, ver. 68. And the Lord shall bring thee into Egypt again, with ships: and there ye shall be sold unto your enemies for bondmen and bondwomen, and no man shall buy you. They had come out of Egypt triumphant, but now they should return thither as slaves. They had walked through the sea as dry land at their coming out, but now they should be carried thither in ships. They might be carried thither in the ships of the Tyrian or Sidonian merchants, or by the Romans who had a fleet in the Mediterranean: and this was a much safer way of conveying so many prisoners, than sending them by land. It appears from ³ Josephus that in the reigns of the two first Ptolemies many of the Jews were slaves in Egypt. And when Jerusalem was taken by Titus, ⁴ of the captives

¹ Τῶν δ' ὑπὸ τοῦ λιμοῦ φθειρομένων κατὰ τὴν πόλιν ἄπειρον μὲν ἔπιπτε τὸ πλῆθος. Eorum autem qui per civitatem fame perierunt infinita quidem cecidit multitudo. [But of them who perished by famine throughout the city, there was an infinite multitude.] Bell. Jud. Lib. vi. cap. iii. sect. iii. p. 1274.

Τῶν δ' ἀπολουμένων κατὰ πᾶσαν τὴν πολιορκίαν [ἀριθμὸς] μυριάδες ἑκατὸν καὶ δέκα. totius autem obsidionis tempore undecies centena hominum millia perierunt. [And during the whole time of the siege there perished eleven hundred thousand persons.] Ib. cap. ix. sect. iii. p. 1291. Edit. Hudson.

² Hist. of the Jews, Book i. chap. viii. sect. xix. See too the conclusion of Usher's Annals.

³ Joseph. Ant. Lib. xii. cap. i. et ii.

⁴ — τοὺς ὑπὲρ ἑπτακαίδεκα ἔτη δῆσας ἐπεμψεν εἰς τὰ κατ' Αἴγυπτον ἔργα. — οἱ who were above seventeen years he sent many bound to the works in Egypt; those under seventeen were sold: but so little care was taken of these captives, that eleven thousand of them perished for want. The markets were quite overstocked with them, so that Josephus says in another place, that they were sold with their wives and children at the lowest price, there being many to be sold and but few purchasers; so that hereby also was verified that of the Psalmist, (xliv. 13.) Thou sellest thy people for nought, and takest no money for them. And we learn from ¹ St. Jerome, that “after their last overthrow by Adrian, many thousands of them were sold, and those who could not be sold, were transported into Egypt, and perished by shipwreck or famine, or were massacred by the inhabitants.”

8. They were to be rooted out of their own land, ver. 63. And ye shall be plucked from off the land whither thou goest to possess it. They were indeed plucked from off their own land, when the ten tribes were carried into captivity by the king of Assyria, and other nations were planted in their stead; and when the two other tribes were carried away captive to Babylon, and when the Romans took away their place and nation, besides other captivities and transportations of the people. Afterwards, when the emperor Adrian had subdued the rebellious Jews, he published an ² edict, forbidding them, upon pain of death, to set foot in Jerusalem, or even to approach the country round about it. Tertullian and Jerome say, ³ that they were prohibited from entering into Judea. From that time to this their country hath been in the possession of foreign lords and masters, few of the Jews dwelling in it, and those only of a low servile condition. Benjamin of Tudela, in Spain, a celebrated Jew of the twelfth century, travelled into all parts to visit those of his own nation, and to learn an exact state of their affairs: and he ⁴ hath reported, that Jerusalem was almost entirely abandoned by the Jews. He found there not above two hundred persons, who were for the most part dyers of wool, and who every year purchased the privilege of the monopoly of that trade. They lived altogether under David's tower, and made there a very little figure. If Jeru-δ' ἐν τὸς ἐπτακαίδεκα ἐτῶν ἐπράθησαν· ἐφθάρησαν δ' αὐτῶν ἐν αἷς διέκρινεν ὁ Φρόντων ἡμέραις ὑπ' ἐνδείας, χίλιοι πρὸς τοῖς μυρίοις. annis XVII. majores vinctos ad metalla exercenda in Ægyptum misit;—Quicunque vero infra XVII. annum ætatis erant, sub corona venditi sunt. Iisdem autem diebus, dum a Frontone scecernebantur, ex inediâ perierunt XI. millia. [Having chained the males that were above seventeen years of age, he sent them down to the works which were in Egypt.—But such of them as were below that age were sold. And during the time that Fronto was separating them, eleven thousand perished through want.] Bell. Jud. Lib. vi. cap. ix. sect. ii. p. 1291. cap. viii. sect. ii. p. 1288. Edit. Hudson.

¹ — post ultimam eversionem quam sustinuerunt ab Adriano, multa hominum millia venundata sint; et quæ vendi non potuerint, translata in Ægyptum; et tam naufragio et fame quam gentium cæde truncata. [Translated in the text.] Hieron. in Zachariam, cap. xi. p. 1774. Vol. III. Edit. Benedict.

² Justin Martyr, Apol. Ima, p. 71. Edit. Thirlbii. Euseb. Eccles. Hist. Lib. iv. cap. vi.

³ Tertull. Apol. cap. xxi. p. 19. Edit. Rigaltii. Par. 1675. Hieron. in Isaiam, cap. vi. p. 65. in Dan. cap. ix. p. 1117. Vol. III. Edit. Benedict.

⁴ See Benjamin. Itin. and Basnage's Hist. of the Jews, Book vii. chap. vii.

salem had so few Jews in it, the rest of the holy land was still more depopulated. He found two of them in one city, twenty in another, most whereof were dyers. In other places there were more persons; but in upper Galilee, where the nation was in greatest repute after the ruin of Jerusalem, he found hardly any Jews at all. A very accurate and faithful ¹traveller of our own nation, who was himself also in the Holy Land, saith, that "it is for the most part now inhabited by Moors and Arabians; those possessing the valleys and these the mountains. Turks there be few: but many Greeks, with other Christians of all sects and nations, such as impute to the place an adherent holiness. Here be also some Jews, yet inherit they no part of the land, but in their own country do live as aliens."

9. But they were not only to be plucked off from their own land, but also to be dispersed into all nations, ver. 25. And thou shalt be removed into all the kingdoms of the earth; and again, ver. 64. And the Lord shall scatter thee among all people, from one end of the earth even unto the other. Nehemiah (i. 8, 9.) confesseth that these words were fulfilled in the Babylonish captivity; but they have more amply been fulfilled since the great dispersion of the Jews by the Romans. What people indeed have been scattered so far and wide as they? and where is the nation, which is a stranger to them, or to which they are strangers? They swarm in many parts of the east, are spread through most of the countries of Europe and Africa, and there are several families of them in the West Indies. They circulate through all parts where trade and money circulate; and are, as I may say, the brokers of the whole world.

10. But though they should be so dispersed, yet they should not be totally destroyed, but still subsist as a distinct people, as Moses had before foretold, Levit. xxvi. 44. And yet for all that, when they be in the land of their enemies, I will not cast them away, neither will I abhor them, to destroy them utterly, and to break my covenant with them. The Jewish nation, ²like the bush of Moses, hath been always burning, but is never consumed. And what a marvellous thing is it, that after so many wars, battles, and sieges, after so many fires, famines, and pestilences, after so many rebellions, massacres, and persecutions, after so many years of captivity, slavery, and misery, they are not destroyed utterly, and though scattered among all people, yet subsist as a distinct people by themselves? Where is any thing comparable to this to be found in all the histories, and in all the nations under the sun?

11. However, they should suffer much in their dispersion, and should not rest long in any place, ver. 65. And among these nations shalt thou find no ease, neither shall the sole of thy foot have rest. They have been so far from finding rest, that they have been banished from city to city, from country to country. In many places they have been banished, and recalled, and banished again. We will only just mention their great banishments in modern times, and from countries very well known. In the latter end of the thirteenth century they ¹ were banished from England by Edward I. and were not permitted to return and settle again till Cromwell's time. In the latter end of the fourteenth century they ² were banished from France (for the seventh time, says Mezeray) by Charles VI.; and ever since they have been only tolerated, they have not enjoyed entire liberty, except at Metz, where they have a synagogue. In the latter end of the fifteenth century ³ they were banished from Spain by Ferdinand and Isabella; and according to Mariana, there were a hundred and seventy thousand families, or, as some say, eight hundred thousand persons who left the kingdom: most of them paid dearly to John II. for a refuge in Portugal, but within a few years were expelled from thence also by his successor Emanuel. And in our own time, within these few years, they were banished from Prague by the queen of Bohemia.

¹ Sandys's Travels, Book iii. p. 114. 7th edit.

² Basnage's Hist. of the Jews, Book vi. chap. i. sect. i.

12. They should be oppressed and spoiled evermore; and their houses and vineyards, their oxen and asses should be taken from them, and they should be only oppressed and crushed alway, ver. 29, &c. And what frequent seizures have been made of their effects in almost all countries! how often have they been fined and fleeced by almost all governments! how often have they been forced to redeem their lives with what is almost as dear as their lives, their treasure! Instances are innumerable. We will only cite an ⁴ historian of our own, who says that Henry III. "always polled the Jews at every low ebb of his fortunes. One Abraham, who was found delinquent, was forced to pay seven hundred marks for his redemption. Aaron, another Jew, protested that the king had taken from him at times thirty thousand marks of silver, besides two hundred marks of gold, which he had presented to the queen. And in like manner he used many others of the Jews." And when they were banished in the reign of Edward I. their estates were confiscated, and immense sums thereby accrued to the crown.

13. Their sons and their daughters should be given unto another people, ver. 32. And in several countries, in Spain and Portugal particularly, their children have been taken from them by order of the government to be educated in the Popish religion. The ⁵ fourth council of Toledo ordered, that all their children should be taken from them for fear they should partake of their errors, and that they should be shut up in monasteries, to be instructed in the Christian

¹ See Kennet, Echard, and Basnage's Hist. of the Jews, Book vii. chap. xix.

² On enjoignit aux Juifs pour la septiesme-fois, &c. [It was enjoined the Jews for the seventh time, &c.] See Mezeray Abrégé Chronol. et Basnage, Book vii. chap. xviii.

³ See Mariana's Hist. of Spain, Book xxvi. chap. i. and vi. and Basnage, Book vii. chap. xxi.

⁴ Daniel in Kennet, Vol. I. p. 179.

⁵ See Basnage, Book vii. chap. xiii. sect. xiv.

truths. And when they were banished from Portugal, “the king,” says ¹ Mariana, “ordered all their children, under fourteen years of age, to be taken from them, and baptized: a practice not at all justifiable,” adds the historian, “because none ought to be forced to become Christians, nor children to be taken from their parents.”

14. They should be mad for the sight of their eyes which they should see, ver. 34. And into what madness, fury, and desperation have they been pushed by the cruel usage, extortions, and oppressions which they have undergone! We will allege only two similar instances, one from ancient and one from modern history. After the destruction of Jerusalem by Titus, ² some of the worst of the Jews took refuge in the castle of Masada, where being closely besieged by the Romans, they, at the persuasion of Eleazar their leader, first murdered their wives and children; then ten men were chosen by lot to slay the rest; this being done, one of the ten was chosen in like manner to kill the other nine, which having executed he set fire to the place, and then stabbed himself. There were nine hundred and sixty who perished in this miserable manner; and only two women and five boys escaped by hiding themselves in the aqueducts under ground. Such another instance we have in our English history. For ³ in the reign of Richard the First, when the people were in arms to make a general massacre of them, fifteen hundred of them seized on the city of York to defend themselves; but being besieged they offered to capitulate, and to ransom their lives with money. The offer being refused, one of them cried in despair, that it was better to die courageously for the law, than to fall into the hands of the Christians. Every one immediately took his knife and stabbed his wife and children. The men afterwards retired into the king’s palace, which they set on fire, in which they consumed themselves, with the palace and furniture.

15. They should serve other gods, wood and stone, ver. 36; and again, ver. 64, they should serve other gods, which neither they nor their fathers had known, even wood and stone. And is it not too common for the Jews in popish countries to comply with the idolatrous worship of the church of Rome, and to bow down to stocks and stones rather than their effects should be seized and confiscated? Here again we must cite the author, who hath most studied, and hath best written their modern history, and whom we have had occasion to quote several times in this discourse. “The Spanish and Portugal Inquisitions,” ⁴ saith he, “reduce them to the dilemma of being either hypocrites or burnt. The number of these dissemlers is very considerable; and it ought not to be concluded, that there are no Jews in Spain or Portugal, because they are not

¹ Mariana, Book xxvi. chap. vi.

² Josephus de Bell. Jud. Lib. vii. cap. viii. et ix. Edit. Hudson.

³ Basnage, Book vii. chap. x. sect. xx. who cites Matt. Paris, p. 111. et Polyd. Virgil, l. 14. p. 248.

⁴ Basnage, Book vii. chap. xxxiii. sect. xiv.

known; they are so much the more dangerous, for not only being very numerous, but confounded with the ecclesiastics, and entering into all ecclesiastical dignities." In another ¹ place he saith, "The most surprising thing is, that this religion spreads from generation to generation, and still subsists in the persons of dissemblers in a remote posterity. In vain the great lords of Spain ² make alliances, change their names, and take ancient scutcheons; they are still known to be of Jewish race, and Jews themselves. The convents of monks and nuns are full of them. Most of the canons, inquisitors, and bishops proceed from this nation. This is enough to make the people and clergy of this country tremble, since such sort of churchmen can only profane the sacraments, and want intention in consecrating the host they adore. In the meantime Orobio, who relates the fact, knew these dissemblers. He was one of them himself, and bent the knee before the sacrament. Moreover he brings proofs of his assertion, in maintaining, that there are in the synagogue of Amsterdam brothers and sisters and near relations to good families of Spain and Portugal; and even Franciscan monks, Dominicans, and Jesuits, who come to do penance, and make amends for the crime they have committed in dissembling."

16. They should become an astonishment, a proverb, and a by-word among all nations, ver. 37. And do we not hear and see this prophecy fulfilled almost every day? is not the avarice, usury, and hard-heartedness of a Jew grown proverbial? and are not their persons generally odious among all sorts of people? Mohammedans, Heathens, and Christians, however they may disagree in other points, yet generally agree in vilifying, abusing, and persecuting the Jews. In most places where they are tolerated, they are obliged to live in a separate quarter by themselves, (as they did here in the Old Jewry) and to wear some badge of distinction. Their very countenances commonly distinguish them from the rest of mankind. They are in all respects treated as if they were of another species. And when a great master of nature would draw the portrait of a Jew, how detestable a character hath he represented in the person of his Jew of Venice!

17. Finally, their plagues should be wonderful, even great plagues, and of long continuance, ver. 59. And have not their plagues continued now these 1700 years? Their former captivities were very short in comparison: and ³ Ezekiel and Daniel prophesied in the land of the Chaldæans: but now they have no true prophet to foretel an end of their calamities, they have only false Messiahs to delude them, and aggravate their misfortunes. In their former captivities they had the comfort of being conveyed to the same place; they dwelt together in the land of Goshen, they were carried together to Babylon: but now they are dispersed all over the face of the earth.

¹ Basnage, Book vii. chap. xxi. sect. xxvi.

² Limborch Collat. cum Jud. p. 102.

³ Basnage, Book vi. chap. i. sect. ii.

What nation hath suffered so much, and yet endured so long? what nation hath subsisted as a distinct people in their own country, so long as these have done in their dispersion into all countries? and what a standing miracle is this exhibited to the view and observation of the whole world?

Here are instances of prophecies, prophecies delivered above three thousand years ago, and yet as we see fulfilling in the world at this very time: and what stronger proofs can we desire of the divine legation of Moses? How these instances may affect others, I know not; but for myself I must acknowledge, they not only convince, but amaze and astonish me beyond expression. They are truly, as Moses foretold they would be, a sign and a wonder for ever, ver. 45, 46. Moreover all these curses shall come upon thee, and shall pursue thee and overtake thee, till thou be destroyed; because thou hearkenedst not unto the voice of the Lord thy God, to keep his commandments, and his statutes which he commanded thee: and they shall be upon thee for a sign and for a wonder, and upon thy seed for ever.

VIII.

PROPHECIES OF OTHER PROPHETS CONCERNING THE JEWS.

BESIDES the prophecies of Moses, there are others of other prophets, relative to the present state and condition of the Jews. Such are those particularly concerning the restoration of the two tribes of Judah and Benjamin from captivity, and the dissolution of the ten tribes of Israel; and those concerning the preservation of the Jews, and the destruction of their enemies; and those concerning the desolation of Judea; and those concerning the infidelity and reprobation of the Jews; and those concerning the calling and obedience of the Gentiles. And it may be proper to say something upon each of these topics.

I. It was foretold, that the ten tribes of Israel should be carried captive by the kings of Assyria, and that the two remaining tribes of Judah and Benjamin should be carried captive by the king of Babylon: but with this difference, that the two tribes should be restored, and return from their captivity, but the ten tribes should be dissolved and lost in theirs. Nay, not only the captivity and restoration of the two tribes were foretold, but the precise time of their captivity and restoration was also prefixed and determined by the prophet Jeremiah: (xxv. 11.) This whole land shall be a desolation, and an astonishment; and these nations shall serve the king of Babylon seventy years; and again (xxix. 10.) Thus saith the Lord, that after seventy years be accomplished at Babylon, I will visit you, and perform my good word towards you, in causing you to return to this place. This prophecy was first delivered (Jer. xxv. 1.) in the fourth year of Jehoiakim the son of Josiah king of Judah, that was the first year of Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon. And this¹ same year it began to be put in execution; for Nebuchadnezzar invaded Judea, besieged and took Jerusalem, made Jehoiakim his subject and tributary, transported the finest children of the royal family and of the nobility to Babylon, to be bred up there for eunuchs and slaves in his palace, and also carried away the vessels of the house of the Lord, and put them in the temple of his god at Babylon. Seventy years from this time will bring us down to the first year of Cyrus, (2 Chron. xxxvi. 22. Ezra i. 1.) when he made his proclamation for the restoration of the Jews, and for the rebuilding of the temple at Jerusalem. This computation of the seventy years captivity appears to be the truest, and most agreeable to Scripture. But if you fix the commencement of these seventy years at the time when Jerusalem was burnt and destroyed, their² conclusion will fall about the time when Darius issued his decree for rebuilding the temple, after the work had been stopped and suspended. Or if you fix their commencement at the time when Nebuzaradan carried away the last remainder of the people, and completed the desolation of the land, their³ conclusion will fall about the time when the temple was finished and dedicated, and the first passover was solemnized in it. "So that," as Dean Prideaux says, "taking it which way you will, and at what stage you please, the prophecy of Jeremiah will be fully and exactly accomplished concerning this matter." It may be said to have been accomplished at three different times, and in three different manners, and therefore possibly all might have been intended, though the first without doubt was the principal subject of the prophecy.

But the case was different with the ten tribes of Israel. It is very well known that Ephraim being the chief of the ten tribes is often put for all the ten tribes of Israel; and it was predicted by Isaiah (vii. 8.) Within threescore and five years shall Ephraim be broken, that it be not a people. This prophecy was delivered in the first year of Ahaz, king of Judah; for in the latter end of his father Jotham's reign, (2 Kings xv. 37.) Rezin, king of Syria, and Pekah, king of Israel, began their expedition against Judah. They went up towards Jerusalem to war against it in the beginning of the reign of Ahaz; and it was to comfort him and the house of David in these difficulties and distresses, that the prophet Isaiah was commissioned to assure him, that the kings of Syria and Israel should remain only the heads of their respective cities, they should not prevail against Jerusalem, and within sixty and five years Israel should be so broken as to be no more a people. The learned ¹ Vitringa is of opinion that the text is corrupted, and that instead of sixty ששים and five, it was originally written sixteen שש and five. Sixteen and five, as he confesseth, is an odd way of computation for one and twenty; but it designs perfectly the years of Ahaz and Hezekiah. For Ahaz reigned sixteen years, and Hezekiah five years alone, having reigned one year jointly with his father: and it was in the sixth year of Hezekiah (2 Kings xviii. 10, 11.) that Shalmaneser took Samaria, and carried away Israel unto Assyria. Then indeed the kingdom of Israel was broken: and the conjecture of Vitringa would appear much more probable, if it could be proved that it had ever been usual to write the numbers or dates of years partly in words at length, and partly in numeral letters. But without recourse to such an expedient the thing may be explicated otherwise. For from the first of Ahaz ² compute sixty and five years in the reigns of Ahaz, Hezekiah, and Manasseh, the end of them will fall about the twenty-second year of Manasseh, when Esarhaddon, king of Assyria, made the last deportation of the Israelites, and planted other nations in their stead; and in the same expedition probably took Manasseh captive, (2 Chron. xxxiii. 11.) and carried him to Babylon. It is said expressly that it was Esarhaddon who planted the other nations in the cities of Samaria: but it is not said expressly in Scripture, that he carried away the remainder of the people, but it may be inferred from several circumstances of the story. There were other deportations of the Israelites made by the kings of Assyria before this time. In the reign of Ahaz, Tiglath-pilezer took many of the Israelites, even the Reubenites, and the Gadites, and the half tribe of Manasseh, and all the land of Naphtali, and carried them captive to Assyria, and brought them unto Halah, and Habor, and Hara, and to the river Gozan. (1 Chron. v. 26. 2 Kings xv. 29.) His son Shalmaneser, in the reign of Hezekiah, took Samaria, and carried away still greater numbers unto Assyria, and put them in Halah and in Habor by the river of Gozan (the same places whither their brethren had been carried before them) and in the cities of the Medes. (2 Kings xviii. 11.) His son Sennacherib came up also against Hezekiah, and all the fenced cities of Judah; but his army was miraculously defeated, and he himself was forced to return with shame and disgrace into his own country, where he was murdered by two of his sons. (2 Kings xviii. xix.) Another of his sons, Esarhaddon, succeeded him in the throne, but it was some time before he could recover his kingdom from these disorders, and think of reducing Syria and Palestine again to his obedience: and then it was, and not till then, that he completed the ruin of the ten tribes, carried away the remains of the people, and to prevent the land from becoming desolate, brought men from Babylon, and from Cuthah, and from Hava, and from Hamath, and from Sepharvaim, and placed them in the cities of Samaria, instead of the children of Israel. (Ezra iv. 2. 10. 2 Kings xvii. 24.) Ephraim was broken from being a kingdom before, but now he was broken from being a people. And from that time to this what account can be given of the people of Israel as distinct from the people of Judah? where have they subsisted all this while? and where is their situation, or what is their condition at present?

¹ See Usher, Prideaux, and the commentators on 2 Kings xxiv. 2 Chron. xxxvi. and Dan. i.

² Prideaux Connect. Part i. Book iii. Anno 518. Darius 4.

³ Ibid. Anno 515. Darius 7.

¹ Comment. in locum.

² See Usher, Prideaux, &c.

We see plainly that they were placed in Assyria and Media: and if they subsisted any where, one would imagine they might be found there in the greatest abundance. But authors have generally sought for them elsewhere: and the visionary writer of the second book of Esdras (xiii. 40, &c.) hath asserted that they took a resolution of retiring from the Gentiles, and of going into a country which had never been inhabited; that the river Euphrates was miraculously divided for their passage, and they proceeded in their journey a year and a half, before they arrived at this country, which was called Arsareth. But the worst of it is, as this country was unknown before, so it hath been equally unknown ever since. It is to be found no where but in this apocryphal book, which is so wild and fabulous in other respects, that it deserves no credit in this particular. Benjamin of Tudela, a Jew of the twelfth century, ¹ hath likewise assigned them a large and spacious country with fine cities; but nobody knoweth to this day where it is situate. Eldad, another Jew of the thirteenth century, hath placed them in Ethiopia, and I know not where, and hath made the Saracens and twenty-five kingdoms tributary to them. Another Jewish writer, Peritsul of Ferrara, who lived in the century before the last, hath given them kingdoms in a country called Pericha, inclosed by unknown mountains, and bounded by Assyria, and likewise in the deserts of Arabia, and even in the East Indies. Manasseh, a famous rabbi of the last century, and others have asserted, that they passed into Tartary, and expelled the Scythians; and others again from Tartary have conveyed them into America. But all these differing accounts prove nothing but the great uncertainty that there is in this matter. The best of them are only conjectures without any solid foundation, but most of them are manifest forgeries of the Jews to aggrandize their nation.

The difficulty of finding out the habitations of the ten tribes hath induced ² others to maintain, that they returned into their own country with the other two tribes after the Babylonish captivity. The decree indeed of Cyrus extended to all the people of God, ¹ For these particulars the reader may consult Basnage's History of the Jews, Book vi. chap. ii. and iii.

² See Calmet's two Dissertations—1st. Sur le pays où les dix tribus d'Israel furent transportées, et sur celui où elles sont aujourd'hui. [Concerning the country into which the ten tribes were carried, and concerning the present place of their abode.] Comment. Vol. III. 2d. Où l'on examine si les dix tribus sont revenues de leur captivité, dans la terre d'Israel. [An inquiry, whether the ten tribes have returned from their captivity, into the land of Israel.] Comment. Vol. VI.

(Ezra i. 3.) and that of Artaxerxes to all the people of Israel; (vii. 13.) and no doubt many of the Israelites took advantage of these decrees, and returned with Zerubbabel and Ezra to their own cities: but still the main body of the ten tribes remained behind. Ezra, who should best know, saith that there rose up the chief of the fathers of Judah and Benjamin, (i. 5.) and he calleth the Samaritans the adversaries of Judah and Benjamin; (iv. 1.) these two tribes were the principals, the others were only as accessories. And if they did not return at this time, they cannot be supposed to have returned in a body at any time after this; for we read of no such adventure in history, we know neither the time nor occasion of their return, nor who were their generals or leaders in this expedition. Josephus, who saw his country for several years in as flourishing a condition as at any time since the captivity, affirms that 'Ezra sent a copy of the decree of Artaxerxes to all of the same nation throughout Media, where the ten tribes lived in captivity, and many of them came with their effects to Babylon, desiring to return to Jerusalem: but the main body of the Israelites abode in that region: and therefore it hath happened, saith he, that there are two tribes in Asia and Europe, living in subjection to the Romans: but the ten tribes are beyond the Euphrates to this time; and then addeth with the vanity of a Jew speaking of his countrymen, that they were so many myriads that they could not be numbered.

Others, finding no good authority for admitting that the ten tribes of Israel were restored in the same manner as the two tribes of Judah and Benjamin, ² have therefore asserted, that "the ten tribes of Israel, which had separated from the house of David, were brought to a full and utter destruction, and never after recovered themselves again. For those who were thus carried away (excepting only some few, who joining themselves to the Jews in the land of their captivity returned with them) soon going into the usages and idolatry of the nations, among whom they were planted, (to which they were too much addicted while in their own land) after awhile became wholly absorbed, and swallowed up in them, and thence utterly losing their name, their language, and their memorial, were never after any more spoken of." But if the whole race of Israel became thus extinct, and perished for ever, how can the numerous prophecies be fulfilled, which promise the future conversion and restoration of Israel as well as of Judah?

¹ Τὸ δ' ἀντίγραφον αὐτῆς παρὰ πάντας ἔπεμψε τοὺς ὁμοεικούς τοὺς κατὰ τὴν Μηδιαν ὄντας.—πολλοὶ δ' αὐτῶν, καὶ τὰς κτήσεις ἀναλαβόντες, ἦλθον εἰς Βαβυλῶνα, ποθοῦντες τὴν εἰς τὰ Ἱεροσόλυμα καθοδὸν· ὃ δὲ πᾶς λαὸς τῶν Ἰσραηλιτῶν κατὰ χώραν ἔμεινε. διὸ καὶ δύο φυλάς εἶναι συμβέβηκεν ἐπὶ τῆς Ἀσίας καὶ τῆς Εὐρώπης, Ῥωμαίοις ὑπακουούσας. αἱ δὲ δέκα φυλαὶ πέραν εἰσὶν Εὐφράτου ἕως δεῦρο, μυριάδες ἄπειροι, καὶ ἀριθμῷ γνωσθῆναι μὴ δύναμεναι. Exemplar vero ejus in Mediam ad omnes gentes suæ homines misit.—Multi vero ex iis cum re suâ familiari Babylonem se contulerunt, ut qui Hierosolyma revertendi desiderio tenebantur. Omnis autem multitudo Israelitarum in eâ regione mansit. Quapropter duæ tantum tribus per Asiam atque Europam sub Romano degunt imperio. Decem autem reliquæ tribus usque in hodiernum diem loca ultra Euphratem colunt, infinita hominum millia, nec numero comprehendenda. [He indeed sent a copy of it into Media, to all the people of his nation, and many of them betook themselves, with their effects, to Babylon, as being desirous of returning to Jerusalem. But the main body of the Israelites remained in that country, so that two only of the tribes live in Asia and Europe under the Roman dominion. But the ten remaining tribes are to this day settled beyond the Euphrates, consisting of infinite myriads, whose number cannot be ascertained.] Antiq. Lib. xi. cap. v. sect. ii. p. 482. Edit. Hudson.

² Prideaux, Connect. Part i. Book i. Anno 677. Manasseh 22.

The truth I conceive to lie between these two opinions. Neither did they all return to Jerusalem, neither did all, who remained behind, comply with the idolatry of the Gentiles, among whom they lived. But whether they remained, or whether they returned, this prophecy of Isaiah was still fulfilled; the kingdom, the commonwealth, the state of Israel was utterly broken; they no longer subsisted as a distinct people from Judah, they no longer maintained a separate religion, they joined themselves to the Jews, from whom they had been unhappily divided, they lost the name of Israel as a name of distinction, and were thenceforth all in common called Jews. It appears from the book of Esther, that there were great numbers of Jews in all the hundred twenty and seven provinces of the kingdom of Ahasuerus or Artaxerxes Longimanus king of Persia, and they could not all be the remains of the two tribes of Judah and Benjamin, who had refused to return to Jerusalem with their brethren; they must many of them have been the descendants of the ten tribes whom the kings of Assyria had carried away captive; but yet they are all spoken of as one and the same people, and all without distinction are denominated Jews. We read in the Acts of the Apostles, (ii. 9.) that there came to Jerusalem to celebrate the feast of Pentecost, Parthians, and Medes, and Elamites, and the dwellers in Mesopotamia: these men came from the countries, wherein the ten tribes had been placed, and in all probability therefore were some of their posterity; but yet these as well as the rest are styled (ver. 5.) Jews, devout men, out of every nation under heaven. Those likewise of the ten tribes, who returned to Jerusalem, united with the two tribes of Judah and Benjamin, and formed but one nation, one body of Jews; they might for some ages perhaps preserve their genealogies; but they are now incorporated together, and the distinction of tribes and families is in great measure lost among them, and they have all from the Babylonish captivity to this day been comprehended under the general name of Jews. In St. Paul's time there were several persons of all the ten tribes in being; for he speaketh of the twelve tribes hoping to attain to the promise of God; (Acts xxvi. 7.) and St. James addresseth his epistle to the twelve tribes which are scattered abroad. (James i. 1.) And we make no question, that several persons of all the ten tribes are in being at present, though we cannot separate them from the rest; they are confounded with the other Jews; there is no difference, no distinction between them. The ¹ Samaritans indeed (of whom there are still some remains at Sichem and the neighbouring towns) pretend to be the descendants of the children of Israel, but they are really derived from those nations which Esarhaddon, king of Assyria, planted in the country, after he had carried thence the ten tribes into captivity. And for this reason the Jews call them by no other name than Cuthites, (the name of one of those nations) and exclaim against them as the worst of heretics, and if possible have greater hatred and abhorrence of them than of the Christians themselves.

¹ See Prideaux, Connect. Part i. Book i. Anno 677. Manasseh 22.

Thus we see how the ten tribes of Israel were in a manner lost in their captivity, while the two tribes of Judah and Benjamin were restored and preserved several ages afterwards. And what can you believe were the reasons of God's making this difference and distinction between them? The ten tribes had totally revolted from God to the worship of the golden calves in Dan and Bethel; and for this, and their other idolatry and wickedness, they were suffered to remain in the land of their captivity. The Jews were restored, not so much for their own sakes, as for the sake of the promises made unto the fathers, the promise to Judah that the Messiah should come of his tribe, the promise to David that the Messiah should be born of his family. It was therefore necessary for the tribe of Judah, and the families of that tribe, to be kept distinct until the coming of the Messiah. But now these ends are fully answered, the tribes of Judah and Benjamin are as much confounded as any of the rest: all distinction of families and genealogies is lost among them: and the ¹ Jews themselves acknowledge as much in saying, that when the Messiah shall come, it will be part of his office "to sort their families, restore the genealogies, and set aside strangers."

II. The preservation of the Jews through so many ages, and the total destruction of their enemies are wonderful events, and are made still more wonderful by being signified beforehand by the spirit of prophecy, as we find particularly in the prophet Jeremiah, (xlv. 28.) Fear not thou, O Jacob my servant, saith the Lord, for I am with thee, for I will make a full end of all the nations whither I have driven thee, but I will not make a full end of thee.

The preservation of the Jews is really one of the most signal and illustrious acts of Divine Providence. They are dispersed among all nations, and yet they are not confounded with any. The drops of rain which fall, nay, the great rivers which flow into the ocean, are soon mingled and lost in that immense body of waters: and the same in all human probability would have been the fate of the Jews, they would have been mingled and lost in the common mass of mankind; but on the contrary they flow into all parts of the world, mix with all nations, and yet keep separate from all. They still live as a distinct people, and yet they no where live according to their own laws, no where elect their own magistrates, no where enjoy the full exercise of their religion. Their solemn feasts and sacrifices are limited to one certain place, and that hath been now for many ages in the hands of strangers and aliens, who will not suffer them to come thither. No people have continued unmixed so long as they have done, not only of those who have sent forth colonies into foreign countries, but even of those who have abided in their own country. The northern nations have come in swarms into the more southern parts of Europe; but where are they now to be discerned and distinguished? The Gauls went forth in great bodies to seek their fortune in foreign parts; but what traces or footsteps of them are now remaining any where? In France who can separate the race of the ancient Gauls from the various other people, who from time to time have settled there? In Spain who can distinguish exactly between the first possessors the Spaniards, and the Goths, and the Moors, who conquered and kept possession of the country for some ages? In England who can pretend to say with certainty which families are derived from the ancient Britons, and which from the Romans, or Saxons, or Danes, or Normans? The most ancient and honourable pedigrees can be traced up only to a certain period, and beyond that there is nothing but conjecture and uncertainty, obscurity and ignorance: but the Jews can go up higher than any nation, they can even deduce their pedigree from the beginning of the world. They may not know from what particular tribe or family they are descended, but they know certainly that they all sprang from the stock of Abraham. And yet the contempt with which they have been treated, and the hardships which they have undergone in almost all countries, should one would think have made them desirous to forget or renounce their original; but they profess it, they glory in it: and after so many wars, massacres, and persecutions, they still subsist, they still are very numerous: and what but a supernatural power could have preserved them in such a manner as none other nation upon earth hath been preserved?

¹ See Bishop Chandler's Defence of Christianity, chap. i. sect. ii. p. 33. Third edition.

Nor is the providence of God less remarkable in the destruction of their enemies, than in their preservation. For from the beginning, who have been the great enemies and oppressors of the Jewish nation, removed them from their own land, and compelled them into captivity and slavery? The Egyptians afflicted them much, and detained them in bondage several years. The Assyrians carried away captive the ten tribes of Israel, and the Babylonians afterwards the two remaining tribes of Judah and Benjamin. The Syro-Macedonians, especially Antiochus Epiphanes, cruelly persecuted them: and the Romans utterly dissolved the Jewish state, and dispersed the people, so that they have never been able to recover their city and country again. But where are now these great and famous monarchies, which in their turns subdued and oppressed the people of God? Are they not vanished as a dream, and not only their power, but their very names lost in the earth? The Egyptians, Assyrians, and Babylonians were overthrown, and entirely subjugated by the Persians: and the Persians (it is remarkable) were the restorers of the Jews, as well as the destroyers of their enemies. The Syro-Macedonians were swallowed up by the Romans: and the Roman empire, great and powerful as it was, was broken in pieces by the incursions of the northern nations; while the Jews are subsisting as a distinct people at this day. And what a wonder of providence is it, that the vanquished should so many ages survive the victors, and the former be spread all over the world, while the latter are no more!

Nay not only nations have been punished for their cruelties to the Jews, but divine vengeance hath pursued even single persons, who have been their persecutors and oppressors. The first born of Pharaoh was destroyed, and he himself with his host was drowned in the sea. Most of those who oppressed Israel in the days of the Judges, Eglon, Jabin and Sisera, Oreb, and Zeeb, and the rest, came to an untimely end. Nebuchadnezzar was stricken with madness, and the crown was soon transferred from his family to strangers. Antiochus Epiphanes ¹ died in great agonies, with ulcers and vermin issuing from them, so that the filthiness of his smell was intolerable to all his attendants, and even to himself. Herod, who was a cruel tyrant to the Jews, ² died in the same miserable manner. Flaccus, governor of Egypt, who barbarously plundered and oppressed the Jews of Alexandria, ³ was afterwards banished and slain. Caligula, who persecuted the Jews for refusing to pay divine honours to his statues, ⁴ was murdered in the flower of his age, after a short and wicked reign. But where are now, since they have absolutely rejected the Gospel, and been no longer the peculiar people of God, where are now such visible manifestations of a divine interposition in their favour? The Jews would do well to consider this point; for rightly considered, it may be an effectual means of opening their eyes, and of turning them to Christ our Saviour.

III. The desolation of Judea is another memorable instance of the truth of prophecy. It was foretold so long ago as by Moses, (Levit. xxvi. 33.) I will scatter you among the heathen, and will draw out a sword after you; and your land shall be desolate, and your cities waste. It was foretold again by Isaiah, the prophet speaking, as prophets often do, of things future as present: (i. 7, 8, 9.) Your country is desolate, your cities are burnt with fire; your land, strangers devour it in your presence, and it is desolate as overthrown by strangers. And the daughter of Zion is left as a cottage

¹ 2 Maccab. ix. 9. Polybii Fragm. p. 997. Edit. Casaubon.

² Joseph. Antiq. Lib. xvii. cap. vi. sect. v. p. 768. De Bell. Jud. Lib. i. cap. xxxiii. sect. v. p. 1040. Edit. Hudson.

³ Philo in Flaccum.

⁴ Philo de Legatione ad Caium. Joseph. Antiq. Lib. xviii. cap. ix. Lib. xix. cap. i. Suetonii Calig. cap. lix. Vixit annis XXX. imperavit triennio et X mensibus, diebusque VIII. [He lived thirty years, and reigned three years, ten months, and eight days.]

in a vineyard, as a lodge in a garden of cucumbers, as a besieged city. This passage may relate immediately to the times of Ahaz and Hezekiah; but it must have a farther reference to the devastations made by the Chaldæans, and especially by the Romans. In this sense it is understood by ¹ Justin Martyr, Tertullian, Jerome, and most ancient interpreters: and the following words imply no less than a general destruction, and almost total excision of the people, such as they suffered under the Chaldæans, but more fully under the Romans; Except the Lord of hosts had left unto us a very small remnant, we should have been as Sodom, and we should have been like unto Gomorrah. The same thing was again foretold by Jeremiah; for speaking afterwards of the conversion of the Gentiles, and of the restoration of the Jews in the latter days, he must be understood to speak here of the times preceding, (xii. 10, 11.) Many pastors (princes or leaders) have destroyed my vineyard, they have trodden my portion under foot, they have made my pleasant portion a desolate wilderness; they have made it desolate, and being desolate it mourneth unto me; the whole land is made desolate, because no man layeth it to heart.

The same thing is expressed or implied in other places: and hath not the state of Judea now for many ages been exactly answerable to this description? That a country should be depopulated and desolated by the incursions and depredations of foreign armies is nothing wonderful; but that it should lie so many ages in this miserable condition is more than man could foresee, and could be revealed only by God. A celebrated French ² writer, in his history of the Crusades, pretends to exhibit a true picture of Palestine, and he says that then “it was just what it is at present, the worst of all the inhabited countries of Asia. It is almost wholly covered with parched rocks, on which there is not one line of soil. If this small territory were cultivated, it might not improperly be compared to Switzerland.” But there is no need of citing authorities to prove that the land is forsaken of its inhabitants, is uncultivated, unfruitful, and desolate; for the enemies of our religion make this very thing an objection to the truth of our religion. They say that so barren and wretched a country could never have been a land flowing with milk and honey, nor have supplied and maintained such multitudes, as it is represented to have done in Scripture. But they do not see or consider that hereby the prophecies are fulfilled; so that it is rather an evidence for the truth of our religion, than any argument against it.

The country was formerly a good country, if we may believe the concurrent testimony of those who should best know it, the people who inhabited it. Aristeas and Josephus too ¹ speak largely in commendation of its fruitfulness: and though something may be allowed to national prejudices, yet they would hardly have had the confidence to assert a thing, which all the world could easily contradict and disprove. Nay, there are even heathen authors who bear testimony to the fruitfulness of the land: though, we presume, that after the Babylonish captivity it never recovered to be again what it was before. Strabo ² describes indeed the country about Jerusalem as rocky and barren, but he commends other parts, particularly about Jordan and Jericho. Hecatæus ³ quoted by Josephus giveth it the character of one of the best and most fertile countries. Tacitus ⁴ saith, that it raineth seldom, the soil is fruitful, fruits abound as with us, and besides them the balsam and palm trees. And notwithstanding the long desolation of the land, there are still visible such marks and tokens of fruitfulness, as may convince any man that it once deserved the character which is given of it in Scripture. I would only refer the reader to two learned and ingenious travellers of our own nation, Mr. Maundrell and Dr. Shaw; and he will fully be satisfied of the truth of what is here asserted.

¹ Just. Mart. Apol. Ima, p. 70. Edit. Thirlbii, Dial. cum Tryphone, p. 169, et 243. Tertull. advers. Marcion. Lib. viii. cap. xxiii. p. 411. Edit. Rigaltii. Par. 1675. et alibi. Hieron. in locum, Vol. III. p. 12. Edit. Benedict.

² Voltaire's History, not far from the beginning.

The ⁵ former says, that “all along this day’s travel (Mar. 25.) from Kane Leban to Beer, and also as far as we could see around, the country discovered a quite different face from what it had before, presenting nothing to the view in most places but naked rocks, mountains, and precipices. At sight of which pilgrims are apt to be much astonished and baulked in their expectations; finding that country in such an inhospitable condition, concerning whose pleasantness and plenty they had before formed in their minds such high ideas from the description given of it, in the word of God: insomuch that it almost startles their faith when they reflect how it could be possible for a land like this to supply food for so prodigious a number of inhabitants, as are said to have been polled in the twelve tribes at one time; the sum given in by Joab (2 Sam. xxiv.) amounting to no less than thirteen hundred thousand fighting men, besides women and children. But it is certain that any man, who is not a little biassed to infidelity before, may see, as he passes along, arguments enough to support his faith against such scruples. For it is obvious for any one to observe, that these rocks and hills must have been anciently covered with earth, and cultivated, and made to contribute to the maintenance of the inhabitants, no less

¹ Aristeas, p. 13, 14. Edit. Hody: Joseph. de Bell. Jud. Lib. iii. cap. iii. p. 1120. Edit. Hudson.

² Strabo, Lib. xvi. p. 761. Edit. Par. p. 1104. Edit. Amstel. p. 755. Edit. Par. p. 1095. Edit. Amstel. p. 763. Edit. Par. p. 1106. Edit. Amstel. 1707.

³ Joseph. contra Apion. Lib. i. sect. xxii. — τῆς ἀρίστης καὶ παμφερωτάτης χώρας — optimi et feracissimi soli. [Translated in the text.] — p. 1348. Edit. Hudson.

⁴ Taciti Hist. Lib. v. rari imbres, uber solum, exuberant fruges nostrum ad morem, præterque eas, balsamum et palmæ. [Translated in the text.]

⁵ Maundrell, p. 64, &c. Fifth Edition.

than if the country had been all plain: nay, perhaps much more; forasmuch as such a mountainous and uneven surface affords a larger space of ground for cultivation, than this country would amount to, if it were all reduced to a perfect level. For the husbanding of these mountains, their manner was to gather up the stones, and place them in several lines, along the sides of the hills, in form of a wall. By such borders they supported the mould from tumbling or being washed down; and formed many beds of excellent soil, rising gradually one above another, from the bottom to the top of the mountains. Of this form of culture you see evident footsteps, wherever you go in all the mountains of Palestine. Thus the very rocks were made fruitful. And perhaps there is no spot of ground in this whole land that was not formerly improved, to the production of something or other, ministering to the sustenance of human life. For than the plain countries nothing can be more fruitful, whether for the production of corn or cattle, and consequently of milk. The hills, though improper for all cattle except goats, yet being disposed into such beds as are before described, served very well to bear corn, melons, gourds, cucumbers, and such like garden-stuff, which makes the principal food of these countries for several months in the year. The most rocky parts of all, which could not well be adjusted in that manner for the production of corn, might yet serve for the plantation of vines and olive trees; which delight to extract, the one its fatness, the other its sprightly juice, chiefly out of such dry and flinty places. And the great plain joining to the Dead Sea, which by reason of its saltiness might be thought un-serviceable both for cattle, corn, olives, and vines, had yet its proper usefulness for the nourishment of bees, and for the fabric of honey; of which Josephus gives us his testimony, De Bell. Jud. Lib. v. cap. iv. And I have reason to believe it, because when I was there, I perceived in many places a smell of honey and wax, as strong as if one had been in an apiary. Why then might not this country very well maintain the vast number of its inhabitants, being in every part so productive of either milk, corn, wine, oil, or honey, which are the principal food of these eastern nations; the constitution of their bodies, and the nature of their clime, inclining them to a more abstemious diet than we use in England, and other colder regions."

The ¹ other asserts, that "the Holy Land, were it as well peopled and cultivated as in former time, would still be more fruitful than the very best part of the coast of Syria and Phœnice. For the soil itself is generally much richer, and all things considered, yields a more preferable crop. Thus the cotton that is gathered in the plains of Ramah, Esdraelon, and Zabulon, is in greater esteem than what is cultivated near Sidon and Tripoly: neither is it possible for pulse, wheat, or any sort of grain, to be more excellent than what is commonly sold at Jerusalem. The barrenness, or scarcity rather, which some authors may either ignorantly or maliciously complain of, does not proceed from the incapacity or natural unfruitfulness of the country, but from the want of inhabitants, and the great aversion there is to labour and industry in those few who possess it. There are besides such perpetual discords and depredations among the petty princes, who share this fine country, that allowing it was better peopled, yet there would be small encouragement to sow, when it was uncertain who should gather in the harvest. Otherwise the land is good land, and still capable of affording its neighbours the like supplies of corn and oil, which it is known to have done in the time of Solomon. The parts particularly about Jerusalem being described to be rocky and mountainous, have been therefore supposed to be barren and unfruitful. Yet granting this conclusion, which is far from being just, a kingdom is not to be denominated barren or unfruitful from one part of it only, but from the whole. Nay farther, the blessing that was given to Judah was not of the same kind with the blessing of Asher or of Issachar, that his bread should be fat, or his land should be pleasant, but that his eyes should be red with wine and his teeth should be white with milk. Gen. xlix. 12. Moses also maketh milk and honey (the chief dainties and subsistence of the earlier ages, as they continue to be of the Bedoween Arabs) to be the glory of all lands: all which productions are either actually enjoyed, or at least might be, by proper care and application. The plenty of wine alone is wanting at present; yet from the goodness of that little which is still made at Jerusalem and Hebron, we find that these barren rocks (as they are called) might yield a much greater quantity, if the abstemious Turk and Arab would permit a further increase and improvement to be made of the vine," &c.

¹ Shaw's Travels, p. 365, &c.

IV. Nothing can be a stronger or clearer proof of the Divine inspiration of the prophets, than their foretelling not only the outward actions, but even the inward dispositions of men, many ages before those men were in being. The prophets were naturally prejudiced in favour of their own nation; but yet they foretel the infidelity and reprobation of the Jews, their disbelief of the Messiah, and thereupon their rejection by God. We will not multiply quotations to this purpose. It will be sufficient to produce one or two passages from the evangelical prophet Isaiah. The fifty-third chapter is a most famous prophecy of the Messiah; and it begins with upbraiding the Jews for their unbelief, Who hath believed our report? and to whom is the arm of the Lord revealed? which St. John (xii. 38.) and St. Paul (Rom. x. 16.) have expressly applied to the unbelieving Jews of their time. The prophet assigns the reason too, why they would not receive the Messiah, namely, because of his low and afflicted condition: and it is very well known that they rejected him on this account, having all along expected him to come as a temporal prince and deliverer in great power and glory.

¹ As Bishop Pearce observes, Is not this a mistake in Dr. Shaw? The words are not of Moses but of Ezekiel, (xx. 6. 15.) and he does not seem to call the milk and honey the glory of all lands; but the land, which did abound with milk and honey, he rather calls the glory of all lands.

The prophet had before been commissioned to declare unto the people the judgments of God for their infidelity and disobedience, (vi. 9, &c.) And he said, Go ye and tell this people, (this people, not my people) Hear ye indeed, but understand not; and see ye indeed, but perceive not. Make the heart of this people fat, and make their ears heavy, and shut their eyes; lest they see with their eyes, and hear with their ears, and understand with their heart, and convert, and be healed. In the style of Scripture the prophets are said to do what they declare will be done: and in like manner Jeremiah is said (i. 10.) to be set over the nations and over the kingdoms, to root out, and to pull down, and to destroy, and to throw down, to build and to plant; because he was authorised to make known the purposes and decrees of God, and because these events would follow in consequence of his prophecies. Make the heart of this people fat, is therefore as much as to say, Denounce my judgments upon this people, that their heart shall be fat, and their ears heavy, and their eyes shut; lest they see with their eyes, and hear with their ears, and understand with their heart, and convert, and be healed. This prophecy might relate in some measure to the state of the Jews before the Babylonish captivity; but it did not receive its full completion till the days of our Saviour; and in this sense it is understood and applied by the writers of the New Testament, and by our Saviour himself. The prophet is then informed, that this infidelity and obstinacy of his countrymen should be of long duration. Then said I, Lord, how long? And he answered, Until the cities be wasted without inhabitant, and the houses without man, and the land be utterly desolate, and the Lord have removed men far away, and there be a great forsaking in the midst of the land. Here is a remarkable gradation in the denouncing of these judgments. Not only Jerusalem and the cities should be wasted without inhabitants, but even the single houses should be without man; and not only the houses of the cities should be without man, but even the country should be utterly desolate; and not only the people should be removed out of the land, but the Lord should remove them far away; and they should not be removed for a short period, but there should be a great or rather a long forsaking in the midst of the land. And hath not the world seen all these particulars exactly fulfilled? Have not the Jews laboured under a spiritual blindness and infatuation in hearing but not understanding, in seeing but not perceiving the Messiah, after the accomplishment of so many prophecies, after the performance of so many miracles? And in consequence of their refusing to convert and be healed, have not their cities been wasted without inhabitant, and their houses without man? Hath not their land been utterly desolate? Have they not been removed far away into the most distant parts of the earth? And hath not their removal or banishment been now of near 1700 years' duration? And do they not still continue deaf and blind, obstinate and unbelieving? The Jews, at the time of the delivery of this prophecy, gloried in being the peculiar Church and people of God: and would any Jew of himself have thought or have said, that his nation would in process of time become an infidel and reprobate nation, infidel and reprobate for many ages, oppressed by men, and forsaken by God? It was above 750 years before Christ, that Isaiah predicted these things; and how could he have predicted them, unless he had been illuminated by the Divine vision; or how could they have succeeded accordingly, unless the spirit of prophecy had been the spirit of God?

V. Of the same nature are the prophecies concerning the calling and obedience of the Gentiles. How could such an event be foreseen hundreds of years before it happened? But the prophets are full of the glorious subject, and speak with delight and rapture of the universal kingdom of the Messiah; that God would give unto him the heathen for his inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for his possession; (Psalm ii. 8.) that all the ends of the world should remember and turn unto the Lord, and all the kindreds of the nations should worship before him; (Psalm xxii. 27.) that in the last days the mountain of the house of the Lord should be established in the top of the mountains, and should be exalted above the hills, and all people should flow unto it; (Micah iv. 1.) which passage is also to be found in Isaiah; (ii. 2.) that from the rising of the sun even unto the going down of the same, my name shall be great among the Gentiles, and in every place incense shall be offered unto my name, and a pure offering; for my name shall be great among the heathens, saith the Lord of Hosts. (Mal. i. 11.) But the prophet Isaiah is more copious upon this as well as other evangelical subjects: and his forty-ninth and sixtieth chapters treat particularly of the glory of the Church in the abundant access of the Gentiles. It is a light thing that thou shouldest be my servant to raise up the tribes of Jacob, and to restore the preserved of Israel: I will also give thee for a light to the Gentiles, that thou mayest be my salvation unto the end of the earth. (xlix. 6.) Arise, shine, for thy light is come, and the glory of the Lord is risen upon thee. The Gentiles shall come to thy light, and kings to the brightness of thy rising. The abundance of the sea shall be converted unto thee; the forces of the Gentiles shall come unto thee, &c. (lx. 1. 3. 5, &c.)

It is as absurd as it is vain in the Jews to apply these prophecies to the proselytes, whom they have gained among the nations; for the number of their proselytes was very inconsiderable, and nothing to answer these pompous descriptions. Neither was their religion ever designed by its founder for an universal religion, their worship and sacrifices being confined to one certain place, whither all the males were obliged to repair thrice every year; so that it was plainly calculated for a particular people, and could never become the religion of the whole world. There was indeed to be a religion, which was designed for all nations, to be preached in all, and to be received in all: but what prospect or probability was there, that such a generous institution should proceed from such a narrow-minded people as the Jews, or that the Gentiles, who hated and despised them, should ever receive a religion from them? Was it not much more likely, that they should be corrupted by the example of all the nations around them, and be induced to comply with the polytheism and idolatry of some of their powerful neighbours and conquerors, to which they were but too much inclined of themselves? Was not this, I say, much more likely than that they should be the happy instruments of reforming the world, and converting some of all nations to the worship of the one only God in spirit and in truth?

But the prophet farther intimates, that this great revolution, the greatest that ever was in the religious world, should be effected by a few incompetent persons, and effected too in a short compass of time. A little one shall become a thousand, and a small one a strong nation: I the Lord will hasten it in his time. (lx. 22.) Our Saviour's commission to his apostles was, "Go, teach all nations:" and who were the persons to whom this commission was given? those who were best qualified and able to carry it into execution? the rich, the wise, the mighty of this world? No, they were chiefly a few poor fishermen, of low parentage and education, of no learning or eloquence, of no policy or address, of no repute or authority, despised as Jews by the rest of mankind, and as the meanest and worst of Jews by the Jews themselves. And what improper persons were these to contend with the prejudices of all the world, the superstitions of the people, the interests of the priests, the vanity of philosophers, the pride of rulers, the malice of the Jews, the learning of Greece, and the power of Rome!

As this revolution was effected by a few incompetent persons, so was it effected too in a short compass of time. After our Saviour's ascension the number of disciples together was about an hundred and twenty: (Acts i. 15.) but they soon increased and multiplied; the first sermon of St. Peter added unto them about three thousand souls, (ii. 41.) and the second made up the number about five thousand. (iv. 4.) Before the destruction of Jerusalem, in the space of about forty years, the Gospel was preached in almost every region of the world then known: and in the reign of Constantine, Christianity became the religion of the empire; and after having suffered a little under Julian, it entirely prevailed and triumphed over paganism and idolatry; and still prevails in the most civilized and improved parts of the earth. All this was more than man could foresee, and much more than man could execute: and we experience the good effects of these prophecies at this day. The speedy propagation of the Gospel could not have been effected by persons so unequal to the task, if the same Divine Spirit who foretold it, had not likewise assisted them in it, according to the promise, I the Lord will hasten it in his time. We may be as certain as if we had seen it, and the truth really was, as the Evangelist affirms, (Mark xvi. 20.) They went forth and preached every where, the Lord working with them, and confirming the word with signs following.

But neither the prophecies concerning the Gentiles, nor those concerning the Jews, have yet received their full and entire completion. Our Saviour hath not yet had the uttermost parts of the earth for his possession: (Psalm ii. 8.) All the ends of the world have not yet turned unto the Lord: (xxii. 27.) All people, nations, and languages, have not yet served him. (Dan. vii. 14.) These things have hitherto been only partially, but they will even literally be fulfilled. Neither are the Jews yet made an eternal excellency, a joy of many generations. (Isa. lx. 15.) The time is not yet come, when violence shall no more be heard in the land, wasting nor destruction within their borders. (Jer. 18.) God's promises to them are not yet made good in their full extent. Behold, I will take the children of Israel from among the heathen, whither they be gone, and will gather them on every side, and bring them into their own land. And they shall dwell in the land that I have given unto Jacob my servant, even they and their children, and their children's children for ever; and my servant David shall be their prince for ever. (Ezek. xxxvii. 21. 25.) Then shall they know that I am the Lord their God, who caused them to be led into captivity among the heathen; but I have gathered them unto their own land, and have left none of them any more there. Neither will I hide my face any more from them, for I have poured out my spirit upon the house of Israel, saith the Lord God. (xxxix. 28, 29.) However, what hath already been accomplished is a sufficient pledge and earnest of what is yet to come: and we have all imaginable reason to believe, since so many of these prophecies are fulfilled, that the remaining prophecies will be fulfilled also: that there will be yet a greater harvest of the nations, and the yet unconverted parts of the earth will be enlightened with the knowledge of the Lord; that the Jews will in God's good time be converted to Christianity, and upon their conversion be restored to their native city and country: and especially since the state of affairs is such, that they may return without much difficulty, having no dominion, no settled country, or fixed property to detain them much any where. We have seen the prophecy of Hosea (iii. 4, 5.) fulfilled in part, and why should we not believe that it will be fulfilled in the whole? The children of Israel shall abide many days without a king, and without a prince, and without a sacrifice, and without an image or altar, and without an ephod, or priest to wear an ephod, and without teraphim or Divine manifestations. Afterward shall the children of Israel return, and seek the Lord their God, and David their king, and shall fear the Lord and his goodness in the latter days.

We have now exhibited a summary view of the prophecies of the Old Testament more immediately relative to the present state and condition of the Jews: and what stronger and more convincing arguments can you require of the truth both of the Jewish and of the Christian religion? The Jews were once the peculiar people of God: and as St. Paul saith, (Rom. xi. 1.) Hath God cast away his people? God forbid. We see that after so many ages they are still preserved by a miracle of Providence a distinct people; and why is such a continual miracle exerted, but for the greater illustration of the Divine truth, and the better accomplishment of the Divine promises, as well those which are yet to be, as those which are already fulfilled? We see that the great empires, which in their turns subdued and oppressed the people of God, are all come to ruin; because, though they executed the purposes of God, yet that was more than they understood; all that they intended was to satiate their own pride and ambition, their own cruelty and revenge. And if such hath been the fatal end of the enemies and oppressors of the Jews, let it serve as a warning to all those, who at any time, or upon any occasion, are for raising a clamour and persecution against them. They are blameable, no doubt, for persisting in their infidelity after so many means of conviction; but this is no warrant or authority for us to proscribe, to abuse, injure, and oppress them, as Christians of more zeal than either knowledge or charity have in all ages been apt to do. Charity is greater than faith: and it is worse in us to be cruel and uncharitable, than it is in them to be obstinate and unbelieving. Persecution is the spirit of Popery, and in the worst of Popish countries the Jews are the most cruelly used and persecuted: the spirit of Protestantism is toleration and indulgence to weaker consciences. Compassion to this unhappy people is not to defeat the prophecies; for only wicked nations were to harass and oppress them, the good were to show mercy to them; and we should choose rather to be the dispensers of God's mercies than the executioners of his judgments. Read the eleventh chapter of the Epistle to the Romans, and see what the great Apostle of the Gentiles, who certainly understood the prophecies better than any of us can pretend to do, saith of the infidelity of the Jews. Some of the Gentiles of his time valued themselves upon their superior advantages, and he reproves them for it, that they who were cut out of the olive-tree, which is wild by nature, and were grafted, contrary to nature, into a good olive-tree, should presume to boast against the natural branches: (ver. 24. 18.) but what would he have said, how would he have flamed and lightened, if they had made religion an instrument of faction, and had been for stirring up a persecution against them! We should consider, that to them we owe the oracles of God, the Scriptures of the New Testament as well as the Old: we should consider, that the glorious company of the Apostles, as well as the goodly fellowship of the prophets, were Jews: we should consider, that of them, as concerning the flesh, Christ came, the Saviour of the world: and surely something of kindness and gratitude is due for such infinite obligations. Though they are now broken off, yet they are not utterly cast away. Because of unbelief, as St. Paul argues, (ver. 20.) they were broken off, and thou standest by faith: Be not high-minded, but fear. There will be a time, when they will be grafted in again, and again become the people of God; for as the Apostle proceeds, (ver. 25, 26.) I would not, brethren, that ye should be ignorant of this mystery (lest ye should be wise in your own conceits) that blindness, in part, is happened to Israel, until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in; and so all Israel shall be saved. And which (think ye) is the most likely method to contribute to their conversion, which are the most natural means to reconcile them to us and our religion, prayer, argument, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness; or noise and invective, injury and outrage, the malice of some, and the folly and madness of more? They cannot be worse than when they crucified the Son of God, and persecuted his Apostles; but what saith our Saviour? (Luke xxiii. 34.) Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do: what saith his Apostle, St. Paul? (Rom. x. 1.) Brethren, my heart's desire and prayer to God for Israel is, that they might be saved. In conformity to these blessed examples our Church hath also taught us to pray for them: and how can prayer and persecution consist and agree together? They are only pretended friends to the Church, but real enemies to religion, who encourage persecution of any kind. All true sons of the Church, all true Protestants, all true Christians will, as the Apostle adviseth, (Eph. iv. 31.) put away all bitterness, and wrath, and anger, and clamour, and evil speaking, with all malice: and will join heart and voice in that excellent collect—Have mercy upon all Jews, Turks, infidels, and heretics, and take from them all ignorance, hardness of heart, and contempt of thy word: and so fetch them home, blessed Lord, to thy flock, that they may be saved among the remnant of the true Israelites, and be made one fold under one shepherd, Jesus Christ our Lord.

IX.

THE PROPHECIES CONCERNING NINEVEH.

As the Jews were the peculiar people of God, the prophets were sent to them chiefly, and the main subjects of the prophecies are the various changes and revolutions in the Jewish Church and state. But the spirit of prophecy is not limited there; other subjects are occasionally introduced; and for the greater manifestation of the Divine Providence, the fate of other nations is also foretold: and especially of those nations, which lay in the neighbourhood of Judea, and had intercourse and connexions with the Jews; and whose good or ill fortune, therefore, was of some concern and consequence to the Jews themselves. But here it is greatly to be lamented, that of these eastern nations, and of these early times, we have very short and imperfect accounts; we have no regular histories, but only a few fragments of history, which have escaped the general shipwreck of time. If we possessed the Assyrian history written by Abydenus, and the Chaldæan by Berosus, and the Egyptian by Manetho, we might in all probability be better enabled to explain the precise meaning, and to demonstrate the exact completion of several ancient prophecies; but for want of such helps and assistances we must be glad of a little glimmering light, wherever we can see it. We see enough, however, though not to discover the beauty and exactness of each particular, yet to make us admire in the general these wonders of Providence, and to show that the condition of cities and kingdoms hath been such, as the prophets had long ago foretold. And we will begin with the instance of Nineveh.

Nineveh was the metropolis of the Assyrian empire, and the Assyrians were formidable enemies to the kingdoms both of Israel and Judah. In the days of Menahem, king of Israel, Pul, the king of Assyria, invaded the land, and was bought off with a thousand talents of silver. (2 Kings xv. 19.) A few years afterwards, in the days of Pekah, king of Israel, came Tiglath-pileser, king of Assyria, and took several cities, and Gilead, and Galilee, all the land of Naphtali, and carried them captive to Assyria. (2 Kings xv. 29.) The same Tiglath-pileser was invited by Ahaz, king of Judah, to come and assist him against Rezin, king of Syria, and Pekah, king of Israel: And Ahaz took the silver and gold that was found in the house of the Lord, and in the treasures of the king's house, and sent it for a present to the king of Assyria. (2 Kings xvi. 8.) The king of Assyria came accordingly to his assistance, and routed his enemies: but still, as another sacred writer saith, distressed him, and strengthened him not. (2 Chron. xxviii. 20.) A little after, in the days of Hoshea, king of Israel, Shalmaneser, the king of Assyria, came up throughout all the land, and after a siege of three years took Samaria, and carried Israel away into Assyria, and placed them in Halah, and in Habor by the river of Gozan, and in the cities of the Medes. (2 Kings xvii. 5, 6.) It was in the sixth year of Hezekiah, king of Judah, that Shalmaneser, king of Assyria, carried Israel away captive: and in the fourteenth year of king Hezekiah, did Sennacherib, king of Assyria, come up against all the fenced cities of Judah, and took them. (2 Kings xviii. 10, 13.) And the king of Assyria exacted of the king of Judah three hundred talents of silver and thirty talents of gold; so that even good king Hezekiah was forced to give him all the silver that was found in the house of the Lord, and in the treasures of the king's house. (ver. 14, 15.) Sennacherib notwithstanding sent his captains with a great host against Jerusalem: (ver. 17.) but his army was miraculously defeated, and he himself was afterwards slain at Nineveh. (2 Kings xix. 35, 36, 37.) His son Esarhaddon completed the deportation of the Israelites, and brought men from Babylon, and from Cuthah, and from Ava, and from Hamath, and from Sepharvaim, and placed them in the cities of Samaria instead of the children of Israel; and they possessed Samaria, and dwelt in the cities thereof. (2 Kings xvii. 24. Ezra iv. 2.) We see then that the Assyrians totally destroyed the kingdom of Israel, and greatly oppressed the kingdom of Judah: and no wonder, therefore, that they are made the subject of several prophecies.

The prophet Isaiah denounceth the judgments of God against Sennacherib in particular, and against the Assyrians in general. O Assyrian, the rod of mine anger, or rather, Woe to the Assyrian, the rod of mine anger. (x. 5.) God might employ them as the ministers of his wrath, and executioners of his vengeance; and so make the wickedness of some nations the means of correcting that of others: I will send him against an hypocritical nation; and against the people of my wrath will I give him a charge to take the spoil, and to take the prey, and to tread them down like the mire in the streets. (ver. 6.) But it was far from any intent of theirs to execute the Divine will, or to chastise the vices of mankind; they only meant to extend their conquests, and establish their own dominion upon the ruins of others: Howbeit he meaneth not so, neither doth his heart think so, but it is in his heart to destroy, and cut off nations not a few. (ver. 7.) Wherefore, when they shall have served the purposes of Divine Providence, they shall be severely punished for their pride and ambition, their tyranny and cruelty to their neighbours: Wherefore it shall come to pass, that when the Lord hath performed his own work upon Mount Zion, and on Jerusalem, I will punish the fruit of the stout heart of the king of Assyria, and the glory of his high looks. (ver. 12.) There was no prospect of such an event, while the Assyrians were in the midst of their successes and triumphs; but still the word of the prophet prevailed; and it was not long after these calamities brought upon the Jews, of which we have given a short deduction, that the Assyrian empire, properly so called, was overthrown, and Nineveh destroyed.

Nineveh, or Ninus, as it was most usually called by the Greeks and Romans, was, as we said before, the capital city of the Assyrian empire; and the capital is frequently put for the whole empire, the prosperity or ruin of the one being involved in that of the other. This was a very ancient city, being built by Asshur, or as others say, by Nimrod; for those words of Moses (Gen. x. 11.) which our translators together with most of the ancient versions render thus, Out of that land went forth Asshur, and builded Nineveh; others translate, as the ¹ Chaldee paraphrast translates them, and as they are rendered in the margin of our Bibles, Out of that land he, that is Nimrod, the person spoken of before, went forth into Assyria, and builded Nineveh. It is well known that the word Asshur in Hebrew is the name of the country as well as the name of the man, and the preposition is often omitted, so that the words may very well be translated he went forth into Assyria. And Moses is here giving an account of the sons of Ham, and it may seem foreign to his subject to intermix the story of any one of the sons of Shem, as Asshur was. Moses afterwards recounts the sons of Shem, and Asshur among them; and it is presumed that he would hardly relate his actions, before he had mentioned his nativity, or even his name, contrary to the series of the genealogy and to the order of the history. But, this notwithstanding, I incline to understand the text literally as it is translated, Out of that land went forth Asshur, being expelled thence by Nimrod, and builded Nineveh and other cities, in opposition to the cities which Nimrod had founded in the land of Shinar. And neither is it foreign to the subject, nor contrary to the order of the history, upon the mention of Nimrod's invading and seizing the territories of Asshur, to relate whither Asshur retreated, and where he fortified himself against him. But by whomsoever Nineveh was built, it might afterwards be greatly enlarged and improved by Ninus, and called after his name, whoever Ninus was, for that is altogether uncertain.

As it was a very ancient, so was it likewise a very great city. In Jonah it is styled that great city, (i. 2; iii. 2.) an exceeding great city. (iii. 3.) In the original it is ² a city great to God; in the same manner as Moses is called by St. Stephen in the Acts of the Apostles, (vii. 20.) ἀστέιος τῷ Θεῷ, fair to God, or exceeding fair, as our translators rightly render it; and so the mountains of God (Psalm xxxvi. 6.) are exceeding high mountains, and the cedars of God (Psalm lxxx. 10.) are exceeding tall cedars. It was therefore an exceeding great city; and the Scripture account is confirmed by the testimony of heathen authors. Strabo ³ says that Nineveh was much greater even than Babylon: and ⁴ Diodorus Siculus, from

¹ De terra illa egressus est in Assyriam. [Out of that land he entered into Assyria.] Onk.

² עִיר־גְּדוֹלָה לְאֱלֹהִים, Deo magnā civitas, πόλις μεγάλη τῷ Θεῷ. [A city great to God.] Sept.

³ Πολλὸ δὲ μείζων ἦν τῆς Βαβυλῶνος. Ea multo major erat Babylone. [It was much greater than Babylon.] Strabo, Lib. xvi. p. 737. Edit. Paris, p. 1071. Ed. Amstel. 1707.

⁴ —ἐσπευδε τηλικαύτην κτίσαι τὸ μέγεθος πόλιν, ὥς τε μὴ μόνον αὐτὴν εἶναι μεγίστην τῶν τότε οὐσῶν κατὰ πᾶσαν τὴν οἰκουμένην, ἀλλὰ μηδὲ τῶν μεταγενεστέρων ἕτερον ἐπιβαλλόμενον ραδίως ἂν ὑπερθεῖσθαι. tantæ quoque molis urbem condere festinabat, ut non modo omnium tunc in orbe terrarum maxima existeret, sed etiam ut nemo post genitorum tale quid aggressus ipsum facile superaret. [Translated in the text.]

—τηλικαύτην γὰρ πόλιν οὐδεὶς ἕστερον ἔκτισε κατὰ τὸ μέγεθος τοῦ περιβόλου, καὶ τὴν περὶ τὸ τεῖχος μεγαλοπρέπειαν. A nullo enim postmodum urbs tanto

Ctesias, affirms that “its builder, Ninus, proposed to build a city of such magnitude, that it should not only be the greatest of the cities which were then in all the world, but that none of those who should be born after that time attempting the like should easily exceed it;” and a little after he subjoins, that “nobody afterwards built such a city, either as to the greatness of the compass, or as to the magnificence of the walls.” It is added in Jonah (iii. 3.) that it was ¹ an exceeding great city of three days’ journey, that is, of three days’ journey in circuit, as St. Jerome and the best commentators expound it. Strabo, as it was observed before, hath said that Nineveh was much larger than Babylon; and a little afterwards he says, that ² the circuit of Babylon was 385 furlongs: but ³ Diodorus Siculus asserts that the whole circuit of Nineveh was 480 furlongs; which ⁴ makes somewhat more than 60 miles, and 60 miles were three days’ journey, 20 miles a day being the common computation of a foot traveller. It is farther said in Jonah, (iv. 11.) that in Nineveh there were more than sixscore thousand persons who could not discern between their right hand and their left hand, and also much cattle. I think it is ⁵ generally calculated that the young children of any place are a fifth part of the inhabitants; and if we admit of that calculation, the whole number of inhabitants in Nineveh amounted to above six hundred thousand: which number will appear by no means incredible, if we consider the dimensions of the city as given by ⁶ Diodorus Siculus, that it was in length 150 furlongs, in breadth 90 furlongs, and in circuit 480 furlongs, that is 20 miles long, about 12 miles broad, and above 60 miles in compass. A city of such dimensions might easily contain such a number of ambitus spatio, tantâque magnificentiâ mœnium exstructa fuit. [Translated in the text.] Diod. Siculus, Lib. ii. p. 65. Edit. Steph. p. 91, 92. Edit. Rhod.

¹ Civitas magna, et tanti ambitus; ut vix trium dierum posset itinere circumiri. [A large city, and of so extensive a circuit, that it could scarcely be travelled round in the space of three days.] Hieron. Comment. in locum, p. 1486. Vol. III. Edit. Benedict.

² Τὸν δὲ κύκλον ἔχει τοῦ τείχους τριακοσίων ὀγδοήκοντα πέντε σταδίων. muri ambitu CCCXXCV stadium. [Its walls were three hundred and eighty-five furlongs in circumference.] Strabo, ibid. p. 738. Edit. Paris, p. 1072. Edit. Amstel. 1707.

³ Τοῦ σύμπαντος περιβόλου συσταθέντος ἐκ σταδίων τετρακοσίων καὶ ὀγδοήκοντα. Ambitus totus stadiis CCCXXC constat. [The whole circumference measured four hundred and eighty furlongs.] Lib. ii. p. 56. Ed. Steph. p. 92. Ed. Rhodoman.

⁴ Nini circuitus stadium fuisse CCCCLXXX, id est milliarium sexaginta; quæ tri-duanum iter facient, si singulorum dierum iter æstimes viginti milliaribus: quomodo definierunt non Jurisconsulti solum, sed et Græcorum vetustissimi. Herodotus, Lib. v. cap. 53. πεντήκοντα δὲ καὶ ἑκατὸν στάδια ἐπ’ ἡμέρῃ ἐκάσθῃ διεξιοῦσι, centum et quinquaginta stadia unoquoque die peragrantibus. CL stadia sunt viginti milliaria, &c. [The circumference of Nineveh measured four hundred and eighty furlongs, that is, sixty miles, which will make a three days’ journey, allowing twenty miles for each day, as not only the Roman lawyers, but also the ancient Greeks, measured. Herodotus, in Book V. chap. xxxv. saith they marched an hundred and fifty stadia each day. Now an hundred and fifty stadia make twenty miles.] Bocharti Phal. Lib. iv. C. xx. col. 252.

⁵ Bochart. ibid. col. 253. Lowth’s Comment. and Calmet’s.

⁶ Ἐχει δὲ τῶν μὲν μακροτέρων πλευρῶν ἑκατέραν ἢ πόλις ὅν σταδίων, τῶν καὶ βραχυτέρων, ἐνενήκοντα. κ. τ. λ. Latius utrinque longius ad CL. stadia excurrit; reliqua duo minora, XC obtinent, &c. [Each of the two longer sides measured one hundred and fifty furlongs, and each of the two shorter, ninety.] Diod. Sic. ibid.

inhabitants, and many more: and at the same time there might be, as there are in most of the great cities of the east, large vacant spaces for gardens or for pasture; so that there might be, as the sacred text asserts there was, also much cattle. But according to the ¹ modern method of calculation the number of the Ninevites is reduced much lower. For, allowing that the number of infants was one hundred and thirty thousand, as the Scripture saith that they were more than one hundred and twenty thousand; yet these making but three-tenths of the inhabitants, the number of citizens will appear to have amounted to four hundred and twenty-three thousand. London and Paris stand not upon one quarter of the ground, and yet are supposed to contain more inhabitants; London even more than the former calculation, and Paris more than the latter; it being ² computed that in London there are about 725,943 persons, and about 437,478 in Paris.

The inhabitants of Nineveh, like those of other great cities, abounding in wealth and luxury, became very corrupt in their morals. Whereupon it pleased God to commission the prophet Jonah to preach unto them the necessity of repentance, as the only means of averting their impending destruction: and such was the success of his preaching, that both the king and the people repented and turned from their evil ways, and thereby for a time delayed the execution of the Divine judgments. Who this king of Assyria was we cannot be certain, we can only make conjectures, his name not being mentioned in the book of Jonah. Archbishop Usher ³ supposeth him to have been Pul, the king of Assyria, who afterward invaded the kingdom of Israel, in the days of Menahem; (2 Kings xv. 19.) it being very agreeable to the methods of Providence to make use of an heathen king who was penitent, to punish the impenitency of God's own people Israel. But it should seem more probable, that this prince was one of the kings of Assyria, before any of those who are mentioned in Scripture. For Jonah is reckoned the most ancient of all the prophets usually so called, whose writings are preserved in the canon of Scripture. We know that he prophesied of the restoration of the coats of Israel taken by the king of Syria, which was accomplished by Jeroboam the second: (2 Kings xiv. 25.) and therefore Jonah must have lived before that time; and is with great reason supposed by Bishop Lloyd, in his Chronological Tables, to have prophesied at the latter end of Jehu's, or the beginning of the reign of Jehoahaz, when the kingdom of Israel was reduced very low, and greatly oppressed by Hazael, king of Syria. (2 Kings x. 32.) If he prophesied at that time, there intervened Jehoahaz's reign of seventeen years, Joash's reign of sixteen years, Jeroboam's of forty and one years, Zachariah's of six months, Shallum's of one month, and Menahem was seated on the throne of Israel before any mention is made of Pul, the king of Assyria: and therefore we may reasonably conclude from the distance of time, which was above seventy years, that Jonah was not sent to Pul, the king of Assyria, but to one of his predecessors, though to whom particularly we are unable to discover, for the want before complained of, the want of Assyrian histories, which no doubt would have related so memorable a transaction.

¹ Maitland's History of London, Book III. chap. ii. p. 542.

² Maitland, p. 541, et 548.

³ See Usher's Annals, A. M. 3233, p. 58, and Lowth's Comment.

But this repentance of the Ninevites, we may presume, was of no long continuance. For not many years after we find the prophet Nahum foretelling the total and entire destruction of the city; though there is no certainty of the time of Nahum's, any more than of Jonah's prophesying. Josephus ¹ saith that he flourished in the time of Jotham king of Judah, and that all the things which he foretold concerning Nineveh came to pass one hundred and fifteen years afterwards. St. Jerome ² placeth him under Hezekiah king of Judah, and saith that his name by interpretation is a comforter; for the ten tribes being carried away by the king of Assyria, this vision was to comfort them in their captivity; nor was it a less consolation to the other two tribes of Judah and Benjamin, who remained in the land, and were besieged by the same enemies, to hear that these conquerors would in time be conquered themselves, their city be taken, and their empire overthrown. All that is said of him in Scripture is Nahum the Elkoshite, (Nahum i. 1.) which title in all probability was given him from the place of his nativity; and ³ St. Jerome supposeth it to have been a village in Galilee, the ruins whereof were shown to him, when he travelled in those parts. Now we learn from the sacred history, (2 Kings xv. 29.) that the people of Galilee were taken by Tiglath-pileser king of Assyria, and carried captive into Assyria. It is not improbable, therefore, that at that time this prophet, who was a Galilean, might be instructed to foretel the fall of Nineveh: and that time coincides with the reign of Jotham, king of Judah, which is the time assigned for Nahum's prophesying by Josephus. But if Josephus was right in this particular, he was wrong in another; for more than one hundred and fifteen years intervened between the reign of Jotham king of Judah, and the destruction of Nineveh, as it is usually computed by chronologers. There is one thing which might greatly assist us in fixing the time of Nahum's prophesying; and that is, the destruction of No-Amon or Diospolis in Egypt, which he mentions (chap. iii. 8, &c.) as a late transaction, if we could know certainly when that destruction happened, or by whom it was effected. It is commonly attributed to Nebuchadnezzar, but that time is too late, and the destruction of No-Amon would fall out after the destruction of Nineveh instead of before it. Dr. Prideaux¹, with more reason, believes, that it was effected by Sennacherib, before he marched against Jerusalem; and then Nahum's prophesying would coincide exactly with the reign of Hezekiah, which is the time assigned for it by St. Jerome.

¹ Ἦν δὲ τις κατὰ τοῦτον τὸν καιρὸν προφήτης Ναουμὸς τ' οὖνομα. Erat autem quidam eo tempore vates, cui nomen Nahumus. [There was a certain prophet at this time, whose name was Nahum.] συνέβη δὲ πάντα τὰ προειρημένα περὶ Νινευῆς, μετὰ ἑτη ἑκατὸν καὶ πεντεκαίδεκα, evenerunt autem omnia quæ de Nineveh prædicta sunt centum et quindecim post annos. [All these things which were foretold by him, concerning Nineveh, were accomplished one hundred and fifteen years afterwards.] Joseph. Antiq. Lib. ix. cap. xi. sect. iii. p. 422, 423. Edit. Hudson.

² Naum, qui interpretatur, consolator. Jam enim decem tribus ab Assyriis deductæ fuerant in captivitatem sub Ezechia rege Juda, sub quo etiam nunc in consolationem populi transmigrati, adversum Nineven visio cernitur. Nec erat parva consolatio, tam his qui jam Assyriis serviebant, quam reliquis qui sub Ezechia de tribu Juda et Benjamin ab iisdem hostibus obsidebantur, ut audirent Assyrios quoque a Chaldæis esse capiendos, sicut in consequentibus hujus libri demonstrabitur. [Nahum, which is by interpretation "a Comforter." For during the reign of Hezekiah, the king of Judah, the ten tribes had been led into captivity by the Assyrians, and at that very time the prophet had a vision against Nineveh, for the comfort of these captives. Nor was it a small consolation as well to such of the Israelites as were now in bondage to the Assyrians, as to the remaining tribes of Judah and Benjamin, who were now attacked by the same enemies, to learn that the Assyrians in their turn would be led into captivity by the Chaldees, as will be shown in the sequel of this book.] Hieron. Prol. in Naum, p. 1558. Vol. III. Edit. Benedict.

³ Elcesi usque hodie in Galilæa viculus, parvus quidem, et vix ruinis veterum ædificiorum indicans vestigia; sed tamen notus Judæis; et mihi quoque a circumducente monstratus. [Elkosh at this very day is a village in Galilee, small indeed, and scarcely in its ruins discovering any vestiges of its ancient buildings. It is however well known to the Jews, and was pointed out to me by my conductor.] Hieron. ibid. p. 1559.

But whenever it was that Nahum prophesied, he plainly and largely foretold the destruction of Nineveh; his whole prophecy relates to this single event: and the city was accordingly destroyed by the Medes and Babylonians. This point I think is generally agreed upon, that Nineveh was taken and destroyed by the Medes and Babylonians; these two rebelling and uniting together subverted the Assyrian empire: but authors differ much about the time when Nineveh was taken, and about the king of Assyria in whose reign it was taken, and even about the persons who had the command in this expedition. Herodotus² affirms, that it was taken by Cyaxares, king of the Medes; St. Jerome, after the Hebrew Chronicle,³ asserts, that it was taken by Nabuchodonosor, king of the Babylonians; but these accounts may be easily reconciled, for Cyaxares and Nabuchodonosor might take it with their joint forces, as they actually did, according to that which is written in the book of Tobit, (xiv. 15.) if the Assuerus in Tobit be the same (as there is great reason to think him the same) with the Cyaxares of Herodotus; But before Tobias died, he heard of the destruction of Nineveh, which was taken by Nabuchodonosor and Assuerus; and before his death he rejoiced over Nineveh. Josephus, ¹ who saith in one place that the empire of the Assyrians was dissolved by the Medes, saith in another that the Medes and Babylonians dissolved the empire of the Assyrians. Herodotus himself ² saith that the Medes took Nineveh, and subdued the Assyrians, except the Babylonian portion; and the reason of which was, the Babylonians were their allies and confederates. Ctesias, and after him ³ Diodorus Siculus, ascribe the taking of Nineveh, and the subversion of the Assyrian empire, to Arbaces the Mede, assisted by Belesis the Babylonian. I know that ⁴ Eusebius, and after him several excellent chronologers, Usher, Prideaux, and others, reckon this quite a different action, and fix it at quite a different time; but it is not likely that the same city should be twice destroyed, and the same empire twice overthrown, by the same people twice confederated together. Diodorus, who relates this catastrophe, doth not mention the other, but saith expressly, ⁵ that Arbaces distributed the citizens of Nineveh in the country villages, levelled the city with the ground, transferred many talents of gold and silver to Ecbatana, the royal city of the Medes; and so, saith he, the empire of the Assyrians was subverted. If there is some difficulty in discovering the persons by whom Nineveh was taken, there is more in ascertaining the king of Assyria in whose reign it was taken, and more still in fixing the time when it

¹ Prideaux, Connect. Part I. Book I. Anno 713. Hezek. 15.

² Herod. Lib. i. cap. 106. p. 45. Edit. Gale.

³ Hieron. in Naum II. 12. p. 1574. Vol. III. Edit. Benedict. Seder Olam Rabba soli Nabuchodonosoro rem attribuit, et tempus ponit. Anno primo Nabuchodonosor subegit Nineven, id est, non diu post mortem patris. Ebraicum hoc Chronicon secuti sunt S. Hieronymus, &c. [Seder Olam Rabba ascribes the taking of Nineveh to Nabuchodonosor alone, and fixes the time. For in his first year, Nabuchodonosor took Nineveh, that is, soon after the death of his father.—This Hebrew Chronicle is followed by Jerome, &c.] Marshami Ch. Sæc. XVIII. p. 559.

¹ συνέβη τὴν τῶν Ἀσσυρίων ἀρχὴν ὑπὸ Μήδων καταλυθῆναι. Assyriorum imperium a Medis eversum iri contigit. [It came to pass that the empire of the Assyrians was dissolved by the Medes.] Joseph. Antiq. Lib. x. cap. ii. sect. ii. p. 435—Μήδους καὶ τοῦς Βαβυλωνίους, οἱ τὴν Ἀσσυρίων κατέλυσαν ἀρχὴν. Medos et Babylonios, qui Assyriorum everterant imperium. [The Medes and the Babylonians who had destroyed the empire of the Assyrians.] Ibid. cap. v. sect. i. p. 441. Edit. Hudson.

² καὶ τὴν τε Νίνον εἶλον, καὶ τοὺς Ἀσσυρίους ὑποχειρίους ἐποιήσαντο, πλὴν τῆς Βαβυλωνίης μοίρης. et Ninum expugnaverunt, Assyriosque, excepta Babylonicâ portione, subegerunt. [They took Nineveh, and subdued the Assyrians, excepting the portion which belonged to Babylon.] Herod. Lib. i. cap. 106. p. 45. Edit. Gale.

³ Diod. Sic. Lib. ii. p. 78. Edit. Steph. p. 110. Edit. Rhodmani.

⁴ Eusebius (more suo) utramque sententiam in Canonem retulit: ad mentem Ctesias, Arbaces Medus, ait, Num. 1197. Assyriorum imperio destructo, regnum in Medos transtulit. Dein (post annos 213) ex auctoritate Herodoti, Numb. 1410. Cyaxares Medus subvertit Ninum. Ista autem ἀσύστατα sunt. [Eusebius (according to the plan which he had adopted,) hath stated both these opinions. For following Ctesias, he saith, Arbaces the Mede, (Num. 1197.) having destroyed the empire of the Assyrians, transferred the sovereignty to the Medes. And again, (213 years afterwards,) upon the credit of Herodotus, (Num. 1410.) he saith, Cyaxares the Mede destroyed Nineveh. But these assertions are inconsistent.] Marsham Chronicon, Sæc. xviii. p. 556.

⁵ ὁ δ' οὖν Ἀρβάκης τοῖς κατὰ τὴν πόλιν ἐπιεικῶς προσενεχθεῖς, αὐτοὺς μὲν κατὰ κόμας διώκισε, —τὴν δὲ πόλιν εἰς ἔδαφος κατέσκαψεν. ἔπειτα τὸν τε ἀργυρον καὶ χρυσόν, πολλῶν ὄντα ταλάντων, ἀπέκόμισε τῆς Μηδίας εἰς Ἐκβάτανα. ἡ μὲν οὖν ἡγεμονία τῶν Ἀσσυρίων—ὑπὸ Μήδων κατελύθη τὸν προειρημένον τρόπον. Simili quoque lenitate erga cives usus, quamvis in pagos eos distraheret,—urbem autem solo æquavit. Tum argentum et aurum—(multa certe talenta erant) in Ecbatana Medorum regiam transtulit. Hoc ergo modo Assyriorum imperium—a Medis eversum est. [But Arbaces behaving with clemency to the citizens, dispersed them among the country villages. The city he levelled with the ground.—Then he conveyed the gold and silver, of which there were many talents, to Ecbatana, the metropolis of Media. In this manner the dominion of the Assyrians was put an end to by the Medes.] Diod. Sic. Lib. ii. p. 81. Edit. Steph. p. 115. Edit. Rhod.

was taken, scarce any two chronologers agreeing in the same date: but as these things are hardly possible to be known, so neither are they necessary to be known, with precision and exactness; and we may safely leave them among the uncertainties of ancient history and chronology.

It is sufficient for our purpose, that Nineveh was taken and destroyed according to the predictions: and Nahum foretold not only the thing, but also the manner of it. Herodotus promised to relate in his Assyrian history how Nineveh was taken; ¹ the Medes took Nineveh, saith he, but how they took it, I will show in another work. Again afterwards he mentions his design of writing the Assyrian history. Speaking of the kings of Babylon he saith, ² of these I shall make mention in the Assyrian history. But to our regret this history was never finished, or is lost. More probably it was never finished, for otherwise some or other of the ancients would have mentioned it. If it had been extant with his other works, it would in all probability have been of great service in illustrating several passages in Nahum's prophecies. It is however something fortunate, that we can in some measure supply this loss out of Diodorus Siculus. Nahum prophesies, that the Assyrians should be taken while they were drunken, (i. 10.) For while they be folden together as thorns, and while they are drunken as drunkards, they shall be devoured as stubble full dry: and ³ Diodorus relates, that "it was while all the Assyrian army were feasting for their former victories, that those about Arbaces being informed by some deserters of the negligence and drunkenness in the camp of the enemies, assaulted them unexpectedly by night, and falling orderly on them disorderly, and prepared on them unprepared, became masters of the camp, and slew many of the soldiers, and drove the rest into the city." Nahum foretels (ii. 6.) that the gates of the rivers shall be opened, and the palace shall be dissolved: and ⁴ Diodorus informs

¹ Καὶ τὴν δὲ Νῑνον εἶλον (ὡς δὲ εἶλον, ἐν ἑτέροις λόγοις δηλώσω.) et Ninum expugnaverunt: (ut autem ceperint, in aliis mox scriptis indicabo.) [And they also took Nineveh, but in what manner they took it, I shall show elsewhere.] Herod. Lib. I. cap. 106. p. 45. Edit. Gale.

² τῶν ἐν τοῖσι Ἀσσυρίοις λόγοις μνήμην ποιήσομαι. quorum in exponendis rebus Assyriis mentionem faciam. [Of whom I shall make mention in giving an account of the Assyrians.] Lib. i. cap. 184. p. 76. Edit. Gale. Vossius de Hist. Græc. Lib. i. cap. 3. Fabricius Bib. Græc. Lib. ii. cap. 20.

³ διόπερ τῆς δυνάμεως ἀπάσης ἐστιωμένης, οἱ περὶ τὸν Ἀρβάκην παρὰ τινων αὐτομόλων πυθόμενοι τὴν ἐν τῇ παρεμβολῇ τῶν πολεμίων ραθυμίαν καὶ μέθην, νυκτὸς ἀπροσδοκῆτως τὴν ἐπίθεσιν ἐποιήσαντο, προσπεσόντες δὲ συντεταγμένοι μὲν ἀσυντάκτοις, ἔτοιμοι δὲ ἀπαρασκευαίους, τῆς τε παρεμβολῆς ἐκράτησαν, καὶ τῶν στρατιωτῶν πολλοὺς ἀνελόντες, τοὺς ἄλλους μέχρι τῆς πόλεως κατεδίωξαν. Toto igitur exercitu conviviis indulgente, Arbaces per transfugas de negligentia et ebrietate hostium edoctus, noctu ex improvise illos opprimit. Et quoniam compositi incompositos, parati imparatos invadebant, facile et castra expugnant, et vastam hostium stragem edunt, et reliquos in urbem compellunt. [Translated in the text.] Diod. Sic. Lib. ii. p. 80. Edit. Steph. p. 112. Edit. Rhod.

⁴ ἦν δ' αὐτῷ λόγιον παραδεδομένον ἐκ προγόνων ὅτι τὴν Νῑνον οὐδεὶς ἔλατ κατὰ κράτος, εἰ μὴ πρότερον ὁ ποταμὸς τῇ πόλει γέννηται πολέμιος. — τῷ τρίτῳ δ' ἔπει συνεῶς ὁμβριῶν ραγδαίῳ καταβράχυντων, συνέβη τὸν Εὐφράτην [Τίγριν] μέγαν us, "that there was an old prophecy, that Nineveh should not be taken, till the river became an enemy to the city; and in the third year of the siege, the river being swoln with continual rains, overflowed part of the city, and broke down the wall for twenty furlongs; then the king thinking that the oracle was fulfilled, and the river become an enemy to the city, built a large funeral pile in the palace, and collecting together all his wealth and his concubines and eunuchs, burnt himself and the palace with them all; and the enemy entered the breach that the waters had made, and took the city." What was predicted in the first chapter (ver. 8.) was therefore literally fulfilled, With an overrunning flood he will make an utter end of the place thereof. Nahum promises the enemy much spoil of gold and silver, (ii. 9.) Take ye the spoil of silver, take the spoil of gold; for there is no end of the store, and glory out of all the pleasant furniture: and we read in ¹ Diodorus, that Arbaces carried many talents of gold and silver to Ecbatana, the royal city of the Medes. According to Nahum (i. 8; iii. 15.) the city was to be destroyed by fire and water; and we see in Diodorus, that by fire and water it was destroyed.

γενόμενον κατακλύσαι τὸ μέρος τῆς πόλεως, καὶ καταβαλεῖν τὸ τεῖχος ἐπὶ σταδίου ἑκοσιν, ἐνταῦθα ὁ βασιλεὺς νομίσας τετελεῖσθαι τὸν χρησμὸν, καὶ τῇ πόλει τὸν ποταμὸν γεγονέναι φανερώς πολέμιον, ἀπέγνω τὴν σωτηρίαν. ἵνα δὲ μὴ τοῖς πολεμίοις γένηται ὑποχείριος, πυρὰν ἐν τοῖς βασιλείοις κατεσκεύασεν ὑπερμεγέθη, καὶ τὸν τε χρυσὸν καὶ τὸν ἄργυρον ἅπαντα, πρὸς δὲ τούτοις τὴν βασιλικὴν ἐσθῆτα πᾶσαν ἐπὶ ταύτην ἐσώρευσε. τὰς δὲ παλλακίδας καὶ τοὺς ἐυνούχους συγκλείσας εἰς τὸν ἐν μέσῳ τῇ πυρᾷ κατεσκευασμένον οἶκον, ἅμα τούτοις ἅπασιν ἑαυτὸν τε καὶ τὰ βασίλεια κατέκασεν. οἱ δ' ἀποστάται, πυνθόμενοι τὴν ἀπώλειαν Σαρδαναπάλου, τῆς μὲν πόλεως ἐκράτησαν, εἰσπεσόντες κατὰ τὸ πεπτωκὸς μέρος τοῦ τεύχους. Atqui vaticinium a majoribus traditum habebat; A nullo capi Ninum posse, nisi fluvius urbi prius hostis evaderet—Tertio demum anno accidit, ut Euphrates [Tigris] continuis imbrium gravissimorum tempestatibus excrescens, urbis partem inundaret, et murum ad stadia xx dejiceret. Tum vero finem habere oraculum, amnemque manifeste urbi hostem esse, rex judicans, spem salutis abiecit. Itaque ne in hostium manus perveniret, rogam in regiâ ingentem extruxit; quo aurum et argentum omne, et quicquid erat regii vestimenti, congestit. Tum concubinis et eunuchis in domunculam, quam in medio pyræ extruxerat, conclusis, se regiamque cum illis omnibus incendio absumpsit. Cujus interitum cum audissent, qui a rege defecerant, per collapsam muri partem ingressi, urbem ceperunt. [But there was a prophecy handed down by tradition from their ancestors, that no one should ever take Nineveh by force, till the river had first become an enemy to the city. But it came to pass in the third year, that the Euphrates (Tigris) being increased by most violent showers of rain, of long continuance, overflowed a part of the city, and threw down about twenty furlongs of the wall. Then the king, thinking that the oracle was accomplished, and that the river was now evidently become an enemy to the city, gave up all hope of saving himself. Lest, therefore, he should fall into the hands of his enemies, he caused a large funeral pile to be constructed in the midst of his palace. Into this he ordered to be conveyed all gold, silver, and royal apparel. Then having shut up his concubines and eunuchs with himself, in an apartment prepared in the centre of the pile, he set fire to it, all of which, with the palace, was reduced to ashes. As soon as the revolvers heard of the death of Sardanapalus, they entered by a breach made in the wall, and took the city.] Diod.

Sic. Lib. ii. p. 80. Edit. Steph. p. 113. Edit. Rhod.

¹ ἔπειτα τὸν τε ἄργυρον καὶ χρυσὸν τὸν ἐκ τῆς πυρᾶς ὑπολειφθέντα, πολλῶν ὄντα ταλάντων, ἀπεκόμισε τῆς Μηδίας εἰς Ἐκβάτανα. Tum quicquid argenti aurique ex pyrâ restabat (multa certe talenta erant) in Ecbatana Medorum regiam transtulit. [Then having collected whatever gold and silver the fire of the funeral pile had not consumed, amounting to many talents, he carried them off to Ecbatana of Media.] Diod. Sic. Lib. ii. p. 81. Edit. Steph. p. 115. Edit. Rhod.

But Nahum is cited upon this occasion principally to show, that he foretold the total and entire destruction of this city. The Lord, saith he, in the first chapter, (ver. 8, 9.) with an overrunning flood will make an utter end of the place thereof; he will make an utter end; affliction shall not rise up the second time. Again, in the second chapter, (ver. 11. 13.) Where is the dwelling of the lions, and the feeding place of the young lions? meaning Nineveh, whose princes ravaged like lions: behold, I am against thee, saith the Lord of hosts, and I will cut off thy prey from the earth, and the voice of thy messengers shall no more be heard. And again, in the third and last chapter, (ver. 17, 18, 19.) Thy crowned are as the locusts, and thy captains as the great grasshoppers, which camp in the hedges in the cold day; but when the sun ariseth they flee away, and their place is not known where they are, or have been; thy shepherds slumber, O king of Assyria; thy nobles shall dwell in the dust; thy people is scattered upon the mountains, and no man gathereth them; there is no healing of thy bruise; thy wound is grievous; all that hear the bruit of thee shall clap the hands over thee; for upon whom hath not thy wickedness passed continually? The prophet Zephaniah likewise, in the days of Josiah, king of Judah, foretold the same sad event, (ii. 13, 14, 15.) The Lord will stretch out his hand against the north, and destroy Assyria, and will make Nineveh a desolation, and dry like a wilderness: and flocks shall lie down in the midst of her, all the beasts of the nations; both the cormorant and the bittern shall lodge in the upper lintels of it; their voice shall sing in the windows; desolation shall be in the thresholds; for he shall uncover the cedar work: this is the rejoicing city that dwelt carelessly, that said in her heart, I am, and there is none beside me; how is she become a desolation, a place for beasts to lie down in! every one that passeth by her, shall hiss and wag his hand. But what probability was there that the capital city of a great kingdom, a city which was sixty miles in compass, a city which contained so many thousand inhabitants, a city which had walls, according to ¹ Diodorus Siculus, a hundred feet high, and so thick that three chariots could go abreast upon them, and fifteen hundred towers, at proper distances in the walls, of two hundred feet in height; what probability was there, I say, that such a city should ever be totally destroyed? and yet so totally was it destroyed, that the place is hardly known where it was situated.

We have seen that it was taken and destroyed by the Medes and Babylonians: and what we may suppose helped to complete its

¹ Τὸ μὲν γὰρ ὕψος εἶχε τὸ τεῖχος ποδῶν ἑκατὸν, τὸ δὲ πλάτος τρισὶν ἄρμασιν ἰππασίμον ἦν. οἱ δὲ σύμπαντες πύργοι τὸν μὲν ἀριθμὸν ἦσαν χίλιοι πεντακόσιοι. τὸ δ' ὕψος εἶχον ποδῶν διακοσίων. Nam murus ad C pedium altitudinem exsurgebat, et ad trium latitudinem curruum junctim agitandorum porrectus erat. Turres in eo MD ducentos pedes altæ. [For its wall rose to the height of a hundred feet, and its breadth was such as to allow three chariots to drive abreast. The number of its towers amounted to fifteen hundred, and the height of each of them was two hundred feet.] Diod. Sic. Lib. ii. p. 65.
Edit. Steph. p. 92. Edit. Rhod.

ruin and devastation was Nebuchadnezzar's soon afterwards enlarging and beautifying of Babylon. From that time no mention is made of Nineveh by any of the sacred writers ; and the most ancient of the heathen authors, who have occasion to say any thing about it, speak of it as a city that once was great and flourishing, but now destroyed and desolate. Great as it was formerly, so little of it was remaining, that authors are not agreed even about its situation. I think we may conclude, from the general suffrage of ancient historians and geographers, that it was situated upon the river Tigris ; but yet no less authors than ¹ Ctesias and Diodorus Siculus represent it as situated upon the river Euphrates. Nay, authors differ not only from one another, but also from themselves. For the learned ² Bochart hath shown that Herodotus, Diodorus Siculus, and Ammianus Marcellinus, all three speak differently of it, sometimes as if it was situated upon the river Tigris, and sometimes as if it was situated upon the river Euphrates. So that to reconcile these authors with themselves and with others, it is supposed by ³ Bochart that there were two Ninevehs, and by ⁴ Sir John Marsham that there were three ; the Syrian upon the river Euphrates, the Assyrian upon the river Tigris, and a third built afterwards upon the Tigris by the Persians, who succeeded the Parthians in the empire of the east in the third century, and were subdued by the Saracens in the seventh century after Christ : but whether this later Nineveh was built in the same place as old Nineveh is a question that cannot be decided. Lucian, ⁵ who flourished in the second century after Christ, affirms that Nineveh was utterly perished, and there was no footstep of it remaining, nor could you tell where once it was situated : and the greater regard is to be paid to Lucian's testimony, as he was a native of Samosata, a city upon the river Euphrates, and coming from a neighbouring country he must in all likelihood have known, whether there had been any remains of Nineveh or not. There is at this time a city called Mosul, situate upon the western side of the river Tigris, and on the opposite eastern shore are ruins of a great extent, which are said to be the ruins of Nineveh. Benjamin of Tudela, ⁶ who wrote his Itinerary in the

¹ Diod. Sic. ibid. et p. 80. Edit. Steph. p. 113. Edit. Rhod.

² Bocharti Phaleg. Lib. iv. cap. xx. col. 248, 249.

³ Non video hæc aliter posse conciliari, quam si dicatur duplex fuisse Ninus ; una ad Euphratem in Comagenâ ; altera in Assyriâ trans Tigrim, &c. [I cannot see how these things can be otherwise reconciled, than by supposing there were two Ninevehs ; one of them situated on the banks of the Euphrates, in Comagena, the other beyond the river Tigris, in Assyria.] Bochart. ibid.

⁴ Est igitur (in veterum scriptis) Ninus triplex, Syriaca, Assyriaca, et Persica, &c. [In the writings of the ancients, mention is made of three Ninevehs ; one in Syria, another in Assyria, and a third in Persia.] Marsham Chron. Sæc. xviii. p. 559.

⁵ Ἡ Νῖνος ἀπόλωλεν ἥδη, καὶ οὐδὲν ἵχνος ἔτι λοιπὸν αὐτῆς, οὐδ' ἂν εἶπες ὅπου πόρ' ἦν. Ninus jam est eversa, ita ut ne reliquum quidem sit ejus vestigium, nec ubi olim sita fuerit, facile dixeris. [Translated in the text.] Luciani Ἐπισκ. vel Contemplantæ, prope finem.

⁶ Benjamin Tudelensis (qui scripsit Itinerarium anno Xti 1173) Inter Almozal, ait

year of Christ 1173, informs us, that there is only a bridge between Mosul and Nineveh; this latter is laid waste, yet hath it many streets and castles. But another, who wrote in 1300, asserts that Nineveh at present is totally laid waste, but by the ruins which are still to be seen there, we may firmly believe that it was one of the greatest cities in the world. The same thing is attested by later travellers, and particularly by ¹Thevenot, upon whose authority Prideaux relates that “Mosul is situated on the west side of the river Tigris, where was anciently only a suburb of the old Nineveh, for the city itself stood on the east side of the river, where are to be seen some of its ruins of great extent even to this day.” Tavernier likewise ²affirms, that “cross the Tigris, which hath a swift stream and whitish water, whereas Euphrates runs slow and is reddish, you come to the ancient city Nineveh, which is now a heap of rubbish only, for a league along the river, full of vaults and caverns.” Mr. ³Salmon, who is an industrious collector and compiler from others, saith, in his account of Assyria, “In this country the famous city of Nineveh once stood, on the eastern bank of the river Tigris, opposite to the place where Mosul now stands—There is nothing now to be seen but heaps of rubbish, almost a league along the river Tigris, over against Mosul, which people imagine to be the remains of this vast city.” But it is more than probable that these ruins are the remains of the Persian Nineveh, and not of the Assyrian. Ipsæ periere ruinae: even the ruins of old Nineveh have been, as I may say, long ago ruined and destroyed: such an utter end hath been made of it, and such is the truth of the Divine predictions!

This, perhaps, may strike us the more strongly by supposing only a parallel instance. Let us then suppose, that a person should come in the name of a prophet, preaching repentance to the people of this kingdom, or otherwise denouncing the destruction of the capital city, within a few years; with an overrunning flood will God make an utter end of the place thereof, he will make an utter end; its place may be sought, but it shall never be found. I presume we should look upon such a prophet as a madman, and show no farther atten-

(p. 62.) et Nineven pons tantum intercedit: Hæc devastata est: attamen multos pagos et arces habet. At vero Haiton Armenius (De Tartar. c. xi. p. 406.) (anno 1300) Ista civitas (Nineve) ad præsens est totaliter devastata. [Benjamin of Tudela, who wrote his Itinerary in the year of our Lord 1173, saith (page 62.) that between Almozal and Nineveh there is at present only a bridge. The latter place is in ruins, yet it hath still many small villages and castles.—But Haiton, the Armenian, in his book concerning the Tartars, chap. xi. page 406, (he wrote in the year 1300,) saith that the city of Nineveh is at present totally in ruins.] Marshami Chron. Sæc. xviii. p. 558. Sed per ea, quæ adhuc sunt apparentia in eadem, firmiter credi potest quod fuerit una ex majoribus civitatibus hujus mundi. [But by the ruins which are still to be seen, one may be fully satisfied, that it was once one of the greatest cities in the world.] Idem apud Bochart. Phaleg. Lib. iv. cap. xx. col. 255.

¹ Thevenot's Travels, Part ii. Book i. chap. xi. p. 50. Prideaux's Connect. Part i. Book i. Anno 612. Josiah xxix.

² Tavernier, in Harris, Vol. II. Book ii. chap. iv.

³ Salmon's Modern History, Vol. I. chap. xii. Present State of the Turkish Empire. Quarto.

tion to his message than to deride and despise it: and yet such an event would not be more strange and incredible than the destruction and devastation of Nineveh. For Nineveh was much the larger, and much the stronger, and older city of the two; and the Assyrian empire had subsisted and flourished more ages than any form of government in this country: so that you cannot object the instability of the eastern monarchies in this case. Let us then, since this event would not be more improbable and extraordinary than the other, suppose again, that things should succeed according to the prediction, the flood should arise, and the enemy should come, the city should be overflowed and broken down, be taken and pillaged, and destroyed so totally, that even the learned could not agree about the place where it was situated. What would be said or thought in such a case? Whoever of posterity should read and compare the prophecy and event together, must they not by such an illustrious instance be thoroughly convinced of the providence of God, and of the truth of his prophet, and be ready to acknowledge, Verily this is the word that the Lord hath spoken, Verily there is a God that judgeth the earth!

X.

THE PROPHECIES CONCERNING BABYLON.

AFTER Nineveh was destroyed, Babylon became the queen of the east. They were both equally enemies to the people of God; the one subverted the kingdom of Israel, and the other the kingdom of Judah; the one carried away the ten tribes, and the other the two remaining tribes into captivity. No wonder, therefore, that there are several prophecies relating to each of these cities, and that the fate of Babylon is foretold as well as of Nineveh. As Jeremiah said, (l. 17, 18.) Israel is a scattered sheep, the lions have driven him away; first the king of Assyria hath devoured him, and last, this Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, hath broken his bones: Therefore thus saith the Lord of Hosts, the God of Israel, Behold, I will punish the king of Babylon, and his land, as I have punished the king of Assyria.

Babylon was a very great, and a very ancient city, as well as Nineveh. It is indeed generally reckoned less than Nineveh; for according to Strabo (who was cited in the last discourse) it was only 385 furlongs in compass, or, 360 according to ¹ Diodorus Siculus,

¹ περιβάλετο τῆχος τῇ πόλει σταδίων τριακοσίων ἐξήκοντα. CCCLX stadiorum muro urbem circumdedit. [He surrounded the city with a wall of three hundred and sixty or, 368 according to Quintus Curtius: but ¹ Herodotus, who was an older author than any of them, represents it of the same dimensions as Nineveh, that is, 480 furlongs, or above sixty miles in compass; but the difference was, that Nineveh was constructed in the form of a parallelogram, and Babylon was an exact square, each side being 120 furlongs in length. So that, according to this account, Babylon contained more ground in it than Nineveh did; for by multiplying the sides, the one by the other, it will be found, that Nineveh contained within its walls only 13,500 furlongs, and that Babylon contained 14,400. It was too, as ancient, or more ancient than Nineveh; for in the words of Moses, speaking of Nimrod, (Gen. x. 10.) it was the beginning of his kingdom, that is, the first city, or the capital city in his dominions. Several heathen authors say that Semiramis, but most (as ² Quintus Curtius asserts) that Belus built it: and Belus was, very probably, the same as Nimrod. But whoever was the first founder of this city, we may reasonably suppose that it received very great improvements afterwards, and Nebuchadnezzar particularly repaired, and enlarged, and beautified it to such a degree, that he may, in a manner, be said to have built it; as he boasted himself, (Dan. iv. 30.) Is not this great Babylon, that I have built for the house of the kingdom, by the might of my power, and for the honour of my majesty? Nor is this asserted only in Scripture, but is likewise attested by heathen authors, Megasthenes, Berosus, and Abydenus, whose words are quoted by ³ Josephus and Eusebius. By one means or other Babylon became so great and famous a city as to give name to a very large empire; and it is called in Scripture (Dan. iv. 30.) great Babylon; (Is. xiii. 19.) the glory of kingdoms, the beauty of the Chaldees' excellency; (Is. xiv. 4.) the golden city; (Is. xlvii. 5.) the lady of kingdoms; (Jer. li. 13.) abundant in treasures; (Jer. li. 41.) the praise of the whole earth: and its beauty, strength, and grandeur; its walls, temples, palaces, and hanging gardens; the banks of the river, and the artificial canals and lake made for the draining of that river in the season of its overflowings, are described with such pomp and magnificence, by heathen authors, that it might be deservedly reputed one of the furlongs.] Diod. Sic. Lib. ii. p. 68. Edit. Steph. p. 95. Edit. Rhod. Totius operis ambitus CCCLXVIII stadia complectitur. [The circumference of the whole work measured three hundred and sixty-eight furlongs.] Quint. Curt. Lib. v. cap. i.

¹ κείται ἐν πεδίῳ μεγάλῃ, μέγας οὖσα, μέτῳπον ἕκαστον, εἴκοσι καὶ ἑκατὸν σταδίων, ἰσότης τετραγώνου. οὗτοι στάδιοι τῆς περιόδου τῆς πόλεως γίνονται συνάπαντες ὀγδῶκοντα καὶ τετράκοσιοι. oppidum situm est in planitie ingenti, formâ quadratâ, magnitudine quoquo versus centenûm vicenûm stadiorum, in summa quadringentorum et octoginta, in circuitu quatuor laterum urbis. [The city stood in a plain of great extent. It was in the form of a square. Each of its sides was a hundred and twenty furlongs, so that the circumference of all its sides amounted to four hundred and eighty furlongs.] Herod. Lib. i. cap. clxxviii. p. 74. Edit. Gale.

² Semiramis eam condiderat: vel, ut plerique credidere, Belus. [It had been built by Semiramis, or, in the opinion of most, by Belus.] Quint. Curt. ibid.

³ Joseph. Antiq. Lib. x. cap. xi. sect. i. 459. Edit. Hudson. Euseb. Præpar. Evang. Lib. ix. cap. xli. p. 457. Edit. Vigeri.

wonders of the world. The fullest and best account of these things in England is to be found in the second book of that very valuable and very useful work, Dr. Prideaux's Connexion. Though Babylon was seated in a low watery plain, yet in Scripture (Jer. li. 25.) it is called a mountain on account of the great height of its walls and towers, its palaces and temples: and ¹Berosus, speaking of some of its buildings, saith, that they appeared most like mountains. Its gates of brass, and its broad walls, are particularly mentioned in Scripture: (Is. xlv. 2. Jer. li. 58.) and the city ²had an hundred gates, twenty-five on each side, all made of solid brass: and its walls, according to ³Herodotus, were 350 feet in height, and eighty-seven in thickness, and six chariots could go abreast upon them, as ⁴Diodorus affirms, after Ctesias.

Such a city as this, one would imagine, was in no danger of being totally abandoned, and coming to nought. Such a city as this might surely, with less vanity than any other, boast that she should continue for ever, if any thing human could continue for ever. So she vainly glorified, (Is. xlvii. 7, 8.) I shall be a lady for ever; I am, and none else beside me; I shall not sit as a widow, neither shall I know the loss of children. But the prophets Isaiah and Jeremiah plainly and particularly foretold the destruction of this city. They lived during the declension of the kingdom of Judah; and, as they predicted the captivity of the Jews, so they likewise foretold the downfall of their enemies: and they speak with such assurance of the event, that they describe a thing future as if it were already past. (Is. xxi. 9.) Babylon is fallen, is fallen; and all the graven images of her gods he hath broken unto the ground, (Jer. li. 8.) Babylon is suddenly fallen and destroyed; howl for her, take balm for her pain, if so be she may be healed. It is somewhat remarkable, that one of Isaiah's prophecies concerning Babylon is entitled (xxi. 1.) the burden of the desert of the sea, or rather of the plain of the sea, for Babylon was seated in a plain, and surrounded by water. The propriety of the expression consists in this, not only that any large collection of waters, in the oriental style, is called a sea, but also that the places about Babylon, as ⁵Abydenus informs us, out of Megasthenes, are said from the beginning to have been overwhelmed with waters, and to have been called the sea.

Cyrus, who was the conqueror of Babylon, and transferred the

¹ τὴν ὄψιν ἀποδοῦς ὁμοιοτάτην τοῖς ὄρεσι——quibus speciem dedit montibus persimilem. [Presenting an appearance very much resembling that of mountains.] Joseph. Antiq. ibid.

² Herod. Lib. i. cap. clxxix. p. 74. Edit. Gale.

³ Herod. ibid. cap. clxxviii. Prideaux, ibid.

⁴ ὥστε τὸ μὲν πλάτος εἶναι τῶν τειχῶν ἕξ ἄρμασιν ἰσπλάσιμον. ut mænium latitudo sex juxta curribus vehendis sufficerit. [So that the breadth of the wall was sufficient for six chariots to drive abreast.] Diod. Sic. Lib. ii. p. 68. Edit. Steph. p. 96. Edit. Rhod.

⁵ λέγεται δὲ πάντα μὲν ἐξ ἀρχῆς ὕδωρ εἶναι, θάλασσαν καλομένην. Ferunt, inquit, loca hæc omnia jam inde ab initio aquis obruta fuisse, marisque nomine appellata. [Translated in the text.] Euseb. Præp. Evang. Lib. ix. cap. xli. p. 457. Edit. Vigeri.

empire from the Babylonians to the Medes and Persians, was particularly foretold by name (Is. xlv. 28; xlv. 1.) above an hundred years before he was born. He is honoured with the appellation of the Lord's anointed, and the Lord is said to have holden his right hand, and to have girded him: (Is. xlv. 1. 5.) and he was raised up to be an instrument of Providence for great purposes, and was certainly a person of very extraordinary endowments, though we should allow that Xenophon had a little exceeded the truth, and had drawn his portrait beyond the reality. It was promised that he should be a great conqueror, should subdue nations before him, (Is. xlv. 1.) and I will loose the loins of kings to open before him the two-leaved gates; and the gates shall not be shut: and he subdued several kings, and took several cities, particularly Sardis and Babylon, and extended his ¹ conquests over all Asia, from the river Indus to the Ægean sea. It was promised that he should find great spoil and treasure among the conquered nations; (Is. xlv. 3.) I will give thee the treasures of darkness, and hidden riches of secret places: and the riches which Cyrus found in his conquests amounted to a prodigious value in ² Pliny's account; nor can we wonder at it, for those parts of Asia abounded in wealth and luxury: Babylon had been heaping up treasures for many years; and the riches of Croesus, king of Lydia, whom Cyrus conquered and took prisoner, are, in a manner, become proverbial.

The time too, of the reduction of Babylon, was marked out by the prophet Jeremiah, (xxv. 11, 12.) These nations (that is, the Jews and the neighbouring nations) shall serve the king of Babylon seventy years; and it shall come to pass, when seventy years are accomplished, that I will punish the king of Babylon, and that nation, saith the Lord. This prophecy was delivered, as it appears from the first verse of the chapter, in the fourth year of Jehoiakim, the son of Josiah, king of Judah, that was the first year of Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon: and from that time there were ³ seventy years to the taking of Babylon and the restoration of the Jews. Nebuchadnezzar had transplanted the Jews to Babylon to people and strengthen the place, and their removal from thence must have weakened it very much; and after that it was distressed more and more, till at last it was brought to nought.

Several circumstances likewise, of the siege and taking of Babylon, were presignified by the prophets. It was foretold, that God would stir up the Medes and Persians against it; Go up, O Elam, that is Persia, (Is. xxi. 2.) besiege, O Media; and (Jer. li. 11.) the Lord hath raised up the spirit of the kings of the Medes, for his device is against Babylon, to destroy it: And, accordingly, it was besieged by the united forces of the Medes and Persians, under the command of Cyrus, the Persian, the nephew and son-in-law of the king of the Medes. The Medes are chiefly spoken of, as they were at that time the superior people. The Medes is, too, a general name for both nations, and so it is used and applied by several Greek historians, as well as by the sacred writers. *Elam*¹ was an old name for Persia, for the name of Persia doth not appear to have been known in Isaiah's time; Ezekiel is the first who mentions it. And² Bochart asserts, that the Persians were first so named from their becoming horsemen, in the time of Cyrus, the same word signifying both a Persian and a horseman. Or, if by Elam we understand the province strictly so called, it is no less true that this also, though subject to Babylon, rose up against it, and upon the following occasion. Abradates³ was viceroy or governor of Susa or Shushan, and Shushan was the capital of the province of Elam. (Dan. viii. 2.) His wife Panthea, a lady of exquisite beauty, happened to be taken prisoner by the Persians. Cyrus treated her with such generosity, and preserved her with such strict honour safe and inviolate, for her husband, as won the heart of the prince, so that he and his forces revolted to Cyrus, and fought in his army against the Babylonians.

¹ —omnem Asiam ab Indiâ usque ad Ægeum mare. [All Asia from India to the Ægean Sea.] Marshami Chron. Sæc. xviii. p. 587.

² Plin. Lib. xxxiii. cap. xv. Edit. Harduin.

³ See Prideaux and other chronologers.

It was foretold, that various nations should unite against Babylon ;

¹ Elam est Persis, et cum Mediâ sæpius conjungitur.—Persarum nomen, ante captivitatem Babylonicam, obscurum fuit. Ezechiel primus, inter bellicosas gentes, illos recenset, (xxvii. 10. et xxxviii. 5.) quum nondum innotuerant res Cyri. A Cyro demum natione Persâ, et victoriis inclyto, Persarum gloria increbuit. [Elam is Persia, and is frequently mentioned along with Media.—The name of the Persians, before the Babylonish captivity, was scarcely known. Ezekiel is the first who mentions them, and ranks them among the warlike nations, chap. xxvii. 10. and xxxviii. 5., when the deeds of Cyrus were yet unknown. From the time of Cyrus, who was a Persian by birth, and celebrated for his victories, the glory of the Persians was widely spread.] Marshami Chron. Sæc. xviii. p. 564.

² At Persis ipsis nomen fuit ab equitatu, quo maxime valebant, equitare a teneris edocti.—Quâ tamen disciplinâ primus illos imbuit Cyrus.—Itaque ex tam repentinâ mutatione factum, ut hæc regio פָּרַס Paras, et incolæ פָּרְסָאִי Persæ dicerentur, id est, equites. Arabice enim פָּרַס Pharas est equus, et פָּאֲרַס Pharis eques (ut Hebraice פָּרַשׁ Paras). Porro vox eadem Pharis etiam Persam significat. Inde est, quod neque Moses, nec libri Regum, nec Esaias aut Jeremias, Persarum meminerunt, neque quisquam eorum, qui vixerunt ante Cyrum. At in Daniele et Ezechiele Cyro cœvis, et in libris Paralipomenon, et Esdræ, et Nehemiæ, et Esther, &c. qui post Cyrum scripti sunt, Persarum est frequens mentio. Antea verisimile est Hebræa nomina כּוּת Chut et עֵילָם Elam magnam Persidis partem inclusisse. [But the Persians derived their name from their cavalry, in which their chief power consisted; being taught to ride from their earliest years.—Cyrus was the first that introduced this kind of discipline among them.—From a change so suddenly brought in amongst them, it came to pass, that their country was called פָּרַס Paras, and themselves פָּרְסָאִי Persians, that is, horsemen. In the Arabic language פָּרַס Pharas signifies a horse, and פָּאֲרַס Pharis a horseman, as פָּרַשׁ Parash doth in Hebrew. The same word Pharis signifies also a Persian. This is the reason that neither Moses, nor the book of Kings, nor Isaiah, nor Jeremiah, nor in short any one that lived before the time of Cyrus, makes mention of the Persians. But in the books of Daniel and Ezekiel, who were contemporaries with Cyrus, and in the books of Chronicles, Ezra, Nehemiah, Esther, &c. which were written after the time of Cyrus, the Persians are frequently mentioned. Before his time, it is probable that the Hebrew names כּוּת Chut and עֵילָם Elam took in a large portion of Persia.] Bocharti Phaleg. Lib. iv. cap. x. col. 224.

³ Xenoph. Cyropæd. Lib. iv.—vii.

(Is. xiii. 4.) The noise of a multitude in the mountains, like as of a great people; a tumultuous noise of the kingdoms of nations gathered together; the Lord of Hosts mustereth the host of the battle: and particularly it was foretold, that the kingdoms of Ararat, Minni, and Aschenaz, that is the ¹ Armenians, Phrygians, and other nations, should compose a part of his army; (Jer. li. 27.) Set ye up a standard in the land, blow the trumpet among the nations, prepare the nations against her, call together against her the kingdoms of Ararat, Minni, and Aschenaz. And, accordingly, Cyrus's army consisted of various nations; and among them were ² these very people, whom he had conquered before, and now obliged to attend him in this expedition.

It was foretold, that the Babylonians should be terrified, and hide themselves within their walls; (Jer. li. 30.) The mighty men of Babylon have forborne to fight, they have remained in their holds, their might hath failed, they became as women. And, accordingly, the Babylonians, after the loss of a battle or two, never recovered their courage to face the enemy in the field again; they retired again within their walls, and the ³ first time that Cyrus came with his army before the place, he could not provoke them to venture forth and try the fortune of arms, even though he sent a challenge to the king to fight a duel with him; and the ⁴ last time that he came, he consulted with his officers about the best method of carrying on the siege, “since (saith he) they do not come forth and fight.”

It was foretold, that the river should be dried up, before the city should be taken; which was very unlikely ever to happen, ⁵ the river being more than two furlongs broad, and deeper than two men standing one upon another, so that the city was thought to be stronger, and better fortified by the river, than by the walls; but yet the prophets predicted that the waters should be dried up; (Is. xlv. 27.) That saith to the deep, Be dry, and I will dry up thy rivers; (Jer. l. 38.) A drought is upon her waters, and they shall be dried up; (Jer. li. 36.) I will dry up her sea, and make her springs dry; and, accordingly, ⁶ Cyrus turned the course of the river Euphrates, which ran through the midst of Babylon, and by means of deep trenches, and the canals and lake before mentioned, so drained the waters that the river became

¹ Vide Bocharti Phaleg. Lib. i. cap. iii. col. 16. et col. 20. Lib. iii. cap. ix. col. 174.

² Xenoph. Cyropæd. Lib. v. p. 77. Lib. vii. p. 111. Edit. Henr. Steph. 1581.

³ Xenoph. Cyropæd. Lib. v. p. 75. Edit. Henr. Steph. 1581.

⁴ Ibid. Lib. vii. ἐπείπερ οὐ μάχονται ἐξίοντες. quia ad pugnandum non exeunt, p. 112. [Translated in the text.]

⁵ Xenophon Cyropæd. Lib. vii.—πλάτος ἔχων πλεῖον ἢ ἐπὶ δύο στάδια· καὶ βάθος γε ὥς οὐδ' ἂν δύο ἄνδρες ὁ ἕτερος ἐπὶ τοῦ ἑτέρου ἐστηκώς τοῦ ὕδατος ὑπερέχειεν· ὥστε τῷ ποταμῷ ἔτι ἰσχυροτέρα ἐστὶν ἢ πόλις ἢ τοῖς τείχεσι. [fluminis] latitudo est plus quam ad duo stadia: et profunditas tanta ut ne duo quidem viri alter super alterum stantes supra aquam emineant. Itaque urbs validior est flumine quam muris. [The width of the river is more than two furlongs, and its depth such, that of two men standing the one upon the other, the uppermost would not appear above the water. So that the river afforded a better defence than its walls.] Ibid.

⁶ Herod. Lib. i. cap. xcxi. p. 79. Edit. Gale. Xenophon Cyropæd. Lib. vii. p. 113. Edit. Steph.

easily fordable for his soldiers to enter the city, and by these means Babylon was taken, which was otherwise impregnable, and was supplied with provisions for very many years, saith¹ Herodotus; for more than twenty years, saith Xenophon; or,² as Herodotus saith, if the Babylonians had but known what the Persians were doing, by shutting the gates which opened to the river, and by standing upon the walls which were built as banks, they might have taken and destroyed the Persians as in a net or cage.

It was foretold, that the city should be taken by surprise during the time of a feast; (Jer. l. 24.) I have laid a snare for thee, and thou art also taken, O Babylon, and thou wast not aware, thou art found and also caught. (li. 39.) In their heat I will make their feasts, and I will make them drunken, that they may rejoice, and sleep a perpetual sleep, and not awake, saith the Lord. (li. 57.) And I will make drunk her princes, and her wise men, her captains, and her rulers, and her mighty men, and they shall sleep a perpetual sleep, and not wake, saith the King, whose name is the Lord of Hosts. And, accordingly, the³ city was taken in the night of a great annual festival, while the inhabitants were dancing, drinking, and revelling; and, as⁴ Aristotle reports, it had been taken three days before some part of the city perceived it; but⁵ Herodotus's account is more modest and probable, that the extreme parts of the city were in the hands of the enemy before they who dwelt in the middle of it knew any thing of their danger. These were extraordinary occurrences in the taking of

¹ Herod. Lib. i. cap. cxc. προσάξαντο σιτία ἐτέων κάρτα πολλῶν, comportaverant per multorum annorum commeatus. [They had laid in provisions for very many years.] P. 79. Edit. Gale. Xenoph. Cyropæd. Lib. vii. ἔχοντες τὰ ἐπιτήδεια πλεον ἢ εἴκοσιν ἐτῶν. ut qui res necessarias haberent plus quam viginti annorum. [They had necessaries for more than twenty years.] P. 113. Edit. Steph.

² Lib. i. cap. xcxi. εἰ μὲν νυν προεῖπθοντο ἢ ἔμαθον οἱ Βαβυλωνῖοι τὸ ἐκ τοῦ Κύρου ποιούμενον, οὐδ' ἂν περιϋδόντες τοὺς Πέρσας ἐσελθεῖν εἰς τὴν πόλιν, διέφθειραν κάκιστα. κατακλήσαντες γὰρ ἂν πάσας τὰς ἐς τὸν ποταμὸν πυλίδας ἔχουσας, καὶ αὐτοὶ ἐπὶ τὰς αἰμασιὰς ἀναβάντες τὰς παρὰ τὰ χεῖλα τοῦ ποταμοῦ ἑλληλαμένους, ἔλαβον ἂν σφεας ὥς ἐν κύρῳ. Quos Babylonii, si factum Cyri prius aut audissent, aut sensissent, ingredi non permisissent, sed pessimo exitio affecissent. Nam obseratis omnibus quæ ad flumen ferunt portulis, consensisque septis, ipsi, pro ripis stantes illos progressos veluti in caveâ exceperant. [If the Babylonians had heard or perceived beforehand what had been done by Cyrus, they would not have suffered the Persians to enter (the city), but would have miserably destroyed them. For, by shutting all the sally ports that led to the river, and by mounting the ramparts which were raised on the brink of the river, they might have taken them as in a trap.] Ibid.

³ Herod. Lib. i. cap. xcxi. p. 79. Edit. Gale. Xenoph. Cyropæd. Lib. vii. p. 113. Edit. Steph.

⁴ Arist. Polit. Lib. iii. cap. iii. ἥς γε φασὶν ἐαλωκυίας τρίτην ἡμέραν οὐκ αἰσθῆσθαι τι μέρος τῆς πόλεως. quâ tertium jam diem captâ, partem quandam urbis non sensisse dicunt. [Which having been taken three days, they tell us, that this was not known by a certain portion of the city.] P. 341. Vol. II. Edit. Du Val.

⁵ Herod. ibid. ὑπὸ δὲ μεγάλῃ τῆς πόλεως, ὥς λέγεται ὑπὸ τῶν ταύτῃ οἰκημένων, τῶν περὶ τὰ ἔσχατα τῆς πόλεως ἐαλωκότων, τοὺς τὸ μέσον οἰκούντας τῶν Βαβυλωνίων, οὐ μανθάνειν ἐαλωκότας. Tantæque urbis erat magnitudo, ut (quemadmodum narrant accolæ) quum capti essent qui extremas urbis partes incolebant, ii qui mediam urbem incolerent id nescirent. [And by reason of the greatness of the city, as is related by some of its inhabitants, when the extremities of the city were in the possession of the enemy, those of the Babylonians who lived in the middle of it, did not know that they were taken.]

this city: and how could any man foresee and foretel such singular events, such remarkable circumstances, without revelation and inspiration of God?

But these events you may possibly think too remote in time to be urged in the present argument: and yet the prophecies were delivered by Isaiah and Jeremiah, and the facts are related by no less historians than Herodotus and Xenophon; and Isaiah lived about two hundred and fifty years before Herodotus, and near three hundred and fifty before Xenophon, and Jeremiah lived above one hundred and fifty years before the one, and near two hundred and fifty before the other. Cyrus took Babylon, according to Prideaux, in the year 539, before Christ. Isaiah prophesied in the days of Uziah, Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah, kings of Judah, (Is. i. 1.) which was, at least, one hundred and sixty years before the taking of Babylon, for Hezekiah died in the year 699 before Christ. Jeremiah sent his prophecies concerning Babylon to Babylon, by the hands of Seraiah, in the fourth year of the reign of Zedekiah, (Jer. li. 59.) which was fifty-six years before the taking of Babylon, for the fourth year of Zedekiah coincides with the year 595 before Christ. There is, therefore, no room for scepticism: but if you are still disposed to doubt and hesitate, what then think you of the present condition of the place? Could the prophets, unless they were prophets indeed, have foreseen and foretold what that would be so many ages afterwards? And yet they have expressly foretold that it should be reduced to desolation. Isaiah is very strong and poetical: (xiii. 19, &c.) Babylon, the glory of kingdoms, the beauty of the Chaldees' excellency, shall be as when God overthrew Sodom and Gomorrah: It shall never be inhabited, neither shall it be dwelt in from generation to generation; neither shall the Arabian pitch tent there, neither shall the shepherds make their fold there: But wild beasts of the desert shall lie there, and their houses shall be full of doleful creatures, and owls shall dwell there, and satyrs shall dance there: And the wild beasts of the island shall cry in their desolate houses, and dragons in their pleasant palaces: and her time is near to come, and her days shall not be prolonged. Again, (xiv. 22, 23.) I will rise up against them, saith the Lord of Hosts, and cut off from Babylon the name and remnant, and son and nephew (or, rather, son and grandson), saith the Lord: I will also make it a possession for the bittern, and pools of water: and I will sweep it with the besom of destruction, saith the Lord of Hosts. Jeremiah speaketh much in the same strain: (l. 13. 23. 39, 40.) Because of the wrath of the Lord, it shall not be inhabited, but it shall be wholly desolate; every one that goeth by Babylon shall be astonished, and hiss at all her plagues: How is the hammer of the whole earth cut asunder and broken? How is Babylon become a desolation among the nations? Therefore the wild beasts of the desert, with the wild beasts of the island, shall dwell there, and the owls shall dwell therein; and it shall be no more inhabited for ever; neither shall it be dwelt in from generation to generation: As God overthrew Sodom and Gomorrah, and the neighbour cities thereof, saith the Lord; so no man shall abide there, neither shall any son of man dwell therein. Again, (li. 13. 26. 29. 37. 42, 43.) O thou that dwellest upon many waters, abundant in treasures; thine end is come, and the measure of thy covetousness: And they shall not take of thee a stone for a corner, nor a stone for foundations: but thou shalt be desolate for ever, saith the Lord: And the land shall tremble and sorrow, for every purpose of the Lord shall be performed against Babylon, to make the land of Babylon a desolation without an inhabitant: And Babylon shall become heaps, a dwelling-place for dragons, an astonishment and an hissing, without an inhabitant: The sea is come up upon Babylon; she is covered with the multitude of the waves thereof: Her cities are a desolation, a dry land, and a wilderness, a land wherein no man dwelleth, neither doth any son of man pass thereby. We shall see how these, and other prophecies, have by degrees been accomplished, for in the nature of the things they could not be fulfilled all at once. But as the prophets often speak of things future, as if they were already effected; so they speak often of things to be brought about in process of time, as if they were to succeed immediately; past, present, and to come, being all alike known to an infinite mind, and the intermediate time not revealed, perhaps, to the minds of the prophets.

Isaiah addresseth Babylon by the name of a virgin, as having never before been taken by any enemy: (Is. xlvii. 1.) Come down and sit in the dust, O virgin daughter of Babylon, sit on the ground: and ¹ Herodotus saith expressly, that this was the first time that Babylon was taken. After this it never more recovered its ancient splendour: from an imperial, it became a tributary city; from being governed by its own kings, and governing strangers, it came itself to be governed by strangers; and the seat of empire being transferred to Shushan, it decayed by degrees, till it was reduced, at last, to utter desolation. Berosus, in Josephus, ² saith, that when Cyrus had taken Babylon, he ordered the outer walls to be pulled down, because the city appeared to him very factious, and difficult to be taken. And ³ Xenophon informs us, that Cyrus obliged the Babylonians to deliver up all their arms upon pain of death, distributed their best houses among his officers, imposed a tribute upon them, appointed a strong garrison, and compelled the Babylonians to defray the charge, being desirous to keep them poor as the best means of keeping them obedient.

¹ Καὶ Βαβυλὼν μὲν οὕτω πρῶτον ἀναίρητο. Atque ita primo capta est Babylon. [Translated in the text.] Herod. Lib. i. cap. cxi. p. 79. Edit. Gale.

² Κύρος δὲ Βαβυλῶνα καταλαβόμενος, καὶ συντάξας τὰ ἔξω τῆς πόλεως τείχη κατάρσκειν, διὰ τὸ λίαν αὐτῷ πραγματικὴν καὶ δυσάλωτον φανῆναι τὴν πόλιν.—Cyrus autem Babylone captâ, constitutoque exteriora ejus munimenta diruere, quod civitatem videret ad res novas mobilem, urbem vero expugnatum difficilem. [Translated in the text.]—Contra Apion. Lib. i. sect. xx. p. 1344. Edit. Hudson.

³ Xenoph. Cyropæd. Lib. vii. p. 114. et 117. Edit. Steph.

But notwithstanding these precautions, ¹they rebelled against Darius, and in order to hold out to the last extremity, they took all their women, and each man choosing one of them, out of those of his own family, whom he liked best, they strangled the rest, that unnecessary mouths might not consume their provisions. "And hereby," saith ²Dr. Prideaux, "was very signally fulfilled the prophecy of Isaiah against them, in which he foretold (chap. xlvii. 9.) That two things should come to them in a moment, in one day, the loss of children, and widowhood, and that these shall come upon them in their perfection, for the multitude of their sorceries, and the great abundance of their enchantments. And in what greater perfection could these calamities come upon them, than when they themselves, thus upon themselves, became the executioners of them?" Or, rather, this prophecy was then fulfilled a second time, having been fulfilled before, the very night that Babylon was taken, when the Persians slew the king himself, and a great number of the Babylonians. They sustained the siege, and all the efforts of Darius, for twenty months, and at length the city was taken by stratagem. As soon as Darius had made himself master of the place, he ordered three thousand of the principal men to be crucified, and thereby fulfilled the prophecies of the cruelty which the Medes and Persians should use towards the Babylonians; (Is. xiii. 17, 18. Jer. l. 42.) and he likewise demolished the wall, and took away the gates, neither of which, saith ³Herodotus, had Cyrus done before. But either Herodotus or Berosus must have been mistaken; or we must suppose that Cyrus's orders were never carried into execution? or we must understand Herodotus to speak of the inner wall, as Berosus spoke of the outer: and yet it doth not seem very credible, when the walls were of that prodigious height and thickness, that there should be an inner and an outer wall too; and much less that there should be three inner and three outer walls. as ⁴Berosus affirms. Herodotus ⁵computes the height of the wall to be two hundred cubits; but later authors reckon it much lower, ⁶Quintus Curtius at one hundred, ⁷Strabo, who is a more exact writer, at fifty cubits. Herodotus

¹ Herod. Lib. iii. cap. cl. &c. p. 220. Edit. Gale.

² Prid. Connect. Part i. Book iii. Anno 517. Darius 5.

³ ——— τὸ τεῖχος περιεῖλε, καὶ τὰς πύλας πᾶσας ἀπέσπασε· (τὸ γὰρ πρότερον ἐλὼν Κῦρος τὴν Βαβυλῶνα, ἐποίησε τουτέων οὐδέτερον) muros circumcidit, et portas omnes amolitus est: quorum neutrum Cyrus fecerat prius eidem a se captæ. [He took away the wall, and removed all the gates, neither of which had been done when first it was taken by Cyrus.] Herod. Lib. iii. cap. clix. p. 223. Edit. Gale.

⁴ ——— ὑπερεβάλετο τρεῖς μὲν τῆς ἐνδον πόλεως περιβόλους, τρεῖς δὲ τῆς ἔξω τούτων. ternos quidem interiori urbi, ternosque pariter exteriori murorum ambitus circumdedit. [He surrounded the city by three walls within, and with three walls without.] Apud Joseph. contra Apion. Lib. i. sect. xix. p. 1343. Edit. Hudson.

⁵ Ὑψος δὲ διηκοσίων πηχέων. cubitorum ducentorum celsitudine. [Translated in the text.] Herod. Lib. i. cap. clxxviii. p. 74. Edit. Gale.

⁶ Altitudo muri C cubitorum eminet spatio. [The height of the wall was more than a hundred cubits.] Quint. Curt. Lib. v. cap. i.

⁷ Ὑψος δὲ τῶν μὲν μεσοπυργίων, πῆχεις πεντήκοντα. Altitudine inter turre cubito-describes it as it was originally; and we may conclude, therefore, that Darius reduced it from two hundred to fifty cubits; and by thus taking down the wall, and destroying the gates, he remarkably fulfilled the prophecy of Jeremiah, (li. 58.) Thus saith the Lord of Hosts, The broad walls of Babylon shall be utterly broken, and her high gates shall be burnt with fire.

Xerxes, ¹ after his return from his unfortunate expedition into Greece, partly out of religious zeal, being a professed enemy to image worship, and partly to reimburse himself after his immense expenses, seized the sacred treasures, and plundered or destroyed the temples and idols of Babylon, thereby accomplishing the prophecies of Isaiah and Jeremiah; (Isai. xxi. 9.) Babylon is fallen, is fallen; and all the graven images of her gods he hath broken unto the ground: (Isai. xli. 1.) Bel boweth down, Nebo stoopeth, their idols were upon the beasts, and upon the cattle, &c.: (Jer. l. 2.) Babylon is taken, Bel is confounded, Merodach is broken in pieces, her idols are confounded, her images are broken in pieces: (Jer. li. 44. 47. 52.) And I will punish Bel in Babylon, and I will bring forth out of his mouth that which he hath swallowed up; therefore, behold the days come, that I will do judgment upon the graven images of Babylon; and again, Wherefore, behold the days come, saith the Lord, that I will do judgment upon her graven images. What God declares, I will punish Bel in Babylon, and I will bring forth that which he hath swallowed, was also literally fulfilled, when the vessels of the house of God, which Nebuchadnezzar had brought from Jerusalem, and placed in the temple of Bel, (Dan. i. 2.) were restored by order of Cyrus, (Ezra i. 7.) and carried to Jerusalem again.

Such was the state of Babylon under the Persians. When Alexander came thither, though ² Quintus Curtius says that the whole circuit of the city was three hundred and sixty-eight furlongs, yet he affirms that only for the space of ninety furlongs it was inhabited. The river Euphrates having been turned out of its course by Cyrus, and never afterwards restored to its former channel, all that side of the country was flooded by it. Alexander indeed ³ purposed to have made Babylon the seat of his empire, and actually set men at work to rebuild the temple of Belus, and to repair the banks of the river, and to bring back the waters again into their rum L. [The height of the wall between the towers was fifty cubits.] Strabo, Lib. xvi. p. 738. Edit. Paris. p. 1072. Edit. Amstel. 1707.

¹ Herod. Lib. i. cap. clxxxiii. p. 76. Edit. Gale. Arrian, de Exped. Alex. Lib. vii. cap. xvii. p. 296. Edit. Gronov. Usher's Annals, A.M. 3526, p. 129. Prideaux, Connect. Part i. B. iv. Anno 479, Xerxes 7.

² Quintus Curtius, Lib. v. cap. i. Ac ne totam quidem urbem tectis occupaverunt; per XC stadia habitatur; nec omnia continua sunt. [The whole of the city was not occupied by buildings. Only the space of ninety furlongs was inhabited, neither were the houses close to one another.]

³ Arrian, de Exped. Alex. Lib. vii. cap. xvii. p. 296; et cap. xxi. p. 303. Edit. Gronov. Hecateus apud Joseph. contra Apion. Lib. i. sect. xxii. p. 1348. Edit. Hudson. Strabo, Lib. xvi. p. 738. Edit. Paris. p. 1073. Edit. Amstel. 1707.

old channel: and if his designs had taken effect, how could the prophecies have been fulfilled, and what providence therefore was it, that his designs did not take effect, and that the breaches were never repaired? He met with some difficulties in the work, and death soon after put an end to this and all his other projects; and none of his successors ever attempted it: and ¹ Seleucia being built a few years afterwards in the neighbourhood, Babylon in a little time became wholly desolate. Seleucia not only robbed it of its inhabitants, but even of its name, being called also ² Babylon by several authors. We learn further from a fragment of Diodorus Siculus, which is produced by Valesius, and quoted from him by ³ Vitringa, that a king of Parthia, or one of his peers, surpassing all the famous tyrants in cruelty, omitted no sort of punishment, but sent many of the Babylonians, and for trifling causes, into slavery, and burnt the forum and some of the temples of Babylon, and demolished the best parts of the city. This happened about one hundred and thirty years before Christ: and now let us see what account is given of Babylon by authors after that time.

Diodorus Siculus ⁴ describes the buildings as ruined or decayed in his time, and asserts that now only a small part of the city is inhabited, the greatest part within the walls is tilled. Strabo ⁵, ¹ Strabo, ibid. Plinii Nat. Hist. Lib. vi. cap. xxx. Edit. Harduin.

² Plin. ibid. quæ tamen Babylonia cognominatur. [Which, nevertheless, is called Babylon.] See Prideaux, Connect. Part i. B. viii. Anno 293. Ptolemy Soter 12.

³ Vitring. Com. in Iesaiam, cap. xiii. p. 421. Vol. I. Εὐήμερος ὁ τῶν Παρθῶν βασιλεὺς κ. τ. λ. Evemerus, Parthorum rex (docuit Valesius clarissime quod eruditi viri lubenter admiserunt, legendum esse Himerus, Parthorum regis satrapam, ex circumstantiis temporis historie, et collatis locis Justini ac Athenæi) patriâ Hyrcanus, cunctos tyrannos acerbitate vincens, nullum sevitiæ genus pratermisit. Plurimos enim Babylonios levibus de causis servituti addictos, cum omni familiâ in Mediâ distrahendos misit. Forum quoque et nonnulla delubra Babylonis igni tradidit, ac pulcherrima quæque urbis loca evertit. Accidit casus stante regno Seleucidarum, annis admodum CXXX ante Æ. V. nati Domini. ["Evemerus, the king of the Parthians, (Valesius, as is readily acknowledged by the learned, from comparing some passages of Justin and Athenæus, and from the circumstances of time in the history, hath clearly shown, that we should read Himerus, who was a satrap of the Parthian king) a native of Hyrcania, going beyond every tyrant in rigour, omitted no sort of cruelty. For he sent into Media vast multitudes of Babylonians, together with their whole family, who, for very trifling causes had been doomed to slavery. He also set on fire the forum, and some of the temples at Babylon, and destroyed all the finest places of the city. This calamity happened during the reign of the descendants of Seleucus, about 130 years before the vulgar era of the birth of our Lord."]

⁴ τῶν δὲ βασιλείων καὶ τῶν ἄλλων κατασκευασμάτων ὁ χρόνος τὰ μὲν ὀλοσχερῶς ἠφάνισε, τὰ δ' ἐλυμμένα. καὶ γὰρ αὐτῆς τῆς Βαβυλῶνος νῦν βράχῃ τι μέρος οἰκεῖται, τὸ δὲ πλεῖστον ἐντὸς τείχους γεωργεῖται. Regiasque et alias structuras partim tempus omnino abolevit, partim corruptit. Nam et ipsius Babylonis exigua quædam portio nunc habitatur, maximaque intra muros pars agrorum cultui est exposita. [Time, in some cases, hath altogether destroyed, and in others defaced the royal palaces and other edifices. For at present, only a certain small portion of Babylon is inhabited, the far greater part within the walls is under tillage.] Diod. Sic. Lib. ii. p. 70. Edit. Steph. p. 98. Edit. Rhod.

⁵ —καὶ κατήριψαν τῆς πόλεως, τὰ μὲν οἱ Πέρσαι, τὰ δ' ὁ χρόνος καὶ ἡ τῶν Μακεδόνων ὀλιγοῦρα περὶ τὰ τοιαῦτα. καὶ μάλιστα ἐπείδῃ τὴν Σελευκείαν ἐπὶ τῷ Τίγρητι πλησίον τῆς Βαβυλῶνος ἐν τριακοσίοις πού σταδίοις ἐτείχισε Σέλευκος ὁ Νικάτωρ.

who wrote not long after Diodorus, saith, that part of the city the Persians demolished, and part time and the neglect of the Macedonians, and especially after Seleucus Nicator had built Seleucia on the Tigris in the neighbourhood of Babylon, and he and his successors removed their court thither: and now, saith he, Seleucia is greater than Babylon, and Babylon is much deserted, so that one may apply to this what the comic poet said of Megalopolis in Arcadia, The great city is now become a great desert. Pliny in like manner ¹ affirms, that it was reduced to solitude, being exhausted by the neighbourhood of Seleucia, built for that purpose by Seleucus Nicator. As Strabo compared Babylon to Megalopolis, so ² Pausanias (who flourished about the middle of the second century after Christ) compares Megalopolis to Babylon, and says in his Arcadics, that of Babylon, the greatest city that the sun ever saw, there is nothing now remaining but the walls. Maximus Tyrius ³ mentions it as lying neglected and forsaken: and Lucian ⁴ intimates, that in a little time it would be sought for and not be found, like Nineveh. Constantine the Great, in an oration preserved by Eusebius, saith that he himself was upon the spot, and an eye-witness of the desolate and miserable condition of the city. In Jerome's

Καὶ γὰρ ἐκεῖνος καὶ οἱ μετ' αὐτὸν ἅπαντες περὶ ταύτην ἐσπούδασαν τὴν πόλιν καὶ τὸ βασιλεῖον ἐνταῦθα μετήνεγκαν· καὶ δὴ νῦν ἡ μὲν γέγονε Βαβυλῶνος μείζων· ἡ δ' ἔρημος ἡ πολλή. ὥστ' ἐπ' αὐτῆς μὴ ἂν ὀκνησαί τινα εἰπεῖν ὅπερ ἔφη τις τῶν κομικῶν ἐπὶ τῶν Μεγαλοπολίτων τῶν ἐν Ἀρκαδίᾳ.

Ἐρημία μεγάλη ἐστὶν ἡ Μεγαλόπολις.

—et urbis partem Persæ diruerunt, partem tempus consumpsit et Macedonum negligentia: præsertim postquam Seleucus Nicator Seleuciam ad Tigrim condidit stadiis tantum CCC a Babylone dissitam. Nam et ille et posterī omnes huic urbi maximopere studuerunt, et regiam eo transtulerunt, et nunc Babylone hæc major est, illâ magnâ ex parte deserta, ut intrepide de ea usurpari possit, quod de Megalopoli Arcadiæ magnâ urbe quidam dixit Comicus:

Est magna solitudo nunc Megalopolis.

[The Persians destroyed a part of the city. A part has been consumed by time, and the neglect of the Macedonians concerning such matters. But especially after Seleucus Nicator built Seleucia, on the banks of the Tigris, in the neighbourhood of Babylon, at the distance only of three hundred furlongs. For both he and all his successors were very much interested in this city, and removed the court thither. At present, it is greater than Babylon, the latter being in great measure deserted, so that one may boldly say concerning it, that which was said by a certain comic writer, concerning Megalopolis, a large city of Arcadia, Megalopolis is now a vast desert.] Strabo, Lib. xxvi. p. 738. Edit. Paris. p. 1073. Edit. Amstel. 1707.

¹ Cæterò ad solitudinem reddi exhausta vicinitate Seleuciæ, ob id conditæ a Nictore. [Translated in the text.] Plin. Nat. Hist. Lib. vi. cap. xxx. Edit. Harduin.

² Βαβυλῶνος δὲ ταύτης ἡντινα εἶδε πόλεων τῶν τότε μεγίστην ἥλιος, οὐδὲν ἐπὶ ἦν εἰ μὴ τείχος. Babylon omnium, quas unquam sol aspexit, urbium maxima, jam nihil præter muros reliqui habet. [And of this Babylon, at that time the greatest of all the cities which the sun shone upon, nothing is now remaining besides its walls.] Pausan. Lib. viii. cap. xxxiii.

³ Βαβυλῶνος κειμένης. [Babylon lying forsaken.] Max. Tyr. Dissert. vi. prope finem.

⁴ Οὐ μετὰ πόλιν καὶ αὐτὴ ζητηθησομένη, ὥσπερ ἡ Νῖνος. haud ita multo post desideranda et ipsa, quemadmodum nunc Ninus. [Translated in the text.] Lucian. Ἐπισκ. sive Contemplantas prope finem.

time (who lived in the fourth century after Christ) it was converted into a chase to keep wild beasts within the compass of its walls for the hunting of the later kings of Persia. We have learned, saith he¹, from a certain Elamite brother, who coming out of those parts, now liveth as a monk at Jerusalem, that the royal huntings are in Babylon, and wild beasts of every kind are confined within the circuit of its walls. And a little afterwards he saith², that excepting the brick walls, which after many years are repaired for the inclosing of wild beasts, all the space within is desolation. These walls might probably be demolished by the Saracens, who subverted this empire of the Persians, or they might be ruined or destroyed by time: but of this we read nothing, neither have we any account of Babylon for several hundred years afterwards, there having been such a dearth of authors during those times of ignorance.

Of later authors, the first who mentions any thing concerning Babylon is Benjamin of Tudela, a Jew who lived in the twelfth century. In his Itinerary, which was written almost seven hundred years ago, he asserts³, that ancient Babylon is now laid waste, but some ruins are still to be seen of Nebuchadnezzar's palace, and men fear to enter there on account of the serpents and scorpions which are in the midst of it. Texeira, a Portuguese, in the description of his travels from India to Italy, affirms⁴, that of this great and famous city there is nothing but only a few vestiges remaining, nor in the whole region is any place less frequented.

A German traveller, whose name was Rauwolf, passed that way in the year of our Lord 1574, and⁵ his account of the ruins of this famous city is as follows: "The village of Elugo now lieth on the place where formerly old Babylon, the metropolis of Chaldæa, was situated. The harbour is a quarter of a league's distance from it, where people go ashore in order to proceed by land to the famous city of Bagdat, which is a day and a half's journey from thence eastward, on the Tigris. This country is so dry and barren, that it cannot be tilled, and so bare that I could never have believed that this powerful city, once the most stately and renowned in all the

¹ Didicimus a quodam fratre Elamita, qui de illis finibus egrediens, nunc Hierosolymis vitam exigit monachorum, venationes regias esse in Babylone; et omnis generis bestias murorum ejus tamen ambitu coerceri. [Translated in the text.] Hieron. Comment. in Isai. cap. xiii. p. 111. Vol. III. Edit. Benedict.

² —exceptis enim muris coctilibus, qui propter bestias concludendas post annos plurimos instaurantur, omne in medio spatium solitudo est. [Translated in the text.] Id. in cap. xiv. p. 115.

³ Benjamin. Itin. p. 76.—eôque homines ingredi verentur, propter serpentes et scorpiones, qui sunt in medio ejus. [Men fear to enter there by reason of the serpents and scorpions, which are in the midst of it.] Bocharti Phaleg. Lib. iv. cap. xv. col. 234. Vitringa in Isaiam, cap. xiii. p. 421. Vol. I. Prideaux, Connect. Part i. Book viii. Anno 293. Ptolemy Soter xii. Calmet's Dict. in Babylon.

⁴ Cap. v. Hujus nihil nisi pauca supersunt vestigia: nec in totâ regione locus ullus est minus frequens. [Translated in the text.] Bochart ibid. et Prideaux.

⁵ Calmet's Dict. in Babylon, and Prideaux, as before, and Ray's edition of these travels in English, Part ii. chap. vii.

world, and situated in the pleasant and fruitful country of Shinar, could have ever stood there, if I had not known it by its situation, and many antiquities of great beauty, which are still standing hereabout in great desolation. First by the old bridge which was laid over the Euphrates, whereof there are some pieces and arches still remaining built of burnt brick, and so strong that it is admirable.—Just before the village of Elugo is the hill whereon the castle stood, and the ruins of its fortifications are still visible, though demolished and uninhabited. Behind it, and pretty near to it, did stand the tower of Babylon.—It is still to be seen, and is half a league in diameter; but so ruinous, so low, and so full of venomous creatures, which lodge in holes made by them in the rubbish, that no one durst approach nearer to it than within half a league, except during two months in the winter, when these animals never stir out of their holes. There is one sort particularly, which the inhabitants, in the language of the country, which is Persian, call Eglo, the poison whereof is very searching: they are larger than our lizards.”

A noble Roman, Petrus Vallensis, (Della Valle) was at Bagdat in the year 1616, and went to see the ruins, as they are thought, of ancient Babylon: and he informs us¹ that “in the middle of a vast and level plain, about a quarter of a league from Euphrates, which in that place runs westward, appears a heap of ruined buildings, like a huge mountain, the materials of which are so confounded together, that one knows not what to make of it.—Its situation and form correspond with that pyramid which Strabo calls the tower of Belus; and is in all likelihood the tower of Nimrod in Babylon, or Babel, as that place is still called.—There appear no marks of ruins, without the compass of that huge mass, to convince one so great a city as Babylon had ever stood there: all one discovers within fifty or sixty paces of it, being only the remains here and there of some foundations of buildings; and the country round about it so flat and level, that one can hardly believe it should be chosen for the situation of so great and noble a city as Babylon, or that there were ever any remarkable buildings on it; but for my part I am astonished there appears so much as there does, considering it is at least four thousand years since that city was built, and that Diodorus Siculus tells us it was reduced almost to nothing in his time.”

Tavernier, who is a very celebrated traveller, relates,² that “at the parting of the Tigris, which is but a little way from Bagdat, there is the foundation of a city, which may seem to have been a large league in compass. There are some of the walls yet standing, upon which six coaches may go abreast: they are made of burnt brick, ten feet square, and three thick. The chronicles of the country say here stood the ancient Babylon." Tavernier, no doubt, saw the same ruins, as Benjamin the Jew, and Rauwolf, and Peter della Valle did; but he thought them not to be the ruins of Nebuchadnezzar's palace or of the tower of Babel. He adopts the opinion of the Arabs, and conceives them to be rather the remains of some tower built by one of their princes for a beacon to assemble his subjects in time of war: and this in all probability was the truth of the matter.

¹ Vid. Viaggi di Pietro della Valle, Part ii. Epist. xvii. Clerici Comment. in Esaiam, cap. xiii. ver. 20. Vitring. Comment. ibid. p. 421. Vol. I. Universal History, Book i. chap. ii. sect. iv. note N.

² Tavernier, in Harris, Vol. II. Book ii. chap. v.

Mr. Salmon's¹ observation is just and pertinent: "What is as strange as any thing that is related of Babylon is, that we cannot learn either by ancient writers or modern travellers, where this famous city stood, only in general, that it was situated in the province of Chaldæa, upon the river Euphrates, considerably above the place where it is united with the Tigris. Travellers have guessed, from the great ruins they have discovered in several parts of this country, that in this or that place Babylon once stood: but when we come to examine nicely the places they mention, we only learn that they are certainly in the wrong, and have mistaken the ruins of Seleucia, or some other great town."

Mr.² Hanway, going to give an account of the siege of Bagdat by Nadir Shah, prefaceth it in this manner: "Before we enter upon any circumstance relating to the siege of Bagdat, it may afford some light to the subject, to give a short account of this famous city, in the neighbourhood of which formerly stood the metropolis of one of the most ancient and most potent monarchies in the world. The place is generally called Bagdat or Bagdad, though some writers preserve the ancient name of Babylon. The reason of thus confounding these two cities is, that the Tigris and Euphrates, forming one common stream before they disembody into the Persian gulf, are not unfrequently mentioned as one and the same river. It is certain that the present Bagdat is situated on the Tigris, but the ancient Babylon, according to all historians, sacred and profane, was on the Euphrates. The ruins of the latter, which geographical writers place about fifteen leagues to the south of Bagdat, are now so much effaced, that there are hardly any vestiges of them to point out the situation. In the time of the emperor Theodosius, there was only a great park remaining, in which the kings of Persia bred wild beasts for the amusement of hunting."

By these accounts we see how punctually time hath fulfilled the predictions of the prophets concerning Babylon. When it was converted into a chase for wild beasts to feed and breed there, then were exactly accomplished the words of the prophets, that the wild beasts of the desert with the wild beasts of the islands should dwell there, and cry in their desolate houses. One part of the country was overflowed by the river's having been turned out of its course, and never restored again to its former channel, and thence became boggy and marshy, so that it might literally be said to be a possession for the bittern, and pools of water. Another part is described as dry and naked, and barren of every thing, so that thereby was also fulfilled another prophecy, which seemed in some measure to contradict the former. Her cities are a desolation, a dry land and a wilderness, a land wherein no man dwelleth, neither doth any son of man pass thereby. The place thereabout is represented as overrun with serpents, scorpions, and all sorts of venomous and unclean creatures, so that their houses are full of doleful creatures, and dragons cry in their pleasant palaces; and Babylon is become heaps, a dwelling place for dragons, an astonishment and an hissing without an inhabitant. For all these reasons neither can the Arabian pitch his tent there, neither can the shepherds make their folds there. And when we find that modern travellers cannot now certainly discover the spot of ground whereon this renowned city once was situated, we may very properly say, How is Babylon become a desolation among the nations? Every purpose of the Lord hath he performed against Babylon, to make the land of Babylon a desolation without an inhabitant; and the expression is no less true than sublime, that the Lord of hosts hath swept it with the besom of destruction.

¹ Salmon's Modern Hist. Vol. I. Present State of the Turkish Empire, chap. xi.

² Hanway's Travels, Vol. IV. Part iii. chap. x. p. 78.

How wonderful are such predictions compared with the event, and what a convincing argument of the truth and divinity of the Holy Scriptures! Well might God allege this as a memorable instance of his prescience, and challenge all the false gods, and their votaries, to produce the like. (Isai. xlv. 21; xlv. 10.) Who hath declared this from ancient time? who hath told it from that time? have not I the Lord? and there is no God else beside me, a just God and a Saviour, there is none beside me; Declaring the end from the beginning, and from ancient times the things that are not yet done, saying, My counsel shall stand, and I will do all my pleasure. And indeed where can you find a similar instance but in Scripture, from the beginning of the world to this day?

At the same time it must afford all readers of an exalted taste and generous sentiments, all the friends and lovers of liberty, a very sensible pleasure to hear the prophets exulting over such tyrants and oppressors as the kings of Assyria. In the fourteenth chapter of Isaiah there is an Epinikion, or a triumphant ode upon the fall of Babylon. It represents the infernal mansions as moved, and the ghosts of deceased tyrants as rising to meet the king of Babylon, and congratulate his coming among them. It is really admirable for the severest strokes of irony, as well as for the sublimest strains of poetry. The Greek poet ¹Alcæus, who is celebrated for his

¹ Hor. Od. II. xiii. 26.

Et te sonantem plenius aureo,
Alcæe, plectro, &c.

[And thee, Alcæus,—sounding thy notes more fully with a golden bow, &c.] Quintil.

hatred to tyrants, and whose odes were animated with the spirit of liberty no less than with the spirit of poetry, we may presume to say, never wrote any thing comparable to it. The late worthy professor of poetry at Oxford hath eminently distinguished it in his ¹lectures upon the sacred poesy of the Hebrews, and hath given it the character that it justly deserves, of one of the most spirited, most sublime, and most perfect compositions of the lyric kind, superior to any of the productions of Greece or Rome: and he hath not only illustrated it with an useful commentary, but hath also copied the beauties of the great original in an excellent Latin Alcaic ode, which if the learned reader hath not yet seen, he will be not a little pleased with the perusal of it. Another excellent hand, Mr. Mason, hath likewise imitated it in an English ode, with which I hope he will ²one time or other oblige the public.

But not only in this particular, but in the general the Scriptures, though often perverted to the purposes of tyranny, are yet in their own nature calculated to promote the civil as well as the religious liberties of mankind. True religion, and virtue, and liberty are more nearly related, and more intimately connected with each other, than people commonly consider. It is very true, as St. Paul saith, (2 Cor. iii. 17.) that where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty: or as our Saviour himself expresseth it, (John viii. 31, 32.) If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make ye free.

XI.

THE PROPHECIES CONCERNING TYRE.

ANOTHER city that was an enemy to the Jews, and another memorable instance of the truth of prophecy, is Tyre, whose fall was predicted by the prophets, and particularly by Isaiah and Ezekiel. But it hath been questioned among learned men, which of the Tyres was the subject of these prophecies, whether Palætyrus or old Tyre

Instit. Orat. Lib. i. cap. i. Alcæus in parte operis aureo plectro merito donatur, quæ tyrannos insectatur: &c. [Alcæus in a part of the work is justly presented with a golden bow, where he inveighs against tyrants, &c.]

¹ Lowth, Prælec. xiii. p. 120, &c.—viget per totum spiritus liber, excelsus, vereque divinus; neque deest quidquam ad summam hujusce Odæ sublimitatem absolutâ pulchritudine cumulandam: cui, ut planè dicam quod sentio, nihil habet Græca aut Romana poesis simile aut secundum. [Throughout the whole, a free, sublime, and truly divine spirit prevaleth; nor is there any thing wanting to add to the sublimity and perfect beauty of this Ode: which, if I should speak freely what I think, there is nothing that equals, or indeed that comes near to it, either in Greek or Roman poetry.] Prælec. xxviii. p. 277, &c.

² Mr. Mason hath since published this with some other Odes in 1756.

that was seated on the continent, or new Tyre that was built in an island almost over against it. The truest and best answer I conceive to be, that the prophecies appertain to both, some expressions being applicable only to the former, and others only to the latter. In one place (Ezek. xxvii. 3.) it is described as situate at the entry of the sea: in others (ver. 4. and 25.) as in the midst of the seas, or according to the original, in the heart of the seas. Sometimes (Ezek. xxvi. 7, &c.) it is represented as besieged with horses and with chariots; a fort, a mount, and engines of war, are set against it: at other times (Isai. xxiii. 2. 4. 6.) it is expressly called an island, and the sea, even the strength of the sea. Now it is said, (Ezek. xxvi. 10.) By reason of the abundance of his horses their dust shall cover thee, thy walls shall shake at the noise of the horsemen, and of the wheels, and of the chariots, when he shall enter into thy gates, as men enter into a city wherein is made a breach. Then it is said, (ver. 12.) They shall break down thy walls, and destroy thy pleasant houses, and they shall lay thy stones, and thy timber, and thy dust in the midst of the water: and again, (Ezek. xxvii. 8.) They shall bring thee down to the pit, and thou shalt die the deaths of them that are slain in the midst of the seas. The insular Tyre, therefore, as well as the Tyre upon the continent, is included in these prophecies; they are both comprehended under the same name, and both spoken of as one and the same city, part built on the continent, and part on an island adjoining. It is commonly said, indeed, that when old Tyre was closely besieged, and was near falling into the hands of the Chaldæans, then the Tyrians fled from thence, and built new Tyre in the island: but the learned ¹ Vitringa hath proved at large, from good authorities, that new Tyre was founded several ages before, and was the station for ships, and considered as part of old Tyre; and Pliny ², speaking of the compass of the city, reckons both the old and the new together.

Whenever the prophets denounce the downfall and desolation of a city or kingdom, they usually describe, by way of contrast, its present flourishing condition, to show, in a stronger point of view, how Providence shifteth and changeth the scene, and ordereth and disposeth all events. The prophets Isaiah and Ezekiel observe the same method with regard to Tyre. Isaiah speaketh of it as a place of great antiquity, (xxiii. 7.) Is this your joyous city, whose antiquity is of ancient days? And it is mentioned as a strong place as early as in the days of Joshua, (Josh. xix. 29.) The strong city Tyre, for there is no reason for supposing with ³ Sir John Marsham, that the name is used here by way of prolepsis, or anticipation. Nay, there are even heathen authors who speak of the insular Tyre, and yet extol the great antiquity of the place. The ¹ Greek geographer Strabo saith, that after Sidon the greatest and most ancient city of the Phœnicians is Tyre, which is a rival to Sidon in greatness, and lustre, and antiquity. The ² Roman historian Quintus Curtius saith, that it is a city remarkable to posterity both for the antiquity of its origin, and for its frequent change of fortune. Herodotus ³, who was himself at Tyre, and inquired into the antiquity of the temple of Hercules, was informed by the priests, that the temple was built at the same time as the city, and from the building of the city they counted two thousand and three hundred years. The ironical expression of the prophet, Is this your joyous city, whose antiquity is of ancient days? implies that the Tyrians were apt to boast of their antiquity: and by this account of Herodotus it appears that they did so, and much exceeded the truth: but there could have been no pretence for their boasting of thousands of years, if the city had not been built (as some contend) till after the destruction of the old city by the Chaldæans, that is, not one hundred and thirty years before. Josephus ⁴ asserts, that from the building of Tyre to the building of Solomon's temple were two hundred and forty years: but he is with reason ⁵ supposed to speak of the insular Tyre; for the other part of the city on the continent was much older, was a strong place, as we have seen, in the days of Joshua, and is mentioned in the fragments of ⁶ Sanchoniathon, the Phœnician historian, who is ⁷ reckoned to have lived about the time of Gideon, ⁸ or somewhat later.

¹ Vitring. Comment. in Iesaiam, cap. xxiii. Vol. I. p. 667—671.

² Circuitus XIX mill. passuum est, intra Paletyro inclusa. [The circumference, including old Tyre, is nineteen miles.] Plin. Nat. Hist. Lib. v. cap. xvii. Edit. Harduin.

³ Marshami Chron. Sæc. xi. p. 290. Nomen id per prolepsin usurpatur, &c. [Translated in the text.]

But ancient as this city was, it was the daughter of Sidon, as it is called by the prophet Isaiah, (xxiii. 12.) and (ver. 2.) the merchants of Sidon, who pass over the sea, replenished it. Sidon was the eldest son of Canaan, (Gen. x. 15.) and the city of Sidon is mentioned by the patriarch Jacob, (Gen. xlix. 13.) and in the days of Joshua it is

¹ Μετὰ δὲ Σίδωνα, μέγιστη τῶν Φοινίκων, καὶ ἀρχαιοτάτη πόλις Τύρος ἐστίν, ἡ ἐνάμιλλος αὐτῇ κατὰ τε μέγεθος, καὶ κατὰ τὴν ἐπιφάνειαν, καὶ τὴν ἀρχαιότητα. Post Sidonem maxima et antiquissima Phœnicum est Tyrus, cum Sidone et magnitudine et forma et antiquitate comparanda. [Translated in the text.] Strabo, Lib. xvi. p. 756. Edit. Paris, p. 1097. Edit. Amstel. 1707.

² Urbs et vetustate originis et cerebrâ fortunæ varietate ad memoriam posteritatis insignis. [Translated in the text.] Quint. Curt. Lib. iv. cap. iv.

³ ἔφασαν γάρ, ἅμα Τύρῳ οἰκίζομένη καὶ τὸ ἱδὸν τοῦ θεοῦ ἱδρυθῆναι· εἶναι δὲ ἔτεα ἀφ' οὗ Τύρον οἰκέουσι, τριηκόσια καὶ δισχίλια. quippe dicentes ab urbe conditâ fuisse dei templum pariter extractum: esse autem a Tyro conditâ annorum duo millia ac trecentos. [For they said, that along with the city the foundation of the temple of the god was laid; and that from the building of Tyre, two thousand and three hundred years had elapsed.] Herod. Lib. ii. cap. xlv. p. 107. Edit. Gale.

⁴ ἀπὸ δὲ τῆς οἰκίσεως Τύρου εἰς τὴν οἰκοδομίαν τοῦ ναοῦ διαγεγόνει χρόνος ἑτῶν τεσσαράκοντα καὶ διακοσίων. A Tyri autem conditu usque ad exstructionem templi elapsi sunt anni quadraginta et ducenti. [Translated in the text.] Joseph. Antiq. Lib. viii. cap. iii. sect. i. p. 341. Edit. Hudson.

⁵ Vide Vitring. ibid. p. 669.

⁶ Apud Euseb. Præpar. Evang. Lib. i. cap. x. p. 35. Edit. Vigeri.

⁷ Itaque commodè rejicitur in Gideonis tempora, &c. [Therefore he is properly thrown back to the time of Gideon.] Bocharti Chanaan, Lib. ii. cap. xvii. col. 776.

⁸ Stillingfleet's Origines Sacræ, B. i. chap. ii.

called great Sidon, (Josh. xi. 8.) and in the days of the Judges, the inhabitants of Laish are said, (Judg. xviii. 7.) to have dwelt careless and secure, after the manner of the Sidonians. We have seen already, that Strabo affirms, that after Sidon Tyre was the greatest and most ancient city of the Phœnicians; and he ¹ asserts, likewise, that the poets have celebrated Sidon more, and Homer hath not so much as mentioned Tyre, though he commends Sidon, and the Sidonians, in several places. It may, therefore, with reason be inferred, that Sidon was the more ancient: and ² Justin, the epitomizer of Trogus, hath expressly informed us, that the Sidonians being besieged by the king of Ascalon, went in ships and built Tyre. But though Tyre was the daughter of Sidon, yet the daughter soon equalled, and in time excelled, the mother, and became the most celebrated place in the world for its trade and navigation, the seat of commerce and the centre of riches, and is therefore called by Isaiah, (xxiii. 3. 8.) a mart of nations, the crowning city, whose merchants are princes, whose traffickers are the honourable of the earth: and Ezekiel, as it were commenting upon those words of Isaiah, a mart of nations, (chap. xxvii.) recounts the various nations, whose commodities were brought to Tyre, and were bought and sold by the Tyrians.

It was in this wealthy and flourishing condition, when the prophets foretold its destruction, Isaiah one hundred and twenty-five years, at least, before it was destroyed by Nebuchadnezzar. An extensive and beneficial trade soon produces luxury and pride. So it fared with the Tyrians; and for these and their other vices, as well as for their insults and injuries done to the Jews, the prophets prophesied against them. Isaiah mentions their pride as the great occasion of their fall, (xxiii. 9.) The Lord of Hosts hath purposed it, to stain the pride of all glory, and to bring into contempt all the honourable of the earth. Ezekiel (xxvii. 3, &c.) describes at large their luxury, even in their shipping. Cleopatra's sailing down the river Cydnos to meet her gallant, Antony, was not with greater finery and magnificence: nor have ³ the historians and poets painted the one in more lively colours, than the prophet hath the other. He censures, likewise, the pride of the king of Tyre in arrogating to himself divine honours: (xxviii. 2, &c.) Son of man, say unto the prince of Tyrus, Thus saith the Lord God, Because thine heart is lifted up, and thou hast said, I am a God, I sit in the seat of God, in the midst of the seas; yet thou art a man, and not God, though thou set thine heart as the heart of God:—With thy wisdom, and with thine understand- ing, thou hast gotten thee riches, and hast gotten gold and silver into thy treasures : By thy great wisdom and by thy traffic hast thou increased thy riches ; and thine heart is lifted up because of thy riches ; Therefore, thus saith the Lord God, Because thou hast set thine heart as the heart of God : Behold, therefore, I will bring strangers upon thee, the terrible of the nations ; and they shall draw their swords against the beauty of thy wisdom, and they shall defile thy brightness : They shall bring thee down to the pit, and thou shalt die the deaths of them that are slain in the midst of the seas. The prophets, Joel and Amos, had before denounced the Divine judgments upon the Tyrians for their wickedness in general, and in particular, for their cruelty to the children of Israel, and for buying and selling them like cattle in the markets. Thus saith the Lord, by the prophet Joel, (iii. 5, &c.) Because ye have taken my silver and my gold, and have carried into your temples my goodly pleasant things : The children also of Judah, and the children of Jerusalem, have ye sold unto the Grecians, that ye might remove them far from their border : Behold, I will raise them out of the place whither ye have sold them, and will return your recompence upon your own head. Amos speaketh to the same purpose, (i. 9.) Thus saith the Lord, For three transgressions of Tyrus, and for four, I will not turn away the punishment thereof ; because they delivered up the whole captivity to Edom, and remembered not the brotherly covenant, that is, the league and alliance between Hiram, king of Tyre, on one part, and David and Solomon on the other. The Psalmist reckons them among the most inveterate and implacable enemies of the Jewish name and nation. (Psalm lxxxiii. 6, 7.) The tabernacles of Edom, and the Ishmaelites, of Moab, and the Hagarenes, Gebal, and Ammon, and Amalek, the Philistines, with the inhabitants of Tyre. Ezekiel, also, begins his prophecy against them with a declaration, that it was occasioned by their insulting over the Jews upon the taking of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar. (xxvi. 2, 3.) Son of man, Because that Tyrus hath said against Jerusalem, Aha, she is broken that was the gates of the people ; she is turned unto me, I shall be replenished, now she is laid waste : Therefore thus saith the Lord God, Behold, I am against thee, O Tyrus, and will cause many nations to come up against thee, as the sea causeth his waves to come up.

¹ Οἱ μὲν οὖν ποιηταὶ τὴν Σίδωνα τεθρυλλήκασιν μᾶλλον. "Ὁμηρος δὲ οὐδὲ μὲμνηται τῆς Τύρου. Poetæ quidem magis Sidonem celebrant, atqui adeo Homerus Tyri non meminit. [Translated in the text.] Strabo, ibid. p. 1097.

² Post multos deinde annos a rege Ascalionorum expugnati, navibus appulsi Tyron urbem—condiderunt. [Many years afterwards, the inhabitants of Sidon being driven from their city, by the king of Ascalon, and conveyed by their ships, went and built Tyre.] Justin. Lib. xviii. cap. iii. sect. v. p. 362. Edit. Grævii.

³ Plutarch, in Antonio, p. 913. Vol. I. Edit. Paris. 1624. Shakspeare, Dryden.

These were the occasions of the prophecies against Tyre : and by carefully considering and comparing the prophecies together, we shall find the following particulars included in them ; that the city was to be taken and destroyed by the Chaldæans, who were, at the time of the delivery of the prophecy, an inconsiderable people, and particularly by Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon ; that the inhabitants should fly over the Mediterranean into the islands and countries adjoining, and even there should not find a quiet settlement ; that the city should be restored after seventy years, and return to her gain and merchandise ; that it should be taken and destroyed again ; that the people should, in time, forsake their idolatry, and become converts to the true religion and worship of God; and, finally, that the city should be totally destroyed, and become a place only for fishers to spread their nets upon. We shall find these particulars to be not only distinctly foretold, but likewise exactly fulfilled.

I. The city was to be taken and destroyed by the Chaldæans, who were, at the time of the delivery of the prophecy, an inconsiderable people. This, we think, is sufficiently implied in these words of the prophet Isaiah, (xxiii. 13.) Behold, the land of the Chaldæans; this people was not till the Assyrian founded it for them that dwell in the wilderness, they set up the towers thereof, they raised up the palaces thereof; and he brought it to ruin. Behold, an exclamation to show that he is going to utter something new and extraordinary; the land of the Chaldæans, that is, Babylon, and the country about Babylon; this people was not, was of no note or eminence, till the Assyrians founded it for them that dwell in the wilderness, they dwelt before in tents, and led a wandering life in the wilderness, till the Assyrians built Babylon for their reception. Babel, or Babylon, was first built by the children of men after the flood. After the dispersion of mankind, Nimrod made it the capital of his kingdom. With Nimrod it sunk again, till the Assyrians rebuilt it for the purposes here mentioned; they set up the towers thereof, they raised up the palaces thereof, and Herodotus, Ctesias, and other ancient historians agree, that the kings of Assyria fortified and beautified Babylon; and he, that is, this people, mentioned before, the Chaldæans or Babylonians, brought it to ruin, that is, Tyre, which is the subject of the whole prophecy. The Assyrians were, at that time, the great monarchs of the east; the Chaldæans were their slaves and subjects; and therefore it is the more extraordinary that the prophet should, so many years beforehand, foresee the successes and conquests of the Chaldæans.

Ezekiel lived nearer the time, and he declares, expressly, that the city should be taken and destroyed by Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon; (xxvi. 7—11.) Thus saith the Lord God, Behold, I will bring upon Tyrus, Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, a king of kings from the north, with horses, and with chariots, and with horsemen, and companies, and much people;—he shall slay thy people by the sword, and thy strong garrisons shall go down to the ground. Shalmanezar, king of Assyria,¹ had besieged Tyre, but without success; the Tyrians had, with a few ships, beaten his large fleet; but yet Nebuchadnezzar should prevail. Ezekiel not only foretold the siege, but mentions it afterwards as a past transaction, (xxix. 18.) Son of man, Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, caused his army to serve a great service against Tyrus; every head was made bald, and every shoulder was peeled.

Menander, the Ephesian, translated the Phœnician annals into

¹ Annales Menandri apud Josephum, Antiq. Lib. ix. cap. xiv. sect. ii. p. 428. Edit. Hudson.

Greek; and ¹ Josephus asserts, upon their authority, that Nebuchadnezzar besieged Tyre thirteen years, when Ithobal was king there, and began the siege in the seventh year of Ithobal's reign, and that he subdued Syria and all Phœnicia. The same ² historian likewise observes, that Philostratus, in his Indian and Phœnician histories, affirms that this king (Nebuchadnezzar) besieged Tyre thirteen years, Ithobal reigning at that time in Tyre. The siege continuing so long, the soldiers must need endure many hardships, so that hereby we better understand the justness of Ezekiel's expression, that Nebuchadnezzar caused his army to serve a great service against Tyrus; every head was made bald, and every shoulder was peeled: such light doth profane history cast upon sacred. It farther appears from the Phœnician annals, quoted by the same ³ historian, that the Tyrians received their kings afterwards from Babylon, which plainly evinces that some of the blood royal must have been carried captives thither. The Phœnician annals too, as Dr. ⁴ Prideaux hath clearly shown, agree exactly with Ezekiel's account of the time and year, wherein the city was taken. Tyre, therefore, according to the prophecies, was subdued and taken by Nebuchadnezzar and the Chaldeans: and, after this, we hear little more of that part of the city which stood upon the continent. It is some satisfaction that we are able to produce such authorities as we have produced, out of heathen historians, for transactions of such remote antiquity.

II. The inhabitants should pass over the Mediterranean into the islands and countries adjoining, and even there should find no quiet settlement. This is plainly signified by Isaiah, (xxiii. 6.) Pass ye over to Tarshish, that is, to Tartessus, in Spain, howl ye inhabitants of the isle: and again, (ver. 12.) Arise, pass over to Chittim, that is, the islands and countries bordering upon the Mediterranean; there also shalt thou have no rest. What the prophet delivers by way of advice, is to be understood as a prediction. Ezekiel intimates the same thing, (xxvi. 18.) The isles that are in the sea shall be troubled at thy departure. It is well known that the Phœnicians were the best navigators of antiquity, and sent forth colonies into several parts of the world. A great scholar of the last century hath written a whole ⁵ treatise of the colonies of the Phœnicians, a work (as indeed all his are) of immense learning and erudition. And of all the Phœnicians the Tyrians were the most celebrated for their shipping

¹ Joseph. contra Apion. Lib. i. sect. xx. et xxi. Edit. Hudson.

² Φιλόστρατος ἐν ταῖς Ἰνδικαῖς αὐτοῦ καὶ Φοινικικαῖς ἱστορίαις, ὅτι οὗτος ὁ βασιλεὺς ἐπολιόρησε Τύρον ἔτη ιγ. βασιλεύοντος κατ' ἐκείνον τὸν καιρὸν Ἰθοβάλου τῆς Τύρου. Philostratus tam in Indicis ejus quam Phœniciis historiis, quod hic rex tredecim annos Tyrum oppugnaverit, cum illo tempore Ithobalus in Tyro regnaret. [Philostratus, both in his histories of India and Phœnicia, asserts, "that this king besieged Tyre for the space of thirteen years, at the time that Ithobalus was king of Tyre."] Joseph. Antiq. Lib. x. cap. xi. sect. i. p. 460. Edit. Hudson.

³ Joseph. contra Apion. Lib. i. sect. xxi. p. 1344. Edit. Hudson.

⁴ Prideaux, Connect. Part i. Book ii. Anno 573. Nebuchadnezzar 32.

⁵ Bocharti Chanaan.

and colonies. Tyre exceeded Sidon in this respect, as ¹ Strabo testifies, and sent forth colonies into Africa and Spain, unto and beyond the pillars of Hercules: and ² Quintus Curtius saith, that her colonies were diffused almost over the whole world. The Tyrians, therefore, having planted colonies at Tarshish, and upon the coasts of Chittim, it was natural for them, when they were pressed with dangers and difficulties at home, to fly to their friends and countrymen abroad for refuge and protection. That they really did so, St. Jerome asserts, upon the authority of Assyrian histories, which are now lost and perished. "We have read," ³ saith he, in the histories of the Assyrians, "that when the Tyrians were besieged, after they saw no hope of escaping, they went on board their ships, and fled to Carthage, or to some islands of the Ionean and Ægean sea." And in another place he ⁴ saith, "that when the Tyrians saw that the works for carrying on the siege were perfected, and the foundations of the walls were shaken by the battering of the rams, whatsoever precious things in gold, silver, clothes, and various kinds of furniture the nobility had, they put them on board their ships, and carried to the islands; so that the city being taken, Nebuchadnezzar found nothing worthy of his labour." It must have been grievous to Nebuchadnezzar, after so long and laborious a siege, to be disappointed of the spoil of so rich a city; and therefore Ezekiel was commissioned to promise him the conquest of Egypt for his reward; (xxix. 18, 19.) Son of man, Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, caused his army to serve a great service against Tyrus: every head was made bald, and every shoulder was peeled: yet had he no wages, nor his army, for Tyrus, for the service that he had served against it. Therefore, thus saith the Lord God, Behold, I will give the land of Egypt unto Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, and he shall take her multitude, and take her spoil, and take her prey, and it shall be the wages for his army.

But though the Tyrians should pass over to Tarshish and to Chittim, yet even there they should find no quiet settlement, there also shalt thou have no rest. Megasthenes, ⁵ who lived about three

¹ Αἱ δὲ εἰς Λιβύην καὶ τὴν Ἰβηρίαν ἀποίκιαι, μέχρι καὶ ἔξω στεγλῶν, τὴν Τύρον πλέον ἐξυμνοῦσι μᾶλλον. Colonie tamen in Africam et Hispaniam usque ad loca extra columnas deductæ, Tyrum plurimum celebraverunt. ["But the colonies sent into Africa and Spain, to and beyond the pillars of Hercules, celebrated Tyre much in their songs."] Strabo, Lib. xvii. p. 1097.

² Colonie certe ejus pene orbe toto diffusæ sunt. [Translated in the text.] Quint. Curt. Lib. iv. cap. iv.

³ Legimus in historiis Assyriorum, obsessos Tyrios, postquam nullam spem evadendi videbant, conscensis navibus fugisse Carthaginem, seu ad alias Ionii Ægeique maris insulas. [Translated in the text.] Hieron. in Is. xxiii. 6. p. 144. Vol. III. Edit. Benedict.

⁴ Quod quum viderent Tyrii jam jamque perfectum, et percussione arietum murorum fundamenta quaterentur, quicquid preciosum in auro, argento, vestibusque, et variâ supellectili nobilitas habuit, impositum navibus ad insulas asportavit; ita ut captâ urbe, nihil dignum labore suo inveniret Nabuchodonosor. [Translated in the text.] Idem in Ezek. cap. xxix. p. 909.

⁵ Arrian, de Exped. Alex. Lib. v. cap. vi. p. 203. Ejusdem Hist. Ind. cap. v. p. 318.

hundred years before Christ, and was employed by Seleucus Nicator in an embassy to the king of India, wrote afterwards a history of India, wherein he mentioned Nebuchadnezzar with great honour. This historian is quoted by several ancient authors, and he is cited particularly by ¹ Strabo, Josephus, and Abydenus, in Eusebius, for saying that Nebuchadnezzar surpassed Hercules in bravery and great exploits, that he subdued great part of Africa and Spain, and proceeded as far as to the pillars of Hercules. After Nebuchadnezzar had subdued Tyre and Egypt, we may suppose that he carried his arms farther westward: and if he proceeded so far as Megasthenes reports, the Tyrians might well be said to have no rest, their conqueror pursuing them from one country to another. But besides this, and after this, the Carthaginians and other colonies of the Tyrians, lived in a very unsettled state. Their history is made up of little but wars and tumults, even before their three fatal wars with the Romans, in every one of which their affairs grew worse and worse. Sicily and Spain, Europe and Africa, the land, and their own element, the sea, were theatres of their calamities and miseries; till at last not only the new, but old Carthage, too, was utterly destroyed. As the Carthaginians sprung from the Tyrians, and the Tyrians from the Sidonians, and Sidon was the first-born of Canaan, (Gen. x. 15.) so the curse upon Canaan seemeth to have pursued them to the most distant parts of the earth.

III. The city should be restored after seventy years, and return to her gain and her merchandise. This circumstance is expressly foretold by Isaiah, (xxiii. 15—17.) And it shall come to pass in that day, that Tyre shall be forgotten seventy years, according to the days of one king, or kingdom, meaning the Babylonian, which was to continue seventy years: after the end of seventy years shall Tyre sing as an harlot. Take an harp, go about the city, thou harlot that hast been forgotten, make sweet melody, sing many songs, that thou mayest be remembered. And it shall come to pass after the end of seventy years, that the Lord will visit Tyre, and she shall turn to her hire, and shall commit fornication with all the kingdoms of the world upon the face of the earth. Tyre is represented as a harlot, and from thence these figures are borrowed, the plain meaning of which is, that she should lie neglected of traders and merchants for seventy years, as long as the Babylonian empire lasted, and after that she should recover her liberties and her trade, and draw in several of all nations to deal with her, and particularly the kings of the earth, to buy her purples, which were worn chiefly by emperors and kings, and for which Tyre was famous above all places in the world.

Edit. Gronov. Voss. de Hist. Græc. Lib. i. cap. xi. Prid. Connect. Part i. B. viii. Anno 298. Ptolemy Soter 7.

¹ Strabo, Lib. xv. p. 687. Edit. Paris. p. 1007. Edit. Amstel. 1707. Joseph. Antiq. Lib. x. cap. xi. sect. i. p. 460. Contra Apion. Lib. i. sect. xx. p. 1343. Edit. Hudson. Euseb. Præpar. Evang. Lib. ix. cap. xli. p. 456. Edit. Vigeri.

Seventy years was the time prefixed for the duration of the Babylonian empire. So long the nations were to groan under that tyrannical yoke, though these nations were subdued some sooner, some later than others. (Jer. xxv. 11, 12.) These nations shall serve the king of Babylon seventy years : And it shall come to pass, when seventy years are accomplished, that I will punish the king of Babylon, and that nation, saith the Lord, for their iniquity, and the land of the Chaldeans, and will make it perpetual desolations. And accordingly at the end of seventy years Cyrus and the Persians subverted the Babylonian empire, and restored the conquered nations to their liberties.

But we may compute these seventy years after another manner. Tyre was ¹ taken by Nebuchadnezzar in the thirty-second year of his reign, and in the year 573 before Christ. Seventy years from thence will bring us down to the year 503 before Christ, and the nineteenth of Darius Hystaspis. At that time it appears from ² history that the Ionians had rebelled against Darius, and the Phœnicians assisted him with their fleets : and consequently it is reasonable to conclude that they were now restored to their former privileges. In the succeeding reign we find ³ that they, together with the Sidonians, furnished Xerxes with several ships for his expedition into Greece. And by the time of Alexander the Tyrians were grown to such power and greatness, that they stopped the progress of that rapid conqueror longer than any part of the Persian empire besides. But all this is to be understood of the insular Tyre ; for as the old city flourished most before the time of Nebuchadnezzar, so the new city flourished most afterwards, and this is the Tyre that henceforth is so much celebrated in history.

IV. The city should be taken and destroyed again. For when it is said by the prophets, (Isai. xxiii. 6.) Howl ye inhabitants of the isle ; (Ezek. xxvii. 32.) What city is like Tyrus, like the destroyed in the midst of the sea ? (xxviii. 8.) They shall bring thee down to the pit, and thou shalt die the deaths of them that are slain in the midst of the seas : these expressions can imply no less than that the insular Tyre should be destroyed as well as that upon the continent ; and as the one was accomplished by Nebuchadnezzar, so was the other by Alexander the Great. But the same thing may be inferred more directly from the words of Zechariah, who prophesied in the reign of Darius, (Zech. i. 1.) probably Darius Hystaspis, many years after the former destruction of the city, and consequently he must be understood to speak of this latter. His words are these, (ix. 3, 4.) And Tyrus did build herself a strong hold, and heaped up silver as the dust, and fine gold as the mire of the streets. Behold the Lord will cast her out, and he will smite her power in the sea, and she shall be devoured with fire. It is very true that Tyrus did build herself a strong hold: for her situation was very strong in an island, and besides the sea to defend her, she was ¹ fortified with a wall of one hundred and fifty feet in height, and of a proportionable thickness. She heaped up silver as the dust, and fine gold as the mire of the streets, being the most celebrated place in the world for trade and riches, the mart of nations as she is called, conveying the commodities of the east to the west, and of the west to the east. But yet, Behold the Lord will cast her out, and he will smite her power in the sea, and she shall be devoured with fire. Ezekiel had likewise foretold that the city should be consumed with fire, (xxviii. 18.) I will bring forth a fire from the midst of thee, it shall devour thee, and I will bring thee to ashes upon the earth, in the sight of all them that behold thee. And accordingly Alexander besieged, and took, and ² set the city on fire. The ruins of old Tyre contributed much to the taking of the new city; for ³ with the stones and timber and rubbish of the old city Alexander built a bank or causeway from the continent to the island, thereby literally fulfilling the words of the prophet Ezekiel, (xxvi. 12.) They shall lay thy stones, and thy timber, and thy dust in the midst of the water. He was seven months in completing this work, but the time and labour were well employed; for by means hereof he was enabled to storm and take the city.

¹ See Prideaux, Connect. Part i. Book ii. and Book iv.

² Herod. Lib. v. cap. cviii, &c. p. 330. Edit. Gale.

³ Herod. Lib. vii. cap. lxxxix, &c. p. 412. Edit. Gale. Diod. Sic. Lib. xi. p. 244. Edit. Steph. p. 3. Tom. II. Edit. Rhod.

As in the former siege the inhabitants, according to the prophecies, fled over the Mediterranean to the islands and countries adjoining, so they did likewise in this latter siege; for ⁴ Diodorus Siculus and Quintus Curtius both testify, that they sent their wives and children to Carthage; and upon the taking of the place the ⁵ Sidonians secretly conveyed away fifteen thousand more in their ships. Happy were they who thus escaped, for of those who remained behind, the ⁶ conqueror slew eight thousand in the storming and taking of the city, he caused two thousand afterwards cruelly

¹ Arrian, de Exped. Alex. Lib. ii. cap. xxi. p. 96. Edit. Gronov.—τό τε ὕψος εἰς πεντήκοντα καὶ ἑκατὸν μάλιστα πόδας, καὶ ἐς πλάτος ξύμμετρον.—CL. admodum pedes altus, latitudine altitudini respondente. [The height was nearly an hundred and fifty feet, and the thickness proportionable.]

² Quint. Curt. Lib. iv. cap. iv.—ignemque tectis injici jubet.

³ Quint. Curt. Lib. iv. cap. ii. Diod. Sic. Lib. xvii. p. 583. Edit. Steph. p. 519. Tom. II. Edit. Rhod.

⁴ —τέκνα μὲν καὶ γυναῖκας καὶ τοὺς γεγρακότας εἰς Καρχήδονα διακομίζειν ἐψηφίσαντο. Liberos et uxores cum senio confectis Carthaginem transportare decernunt. [They determined to send their children and wives, and aged people to Carthage.] τέλος δὲ, τῶν τέκνων καὶ γυναικῶν μέρος μὲν ἐφθασαν ὑπεκθήμενοι πρὸς τοὺς Καρχηδονίους. tandem deponendâ quâdam apud Carthaginenses liberorum et uxorū parte (hostem) antevortunt. [At length they prevented a part of their children and wives from falling into the hands of the enemy, by sending them away secretly to the Carthaginians.] Diod. Sic. Lib. xviii. ibid. Conjuges liberosque devehendos Carthaginem tradiderunt. [They delivered their wives and children to be conveyed to Carthage.] Quint. Curt. Lib. iv. cap. iii.

⁵ Quint. Curt. Lib. iv. cap. iv.

⁶ Arrian, Lib. ii. cap. xxiv. p. 100. Edit. Gronov. Quintus Curtius, ibid.

to be crucified, and thirty thousand he sold for slaves. They had before sold some of the captive Jews, and now it was returned upon them, according to the prediction of Joel, (iii. 6—8.) The children also of Judah, and the children of Jerusalem have ye sold; Behold I will return your recompence upon your own head, and will sell your sons and your daughters. This is the main of the prophecy, that as they had sold the captive Jews, so they should be sold themselves: and having seen this so punctually fulfilled, we may more easily believe that the other parts were so too, though at this distance of time, and in this scarcity of ancient historians, we are not able to prove all the particulars. When the city was taken before, the Tyrians received their kings afterwards from Babylon; and now¹ their king held his crown by Alexander's appointment. The cases are parallel in many respects: but the city recovered much sooner from the calamities of this siege than from the fatal consequences of the former. For in² nineteen years time it was able to withstand the fleets and armies of Antigonus, and sustained a siege of fifteen months before it was taken: a plain proof, as Dr. Prideaux observes, of "the great advantage of trade. For this city being the grand mart, where most of the trade both of the east and west did then centre, by virtue hereof it was, that it soon revived to its pristine vigour."

V. It is usual with God to temper his judgments with mercy; and amidst these calamities it is also foretold, that there should come a time when the Tyrians should forsake their idolatry, and become converts to the true religion and worship of God. The Psalmist is thought to have hinted as much, in saying, (xlv. 12.) The daughter of Tyre shall be there with a gift, and again, (lxxii. 10.) The kings of Tarshish and of the isles shall bring presents. Zechariah, when he foretels the calamities which the Tyrians and neighbouring nations should suffer from Alexander, (ix. 1—7.) at the same time predicts their conversion to the true God; but he that remaineth, even he shall be for our God. But nothing can be plainer than Isaiah's declaration, that they should consecrate the gains of their merchandise for the maintenance of those who minister to the Lord in holy things, (xxiii. 18.) And her merchandise and her hire shall be holiness to the Lord: it shall not be treasured, nor laid up: for her merchandise shall be for them that dwell before the Lord, to eat sufficiently, and for durable clothing. Here particularly we must be much obliged to the learned³ Vitringa, who hath fully shown the completion of this article; as indeed every one who would rightly understand the prophet Isaiah, must be greatly obliged to that excellent commentator, and will receive more light and assistance from him than from all besides him.

¹ Diod. Sic. Lib. xvii. p. 587. Edit. Steph. p. 524. Tom. II. Edit. Rhod. τῆς μὲν Τυρίων πόλεως κατέστησε βασιλεία τὸν ὀνομαζόμενον Βαλλώνυμον. Tyriorum urbi regem præfecit cui Ballonymo nomen. [He appointed one named Ballonymus king of the city of the Tyrians.]

² Diod. Sic. Lib. xix. p. 704. Edit. Steph. p. 703. Tom. II. Edit. Rhod. Prideaux, Connect. Part i. Book viii. Anno 313. Alexander Ægus iv.

³ Vitring. Comment. in Iesaiam, cap. xxiii. Vol. I. p. 704.

The Tyrians were much addicted to the worship of Hercules, as he was called by the Greeks, or Baal, as he is denominated in Scripture. But in process of time, by the means of some Jews and proselytes living and conversing among them, some of them also became proselytes to the Jewish religion; so that a great multitude of people from the sea coast of Tyre and Sidon came to hear our Saviour (Luke vi. 17.) and to be healed of their diseases: and our Saviour, who was sent only to the lost sheep of the house of Israel, yet came into the coasts of Tyre and Sidon; (Matt. xv. 21, &c. Mark vii. 24, &c.) and the first fruits of the Gospel there was a Tyrian woman, a woman of Canaan, as she is called, a Syro-phenician by nation. When St. Paul, in his way to Jerusalem, came to Tyre, he found disciples there who were inspired by the Holy Ghost, and prophesied, (Acts xxi. 4.) and with them he tarried seven days. The Tyrians were such sincere converts to Christianity, that in the time of Dioclesian's persecution they exhibited several glorious examples of confessors and martyrs, as ¹ Eusebius himself saw, and hath amply testified in his book of the martyrs of Palestine. Afterwards, when the storm of persecution was blown over, the Tyrians, under their bishop Paulinus, built an oratory, or rather a temple, for the public worship of God, the most magnificent and sumptuous in all Palestine and Phœnicia, which temple ² Eusebius hath described, and celebrated in a handsome panegyric, whereof he hath inserted a copy in his history, but modestly concealed the name of the author. Eusebius, therefore, commenting upon this passage of Isaiah, might very well ³ say that, "it is fulfilled in our time. For since a church of God hath been founded in Tyre as well as in other nations, many of its goods gotten by merchandise are consecrated to the Lord, being offered to his church:" as he afterwards explains himself, "for the use of the ministers of the altar or Gospel, according to the institution of our Lord, that they who wait at the altar should live of the altar." In like manner ⁴ St. Jerome, "We may behold churches in Tyre built to Christ; we may see their riches that they are not laid up, nor treasured, but given to those who dwell before the Lord. For the Lord hath appointed,

¹ Euseb. Eccles. Hist. Lib. viii. cap. vii. de Martyr. Palæstinæ, cap. v. et vii.

² Euseb. Hist. Lib. x. cap. iv.

³ "Ὁ δὲ καὶ πληροῦται καθ' ἡμᾶς αὐτούς. quod nostro tempore impletum videmus. Nam cum ecclesia Dei in urbe Tyro perinde ac in reliquis gentibus fundata sit, multæ ex ejus mercibus negotiatione partis Domino consecrantur, ecclesiæ ejus oblatæ: videlicet ut mox exponit, in usum ministrorum altaris sive evangelii, secundum institutum Domini, ut ministri altaris ex eo vivant. [Translated in the text.]

⁴ Cernamus in Tyro exstructas Christi ecclesias, consideremus opes omnium, quod non reponantur, nec thesaurizentur, sed dentur his qui habitant coram Domino.—Sic enim et Dominus constituit, ut qui evangelium prædicant, vivant de evangelio. [Translated in the text.] Hieron. in Is. cap. xlii. p. 146. Vol. III. Edit. Benedict.

that they who preach the Gospel should live of the Gospel." And how liberally and munificently the bishops and clergy were at that time maintained, how plentifully they were furnished with every thing, to eat sufficiently, and for durable clothing, no man can want to be informed, who is ever so little conversant in ecclesiastical history. To these proofs we will only add, that as Tyre consecrated its merchandise and hire unto the Lord, so it had the ¹honour of being erected into an archbishopric, and the first archbishopric under the patriarchate of Jerusalem, having fourteen bishops under its primacy; and in this state it continued several years.

VI. But after all the city should be totally destroyed, and become a place only for fishers to spread their nets upon. When the prophets denounced the destruction of a city or country, it was not intended that such denunciation should take effect immediately. The sentence of condemnation, as I may say, was then passed upon it, but the execution might be respited for some time. When it was threatened that Babylon should become a desolation without an inhabitant, there were yet many ages before it was reduced to that condition; it decayed by degrees, till at last it came to nothing; and now the place is so little known, that you may look for Babylon in the midst of Babylon. In like manner Tyre was not to be ruined and desolated all at once. Other things were to happen first. It was to be restored after seventy years; it was to be destroyed and restored again, in order to its being adopted into the Church. These events were to take place, before Ezekiel's prophecies could be fully accomplished; (xxvi. 3—5.) Thus saith the Lord God, Behold, I am against thee, O Tyrus, and will cause many nations to come up against thee, as the sea causeth his waves to come up. And they shall destroy the walls of Tyrus, and break down her towers; I will also scrape her dust from her, and make her like the top of a rock. It shall be a place for the spreading of nets in the midst of the sea: for I have spoken it, saith the Lord God. He repeats it to show the certainty of it, (ver. 14.) I will make thee like the top of a rock; thou shalt be a place to spread nets upon; thou shalt be built no more; for I the Lord have spoken it, saith the Lord God: and again, (ver. 21.) I will make thee a terror, and thou shalt be no more; though thou be sought for, yet shalt thou never be found again, saith the Lord God.

These prophecies, like most others, were to receive their completion by degrees. Nebuchadnezzar, as we have seen, destroyed the old city; and Alexander employed the ruins and rubbish in making his causeway from the continent to the island, which henceforwards were joined together. "It is no wonder, therefore," as Bishop Pococke observes, "that there are no signs of the ancient city; and as it is a sandy shore, the face of every thing is altered, and the great aqueduct in many parts is almost buried in the sand." So that as to this part of the city, the prophecy hath literally been fulfilled, Thou shalt be built no more; though thou be sought for, yet shalt thou never be found again. It may be questioned whether the new city ever after that arose to that height of power, wealth, and greatness, to which it was elevated in the times of Isaiah and Ezekiel. It received a great blow from Alexander, not only by his taking and burning the city, but much more by his building of Alexandria in Egypt, which in time deprived it of much of its trade, and thereby contributed more effectually to its ruin. It had the misfortune afterwards of changing its masters often, being sometimes in the hands of the Ptolemies, kings of Egypt, and sometimes of the Seleucidæ, kings of Syria, till at length it fell under the dominion of the Romans. It was taken by the ¹ Saracens about the year of Christ 639, in the reign of Omar their third emperor. It was retaken by the ² Christians during the time of the holy war in the year 1124, Baldwin the second of that name being then king of Jerusalem, and assisted by a fleet of the Venetians. From the Christians it was ³ taken again in the year 1289, by the Mamalucs of Egypt, under their Sultan Alphix, who sacked and rased this and Sidon and other strong towns, that they might not ever again afford any harbour or shelter to the Christians. From the Mamalucs it was ⁴ again taken in the year 1516 by Selim, the ninth emperor of the Turks; and under their dominion it continues at present. But alas! how fallen, how changed from what it was formerly? For from being the centre of trade, frequented by all the merchant ships of the east and west, it is now become a heap of ruins, visited only by the boats of a few poor fishermen. So that as to this part likewise of the city, the prophecy hath literally been fulfilled, I will make thee like the top of a rock; thou shalt be a place to spread nets upon.

¹ Sandys's Travels, B. III. p. 168. 6th edit. 1670. Hoffman's Lexicon, &c.

² Pococke's Descript. of the East, Vol. II. B. i. chap. xx. p. 81, 82.

The famous ⁵ Huetius knew one Hadrianus Parvillerius, a Jesuit, a very candid man, and a master of Arabic, who resided ten years in Syria; and he remembers to have heard him sometimes say, that when he approached the ruins of Tyre, and beheld the rocks stretched forth to the sea, and the great stones scattered up and

¹ Ockley's Hist. of the Saracens, Vol. I. p. 340.

² Abul-Pharajii Hist. Dyn. ix. p. 250. Vers. Pocockii. Savage's Abridgment of Knolles and Rycart, Vol. I. p. 26.

³ Savage's Abridgment, Vol. I. p. 95. Pococke's Descript. of the East, Vol. II. Book i. chap. xx. p. 83.

⁴ Savage's Abridgment, Vol. I. p. 241.

⁵ Hadrianum Parvillerium, e societate Jesu, virum candidissimum et Arabice doctissimum, qui decem annos in Syriâ egit, memini me audire aliquando cum diceret, sibi olim ad collapsas Tyri ruinas accedenti, et rupes mari prætentas, ac disiectos passim in littore lapides procul spectanti, sole, fluctibus et auris detersos ac levigatos, et siccandis solum piscatorum retibus, quæ tum forte plurima desuper expansa erant, utiles, venisse in memoriam hujus prophetiæ Ezekielis de Tyro (xxvi. 5. 14.) Dabo te in limpidissimam petram: siccatio sagenarum eris, nec edificaberis ultra, quia ego locutus sum, ait Dominus Deus. [Translated in the text.] Huetii Demonstrat. Evang. Prop. vi. ad finem.

down on the shore, made clean and smooth by the sun and waves and winds, and useful only for the drying of fishermen's nets, many of which happened at that time to be spread thereon, it brought to his memory this prophecy of Ezekiel concerning Tyre; (xxvi. 5. 14.) I will make thee like the top of a rock; thou shalt be a place to spread nets upon; thou shalt be built no more; for I the Lord have spoken it, saith the Lord God.

Dr. ¹ Shaw, in his account of Tyre, thus expresseth himself, "I visited several creeks and inlets in order to discover what provision there might have been formerly made for the security of their vessels. Yet, notwithstanding that Tyre was the chief maritime power of this country, I could not observe the least token of either cothon or harbour that could have been of any extraordinary capacity. The coasting ships, indeed, still find a tolerable good shelter from the northern winds under the southern shore, but were obliged immediately to retire, when the winds change to the west or south; so that there must have been some better station than this for their security and reception. In the N.N.E. part likewise of the city, we see the traces of a safe and commodious bason, lying within the walls: but which, at the same time, is very small, scarce forty yards in diameter. Neither could it ever have enjoyed a larger area, unless the buildings, which now circumscribe it, were encroachments upon its original dimensions. Yet even this port, small as it is at present, is notwithstanding so choked up with sand and rubbish, that the boats of those poor fishermen who now and then visit this once renowned emporium, can with great difficulty only be admitted."

But the fullest for our purpose is Mr. Maundrell, whom it is a pleasure to quote as well as to read, and whose journal of his journey from Aleppo to Jerusalem, though a little book, is yet worth a folio, being so accurately and ingeniously written, that it might serve as a model for all writers of travels. "This city," saith ² he, "standing in the sea upon a peninsula, promises at a distance something very magnificent. But when you come to it, you find no similitude of that glory, for which it was so renowned in ancient times, and which the prophet Ezekiel describes, chap. xxvi. xxvii. xxviii. On the north side it has an old Turkish ungarrisoned castle; besides which you see nothing here but a mere Babel of broken walls, pillars, vaults, &c., there being not so much as one entire house left; its present inhabitants are only a few poor wretches, harbouring themselves in the vaults, and subsisting chiefly upon fishing, who seem to be preserved in this place by Divine Providence, as a visible argument, how God has fulfilled his word concerning Tyre, viz. that it should be as the top of a rock, a place for fishers to dry their nets on." world for trade and commerce. But trade is a fluctuating thing: it passed from Tyre to Alexandria, from Alexandria to Venice, from Venice to Antwerp, from Antwerp to Amsterdam and London, the English rivalling the Dutch, as the French are now rivalling both. All nations almost are wisely applying themselves to trade: and it behoves those who are in possession of it to take the greatest care that they do not lose it. It is a plant of tender growth, and requires sun, and soil, and fine seasons, to make it thrive and flourish. It will not grow like the palm-tree, which, with the more weight and pressure rises the more. Liberty is a friend to that, as that is a friend to liberty. But the greatest enemy to both is licentiousness, which tramples upon all law and lawful authority, encourages riots and tumults, promotes drunkenness and debauchery, sticks at nothing to supply its extravagance, practises every art of illicit gain, ruins credit, ruins trade, and will in the end ruin liberty itself. Neither kingdoms nor commonwealths, neither public companies nor private persons, can long carry on a beneficial flourishing trade without virtue, and what virtue teacheth, sobriety, industry, frugality, modesty, honesty, punctuality, humanity, charity, the love of our country, and the fear of God. The prophets will inform us how the Tyrians lost it; and the like causes will always produce the like effects, Isai. xxiii. 8, 9. Who hath taken this counsel against Tyre, the crowning city, whose merchants are princes, whose traffickers are the honourable of the earth? The Lord of hosts hath purposed it, to stain the pride of all glory, and to bring into contempt all the honourable of the earth. (Ezek. xxvii. 3, 4.) Thus saith the Lord God, O Tyrus, thou hast said, I am of perfect beauty. Thy borders are in the midst of the seas, thy builders have perfected thy beauty. (xxviii. 5, &c.) By thy great wisdom, and by thy traffic, hast thou increased thy riches, and thy heart is lifted up because of thy riches. By the multitude of thy merchandise they have filled the midst of thee with violence, and thou hast sinned; therefore will I cast thee as profane out of the mountain of God. Thine heart was lifted up because of thy beauty, thou hast corrupted thy wisdom by reason of thy brightness. Thou hast defiled thy sanctuaries by the multitude of thine iniquities, by the iniquity of thy traffic; therefore will I bring forth a fire from the midst of thee, it shall devour thee, and I will bring thee to ashes upon the earth, in the sight of all them that behold thee. All they that know thee among the people shall be astonished at thee; thou shalt be a terror, and never shalt thou be any more.

Such hath been the fate of this city, once the most famous in the

¹ Shaw's Travels, p. 330.

² Maundrell, p. 48, 49. 5th edit.

XII.

THE PROPHECIES CONCERNING EGYPT.

EGYPT is one of the first and most famous countries that we read of in history. In the Hebrew Scriptures it is called Mizraim and the land of Ham, having been first inhabited after the deluge by Noah's youngest son, Ham or Hammon, and by his son Mizraim. The name of Egypt is of more uncertain derivation. It appears that the river was so called in ¹ Homer's time; and from thence, as Hesychius imagines, the name might be derived to the country. Others more probably conceive that the meaning of the name ² Egyptus is aïa Cuphti, the land of Cuphti, as it was formerly called by the Egyptians themselves, and their neighbours, the Arabians. All agree in this, that the kingdom of Egypt was very ancient; but some have carried this antiquity to an extravagant and fabulous height, their dynasties being utterly irreconcilable to reason and history both, and no ways to be solved or credited but by supposing that they extend beyond the deluge, and that they contain the catalogues of several contemporary, as well as of some successive kings and kingdoms. It is certain, that in the days of Joseph, if not before those, in the days of Abraham, it was a great and flourishing kingdom. There are monuments of its greatness yet remaining to the surprise and astonishment of all posterity, of which, as we know not the time of their erection, so in all probability we shall never know the time of their destruction.

This country was also celebrated for its wisdom, no less than for its antiquity. It was, as I may call it, the great academy of the earlier ages. Hither the wits and sages of Greece and other countries repaired, and imbibed their learning at this fountain. It is mentioned to the commendation of Moses, (Acts vii. 22.) that he was learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians: and the highest character given of Solomon's wisdom (1 Kings iv. 30.) is, that it excelled the wisdom of all the children of the east country, and all

¹ Hom. Odyss. XIV. 257, 258.

Πεμπαῖοι δ' Αἰγυπτον ἐϋρρεΐτην ἰκόμεσθα.
Στήσα δ' ἐν Αἰγύπτῳ ποταμῷ νῆας ἀμφελίσσας.

Quinto die autem ad Ægyptum pulchrè fluentem venimus :
Statui vero in Ægypto fluvio naves remis utrinque-agitatas.

[The fifth fair morn we stem th' Ægyptian tide ;
And tilting o'er the bay the vessels ride :
To anchor there my vessels I command.]

Hesychius: Αἰγυπτος, ὁ Νεῖλος ὁ ποταμὸς ἀφ' οὗ καὶ ἡ χώρα ἀπὸ τῶν νεωτέρων Αἰγυπτος ἐκλήθη. Ægyptus, Nilus fluvius; a quo ipsa regio recentioribus appellata est Ægyptus. [Egypt, the river Nile, from which the country by later writers hath been called Egypt.]

² Mede's Works, Book i. Disc. i. p. 281. Hoffmanni Lexicon, &c.

the wisdom of Egypt. But with this wisdom, and this greatness, it was early corrupted; and was as much the parent of superstition, as it was the mistress of learning; and the one as well as the other were from thence propagated and diffused over other countries. It was indeed the grand corrupter of the world, the source of polytheism and idolatry to several of the eastern, and to most of the more western nations; and degenerated at last to such monstrous and beastly worship, that we shall scarcely find a parallel in all history.

However, this was the country where the children of Israel were in a manner born and bred; and it must be said they were much perverted by their education, and retained a fondness for the idols of Egypt ever afterwards. Several of Moses's laws and institutions were plainly calculated to wean them from, and to guard them against the manners and customs of the Egyptians. But still in their hearts and affections they were much inclined to return into Egypt. Even Solomon married his wife from thence. And upon all occasions they courted the friendship and alliance of Egypt rather than any of the neighbouring powers. Which prejudice of theirs was the more extraordinary, as the Egyptians generally treated them very injuriously. They oppressed them with most cruel servitude in Egypt. They gave them leave to depart, and then pursued them as fugitives. Shishak king of Egypt, came up against Jerusalem, (1 Kings xiv. 25, 26.) and plundered it. And in all their leagues and alliances Egypt was to them as a broken reed, (Isaiah xxxvi. 6.) whereon if a man lean, it will go into his hand, and pierce it. Upon all these accounts we might reasonably expect that Egypt would be the subject of several prophecies, and we shall not be deceived in our expectation.

It is remarkable, that the prophecies uttered against any city or country, often carry the inscription of the burden of that city or country. The prophecies against Nineveh, Babylon, and Tyre were inscribed (Nahum i. 1.) the burden of Nineveh, (Isaiah xlii. 1.) the burden of Babylon, and (Isaiah xxiii. 1.) the burden of Tyre: and so here likewise (Isaiah xix. 1.) the prophecies against Egypt have the title of the burden of Egypt. And by burden is commonly understood a threatening burdensome prophecy, big with ruin and destruction, which, like a dead weight, is hung upon a city or country, to sink it. But the word in the original is of more general import and signification. Sometimes it signifies a prophecy at large: as the prophecies of Habakkuk and Malachi are entitled the burden which Habakkuk the prophet did see, and the burden of the word of the Lord to Israel by Malachi: and it is rendered a vision or prophecy in the Septuagint and other ancient versions. Sometimes it signifies a prophecy of good as well as of evil: as it was said of the false prophets, who prophesied peace when there was no peace, (Lament. ii. 14.) Thy prophets have seen vain and foolish things for thee, they have seen for thee false burdens; and Zechariah's prophesy of the restoration and triumphs of the Jews in the latter days is entitled (Zech. xii. 1.) the burden of the word of the Lord for Israel. Sometimes it is translated a prophecy, where there is no prophecy, but only some grave moral sayings or sentences, as (Prov. xxx. 1.) the words of Agur the son of Jakeh, even the prophecy; and again (Prov. xxxvi. 1.) the words of king Lemuel, the prophecy that his mother taught him. We may farther observe, that the word is used of the author of the prophecy, as well as the subject of it: and there is the burden of the Lord, and the burden of the word of the Lord, as well as the burden of Babylon, and the burden of Egypt. We may be certain too, that this title was affixed to the prophecies by the prophets themselves, and not by the scribes who collected their writings afterwards, because it appears from Jeremiah (xxiii. 33, &c.) that the scoffers and infidels of his time made a jest and derision of it; and therefore they are forbidden to mention it any more as being a term of ambiguous signification; and instead of inquiring what is the burden of the Lord, they are commanded to say what hath the Lord answered? and what hath the Lord spoken? The ¹ word in the original is derived from a verb that signifies to take up, to lift up, to bring forth, and the like: and the proper meaning of it is any weighty important matter or sentence, which ought not to lie neglected, but is worthy of being carried in the memory, and deserves to be lifted up and uttered with emphasis. Such, eminently such, are all these prophecies, and those relating to Egypt as well as the rest. For they comprise the principal revolutions of that kingdom from the times of the prophets to this day.

I. The first great revolution, that we shall mention, was the conquest of this kingdom by Nebuchadnezzar, which was particularly foretold by Jeremiah and Ezekiel. These two prophets have both employed several sections and chapters upon this occasion. Jeremiah was carried into Egypt, and there foretold (chap. xliii.) the conquest of Egypt by Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon: and some of his prophecies are entitled, (xlvi. 13.) The word that the Lord spake to Jeremiah the prophet, how Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, should come and smite the land of Egypt. Ezekiel also declares, (xxx. 10, 11.) Thus saith the Lord God, I will also make the multitude of Egypt to cease by the hand of Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon: He and his people with him, the terrible of the nations shall be brought to destroy the land; and they shall draw their swords against Egypt, and fill the land with the slain: and the conquest of this kingdom was promised to Nebuchadnezzar as a reward for his services against Tyre, which, after a long siege, he took and destroyed, but was disappointed of the spoil, as was observed in the foregoing dissertation; (Ezek. xxix. 18, 19.) Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon caused his army to serve a great service against Tyrus: every head was made bald, and every shoulder was peeled: yet had he no wages, nor his army for Tyrus, for the service that he had served against it. Therefore, thus saith the Lord God, Behold, I will give the land of Egypt unto Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, and he shall take her multitude, and take her spoil, and take her prey, and it shall be the wages for his army.

¹ כִּשָּׂא a נִשָּׂא Tulit, Attulit, Protulit, &c. [Translated in the text.] Buxtorf.

Now for this early transaction we have the ¹ testimonies of Megasthenes and Berosus, two heathen historians, who lived about three hundred years before Christ, one of whom affirms, expressly, that Nebuchadnezzar conquered the greatest part of Africa, and the other affirms it in effect, in saying that when Nebuchadnezzar heard of the death of his father, having settled his affairs in Egypt, and committed the captives whom he took in Egypt to the care of some of his friends to bring them after him, he hasted directly to Babylon. If neither Herodotus nor Diodorus Siculus have recorded this transaction, what ² Scaliger said of one of them may be very justly applied to both, that those Egyptian priests who informed them of the Egyptian affairs, taught them only those things which made for the honour of their nation; other particulars of their idleness, servitude, and the tribute which they paid to the Chaldæans, they concealed. Josephus, we may presume, had good authorities, and was supported by earlier historians, when he ³ asserted, that Nebuchadnezzar, having subdued Coele-Syria, waged war against the Ammonites and Moabites; and, having conquered them, he invaded Egypt, and slew the king who then reigned, and appointed another.

It is indeed most highly probable, that Apries was dethroned, and Amasis constituted king, by Nebuchadnezzar; and I think we may infer as much from Herodotus himself. The name of the king of Egypt at that time, according to Jeremiah, was Pharaoh-Hopra, and he can be none other than the Apries of Herodotus. Ezekiel represents him as an arrogant impious prince, (xxix. 3.) as the great dragon, or crocodile, that lieth in the midst of his rivers, which hath said, My river is my own, and I have made it for myself: and, agreeably hereto, ¹ Herodotus informs us, that Apries proudly and wickedly boasted of having established his kingdom so surely, that it was not in the power of any god to dispossess him of it. However, Jeremiah foretold, that he should be taken and slain by his enemies, (xlv. 30.) Thus saith the Lord God, Behold, I will give Pharaoh-Hophra king of Egypt into the hand of his enemies, and into the hand of them that seek his life, as I gave Zedekiah, king of Judah, into the hand of Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon, his enemy, and that sought his life: and, accordingly, ² Apries was taken and strangled by Amasis, who was, by Nebuchadnezzar, constituted king in his room.

¹ καταστρέψασθαι γὰρ αὐτὸν φησὶ Λιβύης τὴν πολλήν· eum enim vastasse dicit magnam Libyæ partem. [For he says, that he laid waste a great part of Libya.] Megasthenes apud Joseph. Antiq. Lib. x. cap. xi. sect. i. Edit. Hudson. αἰσθόμενος δὲ μετ' οὐ πολὺν χρόνον τὴν τοῦ πατρὸς τελευτὴν Ναβουχοδονόσου, καὶ καταστήσας τὰ κατὰ τὴν Αἴγυπτον πράγματα. κ. τ. λ. Nabuchodonosorus vero, non multo post patris morte cognitâ, rebusque in Ægypto ordinatis, &c. [But Nebuchadnezzar, not long after, having heard of the death of his father, and having set in order his affairs in Egypt, &c.] Berosus, ibid. Vide etiam Eusebii Præp. Evangel. Lib. ix. cap. xl. et xli.

² Quod perspicuè indicatur Jeremiæ, id Herodotus ignoravit: quia sacerdotes illi Ægyptii, qui ei sciscitanti de rebus Ægyptiacis respondebant, ea, quæ ad laudem gentis faciebant, tantum docuerunt; cætera quæ ad illorum ignaviam, servitutem et tributa, quæ Chaldæis pendebant, tacerunt. Scalig. in Fragm. p. 11. [What is plainly told to Jeremiah, Herodotus was ignorant of. For these Egyptian priests, who answered his questions concerning the affairs of Egypt, told him only those things which tended to the honour of their nation, but concealing every thing relating to their idleness, their servitude, or the tribute which they paid to the Chaldeans.]

³ —στρατεύει ὁ αὐτὸς [Ναβουχοδονόσορος] ἐπὶ τὴν Κοίλην Συρίαν. καὶ κατὰσχὼν αὐτήν, ἐπολέμησε καὶ Ἀμμάνιτας καὶ Μωάβιτας. ποιησάμενος δὲ ὑπήκοα τὰυτὰ τὰ ἔθνη, ἐνέβαλεν εἰς τὴν Αἴγυπτον καταστρεψόμενος αὐτήν. καὶ τὸν μὲν τότε βασιλεῖα κτείνει. καταστήσας δὲ ἕτερον. κ. τ. λ. —exercitum ipse eduxit in Cœlen Syriam; eaque occupatâ et Ammanitis et Moabitis bellum intulit. Istis autem gentibus in potestatem suam reductis, impetum fecit in Ægyptum, ut ipsam debellaret: ac regem quidem, qui tunc regnabat, occidit; alio vero constituto, &c. [Translated in the text.] Joseph. Antiq. Lib. x. cap. ix. sect. vii. p. 454. Edit. Hudson.

Ezekiel foretold, that the country should be desolated forty years; and the people carried captive into other countries: (xxix. 12.) I will make the land of Egypt desolate in the midst of the countries that are desolate, and her cities among the cities that are laid waste, shall be desolate forty years; and I will scatter the Egyptians among the nations, and will disperse them through the countries. We cannot prove, indeed, from heathen authors, that this desolation of the country continued exactly forty years, though it is likely enough that this, as well as the other conquered countries, did not shake off the Babylonian yoke till the time of Cyrus, which was about forty years after the conquest of Egypt by Nebuchadnezzar: but we are assured by ³ Berosus, that Nebuchadnezzar took several captives in Egypt, and carried them to Babylon; and from ⁴ Megasthenes we learn, that he transplanted and settled others in Pontus. So true it is, that they were scattered among the nations, and dispersed through the countries, and might, upon the dissolution of the Babylonian empire, return to their native country.

II. Not long after this was another memorable revolution, and the country was invaded and subdued by Cambyzes and the Persians, which is the main subject of the nineteenth chapter of Isaiah. Some parts indeed, of this prophecy, have a near affinity with those

¹ Ἀπρίῳ δὲ λέγεται εἶναι ἢ δὲ ἡ διάνοια, μὴδ' ἂν θεὸν μιν μὴδὲνα δύνασθαι παῦσαι τῆς βασιλείης· οὕτω ἀσφαλῶς ἐνωτῶ ἰδρῦσθαι ἐδόκει. Fertur Apries eâ fuisse persuasione, ne deum quidem ullum posse sibi adimere regnum: adeo videbatur sibi illud stabilisse. [It is reported, that Apries was fully persuaded, that no one of the gods was able to put an end to his kingdom, so firmly established did it seem to him.] Herod. Lib. ii. sect. clxix. p. 155. Edit. Gale.

² Herod. ibid. Diod. Sic. Lib. i. p. 43. Edit. Steph. p. 62. Edit. Rhod.

³ Berosus apud Josephum, Lib. x. cap. xi. sect. i. p. 459. Edit. Hudson. καὶ τοὺς αἰχμαλώτους—τῶν κατὰ τὴν Αἴγυπτον ἐθνῶν, συντάξας τισὶ τῶν φίλων—ἀνακομίζειν εἰς τὴν Βαβυλωνίαν. [Having given his Egyptian captives in charge to some of his friends—to convey them to Babylon.]

⁴ —ἀποδασμὸν αὐτῶν εἰς τὰ δεξιά τοῦ Πόντου κατοικῆσαι. colonias in dextram Ponti plagam deportasse. [He caused a colony of them to be settled on the right hand side of Pontus.] Megasthenes apud Eusebium, ibid. cap. xli. p. 456. Edit. Vigeri.

of Jeremiah and Ezekiel, concerning the conquest of Egypt by Nebuchadnezzar, and St. Jerome and others apply it to Nebuchadnezzar: but this prophecy, as well as several others, might admit of a double completion, and be fulfilled at both those periods. For this prophecy of Isaiah is a general representation of the calamities of the nation; it includes various particulars; it is applicable to Nebuchadnezzar and the Babylonians, as well as to Cambyzes and the Persians. They might, therefore, be both intended and comprehended in it: but the latter, I conceive, were principally intended, and for this reason; because the deliverance of the Egyptians by some great conqueror, and their conversion afterwards to the true religion, which are foretold in the latter part of this chapter, were events consequent to the dominion of the Persians, and not to that of the Babylonians.

The prophet begins with declaring that the conquest of Egypt should be swift and sudden, and that the idols of Egypt should be destroyed; (ver. 1.) Behold the Lord rideth upon a swift cloud, and shall come into Egypt, and the idols of Egypt shall be moved at his presence, and the heart of Egypt shall melt in the midst of it. The same thing is foretold of Nebuchadnezzar by Jeremiah, (xliii. 11, &c.) And when he cometh, he shall smite the land of Egypt—And I will kindle a fire in the houses of the gods of Egypt, and he shall burn them, and carry them away captives—He shall break also the images of Bethshemesh, that is in the land of Egypt; and the houses of the gods of the Egyptians shall he burn with fire: and again, by Ezekiel, (xxx. 13.) Thus saith the Lord God, I will also destroy the idols, and I will cause their images to cease out of Noph, or Memphis. We are not furnished with ancient authors sufficient to prove these particulars (however probable) in the history of Nebuchadnezzar and the Babylonians; but we have ample proofs with relation to Cambyzes and the Persians. The first attempt made by Cambyzes was upon ¹ Pelusium, a strong town, at the entrance of Egypt, and the key of the kingdom; and he succeeded by the stratagem of placing before his army a great number of dogs, sheep, cats, and other animals, which being held sacred by the Egyptians, not one of them would cast a javelin, or shoot an arrow that way; and so the town was stormed and taken, in a manner, without resistance. He ² treated the gods of Egypt with marvellous contempt, laughed at the people, and chastised the priests for worshipping such deities. He slew Apis, or the sacred ox, which the Egyptians worshipped, with his own hand; and burnt and demolished their other idols and temples; and would likewise, if he had not been prevented, have destroyed the famous temple of Jupiter Hammon. Ochus, too, who was another king of Persia, and subdued the Egyptians again after they had revolted, ¹plundered their temples, and caused Apis to be slain and served up in a banquet to him and his friends.

¹ Polyæni Stratagem. Lib. vii. cap. ix. p. 620. Edit. Maasvicii.

² Herod. Lib. iii. sect. xxvii. &c. p. 172. sect. xxxvii. &c. p. 176. Edit. Gale. Strabo, Lib. xvii. p. 805. Edit. Paris. p. 1158. Edit. Amstel. 1707. Justin, Lib. i. cap. ix. p. 29. Edit. Grævii.

The prophet foretels, that they should also be miserably distracted with civil wars; (ver. 2.) And I will set the Egyptians against the Egyptians; and they shall fight every one against his brother, and every one against his neighbour, city against city, and kingdom against kingdom; νόμος ἐπὶ νόμον, as the Seventy translate it, province against province, Egypt being divided into νόμοι, prefectures or provinces. Vitringa and others apply this to the time of the ²δωδεκαρχία or the reign of the twelve kings, the anarchy that preceded, and the civil wars that ensued, wherein the genius and fortune of Psammitichus prevailed over the rest. But it may, perhaps, be more properly applied to what agrees better in point of time with other parts of the prophecy, ³the civil wars between Apries and Amasis, at the time of Nebuchadnezzar's invasion, and the ⁴civil wars between Tachos, Nectanebus, and the Mendesian, a little before the country was finally subdued by Ochus.

It is no wonder, that in such distractions and distresses as these, the Egyptians being naturally a cowardly people, should be destitute of counsel, and that the spirit of Egypt should fail in the midst thereof, as the prophet foretels; (ver. 3.) and that being also a very superstitious people, they should seek to the idols, and to the charmers, and to them that have familiar spirits, and to the wizards. But their divination was all in vain; it was their fate to be subdued and oppressed by cruel lords and tyrants; (ver. 4.) And the Egyptians will I give over into the hand of a cruel lord; and a fierce king shall rule over them, saith the Lord, the Lord of Hosts. This is the most essential part of the prophecy; and this Grotius and others understand of Psammitichus: but it doth not appear from history, that Psammitichus was such a fierce and cruel tyrant; on the contrary, he ⁵re-established the government, and reigned long and prosperously for Egypt in many respects. It may, with greater truth and propriety, be understood of Nebuchadnezzar and the Babylonians, whose dominion was very grievous to the conquered nations: but with the greatest propriety and justice it may be applied to the Persians, and especially to Cambyses and Ochus; one of whom put the yoke upon the neck of the Egyptians, and the other rivetted it there; and who are both branded in history for cruel tyrants and monsters of men. The Egyptians said that Cambyses,

¹ Diod. Sic. Lib. xvi. p. 537. Edit. Steph. p. 448. Tom. II. Edit. Rhod. Plutarch. de Isid. et Osir. p. 355. Edit. Paris. 1624.

² Herod. Lib. ii. sect. cxlvii.—cliv. p. 146—150. Edit. Gale. Diod. Sic. Lib. i. p. 41, &c. Edit. Steph. p. 59, &c. Tom. I. Edit. Rhod.

³ Herod. Lib. ii. sect. clxix. p. 155. Edit. Gale. Diod. Sic. Lib. i. p. 43. Edit. Steph. p. 62. Tom. I. Edit. Rhod.

⁴ Plutarch in Agesilao. Diod. Sic. Lib. xv. p. 506. Edit. Steph. p. 399, &c. Tom. II. Edit. Rhod.

⁵ Herod. Lib. ii. sect. cliii.—clvii. p. 150, 151. Edit. Gale. Diod. Sic. Lib. i. p. 42. Edit. Steph. p. 60. Tom. I. Edit. Rhod. Vide etiam Marshami Chron. Sæc. xvii. p. 505.

after his killing of Apis, was stricken with madness: but his actions, saith 'Dr. Prideaux after Herodotus, showed him to have been mad long before. He could hardly have performed those great exploits, if he had been a downright madman: and yet it is certain that he was very much like one: there was a mixture of barbarity and madness in all his behaviour. Ochus was the cruelest and worst of all the kings of Persia, and was so destructive and oppressive to Egypt in particular, that his favourite eunuch ² Bagoas, who was an Egyptian, in revenge of his injured country, poisoned him. The favours shown to himself could not compensate for the wrongs done to his country. None other allegation is wanting to prove, that the Persian yoke was galling and intolerable to the Egyptians, than their frequent revolts and rebellions, which served still but to augment their misery, and enslave them more and more.

The prophet then proceeds to set forth, in figurative language, (ver. 5—10.) the consequences of this subjection and slavery, the poverty and want, the mourning and lamentation, the confusion and misery, which should be entailed on them and their posterity: and afterwards he recounts, (ver. 11—17.) the immediate causes of these evils, the folly of the princes and rulers who valued themselves upon their wisdom, and the cowardice and effeminacy of the people in general. These things will plainly appear to any one by perusing the history of the nation, but it would carry us beyond all bounds to prove them by an induction of particulars. In general it may be said, that Egypt would not have become a prey to so many foreign enemies, but through the excessive weakness of the Egyptians both in counsel and in action. They had not the courage even to defend themselves. They trusted chiefly to their Grecian, and other mercenaries, who, instead of defending, were often the first to betray them.

III. The next memorable revolution was effected by Alexander the Great, who subverted the Persian empire, in Egypt, as well as in all other places: and this event, I entirely agree with Vitranga, is pointed out to us in this same nineteenth chapter of Isaiah. It is also foretold, that about the same time several of the Egyptians should be converted to the true religion and the worship of the God of Israel. And as these events, which are the subjects of the latter part of the chapter, (ver. 18—25.) followed upon the subversion of the Persian empire; we may be satisfied, that our application of the former part of the chapter to the Persians in particular, was not a misapplication of the prophecy. In that day, that is, after that day, after that time, as the phrase signifies, and should be translated in several passages of the prophets, shall five cities in the land of Egypt speak the language of Canaan, profess the religion of the Hebrews; as in Zephaniah, (iii. 9.) I will turn to the people a pure language, signifies, I will restore to the people a pure religion, that they may all call upon the name of the Lord, to serve him with one consent. And swear to the Lord of Hosts: one shall be called the city of destruction, or of the sun, as it is in the margin of our Bibles, meaning Heliopolis, a famous city of Egypt. In that day shall there be an altar to the Lord in the midst of the land of Egypt, and a pillar at the border thereof to the Lord, such as Jacob erected (Gen. xxviii. 18.) at Bethel. And it shall be for a sign, and for a witness unto the Lord of Hosts, in the land of Egypt: for they shall cry unto the Lord because of the oppressors, and he shall send them a Saviour, and a great one, and he shall deliver them. And the Lord shall be known to Egypt, and the Egyptians shall know the Lord in that day, and shall do sacrifice and oblation, yea, they shall vow a vow unto the Lord, and perform it. The prophet describes the worship of future times, according to the rites and ceremonies of his own time. And the Lord shall smite Egypt, he shall smite and heal it, and they shall return even to the Lord, and he shall be intreated of them, and shall heal them. The prophet then proceeds to shew, that Assyria, or Syria, and Egypt, which used to be at great enmity with each other, shall be united in the same worship by the intermediation of Israel, and they three shall be a blessing in the earth. In that day shall there be a high way out of Egypt to Assyria, and the Assyrian shall come into Egypt, and the Egyptian into Assyria, and the Egyptians shall serve with the Assyrians. In that day shall Israel be the third with Egypt, and with Assyria, even a blessing in the midst of the land: Whom the Lord of Hosts shall bless, saying, Blessed be Egypt, my people, and Assyria, the work of my hands, and Israel, mine inheritance.

¹ Prideaux, Connect. Part i. Book iii. Anno 525. Cambyses 5. Herod. Lib. iii. sect. xxx. p. 173. Edit. Gale. Καμβύσης δὲ (ὡς λέγουσι Αἰγύπτιοι) διὰ τοῦτο τὸ ἀδίκημα ἀνδρὶ κακῷ, ἐὼν οὐδὲ πρότερον φρενὴρος. Ob hoc scelus (ut Ægyptii aiunt) continuo Cambyses insaniit; quum ne prius quidem compos mentis fuisset. ["But Cambyses (as the Egyptians say), on account of this wickedness, was immediately stricken with madness, but before that he was not in his right senses."]

² Diod. Sic. Lib. xvi. p. 564. Edit. Steph. p. 490. Tom. II. Edit. Rhod. Æliani Var. Hist. Lib. vi. cap. viii.

Here it is clearly foretold, that a great prince, a saviour sent by God, from a foreign country, should deliver the Egyptians from their Persian oppressors, and heal their country which was smitten of God and afflicted: and who could this be but Alexander, who is always distinguished by the name of Alexander the great, and whose first successor in Egypt was called the great Ptolemy, and Ptolemy Soter, or the saviour? Upon Alexander's first coming into Egypt, the¹ people all cheerfully submitted to him out of hatred to the Persians, so that he became master of the country without any opposition. For this reason he treated them with humanity and kindness, built a city there which, after his own name, he called Alexandria, appointed one of their own country for their civil governor, and permitted them to be governed by their own laws and customs. By these changes and regulations, and by the prudent and gentle administration of some of the first Ptolemies, Egypt revived, trade and learning flourished, and, for a while, peace and plenty blessed the land.

¹ Diod. Sic. Lib. xvii. p. 588. Edit. Steph. p. 526. Tom. II. Edit. Rhod. Arrian, Lib. iii. cap. i. &c. Quint. Curtius, Lib. iv. cap. vii. et viii.

But it is more largely foretold, that about the same time the true religion and the worship of the God of Israel should begin to spread and prevail in the land of Egypt: and what event was ever more unlikely to happen than the conversion of a people so sunk and lost in superstition and idolatry of the worst and grossest kind? It is certain that many of the Jews, after Nebuchadnezzar had taken Jerusalem, fled into Egypt, and carried along with them Jeremiah, the prophet, (Jer. xliii, &c.) who there uttered most of his prophecies concerning the conquest of Egypt by Nebuchadnezzar. From thence some knowledge of God, and some notices of the prophecies might easily be derived to the Egyptians. It is said that this alteration should be effected principally in five cities. If a certain number be not here put for an uncertain, I should conclude with ¹ Le Clerc, that the five cities, wherein the worship of the one true God was received, were Heliopolis, which is particularly named in the text, and the four others, which are mentioned in Jeremiah (xliv. 1.) as the places of the residence of the Jews, Migdol, or Magdolum, Tachpanhes, or Daphne, Noph, or Memphis, and the fourth in the country of Pathros, or Thebais, not mentioned by name, perhaps Amon-No, or Diospolis. There the Jews chiefly resided at that time: and though they were generally very wicked men, and disobedient to the word of the Lord, and upon that account the prophet Jeremiah denounced the heaviest judgments against them; yet some good men might be mingled among them, who might open his prophecies to the Egyptians, and they themselves, when they saw them fulfilled, might embrace the Jewish religion. But this is to be understood, not of all the inhabitants of those places, but only of some; which is sufficient to justify the expression of five cities speaking the language of Canaan, and swearing by the Lord of Hosts.

¹ Si liceret conjicere de nominibus quinque [quatuor] aliarum urbium, dicerem eas esse, quæ memorantur Jeremiæ cap. xliv. 2. Migdol (Herodoto Magdolos) Thachphanches (eidem Daphne) Noph sive Memphis, et quarta in terra Pathros, seu Pathyride, quæ nomine non appellatur, forte Amon-No sive Diospolis. In iis habitarent Judæi, qui Chaldæorum metu post captam Ierosolimam in Ægyptum migrarent, eoque invitum Jeremiam abduxerant. Quibus, improbis quippe, licet extrema mala iis propheta minetur, potuerunt tamen nonnulli pii admisti esse, qui vaticinia ejus Ægyptiis aperuerint, et ipsi, cum ea impleta vidissent, Judaicam religionem amplexi sint. Quod intelligi nolim de incolis omnibus eorum locorum; sed de nonnullis: quod satis est, ut dicentur quinque urbes lingua Chanaanitide loquenturæ, et per Jehovahem juraturæ. ["If one might form a conjecture concerning the names of five (four) other cities, I would say that they are these mentioned by Jeremiah in chap. xliv. 1., namely, Migdol, (called by Herodotus, Magdolos) Thachphanches, (called by the same author Daphne,) Noph, or Memphis, and the fourth, in the country of Pathros, or Pathyris, the name of which is not mentioned, perhaps Amon-No, or Diospolis. In these cities dwelt the Jews, who, through fear of the Chaldeans, carried thither along with them Jeremiah against his will. Amongst whom, though they migrated into Egypt, and after the taking of Jerusalem were very wicked in general, on which account the prophet denounced against them very heavy calamities, yet there might be some godly men, who made known to the Egyptians his predictions. And these last, when they saw them accomplished, embraced the Jewish religion. This, however, I would not have understood of all the inhabitants of these places, but only of some. For that is a sufficient reason, why mention should be made of five cities, speaking the language of Canaan, and swearing by the name of Jehovah."] Comment, in locum.

Alexander the great ¹transplanted many of the Jews into his new city of Alexandria, and allowed them privileges and immunities equal to those of the Macedonians themselves. Ptolemy Soter ²carried more of them into Egypt, who there enjoyed such advantages, that not a few of the other Jews went thither of their own accord, the goodness of the country, and the liberality of Ptolemy, alluring them. Ptolemy Philadelphus ³redeemed and released the captive Jews: and in his reign, or his father's, the books of Moses were translated into Greek, and afterwards the other parts of the Old Testament. The third ⁴Ptolemy, called Euergetes, having subdued all Syria, did not sacrifice to the gods of Egypt in acknowledgment of his victory; but, coming to Jerusalem, made his oblations to God, after the manner of the Jews: and the king's example, no doubt, would influence many of his subjects. The sixth ⁵Ptolemy, called Philometor, and his queen, Cleopatra, committed the whole management of the kingdom to two Jews, Onias and Dosithæus, who were their chief ministers and generals, and had the principal direction of all affairs, both civil and military. This Onias, obtained a licence from the king and queen to build a temple for the Jews in Egypt, like that at Jerusalem, alleging for this purpose this very prophecy of Isaiah, that there should be an altar to the Lord in the midst of the land of Egypt; and the king and queen in their rescript make honourable mention of the law, and of the prophet Isaiah, and express a dread of sinning against God. The place chosen for the building of this temple was in the prefecture of Heliopolis, or, the city of the sun, which place is likewise mentioned in the prophecy. It was built after the model of the temple at Jerusalem, but not so sumptuous and magnificent. He himself was made high-priest; other priests and Levites were appointed for the ministration; and Divine service was daily performed there, in the same manner as at Jerusalem, and continued as long; for Vespasian, having destroyed the temple at Jerusalem, ordered this also to be demolished.

By these means the Lord must, in some degree, have been known to Egypt, and the Egyptians must have known the Lord: and with-

¹ Joseph. de Bell. Jud. Lib. ii. cap. xviii. sect. vii. p. 1098. Contra Apion. Lib. ii. sect. iv. p. 1364. Edit. Hudson.

² Joseph. Antiq. Lib. xii. cap. i. p. 508. Hecatæus apud Joseph. contra Apion. Lib. i. sect. xxii. p. 1347. Edit. Hudson.

³ Joseph. Antiq. Lib. xii. cap. ii. p. 508. Contra Apion. sect. iv. p. 1365. Edit. Hudson. Hody de Vers. Græc. Lib. ii. cap. ii.

⁴ Joseph. contra Apion. Lib. ii. sect. v. p. 1365. Edit. Hudson.

⁵ Joseph. contra Apion. ibid. Antiq. Lib. xiii. cap. iii. p. 562. De Bell. Jud. Lib. i. cap. i. sect. i. p. 958. Lib. vii. cap. x. sect. ii. p. 1325. Edit. Hudson.

out doubt there must have been many proselytes among them. Among those who came up to the feast of Pentecost (Acts ii. 10.) there are particularly mentioned, the dwellers in Egypt, and in the parts of Lybia, about Cyrene, Jews and proselytes. Nay, from the instance of Candace's eunuch, (Acts viii. 27.) we may infer that there were proselytes even beyond Egypt, in Ethiopia. Thus were the Jews settled and encouraged in Egypt, insomuch that ¹ Philo represents their number as not less than a hundred myriads, or ten hundred thousand men. Nor were they less favoured or rewarded for their services, by the kings of Syria. Seleucus Nicator ² made them free of the cities which he built in Asia and the lower Syria, and of Antioch itself, the capital of his kingdom; and granted the same rights and privileges to them as to the Greeks and Macedonians. Antiochus the great ³ published several decrees in favour of the Jews, both of those who inhabited Jerusalem, and of those who dwelt in Mesopotamia and Babylonia. Josephus ⁴ saith that the Jews gained many proselytes at Antioch. And thus by the means of the Jews and proselytes dwelling in Egypt and Syria, Israel, Egypt, and Syria, were in some measure united in the same worship. But this was more fully accomplished, when these countries became Christian, and so were made members of the same body in Christ Jesus. And we piously hope and believe, that it will still receive its most perfect completion in the latter days, when Mohammedism shall be rooted out, and Christianity shall again flourish in these countries, when the fulness of the Gentiles shall come in, and all Israel shall be saved.

IV. But there is a remarkable prophecy of Ezekiel, which comprehends in little the fate of Egypt from the days of Nebuchadnezzar to the present. For therein it is foretold, that after the desolation of the land, and the captivity of the people by Nebuchadnezzar, (xxix. 14, 15.) it should be a base kingdom: It shall be the basest of the kingdoms, neither shall it exalt itself any more above the nations; for I will diminish them, that they shall no more rule over the nations: and again, in the next chapter, (ver. 12, 13.) I will sell the land into the hand of the wicked, and I will make the land waste, and all that is therein, by the hand of strangers: and there shall be no more a prince of the land of Egypt. Such general prophecies, like general rules, are not to be understood so strictly and absolutely, as if they could not possibly admit of any kind of limitation or exception whatever. It is sufficient if they hold good for the most part, and are confirmed by the experience of many ages, though, perhaps, not without an exception of a few years. The prophets exhibit a general view of things, without entering into the particular excep-

¹ Οὐκ ἀποδέουσι μυριάδων ἑκατὸν—[They were not short of a hundred myriads.] In Flaccum, p. 971. Edit. Paris. 1640.

² Joseph. Antiq. Lib. xii. cap. iii. p. 519. Edit. Hudson.

³ Joseph. ibid.

⁴ De Bell. Jud. Lib. vii. cap. iii. sect. iii. p. 1299. Edit. Hudson.

tions. It was predicted (Gen. ix. 25.) that Canaan should be a servant of servants unto his brethren; and, generally, his posterity were subjected to the descendants of his brethren: but yet they were not always so; upon some occasions they were superior; and Hannibal and the Carthaginians obtained several victories over the Romans, though they were totally subdued at last. In like manner it was not intended by this prophecy, that Egypt should ever afterwards, in every point of time, but only that it should for much the greater part of time, be a base kingdom, be tributary and subject to strangers. This is the purport and meaning of the prophecy; and the truth of it will best appear by a short deduction of the history of Egypt from that time to this.

Amasis was left king by Nebuchadnezzar; and as he held his crown by the permission and allowance of the Babylonians, there is no room to doubt that he paid them tribute for it. Berosus, the Chaldæan historian,¹ in a fragment preserved by Josephus, speaketh of Nebuchadnezzar's reducing Egypt to his obedience, and afterwards of his settling the affairs of the country, and carrying captives from thence to Babylon. By his constituting and settling the affairs of Egypt, nothing less could be meant than his appointing the governors, and the tribute that they should pay to him; and by carrying some Egyptians captive to Babylon, he plainly intended not only to weaken the country, but also to have them as hostages to secure the obedience of the rest, and the payment of their tribute. If Herodotus hath given no account of these transactions, the reason is evident, according to the observation cited before from Scaliger; the Egyptian priests would not inform him of things which were for the discredit of their nation. However, we may, I think, confirm the truth of this assertion even by Herodotus's own narration. The Persians succeeded in right of the Babylonians: and it appears² by Cyrus's sending for the best physician in Egypt to Amasis, who was obliged to force one from his wife and children; and by Cambyses's demanding the daughter of Amasis, not for a wife, but for a mistress; by these instances, I say, it appears that they considered him as their tributary and subject. And, indeed, no reason can be assigned for the strong resentment of the Persians against Amasis, and their horrid barbarity to his dead body, so probable and satisfactory, as his having revolted and rebelled against them. Herodotus himself³ mentions the league and alliance which Amasis made with Croesus, king of Lydia, against Cyrus.

Upon the ruins of the Babylonian empire, Cyrus erected the Persian. Xenophon hath written the life of this extraordinary man: and he affirms,¹ both in the introduction and near the conclusion of his history, that Cyrus also conquered Egypt, and made it part of his empire; and there is not a more faithful, as well as a more elegant historian than Xenophon. But whether Cyrus did or not, it is universally allowed that his² son Cambyses did conquer Egypt, and deprived Psammenitus of his crown, to which he had newly succeeded upon the death of his father Amasis. Cambyses purposed to have made Psammenitus administrator of the kingdom under him, as it was the custom of the Persians to do to the conquered princes: but Psammenitus, forming schemes to recover the kingdom, and being convicted thereof, was forced to drink bull's blood, and thereby put an end to his life. The Egyptians groaned under the yoke near forty years. Then they revolted³ toward the latter end of the reign of Darius, the son of Hystaspes: but his son and successor, Xerxes, in the second year of his reign, subdued them again, and reduced them to a worse condition of servitude than they had been in under Darius, and appointed his brother Achæmenes governor of Egypt. About four-and-twenty years after this, when⁴ the Egyptians heard of the troubles in Persia about the succession to the throne after the death of Xerxes, they revolted again at the instigation of Inarus, king of Lybia; and having drove away the Persian tribute-collectors, they constituted Inarus their king. Six years were employed in reducing them to obedience, and all Egypt submitted again to the king Artaxerxes Longimanus, except Amyrtæus, who reigned in the fens, whither the Persians could not approach to take him: but Inarus, the author of these evils, was betrayed to the Persians, and was crucified. However they⁵ permitted his son, Thannyra, to succeed his father in the kingdom of Lybia; and Egypt continued in subjection all the remaining part of the long reign of Artaxerxes. In the⁶ tenth year of Darius Nothus they revolted again, under the conduct of Amyrtæus, who sallied out of the fens, drove the Persians out of Egypt, made himself master of the country, and reigned there six years; but his son, Pausiris,⁷ as Herodotus informs us, succeeding him in his kingdom, by the favour of the Persians; this argues that the Persians had again subdued Egypt, or at least, that the king was not established without their consent and approbation. It is certain, that after this Egypt gave much trouble to the Persians. Artaxerxes Mnemon⁸ made several efforts to re-conquer it, but all in

¹ Καὶ καταστήσας τὰ κατὰ τὴν Αἴγυπτον πράγματα καὶ τὴν λοιπὴν χώραν, καὶ τοὺς αἰχμαλώτους—τῶν κατὰ τὴν Αἴγυπτον ἐθνῶν, κ. τ. λ. [And having settled his affairs in Egypt, and in the rest of the country, he sent his Egyptian prisoners, &c.] Joseph. Antiq. Lib. x. cap. xi. sect. i. p. 459. Edit. Hudson.

² Herod. Lib. iii. sect. i. p. 161. Edit. Gale.

³ Herod. Lib. i. sect. lxxvii. p. 32. Edit. Gale.

¹ Xenophon, Cyropæd. Lib. i. p. 2. Lib. viii. p. 137. Edit. Henr. Steph. 1581.

² Herod. Lib. iii. sect. x.—xv. p. 164—167. Edit. Gale.

³ Herod. Lib. vii. sect. i. et vii. p. 382 et 384. Edit. Gale.

⁴ Thucydides, Lib. i. sect. civ.—cx. p. 57—60. Edit. Hudson. Diodorus Siculus, Lib. xi. p. 279. Edit. Steph. p. 54, &c. Tom. II. Edit. Rhodomani.

⁵ Herod. Lib. iii. sect. xv. p. 167. Edit. Gale.

⁶ Eusebius, in Chronico. Usher's Annals, A.M. 3590, p. 146. Prideaux, Connect. Part i. Book vi. Anno 414.

⁷ Herod. Lib. iii. sect. xv. Ibid.

⁸ Diod. Sic. Lib. xv. p. 478. Edit. Steph. p. 357, &c. Tom. II. Edit. Rhod.

vain. It was not totally and finally subdued till the 'ninth year of the following reign of Ochus, about 350 years before Christ; when Nectanebus, the last king, fled into Ethiopia, and Ochus became absolute master of the country, and having appointed one of his nobles, named Pherendates, to be his viceroy and governor of Egypt, he returned with great glory and immense treasures to Babylon. Egypt from that time hath never been able to recover its liberties. It hath always been subject to strangers. It hath never been governed by a king of its own. From this last revolt of the Egyptians, in the tenth year of Darius Nothus, to their total subjugation, in the ninth year of Ochus, I think there are computed sixty-four years: and this is the only exception of any significance to the general truth of the prophecy. But what are sixty-four years compared to two thousand three hundred and twenty-five? for so many years have passed from the conquest of Egypt by Nebuchadnezzar to this time. They are really as nothing, and not worth mentioning in comparison: and during these sixty-four years, we see that the Egyptians were not entirely independent of the Persians; Pausiris succeeded his father Amyrtæus in the kingdom by their consent and favour: and during the rest of the time the Egyptians lived in continual fear and dread of the Persians, and were either at war with them, or with one another. And perhaps this part of the prophecy was not intended to take effect immediately: its completion might be designed to commence from this period, when the Persians had totally subdued Egypt, and then there should be no more a prince of the land of Egypt.

After the Persians, Egypt came into the hands of the Macedonians. It submitted to Alexander the great without striking a stroke; made no attempts at that favourable juncture to recover its liberties, but was content only to change its master. After the death of Alexander it fell to the share of Ptolemy, one of his four famous captains, and was governed by his family for several generations. The two or three first of the Ptolemies were wise and potent princes, but most of the rest were prodigies of luxury and wickedness. It is ² Strabo's observation, that all after the third Ptolemy governed very ill, being corrupted by luxury; but they who governed worst of all were the fourth, and the seventh, and the last, called Auletes. The persons here intended by Strabo were ³ Ptolemy ¹ Diod. Sic. Lib. xvi. p. 537. Edit. Steph. p. 448. Tom. II. Edit. Rhod. Usher's Annals, A.M. 3654, p. 196. Prid. Connect. Part i. B. vii. Anno 350.

² "Ἀπαντες μὲν οὖν οἱ μετὰ τὸν τρίτον Πτολεμαῖον ὑπὸ τρυφῆς διεφθαρμένοι, χεῖρον ἐπολιτεύσαντο· χεῖριστά δ' ὁ τέταρτος, καὶ ὁ ἑβδόμος, καὶ ὁ ὕστατος ὁ Αὐλητής. Omnes post tertium Ptolemæum malè regnum gesserunt, luxu perditì: omnium vero pessimè quartus, et septimus, et ultimus, Auletes. [Translated in the text.] Strab. Lib. xvii. p. 796. Edit. Paris. p. 1146. Edit. Amstel. 1707.

³ Justin. Lib. xxix. cap. i. sect. v. p. 466. Edit. Grævii. Ægyptum, patre ac matre interfectis, occupaverat Ptolemæus, cui ex fâcinoris crimine, cognomentum Philopatori fuit. [Ptolemy had gotten possession of Egypt by slaying his father and mother. From that crime he had the surname of Philopator given to him.]

Philopator, or the lover of his father, so called (as Justin conceives) by way of antiphrasis, or with a contrary meaning, because he was a parricide, and murdered both his father and his mother; and ¹ Ptolemy Physcon, or the big-bellied, who affected the title of Euergetes, or the benefactor, but the Alexandrians more justly named him Kakergetes, or the malefactor; and ² Ptolemy Auletes, or the piper, so denominated because he spent much of his time in playing on the pipe, and used to contend for the prize in the public shows. This kingdom of the Macedonians ³ continued from the death of Alexander 294 years, and ended in the famous Cleopatra, of whom it is not easy to say whether she excelled more in beauty, or wit, or wickedness.

After the Macedonians Egypt fell under the dominion of the Romans. The Romans had, either by virtue of treaties or by force of arms, obtained great authority there, and were in a manner arbiters of the kingdom before, but after the death of Cleopatra ⁴ Octavius Cæsar reduced it into the form of a Roman province, and appointed Cornelius Gallus, the friend of Virgil, to whom the tenth eclogue is inscribed, the first prefect or governor: and so it continued to be governed by a prefect or viceroy sent from Rome, or from Constantinople, when, after the division of the Roman empire, it fell to the share of the eastern emperors. It was first made a province of the Roman empire in the year ⁵ 30 before Christ, and in this state it remained, without much variation, till the year 641 after Christ, that is, 670 years in the whole, from the reign of Augustus Cæsar to that of the emperor Heraclius.

Then it was that the ⁶ Saracens, in the reign of Omar, their third emperor, and under the command of Amrou, the son of Aas, invaded and conquered Egypt, took Misrah (formerly Memphis, now Cairo) by storm, and also Alexandria, after they had besieged it fourteen months, and had lost twenty-three thousand men before it: and the rest of the kingdom soon followed the fortune of the capital cities, and submitted to the conqueror. There is one thing which was effected partly in the wars of the Romans and partly by the Saracens, and which no lover of learning can pass over without lamentation; and that is the destruction of the library at Alexandria. This famous library was founded by the first Ptolemies, and was so much enlarged and improved by their successors, that it ⁷ amounted to the number of seven hundred thousand volumes. It

¹ Athenæus, Lib. xii. p. 549. Edit. Casaubon.

² Strabo, ibid.

³ Clemens Alexan. Strom. Lib. i. p. 143. Edit. Sylburg. p. 396. Edit. Potter. Prideaux, Connect. Part ii. Book viii. Anno 30. Herod. 8.

⁴ Strabo, Lib. xvii. p. 797 et 819. Edit. Paris. p. 1147 et 1175. Edit. Amstel. 1707. Dion. Cass. Lib. li. p. 455. Edit. Leunclav.

⁵ See Usher, Prideaux, &c. under that year.

⁶ Elmacini Hist. Saracen. Lib. i. p. 23, 24. Abul-Pharajii Hist. Dyn. ix. p. 112. Vers. Pocockii. Ockley's Hist. of the Saracens, Vol. I. p. 344, &c.

⁷ Ammianus Marcellinus, Lib. xxii. cap. xvi. p. 343. Edit. Valesii, 1681, ubi vide etiam quæ Valesius adnotavit. A. Gellius, Lib. vi. cap. xvii.

consisted ¹ of two parts, one in that quarter of the city called Bruchion, containing four hundred thousand volumes, and the other within the Serapeum, containing three hundred thousand volumes. It happened, that while Julius Cæsar was making war upon the inhabitants of Alexandria, ² the library in Bruchion, together with other buildings, was burnt, and the ³ four hundred thousand volumes which were kept therein were all consumed. But this loss was in some measure repaired by the ⁴ Pergamean library, consisting of two hundred thousand volumes, which Antony presented to Cleopatra, and by the addition of other books afterwards, so that ⁵ this latter library was reckoned as numerous and as famous as the other ever was: and it came to the same fatal end, this being also destroyed by fire. For ⁶ John the Grammarian, a famous philosopher of Alexandria, being in great favour with Amrou, the Saracen general, asked of him the royal library. Amrou replied, that it was not in his power to give it him, without leave first obtained from the emperor of the faithful. Amrou therefore wrote to Omar, and acquainted him with John's petition, to which the caliph returned this answer; that if what was contained in those books was agreeable to the book of God or the Koran, the Koran was sufficient without them; but if it was repugnant to the Koran, it was no ways useful; and therefore he commanded them to be destroyed. Amrou, in obedience to the caliph's commands, ordered them to be distributed among the baths of the city, and to be burnt in warming them, whereof there were no fewer at that time in Alexandria than four thousand: and yet there passed six months before the books were all consumed; which sufficiently evinces how great their number was, and what an inestimable loss not only Egypt, but all the learned world hath sustained. Egypt before this ⁷ was frequented by learned foreigners for the sake of this library, and produced several learned natives; but after this it became more and more a base kingdom, and sunk into greater ignorance and superstition. Mohammedism was now established there instead of Christianity, and the government of the caliphs and sultans continued till about the year of Christ 1250.

About that time it was that the ⁸ Mamalucs usurped the royal authority. The ⁹ word in general signifies a slave bought with

¹ Epiphanius de Mensuris et Ponderibus, Op. Vol. II. p. 168. Edit. Petavii. Paris, 1622. Chrysostom, advers. Judæos, Orat. i. p. 595. Op. Vol. I. Edit. Benedict.

² Plutarch, in Julio Cæsare, Op. Vol. I. p. 731. Edit. Paris. 1624. Dion Cassius, Lib. xlii. p. 202. Edit. Leunclav.

³ Seneca de Tranquill. animi, cap. ix. Op. Vol. I. p. 362. Edit. Varior. Orosii Hist. Lib. vi. cap. xv. p. 421. Edit. Havercamp.

⁴ Plutarch, in Antonio, Op. Vol. I. p. 943. Edit. Paris. 1624.

⁵ Tertull. Apol. cap. xviii. p. 18. Edit. Rigaltii, 1675.

⁶ Abul-Pharajii Hist. Dyn. ix. p. 114. Versio Pocockii. Ockley's Hist. of the Saracens, Vol. I. p. 359, &c. Prideaux, Connect. Part ii. Book i. Anno 284. Ptolemy Philadelph. i.

⁷ Vide Amm. Marcellin. Lib. xxii. cap. xvi. p. 344, &c. Edit. Valesii, Paris, 1681.

⁸ Abul-Pharajii Hist. Dyn. ix. p. 325, &c. et Pocockii Supplementum, p. 8, &c.

⁹ Pocockii Supplem. p. 7. Mamluc autem (et cum de pluribus dicitur Mamalie) servum money, but is appropriated in particular to those Turkish and Circassian slaves, whom the sultans of Egypt bought very young, trained up in military exercises, and so made them their choicest officers and soldiers, and by them controlled their subjects, and subdued their enemies. These slaves perceiving how necessary and useful they were, grew at length insolent and audacious, slew their sovereigns, and usurped the government to themselves. It is commonly said, that none but the sons of Christians were taken into this order; and there are other popular mistakes about them, which are current among European authors, and which ¹ Sir William Temple, among others, hath adopted and expressed, as he doth every thing, in a lively and elegant manner. "The sons of the deceased sultans enjoyed the estates and riches left by their fathers, but by the constitutions of the government no son of a sultan was ever either to succeed, or even to be elected sultan: so that in this, contrary to all others ever known in the world, to be born of a prince was a certain and unalterable exclusion from the kingdom; and none was ever to be chosen sultan, that had not been actually sold for a slave, brought from Circassia, and trained up a private soldier in the Mamaluc bands." But ² they who are better versed in oriental authors, assure us that these are vulgar errors: and it appears from the ³ Arabian historians, that among the Mamalucs the son often succeeded the father in the kingdom. Their government is thus characterized by an ⁴ Arabic author quoted by Dr. Pococke: "If you consider the whole time that they possessed the kingdom, especially that which was nearer the end, you will find it filled with wars, battles, injuries, and rapines." Their government ⁵ began with Sultan Ibeg, in the 648th year of the Hegira, and the emptitium denotat, seu qui pretio numerato in domini possessionem cedit. [But Mamluc (and in the plural Mamalic,) signifies a purchased slave, or one that becomes the property of a master by a price paid down.] Herbelot. Bibliothèque Orientale, p. 545. Mamlouk. Ce mot dont le pluriel est Memalik, signifie en Arabe un esclave en general, mais en particulier, il a été appliqué à ces esclaves Turcs et Circassiens, &c. [This word, of which the plural is Memalik, signifies in Arabic, a slave in general, but in particular it hath been applied to those Turkish and Circassian slaves, &c.]

¹ Sir Wm. Temple's Works, Vol. I. Miscellanea, Part ii. Essay on Heroic Virtue, sect. v. p. 224.

² Pocockii Supplem. p. 31. Ex his quæ dicta sunt facile patet, in errore esse eos, qui Mamalucos Christianorum tantummodo filios fuisse autumant; nec non in aliis errasse, quæ de successionis apud eos jure, eorumque disciplinâ tradunt. [From what has been said, it is manifest that they are mistaken, who think that the Mamalucs are the sons of Christians only. They have also been mistaken in those assertions, which they have made concerning the right of succession among them, and concerning their education.] Herbelot, Bib. Orient. p. 545. Il paroît par ce que l'on vient de voir, que les Mameluc n'étoient pas fils de Chrétiens (si ce n'est peut-être quelqu'un d'entr'eux) comme plusieurs de nos historiens l'ont avancé. [It appears, from what we have seen, that the Mamalucs were not the sons of Christians, (except perhaps some few among them,) as some of our historians have asserted.]

³ Pocockii Supplem. p. 8. 10, 11. 13. 18. 20. 22, 23, 24, 25.

⁴ Al. Jannabius in Pocockii Supplem. p. 31. Si totum, quo regnum occupârunt, tempus respicias, præsertim quod fini propius, reperies illud bellis, pugnis, injuriis et rapinis referunt. [Translated in the text.]

⁵ Pocock. p. 8. Herbelot. p. 479.

year of Christ 1250; and continued through a ¹series of twenty-four Turkish and twenty-three Circassian Mamaluc sultans, two hundred and seventy-five Arabic and two hundred and sixty-seven Julian years; and ²ended with Tumanbäi, in the 923d year of the Hegira and the year of Christ 1517.

For at that time ³Selim, the ninth emperor of the Turks, conquered the Mamalucs, hanged their last Sultan Tumanbai before one of the gates of Cairo, put an end to their government, caused five hundred of the chiefest Egyptian families to be transported to Constantinople, as likewise a great number of Mamalucs' wives and children, besides the sultan's treasure, and other immense riches; and annexed Egypt to the Othman empire, whereof it hath continued a province from that day to this. It is governed, as Prince Cantemir informs us, by a Turkish Basha, ⁴with twenty-four begs or princes under him, who are advanced from servitude to the administration of public affairs; a superstitious notion possessing the Egyptians, that it is decreed by fate, that captives shall reign, and the natives be subject to them. But it cannot well be called a superstitious notion, being a notion in all probability at first derived from some tradition of these prophecies, that Egypt should be a base kingdom, that there should be no more a prince of the land of Egypt, and that Ham in his posterity should be a servant of servants unto his brethren.

By this deduction it appears, that the truth of Ezekiel's prediction is fully attested by the whole series of the history of Egypt from that time to the present. And who could pretend to say upon human conjecture, that so great a kingdom, so rich and fertile a country, should ever afterwards become tributary and subject to strangers? It is now a great deal above two thousand years since this prophecy was first delivered; and what likelihood or appearance was there, that the Egyptians should for so many ages bow under a foreign yoke, and never in all that time be able to recover their liberties, and have a prince of their own to reign over them? But as is the prophecy, so is the event. For not long afterwards Egypt was conquered by the Babylonians, and after the Babylonians ⁵by the Persians; and after the Persians it became subject to the Macedonians, and after the Macedonians to the Romans, and after the Romans to the Saracens, and then to the Mamalucs; and is now a province of the Othman empire.

Thus we see how Nineveh, Babylon, Tyre, and Egypt, the great adversaries and oppressors of the Jews, have been visited by Divine

¹ Pocock, p. 8—30. Herbelot. 545.

² Pocock, p. 30. Herbelot. p. 1031.

³ Pocockii Supplem. p. 30 et 49. Herbelot, Bibli. Orient. p. 545 et 802 et 1031. Savage's Abridgment of Knolles and Rycant's Turkish History, Vol. I. p. 248.

⁴ Prince Cantemir's History of the Othman Empire, Part. i. Book iii. p. 156. in the notes.

⁵ See Prideaux, Connect. Part i. B. i. Anno 589. Zedekiah x.

vengeance for their enmity and cruelty to the people of God. Not that we must think God so partial as to punish these nations only for the sake of the Jews; they were guilty of other flagrant sins, for which the prophets denounced the Divine judgments upon them. Egypt in particular was so severely threatened by the prophet Ezekiel, (chap. xxix. xxx. xxxi. xxxii.) for her idolatry, her pride, and her wickedness. And the Egyptians have generally been more wretched, as they have generally been more wicked than other nations. Ancient authors describe them every where as superstitious and luxurious, as an ¹ unwarlike and unserviceable people, as ² a faithless and fallacious nation, always meaning one thing and pretending another, as ³ lovers of wine and strong drink, as ⁴ cruel in their anger, as ⁵ thieves and tolerating all kinds of theft, as ⁶ patient of tortures, and though put to the rack, yet choosing rather to die than to confess the truth. Modern authors paint them still in blacker colours. The famous ⁷ Thevenot is very strong and severe: "The people of Egypt, generally speaking, are all swarthy, exceeding wicked, great rogues, cowardly, lazy, hypocrites, buggerers, robbers, treacherous, so very greedy of money, that they will kill a man for a maidin, or three half-pence." Bishop ⁸ Pococke's character of them is not much more favourable, though not so harsh and opprobrious: "The natives of Egypt are now a slothful people, and delight in sitting still, hearing tales, and indeed seem always to have been more fit for the quiet life than for any active scenes.—They are also malicious and envious to a great degree, which keeps them from uniting and setting up for themselves; and though they are very ignorant, yet they have a natural cunning and artifice as well as falsehood, and this makes them always suspicious of travellers.—The love of money is so rooted in them, that nothing is to be done without bribery.—They think the greatest villanies are ex-

¹ Strabo, Lib. xvii. p. 819. Edit. Paris. p. 1175. Edit. Amstel. 1707. Juvenal, Sat. xv. 126. imbellē et inutile vulgus. [An unwarlike and useless crew.]

² Lucan v. 58. non fidæ gentis [a faithless nation.] Hirtius de Bell. Alex. et cap. xvi. fallacem gentem, semperque alia cogitantem, alia simulantem. [Translated in the text.]

³ Athenæus ex Dione, Lib. i. p. 34. Edit. Casaubon. φιλοίνους καὶ φιλόποτας. vinosos ac bibaces. [Lovers of wine, and fond of drinking.]

⁴ Polyb. Lib. xv. p. 719. Edit. Casaubon. Δεινὴ γὰρ τις ἡ παρὰ τοὺς θυμὸς ὥμότης γίγνεται τῶν κατὰ τὴν Αἰγυπτὸν ἀνθρώπων. Est enim hoc Ægyptiis hominibus innatum, ut dum fervent irâ, mirum in modum sint crudeles. [There is a dreadful cruelty in the anger of the Egyptians.]

⁵ A. Gellius, Lib. xi. cap. xviii. Ex Aristone. furta omnia fuisse licita et impunita. [All sorts of theft were allowed, and suffered with impunity.] Diod. Sic. Lib. i. p. 50. Edit. Steph. p. 72. Edit. Rhod.

⁶ Ælian. Var. Hist. Lib. vii. cap. xviii. Αἰγυπτίους φασὶ δεινῶς ἐγκαρτερεῖν ταῖς βασάνοις, καὶ ὅτι θάττον τεθνήσκειται ἀνὴρ Αἰγύπτιος στρεβλούμενος, ἢ τ' ἀληθὲς ὁμολογήσει. Ægyptios aiunt patientissime ferre tormenta; et citius mori hominem Ægyptium in quæstionibus, tortum examinatumque, quam veritatem prodere. [It is said that the Egyptians endure torture with surprising patience; and that an Egyptian will rather die upon the rack than tell the truth.] Ammianus Marcell. Lib. xxii. cap. xvi. p. 347. Edit. Valesii, 1681.

⁷ Thevenot, in Harris's collection, Vol. II. chap. viii. p. 429.

⁸ Pococke's Description of the East, Vol. I. B. iv. chap. iv. p. 177, &c.

piated, when once they wash their hands and feet.—Their words pass for nothing either in relations, promises, or professions of friendship, &c.” Such men are evidently born not to command, but to serve and obey. They are altogether unworthy of liberty. Slavery is the fittest for them, as they are fittest for slavery. It is an excellent political aphorism of the wisest of kings, and all history will bear witness to the truth of it, that (Prov. xiv. 34.) righteousness exalteth a nation, but sin is a reproach and ruin to any people.

XIII.

NEBUCHADNEZZAR'S DREAM OF THE GREAT EMPIRES.

WE have seen how it pleased God to reveal unto the prophets the future condition of several of the neighbouring countries; but there are other prophecies which extend to more remote nations, those nations especially and their transactions, wherein the Church of God was particularly interested and concerned. It pleased God too to make these revelations at a time when his people seemed in other respects abandoned and forsaken, and did not so much deserve as stand in need of light and comfort. Isaiah and Jeremiah prophesied in the declension of the kingdoms of Israel and Judah. Ezekiel and Daniel prophesied during the time of the Babylonish captivity. And the prophecies of Daniel are so clear and exact, that in former as well as in later times it hath confidently been asserted, that they must have been written after the events, which they are pretended to foretel.

The famous Porphyry (who flourished at the latter end of the third century after Christ) was I think the first who denied their genuineness and authority. He wrote ¹fifteen books against the Christian religion, the twelfth of which was designed to depreciate the prophecies of Daniel; and therein he affirmed, that they were not composed by Daniel, whose name they bore, but by somebody who lived in Judea about the time of Antiochus Epiphanes; because all to that time contained true history, but all beyond that were manifestly false. This work of Porphyry, together with the answers of Eusebius, Apollinarius, and Methodius, is wholly lost, excepting a few fragments and quotations, which are preserved in Jerome and others of the fathers. But as ²Jerome rightly observes, this method of opposing the prophecies is the strongest testimony of their truth. For they were fulfilled with such exactness, that to infidels the prophet seemed not to have foretold things future, but to have related things past.

¹ Cave Hist. Lit. Vol. I. p. 156. Hieron. Præf. in Daniele, Vol. III. p. 1072. Edit. Benedict.

² Cujus impugnatio testimonium veritatis est. Tanta enim dictorum fides fuit, ut propheta incredulis hominibus non videatur futura dixisse, sed narrasse præterita. [Translated in the text.] Hieron. ibid.

The celebrated author of the Scheme of Literal Prophecy considered hath followed the steps of Porphyry. He hath collected every thing, that in the course of his reading he thought could be turned to the disparagement of the book of Daniel. He had framed all that he had collected into eleven objections against it: and upon the whole concludes with much positiveness and assurance, that it must be written in the days of the Maccabees. But his ¹ two learned opponents, both of the same name, have solidly and clearly refuted his eleven objections, and shown them all to be mere cavils or direct falsities, groundless assertions, wrong quotations, or plain contradictions.

And indeed it may be proved, it hath been proved to a demonstration, as much as any thing of this nature can be proved to a demonstration, by all the characters and testimonies both internal and external, that the prophecies of Daniel were written at the time that the Scripture says they were written, and he prospered on account of these prophecies (Dan. vi. 28.) in the reign of Darius the Mede, and in the reign of Cyrus the Persian: that is, between five and six hundred years before Christ. It is very capricious and unreasonable in unbelievers to object, as Collins doth, to the prophecies of Daniel, sometimes that they are too plain, and sometimes that they are too obscure. But it will entirely overthrow the notion of their being written in the days of Antiochus Epiphanes, or of the Maccabees, and will establish the credit of Daniel as a prophet beyond all contradiction, if it can be proved that there are several prophecies of his which have been fulfilled since the days of Antiochus Epiphanes and the Maccabees as well as before, nay, that there are prophecies of his which are fulfilling in the world at this very time.

Daniel's first prophecy, and the groundwork as I may say of all the rest, was his interpretation of Nebuchadnezzar's dream. This monarch in the second year of his reign (Dan. ii. 1.) according to the Babylonian account, or the fourth according to the Jewish, that is in the second year of his reigning alone, or the fourth from his first reigning jointly with his father, having subdued all his enemies, and firmly established his throne, was thinking upon his bed, (ver. 29.) what should come to pass hereafter, what should be the future success of his family and kingdom, and whether any or what families and kingdoms might arise after his own: and as our waking thoughts usually give some tincture to our dreams, he dreamed of something to the same purpose, which astonished him, but which he could not rightly understand. The dream affected him strongly at the time; but awaking in confusion, he had but an imperfect remembrance of it, he could not recollect all the particulars. He called, therefore, (ver. 2.) for the magicians and astrologers; and as absurdly as imperiously demanded of them (ver. 5.) upon pain of death and destruction, to make known unto him both the dream and the interpretation thereof. They answered very reasonably, that no king had ever required such a thing, that it transcended all the powers and faculties of man, God alone, or only beings like God, could disclose it; (ver. 10, 11.) There is not a man upon earth that can show the king's matter; therefore there is no king, lord, nor ruler, that asked such things at any magician, astrologer, or Chaldean. And it is a rare thing that the king requireth, and there is none other that can show it before the king, except the God whose dwelling is not with flesh. But the pride of absolute power cannot hear any reason, or bear any control; and the king, greatly incensed, presently ordered all the magicians and wise men of Babylon to be destroyed, (ver. 12.) For this cause the king was angry and very furious, and commanded to destroy all the wise men of Babylon.

¹ See Bp. Chandler's Vindication of his Defence of Christianity, and Mr. Sam. Chandler's Vindication of the Antiquity and Authority of Daniel's Prophecies, in answer to the Scheme of Literal Prophecy considered.

Daniel and his fellows would have been involved in the same fate as the rest; but by their joint and earnest prayers to the God of heaven, the secret was revealed unto Daniel in a night vision; (ver. 19.) and Daniel blessed the God of heaven. Daniel, thus instructed, was desirous to save the lives of the wise men of Babylon, who were unjustly condemned, as well as his own; and he went unto Arioch, the captain of the king's guard, whom the king had ordained to destroy the wise men of Babylon: he went (ver. 24.) and said thus unto him, Destroy not the wise men of Babylon: bring me in before the king, and I will show unto the king the interpretation. The captain of the guard immediately introduced him to the king, and said (ver. 25.) I have found a man of the captives of Judah that will make known unto the king the interpretation. I have found a man, said he, though Daniel had voluntarily offered himself; where Jerome remarks the manner of courtiers, qui quum bona nunciant, sua videri volunt, who when they relate good things, are willing to have them thought their own, and to have the merit ascribed to themselves. But Daniel was far from ascribing any merit to himself, and said very modestly, that this secret (ver. 27.) which the wise men, astrologers, magicians, and soothsayers could not show unto the king, was not revealed to him (ver. 30.) for any wisdom that he had more than others: but there is a God in heaven (ver. 28.) that revealeth secrets, and maketh known to the king Nebuchadnezzar what shall be in the latter days; or what shall come to pass hereafter, as it is expressed (ver. 29. and 45.) twice afterwards. The impious king, as ¹ Jerome justly observes, had a prophetic dream, that the saint interpreting it, God might be glorified, and the captives and those who served God in captivity might receive great consolation. We read the same thing of Pharaoh, not that Pharaoh and Nebuchadnezzar deserved to see such things, but that Joseph and Daniel by interpreting them might be preferred to all others. And as St. Jerome farther observes, that Nebuchadnezzar might admire the grace of Divine inspiration, Daniel not only told him what he saw in his dream, but also what he thought within himself before his dream, (ver. 29.) As for thee, O king, thy thoughts came into thy mind upon thy bed, what should come to pass hereafter: and he that revealeth secrets, maketh known unto thee what shall come to pass.

¹ Hieron. Comment, in ver. 1. Vident rex impius somnium futurorum, ut interpretante

Nebuchadnezzar's dream was of a great image. This great image, (ver. 31.) whose brightness was excellent, stood before him, and the form thereof was terrible. It appears from ancient coins and medals, that cities and people were often represented by figures of men and women. A great terrible human figure was therefore not an improper emblem of human power and dominion; and the various metals of which it was composed, not unfitly typify the various kingdoms which should arise. It consisted of four different metals, gold and silver and brass and iron mixed with clay; and these four metals, according to Daniel's own interpretation, mean so many kingdoms: and the order of their succession is clearly denoted by the order of the parts, the ¹ head and higher parts signifying the earlier times, and the lower the parts, the later the times. From hence, as ² Calvin conceives, the poets drew their fables of the four ages of the world, the golden, the silver, the brazen, and the iron age; by which declension in this place it is signified, that the world always degenerates, and manners grow worse and worse. But Hesiod, who lived about two hundred years before Daniel, mentioned the four ages of the world; so that this vision was formed agreeably to the common received notion, and the common received notion was not first propagated from hence. Whether this notion of the world's degenerating and growing worse and worse be true or not, these different kingdoms will naturally constitute the different heads of our discourse. And we shall follow the best commentators, from Josephus down to Sir Isaac Newton, but we shall regard no commentator so much as the truth of history, the evidence of reason, and the analogy of Scripture.

Sancto quod viderat, Deus glorificaretur; et captivorum Deoque in captivitate servientium sit grande solatium. Hoc idem in Pharaone legimus, non quod Pharaon et Nabuchodonosor videre meruerint: sed quod Joseph et Daniel digni extiterint, qui interpretatione eorum omnibus præferrentur. Et postea in ver. 20.—et ut Nabuchodonosor divinæ inspirationis miretur gratiam, non solum quid in somnio viderit, sed ante somnium quid tacitus cogitarit exponit. [Translated in the text.] Vol. III. p. 1077 et 1080. Edit. Benedict.

¹ Pars statuæ quod superior, eò priora, quod inferior, eò seriora tempora significat. Grot. in loc. [The part of the statue which was higher, signifies what was first in the order of time, and the parts lower downwards, events that were to follow after.]

² Ex hoc Danielis loco hauserunt poetæ fabulas suas de quatuor sæculis, aureo, argenteo, æneo, ferreo; quâ declinatione h. l. significatur, mundum semper decidere, et mores prolabi in deterius. [Translated in the text.] Calvin apud Poli Synops.

I. This image's head was of fine gold, (ver. 32.) which Daniel interprets, (ver. 38.) Thou art this head of gold, thou, and thy family, and thy representatives. The Babylonian, therefore, was the first of these kingdoms; and it was fitly represented by the head of fine gold, on account of its great riches; and Babylon for the same reason was called by Isaiah (xiv. 4.) the golden city. The Assyrian is usually said to be the first of the four great empires; and the name may be allowed to pass, if it be not taken too strictly. For the Assyrian empire, properly so called, was dissolved before this time; the Babylonian was erected in its stead; but the Babylonians are sometimes called Assyrians in the best classic authors, Herodotus, Xenophon, Strabo, and others, as well as in the Holy Scriptures. Daniel addresseth Nebuchadnezzar as if he was a very powerful king, and his empire very large and extensive, (ver. 37.) Thou, O king, art a king of kings. He perhaps might think, like some of his predecessors, that his conquests were owing to his own fortitude and prudence; (Isai. x. 13.) By the strength of my hand I have done it, and by my wisdom, for I am prudent; and I have removed the bounds of the people, and have robbed their treasures, and I have put down the inhabitants like a valiant man. But the prophet assures him that his success must be primarily imputed to the God of heaven, (ver. 37 and 38.) For the God of heaven hath given thee a kingdom, power, and strength, and glory. And whosoever the children of men dwell, the beasts of the field, and the fowls of the heaven, hath he given into thine hand, and hath made thee ruler over them all.

All the ancient eastern histories almost are lost: but there are some fragments even of heathen historians yet preserved, which speak of this mighty conqueror and his extended empire. Berosus in Josephus ¹ saith, that he held in subjection Egypt, Syria, Phœnicia, Arabia, and by his exploits surpassed all the Chaldæans and Babylonians who reigned before him. Josephus ² subjoins, that in the archives of the Phœnicians there are written things consonant to those which are said by Berosus concerning this king of the Babylonians, that he subdued Syria and all Phœnicia. With these likewise agrees Philostratus in his history, and Megasthenes in the fourth book of his Indian history, throughout which he attempts to show, that the forementioned king of the Babylonians exceeded Hercules in fortitude and greatness of exploits; for he affirms that he subdued the greatest part of Lybia and Spain. Strabo likewise from the same Megasthenes ¹ asserts, that this king among the Chaldæans was more celebrated than Hercules, and that he proceeded as far as to the pillars of Hercules, and led his army out of Spain into Thrace and Pontus. But his empire, though of great extent, was yet of no long duration; for it ² ended in his grandson Belshazzar, not seventy years after the delivery of this prophecy, nor above twenty-three years after the death of Nebuchadnezzar; which may be the reason of Daniel's speaking of him as the only king, thou art this head of gold, and after thee shall arise, &c. the rest being to be considered as nothing; nor do we read of any thing good or great that was performed by them.

¹ Κρατῆσαι δὲ φησὶ τὸν Βαβυλώνιον, Αἰγύπτου, Συρίας, Φοινίκης, Ἀραβίας, πάντας δὲ ὑπερβαλλόμενον ταῖς πράξεσι τοὺς πρὸ αὐτοῦ Χαλδαίων καὶ Βαβυλωνίων βασιλευσκότας. Dicit insuper quod Babylonius tenuerit Ægyptum, Syriam, Phœniciam, Arabiam; quodque priores Chaldæorum, et Babyloniorum reges universos rebus a se præclarè gestis superarit. [He further saith, that this Babylonian held in subjection Egypt, Syria, Phœnicia, and Arabia, and that by his exploits he far surpassed all the Chaldæan and Babylonian kings, who had gone before him.] Apud Joseph. contra Apion. Lib. i. sect. xix. p. 1342. Edit. Hudson.

² —ἐν τοῖς ἀρχαίοις τῶν Φοινίκων σύμφωνα τοῖς ὑπὸ Βηρωσσοῦ λεγομένοις ἀναγέγραπται, περὶ τοῦ τῶν Βαβυλωνίων βασιλέως, ὅτι καὶ τὴν Συρίαν καὶ τὴν Φοινίκην ἅπασαν ἐκείνος κατεστρέψατο. περὶ τούτων γοῦν συμφωνεῖ καὶ Φιλόστρατος ἐν ταῖς ἱστορίαις, —καὶ Μεγασθένης ἐν τῇ τετάρτῃ τῶν Ἰνδικῶν, δι' ἧς ἀποφαίνειν πειράται τὸν προειρημένον βασιλεῖα τῶν Βαβυλωνίων, Ἡρακλέους ἀνδρεία καὶ μεγέθει πράξεων διεννηχέαι. καταστρέφασθαι γὰρ αὐτὸν φησὶ καὶ Λιβύης τὴν πολλὴν καὶ Ἰβηρίαν. —in archivis Phœnicum scripta reperiuntur, quæ cum iis conveniunt a Beroso narratis de rege Babyloniorum. Syriam scilicet et universam Phœniciam illum subegisse. His sane adstipulatur Philostratus in historiis,—et Megasthenes in quarto volumine rerum Indicarum, ubi ostendere contendit prædictum Babyloniorum regem et fortitudine Herculeum et magnitudine præstitisse, dicit enim eum Libyæ bonam partem et Iberiam subjugasse. [Translated in the text.] Joseph. ibid. sect. xx. p. 1343.

II. His breast and his arms of silver, (ver. 32.) which Daniel interprets, (ver. 39.) And after thee shall arise another kingdom inferior to thee. It is very well known, that the kingdom which arose after the Babylonian, was the Medo-Persian. The two hands and the shoulders, saith ³ Josephus, signify that the empire of the Babylonians should be dissolved by two kings. The two kings were the kings of the Medes and Persians, whose powers were united under Cyrus, who was son of one of the kings, and son-in-law of the other, and who besieged and took Babylon, put an end to that empire, and on its ruins erected the Medo-Persian, or the Persian, as it is more usually called, the Persians having soon gained the ascendancy over the Medes. This empire is said to be inferior, as being less than the former, minus te as the vulgar Latin translates it, because neither Cyrus nor any of his successors ever carried their arms into Africa or Spain, so far as Nebuchadnezzar is reported to have done: or, rather inferior, as being worse than the former, deterius te, as Castalio translates it, for ⁴ Dr. Prideaux asserts, and I believe he may assert very truly, that the kings of Persia were “the worst race of

¹ Ναυοκοδόρορον δὲ τὸν παρὰ Χαλδαίοις εὐδοκμήσαντα Ἡρακλέους μᾶλλον, καὶ ὥς Στηλῶν ἐλάσαι, — καὶ ἐκ τῆς Ἰβηρίας εἰς τὴν Θράκην καὶ τὸν Πόντον ἀναγεῖν τὴν στρατίαν. — Navocodrosorum autem qui magis a Chaldæis probatur quam Hercules, usque ad Columnas pervenisse, — et exercitum ex Hispaniâ in Thraciam Pontumque duxisse. [Translated in the text.] Strab. Lib. xv. p. 687. Edit. Paris. p. 1007. Edit. Amstel. 1707.

² See Usher's Annals, A.M. 3466. p. 100. Prideaux, Connect, Part i. B. ii. Anno 539. Belshazzar 17.

³ Αἱ δὲ δύο χεῖρες καὶ οἱ ὥμοι σημαίνουνσιν ὑπὸ δύο καταλυθήσεσθαι βασιλείων τὴν ἡγεμονίαν ὑμῶν. duæ vero manus et humeri indicant imperium vestrum a duobus regibus eversum iri. [But the two hands and the shoulders, show that your kingdom will be dissolved by two kings.] Joseph. Antiq. Lib. x. cap. x. sect. iv. p. 457. Edit. Hudson.

⁴ Prideaux, Connect. Part i. B. ii. Anno 559. Nerioglissar. 1.

men that ever governed an empire." This empire, from its first establishment by Cyrus, to the death of the last king, Darius Codomannus, lasted not much above two hundred years. Thus far all critics and commentators are agreed, that the two first kingdoms represented in Nebuchadnezzar's dream, were the Babylonian and the Persian. As to the rest there hath been some controversy, but with little reason or foundation for it, only that some persons are troubled with the spirit of contradiction, and will dispute about the plainest points.

III. His belly and his thighs of brass, (ver. 32.) which Daniel interprets, (ver. 39.) And another third kingdom of brass, which shall bear rule over all the earth. It is universally known, that Alexander the Great subverted the Persian empire. The kingdom, therefore, which succeeded to the Persian, was the Macedonian; and this kingdom was fitly represented by brass; for the Greeks were famous for their brazen armour, their usual epithet being χαλκοχίτωνες Ἀχαιοί, the brazen-coated Greeks. Daniel's interpretation in ¹ Josephus is, that another coming from the west, completely armed in brass, shall destroy the empire of the Medes and Persians. This third kingdom is also said to bear rule over all the earth, by a figure usual in almost all authors. Alexander himself ² commanded, that he should be called the king of all the world; not that he really conquered, or near conquered the whole world, but he had considerable dominions in Europe, Asia, and Africa, that is, in all the three parts of the world then known; and ³ Diodorus Siculus, and other historians, give an account of ambassadors coming from almost all the world to congratulate him upon his success, or to submit to his empire: and then especially, as ⁴ Arrian remarks, did Alexander himself appear to himself, and to those about him, to be master both of all the earth and sea.

That this third kingdom, therefore, was the Macedonian, every one allows, and must allow: but then it is controverted, whether this kingdom ended in the person of Alexander, or was continued in his successors. St. Jerome saith ⁵ expressly, that the third kingdom

¹ Τὴν δὲ ἐκείνων ἑτέρος τις ἀπὸ δύσεως καθαιρήσει χαλκὸν ἡμφιεσμένος. illorum autem imperium alius quidam ab occidente veniens destruet, ære totus obductus. [Translated in the text.] Joseph. Antiq. Lib. x. cap. x. sect. 4. p. 457. Edit. Hudson.

² Accepto deinde imperio, regem se terrarum omnium ac mundi appellari jussit. [After he had received the empire, he gave orders that he should be called the king of all lands, and of the world.] Justin. Lib. xii. cap. xvi. sect. ix. Edit. Grævii.

³ Κατὰ δὲ τοῦτον τὸν χρόνον, ἐξ ἀπάσης σχεδὸν τῆς οἰκουμένης ἦγον πρέσβεις. κ. τ. λ. quo tempore è cunctis fere orbis terrarum partibus legati ad Alexandrum venerunt, &c. [At this time, ambassadors from almost every part of the world came to him, &c.] Diod. Sic. Lib. xvii. p. 622. Edit. Steph. p. 579. Tom. II. Edit. Rhod.

⁴ Καὶ τότε μάλιστα αὐτὸν τε αὐτῷ Ἀλέξανδρον καὶ τοῖς ἀμφ' αὐτὸν φανῆναι γῆς τε ἀπάσης καὶ θαλάσσης κύριον. ac tum primum Alexandrum sibi ipsi et qui cum eo erant universæ terræ ac maris dominum visum esse. [Translated in the text.] Arrian, de Exped. Alex. Lib. vii. cap. xv. p. 294. Edit. Gronov.

⁵ Et regnum tertium aliud æneum, quod imperabit universæ terræ. Alexandrum significat, et regnum Macedonum, successorumque Alexandri. Quod rectè æneum dicitur: Inter omnia enim metalla æs vocalius est, et tinnit clarius, et sonitus ejus longè latèque signifies Alexander, and the kingdom of the Macedonians, and of the successors of Alexander. Which is rightly named brazen, saith he: for among all metals, brass is more vocal, and tinkles louder, and its sound is diffused far and wide, so that it portended not only the fame and power of the kingdom, but also the eloquence of the Greek language. Another commentator observes, ¹ that this kingdom is compared to the belly, to denote the drunkenness of Alexander, and the profuse luxury of his successors, especially of the Ptolemies. It was a strange wild conceit in Grotius, and others, to think that the kingdom of Alexander, and of his successors, made two different kingdoms. Grotius was indeed a very great man, and for the most part a very able and useful commentator: but the greatest and ablest men have their weaknesses, and none have betrayed more weakness, or committed more errors in chronology and history than he hath done, in explaining the prophecies. His notions here are as mean and contracted, as they are generous and enlarged in other instances.

The Seleucidæ, who reigned in Syria, and the Lagidæ, who reigned in Egypt, might be designed particularly by the two thighs of brass. Of all Alexander's successors they might be pointed out alone, because they alone had much connexion with the Jewish Church and nation. But their kingdom was no more a different kingdom from that of Alexander, than the parts differ from the whole. It was the same government still continued. They who governed were still Macedonians. The metal was the same, and the nation was the same: nor is the same nation ever represented by different metals, but the different metals always signify different nations. All ancient authors, too, speak of the kingdom of Alexander, and of his successors, as one and the same kingdom. The thing is implied in the very name by which they are usually called, the successors of Alexander. Alexander being dead, ² saith Josephus, the empire was divided among his successors; he doth not say that so many new empires were erected. After the death of Alexander, saith ³ Justin, the kingdoms of the east were divided among diffunditur, ut non solum famam et potentiam regni, sed et eloquentiam Græci sermonis ostenderet. [And another third kingdom of brass, which shall bear rule over all the earth, Dan. ii. 39. This means Alexander, and the kingdom of the Macedonians, and of the successors of Alexander; which is said to be of brass. For, among all metals, brass is more vocal, and tinkles louder, and its sound is diffused far and wide; so that it showed not only the fame and power of the kingdom, but also the eloquence of the Greek tongue.] Hieron. Vol. III. p. 1081. Edit. Benedict.

¹ Confertur hoc ventri, ad notandum Alexandri crapulam, et successorum ejus præcipue Ptolemæorum luxuriam. [Translated in the text.] Tirinus apud Poli Synops.

² Τελευτήσαντος δὲ Ἀλεξάνδρου, ἡ μὲν ἀρχὴ εἰς τοὺς διαδόχους ἐμερίσθη. Alexandro autem vitâ defuncto, imperium inter successores divisum est. [Translated in the text.] Joseph. Antiq. Lib. xi. cap. viii. sect. vii. p. 505. Edit. Hudson.

³ Post mortem Alexandri magni, dum inter successores ejus orientis regna dividerentur, &c. ["After the death of Alexander the Great, whilst his eastern kingdoms were divided among his successors," &c.] Justin. Lib. xli. cap. iv. sect. i. Speaking of the Parthians, Postremo Macedonibus triumphato oriente servierunt. [The east being subdued, they last of all became subject to the Macedonians.] Cap. i. sect. v. Hi postea diductis Macedo-

his successors: and he still denominates them Macedonians, and their empire the Macedonian; and reckons Alexander the same to the Macedonians, as Cyrus was to the Persians, and Romulus to the Romans. Grotius himself¹ acknowledgeth, that even now the Hebrews call those kingdoms by one name, the kingdom of the Grecians. There is one insuperable objection against the kingdoms of the Lagidæ and of the Seleucidæ being a different kingdom from that of Alexander, because if they are not considered as parts of Alexander's dominion, they cannot be counted as one kingdom, they constitute, properly, two separate and distinct kingdoms.

IV. His legs of iron, his feet part of iron, and part of clay, (ver. 33.) which is thus interpreted by Daniel, (ver. 40—43.) And the fourth kingdom shall be strong as iron; forasmuch as iron breaketh in pieces, and subdueth all things; and as iron that breaketh all these, shall it break in pieces and bruise. And whereas, thou sawest the feet and toes, part of potter's clay, and part of iron; the kingdom shall be divided, but there shall be in it of the strength of the iron, forasmuch as thou sawest the iron mixed with miry clay. And as the toes of the feet were part of iron and part of clay, so the kingdom shall be partly strong and partly broken. And whereas, thou sawest iron mixed with miry clay, they shall mingle themselves with the seed of men; but they shall not cleave one to another, even as iron is not mixed with clay. Here are farther proofs that the kingdoms of the Seleucidæ and of the Lagidæ cannot possibly be the fourth kingdom, because the marks and characters here given of the fourth kingdom by no means agree with either of those kingdoms. This fourth kingdom is described as stronger than the preceding. As iron breaketh and bruise all other metals, so this breaketh and subdueth all the former kingdoms: but the kingdoms of the Lagidæ and of the Seleucidæ were so far from being stronger, that they were much weaker, and less than any of the former kingdoms. This kingdom, too, is represented as divided into ten toes: but when or where were the kingdoms of the Lagidæ and of the Seleucidæ divided into so many parts? Besides, the metal here is different, and consequently the nation should be different from the preceding. The four different metals must signify four different nations: and as the gold signified the Babylonians, and the silver the Persians, and the brass the Macedonians; so the iron cannot signify the Macedonians again, nibus in bellum civile, &c. [They afterwards, the Macedonians, being drawn into a civil war, &c.] Cap. iv. sect. ii. Administratio gentis post defectionem Macedonici imperii sub regibus fuit. [The government of the nation, after the failure of the Macedonian empire, was monarchical.] Cap. ii. sect. i. Sic Arsaces quæsito simul constitutoque regno, non minus memorabilis Parthis, quam Persis Cyrus, Macedonibus Alexander, Romanis Romulus, maturâ senectute decedit. [Thus Arsaces having acquired and established his kingdom; and being no less renowned among the Parthians, than Cyrus among the Persians, or Alexander among the Macedonians, or Romulus among the Romans, died in an extreme old age.] Cap. v. sect. v. Edit. Grævii.

¹ Etiam nunc Hebræi ista imperia uno nomine appellant regnum Græcorum. [Translated in the text.] Grot. in Dan. vii. 7.

but must necessarily denote some other nation : and we will venture to say that there is not a nation upon earth, to which this description is applicable, but the Romans.

The Romans succeeded next to the Macedonians, and therefore, in course, were next to be mentioned. The Roman empire was stronger and larger than any of the preceding. The Romans brake in pieces, and subdued all the former kingdoms. As Josephus said, that the two arms of silver denoted the kings of the Medes and Persians ; so we might say in like manner, that the two legs of iron signified the two Roman consuls. The iron was mixed with miry clay, and the Romans were defiled with a mixture of barbarous nations. The Roman empire was at length divided into ten lesser kingdoms, answering to the ten toes of the image, as we shall see hereafter. These kingdoms retained much of the old Roman strength, and manifested it upon several occasions, so that the kingdom was partly strong and partly broken. They mingled themselves with the seed of men ; they made marriages and alliances with one another, as they continue to do at this day : but no hearty union ensued ; reasons of state are stronger than the ties of blood, and interest generally avails more than affinity. Some expound it of the secular and ecclesiastical powers, sometimes agreeing, sometimes clashing and interfering with each other, to the weakening of both, and endangering their breaking to pieces. Or if by the seed of men we are to understand the same as by the daughters of men, (Gen. vi. 2.) those of a false and different religion, it may allude to the intermarriages, which several of the European nations, and particularly the French, Spanish, and Portuguese, have made with the Indians, Africans, and Americans. Thus some of the ten kingdoms who call themselves sons of God, and the only sons of God by adoption, have mixed with the seed of men, with strangers to him ; and yet no solid union ensues. Which observation was suggested to me by an unknown Correspondent, Mr. Hercules Younge, an ingenious clergyman, of Carrick, in Ireland. The Roman empire, therefore, is represented in a double state, first with the strength of iron, conquering all before it, his legs of iron ; and then weakened and divided by the mixture of barbarous nations, his feet part of iron, and part of clay. It subdued Syria, and made the kingdom of the Seleucidæ a Roman province in the ¹ year 65 before Christ ; it subdued Egypt, and made the kingdom of the Lagidæ a Roman province, in the year 30 before Christ : and in the fourth century after Christ, it began to be torn in pieces by the incursions of the barbarous nations.

St. Jerome lived to see the incursions of the barbarous nations : and his ² comment is, that “ the fourth kingdom, which plainly belongs to the Romans, is the iron that breaketh and subdueth all things; but his feet and toes are part of iron, and part of clay, which is most manifestly proved at this time: for, as in the beginning nothing was stronger and harder than the Roman empire, so in the end of things nothing is weaker; since both in civil wars, and against divers nations, we want the assistance of other barbarous nations." He hath given the same interpretation in other parts of his works; and it seemeth that he hath been blamed for it, as a reflection upon the government; and therefore he maketh this apology for himself. "If,"¹ saith he, in explaining the statue and the difference of his feet and toes, "I have interpreted the iron and clay of the Roman kingdom, which the Scripture foretels should first be strong, and then weak, let them not impute it to me, but to the prophet: for we must not so flatter princes, as to neglect the verity of the Holy Scriptures, nor is a general disputation an injury to a single person."

¹ See Usher, Prideaux, and other chronologers.

² Regnum autem quartum, quod perspicuè pertinet ad Romanos, ferrum est quod comminuit et domat omnia : sed pedes ejus et digiti ex parte ferrei, et ex parte sunt fictiles,

All ancient writers, both Jewish and Christian, agree with Jerome in explaining the fourth kingdom to be the Roman. Porphyry, who was a heathen, and an enemy to Christ, was the first who broached the other opinion; which, though it hath been maintained since, by some of the moderns, is yet not only destitute of the authority, but is even contrary to the authority, of both Scripture and history. It is a just observation of² Mr. Mede, who was as able and consummate a judge as any in these matters: "The Roman empire to be the fourth kingdom of Daniel, was believed by the Church of Israel both before and in our Saviour's time; received by the disciples of the apostles, and the whole Christian Church for the first three hundred years, without any known contradiction. And I confess, having so good ground in Scripture, it is with me, tantum non articulus fidei, little less than an article of faith."

V. Besides this image, Nebuchadnezzar saw (ver. 34, 35.) till that a stone was cut out without hands, which smote the image upon his feet that were of iron and clay, and brake them to pieces: Then was the iron, the clay, the brass, the silver, and the gold broken to pieces together, and became like the chaff of the summer threshing-floors, and the wind carried them away, that no place was found for them; and the stone that smote the image became a great mountain, and filled the whole earth: Which is thus interpreted and explained by Daniel, quod hoc tempore manifestissimè comprobatur. Sicut enim in principio nihil Romano imperio fortius et durius fuit; ita in fine rerum nihil imbecillius: quando et in bellis civilibus, et adversum diversas nationes, aliarum gentium barbararum indigemus auxilio. [Translated in the text.] Vol. III. p. 1081. Edit. Benedict.

¹ Quod si in expositione statuæ pedumque ejus, et digitorum discrepantia, ferrum et testam super Romano regno interpretatus sum, quod primum forte, dein imbecillum scriptura portendit, non mihi imputent, sed prophætæ. Neque enim sic adulandum est principibus, ut sanctarum Scripturarum veritas negligatur, nec generalis disputatio unius personæ injuria est. [Translated in the text.] Præf. in Isaïæ cap. xxxvi. Vol. III. p. 283. Edit. Benedict.

² Mede's Works, Book iv. Epist. vi. p. 736.

(ver. 44, 45.) And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed; and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces, and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand for ever: Forasmuch as thou sawest that the stone was cut out of the mountain without hands, and that it brake in pieces the iron, the brass, the clay, the silver, and the gold. They who maintain that the fourth kingdom was the kingdoms of the Seleucidæ and of the Lagidæ, do, many of them, maintain likewise that this fifth kingdom was the Roman. But how can these characters agree with the Roman empire? How was the Roman empire cut out of the mountain without hands, or formed without human force and human policy? How was the Roman empire of God's erection more than any of the former kingdoms? How can the Roman empire which is left to other people, be said not to be left to other people? and how can that which is broken in pieces, be said to stand for ever?

This description can with propriety only be understood, as the ancients understood it, of the kingdom of Christ. And in the days of these kings, that is, in the days of some of them. As in the days when the judges ruled (Ruth i. 1.) signifies in the days when some of the judges ruled; so in the days of these kings signifies in the days of some of these kingdoms: and it must be during the days of the last of them, because they are reckoned four in succession, and consequently this must be the fifth kingdom. Accordingly the kingdom of Christ was set up during the days of the last of these kingdoms, that is, the Romans. The stone was totally a different thing from the image, and the kingdom of Christ is totally different from the kingdoms of this world. The stone was cut out of the mountain without hands, as our heavenly body is said (2 Cor. v. 1.) to be a building of God, an house not made with hands; that is, spiritual, as the phrase is used in other places, (Mark xiv. 58, compared with John ii. 21. See also Coloss. ii. 11.) This the ¹fathers generally apply to Christ himself, who was miraculously born of a virgin without the concurrence of a man: but it should rather be understood of the kingdom of Christ, which was formed out of the Roman empire, not by number of hands, or strength of armies, but without human means, and the virtue of second causes. This kingdom was set up by the God of heaven; and from hence the phrase of the kingdom of heaven came to signify the kingdom of the Messiah; and so it was used and understood by the Jews, and so it is applied by our Saviour in the New Testament. Other kingdoms were raised by human ambition and worldly power: but this was the work not of man but of God; this was truly, as it is called, the kingdom of heaven, and (John xviii. 36.) a kingdom not of this world; its laws, its powers, were all divine. This kingdom was never to be destroyed, as the Babylonian, the Persian, and the Macedonian empires have been, and in great measure also the Roman. This kingdom was to break in pieces and consume all the kingdoms, to spread and enlarge itself, so that it should comprehend within itself all the former kingdoms. This kingdom was to fill the whole earth, to become universal, and to stand for ever.

¹ Justin. Martyr. cum Tryphone Dial. p. 301. Edit. Thirlbii. Irenæi Lib. iii. advers. Hæreses, cap. xxviii. p. 258. Edit. Grabe. Hieron. Comment. in locum, Vol. III. p. 1081. Edit. Benedict. &c. &c.

As the fourth kingdom, or the Roman empire, was represented in a two-fold state, first strong and flourishing with legs of iron, and then weakened and divided with feet and toes part of iron and part of clay; so this fifth kingdom, or the kingdom of Christ, is described likewise in two states, which ¹ Mr. Mede rightly distinguisheth by the names of regnum lapidis, the kingdom of the stone, and regnum montis, the kingdom of the mountain; the first when the stone was cut out of the mountain without hands, the second when it became itself a mountain, and filled the whole earth. The stone was cut out of the mountain without hands, the kingdom of Christ was first set up, while the Roman empire was in its full strength with legs of iron. The Roman empire was afterwards divided into ten lesser kingdoms, the remains of which are subsisting at present. The image is still standing upon his feet and toes of iron and clay; the kingdom of Christ is yet a stone of stumbling, and a rock of offence: but the stone will one day smite the image upon the feet and toes, and destroy it utterly, and will itself become a great mountain, and fill the whole earth: or in other words (Rev. xi. 15.) the kingdoms of this world shall become the kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ, and he shall reign for ever and ever. We have, therefore, seen the kingdom of the stone, but we have not yet seen the kingdom of the mountain. Some parts of this prophecy still remain to be fulfilled: but the exact completion of the other part will not suffer us to doubt of the accomplishment of the rest also in due season.

As we may presume to say that this is the only true and genuine interpretation of this passage, so likewise is it the most consonant to the sense of all ancient writers, both Jews and Christians; and its antiquity will be a farther recommendation and confirmation of its truth. Jonathan Ben Uzziel, who made the Chaldee Targum, or paraphrase upon the prophets, ² lived a little before our Saviour. He made no Chaldee version of Daniel, the greater part of this book being originally written in Chaldee, or his version is lost: but, however, he applies the prophecies of Daniel in his interpretation of other prophets. Thus, in his paraphrase upon Habakkuk, he speaketh of the four great kingdoms of the earth, ³ that they should in their turns be destroyed, and be succeeded by the kingdom of the Messiah. "For the kingdom of Babylon shall not continue, nor exercise dominion over Israel; the kings of Media shall be slain, and the strong men of Greece shall not prosper; the Romans shall be blotted out, nor collect tribute from Jerusalem. Therefore, because the sign and redemption which thou shalt accomplish for thy Christ, and for the remnant of thy people, they who remain shall praise thee," &c.

¹ Mede's Works, Book iv. Epist. viii. p. 743.

² Waltoni Prolegom. xii. 10. Wolfii Biblioth. Heb. Lib. vi. cap. ii. sect. ii. Prideaux, Connect. Part ii. Book viii. Anno 27. Herod. i.

³ Habak. iii. 17, 18. Etenim regnum Babel non permanebit, nec exercebit dominium in Israel; trucidabuntur reges Mediæ, et fortes Græciæ non prosperabuntur; delebuntur Romani, nec colligent tributum de Jerusalem. Itaque propter signum et redemptionem, quæ facies Christo tuo et reliquiis populi tui, qui remanebunt, confitebuntur dicendo, &c. [Translated in the text.]

The sense of Josephus we will give in the words of Bishop ¹ Chandler, together with his reflections upon it. "Josephus's exposition of this text is so full in the point, that it ought not to be omitted. Josephus was born while Jesus Christ lived, and was, as he ² says, skilful in the knowledge of the sacred books of the prophets, being himself a priest, and the son of a priest, and exercised this way. Hear then his sense of that part of the dream we have been upon. Daniel foretold, ³ that the second kingdom should be taken out of the way, by one that should come from the west, clothed with brazen arms: and also that the strength of this (empire) another should put an end to, that should be like to iron, which from the nature of the mineral is superior to gold, silver, and brass. Daniel added his interpretation of the stone; but I do not think fit to relate that; my business being only to give a history of past, and newly done things, not to write of future things. Yet if there be any one that is eager after truth, and will not give over inquiring, in order to learn these obscure events that are to come, let him carefully read the book itself, which he will find among our sacred (or canonical) books. Upon this passage observe, that the fourth empire is the Roman, in his judgment; because the third kingdom, which he begins in Alexander, was destroyed, not by the Greek generals, but by the Romans. Again, the fourth empire he reckons to be past, i. e. to be set up in the room of the Greek, and therefore he gives an historical explication of that, among the past events. But the kingdom of the stone being future, he refuses to touch on that. But he had a better reason than he gave: he feared to offend the power in being, whose protection he needed, and which, he foresaw, must be offended, if he should publish the hope of his captive nation, one day to subdue the conquerors. We see, however, in his excuse for stopping short, his sense of the prophecy, that is yet unfulfilled, viz. that the kingdom of the God of heaven should break in pieces the Roman; and which he must consequently suppose will continue, till it gives place to the everlasting kingdom of the Messiah. And in this belief Christ confirmed the Jews, at the time he warned them of their own excision. The kingdom of God, saith he, (Matt. xxi. 43, 44.) or all the advantages of the Messiah's coming, shall be taken from you and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof. For whosoever shall fall against this stone (as one of your prophets predicted, Is. viii. 14, 15.) shall be broken: but, I add from another prophet, (Dan. ii. 34, 35.) something more grievous for those that shall break you, on whomsoever it shall fall, it will grind him to powder. The kingdom of the stone shall bruise the Jews that stumbled at Christ's first coming; but the kingdom of the mountain, when manifested, shall beat the feet of the monarchical statue to dust, and leave no remains of the fourth monarchy in its last and degenerate state."

¹ Defence of Christianity, chap. ii. sect. ii. p. 104, &c. 3d edit.

² Joseph. de Bell. Jud. Lib. iii. cap. vii. sect. iii. p. 1143. Edit. Hudson.

³ τὴν δὲ ἐκείνων ἑτέρος τις ἀπὸ δύσεως καθαιρήσει χαλκὸν ἡμφιεσμένος, καὶ ταύτην ἄλλη παύσει τὴν ἰσχὺν ὁμοία σιδήρῳ, καὶ κρατήσῃ δὲ εἰς ἅπασαν διὰ τὴν τοῦ σιδήρου φύσιν, εἶναι γὰρ αὐτὴν στερέωτοίαν τῆς τοῦ χρυσοῦ καὶ τοῦ ἀργύρου καὶ τοῦ χαλκοῦ. ἐδήλωσε δὲ καὶ περὶ τοῦ λίθου Δανιήλος τῷ βασιλεῖ. ἀλλ' ἐμοὶ μὲν οὐκ ἔδοξε τοῦτο ἱστορεῖν, ἀπαρλόντα καὶ τὰ γεγεννημένα συγγράφειν, οὐ τὰ μέλλοντα ὀφείλοντι. εἰ δὲ τις τῆς ἀληθείας γλιχόμενος οὐ περιέσταται πολυπραγμανεῖν, ὥς καὶ περὶ τῶν ἀδύλων εἰ γενήσεται βούλεσθαι μαθεῖν, σπουδασέτω τὸ βιβλίον ἀναγνῶναι τοῦ Δανιήλου· εὐρήσει δὲ τοῦτο ἐν τοῖς ἱεροῖς γράμμασιν. illorum autem imperium alius quidam ab occidente veniens destruet, ære totus obductus; atque hujus vires alia vis debellabit ferro similis, easque in universum imperio premet propter ferri naturam, quod ea sit auro et argento et ære validior. Quin et Danielus regi ostendit omnia de saxo: sed mihi ista narrare non libuit, cui id negotii datum est, ut præterita non futura litteris consignarem. Si quis autem veritatis avidus nolit ab iis paulo curiosius inquirendis desistere, ut qui de incertis, an futura sint, scire desiderat, det operam ut Danieli librum perlegat, quem in sacrorum librorum codice inveniet. [Translated in the text.] Joseph. Antiq. Lib. x. cap. x. sect. iv. p. 457. Edit. Hudson.

The same notion was prevalent among the ancient Christians, as well as among the Jews. St. Jerome, and all the fathers, who have occasion to comment upon this passage, give the same interpretation: but we love not to multiply quotations; it will be sufficient to produce the testimonies of that eloquent preacher, St. Chrysostom, and of that elegant historian, Sulpicius Severus. St. Chrysostom is too copious to be quoted at large; we must content ourselves with some extracts out of him. "For what reason," saith he, "doth he

¹ τίνος δ' ἔνεκεν τὴν αὐτοῦ βασιλείαν καλεῖ χρυσῆν, τὴν δὲ τῶν Περσῶν ἀργυρᾶν, καὶ τὴν τῶν Μακεδόνων χαλκῆν, καὶ τὴν τῶν Ῥωμαίων σιδηρᾶν καὶ ὀστρακίνην; ὅρα καταλλήλους τὰς ὕλας· ὁ γὰρ χρυσὸς πλούτου μὲν ἐστὶ ἐμφαντικὸν—οὕτω καὶ ἐκείνη ἡ βασιλεία—κεφάλην δὲ ἐπέχει, ἐπειδὴ πρώτη ἐφάνη· ἡ δὲ Περσῶν οὐκ οὕτως εὐπορος, ὥσπερ οὖν οὐδὲ Μακεδόνων, ἡ δὲ Ῥωμαίων χρησίμωτέρα τε καὶ ἰσχυρότερα, ὕστερα μὲν τοῖς χρόνοις, διὸ καὶ πόδων τάξιν ἐπέχει. ἐστὶ δὲ αὐτῆς τὰ μὲν ἀσθενή, τὰ δὲ ἰσχυρότερα. Quare autem regnum Nabuchodonosoris vocat aureum, Persarum autem argenteum, Macedonum æreum, Romanorum ferreum atque testaceum? Vide dispositas convenienter materias. Nam aurum divitias quidem repræsentat—Sic et regnum Babylonium—Caput autem occupat: quia regnum illud fuit primum. Persarum vero imperium non adeo opulentum fuit: sicut nec Macedonum: ac Romanorum utilius ac fortius; tempore quidem posterius, quare et pedum locum obtinet. Porro sunt hujus regni quædam infirma, et quædam robustiora.—καὶ ἐν ταῖς ἡμέραις τῶν βασιλέων ἐκείνων ἀναστήσει ὁ θεὸς τοῦ οὐρανοῦ βασιλείαν, ἥτις εἰς τοὺς αἰῶνας οὐ διαφάησεται· καὶ ἡ βασιλεία αὐτοῦ λαφ' ἐτέρῳ οὐχ ὑποληφθήσεται. λεπτύνει καὶ λικμήσει πάσας τὰς βασιλείας· καὶ αὕτη ἀναστήσεται εἰς τοὺς αἰῶνας. ἄγε μοι τοὺς Ἰουδαίους ἐνταῦθα. τί ἂν εἶπουν περὶ τῆς προφητείας ταύτης; οὐ γὰρ δήπου περὶ ἀνθρωπίνης ταῦτα θέμις εἶπέν, ὅτι ἄπειρος ἐστὶ ἡ βασιλεία—ἐν ταῖς ἡμέραις τῶν βασιλέων ἐκείνων, τῶν Ῥωμαίων δηλονότι. ἄλλως δὲ εἰ λέγοιεν, καὶ πῶς τὸν χρυσὸν συνέτριψε, τὴν Βαβυλωνίων βασιλείαν πάλαι κατασκευασθεῖσαν [κατασκεύασθεισαν]; πῶς δὲ τὸν ἀργυροῦ, τὴν Περσῶν; πῶς δὲ τὸν χαλκὸν, τὴν Μακεδόνων; ταῦτα γὰρ πάλαι ἐγένετο, καὶ τέλος ἔλαβεν.—πῶς τὰς ἡδὴ σβεσθείσας βασιλείας καθαίρει; ἀλλὰ τὸ καθαίρειν ἐτέρας ἐν αἷς αἰ τοιαῦτα εἰσιν, εἰκότως ἐμποίει. Et in diebus regum illorum

call Nebuchadnezzar's kingdom of gold, and that of the Persians of silver, and that of the Macedonians of brass, and that of the Romans of iron and clay? See the materials rightly disposed; for gold represents riches, &c; so likewise was that kingdom—and it occupies the head, because it appeared the first. But that of the Persians was not so wealthy, as neither was that of the Macedonians: but that of the Romans was both more useful and stronger, and later in time, wherefore it occupies the place of the feet. But some parts of this kingdom are weak, and others are stronger.—And in the days of those kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed; and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces, and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand for ever. Bring hither to me the Jews. What will they say concerning this prophecy? for it is by no means right to say of any human kingdom, that it shall be everlasting or without end.—In the days of those kings, to wit, the Romans. But if they say how can he break in pieces the gold, the kingdom of the Babylonians, destroyed long ago? how the silver, the kingdom of the Persians? how the brass, the kingdom of the Macedonians? for these are past long ago, and are come to an end—how can he destroy the kingdoms which are already destroyed? But to destroy others in which these are included, amounts to the same thing.”

Sulpicius Severus having given an account of Nebuchadnezzar's dream, and of all the particulars relating to it, subjoins ¹ an exposition of it, agreeable to Daniel's interpretation. “The image is an emblem of the world. The golden head is the empire of the Chaldæans; forasmuch as that was the first and most wealthy. The suscitabit Deus cœli regnum, quod in sæcula non corrumpetur: et regnum ejus populo alteri non relinquetur: comminet et ventilabit universa regna: et ipsum exsurret in sæcula. Adducito mihi huc Judæos. Quid de hac prophetiâ dicturi sunt? Neque enim profecto de humano regno hæc fas est dicere scilicet; regnum infinitum fore.—In diebus regum illorum: Romanorum videlicet. Quod si dicant: quomodo aurum conterere potuit, nempe regnum Babyloniorum, quod jam olim erat destructum? Quomodo etiam argentum, nimirum regnum Persarum? Et quomodo æs, scilicet regnum Macedonum? Hæc enim quondam fuerant, et finem acceperant.—Quomodo jam extincta regna destruat? Quia nimirum destruit alia regna, in quibus hæc continentur. [Translated in the text.] S. Jo. Chrysost. in Daniele, p. 214 et 216. Tom. VI. Edit. Benedict.

¹ Igitur secundum prophetæ interpretationem imago visa, figuram mundi gerit. Caput aureum, Chaldæorum imperium est: siquidem id primum, et opulentissimum fuisse accepimus. Pectus et brachia argentea secundum regnum annunciant. Cyrus enim, victis Chaldæis atque Medis, imperium ad Persas contulit. In ventre æreo, tertium regnum portendi pronuntiatur: idque impletum videmus. Siquidem Alexander ereptum Persis imperium Macedoniæ vindicavit. Crura ferrea, imperium quartum: idque Romanum intelligitur, omnium ante regnorum validissimum. Pedes vero partim ferrei, partim fictiles, dividendum esse Romanum regnum, ita ut nunquam inter se coeat, præfigurant: quod æque impletum est.—Siquidem Romanum solum ab exteris gentibus aut rebellibus occupatum;—exercitibusque nostris, urbibus atque provinciis permixtas barbaras nationes—videmus.—In lapide vero sine manibus abscisso, qui aurum, argentum, æs et ferrum testamque comminuit, Christi figuram esse. Is enim mundum istum, in quo sunt regna terrarum, in nihilum rediget, regnumque aliud incorruptum confirmabit. De quo uno adhuc quorundam fides in ambiguo est, non credendum de futuris, cum de præteritis convincantur. [Translated in the text.] Sulpicii Sacr. Hist. Lib. ii. p. 66, 67. Edit. Elzevir. 1656.

breast and arms of silver signify the second kingdom: for Cyrus, the Chaldæans and Medes being overcome, transferred the empire to the Persians. In the brazen belly the third kingdom is declared to be portended; and that we see fulfilled: forasmuch as the empire taken from the Persians Alexander vindicated to Macedonia. The iron legs are the fourth kingdom; and that is the Roman, the strongest of all the kingdoms before it. But the feet part of iron and part of clay, prefigure the Roman empire to be so divided as that it should never unite again: which is equally fulfilled—Forasmuch as the Roman territory is occupied by foreign nations or rebels—and we see (saith he, and he lived at the beginning of the ¹ fifth century) barbarous nations mixed with our armies, cities, and provinces—But in the stone cut out without hands, which brake in pieces the gold, the silver, the brass, the iron, and the clay, we have a figure of Christ. For he shall reduce this world, in which are the kingdoms of the earth, to nothing, and shall establish another everlasting kingdom. Of which alone the faith of some is still dubious, and they will not credit future things, when they are convinced of the past.”

Nay, Grotius himself, the great patron of the other opinion, that the fifth kingdom is the Roman empire, commenting upon those words (ver. 45.) it brake in pieces the iron, the brass, the clay, the silver, and the gold, cannot but acknowledge that ² the sublimer sense is, that Christ will put an end to all earthly empires, according to 1 Cor. xv. 24. that he shall put down all rule, and all authority, and power.

Thus it pleased God to reveal unto Daniel, and by Daniel unto Nebuchadnezzar, the greatest and most signal events of this world. As Daniel said unto Nebuchadnezzar (ver. 45.) The great God hath made known to the king what shall come to pass hereafter; and the dream is certain, and the interpretation thereof is sure. The king, hearing his dream related with such exactness, might be better assured of the truth of the interpretation, and of the great events which should follow. And from hence we are enabled in some measure to account for Nebuchadnezzar's prophesying a little before he died. Abydenus wrote the history of the Assyrians. It is not well known in what age he lived, and his history is lost: but there is a fragment of it preserved by Eusebius, wherein it is asserted, upon the authority of Megasthenes, that Nebuchadnezzar was divinely inspired, and prophesied in ³ this manner: “I, Nebuchadnezzar, foretel unto you, O Babylonians, an imminent calamity, which neither Belus, my progenitor, nor queen Beltis can persuade the fates to avert: A Persian mule shall come assisted by your demons, and impose servitude upon you; whose coadjutor shall be a Mede, the boast of the Assyrians." And soon after he died. Herodotus, who was a much older historian than Megasthenes, relates that a Delphic oracle was given to Croesus, king of Lydia, that ¹ when a mule should rule over the Medes, then he should not be ashamed to fly away. Which oracle was afterwards thus interpreted by the Pythian priestess; Cyrus ² was this mule: for he was born of parents of different nations, the mother the better, and the father the meaner; for she was a Mede, and the daughter of the king of the Medes, but he was a Persian, and subject to the Medes. If any credit is to be given to these stories, if any such prophecy was uttered by Nebuchadnezzar a little before his death, if any such oracle was received and believed of Cyrus and the Persians subduing Asia, the notion, the tradition, may very well be supposed to have been derived originally from this prophecy of Daniel, which, being so solemnly delivered to a great king, and published in Chaldee, might come to be generally known in the east; and the event soon afterwards evinced the truth of it.

¹ Cave, Hist. Litt. Vol. I. p. 374.

² Sensus sublimior, Christum finem impositurum omnibus imperiis terrestribus, 1 Cor. xv. 24. [Translated in the text.] Grot. in locum.

³ ἐγὼ Ναβουκοδόσορος, ὃ βαβυλώνιοι, τὴν μέλλουσαν ὑμῖν προαγγέλλω συμφορὴν, τὴν ὃ τε Βῆλος ἐμὸς πρόγονος, ἢ τε βασιλεία Βῆλτις ἀποτρέψαι μοίρας πείσαι ἀσθενούσιν. ἡξεῖ Πέρσης ἡμίονος, τοῖσιν ὑμετέροισι δαίμοσι χρεώμενος συμμάχοισιν, ἐπάξει δὲ δουλουσίνην. οὐδὲν συναιτίος ἔσται Μήδης, τὸ Ἀσσύριον αὔχημα. Ego Nabuchodrosorus, O Babylonii, imminentem vobis calamitatem prænuncio, quam Parcis uti

It was from this prophecy too, that the distinction first arose of the four great empires of the world, which hath been followed by most historians and chronologers in their distribution of times. These four empires, as they are the subject of this prophecy, are likewise the subject of the most celebrated pens both in former and in later ages. The histories of these empires are the best writ, and the most read of any; they are the study of the learned, and the amusement of the polite; they are of use both in schools and in senates; we learn them when we are young, and we forget them not when we are old; from hence examples, instructions, laws, and politics are derived for all ages; and very little in comparison is known of other times, or of other nations. Not but there have been empires averruncant, nec Belus generis nostri auctor, nec regina Beltis persuadere unquam poterunt. Persicus veniet mulus, qui dæmonum vestrorum usus auxilio, durum cervicibus vestris jugum imponet. Atque hujus cladis auctor etiam Medus quidam erit, quo ante Assyrii magnopere gloriabantur. [Translated in the text.] Euseb. Præp. Evang. Lib. ix. cap. xli. p. 456. Edit. Vigeri.

¹ Ἄλλ' ὅταν ἡμίονος βασιλεὺς Μήδοισι γένηται,

Καὶ τότε κ. τ. λ.

Regis apud Medos mulo jam sede potito,

Lyde fugam, &c.

[But when a mule shall hold o'er Medes the sway,

Then, &c.]

Herod. Lib. i. cap. lv. p. 21. Edit. Gale.

² ἦν γὰρ δὴ ὁ Κύρος οὗτος ἡμίονος· ἐκ γὰρ δυοῖν οὐκ ὁμοεθνέων ἐγεγόνει, μητρὸς ἀμείνονος, πατρὸς δὲ ὑποδεεστέρου. ἡ μὲν γὰρ ἦν Μηδὶς, καὶ Ἀστυάγειος θυγάτηρ τοῦ Μήδων βασιλέως· ὁ δὲ, Πέρσης τε ἦν, καὶ ἀρχόμενος ὑπ' ἐκείνοισι. Nam mulus hic, Cyrus erat: quippe qui duobus diversarum gentium parentibus ortus sit, generosiore matre quam patre. Nam illa quidem Meda erat, Astyagis Medorum regis filia: hic autem, Persa, et Medis subjectus. [Translated in the text.] Herod. ibid. cap. xci. p. 39.

as great or greater than some of these, as those of the Tartars for instance, and of the Saracens, and of the Turks; and you may think, perhaps, that they are as well deserving of a place in this succession of kingdoms, and were equally worthy to be made the objects of prophecy, being as eminent for the wisdom of their constitutions, the extent of their dominions, and the length of their duration. But these four empires had a particular relation to the church and people of God, who were subject to each of them in their turns. They were, therefore, particularly predicted; and we have in them, without the intermixture of others, a line of prophecy, as I may say, extending from the reign of Nebuchadnezzar to the full and complete establishment of the kingdom of the Messiah. He who is arbiter of kingdoms, and governor of the universe, can reveal as much of their future revolutions as he pleaseth: and he hath revealed enough to manifest his providence, and to confirm the truth of religion. What Daniel said upon the first discovery of these things, well may we say after the completion of so many particulars: (ver. 20, 21, 22.) Blessed be the name of God for ever and ever! for wisdom and might are his. And he changeth the times and the seasons: he removeth kings, and setteth up kings: he giveth wisdom unto the wise, and knowledge to them that know understanding. He revealeth the deep and secret things: he knoweth what is in the darkness, and the light dwelleth with him.

XIV.

DANIEL'S VISION OF THE SAME.

WHAT was revealed unto Nebuchadnezzar in the second year of his reign concerning the four great empires of the world, was again revealed unto Daniel (chap. vii.) with some enlargements and additions in the first year of Belshazzar, that is, about eight and forty years afterwards. But there is this difference, that what was exhibited to Nebuchadnezzar in the form of a great image, was represented to Daniel in the shape of great wild beasts. The reason of which is ingeniously assigned by Grotius, and after him by Mr. Lowth¹, "that this image appeared with a glorious lustre in the imagination of Nebuchadnezzar, whose mind was wholly taken up with admiration of worldly pomp and splendour; whereas the same monarchies were represented to Daniel under the shape of fierce and wild beasts, as being the great supporters of idolatry and tyranny in the world."

¹ Lowth's Comment. on chap. ii. 31. Grotius, ibid.

Daniel dreamed, and the angel interpreted. These four beasts, which are four, (says the angel, ver. 17.) are four kings, or kingdoms, as it is translated in the vulgar Latin, and the Greek, and Arabic versions, and as the angel himself explains it, (ver. 23.) The fourth beast shall be the fourth kingdom upon earth. They arise out of a stormy and tempestuous sea, that is, out of the wars and commotions of the world: and they are called great in comparison of other lesser states and kingdoms, as they are denominated beasts for their tyrannical and cruel oppressions and depredations. These beasts are indeed monstrous productions; a lion with eagle's wings, a bear with three ribs in the mouth of it, a leopard with four wings and four heads, and a beast with ten horns: but such emblems and hieroglyphics were usual among the eastern nations; a winged lion and such fictitious animals may still be seen in the ¹ ruins of Persepolis; horns are attributed to beasts which naturally have none; and these figures were, as I may say, the arms and symbols of such nations, and are no stranger than several which are still used in modern heraldry. We will consider them in order, and take notice only of such interpretations as carry in them something probable and plausible, to the end that we may establish what is more certain. To recite all the various opinions of commentators would be but heaping up a monument of the absurdities of former ages. We may collect something from one, and something from another, and yet in all respects perfectly agree with none.

I. The first kingdom is represented by a beast, (ver. 4.) that was like a lion, and had eagle's wings: and I beheld till the wings thereof were plucked, and it was lifted up from the earth, and made stand upon the feet as a man, and a man's heart was given to it. This is the kingdom of the Babylonians; and the king of Babylon is in like manner compared to a lion by Jeremiah, (iv. 7.) The lion is come up from his thicket, and the destroyer of the Gentiles is on his way: and he is said to fly as an eagle, (xlviii. 40.) Behold, he shall fly as an eagle, and shall spread his wings over Moab; and he is also compared to an eagle by Ezekiel, (xvii. 3 et 12.) Thus saith the Lord God, A great eagle with great wings, &c. The lion is esteemed the king of beasts, and the eagle the king of birds: and therefore the kingdom of Babylon, which is described as the first and noblest kingdom, and was the kingdom then in being, is said to partake of the nature of both. Instead of a lion, the vulgar Latin, and the Greek, and Arabic versions have a lioness; and it is ² Jerome's observation, that the kingdom of Babylon for its cruelty is compared not to a lion, but to a lioness, which naturalists say is the fiercer of the two.

¹ See Sir John Chardin and other travellers.

² Regnum Babylonium propter sævitiam et crudelitatem, — non leo, sed læna appellatur. Aiunt enim hi qui de bestiarum scribere naturis lænas esse ferociiores, &c. Hieron. Comment. in locum. [The Babylonian kingdom, on account of its ferocity and cruelty, — is not called a lion, but a lioness. For they who have written on the nature of beasts, tell us that the lioness is the more ferocious, &c.] Vol. III. p. 1099. Edit. Benedict.

The eagle's wings denote its swiftness and rapidity: and the conquests of Babylon were very rapid, that empire being advanced to the height within a few years by a single person, by the conduct and arms of Nebuchadnezzar. It is farther said, the wings thereof were plucked, and it was lifted up from the earth, that is, it was taken away from the earth, as it is commonly understood, and as it is translated in almost all the ¹ ancient versions: or it may be rendered thus, the wings thereof were plucked, wherewith it was lifted up from the earth, as ² Grotius explains it, and as we read it in the margin of our Bibles, the conjunction copulative sometimes supplying the place of a relative. Its wings were beginning to be plucked at the time of the delivery of this prophecy; for at this time the Medes and Persians were encroaching upon it; Belshazzar, the king now reigning, was the last of his race; and in the ³ seventeenth year of his reign Babylon was taken, and the kingdom was transferred to the Medes and Persians.

And it was made stand upon the feet as a man, and a man's heart was given to it. It is not easy to say what is the precise meaning of this passage; unless it be an allusion to the case of Nebuchadnezzar, when in his madness (iv. 6.) a beast's heart was given unto him, and, after he was restored to his senses, a man's heart was given to him again. What appears most probable is, that after the Babylonian empire was subverted, the people became more humane and gentle; their minds were humbled with their fortune; and they who vaunted as if they had been gods, now felt themselves to be but men. They were brought to such a sense as the Psalmist wishes such persons to have, (Psalm ix. 20.) Put them in fear, O Lord; that the nations may know themselves to be but men.

II. The second kingdom is represented (ver. 5.) by another beast like to a bear, and it raised up itself on one side, and it had three ribs in the mouth of it between the teeth of it: and they said thus unto it, Arise, devour much flesh. This is the kingdom of the Medes and Persians: and for their cruelty and greediness after blood they are compared to a bear, which is a most voracious and cruel animal. The very learned ⁴ Bochart recounts several particulars, wherein the Persians resembled bears: but the chief likeness consisted in what I

¹ Et sublata est, inquit, de terra; subverso videlicet impio [imperio] Chaldæorum. [And (he says) it was lifted up from the earth, by the subversion of the impious [empire] of the Chaldæans.] Hieron. ibid. καὶ ἐξήρθη ἀπὸ τῆς γῆς. [And it was taken away from the earth.] Sept. Videbam evulsas esse alas ejus, et ab humo sublatam. [I beheld its wings plucked, and it was lifted up from the ground.] Syriac. et egressa est de terrâ. [And it went away from the earth.] Arab.

² Et sublata est de terra. Verte: per quas efferebatur supra terram. Sæpe enim Chaldæis, ut et Hebræis, copula vim habet relativi. [And it was lifted up from the earth; render the passage, by which it was lifted above the earth. For frequently in the Chaldee, as in the Hebrew language, the copulative conjunction has the power of a relative.] Grot. in locum.

³ Joseph. Antiq. Lib. x. cap. xi. sect. iv. p. 462. Edit. Hudson. Usher, Prideaux, and other chronologers.

⁴ Bocharti Hierozoic. Pars prior, Lib. iii. cap. ix. col. 816, &c.

have mentioned; and this likeness was principally intended by the prophet, as I think we may infer from the words of the text itself; Arise, devour much flesh. A bear, saith Aristotle, is an all-devouring animal: and so, saith ¹ Grotius, the Medo-Persians were great robbers and spoilers, according to Jeremiah (li. 48. 56.)

And it raised up itself on one side, or, as it is in the margin, it raised up one dominion; for the Persians were subject to the Medes at the conquest of Babylon, but soon after raised up themselves above them. And it had three ribs in the mouth of it, between the teeth of it: these ² Jerome understands of the three kingdoms of the Babylonians, Medes, and Persians, which were reduced into one kingdom; and so, likewise, Vatablus and Grotius: but ³ Sir Isaac Newton and Bishop Chandler, with greater propriety, explain them to signify the kingdoms of Babylon, Lydia, and Egypt, which were conquered by it, but were not properly parts and members of its body. They might be called ribs, as the conquest of them much strengthened the Persian empire; and they might be said to be between the teeth of the bear, as they were much grinded and oppressed by the Persians.

And they said thus unto it, Arise, devour much flesh: this was said, as it was before observed, to denote the cruelty of the Medes and Persians. They are also represented very cruel by the prophet Isaiah, (xiii. 18.) Their bows also shall dash the young men to pieces, and they shall have no pity on the fruit of the womb; their eye shall not spare children. Cambyses, Ochus, and others of their princes, were indeed more like bears than men. Instances of their cruelty abound in almost all the historians, who have written of their affairs, from Herodotus down to Ammianus Marcellinus, ⁴ who describes them proud, cruel, exercising the power of life and death over slaves and obscure plebeians. They pull off the skins, says he, from men alive, by pieces, or altogether: and they have abominable laws, by which, for one man's offence, all the neighbourhood is destroyed. Well, therefore, might a learned ⁵ French commentator say, that the Persians have exercised the most severe, and the most cruel dominion

¹ Ursus ζῶον πανφάγον [animal omnia vorans] ait Aristoteles VIII. 5. Sic Medopersæ raptores magni, prædones, Jeremiæ li. 48. 56. [Translated in the text.] Grot. in locum.

² Ergo tres ordines in ore regni Persarum, et in dentibus ejus, tria regna debemus accipere, Babyloniorum, Medorum atque Persarum; quæ in unum redacta sunt regnum. [Therefore, the three rows in the mouth of the kingdom of the Persians, and in its teeth, we are to understand, as the three kingdoms of the Babylonians, Medes, and Persians, which were reduced into one kingdom.] Hieron. Comment. Vol. III. p. 1100. Edit. Benedict. Vatablus et Grot. in locum.

³ Sir Is. Newton's Observ. on Daniel, chap. iv. p. 29. Bp. Chandler's Vindication, Book i. chap. ii. sect. ii. p. 198.

⁴ Superbi, crudeles, vitæ necisque potestatem in servos et plebeios vindicantes obscuros. Cutes vivis hominibus detrahunt particulatim vel solidas—Leges apud eos—abominandæ—per quas ob noxam unius omnis propinquitas perit. [Translated in the text.] Amm. Marcell. Lib. xxiii. cap. vi. p. 334. Edit. Valesii, Paris. 1631.

⁵ Les Perses ont exercé la domination la plus severe, et la plus cruelle que l'on connoisse. Les supplices usitez parmi eux font horreur à ceux qui les lisent. [Translated in the text.] Calmet in Dan.

that we know of. The punishments used among them beget horror in those who read of them.

III. The third kingdom is represented (ver. 6.) by another beast like a leopard, which had upon the back of it four wings of a fowl; the beast had also four heads; and dominion was given to it. This is the kingdom of the Macedonians or Grecians, who, under the command of Alexander the Great, overcame the Persians, and reigned next after them: and it is fitly compared to a leopard, upon several accounts. The leopard is remarkable for swiftness; their horses (saith the prophet Habakkuk, i. 8.) are swifter than the leopards: and Alexander, and the Macedonians, were amazingly swift and rapid in their conquests. The leopard is a spotted animal: and so was a proper emblem, according to ¹ Bochart, of the different manners of the nations which Alexander commanded; or, according to ² Grotius, of the various manners of Alexander himself, who was sometimes merciful, and sometimes cruel; sometimes temperate, and sometimes drunken; sometimes abstemious, and sometimes incontinent. The leopard, as ³ Bochart observes, is of small stature, but of great courage, so as not to be afraid to engage with the lion, and the largest beasts; and so Alexander, a little king in comparison, of small stature too, and with a small army, dared to attack the king of kings, that is, Darius, whose kingdom was extended from the Ægean sea to the Indies. Others have pursued the comparison further, but with more subtlety than solidity; for I conceive the principal point of likeness was designed between the swiftness and impetuosity of the one and the other.

For the same reason the beast had upon the back of it four wings of a fowl. The Babylonian empire was represented with two wings, but this is described with four. For, as ⁴ Jerome saith, nothing was swifter than the victories of Alexander, who ran through all the countries from Illyricum, and the Adriatic sea, to the Indian ocean, and the river Ganges, not so much fighting as conquering, and in six years (he should have said in twelve) subjugated part of Europe, and all Asia, to himself. The beast had also four heads: to denote the

¹ Maculas pardi referunt gentium, quibus imperavit, diversi mores. [The different manners of the nations, over which he bare rule, have a reference to the spots of a leopard.] Bochart. Hierozoic. Pars prior, Lib. iii. cap. vii. col. 789.

² Pardus varium animal. Sic Alexander moribus variis: modo clemens, modo crudelis; modo victis temperati, modo ebriosus; modo abstinens, modo indulgens amoribus. [The leopard is an animal of divers colours. So Alexander was of various manners. For sometimes he was merciful, sometimes cruel, sometimes temperate, sometimes drunken, sometimes chaste, and sometimes incontinent.] Grot. in locum.

³ Ut pardus staturâ parvus est, sed animo et robore maxime præstans, ita ut cum leone et procerissimis quibusque feris congregi non vereatur: Sic Alexander penè regulus, et cum exiguo apparatu, regem regum aggredi ausus est, id est, Darium, cujus regnum a mari Ægæo usque ad Indos extendebatur. [Translated in the text.] Bochart. ibid.

⁴ Nihil enim Alexandri victoriâ velocius fuit, qui ab Illyrico, et Adriatico mari usque ad Indicum oceanum, et Gangen fluvium, non tam præliis, quam victoriis percurrit, et in sex annis partem Europæ, et omnem sibi Asiam subjugavit. [Translated in the text.] Hieron. Comment. Vol. III. p. 1100. Edit. Benedict.

four kingdoms into which this same third kingdom should be divided, as it was divided into four kingdoms after the death of Alexander, ¹his four captains, Cassander reigning over Macedon and Greece, Lysimachus over Thrace and Bithynia, Ptolemy over Egypt, and Seleucus over Syria. And dominion was given to it; which showeth, as ²Jerome saith, that it was not owing to the fortitude of Alexander, but proceeded from the will of the Lord. And indeed, unless he had been directed, preserved, and assisted by the mighty power of God, how could Alexander, with thirty thousand men, have overcome Darius, with six hundred thousand, and in so short a time have brought the countries from Greece, as far as to India, into subjection?

IV. The fourth kingdom is represented (ver. 7.) by a fourth beast, dreadful and terrible; and strong exceedingly; and it had great iron teeth: it devoured and brake in pieces, and stamped the residue with the feet of it, and it was diverse from all the beasts that were before it. Daniel was curious to know particularly what this might mean; (ver. 19.) Then I would know the truth of the fourth beast, which was diverse from all the others, exceeding dreadful, whose teeth were of iron, and his nails of brass, which devoured, brake in pieces, and stamped the residue with his feet. And he was answered thus, by the angel; (ver. 23.) The fourth beast shall be the fourth kingdom upon earth, which shall be diverse from all kingdoms, and shall devour the whole earth, and shall tread it down, and break it in pieces. This fourth kingdom can be none other than the Roman empire; for it is as absurd, as it is singular, to pretend to reckon the kingdoms of the Seleucidæ, in Syria, and of the Lagidæ, or Ptolemies, in Egypt, as the fourth kingdom. Calmet himself ³ acknowledgeth, that this is usually explained of the Roman empire; and though, for reasons of church, as well as reasons of state, he may prefer the other hypothesis, yet it is, “without pretending to destroy the system which understands the fourth empire of the Roman, and which, as he confesseth, is the most commonly received among interpreters.”

The kingdoms of the Seleucidæ and of the Lagidæ can in no respect answer to this description of the fourth beast or kingdom. It is described as dreadful, and terrible, and strong exceedingly: but the kingdoms of the Lagidæ and of the Seleucidæ were less terrible, and less strong than any of the former kingdoms. It devoured, and brake in pieces, and stamped the residue, that is, the remains of the former kingdoms, with the feet of it: but the Lagidæ and the Seleucidæ were almost continually at war with each other; and instead of subduing other kingdoms, tore to pieces their own. It was diverse from all kingdoms, that is of a different nature and constitution of government: but Egypt and Syria were governed much in the same manner as the former kingdoms, and were equally absolute monarchies. Of the fourth kingdom it is said, that it shall devour the whole earth, and shall tread it down, and break it in pieces: but this can never be applied to the kings of Egypt and Syria, who were so far from enlarging their dominions, that they could not preserve what was left them by their ancestors.

¹ See Prideaux, Connect. Part i. B. viii. An. 301. Ptolemy, Soter iv.

² Quodque additur, Et potestas data est ei, ostendit, non Alexandri fortitudinis, sed Domini voluntatis fuisse. [And what is added, And dominion was given to it, showeth, that it did not proceed from the fortitude of Alexander, but from the will of the Lord.] Hieron. ibid.

³ On l'explique ordinairement de l'empire Romain.——Sans prétendre pour cela détruire le système qui entend le quatrième empire, de l'empire Romain, et qui est le plus communément reçu parmi les interprètes. [It is ordinarily explained of the Roman empire.—Without pretending, nevertheless, to overturn the system, which understands the fourth empire of the Roman, and which is the most commonly received among interpreters.] Calmet in locum.

Wherefore ¹Jerome rightly concluded, that “the fourth empire which now possesseth the world, is the Roman, whereof it is said in the statue, his legs of iron, his feet part of iron and part of clay; and yet he mentions now the iron in part, attesting that it had great iron teeth. And I greatly wonder, saith he, that when he had before placed a lion, and a bear, and a leopard in three kingdoms, he should compare the Roman empire to no beast: unless, perhaps, that he might make the beast more formidable, he concealed the name; so that whatsoever we could imagine the most fierce in beasts, that we should understand the Romans to be.” The fourth beast was so great and horrible, that it was not easy to find an adequate name for it: and the Roman empire was dreadful, and terrible, and strong exceedingly, beyond any of the former kingdoms. It was diverse from all kingdoms, not only in its republican form of government, but likewise in strength, and power, and greatness, length of duration, and extent of dominion. It devoured, and brake in pieces, and stamped the residue with the feet of it; it reduced Macedon into a Roman province ²about 168 years, the kingdom of Pergamus about 133 years, Syria about 65 years, and Egypt about 30 years, before Christ. And besides the remains of the Macedonian empire, it subdued many other provinces and kingdoms, so that it might, by a very usual figure, be said to devour the whole earth, and to tread it down, and break it in pieces; and became, in a manner, what the Roman writers delighted to call it, terrarum orbis imperium, the empire of the whole world.

A Greek writer too, and he a grave and judicious historian, who flourished in the reign of Augustus Cæsar, hath a remarkable passage, which is very pertinent to our present purpose. Speaking of the great superiority of the Roman empire to all former empires, he saith, that the Persian was succeeded by the Macedonian, and the Macedonian by the Roman; so that he had no conception of Alexander's erecting one kingdom, and his successors another, but considered them both as one and the same kingdom. His words are, ¹“The Macedonian empire having overturned the force of the Persians, in greatness indeed, of dominion, exceeded all the kingdoms which were before it: but yet it did not flourish a long time, but after the death of Alexander it began to grow worse and worse. For being immediately distracted into several principalities by his successors, and after them having strength to go on to the second or third generation, it was weakened by itself, and at last was destroyed by the Romans. And yet it did not reduce all the earth and sea to its obedience. For neither did it possess Africa, except that part adjoining to Egypt; neither did it subdue all Europe, but only northwards it proceeded as far as Thrace, and westwards it descended to the Adriatic sea. But the city of Rome ruleth over all the earth, as far as it is inhabited; and commands all the sea, not only that within the pillars of Hercules, but also the ocean, as far as it is navigable, having first, and alone, of all the most celebrated kingdoms, made the east and west the bounds of its empire; and its dominion hath continued not a short time, but longer than that of any other city or kingdom.”

¹ Quantum quod nunc orbem tenet terrarum, imperium Romanum est, de quo in statuâ dicitur: Tibiæ ejus ferreæ: pedum quædam pars ferrea, quædam fictilis; et tamen ipsius ferri ex parte nunc meminit, dentes ejus ferreos et magnos esse contestans. Satisque miror, quod quum suprâ, leonem, et ursum, et pardum, in tribus regnis posuerit, Romanum regnum nulli bestię compararit; nisi forte ut formidolosam faceret bestiam, vocabulum tacuit; ut quicquid ferocius cogitaverimus in bestiis hoc Romanos intelligamus. [Translated in the text.] Hieron. Com. Vol. III. p. 1100. Edit. Benedict.

² See Usher, Prideaux, and other chronologers.

2. Another remarkable property of this beast is, (ver. 7.) that it had ten horns: and according to the angel's interpretation, (ver. 24.)

¹ Ἡ δὲ Μακεδονικὴ δυναστεία, τὴν Περσῶν καθελοῦσα ἰσχὺν, μεγέθει μὲν ἀρχῆς ἅπασας ὑπερέβαλετο τὰς πρὸ αὐτῆς· χρόνον δὲ οὐδὲ αὐτὴ πολλὸν ἡνθησεν, ἀλλὰ μετὰ τὴν Ἀλεξάνδρου τελευτὴν ἐπὶ τὸ χεῖρον ἤρξατο φέρεσθαι. διασπασθεῖσα γὰρ εἰς πολλοὺς ἡγέμονας [εἰς πολλὰς ἡγεμονίας, Sylb.] εὐθὺς ἀπὸ [ὑπὸ] τῶν διαδόχων, καὶ μετ' ἐκείνους ἄχρι τῆς δευτέρας ἢ τρίτης ἰσχύσασα προελθεῖν γενεᾶς, ἀσθενὴς αὐτὴ δι' ἐαυτῆς ἐγένετο, καὶ τελευτῶσα ὑπὸ Ῥωμαίων ἠφανίσθη. καὶ οὐδὲ αὐτὴ μέντοι πᾶσαν ἐποιήσατο γῆν τε καὶ θάλασσαν ὑπὴρκοον. οὔτε γὰρ Λιβύης ὅτι μὴ τῆς πρὸς Αἰγύπτῳ, πολλῆς οὕσης ἐκράτησεν, οὔτε τὴν Εὐρώπην ὅλην ὑπεργάγετο, ἀλλὰ τῶν μὲν βορείων αὐτῆς μερῶν μέχρι Θράκης προῆλθε, τῶν δὲ ἐσπερίων ἄχρι τῆς Ἀδριανῆς κατέβη θαλάσσης. — ἡ δὲ Ῥωμαίων πόλις ἀπάσης μὲν ἀρχεῖ γῆς, ὅση μὴ ἀνέμβατός ἐστιν, ἀλλ' ὑπ' ἀνθρώπων κατοικεῖται· πάσης δὲ κρατεῖ θαλάσσης, οὐ μόνον τῆς ἐντὸς Ἡρακλείων στήλων, ἀλλὰ καὶ τῆς Ὀκεανίτιδος, ὅση πλεῖσθαι μὴ ἀδύνατός ἐστι, πρώτη καὶ μόνη τῶν ἐκ τοῦ πάντος αἰῶνος μνημονευομένων, ἀνατολὰς καὶ δύσεις ὅρους ποιησαμένη τῆς δυναστείας. χρόνος τε αὐτῇ τοῦ κράτους οὐ βραχύς, ἀλλ' ὅσος οὐδεμίᾳ τῶν ἄλλων οὔτε πολέων οὔτε βασιλείων. Imperium vero Macedonicum, fractis Persarum opibus, imperii amplitudine omnia quotquot ante fuerant, superavit; sed ne ipsum quidem diu floruit, at post Alexandri obitum in pejus cæpit ruere. Statim enim in multos principes a successoribus distractum, et post illos ad secundam usque tertiamque ætatem progressum, ipsum per se debilitatum est, tandemque a Romanis deletum. Verum ne ipsum quidem omnes terras omniaque maria in suam ditionem redegit. Neque enim Africæ, quæ late patet, nisi partis Ægypto proximæ, potitum est: neque totam Europam subegit, sed ab ejus septentrionalibus partibus ad Thraciam usque processit, ab occidentalibus vero usque ad Adriaticum mare descendit. — At respublica Romana totius terræ, quæ non est deserta, sed ab hominibus incolitur, imperium habet: et totius maris est domina, non solum ejus quod est intra columnas Hercules, sed et oceani quacunq; navigari potest, primaque et sola post hominum memoriam ortu et occasu fines imperii sui terminavit: ejusque potentia non ad exiguum tempus duravit, sed quantum nulli alii vel reipublicæ vel regno contigit. [Translated in the text.] Dionysius Halicarnass. Ant. Rom. Lib. i. p. 2 et 3. Edit. Hudson.

the ten horns out of this kingdom are ten kings, or kingdoms, that shall arise. Four kings, a little before, (ver. 17.) signified four kingdoms: and so here, ten kings are ten kingdoms, according to the usual phraseology of Scripture. And this is a farther argument, that the kingdoms of the Lagidæ and of the Seleucidæ cannot possibly be the fourth kingdom, because they were never divided into so many parts. The Macedonian empire was divided a few years after the death of Alexander into four kingdoms, whereof Egypt and Syria were two; but these two were never again subdivided into ten lesser kingdoms. Porphyry, therefore, who made two separate kingdoms of the kingdom of Alexander and his successors, contrary to the received interpretation, of kings for kingdoms, reckons down to Antiochus Epiphanes, whom he supposeth to be the little horn, ten kings who were most cruel: but these kings, as ¹Jerome observes, were not all of one kingdom, of Macedonia for instance, or Syria, or Asia, or Egypt; but the list was made up out of the different kingdoms.

Grotius, ² indeed, and Collins after him, form their catalogue of the ten kings, who were very oppressive and cruel to the Jews, out of the kings of Egypt and Syria; and they thus enumerate them, five out of one kingdom, and five out of the other, Ptolemy, the son of Lagus, Seleucus Nicator, Ptolemy Eupator, [I suppose they meant Ptolemy Philadelphus, for he reigned next after Ptolemy, the son of Lagus, and next before Ptolemy Euergetes, being the son of the former, and the father of the latter,] Ptolemy Euergetes, Seleucus Callinicus, Antiochus the Great, Ptolemy Philopator, Ptolemy Epiphanes, Seleucus Philopator, and Antiochus Epiphanes. But it happens, that some of these kings did not persecute the Jews at all, as Seleucus Callinicus. Others were so far from persecuting them, that they were their patrons and protectors. Such was Ptolemy, the son of Lagus, Seleucus Nicator, Ptolemy Philadelphus, Ptolemy Euergetes, and Antiochus the Great; and such they are reckoned by ³Josephus himself. So that out of the ten kings only four were persecutors and oppressors of the Jews. The ten horns, too, are represented as existing all at once; they shoot out and appear upon the head of the beast altogether: but these kings were not all contemporaries, many of them were successive, and one fell before another rose. So forced and arbitrary is this exposition, and so contrary to the truth of history.

¹ ———et deinde usque ad Antiochum cognomento Epiphanen, decem reges enumerat, qui fuerunt sævissimi: ipsosque reges non unius ponit regni, verbi gratiâ, Macedonia, Syriæ, Asiæ, et Egypti; sed de diversis regnis unum efficit regum ordinem. [And from hence down to Antiochus, surnamed Epiphanes, he reckons ten kings, all of whom were outrageously cruel: and he places these kings, not in one kingdom, for example, in that of Macedonia, or Syria, or Asia, or Egypt. But he makes up his one list of kings, by taking them out of different kingdoms.] Hieron. Comment. Vol. III. p. 1100. Edit. Benedict.

² Grotius, in locum. Scheme of literal Prophecy, &c. p. 162.

³ Vide Antiq. Lib. xii. cap. i. ii. iii. Contra Apion. Lib. ii. sect. iv. et v. p. 1365. Edit. Hudson.

We must, therefore, look for the ten kings, or kingdoms, where only they can be found, amid the broken pieces of the Roman empire. The Roman empire, as the ¹ Romanists themselves allow, was by means of the incursions of the northern nations, dismembered into ten kingdoms: and ² Machiavel, little thinking what he was doing, as Bishop Chandler observes, hath given us their names: 1. the Ostrogoths, in Mœsia; 2. the Visigoths, in Pannonia; 3. the Sueves and Alans, in Gascoigne and Spain; 4. the Vandals, in Africa; 5. the Franks, in France; 6. the Burgundians, in Burgundy; 7. the Heruli and Turingi, in Italy; 8. the Saxons and Angles, in Britain; 9. the Huns, in Hungary; 10. the Lombards, at first upon the Danube, afterwards in Italy.

Mr. Mede, whom ³ a certain writer esteemed as a man divinely inspired for the interpretation of the prophecies, ⁴ reckons up the ten kingdoms thus, in the year 456, the year after Rome was sacked by Genseric, king of the Vandals: 1. the Britons; 2. the Saxons, in Britain; 3. the Franks; 4. the Burgundians, in France; 5. the Wisigoth, in the south of France, and part of Spain; 6. the Sueves and Alans, in Galicia and Portugal; 7. the Vandals, in Africa; 8. the Alemanes, in Germany; 9. the Ostrogoths, whom the Longobards succeeded in Pannonia, and afterwards in Italy; 10. the Greeks, in the residue of the empire.

That excellent chronologer, Bishop Lloyd, exhibits the following ⁵ list of the ten kingdoms, with the time of their rise: 1. Huns, about A.D. 356; 2. Ostrogoths, 377; 3. Wisigoths, 378; 4. Franks, 407; 5. Vandals, 407; 6. Sueves and Alans, 407; 7. Burgundians, 407; 8. Herules and Rugians, 476; 9. Saxons, 476; 10. Longobards, began to reign in Hungary, anno dom. 526, and were seated in the northern parts of Germany about the year 483.

Sir Isaac Newton enumerates them ⁶ thus: 1. the kingdom of the Vandals and Alans, in Spain and Africa; 2. the kingdom of the Suevans, in Spain; 3. the kingdom of the Visigoths; 4. the kingdom of the Alans, in Gallia; 5. the kingdom of the Burgundians; 6. the kingdom of the Franks; 7. the kingdom of the Britons; 8. the kingdom of the Huns; 9. the kingdom of the Lombards; 10. the kingdom of Ravenna.

The few variations in these accounts must be ascribed to the great disorder and confusion of the times, one kingdom falling and another

¹ Calmet upon Rev. xiii. 1., and he refers likewise to Berengaud, Bossuet, and Du Pin.

² Machiavel. Hist. Flor. Lib. i. Bishop Chandler's Vindication, &c. B. i. chap. ii. sect. iii. p. 253.

³ Mons. Jurieu, in the Preface to his Accomplishment of the Scripture Prophecies.

⁴ Mede's Works, B. iii. p. 661.

⁵ Addenda to Lowth's Comment, p. 524.

⁶ Sir Isaac Newton's Observ. on Dan. chap. vi. p. 47.

rising, and scarce any subsisting for a long while together. As a learned ¹ writer remarks, "all these kingdoms were variously divided either by conquest or inheritance. However, as if that number of ten had been fatal in the Roman dominions, it hath been taken notice of upon particular occasions. As about A.D. 1240, by Eberard, bishop of Saltsburg, in the diet at Ratisbon. At the time of the Reformation they were also ten. So that the Roman empire was divided into ten, in a manner, first and last." Mr. Whiston, who published his essay on the Revelation of St. John, in the year 1706, farther ² observes, "that as the number of the kingdoms, into which the Roman empire in Europe, agreeably to the ancient prophecies, was originally divided, A.D. 456, was exactly ten: so it is also very nearly returned again to the same condition; and at present is divided into ten grand, or principal kingdoms, or states.—For though there are many more great kingdoms and dominions in Europe besides, yet are they out of the bounds of the old Roman empire, and so not so directly within our present inquiry."

We would, for reasons which will hereafter appear to the attentive reader, fix these ten kingdoms, at a different era from any of the foregoing; and let us see how they stood in the eighth century. The principal states and governments then were: 1. of the senate of Rome, who revolted from the Greek emperors, and claimed and exerted the privilege of choosing a new western emperor; 2. of the Greeks, in Ravenna; 3. of the Lombards, in Lombardy; 4. of the Huns, in Hungary; 5. of the Alemanes, in Germany; 6. of the Franks, in France; 7. of the Burgundians, in Burgundy; 8. of the Goths, in Spain; 9. of the Britons; 10. of the Saxons, in Britain. Not that there were constantly ten kingdoms; they were sometimes more, and sometimes fewer: but, as ³ Sir Isaac Newton says, "whatever was their number afterwards, they are still called the ten kings, from their first number."

3. Besides these ten horns or kingdoms of the fourth empire, there was to spring up among them another little horn. I considered the horns, saith Daniel, (ver. 8.) and behold there came up among them another little horn, before whom there were three of the first horns plucked up by the roots. Daniel was eager to know, (ver. 20.) as of the ten horns, so likewise of the other which came up, and before whom three fell. And he was informed by the angel, (ver. 24.) that as the ten horns out of this kingdom were ten kings, or kingdoms, that should arise, so likewise that another shall rise after them, and he shall subdue three kings, or kingdoms. One absurdity generally produceth another: and ⁴ Grotius, in consequence of his former supposition, that the fourth kingdom was the kingdoms of the Seleucidæ and the Lagidæ, supposeth also, that the little horn was Antiochus

¹ Daubuz on Rev. xiii. 1. p. 556.

² Essay on the Rev. Part iii. p. 235.

³ Sir Isaac Newton's Observ. on Daniel, chap. vi. p. 73.

⁴ Grotius and Collins, ibid.

Epiphanes, and that the three horns which were plucked up before him were his elder brother, Seleucus, and Demetrius, the son of Seleucus, and Ptolemy Philopator, king of Egypt: and Collins adopts the same notion after Grotius, for Collins was only a retailer of scraps, and could not advance any thing of this kind of his own. But surely it is very arbitrary to reckon Antiochus Epiphanes as one of the ten horns, and at the same time as the little horn, when the prophet hath plainly made the little horn an eleventh horn, distinct from the former ten. There were three of the first horns to be plucked up by the roots before the little horn; but the three kings mentioned by Grotius are not all in his first catalogue of ten kings, neither Ptolemy Philometor (if Philometor be meant) nor Demetrius being of the number. Neither were they plucked up by the roots by Antiochus, or by his order. Seleucus was ¹ poisoned by his treasurer, Heliodorus, whose aim it was to usurp the crown to himself, before Antiochus returned from Rome, where he had been detained a hostage several years. Demetrius ² lived to dethrone and murder the son of Antiochus, and succeeded him in the kingdom of Syria. Ptolemy Philopator ³ died, king of Egypt, almost thirty years before Antiochus came to the throne of Syria: or if Ptolemy Philometor (as is most probable) was meant by Grotius, Philometor, though he suffered much in his wars with Antiochus, yet survived him ⁴ about eighteen years, and died in possession of the crown of Egypt, after the family of Antiochus had been set aside from the succession to the crown of Syria. Neither doth Antiochus Epiphanes answer to the character of the little horn in other respects, and particularly in this. The little horn continues (ver. 21, 22. 26.) to reign till the second coming of Christ in glory; but Antiochus Epiphanes died about one hundred and sixty-four years before his first coming in the flesh. These are all farther arguments to prove, that the fourth beast must needs signify the Roman empire, and that the ten horns represent the ten kingdoms into which that empire was divided, and therefore we must look for the little horn among them, and no where else: and that we may not be led away by modern prejudices, let us see whether the ancients will not afford us some light and direction.

Irenæus, a father who flourished in the second century, treating of the fraud, pride, and tyranny of Antichrist, asserts that ⁵ Daniel,

¹ Appian, in Syriac. p. 116. Edit. Steph. p. 187. Edit. Tollii.

² Appian, ibid. p. 117. Edit. Steph. p. 188. Edit. Tollii. Justin. Lib. xxxiv. cap. iii. Joseph. Antiq. Lib. xii. cap. x. sect. i. p. 548. Edit. Hudson.

³ Ptolemy Philopator died Anno 204, Antiochus became king Anno 175 before Christ. See Usher, Prideaux, &c.

⁴ Antiochus Epiphanes died Anno 164, Ptolemy Philometor Anno 146 before Christ. See Usher, Prideaux, &c.

⁵ Daniel autem novissimi regni finem respiciens, id est, novissimos decem reges, in quos divideretur regnum illorum, super quos filius perditionis veniet, cornua dicit decem nasci bestiarum: et alterum cornu pusillum nasci in medio ipsorum, et tria cornua de prioribus eradicare a facie ejus——De quo et apostolus Paulus in secundâ ad Thessalonicenses, &c.

respecting the end “ of the last kingdom, that is, the last ten kings, among whom that kingdom should be divided, upon whom the son of perdition shall come, saith that ten horns shall grow on the beast, and another little horn shall grow up among them, and three of the first horns shall be rooted out before him. Of whom also Paul, the apostle speaketh, in his second Epistle to the Thessalonians, calling him the son of perdition, and the wicked one. St. John, our Lord's disciple, hath, in the Apocalypse, still more plainly signified of the last time, and of these ten kings, among whom the empire that now reigneth shall be divided, explaining what the ten horns shall be, which were seen by Daniel.”

St. Cyril, of Jerusalem, who flourished about the middle of the fourth century, speaking of Antichrist's coming in the latter time of the Roman empire, ¹ saith, ‘ We teach these things not of our own invention, but having learned them out of the divine Scriptures, and especially out of the prophecy of Daniel, which was just now read; even as Gabriel, the archangel, interpreted, saying thus; the fourth beast shall be the fourth kingdom upon earth, which shall exceed all the kingdoms: but that this is the empire of the Romans, ecclesiastical interpreters have delivered. For the first that was made famous, was the kingdom of the Assyrians; and the second was that of the Medes and Persians together; and after these, the third was that of the Macedonians; and the fourth kingdom, is now that of the Romans. Afterwards, Gabriel interpreting, saith, Its ten horns are ten kings that shall arise; and after them shall arise another king, who shall exceed in wickedness all before him; not only the ten Manifestius adhuc etiam de novissimo tempore, et de his qui sunt in eo decem regibus, in quos dividetur quod nunc regnat imperium, significavit Joannes Domini discipulus in Apocalypsi, edisserens quæ fuerint decem cornua, quæ a Daniele visa sunt, &c. [Translated in the text.] Iren. Lib. v. cap. xxv. xxvi. p. 438, &c. Edit. Grabe.

¹ Ταῦτα δὲ διδάσκουμεν οὐκ εὐρεσιλογούντες, ἀλλ’ ἐκ τῶν θείων ἐκκλησιαζομένων γραφῶν, καὶ μάλιστα ἐκ τῆς ἀρτίως ἀναγνωσθείσης τοῦ Δανιὴλ προφητείας μεμαθηκότες· καθὼς καὶ Γαβριὴλ ὁ Ἀρχάγγελος ἐρμήνευσε λέγων οὕτω τὸ θηρίον τὸ τέταρτον, βασιλεία τετάρτη ἔσται ἐν τῇ γῇ, ἥτις ὑπερέξει πᾶσας τὰς βασιλείας. ταύτην δὲ εἶναι τῶν Ῥωμαίων οἱ ἐκκλησιαστικοὶ παραδεδώκασιν ἐξηγηταί. πρώτη γὰρ ἐπισήμου γενομένης, τῆς Ἀσσυρίων βασιλείας· καὶ δευτέρας, τῆς Μηδῶν ὁμοῦ καὶ Περσῶν· καὶ μετὰ ταύτας, τῆς Μακεδόνων, τρίτης· ἡ τετάρτη βασιλεία νυν ἡ Ῥωμαίων ἐστίν. εἶτα ἐξῆς ὁ Γαβριὴλ ἐρμηνεύων φησί· τὰ δέκα κέρατα αὐτοῦ, δέκα βασιλεῖς ἀναστήσονται. καὶ ὅπισω αὐτῶν ἀναστήσεται βασιλεὺς ἕτερος, ὃς ὑπεροίσει κακοῖς πάντας τοὺς ἔμπροσθεν. οὐ μόνον φησὶ τοὺς δέκα, ἀλλὰ καὶ πάντας τοὺς προγεγονότας. Καὶ τρεῖς βασιλεῖς ταπεινώσει· δῆλον καὶ [δὲ] ἀπὸ τῶν δέκα τῶν προτέρων, ἀπὸ τῶν δέκα τούτων τοὺς τρεῖς ταπεινῶν, πάντως ὅτι αὐτὸς ὄγδοος βασιλεύσει. καὶ λόγους, φησί, πρὸς τὸν ὕψιστον λαλήσει. Hæc autem docemus, non comminiscens, sed e scripturis divinis colligentes, et ex eâ maxime, quæ nuper lecta est, ex Daniele prophetâ edocti: sicut Gabriel Archangelus interpretatus est, dicens sic: Quarta bestia, quartum est regnum in terra, quod majus erit aliis omnibus regnis: hoc autem esse Romanorum, ecclesiastici interpretes tradiderunt. Primum enim erat regnum Assyriorum: alterum Medorum simul et Persarum: tertium postea Macedonum: quartum est nunc regnum Romanorum. Deinceps vere Gabriel interpretans dicit: Decem cornua ipsius, decem regna consurgent: post ista alter consurget, qui omnes ante se malis vincet: neque solum illos decem reges, sed omnes qui ante se fuerunt. Et tres reges deprimet. Manifestum autem est, quod ex istis decem tres opprimet, prorsus ut ipsemet octavus regnet: et verba faciet contra Altissimum. [Translated in the text.] Cyril. Hieros. Catech. xv. cap. vi. p. 211. Edit. Milles. Oxon.

he saith, but also all who were before him. And he shall depress three kings: but it is manifest that of the first ten he shall depress three, that he himself may reign the eighth: and he shall speak words, saith he, against the Most High."

St. Jerome having refuted Porphyry's notion of Antiochus Epiphanes being the little horn, (where, by the way, the passage appears to want much emendation) ¹ concludes thus: "Therefore let us say what all ecclesiastical writers have delivered, that in the latter days, when the empire of the Romans shall be destroyed, there will be ten kings, who shall divide it between them, and an eleventh shall arise, a little king, who shall subdue three of the ten kings, and the other seven shall submit their necks to the conqueror." Theodoret speaketh much to the same purpose in his comment upon Daniel: and ² St. Augustin expressly approveth of Jerome's interpretation. "Those four kingdoms," saith he, "some have expounded to be the Assyrian, Persian, Macedonian, and Roman. How properly they have done that, those who are desirous of knowing, may read the presbyter Jerome's book upon Daniel, which is very accurately and learnedly written."

The fathers, it appears by these instances, conceived that the fourth empire was the Roman, that the Roman empire was to be divided between ten kings, and that among them would arise Antichrist, who should root up three of the ten kings, and domineer over the other seven. At the same time it must be confessed, that these same fathers entertained strange wild notions concerning this Antichrist, ³ that he should be a Jew,—that he should descend from the tribe of Dan,—that he should come from Babylon,—that he should fix his residence in the temple at Jerusalem,—that he should first subdue Egypt, and afterwards Libya and Ethiopia, which were the three horns that should fall before him. But it is no wonder that the fathers, nor indeed that any one, should mistake in particularly applying prophecies, which had not then received their completion. The fathers might understand the prophecies so far as they were fulfilled, and might say with certainty which were the four great kingdoms of the world, that the fourth was the Roman, and that the Roman would be divided in the manner that Daniel had foretold. So far was plain and obvious, and so far they might proceed with safety; but when they ventured farther, and would define particularly who were the ten kings, and who was Antichrist, and who were the three kings that should fall before him, then they plunged out of their depth, and were lost in the abyss of error. Such prophecies can be explained only by the events, and these events were yet in the womb of time. Some other mistaken prophecies might lead the fathers into this interpretation. There is not the least foundation for it in this prophecy. On the contrary, this prophecy might have instructed them better, and have taught them that as the western empire was to be divided into ten kingdoms, so the little horn should arise among them, and subdue three of them; and consequently the little horn could not arise in the east, he could not be a Jew, he could not come from Babylon, and neither could Egypt, Libya, and Ethiopia be the three kingdoms which should fall before him.

¹ Ergo dicamus quod omnes scriptores ecclesiastici tradiderunt: in consummatione mundi quando regnum destruendum est Romanorum, decem futuros reges, qui orbem Romanum inter se dividant: et undecimum surrecturus esse regem parvulum, qui tres reges de decem regibus superaturus sit—Quibus interfectis, etiam septem alii reges victori colla submittent. [Translated in the text.] Hieron. Comment. Vol. III. p. 1101. Edit. Benedict.

² Quatuor illa regna exposuerunt quidam Assyriorum, Persarum, Macedonum, et Romanorum. Quam vero convenienter id fecerint, qui nosse desiderant, legant presbyteri Hieronymi librum in Daniele, satis diligenter eruditèque conscriptum. [Translated in the text.] Aug. de Civ. Dei, Lib. xx. cap. xxiii. Tom. VII. p. 457. Edit. Benedict. Ant.

³ Irenæi, Lib. v. cap. xxv. et xxx. Cyrilli Hieros. Catech. xv. cap. vii.—tres reges de decem regibus superaturus sit, id est, Ægyptiorum regem, et Africæ et Æthiopiæ. [He shall conquer three kings out of the ten kings, namely, the kings of Egypt, Africa, and Ethiopia.] Hieron. Comment. p. 1101.—nasciturus est de populo Judæorum, et de Babylone venturus, primum superaturus est regem Ægypti, &c. et postea Libyas et Æthiopas superaturus, quæ de decem cornibus tria contrita cornua supra legimus. [He will be descended from the people of the Jews, and he will come from Babylon, and first subdue the king of Egypt, &c. Afterwards he will subdue the Libyans and Ethiopians, which are the three horns out of the ten, which we read above as trampled upon.] Idem in cap. xi. p. 1128 et 1132. Edit. Benedict. Cum Jacob filios suos benediceret, talia dixit de isto Dan, ut de ipsâ tribu existimetur exsurrecturus Antichristus. Augustin. [When Jacob blessed his sons, he spake such things concerning Dan, that from thence it hath been thought that Antichrist would spring from that tribe.] Quæstiones in Jos. Lib. vi. Quæst. xxii. p. 441. Tom. III. Edit. Benedict. Antverpiæ.

Antichrist then (as the fathers delight to call him), or the little horn, is to be sought among the ten kingdoms of the western Roman empire. I say of the western Roman empire, because that was properly the body of the fourth beast; Greece and the countries which lay eastward of Italy belonged to the third beast: for the former beasts were still subsisting, though their dominion was taken away. As concerning the rest of the beasts, saith Daniel (ver. 12), they had their dominion taken away; yet their lives were prolonged for a season and a time. “And therefore, as ¹ Sir Isaac Newton rightly infers, all the four beasts are still alive, though the dominion of the three first be taken away. The nations of Chaldæa and Assyria are still the first beast. Those of Media and Persia are still the second beast. Those of Macedon, Greece, and Thrace, Asia Minor, Syria and Egypt, are still the third. And those of Europe, on this side Greece, are still the fourth. Seeing, therefore, the body of the third beast is confined to the nations on this side the river Euphrates, and the body of the fourth beast is confined to the nations on this side Greece, we are to look for all the four heads of the third beast among the nations on this side the river Euphrates, and for all the eleven horns of the fourth beast among the nations on this side of Greece. And therefore, at the breaking of the Greek empire into four kingdoms of the Greeks, we include no part of the Chaldæans, Medes, and Persians in those kingdoms, because they belonged to the bodies of the two first beasts. Nor do we reckon the Greek empire seated at Constantinople among the horns of the fourth beast, because it belonged to the body of the third." For the same reason, neither can the Saracen nor the Turk be the little horn or Antichrist, as some have imagined them to be, and neither do they come up to the character in other respects.

¹ Sir Isaac Newton's Observations on Daniel, chap. iv. p. 31, 32.

Let us, therefore, look for the little horn, as the prophecy itself directs us, among the other ten horns of the western Roman empire. If, indeed, it be true, as the Romanists pretend, that this part of the prophecy is not yet fulfilled, and that Antichrist will come only for a little time before the general judgment, it would be in vain to enquire who or what he is; we should split upon the same rock as the fathers have done; it would better become us to say with ¹ Calmet, that "as the reign of Antichrist is still remote, we cannot show the accomplishment of the prophecies with regard to him; we ought to content ourselves with considering the past, and comparing it with the words of the prophet: the past is an assurance of the future." But perhaps upon examination we shall see reason to conclude with the generality of the Protestants, that this part of the prophecy is fulfilled. We have seen already that the Roman empire was divided into ten horns or kingdoms, and among them possibly we may find another little horn or kingdom answering in all respects to the character here given. Machiavel himself will lead us by the hand; for having shown how the Roman empire was broken and divided by the incursions of the northern nations, he ² says "About this time the bishops of Rome began to take upon them, and to exercise greater authority than they had formerly done. At first the successors of St. Peter were venerable and eminent for their miracles, and the holiness of their lives, and their examples added daily such numbers to the Christian Church, that to obviate or remove the confusions which were then in the world, many princes turned Christians, and the emperor of Rome being converted among the rest, and quitting Rome to hold his residence at Constantinople, the Roman empire (as we have said before) began to decline, but the Church of Rome augmented as fast." And so he proceeds to give an account how the Roman empire declined, and the power of the Church of Rome increased, first under the Goths, then under the Lombards, and afterwards by the calling in of the Franks.

Here, then, is a little horn springing up among the other ten horns. The bishop of Rome was respectable as a bishop long before, but he did not become a horn properly (which is an emblem of strength and power,) till he became a temporal prince. He was to rise after the other, that is, behind them, as the Greek translates it ὀπίσω αὐτῶν, and as ¹ Mr. Mede explains it, so that the ten kings were not aware of the growing up of the little horn, till it overtopped them; the word in the original signifying as well behind in place, as after in time; as also post in Latin is used indifferently either of place or time. Three of the first horns, that is three of the first kings or kingdoms, were to be plucked up by the roots, and to fall before him. And these three, according to Mr. Mede, “were those whose dominions extended into Italy, and so stood in his light: first, that of the Greeks, whose emperor Leo Isaurus, for the quarrel of image-worship, he excommunicated, and made his subjects of Italy revolt from their allegiance: secondly, that of the Longobards (successors to the Ostrogoths), whose kingdom he caused, by the aid of the Franks, to be wholly ruined and extirpated, thereby to get the exarchate of Ravenna (which, since the revolt from the Greeks, the Longobards were seized on,) for a patrimony to St. Peter: thirdly, the last was the kingdom of the Franks itself, continued in the empire of Germany, whose emperors, from the days of Henry IV., he excommunicated, deposed, and trampled under his feet, and never suffered to live in rest till he made them not only to quit their interest in the election of popes and investitures of bishops, but that remainder also of jurisdiction in Italy, wherewith, together with the Roman name, he had once infeoffed their predecessors. These were the kings, by displanting or (as the Vulgar hath) humbling of whom, the pope got elbow-room by degrees, and advanced himself to that height of temporal majesty and absolute greatness, which made him so terrible in the world.”

¹ Comme le regne de l'Antichrist est encore éloigné, on ne peut pas montrer l'accomplissement des prophéties à son égard. On doit se contenter de considérer le passé, et de le comparer avec les paroles du prophète. Le passé est une assurance de ce qui doit arriver un jour. [Translated in the text.] Calmet in locum.

² Machiavel's History of Florence, B. i. p. vi. of the English translation.

Sir Isaac Newton reckons them up with some variation. “Kings,” ² saith he, “are put for kingdoms, as above, and therefore the little horn is a little kingdom. It was a horn of the fourth beast, and rooted up three of his first horns, and therefore we are to look for it among the nations of the Latin empire, after the rise of the ten horns.—In the eighth century, by rooting up and subduing the exarchate of Ravenna, the kingdom of the Lombards, and the senate and dukedom of Rome, he acquired Peter’s patrimony out of their dominions, and thereby rose up as a temporal prince or king, or horn of the fourth beast.” Again, “It was certainly by the victory of the see of Rome over the Greek emperor, the king of Lombardy, and the senate of Rome, that she acquired Peter’s patrimony, and rose up to her greatness.

In both these schemes there is something to be approved, and something perhaps to be disapproved. In Mr. Mede’s plan it is to be approved, that the three kingdoms which he proposeth are mentioned in his first table of the ten kingdoms; but then it may be questioned whether the kingdom of the Franks or Germans in Italy can be said properly to have been plucked up by the roots through the power or policy of the popes. There were, indeed, long struggles and contests between the popes and emperors, but did the pope ever so totally prevail over the emperors, as to extirpate and eradicate them out of Italy (for so the ¹ original word signifies), and to seize and annex their dominions to his own? If all history answers in the affirmative, as it hath been said, it would be easy to point out the time or times. But for my part, I recollect no period when the pope dispossessed the emperor of all his Italian dominions and united them to the estates of the church, and enjoyed them as such for any time. The emperor possesseth dominions in Italy to this day. In Sir Isaac Newton's plan it is to be approved, that the three kingdoms which he proposeth were plucked up by the roots, were totally subdued by the popes, and possessed as parts of Peter's patrimony; but then it may be objected, that only two of the three are mentioned in his first catalogue of the ten kingdoms, the senate and dukedom of Rome being not included in the number. There were not only three horns to be plucked up before the little horn, but three of the first horns. We have therefore exhibited a catalogue of the ten kingdoms, as they stood in the eighth century, and therein are comprehended the three states or kingdoms, which constituted the pope's dominions, and which we conceive to be the same as Sir Isaac Newton did, the exarchate of Ravenna, the kingdom of the Lombards, and the state of Rome.

¹ Mede’s Works, Book iv. Epist. xxiv. p. 778, &c.

² Sir Isaac Newton’s Observations on Daniel, chap. vii. p. 74—76.

First, the exarchate of Ravenna, which of right belonged to the Greek emperors, and which was the capital of their dominions in Italy, having revolted at the instigation of the pope, was unjustly seized by ² Aistulphus king of the Lombards, who thereupon thought of making himself master of Italy. The pope in this exigency applied for help to Pipin king of France, who marched into Italy, besieged the Lombards in Pavia, and forced them to surrender the exarchate and other territories, which were not restored to the Greek emperor, as in justice they ought to have been, but at the solicitation of the pope were given to St. Peter and his successors for a perpetual succession. Pope Zachary had acknowledged Pipin, usurper of the crown of France, as lawful sovereign; and now Pipin, in his turn, bestowed a principality, which was another's properly, upon pope Stephen II., the successor of Zachary. "And so," as ³ Platina says, "the name of the exarchate, which had continued from the time of Narses to the taking of Ravenna by Aistulphus an hundred and seventy years, was extinguished." This was effected in the year 755, according to Sigonius. And henceforward the popes, being now become temporal princes, did no longer date their epistles and bulls by the years of the emperor's reign, but by the years of their own advancement to the papal chair.

¹ קצר Evellere, extirpare, eradicare. [To pluck up, to extirpate, to eradicate.] Buxtorf.

² Sigonius de regno Ital. Lib. iii. Anno 752—755. Abregé Chronologique par Mezeray, Pepin, Roy 22. Platina's Lives of the Popes translated and continued by Sir Paul Rycart in Stephen. II. Sir Isaac Newton's Observ. on Daniel, chap. vii. Voltaire, Of the origin of the power of the popes in the first part of his General History of Europe.

³ Platina, ibid. p. 140.

Secondly, the kingdom of the Lombards was often troublesome to the popes; and now again ¹ king Desiderius invaded the territories of pope Adrian I. So that the pope was obliged to have recourse again to the king of France, and earnestly invited Charles the Great, the son and successor of Pipin, to come into Italy to his assistance. He came accordingly with a great army, being ambitious also himself of enlarging his dominions in Italy, and conquered the Lombards, and put an end to their kingdom, and gave great part of their dominions to the pope. He not only confirmed the former donations of his father Pipin, but also made an addition of other countries to them, as Corsica, Sardinia, Sicily, the Sabine territory, the whole tract between Lucca and Parma, and that part of Tuscany which belonged to the Lombards; and the tables of these donations he signed himself, and caused them to be signed by the bishops, abbots, and other great men then present, and laid them so signed upon the altar of St. Peter. And this ² was the end of the kingdom of the Lombards, in the 206th year after their possessing Italy, and in the year of Christ 774.

Thirdly, the state of Rome, though subject to the popes in things spiritual, was yet in things temporal governed by the senate and people, who, after their defection from the eastern emperors, still retained many of their old privileges, and elected both the western emperor and the popes. After ³ Charles the Great had overthrown the kingdom of the Lombards, he came again to Rome, and was there by the pope, bishops, abbots, and people of Rome, chosen Roman patrician, which is the degree of honour and power next to the emperor. He then settled the affairs of Italy, and permitted the pope to hold, under him, the duchy of Rome, with other territories: but after a few years, the ⁴ Romans, desirous to recover their liberty, conspired against Pope Leo III., accused him of many great crimes, and imprisoned him. His accusers were heard on a day appointed before Charles, and a council of French and Italian bishops: but the pope, without pleading his own cause, or making any defence, was acquitted, his accusers were slain or banished, and he himself was

¹ Sigonius de regno Ital. Lib. iii. Ann. 772—774. Platina in Adrian, i. Abrégé Chronologique par Mezeray, Charlemagne, Roy 23. Ann. 772—774. Sir Isaac Newton's Observations on Daniel, chap. vii. p. 80.

² Atque hic quidem finis regni Longobardorum in Italiâ fuit, anno postquam Italiam occupaverant, ducentesimo sexto, Christi vero septingentesimo septuagesimo quarto. [Translated in the text.] Sigonius in fine libri tertii.

³ Sigonius de regno Ital. Lib. iv. Ann. 774. Mezeray, ibid.

⁴ Sigonius, ibid. Ann. 798—801. Platino in Leo III. Mezeray, ibid. Ann. 799, &c. Sir Isaac Newton, ibid. Voltaire of the revival of the empire of the west, in the first part of declared superior to all human judicature. And thus the foundation was laid for the absolute authority of the pope over the Romans, which was completed by degrees, and Charles in return was chosen emperor of the west. However, ¹after the death of Charles the Great, the Romans again conspired against the pope, but Lewis the Pious, the son and successor of Charles, acquitted him again. In the mean while Leo was dangerously ill, which as soon as the Romans his enemies perceived, they rose again, burnt and plundered his villas, and thence marched to Rome to recover what things they complained were taken from them by force; but they were repressed by some of the emperor's troops. The same ²emperor, Lewis the Pious, at the request of pope Paschal, confirmed the donations which his father and grandfather had made to the see of Rome. Sigonius has recited the confirmation; and therein are mentioned Rome and its duchy, containing part of Tuscany and Campania, Ravenna with the exarchate and Pentapolis, and the other part of Tuscany and the countries taken from the Lombards; and all these are granted to the pope and his successors to the end of the world, ut in suo detineant jure, principatu, atque ditione, that they should hold them in their own right, principality, and dominion. These, as we conceive, were the three horns, three of the first horns, which fell before the little horn; and the pope hath in a manner pointed himself out for the person by wearing the triple crown.

4. In other respects too the pope fully answers the character of the little horn; so that if exquisite fitness of application may assure us of the true sense of the prophecy, we can no longer doubt concerning the person. He is a little horn; and the power of the popes was originally very small, and their temporal dominions were little and inconsiderable in comparison with others of the ten horns. — He shall be diverse from the first. (ver. 24.) The Greek and Arabic translate it, that ³he shall exceed in wickedness all before him; and so most of the fathers, who made use only of the Greek translation, understood it; but it rather signifies that his kingdom shall be of a different nature and constitution: and the power of the pope differs greatly from that of all other princes, being an ecclesiastical and spiritual, as well as a civil and temporal authority. — And behold in this horn were eyes like the eyes of a man. (ver. 8.) To denote his cunning and foresight, his looking out and watching all opportunities to promote his own interests: and the policy of the Roman hierarchy hath almost passed into a proverb; the pope is properly an overlooker or overseer, ἐπίσκοπος or bishop in the literal sense of the word. — He had a mouth speaking very great things.

¹ Sigonius de regno Ital. Lib. iv. Ann. 814, 815.

² Sigonius, ibid. Ann. 817. Sir Isaac Newton's Observ. on Daniel, chap. vii. p. 88.

³ ὅς ὑπεροίσει κακοῖς πάντας τοὺς ἔμπροσθεν. Gr. qui malis omnes prædecessores suos superabit. [Translated in the text.] Arab.

(ver. 8. 20.) And who hath been more noisy and blustering than the pope, especially in former times, boasting of his supremacy, thundering out his bulls and anathemas, excommunicating princes, and absolving subjects from their allegiance.—His look was more stout than his fellows. (ver. 20.) And the pope assumes a superiority not only over his fellow bishops, but even over crowned heads, and requires his foot to be kissed, and greater honours to be paid to him than to kings and emperors themselves.—And he shall speak great words against the Most High; (ver. 25.) or as ¹ Symmachus interprets it, he shall speak great words as the Most High; setting up himself above all laws divine and human, arrogating to himself godlike attributes and titles of holiness and infallibility, exacting obedience to his ordinances and decrees in preference to, and open violation of, reason and Scripture, insulting men, and blaspheming God. In Gratian's decretals the pope hath the title of God given to him.—And he shall wear out the saints of the Most High; by wars and massacres and inquisitions, persecuting and destroying the faithful servants of Jesus and the true worshippers of God, who protest against his innovations, and refuse to comply with the idolatry practised in the church of Rome.—And he shall think to change times and laws; appointing fasts and feasts, canonizing saints, granting pardons and indulgences for sins, instituting new modes of worship, imposing new articles of faith, enjoining new rules of practice, and reversing at pleasure the laws both of God and men.—And they shall be given into his hand, until a time and times and the dividing of time. A time, all agree, signifies a year; and a time and times and the dividing of time, or half a time, are three years and a half. So long and no longer, as the Romanists conceive, the power of Antichrist will continue; but it is impossible for all the things which are predicted of Antichrist to be fulfilled in so short a space of time; and neither is Antichrist or the little horn a single man, but a kingdom. Single men are not the subjects of this prophecy, but kingdoms. The four kings (ver. 17.) are not four single kings, but kingdoms; and so the ten horns or kings (ver. 24.) are not ten single kings, but kingdoms; and so likewise the little horn is not a single king, but a kingdom; not a single man, but a succession of men, exercising such powers, and performing such actions as are here described. We must, therefore, compute the time according to the nature and genius of the prophetic language. A time, then, and times and half a time are three years and a half; and the ancient Jewish year consisting of twelve months, and each month of thirty days, a time and times and half a time, or three years and a half, are reckoned in the Revelation (xi. 2, 3; xii. 6. 14.) as equivalent to forty and two months, or a thousand two hundred and three score days; and a day in the style of the prophets is a year; I have appointed thee each day for a year, saith God to Ezekiel; (iv. 6.) and it is confessed, that the seventy weeks in the ninth chapter of Daniel are weeks of years, and consequently 1260 days are 1260 years. So long Antichrist or the little horn will continue: but from what point of time the commencement of these 1260 years is to be dated is not so easy to determine. It should seem that they are to be computed from the full establishment of the power of the pope, and no less is implied in the expression, given into his hand. Now the power of the pope, as a horn or temporal prince, it hath been shown, was established in the eighth century, and 1260 years from that time will lead us down to about the year of Christ 2000, or about the 6000th year of the world; and there is an ¹ old tradition, both among Jews and Christians, that at the end of six thousand years the Messiah shall come, and the world shall be renewed, the reign of the wicked one shall cease, and the reign of the saints upon earth shall begin. But as ² Irenæus saith, in a like case, it is surer and safer to wait for the completion of the prophecy, than to conjecture and to divine about it. When the end shall come, then we shall know better whence to date the beginning.

¹ Sive ut interpretatus est Symmachus: sermones quasi Deus loquetur. [Translated in the text.] Hieron. Comment. Vol. III. p. 1103. Edit. Benedict.

V. All these kingdoms will be succeeded by the kingdom of the Messiah. I beheld, saith Daniel, (ver. 9, 10.) till the thrones were cast down, or rather ³ till thrones were set, and the Ancient of days did sit, whose garment was white as snow, and the hair of his head like the pure wool; his throne was like the fiery flame, and his wheels as burning fire. A fiery stream issued and came forth from before him; thousand thousands ministered unto him; and ten thousand times ten thousand stood before him: the judgment was set, or the judges did sit, and the books were opened. These metaphors and figures are borrowed from the solemnities of earthly judicatories, and particularly of the great Sanhedrim of the Jews, where the father of the consistory sat, with his assessors seated on each side of him, in the form of a semicircle, and the people standing before him; and from this description again was borrowed the description of the day of judgment in the New Testament.

I beheld then because of the voice of the great words which the horn spake; I beheld, even till the beast was slain, and his body destroyed, and given to the burning flame. (ver. 11.) The beast will be destroyed because of the great words which the horn spake, and the destruction of the beast will also be the destruction of the horn, and consequently the horn is a part of the fourth beast, or of the Roman empire. As concerning the rest of the beasts, they had their dominion taken away, yet their lives were prolonged for a season and time. (ver. 12.) When the dominion was taken away from the other beasts, their bodies were not destroyed, they were suffered to continue still in being; but when the dominion shall be taken away from this beast, his body shall totally be destroyed, because other kingdoms succeeded to those, but none other earthly kingdom shall succeed to this.

¹ S. Barnabæ Epist. cap. xv. cum notis Cotelerii. Burnet's Theory, B. iii. ch. v.

² ἀσφαλέστερον οὖν καὶ ἀκινδυνότερον, τὸ περιμένειν τὴν ἐκβασιν τῆς προφητείας, ἢ τὸ καταστοχάζεσθαι καὶ καταμαντεύεσθαι. Certius ergo et sine periculo est, sustinere ad impletionem prophetiæ, quam suspicari et divinare. [Translated in the text.] Iren. Lib. v. cap. xxx. p. 448. Edit. Grabe.

³ Donec throni positi sunt. [Till the thrones were set.] Vulg. ἕως ὅτου οἱ θρόνοι ἐτίθησαν. [Until the thrones were placed.] Sept. Videbam subsellia posita esse. [I saw the benches placed.] Syr. sedes positæ fuerunt. [The seats were set.] Arab. and the same word is used in the Chaldee paraphrase of Jer. i. 15. They shall set every one his throne.

I saw in the night visions, and behold one like the Son of man came with the clouds of heaven, and came to the Ancient of days, and they brought him near before him. (ver. 13.) How strange and forced,—how absurd and unworthy of Grotius, is it to apply this to the Romans, which hath always been, and can only be properly understood of the Messiah? From hence the Son of man came to be a¹ known phrase for the Messiah among the Jews. From hence it was taken and used so frequently in the Gospels: and our Saviour intimates himself to be this very Son of man in saying, (Matt. xxvi. 64, 65.) Hereafter shall ye see the Son of man sitting on the right hand of power, and coming in the clouds of heaven, and thereupon he was charged by the high-priest with having spoken blasphemy.

And there was given him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all people, nations, and languages should serve him: his dominion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed. (ver. 14.) All these kingdoms shall in their turns be destroyed, but the kingdom of the Messiah shall stand for ever: and it was in allusion to this prophecy, that the angel said of Jesus, before he was conceived in the womb, (Luke i. 33.) He shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever, and of his kingdom there shall be no end.

After what manner these great changes will be effected, we cannot pretend to say, as God hath not been pleased to reveal it. We see the remains of the ten horns, which arose out of the Roman empire. We see the little horn still subsisting, though not in full strength and vigour, but as we hope upon the decline, and tending towards a dissolution. And having seen so many of these particulars accomplished, we can have no reason to doubt that the rest also will be fulfilled in due season, though we cannot frame any conception how Christ will be manifested in glory, how the little horn, with the body of the fourth beast, will be given to the burning flame, or how the saints will take the kingdom, and possess it for ever and ever. It is the nature of such prophecies not to be perfectly understood till they are fulfilled. The best comment upon them will be their completion.

¹ See Jewish authors cited even by Grotius, and Bishop Chandler, in his Defence of Christianity, chap. ii. sect. i. p. 108. 3d Edit.

It may yet add some farther light to the prophecies, if we compare this and the former together; for comparing Scripture with Scripture is the best way to understand both the one and the other. What was represented to Nebuchadnezzar in the form of a great image, was represented again to Daniel by four great wild beasts; and the beasts degenerate, as the metals in the image grow worse and worse, the lower they descend.

This image's head was of fine gold, and the first beast was like a lion with eagle's wings; and these answer to each other, and both represented the powers then reigning, or the kingdom of the Babylonians: but it appeared in splendour and glory to Nebuchadnezzar, as it was then in its flourishing condition; the plucking of its wings, and its humiliation were shown to Daniel, as it was then drawing near to its fatal end.

The breast and arms of silver, and the second beast like a bear, were designed to represent the second kingdom, or that of the Medes and Persians. The two arms are supposed to denote the two people; but some farther particulars were hinted to Daniel of the one people rising up above the other people, and of the conquest of three additional kingdoms. To Nebuchadnezzar this kingdom was called inferior, or worse than the former; and to Daniel it was described as very cruel, Arise, devour much flesh.

The third kingdom, or that of the Macedonians, was represented by the belly and thighs of brass, and by the third beast like a leopard with four wings of a fowl. It was said to Nebuchadnezzar, that it should bear rule over all the earth; and in Daniel's vision, dominion was given to it. The four heads signify Alexander's four successors, but the two thighs can only signify the two principal of them, the Seleucidæ and Lagidæ, the Syrian and Egyptian kings.

The legs of iron, and the fourth beast with great iron teeth, correspond exactly; and as iron breaketh in pieces all other metals, so the fourth beast devoured, and brake in pieces, and stamped the residue with the feet of it; and they were both therefore equally proper representatives of the fourth kingdom, or the Roman, which was stronger and more powerful than all the former kingdoms. The ten toes too, and the ten horns were alike fit emblems of the ten kingdoms, which arose out of the division of the Roman empire; but all that relates to the little horn was revealed only to Daniel, as a person more immediately interested in the fate of the Church.

The stone that was cut out of the mountain without hands, and became itself a mountain, and filled the whole earth, is explained to be a kingdom which shall prevail over all other kingdoms, and become universal and everlasting. In like manner, one like the Son of man came to the Ancient of days, and was advanced to a kingdom, which shall prevail likewise over all other kingdoms, and become universal and everlasting.

Such concord and agreement is there between these prophecies of Daniel, which remarkable as they are in many things, are in nothing more remarkable, than that they comprehend so many distant events, and extend through so many ages, from the reign of the Babylonians to the consummation of all things. They are truly, as ¹ Mr. Mede called them, "the sacred calendar and great almanack of prophecy, a prophetic chronology of times, measured by the succession of four principal kingdoms, from the beginning of the captivity of Israel, until the mystery of God should be finished." They are, as it were, the great outlines, the rest mostly are filling up the parts; and as these will cast light upon the subsequent prophecies, so the subsequent prophecies will reflect light upon them again.

Daniel was much troubled, (ver. 28.) and his countenance changed in him at the foresight of the calamities to be brought upon the Church by the little horn; but he kept the matter in his heart. Much more may good men be grieved at the sight of these calamities, and lament the prevalence of popery and wickedness in the world; but let them keep it in their heart, that a time of just retribution will certainly come. The proof may be drawn from the moral attributes of God, as well as from his promise. (ver. 26, 27.) The judgment shall sit, and they shall take away his dominion, to consume and destroy it unto the end. And the kingdom, and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominion shall serve and obey him.

¹ Mede's Works, B. iii. p. 654.

INTRODUCTION
TO THE LECTURE FOUNDED BY

THE HONOURABLE
ROBERT BOYLE,

January 5th, 1756.

THERE is not a stronger or more convincing proof of Divine revelation, than the sure word of prophecy. But to the truth of prophecy it is objected, that the predictions were written after the events; and could it be proved as well as asserted, it would really be an insuperable objection. It was thought, therefore, that a greater service could not be done to the cause of Christianity, than by an induction of particulars to show that the predictions were prior to the events; nay, that several prophecies have been fulfilled in these later ages, and are fulfilling even at this present time; and for the farther prosecution, and the better encouragement of this work, I have been called to preach these lectures, by the favour and recommendation of the great prelate, who having himself written most excellently of the use and intent of prophecy, is also willing to reward and encourage any one who bestows his time and pains upon the same subject. The ready and gracious concurrence of the¹ other trustees was an additional honour and favour, and is deserving the most grateful acknowledgments. Engaging in this service may indeed have retarded the publication of these discourses longer than was intended, but perhaps they may be the better for the delay, since there have been more frequent occasions to review and reconsider them, and time corrects and improves works as well as generous wines, at least affords opportunities of correcting and improving them.

¹ The trustees appointed by Mr. Boyle himself were Sir John Rotheram, Serjeant at law, Sir Henry Ashurst of London, Knt. and Bart., Thomas Tenison, D.D. afterwards Archbishop of Canterbury, and John Evelyn, Esq.; Archbishop Tenison, the survivor of these, nominated and appointed for trustees Richard Earl of Burlington; Dr. Edmund Gibson, then Archdeacon of Surry, afterwards Lord Bishop of London; Dr. Charles Trimmel, then Bishop of Norwich, afterwards Bishop of Winchester; Dr. White Kennet, then Dean, afterwards Bishop of Peterborough; and Dr. Samuel Bradford, then Rector of St. Mary Le Bow, afterwards Bishop of Rochester. The Earl of Burlington, being the only surviving trustee, appointed to succeed him in the said trust, William, then Marquis of Hartington, now Duke of Devonshire, Dr. Thomas Sherlock, Lord Bishop of London, Dr. Martin Benson, Lord Bishop of Gloucester, Dr. Thomas Secker, Lord Bishop of Oxford, now Archbishop of Canterbury, and the Honourable Richard Arundell, Esq.; of whom Bishop Benson died before, and Mr. Arundell since, the appointment of the present lecturer.

This work hath already been deduced to the prophecies of Daniel, and as some time and pains have been employed in explaining some parts of his prophecies, and more will be taken in explaining other parts, it may be proper, before we proceed, to consider the principal objections which have been made to the genuineness of the book of Daniel. It was before asserted, that the first who called in question the truth and authenticity of Daniel's prophecies was the famous Porphyry, who maintained that they were written about the time of Antiochus Epiphanes; but he was amply refuted by ¹Jerome, and hath been, and will be, more amply refuted still in the course of these dissertations. A modern infidel hath followed Porphyry's example, and in his Scheme of literal prophecy hath heaped together all that he could find or invent against the book of Daniel, and hath comprised the whole in eleven objections, in order to show that the book was written about the time of the Maccabees; but he likewise hath been refuted to the satisfaction of every intelligent and impartial reader: as, indeed, there never were any arguments urged in favour of infidelity, but better were always produced in support of truth. The substance of his ²objections and of the answers to him may with truth and candour be represented in the following manner.

1. It is objected that the famous Daniel mentioned by Ezekiel could not be the author of the book of Daniel, because Ezekiel, who prophesied in the fifth year of Jehoiakim king of Judah, implies Daniel at that time to be a person in years, whereas the book of Daniel speaks of Daniel at that time as a youth. But here the objector is either ignorantly or wilfully guilty of gross misrepresentation. For Ezekiel did not prophesy in the fifth year of Jehoiakim, nor in the reign of Jehoiakim at all: but he began to prophesy in the fifth year of Jehoiachin's captivity, the son and successor of Jehoiakim, (Ezek. i. 2.) that is eleven years after. When Daniel was first carried into captivity, he might be a youth ³about eighteen, but when Ezekiel magnified his piety and wisdom (chap. xiv. and xxviii.) he was between thirty and forty, and several years before that he had interpreted Nebuchadnezzar's dream, and was advanced (Dan. ii. 48.) to be ruler over the whole province of Babylon, and chief of the governors over all the wise men of Babylon, and was therefore very fit and worthy to be celebrated by his fellow captive Ezekiel.

¹ Hieron. Comment. in Dan. Vol. III. Edit. Benedict.

² See Collins's Scheme of literal prophecy, p. 149—157. Bishop Chandler's Vindication, p. 4—157. Sam. Chandler's Vindication, p. 3—60.

³ Prideaux, Connect. Part i. Book i.

2. His second objection is, that Daniel is represented in the book of Daniel as living chiefly at the courts of the kings of Babylon and Persia, and yet the names of the several kings of his time are all mistaken in the book of Daniel. It is also more suited to a fabulous writer than to a contemporary historian, to talk of Nebuchadnezzar's dwelling with the beasts of the field, and eating grass like oxen, &c., and then returning again to the government of his kingdom. Here are two objections confounded in one. As to the mistake of the kings' names, there are only four kings mentioned in the book of Daniel,—Nebuchadnezzar, Belshazzar, Darius the Mede, and Cyrus. Of the first and the last there was never any doubt, and the other two may be rightly named, though they are named differently by the Greek historians, who yet differ as much one from another as from Daniel. It is well known that the eastern monarchs had several names, and one might be made use of by one writer, another by another. It is plainly begging the question, to presume, without farther proof, that Daniel was not the oldest of these writers, and had not better opportunities of knowing the names than any of them. As to the case of Nebuchadnezzar, it is related, indeed, in the prophetic figurative style. It is the interpretation of a dream, and, stript of its figures, the plain meaning is, that Nebuchadnezzar should be punished with madness, should fancy himself a beast and live like a beast, should be made to eat grass as oxen, be obliged to live upon a vegetable diet, but after some time should recover his reason and resume the government. And what is there fabulous or absurd in this? The dream was not of Daniel's inditing, but was told by Nebuchadnezzar himself. The dream is in a poetic strain, and so likewise is the interpretation, the better to show how the one corresponded with the other, and how the prophecy and event agreed together.

3. He objects that the book of Daniel could not be written by that Daniel who was carried captive in the Babylonish captivity, because it abounds with derivations from the Greek, which language was unknown to the Jews till long after the captivity. The assertion is false that the book of Daniel abounds with derivations from the Greek. There is an affinity only between some few words in the Greek and the Chaldee language; and why must they be derived the one from the other? or if derived, why should not the Greeks derive them from the Chaldee, rather than the Chaldees from the Greek? If the words in question could be shown to be of Greek extraction, yet there was some communication between the eastern kingdoms and the colonies of the Greeks settled in Asia Minor before Nebuchadnezzar's time, and so some particular terms might pass from the Greek into the oriental languages. But on the contrary, the words in question are shown to be not of Greek but of eastern derivation, and consequently passed from the east to the Greeks, rather than from the Greeks to the east. Most of the words are names of musical instruments, and the Greeks ¹ acknowledge that they received their music from the eastern nations, from whence they themselves originally descended.

4. It doth not appear, says the objector, that the book of Daniel was translated into Greek, when the other books of the Old Testament were, which are attributed to the Seventy; the present Greek version, inserted in the Septuagint, being taken from Theodotion's translation of the Old Testament, made in the second century of Christ. But it doth appear that there was an ancient Greek version of Daniel, which is attributed to the Seventy, as well as the version of the other books of the Old Testament. It is cited by Clemens Romanus, Justin Martyr, and many of the ancient fathers. It was inserted in Origen, and filled a column of his Hexapla. It is quoted several times by Jerome, and he saith ² expressly, that the version of the Seventy was repudiated by the doctors of the Church, and that of Theodotion substituted in the room of it, because it came nearer to the Hebrew verity. This version hath also been lately published from an ancient MS. discovered in the Chighian library at Rome.

5. It is objected, that divers matters of fact are spoken of with the clearness of history, to the times of Antiochus Epiphanes, who is very particularly dwelt upon, and that with great and seeming fresh resentment for his barbarous usage of the Jews; and this clearness determined Porphyry, and would determine any one to think, that the book was written about the times of Antiochus Epiphanes, the author appearing to be well acquainted with things down to the death of Antiochus, but not farther. But what an argument is this against the book of Daniel? His prophecies are clear, and therefore are no prophecies: as if an all-knowing God could not foretel things clearly; or as if there were not many predictions in other prophets as clear as any in Daniel. If his prophecies extend not lower than the times of Antiochus Epiphanes, his commission might be limited there, and he would not go beyond his commission. But it hath been shown, and will be shown, that there are several prophecies in Daniel relating to times long after the death of Antiochus, and these prophecies are as clear as those before the death of Antiochus. Neither is Antiochus so very particularly dwelt upon as is commonly imagined; neither is he spoken of with greater resentment than other prophets express towards the kings of Assyria and Babylon. All honest men, who love liberty and their country, must speak with indignation of tyrants and oppressors.

¹ Καὶ τῇ Διονύσῳ τὴν Ἀσίαν ὅλην καθιερώσαντες μέχρι τῆς Ἰνδικῆς, ἐκείθεν καὶ τὴν πολλὴν μουσικὴν μεταφέρουσι. Et cum Baccho totam Asiam ad Indiam usque consecraverint, magnam quoque musicæ partem inde transferunt. [And having consecrated to Bacchus the whole of Asia, as far as to India, they borrow from thence a considerable part of their music.] Strabo, Lib. x. p. 471. Edit. Paris. 1620. p. 722. Edit. Amstel. 1707. Vide etiam Athenæi, Lib. xiv. p. 625, &c.

² Daniele prophetam juxta Septuaginta interpretes Domini Salvatoris ecclesiæ non legunt, utentes Theodotionis editione:—quod multum a veritate discordet, et recto judicio repudiatus sit. [The churches of our Lord and Saviour do not read the prophecies of Daniel according to the Septuagint, but make use of the version of Theodotion; because the former is at great variance with the truth, and is rejected with great propriety.] Hieron. Præf. in Dan. Vol. I. p. 987. Judicio magistrorum ecclesiæ editio eorum [LXX.] repudiata est, et Theodotionis vulgò legitur, quæ et Hebræo, et cæteris translatoribus congruit, &c. [According to the judgment of the masters of the church, their version (that of the LXX.) has been rejected, and that of Theodotion is commonly read: which agrees better with the Hebrew, and other translations.] Comment. in Dan. iv. col. 1088. Vol. III. Edit. Benedict.

6. His sixth objection is, that Daniel is omitted among the prophets recited in Ecclesiasticus, where it seems proper to have mentioned him as a Jewish prophet-author, had the book under his name been received as canonical when Ecclesiasticus was published. It might have been proper to have mentioned him, had the author been giving a complete catalogue of the Jewish canonical writers. But that is not the case. He mentions several who never pretended to be inspired writers, and omits others who really were so. No mention is made of Job and Ezra, and of the books under their names, as well as of Daniel; and who can account for the silence of authors in any particular at this distance of time? Daniel is proposed (1 Macc. ii. 60.) as a pattern by the father of the Maccabees, and his wisdom is highly recommended by Ezekiel; and these are sufficient testimonies of his antiquity, without the confirmation of a later writer.

7. It is objected, that Jonathan, who made the Chaldee paraphrases on the prophets, has omitted Daniel; from whence it should seem, the book of Daniel was not of that account with the Jews as the other books of the prophets were. But there are other books which were always accounted canonical among the Jews, and yet have no Chaldee paraphrases extant, as the books of Ezra and Nehemiah. Jonathan might, perhaps, not make a Targum or Chaldee paraphrase on Daniel, because half of the book is written in Chaldee. Or he might have made a Targum on Daniel, and that Targum may have been lost, as other ancient Targums have been destroyed by the injury of time; and there are good proofs in the Misna and other writers cited by Bishop Chandler, that there was an ancient Targum on Daniel. But though Jonathan made no Targum on Daniel, yet, in his interpretation of other prophets, he frequently applies the prophecies of Daniel, as fuller and clearer in describing the same events, and consequently Daniel was in his esteem a prophet, and at least of equal authority with those before him. The ranking of Daniel among the Hagiographa, and not among the prophets, was done by the Jews since Christ's time, for very obvious reasons. He was always esteemed a prophet by the ancient Jewish church. Our Saviour calleth him Daniel the prophet, and Josephus ' speaketh of him as one of the greatest of the prophets.

¹ Joseph. Antiq. Lib. x. cap. x. et xi.

8. That part of Daniel, says the objector, which is written in Chaldee, is near the style of the old Chaldee paraphrases, which being composed many hundred years after Daniel's time, must have a very different style from that used in his time, as any one may judge from the nature of language, which is in a constant flux, and in every age deviating from what it was in the former, and therefore that part could not be written at a time very remote from the date of the eldest of those Chaldee paraphrases. But, by the same argument, Homer cannot be so ancient an author as he is generally reputed, because the Greek language continued much the same many hundred years after his time. Nay, the style of Daniel's Chaldee differs more from that of the old Chaldee paraphrases than Homer doth from the latest of the Greek classic writers; and when it was said by Prideaux and Kidder, whose authority the objector alleges, that the old Chaldee paraphrases came near to the Chaldee of Daniel, it was not said absolutely but comparatively, with respect to other paraphrases which did not come near to Daniel's purity.

9. It is objected that the Jews were great composers of books under the names of their renowned prophets, to do themselves honour, and particularly under the name of Daniel: and the book of Daniel seems composed to do honour to the Jews, in the person of Daniel, in making a Jew superior to all the wise men of Babylon. If there is any force in this objection, it is this. There have been books counterfeited under the names of men of renown, therefore there can be no genuine books of the same men. Some pieces in Greek have been forged under the name of Daniel, and, therefore, he wrote no books in Chaldee and Hebrew long before those forgeries. In like manner some poems have been ascribed to Homer and Virgil, which were not of their composing; and, therefore, the one did not compose the Iliad, nor the other the Æneid. Some false writings have been attributed to St. Peter and St. Paul; and, therefore, there are no true writings of those apostles. Such arguments sufficiently expose and refute themselves. One would think the inference should rather lie on the other side. Some books have been counterfeited in the name of this or that writer; and, therefore, that there were some genuine books of his writing, is a much more probable presumption than the contrary.

10. The tenth objection is, that the author of the book of Daniel appears plainly to be a writer of things past, after a prophetic manner, by his uncommon punctuality, by not only foretelling things to come, like other prophets, but fixing the time when the things were to happen. But other prophets, and other prophecies, have prefixed the times for several events; as one hundred and twenty years for the continuance of the antediluvian world; four hundred years for the sojourning of Abraham's seed in a strange land; forty years for the peregrination of the children of Israel; sixty-five years for Ephraim's continuing a people; seventy years for the desolation of Tyre; seventy years for Judah's captivity, and the like; and therefore the fixing of the times cannot be a particular objection against the prophecies of Daniel. Daniel may have done it in more instances than any other prophet; but why might not God, if he was so pleased, foretel the dates and periods of any events, as well as the events themselves? Josephus, whom the objector hath quoted upon this occasion, differs totally from him. He 'ascribes this punctuality to Divine Revelation, not like the objector, to the late composition of the book. He infers from it that Daniel was one of the greatest prophets, not like the objector, that he was no prophet at all.

Lastly it is objected, that the book of Daniel sets forth facts very imperfectly, and often contrary to other historical relations, and the whole is written in a dark and emblematical style, with images and symbols, unlike the books of other prophets, and taken from the schools of the Greeks. As to Daniel's setting forth facts very imperfectly, he is perfect enough for his design, which was not to write a history, but prophecies, and history only so far as it relates to his prophecies. As to his writing contrary to other historical relations, it is false. For most of the main facts related by him are confirmed even by heathen historians; but if he contradicted them, yet he would deserve more credit, as he was more ancient than any of them, and lived in the times whereof he wrote. As to his emblems being unlike the books of other prophets, and taken from the schools of the Greeks, this is also false. For the like emblems are often used by other prophets, and are agreeable to the style and genius of all the eastern writers of his time. They were so far from being taken from the schools of the Greeks, that, on the contrary, if they were ever used by the Greeks, the Greeks borrowed them from the oriental writers. But after all, how doth this last objection consist and agree with the fifth and tenth? There divers matters of fact were spoken of with the clearness of history, and the author was convicted of forgery by his uncommon punctuality. Here all is dark and emblematical, imperfect and contrary to other histories. Such objections contradict and destroy one another. Both may be false, both cannot be true.

These objections being removed, what is there wanting of external or internal evidence to prove the genuineness and authenticity of the book of Daniel? There is all the external evidence that can well be had or desired in a case of this nature: not only the testimony of the whole Jewish church and nation, who have constantly received this book as canonical, but of Josephus particularly, who commends him as the greatest of the prophets; of the Jewish Targums and Talmuds, which frequently cite and appeal to his authority; of St. Paul and St. John, who have copied many of his prophecies; of our Saviour himself, who citeth his words, and styleth him Daniel the prophet; of ancient historians, who relate many of the same transactions; of the mother of the seven sons, and of the father of the Maccabees, who both recommend the example of Daniel to their sons; of old Eleazar in Egypt, who, praying for the Jews then suffering under the persecution of Ptolemy Philopater, (2 Macc. vi. 18—31.) mentions the deliverance of Daniel out of the den of lions, together with the deliverance of the three men out of the fiery furnace; of the Jewish high-priest, who showed Daniel's prophecies to Alexander the Great, while he was at Jerusalem; and still higher, of Ezekiel, a contemporary writer, who greatly extols his piety and wisdom. Nor is the internal less powerful and convincing than the external evidence; for the language, the style, the manner of writing, and all other internal marks and characters are perfectly agreeable to that age; and he appears plainly and undeniably to have been a prophet by the exact accomplishment of his prophecies, as well those which have already been fulfilled, as those which are now fulfilling in the world.

¹ Τὰ γὰρ βιβλία, ὅσα δὴ συγγραψάμενος καταλείπειν, ἀναγινώσκεται παρ' ἡμῖν ἐτι καὶ νῦν· καὶ πεπιστεύκαμεν ἐξ αὐτῶν, ὅτι Δανιήλος ὤμιλει τῷ Θεῷ. οὐ γὰρ τὰ μέλλοντα μόνον προφητεύων διετέλει, καθάπερ καὶ οἱ ἄλλοι προφῆται, ἀλλὰ καὶ καιρὸν ὀρίζεν, εἰς ὃν τὰῦτα ἀποβήσεται. Libri enim quotquot a se conscriptos reliquit, leguntur hodieque apud nos: atque ii nobis fidem faciunt, Danielum eum Deo colloquia habuisse. Non enim futura solum, quemadmodum et alii vates, prædicere solebat, sed et tempus, quo hæc eventura erant, præfinivit. [For whatever books he hath left written by him, are read even to this day among us; and from these we are persuaded that Daniel enjoyed familiar intercourse with God. For he not only foretold future things, as other prophets also did, but he also assigned the time of their accomplishment.] Joseph. Antiq. Lib. x. cap. xi. sect. vii. p. 465. Edit. Hudson.

The genuineness and authenticity of the book of Daniel being therefore established beyond all reasonable contradiction, we may now proceed in our main design; and the vision of the ram and he-goat, and the prophecy of the things noted in the Scripture of truth, and the transactions of the kings of the north and the south, will find sufficient matter for our meditations this year. Another year will be fully employed on our Saviour's prophecies of the destruction of Jerusalem and the dispersion of the Jews, together with St. Paul's prophecies of the Man of Sin, and of the apostacy of the latter times. The last, and most difficult task of all, will be an analysis or explication of the Apocalypse, or Revelation of St. John. It is a hazardous attempt, in our little bark, to venture on that dangerous ocean, where so many stouter vessels and abler pilots have been shipwrecked and lost: but possibly we may be the better able to sail through it, coming prepared, careened and sheathed, as I may say, for such a voyage, by the assistance of the former prophets, having particularly Daniel and St. Paul as our pole star and compass, and begging withal of God's Holy Spirit to steer and direct our course. The conclusion will consist of reflections and inferences from the whole. In this manner, with the Divine assistance, shall be employed the three years, which is the period usually allotted to these exercises; and it is hoped that the design of the honourable founder will in some measure be answered by proving the truth of revelation from the truth of prophecy. It was indeed a noble design, after a life spent in the study of philosophy, and equally devoted to the service of religion, to benefit posterity not only by his own useful and numerous writings, theological as well as philosophical, but also by engaging the thoughts and pens of others in defence of natural and revealed religion; and some of the best treatises on these subjects in the English language, or indeed in any language, are owing to his institution. This is continuing to do good even after death; and what was said of Abel's faith, may also be said of his, that by it, he being dead, yet speaketh.

From the instance of this excellent person, and some others who might be mentioned, it appears that there is nothing inconsistent in science and religion, but a great philosopher may be a good Christian. True philosophy is indeed the handmaid to true religion: and the knowledge of the works of nature will lead one to the knowledge of the God of nature, the invisible things of him being clearly seen by the things which are made; even his eternal power and Godhead. They are only minute philosophers who are sceptics and unbelievers. Smatterers in science, they are but smatterers in religion. Whereas, the most eminent philosophers, those who have done honour to the nation, done honour to human nature itself, have also been believers and defenders of revelation, have studied Scripture as well as nature, have followed God in his word as well as in his works, and have even made comments on several parts of holy writ. So just and true is the observation of the ¹ Lord Bacon, one of the illustrious persons here intended; "A little philosophy inclineth man's mind to atheism, but depth in philosophy bringeth men's minds about to religion."

XV.

DANIEL'S VISION OF THE RAM AND HE-GOAT.

HITHERTO the prophecies of Daniel, that is, from the fourth verse of the second chapter to the eighth chapter, are written in Chaldee. As they greatly concerned the Chaldæans, so they were published in that language. But the remaining prophecies are written in Hebrew, because they treat altogether of affairs subsequent to the times of the Chaldæans, and no ways relate to them, but principally to the Church and people of God. Which is a plain proof that the Scriptures were originally written in such a manner as they might be best understood by the people; and consequently it is defeating the very end and design of writing them, to take away the key of knowledge, and to keep them locked up in an unknown tongue. We may observe too, that in the former part of the book of Daniel he is generally spoken of in the third person, but in the latter part he speaketh of himself in the first person, which is some kind of proof that this part was written by himself if the other was not, but probably this diversity might arise from the different dates, the one being written some time after the other.

¹ Lord Bacon's Essays, xvii.

Daniel's former vision of the four great beasts, representing the four great empires of the world, was (vii. 1.) in the first year of Belshazzar king of Babylon. He had another vision in the third year of the reign of the same king Belshazzar, that is ¹ about 553 years before Christ. (viii. 1.) In the third year of the reign of king Belshazzar, a vision appeared unto me, even unto me Daniel, after that which appeared unto me at the first. It was exhibited to him (ver. 2.) at the palace in Shushan, and by the side of the river Ulai, or Euleus, as it is called by the Greeks and Romans. And I saw in a vision, (and it came to pass when I saw, that I was at Shushan in the palace, which is in the province of Elam,) and I saw in a vision, and I was by the river Ulai. So likewise the prophet Ezekiel saw visions by the river Chebar; as if the Holy Spirit had delighted to manifest himself in such retired scenes; and the gifts and graces of the Spirit are often in Scripture language described by the metaphors of springs and streams of water, than which nothing was more agreeable and refreshing in hot and dry countries.

Such was the time and place of the vision. The vision itself was of a ram and he-goat. And we may observe with the learned ² Bochart, that others also have had like visions, portending future events. So Plutarch reports in the life of Sylla, that two great goats were seen fighting in Campania, and suddenly the vision vanished: nor long afterwards, in that very place, Sylla, having routed and slain seven thousand men, besieged the consul in Capua.

¹ See Usher, Prideaux, and other chronologers.

² Observemus etiam aliis apparuisse visiones hujusmodi, quæ futura portenderent. Ita, Plutarcho teste in vitâ Syllæ, In Campaniâ, circa Tiphaton montem (qui aliis Tifata) interdum visi sunt configere magni hirci duo, et ea omnia facere et pati, quæ viri in pugna solent. Spectrum autem, e terrâ sensim elatum paulo post dissipatum, et ex oculis elapsum est. Nec multo post Sylla, Mario Juniore et Norbano consule, in eo ipso loco fuis, et profligatis, et cæsis hominum septem millibus, consulem inclusit Capuæ. Et in Accii Bruto, qui a Cicerone citatur libro primo De Divinatione, Tarquinius superbus suum hoc somnium narrat.

Visum est in somnis pastorem ad me appellere
Pecus lanigerum eximiâ pulchritudine,
Duos consanguineos arietes inde eligi,
Præclarioremque alterum immolare me:
Deinde ejus germanum cornibus connitier
In me arietare, eoque me ad casum dari:
Exin prostratum terrâ graviter saucium,
Resupinum, in cælo contueri maximum, &c.

Hi arietes consanguinei L. Junium Brutum, et fratrem ejus a Tarquinio cæsum significabant; quorum ille, in Tarquinium insurgens, eum regno suo spoliavit. [Translated in the text.] Bocharti Hierozoic. Pars Prior, Lib. ii. cap. xlvi. col. 527.

In the Brutus of Accius, which is cited by Cicero in his first book of Divination, Tarquinius Superbus relates his dream, "that a shepherd drove his flock to him; two rams of the same breed were selected from thence, both choice and beautiful, and he killed the finer of them; the other rushed upon him with his horns, and cast him down and wounded him." These rams of the same breed signified Lucius Junius Brutus and his brother; one of whom was slain by Tarquin, and the other rose against Tarquin, and despoiled him of his kingdom. So that the probabilities of the poets and historians bear some resemblance to the realities of holy writ. Or rather, in this instance of prophecy, as in the ceremonials of religion and the modes of government, God was pleased to condescend and conform to the customs and manners of the age, to make thereby a stronger impression on the minds of the people. Nor is such a condescension unworthy of the Deity, nor unsuitable to the other methods of his providence, but is rather an argument of his infinite goodness.

In the former vision there appeared four beasts, because there four empires were represented; but here are only two, because here we have a representation of what was transacted chiefly within two empires. The first of the four empires, that is the Babylonian, is wholly omitted here, for its fate was sufficiently known, and it was now drawing very near to a conclusion. The second empire in the former vision is the first in this, and what was there compared to a bear is here prefigured by a ram. Then I lifted up mine eyes, saith Daniel, (ver. 3.) and saw, and behold, there stood before the river a ram which had two horns, and the two horns were high; but one was higher than the other, and the higher came up last. This ram with two horns, according to the explication of the angel Gabriel, was the empire of the Medes and Persians: (ver. 20.) The ram which thou sawest having two horns, are the kings or kingdoms of Media and Persia. The source of this figure of horns for kingdoms, as a learned writer observes, must be derived from the oriental languages, in which the same word signifies a horn, and a crown, and power, and splendour. Whence a horn was an ensign of royalty among the Phœnicians, and the Hebrew word קרן keren, or a horn, is several times by Chaldee paraphrasts rendered מלכותא malchutha, or a kingdom; and horns are frequently used for kings and kingdoms in the Old Testament. This empire, therefore, which was formed by the conjunction of the Medes and Persians, and is often called the Medo-Persian, was not unfitly represented by a ram with two horns. Cyrus, the founder of this empire, was ¹son of Cambyses king of Persia, and, by his mother Mandane, was grandson of Astyages king of Media; and afterwards marrying the daughter and only child of his uncle Cyaxares king of Media, he succeeded to both crowns, and united the kingdoms of Media and Persia. It was a coalition of two very formidable powers, and therefore it is said that the two horns were high; but one, it is added, was higher than the other, and the higher came up last. The kingdom of Media was the more ancient of the two, and more famous in history; Persia was of little note or account till the time of Cyrus, but under Cyrus the Persians gained and maintained the ascendant; some ² authors say that Cyrus subdued the king of the Medes by force of arms; and his son ³ Cambyses on his death-bed earnestly exhorted the Persians not to suffer the kingdom to return again to the Medes. But a question still remains, why that empire, which was before likened to a bear for its cruelty, should now be represented by a ram? Mr. Mede's conjecture is ingenious and plausible enough, ⁴ that the Hebrew word for a ram, and the Hebrew word for Persia, both springing from the same root, and both implying something of strength, the one is not improperly made the type of the other. The propriety of it appears farther from hence, as is suggested likewise by another writer in the general preface to Mr. Mede's works, that it was usual for the king of Persia to wear a ram's head made of gold, and adorned with precious stones, instead of a diadem; for so ⁵ Ammianus Marcellinus describes him. Bishop Chandler and others farther ⁶ observe, that "rams' heads with horns, one higher

¹ Quam melius itaque ex linguis orientis potuisset hujus rei fons erui! quibus, ut id est jam contritum, eâdem voce cornu, corona, potentia, ac splendor nuncupantur. Unde cornu, regium insigne apud Phœnices, et Hebræorum קרן seu cornu, Chaldæis interpretibus aliquoties מלכותא seu regnum redditur, ut vidit illustris Grotius; et cornua pro regno et regibus passim in veteri fœdere. [How much better may the origin of this figure be derived from eastern languages! In which, as is well known, the same word is made use of to denote a horn, a crown, power and splendour. Whence, among the Phœnicians, a horn was an ensign of royalty; and the Hebrew word קרן, or horn, is sometimes by the Chaldee interpreters rendered מלכותא, or kingdom, as the illustrious Grotius hath remarked: and every where in the Old Testament horns are used to signify kingdoms and kings.] Spanheim de Usu Numismatum; Vol. I. Diss. vii. p. 400.

¹ Xenophon, Cyropæd. Lib. i. et viii.

² Herod. Lib. i. sect. cxxx. p. 56. Edit. Gale. Strabo, Lib. xv. p. 730. Edit. Paris. 1620. p. 1062. Edit. Amstel. 1707. Justin. Lib. i. cap. vi.

³ Herod. Lib. iii. sect. lxxv. p. 188. Edit. Gale.

⁴ — quis suspicari possit, etiam arietis de rege Persarum in eadem visione typum, ad nominis Elam (quod alterum duorum est quo ea gens appelletur) significatum alludere.

אֵיל enim Hebræis (unde nomen אֵיל aries) et אֵלם atque עֵלם Chaldæis, idem significant, nempe fortem seu robustum esse. Forte igitur עֵלם Elam istis, ut illis אֵיל arietem sonabat, indèque rex Elam hoc typo Danieli figuratur. [Who could have thought, that in the same vision, a ram, which is employed as a type of the king of the Persians, should have an allusion to the meaning of the word Elam, which is one of the names given to that people. For the Hebrew word אֵיל, from whence comes אֵיל, a ram; —and the Chaldee words אֵלם and עֵלם signify the same thing, namely, to be powerful or robust. And perhaps עֵלם signified the same in Chaldee, which אֵיל doth in Hebrew, namely, a ram, for this reason the king of Elam might be represented to Daniel under this type.] Mede's Works, Book iii. Com. Apoc. p. 474.

⁵ — aureum capitis arietini figmentum interstinctum lapillis pro diademate gestans. [Wearing a device in the shape of a ram's head, set with precious stones, instead of a crown.] Amm. Marcell. Lib. xix. cap. i. p. 208. Edit. Valesii, Paris. 1681.

⁶ Bishop Chandler's Vindication, chap. i. sect. iv. p. 154. Aries item bicornis inter rudera Persepoleos. [A ram with two horns is to be seen amidst the ruins of Persepolis.] Wetstein in Rev. xiii. 11.

and the other lower, are still to be seen on the pillars at Persepolis."

The great exploits of the ram are recapitulated in the next verse, (ver. 4.) I saw the ram pushing westward, and northward, and southward, so that no beasts might stand before him, neither was there any that could deliver out of his hand, but he did according to his will, and became great.

Under Cyrus himself, the Persians pushed their conquests *westward*¹ as far as the Ægean sea and the bounds of Asia: northward they subdued² the Armenians, Cappadocians, and various other nations: southward they conquered Egypt, if not under Cyrus, as³ Xenophon affirms, yet most certainly under⁴ Cambyses, the son and successor of Cyrus. Under Darius they subdued⁵ India, but in the prophecy no mention is made of their conquests in the east, because those countries lay very remote from the Jews, and were of little concern or consequence to them. The ram was strong and powerful, so that no beasts might stand before him, neither was there any that could deliver out of his hand; that is, none of the neighbouring kingdoms were able to contend with the Persians, but all fell under their dominion. He did according to his will, and became great; and the Persian empire was increased and enlarged to such a degree, that it extended (Esther i. 1.) from India even unto Ethiopia, over a hundred and seven and twenty provinces; so that seven provinces were added to the hundred and twenty (Dan. vi. 1.) which it contained in the time of Cyrus.

After the ram, the he-goat appears next upon the scene. And as I was considering, saith Daniel, (ver. 5.) behold, an he-goat came from the west on the face of the whole earth, and touched not the ground; and the goat had a notable horn between his eyes. Which is thus interpreted by the angel Gabriel, (ver. 21.) The rough goat is the king of Grecia, and the great horn that is between his eyes is the first king, or kingdom. A goat is very properly made the type of the Grecian or Macedonian empire, because the Macedonians at first, about two hundred years before Daniel, were denominated Ægeadæ, or the goat's people; and upon this occasion, as heathen authors report, Caranus, their first king, going with a great multitude of Greeks to seek new habitations in Macedonia, was commanded by the oracle to take the goats for his guides to empire, and afterwards seeing a herd of goats flying from a violent storm, he followed them to Edessa, and there fixed the seat of his empire, made the goats his ensigns or standards, and called the city Ægeæ, or the goat's town, and the people Ægeadæ, or the goat's people. This ob-

¹ Herod. Lib. i. Xenophon. Cyropæd. Lib. vii.

² Xenoph. ibid. Lib. iii. et vii.

³ Xenoph. ibid. Lib. i. et viii.

⁴ Herod. Lib. iii.

⁵ Herod. Lib. iv. cap. xlv. p. 239. Edit. Gale.

servation is likewise owing to the most excellent Mr. Mede¹: and to this may be added, that the city Ægeæ, or Ægæ, was the² usual burying-place of the Macedonian kings. It is also very remarkable, that Alexander's son by Roxana was named Alexander Ægus, or the son of the goat; and³ some of Alexander's successors are represented in their coins with goat's horns. This he-goat came from the west; and who is ignorant that Europe lieth westward of Asia? He came on the face of the whole earth, carrying every thing before him in all the three parts of the world then known: and he touched not the ground, his marches were so swift, and his conquests so rapid, that he might be said in a manner to fly over the ground without touching it. For the same reason, the same empire, in the former vision, was likened to a leopard, which is a swift nimble animal, and to denote the greater quickness and impetuosity, to a leopard with four wings. And the goat had a notable horn between his eyes; this horn, saith the angel, is the first king, or kingdom of the Greeks in Asia, which was erected by Alexander the Great, and continued for some years in his brother Philip Aridæus, and his two younger sons, Alexander Ægus and Hercules. Dean Prideaux, speaking of the swiftness of Alexander's marches, hath a⁴ passage, which is very

¹ Nec dessee videtur hujusmodi allusionis exemplum apud Danielelem, cap. viii. ubi Macedonēs, qui tunc temporis Ægeades (hoc est, Caprini) dicebantur, typo caprarum, rexque hirci figurā designatur. Ecce, inquit, hircus caprarum (id est, caprarum maritus) venit ab occidente, &c. Innuit autem Alexandrum magnum, Ægeadum regem. Illi Macedones sunt. Ita enim gens ista vocabatur quā prima regni sedes erat, a Carano conditore, ducentis plus minus ante Danielelem annis. Occasionem nominis ex Trogo refert epitomator Justinus, Lib. vii. cujus verba ascribere non gravabor. "Caranus," inquit, "cum magnā multitudine Græcorum, sedes in Macedoniā responso oraculi jussus quærere, cum in Æmathiam venisset, urbem Edessam non sentientibus oppidanis propter imbrium et nebulæ magnitudinem, gregem caprarum imbrem fugientium secutus, occupavit: revocatusque in memoriam oraculi, quo jussus erat ducibus capris imperium quærere, regni sedem statuit; religioseque postea observavit, quocunque agmen moveret, ante signa easdem capras habere, cæptorum duces habiturus quas regni habuerat authores. Urbem Edessam ob memoriam muneris Ægeas, populum Ægeadas vocavit." [Nor does there seem to be wanting an instance of an allusion of this kind, in Dan. viii., where the Macedonians, who at that time were called Ægeadæ, (that is goat's people,) are pointed out under the type of goats, and their king marked out by the figure of a he-goat. "Behold," saith he, "an he-goat came from the west, &c. He means Alexander the Great, the king of the Ægeadæ. These are the Macedonians. For so that nation was called, from the place where the first seat of their kingdom was, from their founder, Caranus, about two hundred years before the time of Daniel. The occasion of this name is related by Justin, the abridger of Trogius, Book vii. whose words I shall quote: "Caranus," he saith, "with a great multitude of Greeks, having been ordered by the oracle to seek a place of residence in Macedon, came into Æmathia, and following a flock of goats that were running to shelter themselves from a shower of rain, he entered into, and made himself master of Edessa, the inhabitants of that town not perceiving his approach by reason of the greatness of the fog and rain. Then calling the oracle to remembrance, which ordered him to go in quest of a kingdom, having goats for his leaders, he made that city the seat of his government. Afterwards, whenever he took the field, he was careful to make use of the figures of goats on his standards, that he might have them to favour his enterprizes, which had paved the way for laying the foundation of his kingdom. To perpetuate the remembrance of the favour done to him, he called the city of Edessa by the name of Ægæ, and his people Ægeadæ, &c.]" Vide cætera. Mede's Works, B. iii. Com. Apoc. p. 473, 474.

² Plin. Lib. iv. cap. x. sect. xvii. p. 200. Edit. Harduin. Vide etiam notas Harduini.

³ Spanheim de Usu Numismatum, Vol. I, Dissert. vii. p. 389 et 399.

⁴ Prideaux, Connect. Part i. Book viii. Anni 330. Alexander 2.

pertinent to our present purpose. "He flew with victory swifter than others can travel, often with his horse pursuing his enemies upon the spur whole days and nights, and sometimes making long marches for several days, one after the other, as once he did in pursuit of Darius, of near forty miles a day for eleven days together. So that by the speed of his marches he came upon his enemies before they were aware of him, and conquered them before they could be in a posture to resist him. Which exactly agrees with the description given of him in the prophecies of Daniel some ages before, he being in them set forth under the similitude of a panther or leopard with four wings; for he was impetuous and fierce in his warlike expeditions as a panther after its prey, and came on upon his enemies with that speed, as if he flew with a double pair of wings. And to this purpose he is, in another place of those prophecies, compared to an he-goat coming from the west with that swiftness upon the king of Media and Persia, that he seemed as if his feet did not touch the ground. And his actions, as well in this comparison as in the former, fully verified the prophecy."

In the two next verses, we have an account of the Grecians overthrowing the Persian empire. (ver. 6, 7.) And he came to the ram that had two horns, which I had seen standing before the river, and ran unto him in the fury of his power. And I saw him come close unto the ram, and he was moved with choler against him, and smote the ram, and brake his two horns, and there was no power in the ram to stand before him, but he cast him down to the ground, and stamped upon him, and there was none that could deliver the ram out of his hand. The ram had before pushed westward, and the Persians, in the ¹ reigns of Darius Hystaspes and Xerxes, had poured down with great armies into Greece; but now the Grecians in return carried their arms into Asia, and the he-goat invaded the ram that had invaded him. And he came to the ram that had two horns, which I had seen standing before the river, and ran unto him in the fury of his power. One can hardly read these words without having some image of Darius's army standing and guarding the river ² Granicus, and of Alexander on the other side with his forces plunging in, swimming across the stream, and rushing on the enemy with all the fire and fury that can be imagined. It was certainly a strange, rash, mad attempt, with only about thirty-five thousand men, to attack at such disadvantage an army of more than five times the number; but he was successful in it, and this success diffused a terror of his name, and opened his way to the conquest of Asia. And I saw him come close unto the ram: he had several close engagements or set battles with the king of Persia, and particularly at the river

¹ Herod. Lib. vi. et vii.

² Arrian, de Exped. Alex. Lib. i. cap. xiv. &c. Sic Granicum, tot millibus equitum peditumque in ulteriore stantibus ripâ, superavit. [Thus he passed the Granicus, notwithstanding so many thousands of cavalry and infantry were ranged on the opposite bank.] Quint. Curt. Lib. iv. cap. ix.

Granicus in Phrygia, at the straits of Issus in Cilicia, and in the plains of Arbela in Assyria. And he was moved with choler against him, for ¹ the cruelties which the Persians had exercised towards the Grecians; and for ² Darius's attempting to corrupt sometimes his soldiers to betray him, and sometimes his friends to destroy him; so that he would not listen to the most advantageous offers of peace, but determined to pursue the Persian king, not as a generous and noble enemy, but as a poisoner and a murderer, to the death that he deserved. And he smote the ram, and brake his two horns: he subdued Persia and Media, with the other provinces and kingdoms of the Persian empire, and it is memorable, that ³ in Persia he barbarously sacked and burned the royal city of Persepolis, the capital of the empire; and in ⁴ Media, Darius was seized and made prisoner by some of his own traitor-subjects, who not long afterwards basely murdered him. And there was no power in the ram to stand before him, but he cast him down to the ground, and stamped upon him; he conquered wherever he came, routed all the forces, took all the cities and castles, and entirely subverted and ruined the Persian empire. And there was none that could deliver the ram out of his hand; not even his numerous armies could defend the king of Persia, though his forces ⁵ in the battle of Issus amounted to six hundred thousand men, and ⁶ in that of Arbela to ten or eleven hundred thousand, whereas the ⁷ whole number of Alexander's was not more than forty-seven thousand in either engagement. So true is the observation of the Psalmist, (xxxiii. 16.) there is no king saved by the multitude of an host: and especially when God hath decreed the fall of empires, then even the greatest must fall. The fortune of Alexander, of which so much hath been said, ⁸ Plutarch hath written a whole treatise about it; the fortune of Alexander, I say, was nothing but the providence of God.

When Alexander was at Jerusalem these prophecies were shown to him by the high-priest, according to the ⁹ relation of Josephus. For while Alexander lay at the siege of Tyre, he sent to Jaddua the high-priest at Jerusalem to demand provisions for his army, and

¹ Diod. Sic. Lib. xvii. p. 599. Edit. Steph. p. 543. Tom. II. Edit. Rhod. Quint. Curt. Lib. v. cap. vi.

² Quint. Curt. Lib. iv. cap. xi. Verum enimvero, quum modo milites meos literis ad proditionem, modo amicos ad perniciem meam pecuniâ sollicitet; ad internecionem mihi persequendus est, non ut justus hostis, sed ut percussor veneficus. [But truly, since sometimes by his letters, he importunes my soldiers to betray me, and at another time by means of his money, he instigates my friends to put me to death; nothing is left to me but to pursue him to destruction, not as a generous enemy, but an assassin and poisoner.]

³ Diod. Sic. Lib. xvii. ibid. Quint. Curt. Lib. v. cap. vi. et vii.

⁴ Quint. Curt. Lib. v. cap. viii. &c.

⁵ Arrian, de Exped. Alex. Lib. ii. cap. viii. p. 73. Edit. Gronov. Plutarch in Alex. p. 674. Edit. Paris. 1624.

⁶ Plutarch in Alex. p. 682. ibid. Diod. Sic. Lib. xvii. p. 590. Edit. Steph. p. 530. Tom. II. Edit. Rhod. Arrian, Lib. iii. cap. viii. p. 115.

⁷ Polyb. Lib. xii. Arrian, Lib. iii. cap. xii. p. 122. Edit. Gronov.

⁸ Περὶ τῆς Ἀλεξάνδρου τύχης. [Concerning the fortune of Alexander.]

⁹ Joseph. Antiq. Lib. xi. cap. viii.

the tribute that was annually paid to Darius. But the high-priest refused to comply with these demands by reason of his oath of allegiance to the king of Persia. Alexander, therefore, in great rage vowed to revenge himself upon the Jews: and as soon as he had taken Tyre and Gaza he marched against Jerusalem. The high-priest in this imminent danger had recourse to God by sacrifices and supplications; and as he was directed in a vision of the night, he went forth the next day in his pontifical robes, with all the priests in their proper habits, and the people in white apparel, to meet the conqueror, and to make their submissions to him. As soon as the king saw the high-priest coming to him in this solemn procession, he advanced eagerly to meet him, and bowing down himself before him, received him with religious awe and veneration. All present were astonished at this behaviour of the king, so contrary to their expectation; and Parmenio in particular demanded the reason of it, why he whom all others adored, should pay such adoration to the Jewish high-priest. Alexander replied, that he paid not this adoration to him, but to that God whose priest he was: for while he was at Dio, in Macedonia, and was meditating upon his expedition against the king of Persia, there appeared unto him in a dream this very man, and in this very habit, inviting him to come over into Asia, and promising him success in the conquest of it: and now he was assured that he had set out upon this expedition under the conduct of God, to whom therefore he paid this adoration in the person of his high-priest. Hereupon he entered Jerusalem in peace, and went up and offered sacrifices to God in the temple, where the high-priest produced and laid before him the prophecies of Daniel, wherein it was written that a king of Grecia should overthrow the Persian empire, which he interpreted of himself. After this he granted peculiar privileges to the Jews, and proceeded in his expedition with full confidence and assurance of success.

Some persons have rejected this account as fabulous, particularly ¹ Van Dale, Mr. Moyle, and Collins, who says that it is "an entire fiction, unsupported, and inconsistent with history and chronology, and romantic in its circumstances." But ² Bishop Lloyd, Dean Prideaux, Bishop Chandler, and others, have sufficiently vindicated the truth of the story. Even Bayle himself, who was never thought to be over credulous, admits the fact: and it must be said, though some things are extraordinary, yet there is nothing incredible in the whole relation. Alexander lay seven months at the siege of Tyre; in that time he might well want provisions for his army; and it is no wonder that he should send for some into Judæa, when the Tyrians themselves used to be supplied from thence. (1 Kings v. 9. 11; Ezek. xxvii. 17; Acts xii. 20.) The fidelity of the Jews to Darius, and their regard to their oath was nothing more than they practised upon other occasions; for the same ¹ reason they would not submit to Ptolemy, having taken an oath to another governor: and Ptolemy afterwards rewarded them for it in Egypt, and ² committed the most important garrisons and places of trust to their keeping, thinking that he might safely rely upon them, who had proved themselves so steady and faithful to their former princes and governors, and particularly to Darius, king of Persia. That Alexander was in Judæa, I think we may collect from other authors. Arrian says, ³ that he subdued all that part of Syria which was called Palestine. Pliny affirms, ⁴ that the balsam-tree, which grew only in Judæa, was cut, and bled a certain quantity in a day, while Alexander was waging war in those parts. Justin informs us, ⁵ that he went into Syria, where many princes of the east met him with their mitres; upon which passage the note of Isaac Vossius is very just and pertinent, ⁶ "I think that Justin had respect to that memorable history, which Josephus relates of Jaddua the high-priest of the Jews." If Alexander, therefore, came into Judea, as he certainly did, it was prudent in the Jews, though they refused to succour him at a distance, yet to submit to him upon his nearer approach; it was in vain to withstand the conqueror, and the terror of his name was now become very great by his victories, and especially after the dreadful execution that he made at Tyre and at Gaza. While Alexander was at Jerusalem, it was natural enough for the high-priest to show him the prophecies of a king of Grecia overcoming the king of Persia. Nothing could be devised more likely to engage his attention, to confirm his hopes, and to conciliate his favour to the whole nation. And for his sacrificing in the temple, it is no more than ⁷ other heathen princes have done, it is no more than he did in other places. He might perhaps consider God as a local deity, and offer sacrifices to him at Jerusalem, as he did to Hercules at Tyre, and to Jupiter Hammon in Egypt, and to Belus in Babylon.

¹ Van Dale Dissert. super Aristeam, cap. x. Moyle's Letters to Prideaux, p. 26, &c. Vol. II. Collins's Scheme of Literal Prophecy, p. 452.

² Bishop Lloyd's Letter to Dr. Sherlock. Prideaux, Connect. and Answers to Mr. Moyle. Bishop Chandler's Vindication of his Defence, chap. ii. sect. i. p. 176, &c. Mr. Samuel Chandler's Vindication of Daniel, p. 76, &c. Bayle's Dict. Art. MACEDO, Not. O.

¹ Joseph. Antiq. Lib. xii. cap. i. p. 507. Edit. Hudson.

² Joseph. ibid. et contra Apion. Lib. ii. sect. iv. p. 1365. Edit. Hudson.

³ Arrian. de Exped. Alex. Lib. ii. cap. xxv. p. 101. Edit. Gronov. Καὶ ἦν αὐτῷ τὰ μὲν ἄλλα τῆς Παλαιστίνης καλουμένης Συρίας προσκεχωρηκότα ἤδη. Et cætera quidem Syriæ, quæ Palæstina vocatur, oppida in suam potestatem adduxerat. [And he had already brought into subjection the rest of the towns in that part of Syria called Palestine.]

⁴ Plin. Nat. Hist. Lib. xii. cap. xxv. sect. liv. Edit. Harduin. Alexandro magno res ibi gerente, toto die æstivo unam concham impleri justum erat. [While Alexander the Great was carrying on war in these parts, the quantity which exuded in a summer day was about two spoons-full.]

⁵ Tunc in Syriam proficiscitur, ubi obvius cum infulis multos orientis reges habuit. [Translated in the text.] Justin. Hist. Lib. xi. cap. x. sect. vi. Edit. Grævii.

⁶ Puto respicere Justinum ad memorabilem illam historiam, quam Josephus de Jaddo, summo Judæorum sacerdote, narrat. [Translated in the text.]

⁷ Joseph. contra Apion. Lib. ii. sect. v. p. 1365. Edit. Hudson. 2 Macc. xiii. 23.

What are then the great objections to the credibility of this story? It is pretended that it is inconsistent with chronology; for Josephus places this event after the sieges of Tyre and of Gaza, whereas ¹ all historians agree that Alexander went directly from Gaza to Egypt in seven days. But the best historians do not always relate facts in exact order of time, as they happened; they connect things of a sort together, and often mention later occurrences first, reserving what they think more important for the last place; and such possibly might be the intention of Josephus. Eusebius affirms, that ² Alexander went after the siege of Tyre immediately to Jerusalem; and he might have good authority for affirming so, living as he did in Palestine; and with him agree Usher, Prideaux, and the best chronologers. And indeed it is most probable that Alexander's progress was from Tyre to Jerusalem, and from Jerusalem to Gaza, because his resentment of the affront that he had received was then fresher in his mind, and Jerusalem lay not much out of the way from Tyre to Gaza, and it was not likely that he should leave a place of such strength and importance untaken behind him. But if Josephus was mistaken about two months in point of time, yet such a mistake is not sufficient to shake the credit of his whole relation. What historian is there almost who hath not fallen into a mistake of the like kind? And yet after all Josephus might not be mistaken, for Alexander might march against Jerusalem from Gaza, either during the siege or after it. Arrian informs us, ³ that while the siege of Tyre was carrying on, and the machines and ships were building, Alexander, with some troops of horse and other forces, went into Arabia, and having reduced that part of the country to his obedience partly by force, and partly by treaty, he returned to the camp in eleven days: and why might he not make such an excursion from Gaza for a few days, during the two months that his army was besieging it? or after he had taken the city, why might he not with part of the army go to Jerusalem, and leave the other part to rest themselves at Gaza? Jerusalem lay at no very great distance from Gaza, and a person of Alexander's expedition might go and return within a very few days. The historians say, indeed, that he came into Egypt in seven days after he departed from Gaza; but none of them say how long he stayed at Gaza, to refresh his army after the siege. We know from ⁴ Diodorus that he stayed long enough to settle the affairs of the country about Gaza; and why might he not in that time make this visit to Jerusalem?

Another objection is taken from the silence of authors, who would hardly have passed over so memorable a transaction, if there had been any truth in it: but it is not so much as mentioned by any of

¹ Diod. Sic. Lib. xvii. Quint. Curtius, Lib. iv. Arrian, Lib. iii. Plutarch in Alex.

² Eusebii Chron. Usher's Annals, p. 214, 215. Prid. Connect. Part. i. B. 7. Anno 332. Darius 4.

³ Arrian, de Exped. Alex. Lib. ii. cap. xx. p. 94. Edit. Gronov.

⁴ Diod. Sic. Lib. xvii. p. 588. Edit. Steph. p. 526. Tom. II. Edit. Rhod.

the heathen historians; it is supported entirely by the testimony of Josephus. But if we reject all relations which rest upon the credit of a single historian, ancient history will be shrunk into a very narrow compass. There were numerous writers of the life and actions of Alexander, who were his companions in the wars, or lived in or near his time, as Ptolemy, Aristobulus, and others: but none of their writings have been transmitted down to us; they have all been swallowed up in the gulph between that time and this; and who can be certain that some of them did not record this transaction? It must have been mentioned by some ancient historian; for we see that Justin, in a short abridgment of history, is thought to have alluded to it; and some other author might have related it at large in all its circumstances. The most copious writers now extant of Alexander's affairs, are Diodorus Siculus, Quintus Curtius, Arrian, and Plutarch: but the eldest of these lived some centuries after Alexander, so that they must have transcribed from former historians: and they have transcribed variously, as suited their particular purpose; what one hath inserted another hath omitted; and not two of them hath related things exactly alike. There are actions and sayings of Alexander which are omitted by them all, but yet are preserved by other authors: and no wonder then, that with the common prejudice of Greeks and Romans, they should omit some particulars of so remote and so disagreeable a people as the Jews. The affairs of each province are best related by the writers of each province. A Jew was most likely to record the particulars concerning the Jews. And Josephus, though he may have been thought credulous in some respects, yet was never charged with forging of history. His credit as an historian will upon examination be found equal almost to the very best. Joseph Scaliger, who was an exceeding good judge in matters of this nature,¹ giveth him the character of a most faithful, a most diligent, and a most learned writer, of whom, saith he, we may boldly affirm, that not only in Jewish, but likewise in foreign affairs, we may more safely rely on his credit, than on all the Greek and Latin historians together.

There remains then no difficulty that can really stick with us, unless it be the particular interposition of God in this affair, and the prophetic dreams of Alexander and the high-priest. These things, it must be confessed, are wonderful: but if we recollect the miraculous interpositions of God in favour of his people; if we reflect what a particular providence attended Alexander, and conducted him to conquest and empire; if we consider the clear and express prophecies concerning him; these things, though wonderful, may yet easily be reconciled to our belief, and will appear perfectly consistent with the other dispensations of Divine Providence. Admitting the truth of the prophecies, we cannot think these extraordinary circumstances at all incredible. These extraordinary circumstances are alleged to confirm the prophecies; and if the prophecies be found mutually to confirm these extraordinary circumstances, this is so far from weakening that it strengthens the argument. Indeed, without the supposition of the truth of these circumstances, it will be extremely difficult to account for Alexander's granting so many privileges and favours to the Jews. He ¹allowed them the free exercise of their religion; he exempted their land from tribute every seventh, or the sabbatical year; he settled many of them at Alexandria with privileges and immunities equal to those of the Macedonians themselves; and when the Samaritans had revolted, and murdered the governor whom he had set over them, he assigned their country to the Jews, and exempted it in the same manner as Judea, from tribute, as ²Josephus hath proved from Alexander's own letters, and from the testimony of Hecataeus, a heathen historian. But what were the merits and services of the Jews, that they should be so favoured and distinguished above other people? There is no way of accounting for it so probable, as by admitting the truth of this relation. With this all appears natural and easy, and is utterly inexplicable without it.

¹ Josephus, fidissimus, diligentissimus et eruditissimus scriptor. [Translated in the text.] Scal. in notis ad Fragmenta Græc. p. 45. De Josepho nos hoc audacter dicimus, non solum in rebus Judaicis, sed etiam in externis tutius illi credi, quam omnibus Græcis et Latinis. [Translated in the text.] In Prolegom. de Emendatione Temporum, p. 17.

But to return from this digression, if it may be called a digression, to consider a point of history that is so nearly related to our subject. Nothing is fixed and stable in human affairs; and the empire of the goat, though exceeding great, was, perhaps, for that reason, the sooner broken into pieces. (ver. 8.) Therefore the he-goat waxed very great, and when he was strong, the great horn was broken; and for it came up four notable ones, toward the four winds of heaven. Which the angel thus interprets, (ver. 22.) Now that being broken, whereas four stood up for it, four kingdoms shall stand up out of the nation, but not in his power. The empire of the goat was in his full strength, when Alexander died of a fever, at Babylon. He was ³succeeded in the throne by his natural brother, Philip Aridaeus, and by his own two sons, Alexander Aegus, and Hercules: but in the space of about fifteen years they were all murdered, and then the first horn, or kingdom, was entirely broken. The royal family being thus extinct, the ⁴governors of provinces, who had usurped the

¹ Joseph. Antiq. Lib. xi. cap. viii. sect. v. p. 504. Edit. Hudson.

² Joseph. contra Apion. Lib. ii. sect. iv. 1364, 1365. Edit. Hudson.

³ See Usher, Prideaux, and the chronologers.

⁴ Diod. Sic. Lib. xx. Justin. Lib. xv. cap. ii. Hujus honoris ornamentis tamdiu omnes abstinerunt, quamdiu filii regis sui superesse potuerunt. Tanta in illis verecundia fuit, ut cum opes regias haberent, regum tamen nominibus æquo animo caruerint, quoad Alexandro justus hæres fuit. [They refrained from the ensigns of this dignity, as long as any of the sons of their king survived. Such was their moderation, that though they possessed the wealth and power of kings, yet they were contented to pass without the title, so long as there was a lawful heir of Alexander alive.]

power, assumed the title of kings: and by the defeat and death of Antigonus, in the battle of Ipsus, they were reduced ¹ to four, Cassander, Lysimachus, Ptolemy, and Seleucus, who parted Alexander's dominions between them, and divided and settled them into four kingdoms. These four kingdoms are the four notable horns, which came up in the room of the first great horn; and are the same as the four heads of the leopard in the former vision. Four kingdoms shall stand up out of the nation, but not in his power; they were to be kingdoms of Greeks, not of Alexander's own family, but only of his nation; and neither were they to be equal to him in power and dominion, as an empire united is certainly more powerful than the same empire divided, and the whole is greater than any of the parts. They were likewise to extend toward the four winds of heaven: and in the partition of the empire, ² Cassander held Macedon, and Greece, and the western parts; Lysimachus had Thrace, Bithynia, and the northern regions; Ptolemy possessed Egypt, and the southern countries; and Seleucus obtained Syria, and the eastern provinces. Thus were they divided toward the four winds of heaven.

As in the former vision a little horn sprang up among the ten horns of the Roman empire, so here a little horn is described as rising among the four horns of the Grecian empire, (ver. 9—12.) And out of one of them came forth a little horn, which waxed exceeding great, toward the south, and toward the east, and toward the pleasant land. And it waxed great, even to the host of heaven, and it cast down some of the host, and of the stars, to the ground, and stamped upon them. Yea, he magnified himself even to the prince of the host, and by him the daily sacrifice was taken away, and the place of his sanctuary was cast down. And an host was given him against the daily sacrifice by reason of transgression, and it cast down the truth to the ground, and it practised, and prospered. All which is thus explained by the angel: (ver. 23—25.) And in the latter time of their kingdom, when the transgressors are come to the full, a king of fierce countenance, and understanding dark sentences, shall stand up. And his power shall be mighty, but not by his own power: and he shall destroy wonderfully, and shall prosper, and practise, and shall destroy the mighty and the holy people. And through his policy also he shall cause craft to prosper in his hand, and he shall magnify himself in his heart, and by peace shall destroy many: he shall also stand up against the Prince of princes, but he shall be broken without hand. This little horn is, by the generality of interpreters, both Jewish and Christian, ancient and modern, supposed to mean Antiochus Epiphanes, king of Syria, who was a great enemy and cruel persecutor of the Jews. So ³ Josephus understands the prophecy,

¹ Diod. Sic. Lib. xx. Polyb. Lib. v. p. 410. Edit. Casaubon. Plutarch in Demetrio.

² Diod. Sic. ibid. Prid. Connect. Part i. Book viii. Ann. 301, Ptolemy Soter. 4.

³ Joseph. Antiq. Lib. x. cap. xi. sect. vii. Καὶ δὲ ταῦτα ἡμῶν συνέβη τῷ ἔθνει παθεῖν ὑπ' Ἀντιόχου τοῦ Ἐπιφάνους, καθὼς εἶδεν ὁ Δανιήλας, καὶ πολλοῖς ἔτισιν ἔμπροσθεν ἀνέγραψε τὰ γενησόμενα. Et sane factum est ut hæc ipsa sub Antiocho Epiphane gens and says that "our nation suffered these calamities under Antiochus Epiphanes, as Daniel saw, and many years before wrote what things should come to pass." In like manner ¹ St. Jerome explains it of Antiochus Epiphanes, and says, "that he fought against Ptolemy Philometor and the Egyptians, that is, against the south; and again against the east, and those who attempted a change of government in Persia; and lastly he fought against the Jews, took Judea, entered into Jerusalem, and in the temple of God set up the image of Jupiter Olympius." With St. Jerome agree most of the ancient fathers, and modern divines and commentators; but then they all allow that Antiochus Epiphanes was a type of Antichrist. Antiochus Epiphanes at first sight doth indeed, in some features, very much resemble the little horn; but upon a nearer view and examination it will evidently appear, that in other parts there is no manner of similitude or correspondence between them. Sir Isaac Newton, with that sagacity which was peculiar to him, and with which he penetrated into Scripture as well as into nature, ² perceived plainly that the little horn could not be drawn for Antiochus Epiphanes, but must be designed for some other subject; and though we shall not entirely follow his plan, nor build altogether upon his foundation, yet we shall be obliged to make use of several of his materials. There are, then, two ways of expounding this prophecy of the little horn, either by understanding it of Antiochus Epiphanes, and considering Antiochus as a type of Antichrist; or by leaving him wholly out of the question, and seeking another application: and which method of the two is to be preferred, will better appear in the progress of this discourse.

A horn, in the style of Daniel, doth not signify any particular king, but is an emblem of a kingdom. In the former vision the ten horns were not ten kings, but so many kingdoms, into which the Roman empire was divided: and the little horn did not typify a single person, but a succession of men, claiming such prerogatives, and exerting such powers, as are there specified. In this vision, likewise, the two horns of the ram do not represent the two kings, Darius the Mede, and Cyrus the Persian, but the two kingdoms of Media and Persia: and for this plain reason, because the ram hath all along two horns; even when he is attacked by the he-goat, he hath still two horns; but the two kingdoms of Media and Persia had been long united under one king. The horns of the he-goat, too, prefigure not kings, but kingdoms. The first great horn doth not design Alexander himself, but the kingdom of Alexander, as long as nostra pateretur, prout viderat Danielus, et multis ante annis quæ ventura erant scriptis mandaverat. [Translated in the text.] P. 466. Edit. Hudson.

¹ Hieron. in Dan. cap. viii.—contra Ptolemæum Philometorem dimicavit, hoc est, contra meridiem, et contra Ægyptios. Rursumque ad orientem, et contra eos qui res novas in Perside moliebantur: ad extremum contra Judæos dimicans, captâ Judæâ, ingressus est Ierosolymam: et in templo Dei simulacrum Jovis Olympii statuit. [Translated in the text.] Col. 1105. Edit. Benedict.

² Sir Isaac Newton's Observations on Daniel, chap. ix.

the title continued united in him, and his brother and two sons. The four horns, which arose after the first was broken, are expressly said (ver. 22.) to be four kingdoms: and consequently it should seem, that the little horn cannot signify Antiochus Epiphanes, or any single king, but must denote some kingdom: by kingdom meaning, what ¹ the ancients meant, any government, state, or polity in the world, whether monarchy, or republic, or of what form soever. Now what kingdom was there that rose up during the subsistence of the four kingdoms of the Grecian empire, and was advanced to any greatness and eminence, but the Roman? The first great horn was the kingdom of Alexander and his family. The four horns were four kingdoms, not of his family, but only of the nation. Four kingdoms shall stand up out of the nation: and doth not this imply that the remaining kingdom, the kingdom of the little horn, should be not of the nation?

The general character, therefore, is better adapted to the Romans: and now let us consider the particular properties and actions of the little horn, whether they may be more justly ascribed to Antiochus Epiphanes, or to the Romans. And out of one of them came forth a little horn. Antiochus Epiphanes was indeed the son of Antiochus the Great, king of Syria: and he is ² said to be the little horn, because he rose from small beginnings to the kingdom, having been many years an hostage at Rome. But then his kingdom was nothing more than a continuation of one of the four kingdoms; it cannot possibly be reckoned as a fifth kingdom springing up among the four; and the little horn is plainly some power different and distinct from the four former horns. Is not this, therefore, more applicable to the Romans, who were a new and different power, who rose from small beginnings to an exceeding great empire, who first subdued Macedon, and Greece, the capital kingdom of the goat, and from thence spread and enlarged their conquests over the rest? Nor let it seem strange that the Romans, who were prefigured by a great beast, in the former vision, should in this be represented only by the horn of a beast; for nothing is more usual than to describe the same person or thing under different images, upon different occasions: and, besides, in this vision the Roman empire is not designed at large, but only the Roman empire as a horn of the goat. When the Romans first got footing in Greece, then they became a horn of the goat. Out of this horn they came, and were at first a little horn, but in process of time overtopped the other horns. From Greece they extended their arms, and over-ran the other part of the goat's dominions: and their actions within the dominions of the goat, and not their affairs in the western empire, are the principal subject of this prophecy. But their actions, which are most largely and particularly specified, are their great persecution and oppression of the people of God: which renders it probable, that the appellation of the little horn might be given them for the same reason, that the great persecutor and oppressor of the saints in the western empire is also called the little horn. It is the same kind of power, and therefore might be signified by the same name.

¹ See this point proved from heathen authors as well as from Scripture in the beginning of Mr. Mede's tract entitled Regnum Romanum est regnum quartum Danielis. Mede's Works, B. iii. p. 711.

² Qui quum obses fuisset Romæ, et nesciente senatu cepisset imperium, &c. [Who having been an hostage at Rome, and, without the knowledge of the senate, having seized the empire, &c.] Hieron. in Dan. viii. col. 1105. Edit. Benedict. Antiochum Epiphanem significat, quia fuit Romæ obses. [It denotes Antiochus Epiphanes, because he was an hostage at Rome.] Vatablus in locum. Antiochus, qui obses fuit Romæ, nec a patre designatus rex, sed invasit regnum, &c. [Antiochus, who was an hostage at Rome, though not appointed king by his father, yet seized the kingdom.] Clarius in locum. Antiochus modicæ primum fortunæ, privatus, et Romæ obses, ex post facto dictus Epiphanes. [Antiochus, at first a private person of a moderate fortune, and an hostage at Rome, afterwards was called Epiphanes.] Grotius in locum. So likewise Poole, &c.

It will appear too, that the time agrees better with the Romans. And in the latter time of their kingdom, when the transgressors are come to the full, a king of fierce countenance, and understanding dark sentences, shall stand up. Antiochus Epiphanes might be said, indeed, to stand up in the latter time of their kingdom; because Macedonia, the first of the four kingdoms, was conquered and reduced into a Roman province during his reign. But when he stood up, the transgressors in the Jewish nation were not come to the full; for when he began to reign, ¹ Onias was high-priest of the Jews, and the temporal as well as ecclesiastical government was at this time in the hands of the high-priest, and this Onias was a most worthy good magistrate, as well as a most venerable pious priest. As the author of the second book of Maccabees saith, (2 Macc. iii. 1.) the holy city was inhabited with all peace, and the laws were kept very well, because of the godliness of Onias the high-priest, and his hatred of wickedness. It was after this time that the great corruptions were introduced into the Jewish church and nation, and they were introduced chiefly through the means of Antiochus, by his direction, or under his authority. The Romans might much better be said to stand up in the latter time of their kingdom, who saw the end, not only of one kingdom, but of all the four; who first subdued the kingdom of Macedonia and Greece, and then inherited by the will of Attalus the kingdom of Pergamus, which was the remains of the kingdom of Lysimachus, and afterwards made a province of the kingdom of Syria, and lastly of the kingdom of Egypt. When the Romans stood up too, the transgressions were come to the full; for the high-priesthood was exposed to sale; good Onias was ejected for a sum of money to make room for wicked Jason, and Jason was again supplanted for a greater sum of money by a worse man (if possible) than himself, his brother Menelaus; and the golden vessels of the temple were sold to pay the sacrilegious purchase. At the same time, the customs of the heathen nations were introduced among the Jews; the youth were trained up and exercised after the manner of the Greeks; the people apostatized from the true religion, and even the priests (2 Macc. iv. 14.) had no courage to serve any more at the altar, but despising the temple and neglecting the sacrifices, they hastened to be partakers of unlawful diversions. Nay, Jerusalem was taken by Antiochus; forty thousand Jews were slain, and as many more were sold into slavery; the temple was profaned even under the conduct of the high-priest Menelaus, was defiled with swine's blood, and plundered of every thing valuable; and in ¹ the same year that Paulus Æmilius the Roman consul vanquished Perseus the last king of Macedonia, and thereby put an end to that kingdom, the Jewish religion was put down, and the heathen worship was set up in the cities of Judea and in Jerusalem; and the temple itself was consecrated to Jupiter Olympius, and his image was erected upon the very altar. Then, indeed, the transgressors were come to the full, and then, as we see, the Romans stood up, a king of fierce countenance, and understanding dark sentences.

¹ For these, and many particulars which follow, the two books of Maccabees, and Josephus's Antiquities of the Jews must be consulted.

A king in the prophetic style is the same as a kingdom, and a kingdom, as we before observed, is any state or government. A king of fierce countenance, and understanding dark sentences. The latter expression in the ² Syriac is translated skilful of ruling, and in the Arabic skilful of disputations. We may suppose the meaning to be, that this should be a politic and artful, as well as a formidable power; which is not so properly the character of Antiochus, as of the Romans. They were represented in the former vision by a beast dreadful and terrible; and for the same reason they are here denominated a king of fierce countenance. He cannot so well be said to be a king of fierce countenance, who was even frightened out of Egypt by a message from the Romans. The ³ story is worthy of memory. Antiochus Epiphanes was making war upon Egypt, and was in a fair way of becoming master of the whole kingdom. The Romans, therefore, fearing lest he should grow too powerful by annexing Egypt to the crown of Syria, sent an embassy to him, to require him to desist from his enterprise, or to declare war against him. He was drawing near to besiege Alexandria, when he was met by the three ambassadors from Rome. Popillius, the chief of them, had formerly been his friend and acquaintance, while he was an hostage at Rome; and the king, at their first meeting, graciously offered him his hand in remembrance of their former friendship. But Popillius declined the compliment by saying, that private friendship must give place to the public welfare, and he must first know whether the king was a friend to the Roman state, before he could acknowledge him as a friend to himself; and so saying he presented to him the tables which contained the decree of the senate, and desired an immediate answer. Antiochus opened and perused them, and replied that he would consider the matter with his friends and return his answer very speedily. But Popillius, with a wand that he carried in his hand, drew a circle in the sand round the king, and insisted upon his answer before he stirred out of that circle. The king, astonished at this peremptory and imperious manner of proceeding, after some hesitation, said that he would obey the commands of the senate; and then at length Popillius reached forth his hand to him as a friend and confederate. This incident happened very soon after the conquest of Macedonia, which as it dismayed Antiochus, so it emboldened the Romans to act in this manner; and this being their first memorable action as soon as they became a horn or kingdom of the goat, it is very fitly said of them, more fitly than of Antiochus, a king of fierce countenance shall stand up.

¹ See Prideaux, Connect. Part ii. Book iii. Ann. 163.

² Regnandi peritus. [Skilful in ruling.] Syr. Disputationum peritus. [Skilful in disputations.] Arab.

³ Polyb. Legat. xcii. p. 916. Edit. Casaubon. Appian. de Bellis Syriacis, p. 131. Edit. Steph. p. 212. Edit. Tollii. Livius, Lib. xlv. cap. xii. Valerius Maximus, Lib. vi. cap. iv. sect. iii. Velleius Paterculus, Lib. i. cap. x. Justin. Lib. xxxiv. cap. iii.

The other actions likewise of the little horn accord better with the Romans. This horn, though little at first, yet waxed exceeding great toward the south, and toward the east, and toward the pleasant land. This horn, therefore, as Sir Isaac Newton ¹ justly observes, was to rise up in the north-west parts of those nations, which composed the body of the goat; and from thence was to extend his dominion towards Egypt, Syria, and Judea. Observe the particulars. He waxed exceeding great: and so did the Roman empire even within the territories of the goat, but not so did Antiochus Epiphanes: for he was so far from enlarging the kingdom of Syria, that it was less in his time than under most of his predecessors, and he ² left it as he found it, tributary to the Romans.—Toward the south: Antiochus indeed did several times invade Egypt, and gained great advantages over Ptolemy Philometor, king of Egypt: but he was never able to make himself absolute master of the country, and annex it to the kingdom of Syria; as the Romans made it a province of their empire, and kept possession of it for several centuries. His designs were frustrated, as we have seen, by an embassy from the Romans; and he went out of Egypt baffled and disgraced, a word from them being as effectual as an army.—Toward the east: the Romans did grow very powerful toward the east; they conquered and made a province of Syria, which was the eastern kingdom of the goat: but Antiochus was seated in the east himself, and did not extend his dominions farther eastward. On the contrary, the Parthians had withdrawn their obedience from the kings of Syria, and had erected a growing kingdom in the east. Antiochus did indeed ³ vanquish Artaxias, the tributary king of Armenia, who had revolted from him: but this was rather in the north than in the east. He had not the like success among the Persians, who were also dilatory in paying their tribute; for ¹ having heard much of the riches of Elymais, and particularly of the temple there, he went thither with a design of seizing the treasures of the city and temple; but the inhabitants rose upon him, repelled and routed him and his army, so that he was forced to fly with disappointment and disgrace out of the country; and soon after he sickened and died.—And toward the pleasant land, that is, Judea; for so it is called in the Psalms (cvi. 24.) the pleasant land: and in Jeremiah (iii. 19.) a pleasant land, a goodly heritage; and so twice again afterwards in Daniel. (xi. 16. 41.) Antiochus did indeed take Jerusalem, and miserably harass and oppress the Jews, as it has been above related: but the Jews in a little time, under the conduct of the Maccabees, recovered their liberties, and established their religion and government in greater splendour and security than before. The Romans more effectually conquered and subdued them, first made a province of their country, and then destroyed their city and temple, and dispersed the people, so that after so fatal a fall they have never from that time to this been able to rise again.

¹ Sir Isaac Newton's Observ. on Daniel, chap. ix. p. 119, 120.

² 2 Macc. viii. 10.

³ Appian. de Bell. Syr. p. 117 et 131. Edit. Steph. p. 187 et 212. Edit. Tollii. Porphyrius apud Hieron. in Dan. xi. col. 1133. Edit. Benedict.

Another remarkable property that eminently distinguished the little horn from all others, was that his power should be mighty, but not by his own power; which commentators are much at a loss to explain. Some say ² that he should be mighty, not so much by his own industry as by the gift of God: but so are all horns or kingdoms whatever. Others say, ³ that God should give him this power for the punishment of his people: and others again, ⁴ that he should obtain it by the factions and perfidy and baseness of the Jews, who should betray their country to him: but these limit and restrain the meaning to a particular subject, to his power over the Jews, whereas it is said in the general, that his power should be mighty, but not by his own power. His power in general, not only over this or that particular people, should be mighty, but not by his own power. The best explanation that they can give of it, who understand the whole of Antiochus Epiphanes, is, that ⁵ he attained to the crown chiefly by the favour and assistance of Eumenes, king of Pergamus, and Attalus his brother, who having at that time some jealousy of the Romans, were desirous to make the king of Syria their friend: but we do not read that they assisted him in any of his wars after-

¹ 1 Macc. vi. 1—4. 2 Macc. ix. 1, 2. Joseph. Antiq. Lib. xii. cap. viii. sect. i. p. 544. Edit. Hudson: Porphyrius apud Hieron. ibid.

² Non propriâ industriâ, sed Deo dante. [Not by his own industry, but by the gift of God.] Vatablus.

³ Quia Deus voluit per ipsum punire populum suum. [Because by him God designed to punish his people.] Clarius.

⁴ So Poole, Lowth, &c. Non tam ex ipso causa erit tanti incrementi, quam ex factionibus Judæorum. [The cause of this mighty aggrandizement shall not originate so much from himself as from the factions of the Jews.] Grotius.

⁵ Appian. de Bell. Syr. p. 116. Edit. Steph. p. 187. Edit. Tollii.

wards, and neither was his kingdom strengthened by foreign armies or alliances. They who conceive Antiochus to be a type of Antichrist¹ offer a fairer interpretation, because Antichrist was to exercise an usurped authority, and not his own, and the kings of the earth, according to St. John, (Rev. xvii. 13.) were to give their power and strength unto the beast. But this part of the prophecy, as well as the rest, can no where be so justly and properly applied, as to the Romans. With them it quadrates exactly, and with none of the other horns or kingdoms of the goat. The strength of the other kingdoms consisted in themselves, and had its foundation in some part of the goat: but the Roman empire, as a horn or kingdom of the goat, was not mighty by its own power, was not strong by virtue of the goat, but drew its nourishment and strength from Rome and Italy. There grew the trunk and body of the tree, though the branches extended over Greece, Asia, Syria, and Egypt.

The remainder of the prophecy relates mostly to the persecution and oppression of the people of God. And he waxed great, even to the host of heaven, (or against the host of heaven) and he cast down some of the host, and of the stars to the ground, and stamped upon them, that is, the Jewish state in general, the mighty and the holy people, (ver. 24.) or the priest and Levites in particular, who are called stars; as they were eminent for their station and illustrious for their knowledge: and the host of heaven, as they watched and served in the temple, and their service is denominated a warfare. (Numb. viii. 24, 25.) This passage was in some measure fulfilled by Antiochus Epiphanes as well as by the Romans: but our Saviour making use of the like expressions, (Matt. xxiv. 29.) the stars shall fall from heaven, and the powers of the heavens shall be shaken, in speaking of the destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans, this passage also may more properly be referred to that event.

Yea, he magnified himself even to the prince of the host, (or against the prince of the host) and by him the daily sacrifice was taken away, and the place of his sanctuary was cast down. Antiochus did indeed take away the daily sacrifice, but he did not cast down the place of his sanctuary, he did not destroy the temple. He took away the daily sacrifice for a few years, but the Romans for many ages: and the Romans likewise utterly destroyed the temple, which he spoiled only and profaned.

And an host was given him against the daily sacrifice by reason of transgression. The word here translated an host is rendered in other places, (Job vii. 1.) and in the book of Daniel itself, (x. 1.) an appointed time: and an appointed time was given him against the daily sacrifice by reason of transgression: or, as we read in the margin, The host was given over for the transgression against the daily sacrifice, and he cast down the truth to the ground, and he practised and prospered. Or as the same thing is expressed by the angel: He shall destroy wonderfully, and shall prosper, and practise, and shall destroy the mighty and the holy people; and through his policy also he shall cause craft to prosper in his hand, and he shall magnify himself in his heart, and by peace shall destroy many. But Antiochus did not so mightily destroy the Jews, nor prosper in his practices and designs against them. When he took Jerusalem ¹ he slew forty thousand, and sold forty thousand more: but when the city was besieged and taken by the Romans, ² the number of the captives amounted to ninety-seven thousand, and of the slain to eleven hundred thousand. The Romans too carried their conquest and revenge so far, as to put an end to the government of the Jews, and entirely to take away their place and nation. Antiochus meant as much to root out the whole people; his malice was as great, but his success was not equal; for though his forces were victorious at first, yet they were defeated at last, and his ³ generals Apollonius, Seron, Nicanor, and Gorgias, Timotheus, and Bacchides, and even Lysias himself, were all shamefully routed one after another: and the news of these defeats hastened his death.

¹ See Lowth's Comment.

It is farther added, that he shall also stand up against the Prince of princes. If by the Prince of princes the high-priest be meant, it is very true that Antiochus did put in and put out the high-priests at pleasure, but the Romans took away the whole administration. If by the Prince of princes be meant, as most probably was meant, the Messiah, then Antiochus had no share in the completion; it was effected by the Romans. It was by the malice of the Jews, but by the authority of the Romans, that he was put to death; and he suffered the punishment of the Roman malefactors and slaves. And indeed it is very worthy of our most serious consideration, whether this part of the prophecy be not a sketch of the fate and sufferings of the Christian, as well as of the Jewish Church. Nothing is more usual with the prophets than to describe the religion and worship of later times by metaphors and figures borrowed from their own religion. The Christians may full as well as the Jews be comprehended under the name of the holy people, or people of the holy ones. And the Romans not only crucified our Saviour, but also persecuted his disciples for above three centuries; and when at length they embraced the Christian religion, they soon corrupted it, so that it may be questioned whether their favour was not as hurtful to the church as their enmity. As the power of the Roman emperors declined, that of the Roman pontiffs increased; and may it not with equal truth and justice be said of the latter as of the former, that they cast down the truth to the ground, and practised, and prospered? How applicable in this sense is every part of the angel's interpretation! A king of fierce countenance, and understanding dark sentences, shall stand up. And his power shall be mighty, but not by his own power: and he shall destroy wonderfully, and shall prosper, and practise, and shall destroy the mighty and the holy people, (or the people of the holy ones:) and through his policy also he shall cause craft to prosper in his hand, and he shall magnify himself in his heart, and by peace shall destroy many: he shall also stand up against the Prince of princes, but he shall be broken without hand. And this farther opens and explains the reason of the appellation, the little horn. The persecuting power of Rome, whether exercised towards the Jews or towards the Christians, or by the emperors or by the popes, is still the little horn. The tyranny is the same; but as exerted in Greece and the east, it is the little horn of the he-goat, or the third empire; as exerted in Italy and the west, it is the little horn of the fourth beast, or the fourth empire.

¹ 2 Macc. v. 14.

² Joseph. de Bell. Jud. Lib. vi. cap. ix. sect. ii. et iii. p. 1291. Edit. Hudson.

³ 1 Macc. iii. iv. 2 Macc. viii. x. xi. Joseph. Antiq. Lib. xii. cap. vii. p. 537. Edit. Hudson.

But the little horn, like other tyrannical powers, was to come to a remarkable end; he shall be broken without hand. As the stone in Nebuchadnezzar's dream was cut out of the mountain without hands, that is, not by human, but by supernatural means; so the little horn shall be broken without hand, not die the common death, not fall by the hand of men, but perish by a stroke from heaven. And this agrees perfectly with the former predictions of the fatal catastrophe of the Romans. The stone, that is, the power of Christ, (ii. 34.) smote the image upon his feet of iron and clay, and brake them to pieces. Again, (vii. 11.) I beheld then, because of the voice of the great words which the horn spake; I beheld even till the beast was slain, and his body destroyed, and given to the burning flame. And again, (ver. 26.) the judgment shall sit, and they shall take away his dominion, to consume, and to destroy it unto the end. All which implies that the dominion of the Romans shall finally be destroyed with some extraordinary manifestation of the Divine power. It is indeed very true, that Antiochus Epiphanes died in an extraordinary manner. He was returning from his unsuccessful expedition into Persia, when he heard the news of the defeat of his armies one after another by the forces of the Maccabees. He set forward, therefore, in great rage and fury, breathing nothing but death and destruction to the whole generation of the Jews. But in the way he was seized with violent pains in his bowels; and having a fall from his chariot he was sorely bruised, and his inward pains grew more violent, so that he was not able to proceed in his journey, but was forced to stop at a little town upon the road. There he lay in great torment, and filthy ulcers broke out in his body, from whence issued worms, and such a stench, that he became intolerable to others, and even to himself. Nor were the torments and agonies of his mind less than those of his body. He was vexed even to distraction, thought he saw dreadful spectres and apparitions, and suffered all the pangs and horrors of a guilty conscience; and in this miserable condition he lay pining and rotting till he died. This is the account that is given of his death, and ¹confirmed by heathen as well as by Jewish historians: but with this difference, that the former ascribe it to the vengeance of the gods for the sacrilege that he designed to commit at Elymais; the latter represent it as the just judgment of heaven for the sacrilege that he really committed at Jerusalem, and for the barbarous slaughter that he made of so many thousands of the Jews: and they say, that he himself upon his death-bed confessed as much: and which of these accounts is the more probable and credible, every intelligent reader will easily determine.

By thus tracing the particulars, it appears that though some of them may agree very well with Antiochus Epiphanes, yet others can by no means accord or be reconciled to him; but they all agree and correspond exactly with the Romans, and with no one else; so that the application of the character to them must be the right application. It is therefore surprising, that a man of Dr. Halifax's learning, after so many proofs to the contrary, can however opine, that the character "must of necessity be restrained to Antiochus Epiphanes, and to him only;" and for such reasons, and for none others, than have here been obviated and refuted. The fitness and propriety of the application to the Romans will still farther appear, by considering the time that is allotted for the duration and continuance of the vision. I will make thee know, saith the angel to Daniel, (ver. 19.) what shall be in the last end, or to the last end of the indignation: that is, as Mr. Lowth paraphraseth it, "I will explain to thee the whole series of God's judgments upon his people to the end and conclusion of them:" but that end and conclusion is not yet come. There are intimations in the prophets, that God's indignation against his people will be accomplished, and the final destruction of the Roman dominion will fall out, about the same period. But the time is more particularly noted. One angel asked another angel, (ver. 13.) How long shall be the vision concerning the daily sacrifice and the transgression of desolation, to give both the sanctuary and the host to be trodden under foot? In the original, there is no such word as concerning; and Mr. Lowth rightly observes, that the words may be rendered more agreeably to the Hebrew thus, For how long a time shall the vision last, the daily sacrifice be taken away, and the transgression of desolation continue, &c.? After the same manner, the question is translated by the ²Seventy, and in the Arabic version, and in the Vulgar Latin. The answer is, (ver. 14.) Unto two thousand and three hundred days, then shall the sanctuary be cleansed. In the original it is, Unto two thousand and three hundred evenings and mornings, an even and morning being in Hebrew the notation of time for a day; and, in allusion to this expression, it is said afterwards, (ver. 26.) The vision of the evening and the morning is true. Now these two thousand and three hundred days can by no computation be accommodated to the times of Antiochus Epiphanes, even though the days be taken for natural days. Two thousand and three hundred days are six years and somewhat more than a quarter; but the profanation of the altar under Antiochus lasted but three years complete, according to the author of the first book of the Maccabees; (1 Macc. i. 59. compared with iv. 52.) and the desolation of the temple, and the taking away of the daily sacrifice by Apollonius continued but three years and a half, according to ¹Josephus. Mr. Mede proposeth a method to reconcile the difference, and ²saith that the time is “not to be reckoned from the height of the calamity, when the daily sacrifice should be taken away, (for thence it is but three years,) but from the beginning of the transgression which occasioned this desolation, and is described 1 Macc. i. 11, &c.” But Antiochus began to reign, according to the author of the first book of the Maccabees, (i. 10.) in the 137th year of the kingdom of the Greeks, or æra of the Seleucidæ, and in those days was the beginning of the transgression, which is described 1 Macc. i. 11, &c., that is, ten or eleven years before the cleansing of the sanctuary, which was performed in the 148th year, according to the same author. (iv. 52.) Or if we compute the time from Antiochus’s first going up against Jerusalem, and spoiling the city and temple, these things were done, according to the same author, (i. 20.) in the 143d year; so that this reckoning would fall short of the time assigned, as the other exceeds it. The difficulty, or impossibility rather, of making these two thousand and three hundred days accord with the times of Antiochus, I suppose, obliged the ancients to consider Antiochus as a type of Antichrist; and therefore ³Jerome saith in his comment, that this place most Christians refer to Antichrist, and affirms that what was transacted in a type under Antiochus, will be fulfilled in truth under Antichrist. The days, without doubt, are to be taken agreeably to the style of Daniel in other places, not for natural, but for prophetic days or years; and as the question was asked, not only how long the daily sacrifice shall be taken away, and the transgression of desolation continue, but also how long the vision shall last; so the answer is to be understood, and these two thousand and three hundred days denote the whole time, from the beginning of the vision to the cleansing of the sanctuary. The sanctuary is not yet cleansed, and consequently these years are not yet expired. When these years shall be expired, then their end will clearly show from whence their beginning is to be dated, whether from the vision of the ram, or of the he-goat, or of the little horn. It is difficult to fix the precise time when the prophetic dates begin, and when the end, till the prophecies are fulfilled, and the event declares the certainty of them. And the difficulty is increased in this case by reason of some variety in the copies. For the ¹ Seventy have four hundred in this place; and others, as ² Jerome informs us, read two hundred instead of three hundred. If we follow the reading of the Seventy, Unto two thousand and four hundred days or years, then perhaps they are to be computed from the vision of the ram, or the establishment of the Persian empire. If we follow the other reading mentioned by Jerome, Unto two thousand and two hundred days or years, then perhaps they are to be computed from the vision of the little horn, or the Romans invading the Grecian empire; and it is remarkable ³ that the Romans first passed over with an army, and made war upon Philip king of Macedonia, just 200 years before Christ. But if we still retain the common reading (which probably is the truest and best), Unto two thousand and three hundred days or years, then I conceive they are to be computed from the vision of the he-goat, or Alexander's invading Asia. Alexander invaded Asia ⁴ in the year of the world 3670, and in the year before Christ 334. Two thousand and three hundred years from that time will draw towards the conclusion of the sixth millennium of the world, and about that period, according to ⁵ an old tradition, which was current before our Saviour's time, and was probably founded upon the prophecies, great changes and revolutions are expected; and particularly as ⁶ Rabbi Abraham Sebah saith, Rome is to be overthrown, and the Jews are to be restored. The angel farther affirms the truth and certainty of the vision, and of the time allotted for it, (ver. 26.) The vision of the evening and the morning, which was told, is true; wherefore shut thou up the vision, for it shall be for many days. The shutting up of the vision implies, that it should not be understood of some time;

¹ Polyb. p. 997. Edit. Casaubon. Appian. de Bell. Syr. p. 131. Edit. Steph. p. 212. Edit. Tollii. Diodorus et Porphyrius apud Hieron. in Dan. xi. col. 1131 et 1133. Edit. Benedict. 1 Macc. vi. 1—16. 2 Macc. ix. Joseph. Antiq. Lib. xii. cap. viii. sect. i. p. 544. Edit. Hudson.

² Ἐως πότε ἡ ὕπασις στήσεται, ἡ θυσία ἡ ἀρθεῖσα, κ. τ. λ. Sept. Quousque visio hæc continget, et auferetur sacrificium, &c. Arab. Usquequo visio, et jure sacrificium, &c. [Translated in the text.] Vulg.

¹ Josephi Procem. de Bell. Jud. sect. vii. p. 956. Lib. i. cap. i. sect. i. p. 958. Edit. Hudson.

² Mr. Mede’s Apostacy of the latter times, Part i. chap. iv. in his Works, B. iii. p. 659.

³ Hunc locum plerique nostrorum ad Antichristum referunt: et quod sub Antiocho in typo factum est, sub illo in veritate dicunt esse complendum. [Translated in the text.] Hieron. in locum, col. 1106. Edit. Benedict.

¹ ἡμέραι δισχιλίας καὶ τετρακόσιαι. [Two thousand and four hundred days.] Sept.

² Quidam pro duobus millibus trecentis, duo millia ducentos legunt. [Some, instead of two thousand three hundred, read two thousand two hundred.] Hieron. ibid.

³ See Usher's Annals, A.M. 3804.

⁴ See Usher, Prideaux, &c.

⁵ See Placita Doctorum Hebræorum de magno die judicii, et regno Messię tunc futuro, [the opinions of the Hebrew doctors, concerning the great day of judgment, and the future kingdom of the Messiah] in Mede's Works, B. iii. p. 535. and Placita Doctorum Hebræorum de Babylonis seu Romę excidio, [the opinions of the Hebrew doctors concerning the destruction of Babylon or of Rome] in Mede's Works, B. v. p. 902.

⁶ R. Abraham Sebah in Gen. i. ait, currente sexto annorum mundi millenario Romam evertendam, et Judęos reducendos. [Rabbi Abraham Sebah on Gen. i. saith, "that in the course of the sixth millennium of the world, Rome will be destroyed, and the Jews restored."] Ibid. p. 903.

and we cannot say that it was sufficiently understood, so long as Antiochus Epiphanes was taken for the little horn. The vision being for many days, must necessarily infer a longer term than the calamity under Antiochus of three years or three years and a half, or even than the whole time from the first beginning of the vision in Cyrus to the cleansing of the sanctuary under Antiochus, which was not ¹ above 371 years. Such a vision could not well be called long to Daniel, who had seen so much longer before, and especially as the time assigned for it is two thousand and three hundred days, which, since they cannot by any account be natural days, must needs be prophetic days, or two thousand and three hundred years. Such a vision may properly enough be said to be for many days.

Daniel was much affected with the misfortunes and afflictions which were to befall the church and people of God, (ver. 27.) And I Daniel fainted, and was sick certain days: afterward I rose up, and did the king's business, and I was astonished at the vision, but none understood it. Munster, ² and Clarius, who generally transcribes Munster, are of opinion that Daniel was visited by this sickness, lest he should be lifted up by the sublimity of the visions. I presume they thought his case somewhat like St. Paul's, (2 Cor. xii. 7.) who had a thorn in the flesh, or a bodily infirmity, lest he should be exalted above measure through the abundance of the revelations. But it is much more probable, that Daniel's sickness proceeded from his grief for his religion and country: as in the former vision, he was grieved in his spirit, his cogitations much troubled him, and his countenance changed in him, at the success of the little horn there described. And this is another most conclusive argument, that the calamities under Antiochus Epiphanes could not possibly be the main end and ultimate scope of this prophecy. For the calamities under Antiochus were of small extent and of short duration, in comparison with what the nation had suffered, and was then suffering, under Nebuchadnezzar and his successors. Antiochus took the city, but Nebuchadnezzar burnt it to the ground. Antiochus profaned the temple, but Nebuchadnezzar utterly destroyed it. Antiochus made captives forty thousand of the Jews, but Nebuchadnezzar carried the whole nation into captivity. Antiochus took away the daily sacrifice for three years and a half, but Nebuchadnezzar abolished all the temple service for seventy years. Why then should Daniel, who had seen and felt these greater calamities, be so much grieved at those lesser disasters of the nation? Present and sensible evils usually affect us most; and therefore that Daniel was so much more affected with the future than with the present, was astonished and fainted, and was sick certain days, can be ascribed to nothing but to his foreseeing that the future distress and misery of the nation would greatly exceed all that they sustained at present. But the calamities under Antiochus were much less, and much shorter. Those only which they suffered from the Romans were greater and worse than the evils brought on them by Nebuchadnezzar. And the transgression of desolation hath now continued these 1700 years. They expect, and we expect, that at length the sanctuary will be cleansed, and that in God's determined time his promise will be fully accomplished; (Amos ix. 11, 12. Acts xv. 16, 17.) I will return, and will build again the tabernacle of David, which is fallen down; and I will build again the ruins thereof, and I will set it up; that the residue of men might seek after the Lord, and all the Gentiles upon whom my name is called, saith the Lord, who doeth all these things.

¹ See Usher, Prideaux, &c. The first year of Cyrus was A.M. 3468, before Christ 536. The sanctuary was cleansed A.M. 3839, before Christ 165.

² Et quod subditur de ægrotatione Danielis, ostenditur illam prophetæ immissam, ne extolleretur sublimitate visionum, quas solus intelligebat. [By what is subjoined concerning Daniel's sickness, is shown, that it came upon the prophet, lest he should be exalted above measure, by the sublimity of the vision which he alone understood.] Munsterus. Et quod de ægrotatione suâ dicit, ostenditur, illam prophetæ immissam, ne extolleretur sublimitate visionum, quas solus intelligebat. [By what he tells us concerning his sickness, is shown, that it was sent to the prophet, lest he should be too much lifted up by the sublimity of the visions, which he alone understood.] Clarius.

This concern of Daniel, and affection for his religion and country, show him in a very amiable light, and give an additional lustre and glory to his character. But not only in this instance, but in every other, he manifests the same public spirit, and appears no less eminently a patriot than a prophet. Though he was torn early from his country, and enjoyed all the advantages that he coulden joy in foreign service, yet nothing could make him forget his native home: and in the next chapter we see him pouring out his soul in prayer, and supplicating most earnestly and devoutly for the pardon and restoration of his captive nation. It is a gross mistake, therefore, to think that religion will ever extinguish or abate our love for our country. The Scriptures will rather incite and inflame it, exhibit several illustrious examples of it, and recommend and enforce this, as well as all other moral and social virtues; and especially when the interests of true religion and of our country are so blended and interwoven, that they cannot well be separated the one from the other. This is a double incentive to the love of our country; and with the same zeal that every pious Jew might say formerly, every honest Briton may say now, with the good Psalmist, (Psalm cxxii. 6, &c.) O pray for the peace of Jerusalem; they shall prosper that love thee. Peace be within thy walls, and plenteousness within thy palaces. For my brethren and companions' sake, I will wish thee prosperity: yea, because of the house of the Lord our God, I will seek to do thee good.

XVI.

DANIEL'S PROPHECY OF THE THINGS NOTED IN THE SCRIPTURE OF TRUTH.

IN TWO PARTS.

PART I.

It is the usual method of the Holy Spirit to make the latter prophecies explanatory of the former: and revelation is (Prov. iv. 18.) as the shining light, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day. The four great empires of the world, which were shown to Nebuchadnezzar in the form of a great image, were again more particularly represented to Daniel in the shape of four great wild beasts. In like manner, the memorable events, which were revealed to Daniel in the vision of the ram and he-goat, are here again more clearly and explicitly revealed in his last vision by an angel: so that this latter prophecy may not improperly be said to be a comment and explanation of the former. This revelation was made (x. 1.) in the third year of Cyrus, king of Persia, when Daniel was very far advanced in years. For the third year of Cyrus was the seventy-third of Daniel's captivity; and, being a youth when he was carried captive, he cannot be supposed now to have been less than ninety; and not long after this, it is reasonable to believe that he died. Old as he was, he set his heart to understand the former revelations which had been made to him, and particularly the vision of the ram and he-goat, as I think we may collect from the sequel: and for this purpose he prayed, and fasted, three weeks. His fasting and prayers had the desired effect; for an angel was sent, and said unto him, (ver. 12.) Fear not, Daniel; for from the first day that thou didst set thine heart to understand, and to chasten thyself before thy God, thy words are heard, and I am come for thy words. And whoever would attain the same ends, and excel in divine knowledge, must pursue the same means, and habituate himself to study, temperance, and devotion. The angel declares the design of his coming, (ver. 14.) Now I am come to make thee understand what shall befall thy people in the latter days; for yet the vision is for many days. This prophecy, therefore, contains the fate and fortune of the people of God for many years. As it was said before, (ver. 1.) The thing was true but the time appointed was long: and, consequently, this prophecy must extend farther than from the third year of Cyrus to the death of Antiochus Epiphanes, which was not¹ above three hundred and seventy years. In reality it comprehends many signal events after that time to the end of the world: but the types and figures of the things are not exhibited in this as in most of the other visions, and then expounded by the angel; but the angel relates the whole, and not by way of vision, but only by narration, informs Daniel of that which is noted in the Scripture of Truth. (ver. 21.) I will shew thee that which is noted in the Scripture of Truth, as if future events were noted in a book before God: and this prophecy, being taken from the Scripture of Truth, is therefore deserving of our strictest attention; and we may depend upon the certainty of all the particulars contained therein, if we can but rightly understand and expound them.

¹ The third year of Cyrus was A.M. 3470, before Christ 534. Antiochus Epiphanes died A.M. 3840, before Christ 164. See Usher, Prideaux, &c.

The angel first prophesies of the Persian empire, which was then subsisting. Behold, there shall stand up yet three kings in Persia; and the fourth shall be far richer than they all; and by his strength, through his riches, he shall stir up all against the realm of Grecia. (xi. 2.) There shall stand up yet, that is after Cyrus, the founder of the empire, who was then reigning, Three kings in Persia; these were Cambyses, the son of Cyrus; Smerdis, the Magian, who pretended to be another son of Cyrus, but was really an impostor; and Darius, the son of Hystaspes, who married the daughter of Cyrus. And the fourth shall be far richer than they all. The fourth after Cyrus was Xerxes, the son and successor of Darius; of whom Justin.¹ truly remarks, “If you consider this king, you may praise his riches, not the general; of which there was so great abundance in his kingdom, that when rivers were dried up by his army, yet his wealth remained unexhausted.” Pythius, the Lydian,² was at that time the richest subject in the world. He generously entertained Xerxes and all his army, and proffered him two thousand talents of silver, and three millions nine hundred and ninety-three thousand pieces of gold, with the stamp of Darius, towards defraying the charges of the war. But Xerxes was so far from wanting any supplies, that he rewarded Pythius for his liberality, and presented him with seven thousand darics, to make up his number a complete round sum of four millions. Each of these darics³ was worth better than a guinea of our money. And by his strength, through his riches, he shall stir up all, both subjects and allies, against the realm of Grecia. Xerxes' expedition into Greece is one of the most memorable adventures in ancient history. Herodotus affirms, that⁴ Xerxes, in raising his army, searched every place of the continent,

¹ Si regem spectes, divitias, non ducem laudes; quarum tanta copia in regno ejus fuit, ut cum flumina multitudine consumerentur, opes tamen regiæ superessent. [Translated in the text.] Justin. Lib. ii. cap. x.

² Herod. Lib. vii. sect. xxvii. &c. p. 395. Edit. Gale.

³ Bernard de ponderibus et mensuris antiquis, p. 171. Prideaux, Connect. Part i. Book ii. Anno 538. Darius the Mede I.

⁴ Καὶ Ξέρξης τοῦ στρατοῦ οὕτω ἐπάγεσιν ποιέεται, χώρον πάντα ἐρευνῶν τῆς ἡπείρου. Xerxes autem ita copias contraxit, ut omnem continentis locum scrutaretur. —στόλων γὰρ τῶν ἡμεῖς ἴδμεν πολλῶ δὴ μέγιστος οὗτος ἐγένετο. nam omnium quos novimus exercituum hic multo maximus extitit.—τί γὰρ οὐκ ἤγαγε ἐκ τῆς Ἀσίας and it was the greatest army that ever was brought into the field; for what nation was there, says he, that Xerxes led not out of Asia into Greece? Herodotus lived in that age, and he ¹recounts, with great exactness, the various nations of which Xerxes' army was composed, and computes that the whole number of horse and foot, by land and sea, out of Asia, and out of Europe, soldiers and followers of the camp, amounted to five millions, two hundred and eighty-three thousand, two hundred and twenty men. Nor was Xerxes content with stirring up the east, but was for stirring up ²the west likewise, and engaged the Carthaginians in his alliance, that while he with his army overwhelmed Greece, they might fall upon the Greek colonies in Sicily and Italy: and the Carthaginians, for this purpose, not only raised all the forces they could in Africa, but also hired a great number of mercenaries in Spain, and Gaul, and Italy; so that their army consisted of three hundred thousand men, and their fleet of two hundred ships. Thus did Xerxes stir up all against the realm of Grecia; and after him no mention is made of any other king of Persia. "It is to be noted, ³saith Jerome, that the prophet having enumerated four kings of the Persians, after Cyrus, slippeth over nine, and passeth to Alexander; for the prophetic spirit did not care to follow the order of history, but only to touch upon the most famous events." Xerxes was the principal author of the long wars and inveterate hatred between the Grecians and Persians; and as he was the last king of Persia who invaded Greece, he is mentioned last. The Grecians then, in their turn, invaded Asia: and Xerxes' expedition being the most memorable on one side, as Alexander's was on the other, the reigns of these two are not improperly connected together.

Alexander is thus characterized, (ver. 3.) And a mighty king shall stand up, that shall rule with great dominion, and do according to his will. That Alexander was a mighty king and conqueror; that he ruled with great dominion, not only over Greece and the whole Persian empire, but likewise added India to his conquests; and that he did according to his will, none daring, not even his friends, to contradict and oppose him, or if they did, like Clitus and Callisthenes, paying for it with their lives; are facts too well known to require any particular proof or illustration.

But his kingdom was soon to be broken and divided; (ver. 4.) And when he shall stand up, his kingdom shall be broken, and shall be divided towards the four winds of heaven; and not to his posterity, nor according to his dominion which he ruled: for his kingdom shall ἔθνος ἐπὶ τὴν Ἑλλάδα Ξέρξης; quam enim ex Asiâ gentem in Græciam non adduxit Xerxes? [Translated in the text.] Herod. Lib. vii. sect. xx. xxi. p. 393. Edit. Gale.

¹ Herod. ibid. sect. lx. &c. clxxxiv. &c.

² Diod. Sic. Lib. xi. in initio.

³ Notandum quod quatuor post Cyrum regibus Persarum enumeratis, novem præterierit, et transierit ad Alexandrum. Non enim curæ fuit spiritui prophetali historiæ ordinem sequi; sed præclara quæque perstringere. [Translated in the text.] Hieron. in locum, col. 1121. Edit. Benedict.

be plucked up, even for others besides those. These particulars were in good measure suggested before, (viii. 8. 22.) He waxed very great, and when he was strong, the great horn was broken; and for it came up four notable ones toward the four winds of heaven. Now that being broken, whereas four stood up for it, four kingdoms shall stand up out of the nation, but not in his power. Alexander died in Babylon, ¹ having lived only thirty-two years and eight months, of which he reigned twelve years and eight months. In so short a time did this sun of glory rise and set: and in the space of about fifteen years afterwards his family and posterity became extinct, and chiefly by the means of Cassander. It was soon after Alexander's death, that his wife Statira, the daughter of Darius, ² was murdered out of jealousy by his other wife, Roxana; and her body was thrown into a well, and earth cast upon it. His natural brother, Aridæus, who succeeded him in the throne by the name of Philip, ³ was, together with his wife Eurydice, killed by the command of Olympias, the mother of Alexander, after he had borne the title of king six years and some months: and not long after ⁴ Olympias herself was slain, in revenge, by the soldiers of Cassander. Alexander Ægus, the son of Alexander, by Roxana, as soon as he was born, was joined in the title of king with Philip Aridæus; and when he had attained to the fourteenth year of his age, ⁵ he and his mother were privately murdered in the castle of Amphipolis by order of Cassander. In the second year after this, ⁶ Hercules, the other son of Alexander, by Barsine, the widow of Memnon, was also with his mother privately murdered by Polysperchon, induced thereto by the great offers made to him by Cassander. Such was the miserable end of Alexander's family: and then the governors made themselves kings, each in his province, from which title they had abstained ⁷ as long as any just heir of Alexander was surviving. Thus was Alexander's kingdom broken and divided, not to his posterity, but was plucked up, even for others beside those: and it was divided towards the four winds of heaven; for four of his captains, as it hath been shown in former dissertations, prevailed over the rest, and Cassander reigned in

¹ ἐβίω δὲ δύο καὶ τριάκοντα ἔτη, καὶ τοῦ τρίτου μῆνας ἐπέλαβεν ὀκτώ, ὡς λέγει Ἀριστοβούλος· ἐβασίλευσε δὲ δώδεκα ἔτη, καὶ τοὺς ὀκτώ μῆνας τούτους. Vixit annos XXXII, menses VIII, ut auctor est Aristobulus. Regnavit annos XII, menses VIII. [He lived two and thirty years, and eight months of the thirty-third year, as Aristobulus says. And he reigned twelve years, and these eight months.] Arrian, Lib. vii. cap. xxviii. p. 309. Edit. Gronov.

² Plutarch in fine Vit. Alex. p. 707. Edit. Paris. 1624.

³ Diod. Sic. Lib. xix. p. 676. Edit. Steph. p. 660. Tom. II. Edit. Rhod. Justin. Lib. xiv. cap. v.

⁴ Diod. Sic. ibid. p. 698, 699. Edit. Steph. p. 694. Tom. II. Edit. Rhod. Justin. Lib. xiv. cap. vi. Pausanias Bæot. sive Lib. ix. p. 725. Edit. Kuhnii.

⁵ Diod. Sic. ibid. p. 728. Edit. Steph. p. 739. Tom. II. Edit. Rhod. Justin. Lib. xv. cap. ii. Pausanias, ibid.

⁶ Diod. Sic. Lib. xx. p. 746. Edit. Steph. p. 767. Tom. II. Edit. Rhod. Justin. ibid. Pausanias, ibid.

⁷ — quoad Alexandro justus hæres fuit. [Translated in the text.] Justin. ibid.

Greece and the west, Lysimachus in Thrace and the north, Ptolemy in Egypt and the south, and Seleucus in Syria and the east.

But though the kingdom of Alexander was divided into four principal parts, yet only two of them have a place allotted in this prophecy, Egypt and Syria. These two were by far the greatest and most considerable: and these two at one time were, in a manner, the only remaining kingdoms of the four; the ¹ kingdom of Macedon having been conquered by Lysimachus and annexed to Thrace; and ² Lysimachus again having been conquered by Seleucus, and the kingdoms of Macedon and Thrace annexed to Syria. These two likewise continued distinct kingdoms, after the others were swallowed up by the power of the Romans. But there is a more proper and peculiar reason for enlarging upon these two particularly; ³ because Judea lying between them was sometimes in the possession of the kings of Egypt, and sometimes of the kings of Syria; and it is the purpose of Holy Scripture to interweave only so much of foreign affairs as hath some relation to the Jews: and it is in respect of their situation to Judea, that the kings of Egypt and Syria are called the kings of the south and the north. And the king of the south shall be strong, (ver. 5.) and one of his princes, that is, of Alexander's princes, and he shall be strong above him. There is manifestly either some redundance, or some defect ⁴ in the Hebrew copy; which should be rendered as it is ⁵ by the Seventy, And the king of the south shall be strong, and one of his princes shall be strong above him: or perhaps may better be rendered thus; And the king of the south shall be strong, and one of his princes; and the king of the north shall be strong above him, and have dominion: his dominion shall be a great dominion. The king of the south was indeed very strong; for ⁶ Ptolemy had annexed Cyprus, Phœnicia, Caria, and many islands, and cities, and regions in Egypt, as Jerome here

¹ Justin. Lib. xvi. cap. iii. Plutarch. in Pyrrho, p. 390. Edit. Paris. 1624. Pausanias in Attic. sive Lib. i. cap. x. p. 24. Edit. Kuhnii.

² Justin. Lib. xvii. cap. i. et ii. Appian. de Bell. Syr. p. 128. Edit. Steph. 207. Edit. Tollii. Memnonis Excerpta apud Photium, cap. ix. p. 714. Edit. Rothom. 1653.

³ Idcirco autem cætera regna dimittens, Macedoniæ videlicet et Asiæ, tantum de Ægypti et Syriæ narrant regibus: quia in medio Judæa posita, nunc ab illis, nunc ab istis regibus tenebatur. Et scripturæ sanctæ propositum est, non externam absque Judæis historiam texere; sed eam quæ Israeli populo copulata est. [Therefore neglecting the other kingdoms, that is, of Macedon and Asia, he only speaks concerning the sovereigns of Egypt and Syria: because as Judea was situated between them, it sometimes was possessed by the one, and sometimes by the other. And the design of the Holy Scriptures is not to give a history of foreign affairs as detached from that of the Jews, but such as is connected with the people of Israel.] Hieron. in locum, col. 1122. Edit. Benedict.

⁴ Either the י in יחזק is redundant, or the words הצפון מלך are wanting.

⁵ Καὶ εἰς τῶν ἀρχόντων αὐτοῦ ἐνισχύσει ἐπ' αὐτόν. [And one of his princes shall be strong above him.] Sept.

⁶ —ad Ægyptum adjecebat Cyprum, Phœnicen, Cariam, aliasque insulas et regiones, ut hic ex antiquis commemorat Hieronymus. [Translated in the text.] Grot. The words in Jerome are, et multas insulas urbesque et regiones. [Many islands, and cities, and regions.]

commemorates out of the ancients. He had likewise enlarged the bounds of his empire, as ¹Justin testifies, by the acquisition of Cyrene, and was now become so great, that he was in a condition not so much to fear, as to be feared, by his enemies. But still the king of the north, or Seleucus Nicator, was strong above him; for having annexed, as we have seen, the kingdoms of Macedon and Thrace to the crown of Syria, he was become master of three parts out of four of Alexander's dominions. All historians agree in representing him not only as the longest liver of Alexander's successors, but likewise as ²the conqueror of the conquerors. Appian in particular ³enumerates the nations which he subdued, and the cities which he built, and affirms that, after Alexander, he possessed the largest part of Asia; for all was subject to him from Phrygia up to the river Indus, and beyond it: and ⁴afterwards he denominates him expressly, "the greatest king after Alexander."

Seleucus Nicator, ⁵having reigned seven months after the death of Lysimachus, over the kingdoms of Macedon, Thrace, and Syria, was basely murdered; and to him succeeded in the throne of Syria his son Antiochus Soter, and to Antiochus Soter succeeded his son Antiochus Theus. At the same time Ptolemy Philadelphus reigned in Egypt after his father, the first Ptolemy, the son of Lagus. There were frequent wars between the kings of Egypt and Syria. There were so particularly between Ptolemy Philadelphus, the second king of Egypt, and Antiochus, the third king of Syria. And in the end of years they shall join themselves together; for the king's daughter of the south shall come to the king of the north to make an agreement: but she shall not retain the power of the arm, neither shall he stand, nor his arm; but she shall be given up, and they that brought her, and he that begat her, and he that strengthened her in these times. (ver. 6.) And in the end of years, that is, after several years; for these wars lasted long, as ⁶Jerome reports out of the an-

¹ — terminos quoque imperii acquisitâ Cyrene urbe ampliaverat, factusque jam tantus erat, ut non tam timeret quam timendus ipse hostibus esset. [Translated in the text.] Justin. Lib. xiii. cap. vi.

² — victoremque victorum extitisse—[Translated in the text.] Justin. Lib. xvii. cap. ii.

³ Appian. de Bell. Syr. p. 123. Edit. Steph. p. 197. Edit. Tollii. ὡς ὥρισται τῷδε μάλιστα μετὰ Ἀλέξανδρον τῆς Ἀσίας τὸ πλεον. ἀπὸ γὰρ Φρυγίας ἐπὶ ποταμὸν Ἰνδὸν ἄνω, πάντα Σελεύκῳ κατήκουε· καὶ τὸν Ἰνδὸν περάσας, κ. τ. λ. quo excepto [Alexandro] nemo unquam plures terras in Asiâ tenuit: nam a Phrygiæ terminis Indum usque mediterranea Seleuco parebant omnia: et hoc quoque trajecto, &c. [Translated in the text.] Vide etiam, p. 201. Edit. Tollii.

⁴ — βασιλεῖα τῶν ἐπὶ Ἀλέξανδρῳ μέγιστον—regem post Alexandrum maximum.
[Translated in the text.] p. 128. Edit. Steph. p. 207. Edit. Tollii.

⁵ Quippe post menses admodum septem, &c. [Because after seven months, &c.] Justin.
Lib. xvii. cap. ii. sect. iv. p. 351. Edit. Grævii. Appian. de Bell. Syr.

⁶ Iste adversus Ptolemæum Philadelphum, qui secundus imperabat Egyptiis, gessit bella quam plurima: et totis Babylonis atque orientis viribus dimicavit. [He carried on war during many years against Ptolemy Philadelphus, the second king of the Egyptians, and employed the whole strength of Babylon and the east.] Hieron. Comment. in locum, col.
1123. Vol. iii. Edit. Benedict.

cients, and Antiochus Theus fought against Ptolemy Philadelphus with all the forces of Babylon and the east. They shall join themselves together, or shall associate themselves: At length they agreed to make peace, upon condition that ¹ Antiochus Theus should put away his former wife, Laodice, and her two sons, and should marry Berenice, the daughter of Ptolemy Philadelphus. For the king's daughter of the south shall come to the king of the north to make rights, or an agreement: and accordingly ² Ptolemy Philadelphus brought his daughter to Antiochus Theus, and with her an immense treasure, so that he received the appellation of the dowry-giver. But she shall not retain the power of the arm, that is, her interest and power with Antiochus; for ³ after some time, in a fit of love, he brought back his former wife, Laodice, with her children, to court again. Neither shall he stand, nor his arm, or his seed; for ⁴ Laodice, fearing the fickle temper of her husband, lest he should recall Berenice, caused him to be poisoned; and neither did his seed, by Berenice, succeed him in the kingdom, but Laodice contrived and managed matters so, as to fix her elder son, Seleucus Callinicus, on the throne of his ancestors. But she shall be given up; for Laodice, not content with poisoning her husband, ⁵ caused also Berenice to be murdered. And they that brought her; for her ⁶ Egyptian women and attendants, endeavouring to defend her, were many of them slain with her. And he that begat her, or rather, as it is in the margin, he whom she brought forth; for ⁷ the son was murdered, as well as the mother, by order of Laodice. And he that strengthened her in these times: her husband, Antiochus, as ⁸ Jerome conceives; or those who took her part and defended her; or rather her

¹ Volens itaque Ptolemæus Philadelphus post multos annos molestum finire certamen, filiam suam nomine Berenicen, Antiocho uxorem dedit; qui de priore uxore nomine Laodice, habebat duos filios, &c. [Ptolemy Philadelphus therefore being desirous to put an end to a contest, which had been for many years troublesome to him, gave his daughter named Berenice to Antiochus in marriage, who had two sons by his former wife Laodice, &c.] Hieron. ibid.

² Deduxitque eam usque Pelusium; et infinita auri et argenti millia, dotis nomine dedit: Unde φερνόφορος, id est dotalis appellatus est. [And he brought her to Pelusium, and gave with her as her dowry, an immense quantity of gold and silver: whence he was called φερνόφορος, that is, the "Dowry-giver."] Hieron. ibid.

³ — post multum temporis amore superatus, Laodicem cum liberis suis reduxit in regiam. [Translated in the text.] Hieron. ibid.

⁴ Quæ metuens ambiguum viri animum ne Berenicen reduceret, virum per ministros veneno interfecit, &c. [Who fearing the inconstancy of her husband, lest he should bring back Berenice, through the agency of her servants, destroyed her husband by poison.] Hieron. ibid. Appian. de Bell. Syr. p. 130. Edit. Steph. p. 211. Edit. Tollii. Valer. Maximus, Lib. ix. cap. xiv. Plin. Lib. vii. sect. x. Edit. Harduini.

⁵ Hieron. ibid. Appian. ibid. Polyæni Strat. Lib. viii. cap. i.

⁶ Hieron. ibid. αἱ δὲ ἀπὸ αὐτῆς γυναῖκες ὑπερασπίζουσαι προσεπίθανον αἱ πλείους. Quæ vero circa eam erant mulieres defensionem parantes, plurimæ ceciderunt. [Translated in the text.] Polyænus, ibid. p. 801. Edit. Maasviciii.

⁷ Hieron. ibid. Appian. ibid. Polyæn. ibid. Justin. Lib. xxvii. cap. i.

⁸ Rex quoque Antiochus qui confortabat eam, hoc est, per quem poterat prævalere, veneno uxoris occisus est. [King Antiochus also, who strengthened her, that is, by whom she was able to retain power, was slain by his wife's poison.] Hieron. ibid.

father, who died a little before, and was so very fond of her, ¹ that he took care continually to send her fresh supplies of the water of the Nile, thinking it better for her to drink of that than of any other river, as Polybius relates.

But such wickedness should not pass unpunished and unrevenged. But out of a branch of her root shall one stand up in his estate, or rather, as it is translated ² in the Vulgar Latin, out of a branch of her root shall stand up a plant; and he shall come with an army, and shall enter into the fortress, or the fenced cities of the king of the north, and shall deal, shall act against them, and shall prevail: And shall also carry captives into Egypt, their gods with their princes, or rather ³ their gods with their molten images, and with their precious vessels of silver and of gold, and he shall continue more years than the king of the north, or more literally, he shall continue some years after the king of the north. So the king of the south shall come into his kingdom, and shall return into his own land, (ver. 7—9.) This branch, which sprung out of the same root with Berenice, was Ptolemy Euergetes, her brother, who no sooner succeeded his father, Ptolemy Philadelphus, in the kingdom, than ⁴ he came with a great army, and entered into the provinces of the king of the north, that is, of Seleucus Callinicus, who with his mother Laodice, reigned in Syria: and he acted against them, and prevailed so far, that he took Syria and Cilicia, and the upper parts beyond Euphrates, and almost all Asia. And when he had heard that a sedition was raised in Egypt, he plundered the kingdom of Seleucus, and took forty thousand talents of silver, and precious vessels, and images of the gods, two thousand and five hundred: among which were also those which Cambyses, after he had taken Egypt, had carried into Persia. And

¹ Καὶ ὁ τῆς Αἰγύπτου δὲ βασιλεὺς δεύτερος, ὁ Φιλάδελφος ἐπὶ κλην, ἐκδοὺς τὴν αὐτοῦ θυγάτηρα Βερενίκην Ἀντιόχῳ τῷ Συρίας βασιλεῖ, ἐν ἐμπειρίᾳ εἶχε πέμπειν αὐτῇ τὸ ἀπὸ τοῦ Νείλου ὕδωρ, ἵνα μόνου τούτου τοῦ ποταμοῦ ἡ παῖς πίνῃ, ὥς ἱστορεῖ Πτολεμαῖος. Ptolemæus secundus Ægypti rex, cognomine Philadelphus, cum filiam Berenicen Antiocho regi Syriæ nuptum dedisset, mittendam ad ipsam Nili aquam sedulo curavit, ut eam solam gnata biberet, quod Polybius scripsit. [Ptolemy the Second, king of Egypt, surnamed Philadelphus, when he had given his daughter Berenice in marriage to Antiochus the king of Syria, was very careful to send the water of the Nile to her, that his child might drink of that only, as Polybius relates.] Athenæus, Lib. ii. p. 45. Edit. Casaubon.

² Et stabit de germine radicum ejus plantatio. [And from a branch of her roots shall a plant stand up.] Vulg.

³ Deos eorum et sculptilia. [Their gods and graven images.] Vulg. τοὺς θεοὺς αὐτῶν μετὰ τῶν χωνευτῶν αὐτῶν. [Their gods together with their molten images.] Sept. Deos eorum cum fusilibus eorum. [Their gods with their molten images.] Arab.

⁴ — de plantatione et de germine radicum ejus, eo quod esset germanus: et venit cum exercitu magno, et ingressus est provinciam regis aquilonis, id est Seleuci cognomento Callinici, qui cum matre Laodice regnabat in Syria; et abusus est eis, et obtinuit, in tantum ut Syriam caperet, et Ciliciam, superioresque partes trans Euphratem, et propemodum universam Asiam. Quumque audisset in Ægypto seditionem moveri, diripiens regnum Seleuci, quadraginta millia talentorum argenti tulit, et vasa pretiosa simulacraque deorum, duo millia quingenta: in quibus erant, et illa quæ Cambyses, captâ Ægypto, in Persas portaverat. Denique gens Ægyptiorum idololatriæ dedita, quia post multos annos deos eorum retulerat, Euergeten eum appellavit. [Translated in the text.] Hieron. ibid.

for thus restoring their gods after many years, the Egyptians, who were a nation much addicted to idolatry, complimented him with the title of Euergetes, or the benefactor. This is Jerome's account, extracted from ancient historians: but there are authors still extant, who confirm several of the same particulars. Appian informs us, that ¹ Laodice having killed Antiochus, and after him, both Berenice and her child, Ptolemy, the son of Philadelphus, to revenge these murders invaded Syria, slew Laodice, and proceeded as far as to Babylon. From Polybius we learn, that ² Ptolemy, surnamed Euergetes, being greatly incensed at the cruel treatment of his sister Berenice, marched with an army into Syria, and took the city of Seleucia, which was kept for some years afterwards by the garrisons of the kings of Egypt. Thus did he enter into the fortress of the king of the north. Polyænus affirms, that ³ Ptolemy made himself master of all the country, from mount Taurus as far as to India, without war or battle: but he ascribes it, by mistake, to the father instead of the son. Justin asserts, that ⁴ if Ptolemy had not been recalled by a domestic sedition into Egypt, he would have possessed the whole kingdom of Seleucus. So the king of the south came into the kingdom of the north, and then returned into his own land. He likewise continued more years than the king of the north: for Seleucus Callinicus ⁵ died in exile, of a fall from his horse, and Ptolemy Euergetes ⁶ survived him about four or five years.

But his sons, that is, the sons of the king of the north, should endeavour to vindicate and avenge the cause of their father and their country. But his sons shall be stirred up, and shall assemble a multitude of great forces; and one shall certainly come, and overflow, and pass through; then shall he return, and be stirred up even to his fortress, (ver. 10.) The sons of Seleucus Callinicus were ⁷ Seleucus

¹ Καὶ αὐτὸν ἔκτεινε Λαοδίκη, καὶ ἐπ' ἐκείνον Βερενίκην τε καὶ τὸ Βερενίκης βρέφος. καὶ Πτολεμαῖος ὁ τοῦ Φιλαδέλφου ταῦτα τινύμενος, Λαοδίκην τε ἔκτεινε, καὶ ἐς Συρίαν ἐνέβαλε, καὶ ἐς Βαβυλῶνα ἔλασε. Laodice ipsum interfecit, et mox Berenicem cum infantulo. Eam injuriam Ptolemæus Philadelphii filius, ut ulcisceretur, de Laodice sumpsit supplicium, et ingressus Syriam, Babylonem usque pervenit. [Translated in the text.] Appian. de Bell. Syr. p. 130. Edit. Steph. p. 211. Edit. Tollii.

² Συνέβαινε γὰρ Σελευκίαν ἐπὶ τότε κατέχεσθαι φρουραῖς ὑπὸ τῶν ἐξ Αἰγύπτου βασιλέων, ἐκ τῶν κατὰ τὸν Εὐεργέτην ἐπικληθέντα Πτολεμαῖον καιρῶν, ἐν οἷς ἐκείνος διὰ τὰ Βερενίκης συμπτώματα, καὶ τὴν ὑπὲρ ἐκείνης ὀργὴν, στρατεύσας εἰς τοὺς κατὰ Συρίαν τόπους, ἐγκρατῆς ἐγένετο ταύτης τῆς πόλεως. Adhuc illâ tempestate regum Ægypti præsidii tenebatur Seleucia, jam inde ab illis temporibus, cum Ptolemæus cognomento Euergeta, propter casum Berenicæ Seleuco regi iratus, bello Syriæ illato, eâ urbe est potitus. [For even then Seleucia was held by garrisons of the kings of Egypt, from the time that Ptolemy, surnamed Euergetes, incensed on account of the cruel treatment of Berenice, had carried war into Syria, and made himself master of that city.] Polyb. Lib. v. p. 402, 403. Edit. Casaubon.

³ Ἀπὸ τοῦ Ταύρου μέχρι τῆς Ἰνδικῆς χωρὶς πολέμου καὶ μάχης ἐκράτησε. a Tauro usque ad Indiam absque bello ac pugnâ superavit. [Translated in the text.] Polyæni Strat. Lib. viii. cap. l. p. 802. Edit. Maasvicii.

⁴ Qui nisi in Ægyptum domesticâ seditione revocatus esset, totum regnum Seleuci occupasset. [Translated in the text.] Justin. Lib. xxvii. cap. i.

⁵ Justin. Lib. xxvii. cap. iii.

⁶ See Usher, Prideaux, Blair, and other chronologers.

⁷ Post fugam ac mortem Seleuci Callinici, duo filii ejus Seleucus cognomento Ceraunus, and Antiochus; the elder of whom, Seleucus, succeeded him in the throne, and to distinguish him from others of the same name, was denominated Ceraunus, or the thunderer. Where, by the way, one cannot help observing the ridiculous vanity of princes in assuming or receiving such pompous appellations without deserving them. Seleucus, the father, was surnamed Callinicus, or the famous conqueror, though he was so far from gaining any considerable victory, that he was shamefully beaten by the Egyptians in the west, and was made a prisoner by the Parthians in the east. In like manner Seleucus, the son, was called Ceraunus, or the thunderer, though he was so far from performing any thing worthy of the name, that he was a poor and weak prince in all respects, in mind and body and estate. Great and splendid titles, when improperly applied, are rather a satire and insult upon the persons than any honour or commendation. Seleucus Ceraunus was indeed stirred up, and assembled a multitude of great forces, in order to recover his father's dominions; but ¹ being destitute of money, and unable to keep his army in obedience, he was poisoned by two of his generals, after an inglorious reign of two or three years. Upon his decease his brother Antiochus Magnus was proclaimed king, who was more deserving of the title of great, than Seleucus was of that of the thunderer. The prophet's expression is very ² remarkable, that his sons should be stirred up, and assemble a multitude of great forces; but then the number is changed, and only one should certainly come, and overflow, and pass through. Accordingly, ³ Antiochus came with a great army, retook Seleucia, and by the means of Theodotus, the Ætolian, recovered Syria, making himself master of some places by treaty, and of others by force of arms. Then, ⁴ after a truce, et Antiochus qui appellatus est Magnus, &c. [After the flight and death of Seleucus Callinicus, his two sons, Seleucus, surnamed Ceraunus, and Antiochus, who was called the Great, &c.] Hieron. in locum, col. 1124. Vol. III. Edit. Benedict. Polyb. Lib. iv. p. 315. Edit. Casaubon. Appian. de Bell. Syr. p. 131. Edit. Steph. p. 211. Edit. Tollii.

¹ Σελεύκῳ μὲν δὴ, ἀσθενεῖ τε ὄντι καὶ πενομένῳ, καὶ δυσπειθῇ τὸν στρατὸν ἔχοντι, ἐπεβούλευσαν οἱ φίλοι διὰ φαρμάκων, καὶ ἐς ἔτη δύο μόνῳ ἐβασίλευσεν. Seleucus nec valetudine firmus nec opibus, exercitum in officio continere non potuit, veneno sublatus purpuratorum perfidiâ, post exactum regni annum alterum. [Seleucus being weak in body, and destitute of money, and unable to keep his army in subjection, was poisoned by his generals. He reigned only two years.] Appian, ibid. Quumque Seleucus major frater tertio anno imperii esset occisus in Phrygiâ, per dolum Nicanoris et Apaturii, &c. [And when Seleucus the elder brother was slain in Phrygia, in the third year of his reign, by the contrivance of Nicanor and Apaturius, &c.] Hieron. ibid. Polyb. ibid.

² Et propterea nunc infer, quod duo quidem filii provocati sunt, et congregaverunt multitudinem exercituum plurimorum: sed quod unus Antiochus Magnus venerit de Babylone in Syriam, &c. [And therefore he now introduces the expression, that two sons being stirred up, should collect an exceeding great army, but that only one of them, Antiochus the Great, should come from Babylon into Syria, &c.] Hieron. ibid.

³ Polyb. Lib. v. p. 403, &c. Hieron. ibid.

⁴ Polyb. ibid. p. 411, &c. Quumque pugnasset adversum duces ejus, imò proditione Theodoti obtinisset Syriam, quæ per successionem jam a regibus Ægypti tenebatur, in tantam venit audaciam contemptâ luxuriâ Philopatoris—ut ultro Ægyptiis bellum conaretur inferre. [And when he had fought against his generals, nay, by the treachery of Theodotus, had gotten possession of Syria, which now for a long time had been in the hands of the kings of Egypt, he felt so bold, from the contempt wherein he held the luxury of wherein both sides treated of peace, but prepared for war, Antiochus returned, and overcame in battle Nicolaus, the Egyptian general, and had thoughts of invading Egypt itself.

The king of Egypt at that time was Ptolemy Philopator, who was ¹ advanced to the crown upon the death of his father, Euergetes, not long after Antiochus Magnus succeeded his brother in the throne of Syria. This Ptolemy was ² a most luxurious and vicious prince, but was roused at length by the near approach of danger. And the king of the south shall be moved with choler, and shall come forth and fight with him, even with the king of the north; and he shall set forth a great multitude, but the multitude shall be given into his hand. (ver. 11.) Ptolemy Philopator was no doubt moved with choler for the losses which he had sustained, and for the revolt of Theodotus and others. And he came forth; he ³ marched out of Egypt with a numerous army to oppose the enemy, and encamped not far from Raphia, which is the nearest town to Egypt from Rhinocorura. And there he fought with him, even with the king of the north; for thither likewise ⁴ came Antiochus with his army, and a memorable battle was fought by the two kings. And he, the king of the north, set forth a great multitude; Polybius hath ⁵ recited the various nations of which Antiochus's army was composed, and altogether it amounted to sixty-two thousand foot, six thousand horse, and one hundred and two elephants. But yet the multitude was given into his hand, that is, into the hand of the king of the south: for ⁶ Ptolemy obtained a complete victory; and of Antiochus's army Philopator,—that he thought of carrying the war into Egypt.] Hieron. ibid. Antiochus rex Syriæ, veteri inter se regnorum odio stimulante, repentino bello multas urbes ejus [Ptolemæi] oppressit, ipsamque Ægyptum aggreditur. [Antiochus, king of Syria, urged on by the old hatred subsisting between the two kingdoms, suddenly fell upon many of his [Ptolemy's] cities, and attacks Egypt itself.] Justin. Lib. xxx. cap. i.

¹ Ptolemæus in Can. Eusebius in Chron., Usher, Prideaux, and the chronologers.

² Polyb. Lib. v. p. 380, &c. Edit. Casaubon. Strabo, Lib. xvii. p. 796. Edit. Paris. 1620. p. 1146. Edit. Amstel. 1707. Plutarch, in Cleomene, p. 820. Edit. Paris. 1624. Justin. Lib. xxx. cap. i.

³ Polyb. ibid. p. 421, 422. Hieron. ibid.

⁴ Polyb. ibid. p. 423, &c. Strabo, Lib. xvi. p. 759. Edit. Paris. 1620. p. 1102. Edit. Amstel. 1707. Hieron. ibid.

⁵ Polyb. ibid. p. 421, 422. Καὶ τῆς μὲν Ἀντιόχου δυνάμεως τὸ πλῆθος ἦν, πεζοὶ μὲν ἑξακισμύριοι καὶ διασχιλιοί, σὺν δὲ τοῦτοις ἱππεῖς ἑξακισχιλιοί, θηρία δὲ δυοὶ πλείων τῶν ἑκατόν. Summa totius exercitus Antiochi; peditum duo et septuaginta [sexaginta] millia; equitum sex; elephantum duo supra centum. [And the multitude of Antiochus's army amounted to sixty-two thousand infantry, and six thousand cavalry, and an hundred and two elephants.]

⁶ ἦσαν δὲ οἱ τετελευτηκότες τῶν παρ' Ἀντιόχου, πεζοὶ μὲν οὐ πολλοὶ λείποντες μυρίων, ἱππεῖς δὲ πλείους τριακοσίων· ζωργεῖα δὲ ἑάλωσαν ὑπὲρ τοὺς τετρακισχιλίους.—τῶν δὲ παρὰ Πτολεμαίου, πεζοὶ μὲν εἰς χιλίους καὶ πεντακοσίους ἐτελεύτησαν, ἱππεῖς δὲ εἰς ἑπτακοσίους. Desideravit autem e suis Antiochus non multo pauciores decem millibus peditum: equites trecentos et eo plures: capti sunt vivi supra quatuor millia.—E Ptolemaicis occisi sunt pedites mille et quingenti: equites septingenti. [Translated in the text.] Polyb. ibid. p. 427. Initio ergo certamine juxta oppidum Raphiæ, quod in foribus Ægypti est, omnem Antiochus amisit exercitum, &c. [In a battle that was fought near the town of Raphia, which is in the borders of Egypt, Antiochus lost his whole army, &c.] Hieron. ibid.

there were slain not much fewer than ten thousand foot, more than three hundred horse, and above four thousand men were taken prisoners; whereas of Ptolemy's there were killed only fifteen hundred foot, and seven hundred horse. Upon this defeat¹ Raphia and the neighbouring towns contended who should be most forward to submit to the conqueror; and Antiochus was forced to retreat with his shattered army to Antioch, and from thence sent ambassadors to solicit a peace.

Ptolemy Philopator was more fortunate in gaining a victory than prudent in knowing how to make a proper advantage of it. And when he hath taken away the multitude, his heart shall be lifted up, and he shall cast down many ten thousands; but he shall not be strengthened by it. (ver. 12.) If Ptolemy had pursued the blow that he had given, it is² reasonably presumed that he might have deprived Antiochus of his kingdom: but his heart was lifted up by his success; being delivered from his fears, he now more freely indulged his lusts; and after a few menaces and complaints he granted peace to Antiochus, that he might be no more interrupted in the gratification of his appetites and passions. He had before³ murdered his father, and his mother, and his brother; and now⁴ he killed his wife, who was also his sister; and⁵ gave himself up entirely to the management of Agathoclea, his harlot, and her brother, Agathocles, who was his catamite, and their mother, Oenanthe, who was his bawd. And⁶ so, forgetful of all the greatness of his name and majesty, he consumed his days in feasting, and his nights in lewdness; and became not only the spectator, but the master and leader of all wickedness. And what availed it to have conquered his enemies, when he was thus overcome by his vices? he was so far from being strengthened by it, that even⁷ his own subjects, offended at his inglorious peace, and more inglorious life, rebelled against him. But the prophet, in this passage, alluded more particularly to the case of his own countrymen. After the retreat of Antiochus, Ptolemy⁸ visited the cities of Coele-Syria and Palestine, which had submitted to him; and among others, in his progress, he came to Jerusalem. He there offered sacrifices, and was desirous of entering

¹ Polyb. ibid. p. 427, 428. Quumque cessisset Syria, ad extremum fœdere, et quibusdam conditionibus pugna finita est. [And after Syria had submitted, the war at length was put an end to by a treaty, and on certain conditions.] Hieron. ibid.

² Justin. Lib. xxx. cap. i.—spoliassetque regno Antiochum, si fortunam virtute jussisset. [He would have deprived Antiochus of his kingdom, if his courage had co-operated with his good fortune.] Polyb. Lib. v. p. 428. Edit. Casaubon.

³ Justin. Lib. xxix. cap. i. Polyb. Lib. v. p. 380. 382.

⁴ Justin. Lib. xxx. cap. i. Polyb. Lib. xv. p. 719.

⁵ Plutarch in Cleomene, p. 820. Edit. Paris. 1624. Polyb. Lib. xv. passim. Justin. Lib. xxx. cap. i. et ii.

⁶ Atque ita omnem magnitudinem nominis ac majestatis oblitus, noctes in stupris, dies in conviviis consumit—nec jam spectator rex, sed magister nequitie. [Translated in the text.] Justin. ibid. cap. i.

⁷ Polyb. Lib. v. p. 444.

⁸ For these particulars the 3d book of Maccabees must be consulted.

into the holy of holies, contrary to the custom and religion of the place, being (as the ¹ writer of the third book of Maccabees says) greatly lifted up by pride and confidence. His curiosity was restrained with great difficulty, and he departed with heavy displeasure against the whole nation of the Jews. At his return, therefore, to Alexandria, he began a cruel persecution upon the Jewish inhabitants of that city, who had resided there from the time of Alexander, and enjoyed the privileges of the most favoured citizens. And he cast down many ten thousands; for it appears from ² Eusebius, that about this time forty thousand³ Jews were slain, or sixty thousand, as they are reckoned in Jerome's Latin interpretation. No king could be strengthened by the loss of such a number of useful subjects. The loss of so many Jews, and the rebellion of the Egyptians, added to the mal-administration of the state, must certainly very much weaken, and almost totally ruin the kingdom.

Peace was to continue between the two crowns of Egypt and Syria for some years, and then the king of the north should attempt another invasion. For the king of the north shall return, and shall set forth a multitude greater than the former, and shall certainly come, after certain years, (at the end of times, that is years) with a great army, and with much riches. (ver. 13.) The following events, you see, were not to take place till after certain years; and the peace continued between the two crowns ⁴ about fourteen years. In that time Ptolemy Philopator⁵ died of intemperance and debauchery, and was succeeded by his son, Ptolemy Epiphanes, a child of four or five years old. Antiochus too, ⁶ having taken and slain the rebel Achæus, and having ⁷ also reduced and settled the eastern parts in their obedience, was at leisure to prosecute any enterprise, and could not let slip so favourable an opportunity of extending his dominions. He had acquired great riches, and collected many forces in the eastern expedition; so that he was enabled to set forth a greater multitude than the former, and he doubted not to have an easy victory over an infant king. Polybius expressly informs us, that ⁸ from the king of Bactria, and from the king of India, he received so many elephants as made up his number one hundred and fifty, besides provisions and riches. Jerome, out of ancient authors, affirms that ⁹ he gathered together an incredible army out of the

¹ ὕβρει καὶ θρόσει μέγας ἐπηρμένον. [Translated in the text.] 3 Macc. ii. 21.

² Ἰουδαῖοι ληφθέντες, τεσσαράκοντα χιλιάδας ὀπλιτῶν ἀποβαλόμενοι. Eusebii Chron. p. 185. Victi Judæi: et XL millia armatorum ex numero eorum cæsa. Interprete Hieron. p. 143. [The Jews were overcome, and forty thousand armed men were slain.]

³ See Usher, Prideaux, and the chronologers.

⁴ Ptolem. in Canone, Eusebius, Justin. Lib. xxx. cap. ii. Hieron. &c.

⁵ Polyb. Lib. viii. p. 522, &c. Edit. Casaubon.

⁶ Polyb. Lib. x. et xi. Appian. de Bell. Syr. in principio.

⁷ Καὶ λαβὼν ἐλέφαντας, ὥστε γενέσθαι τοὺς ἅπαντας εἰς ἑκατὸν καὶ πενήκοντα. κ. τ. λ. Ibi quoque elephantos alios accepit, ut jam centum quinquaginta bestias haberet, &c. [And having procured elephants, so that altogether they amounted to an hundred and fifty, &c.] Polyb. Lib. xi. p. 652.

⁸ — Incredibilem de superioribus locis Babylonis exercitum congregavit. Et Ptolemæo countries beyond Babylon; and contrary to the league, he marched with his army, Ptolemy Philopator being dead, against his son, who was then four years old, and was called Ptolemy Epiphanes, or the illustrious. Justin also says, that ¹ Ptolemy Philopator, king of Egypt, being dead, in contempt of the childhood of his son, who being left heir to the kingdom was a prey even to his domestics, Antiochus, king of Syria, resolved to take possession of Egypt, as if the thing was as easily executed as resolved.

But Antiochus was not the only one who rose up against young Ptolemy. Others also confederated with him. And in those times there shall many stand up against the king of the south; also the robbers of thy people shall exalt themselves to establish the vision, but they shall fall. (ver. 14.) Agathocles² was in possession of the young king's person; and he was so dissolute and proud in the exercise of his power, that the provinces which before were subject to Egypt rebelled, and Egypt itself was disturbed by seditions; and the people of Alexandria rose up in a body against Agathocles, and caused him, and his sister, and mother, and their associates, to be put to death. Philip too³, the king of Macedon, entered into a league with Antiochus, to divide Ptolemy's dominions between them, and each to take the parts which lay nearest and most convenient to him. And this is the meaning, as ⁴ Jerome concludes, of the prophet's saying, that many shall rise up together against the king of the south. Also the robbers of thy people. It is literally ⁵ the sons of the breakers, the sons of the revolters, the factious and refractory ones, of thy people; for the Jews were at that time broken into factions, part adhering to the king of Egypt, and part to the king of Syria; but the majority were for breaking away from their alle-

Ptolemæus mortuo adversum filium ejus, qui tunc quatuor annorum erat, et vocabatur Ptolemæus Ἐπιφανής, rupto federe movit exercitum. [Translated in the text.] Hieron. in locum, col. 1124.

¹ Mortuo Ptolemæo Philopatore rege Ægypti, contemptâque parvuli filii ejus ætate, qui in spem regni relictus prædæ etiam domesticis erat, Antiochus rex Syriæ occupare Ægyptum statuit. [Translated in the text.] Justin. Lib. xxxi. cap. i.

² Polyb. Lib. xv. p. 712, &c. Edit. Casaubon. Tantæ enim dissolutionis et superbæ Agathocles fuit, ut subditæ prius Ægypto provinciæ rebellarent; ipsaque Ægyptus seditionibus vexaretur. [For Agathocles was so dissolute and proud, that the provinces formerly subject to Egypt rebelled, and Egypt itself was disturbed by seditions.] Hieron. ibid. Justin. Lib. xxx. cap. ii.

³ Philippus quoque rex Macedonum, et magnus Antiochus pace factâ, adversum Agathoclen et Ptolemæum Epiphanem dimicarent, sub hac conditione, ut proximas civitates regno suo singuli de regno Ptolemæi jungerent. [Philip also, the king of Macedon, and Antiochus the Great, entered into a confederacy to fight against Agathocles and Ptolemy Epiphanes, under this condition, that each of them should annex such parts of Ptolemy's dominions as lay nearest to their own dominions.] Hieron. ibid. Polyb. Lib. iii. p. 159. Lib. xv. p. 707. Justin. ibid.

⁴ Et hoc est quod nunc dicit, multos consurgere adversus regem Austri, Ptolemæum scilicet Epiphanem, qui erat ætate puerili. [This is what the prophet means by saying now, that many rise up together against the king of the south, namely, against Ptolemy Epiphanes, who was then in a state of childhood.] Hieron. ibid.

⁵ וְכַנֵּי פְרִיצֵי עַמֶּךָ. [Translated in the text.] Vide 1 Sam. xxv. 10.

giance to Ptolemy. In the Vulgate it is ¹ translated, the sons also of the prevaricators of thy people; in the Septuagint, the sons of the pestilent ones of thy people. What shall they do? shall exalt themselves to establish the vision; shall revolt from Ptolemy, and thereby shall contribute greatly, without their knowing it, towards the accomplishment of this prophecy concerning the calamities which shall be brought upon the Jewish nation by the succeeding kings of Syria. That the Jews revolted from Ptolemy is evident from what Jerome affirms, that ² the provinces which before were subject to Egypt rebelled: and ³ heathen authors intimate, that Antiochus took possession of the cities of Cœle-Syria and Palestine without any opposition, at least they do not mention any. But they shall fall; for ⁴ Scopas came with a powerful army from Ptolemy, and Antiochus being engaged in other parts, soon reduced the cities of Cœle-Syria and Palestine to their former obedience. He subdued the Jews in the winter season, placed a garrison in the castle of Jerusalem, and returned with great spoils to Alexandria; for he was ⁵ noted above all men for his avarice and rapacity. The expression of Josephus is remarkable, that ⁶ the Jews submitted to Scopas by force, but to Antiochus they submitted willingly.

It was in the absence of Antiochus that these advantages were obtained by the arms of Egypt, but his presence soon turned the scale, and changed the whole face of affairs. So the king of the north shall come, and cast up a mount, and take the most fenced cities, or the city of munitions, and the arms of the south shall not withstand, neither his chosen people, neither shall there be any strength to withstand. But he that cometh against him shall do according to his own will, and none shall stand before him: and he shall stand in the glorious land, which by his hand shall be consumed, (ver. 15 and 16.) Antiochus ⁷ being willing to recover Judea,

¹ Filii quoque prævaricatorum populi tui. Vulg. οἱ υἱοὶ τῶν λοιμῶν τοῦ λαοῦ σου. [Translated in the text.] Sept.

² — ut subditæ prius Ægypto provinciæ rebellarent. [Translated in the text.] Hieron. ibid.

³ Polyb. Lib. iii. p. 159. Appian. de Bell. Syr. in principio.

⁴ Hieron. col. 1125. Polyb. apud Joseph. et Joseph. Antiq. Lib. xii. cap. iii. sect. iii. p. 520, 521. Edit. Hudson.

⁵ Polyb. Lib. xvii. p. 773.

⁶ πολεμούμενον γὰρ αὐτῷ προσέθετο, oppugnata enim, in ejus partes concessit. [For they surrendered to him, being subdued in war.] ἐκουσίως αὐτῷ προσέθεντο Ἰουδαῖοι. Judæi ultro deditionem fecerunt. [The Jews spontaneously submitted to him.] Joseph. ibid.

⁷ Antiochus enim volens Judæam recuperare, et Syriæ urbes plurimas, Scopam ducem Ptolemæi juxta fontes Jordanis, ubi nunc Paneas condita est, inito certamine fugavit, et cum decem millibus armatorum obsedit clausum in Sidone. Ob quem liberandum misit Ptolemæus duces inclytos Eropum et Menoclem, et Damoxenum. Sed obsidionem solvere non potuit: donec fame superatus Scopas manus dedit, et nudus cum sociis dimissus est. [For Antiochus, desirous of recovering Judea, and very many cities in Syria, in a battle near the fountains of Jordan, where the town of Paneas now stands, put to flight Scopas, Ptolemy's general; and shut him up in Sidon with ten thousand of his men, and besieged him there. To deliver him, Ptolemy sent Eropus, Menocles, and Damoxenus, three illusand the cities of Coele-Syria and Palestine, which Scopas had taken, came again into those parts. Scopas was sent again to oppose him, and Antiochus fought with him near the sources of the river Jordan, destroyed a great part of his army, and pursued him to Sidon, where he shut him up with ten thousand men, and closely besieged him. Three famous generals were sent from Egypt to raise the siege; but they could not succeed, and at length Scopas was forced by famine to surrender upon the hard conditions of having life only granted to him and his men; they were obliged to lay down their arms, and were sent away stript and naked. This event, I conceive, was principally intended by his casting up a mount, and taking the city of munitions; for Sidon was an exceeding strong city in its situation and fortifications. But if we take the phrase more generally, as our translators understand it, Antiochus, after the success of this battle and of this siege, reduced other countries and took other fenced cities, which are mentioned by ¹ Polybius, and recited by Jerome out of the Greek and Roman historians. The arms of the south could not withstand him, neither his chosen people, neither Scopas, nor the other great generals, nor the choicest troops who were sent against him: but he did according to his own will, and none was able to stand before him; for he soon ² rendered himself master of all Coele-Syria and Palestine. Among others ³ the Jews also readily submitted to him, went forth in solemn procession to meet him, received him splendidly into their city, supplied him with plenty of provisions for all his army and elephants, and assisted him in besieging the garrison, which Scopas had left in the citadel. Thus he stood in the glorious land, and his power was established in Judea. Which by his hand shall be consumed: so this passage is generally understood and translated, and commentators hereupon observe that ⁴ Josephus relates, that, “Antiochus the Great reign-trious generals, but they were unable to raise the siege. At length Scopas, overcome by famine, surrendered, and being stript naked, was suffered to depart with his companions.] Hieron. ibid. Joseph. ibid. Valesii Excerpta ex Polyb. p. 77, &c.

¹ Polyb. apud Joseph. ibid. Hieron. ibid.

² Liv. Lib. xxxiii. cap. xix. Justin. Lib. xxxi. cap. i. Polyb. Legat. lxxii. p. 893.

³ Joseph. ibid.

⁴ Τοὺς γὰρ Ἰουδαίους, ἐπ' Ἀντιόχου τοῦ Μεγάλου βασιλεύοντος τῆς Ἀσίας, ἔτυχεν αὐτοὺς τε πολλὰ ταλαιπωρῆσαι τῆς γῆς αὐτῶν κακονμένης, καὶ τοὺς τὴν Κοίλην Συρίαν νεμομένους. πολεμοῦντος γὰρ αὐτοῦ πρὸς τὸν Εὐπάτορα Πτολεμαῖον, καὶ πρὸς τὸν υἱὸν αὐτοῦ Πτολεμαῖον, τὸν κληθέντα Ἐπιφανῆ, κακοπαθεῖν συνέβαιεν αὐτοῖς, καὶ νικῶντος καὶ πταίοντος ταῦτα πάσχειν. ὥστ' οὐδὲν ἀπέλειπον χεимаζομένης νέως, καὶ πονουμένης ἐκατέρωθεν ὑπὸ τοῦ κλύδωνος, μεταξὺ τῆς εὐπραγίας τῆς Ἀντιόχου, καὶ τῆς ἐπὶ θάτερον αὐτοῦ τροπῆς τῶν πραγμάτων κείμενοι. Regnante in Asia Antiocho Magno, accidit ut tum Judæi terrâ eorum vastatâ, tum qui Cœlen-Syriam incolebant, multa adversa paterentur. Eo enim belligerante adversus Ptolemæum Eupatorem, [alibi constanter Philopatorem eum vocat] et ejus filium cognomine Epiphanem, contigit illis, ut si is superior fuerit, affligerentur, si inferior, plane eadem paterentur: adeo ut haud dissimiles essent navi in tempestate, fluctibus utrinque vexata, ut qui in medio jacerent, dum et Antiocho res prospere cederent et in contrarias partes mutarentur. [“While Antiochus the Great was reigning in Asia, both the Jews and the inhabitants of Cœle-Syria, by the laying waste of their countries, suffered many things. For when he carried on war against Ptolemy Eupator, [every where else he calls him Ptolemy Philo-

ing in Asia, the Jews, their country being wasted, suffered many things, as well as the inhabitants of Coele-Syria. For Antiochus, warring against Ptolemy Philopator, and against his son Ptolemy Epiphanes, it was their fate to suffer, whether he was conqueror, or was beaten, so that they were like a ship tost in a tempest, and lying between both were sure to suffer, whichever side prevailed." But then they could not be said to be consumed by the hand of Antiochus particularly; they were consumed as much or more by Scopas: and the word is capable of another interpretation, which agrees as well with the truth of the Hebrew, and better with the truth of history. It may be translated, Which shall be perfected, or prosper, or flourish, in his hand. The original will well admit of this sense, and the event confirms it. For Antiochus, to reward and encourage the Jews in their fidelity and obedience to him, ¹ gave order that their city should be repaired, and the dispersed Jews should return and inhabit it; that they should be supplied with cattle and other provisions for sacrifices; that they should be furnished with timber and other materials for finishing and adorning the temple; that they should live all according to the laws of their country; that the priests and elders, the scribes and levites, should be exempted from the capitation and other taxes; that those who then inhabited the city, or should return to it within a limited time, should be free from all tribute for three years, and the third part of their tribute should be remitted to them for ever after; and also that as many as had been taken and forced into servitude, should be released, and their substance and goods be restored to them. Where Grotius remarks, ² that what is said about finishing and completing the temple, answers exactly to the word perfected or consummated in the Hebrew. Thus also ³ the Seventy translate it, and thus ⁴ Theodoret explains it: "And it shall be perfected by his hand, that is, it shall prosper; for so likewise Josephus hath taught us in his history, that the Jews of their own accord having received Antiochus, were greatly honoured by him."

Antiochus the Great, like other ambitious princes, the more he pator,] and against his son surnamed Epiphanes, it happened, that whether he was conqueror or conquered, they suffered alike; so that they were like a ship at sea in a storm, tossed by the waves on both sides, for whether Antiochus prospered, or met with a reverse, their sufferings were the same." Joseph. ibid.

¹ Vide Epist. Antiochi apud Joseph. ibid.

² Ubi ἀπαρτισθῆναι est quod hic כָּלָה quod alibi per συντελεῖν (consummare) alibi per τελειοῦν (finire) aut πληροῦν (implere) vertunt LXX. [Where ἀπαρτισθῆναι is the same as כָּלָה here; which the LXX in some places render by συντελεῖν (to consummate) in others, by τελειοῦν (to finish) or πληροῦν (to complete.)] Grot. in locum.

³ Καὶ τελεσθήσεται ἐν τῇ χειρὶ αὐτοῦ. [And it shall be finished by his hand.] Sept.

⁴ Καὶ συντελεσθήσεται ἐν τῇ χειρὶ αὐτοῦ. Τοντέστιν εὐδωθήσεται· οὕτω γὰρ ἡμᾶς καὶ ὁ Ἰώσηπος διὰ τῆς ἱστορίας ἐδίδαξεν, ὅτι αὐτόματοι τὸν Ἀντίοχον οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι δεξάμενοι σφόδρα ὑπ' αὐτοῦ ἐτιμήθησαν. Hoc est, prospere ei succedet. Sic enim nos item Josephus docuit in historiâ. Judæos, Antiocho ultro accepto, magno in honore ab illo habitos fuisse. [Translated in the text.] Theod. in locum, Vol. II. p. 681. Edit. Sirmondi.

attained, aspired the more to conquest and dominion. He shall also set his face to enter with the strength of his whole kingdom, and upright ones with him: thus shall he do, and he shall give him the daughter of women corrupting her, or to corrupt her: but she shall not stand on his side, neither be for him. (ver. 17.) He shall also set his face to enter with the strength of his whole kingdom, or rather He shall also set his face to enter by force the whole kingdom: and Antiochus not contented with having rent the principal provinces from Egypt, was forming schemes ¹ to seize upon the whole kingdom. And upright ones with him; thus shall he do: if this translation be right, the upright ones here intended are the Jews, who marched under the banners of Antiochus, and are so denominated to distinguish them from the other idolatrous soldiers. But the ² Seventy and the Vulgar Latin exhibit a much more probable translation, that he shall set things right, or make agreement with him, as the phrase is used before. (ver. 6.) Antiochus would have seized upon the kingdom of Egypt by force: but as he was ³ meditating a war with the Romans, he judged it better to proceed by stratagem, and to carry on his designs by treaty rather than by arms. For this purpose he shall give him the daughter of women, his daughter so called as being one of the most eminent and beautiful of women: and accordingly ⁴ Antiochus proposed a treaty of marriage by Eucles the Rhodian, betrothed his daughter Cleopatra to Ptolemy in the seventh year of his reign, and married her to him in the thirteenth. He conducted her himself to Raphia, where they were married; and gave in dowry with her the provinces of Coele-Syria and Palestine, upon condition of the revenues being equally divided between the two kings. All this he transacted with a fraudulent intention, to corrupt her, and induce her to betray her husband's interests to her father. But his designs did not take effect; she shall not stand on his part, neither be for him. Ptolemy and his generals ⁵ were aware of his artifices, and therefore stood upon their guard: and Cleopatra herself affected more the cause of

¹ Κατὰ σπουδὴν ὁ Ἀντίοχος ἀπῆλθι, ὡς Αἴγυπτον ἔρημον ἄρχοντος ἀρπασόμενος. properavit in Ægyptum, ut occuparet orbata principem. [And Antiochus departed in haste, in order to seize Egypt while deprived of its prince.] Appian. de Bell. Syr. p. 88. Edit. Steph. p. 144. Edit. Tollii. Antiochus rex Syriæ occupare Ægyptum statuit. [Antiochus the Syrian king resolved to possess himself of Egypt.] Justin. Lib. xxxi. cap. 1.

² Καὶ εὐθεία πάντα μετ' αὐτοῦ ποιήσει. Sept. Et recta faciet cum eo. Vulg. [Translated in the text.]

³ Appian. ibid. p. 145.

⁴ — filiam suam Cleopatram per Euclem Rhodium, septimo anno regni adolescentis, despondit Ptolemæo, et tertio decimo anno tradidit, datâ ei dotis nomine omni Coele-Syriâ, et Judæâ. [He betrothed his daughter Cleopatra, by means of Eucles the Rhodian, to Ptolemy, in the seventh year of the reign of the young king, and delivered her over in marriage to him in the thirteenth year, with Coele-Syria and Judea as her dowry.] Hieron. in locum, col. 1126. Appian. ibid. Liv. Lib. xxxv. cap. xiii. Joseph. Antiq. Lib. xii. cap. iv. sect. i. p. 523. Edit. Hudson.

⁵ Ptolemæus Epiphanes et duces ejus sentientes dolum, cautius se egerunt, et Cleopatra magis viri partes, quam parentis fovit. [Translated in the text.] Hieron. ibid.

her husband than of her father; insomuch that ¹she joined with her husband in an embassy to the Romans, to congratulate them upon the victories over her father, and to exhort them, after they had expelled him out of Greece, to prosecute the war in Asia, assuring them at the same time that the king and queen of Egypt would readily obey the commands of the senate.

Antiochus having, as he thought, secured all things behind him, engaged in an unhappy war with the Romans. After this shall he turn his face unto the isles, and shall take many: but a prince for his own behalf shall cause the reproach offered by him to cease; without his own reproach he shall cause it to turn upon him. (ver. 18.) Antiochus ²fitted out a formidable fleet of one hundred large ships of war, and two hundred other lesser vessels. With this fleet he turned his face unto the isles of the Mediterranean; subdued most of the maritime places on the coasts of Asia, Thrace, and Greece; and took Samos, Eubœa, and many other islands. This was a great indignity and reproach offered to the Romans, ³when their confederates were thus oppressed, and the cities, which they had lately restored to liberty, were enslaved. But a prince, or rather a leader, a general, meaning the Roman generals, repelled the injury, and caused his reproach to cease. Acilius the consul ⁴fought with Antiochus at the straits of Thermopylæ, routed him, and expelled him out of Greece: Livius and Æmilius beat his fleets at sea: and Scipio finally obtained a decisive victory over him in Asia, near the city Magnesia, at the foot of mount Sipylus. Antiochus lost fifty thousand foot and four thousand horse in that day's engagement; fourteen hundred were taken prisoners, and he himself escaped with difficulty. Upon this defeat he ⁵was necessitated to sue for peace, and was obliged to submit to very dishonourable conditions, not to set foot in Europe, and to quit all Asia on this side of mount Taurus, to defray the whole charges of the war, &c. and to give twenty hostages for the performance of these articles, one of whom was his youngest son Antiochus, afterwards called Epiphanes. By these

¹ Legati ab Ptolemæo et Cleopatrá, regibus Ægypti, gratulantes quod Manius Acilius consul Antiochum regem Græciâ expulisset, venerunt: adhortantesque ut in Asiam exercitum traderet——reges Ægypti ad ea, quæ censuisset senatus, paratos fore. [Ambassadors from Ptolemy and Cleopatra, the sovereigns of Egypt, came to congratulate them on occasion of Manius Acilius, the consul, having driven king Antiochus out of Greece: and to stir them up to invade his dominions in Asia,—and to assure them that they were ready to obey the orders of the Senate.] Liv. Lib. xxxvii. cap. iii.

² Liv. Lib. xxxiii. cap. xix., xx. xxxviii. &c. Appian. de Bell. Syr. p. 86. 89. 93, &c. Edit. Steph. p. 142. 145. 151, &c. Edit. Tollii. Hieron. ibid. Aurel. Victor de Viris Illust. cap. liv. statimque Græciam insulasque ejus occupavit. [And immediately took Greece and its islands.]

³ Appian. de Bell. Syr. p. 87. Edit. Steph. p. 143. Edit. Tollii. Liv. Lib. xxxiii. cap. xxxix. Lib. xxxiv. cap. lviii. Polyb. Lib. xvii. p. 769. Edit. Casaubon.

⁴ Liv. Lib. xxxvi. et xxxvii. Appian. de Bell. Syr. Florus, Lib. ii. cap. viii. Justin. Lib. xxxi. cap. vi. vii. viii.

⁵ Polyb. Legat. xxiv. p. 816, 817. Liv. Lib. xxxvii. cap. xlv. Appian. de Bell. Syr. p. 111, &c. Edit. Steph. p. 178, &c. Edit. Tollii. Justin. ibid.

means ¹ he and his successors became tributary to the Romans: so truly and effectually did they not only cause the reproach offered him to cease, but greatly to their honour caused it to turn upon him.

Antiochus did not long survive this disgrace; and the latter end of his life and reign was as mean as the former part had been glorious. Then shall he turn his face towards the fort of his own land: but he shall stumble and not be found, (ver. 19.) Antiochus after the battle ² fled away that night to Sardes, and from thence to Apaméa, and the next day he came into Syria, to Antioch the fort of his own land. It was from thence that he sent ambassadors to sue for peace; and ³ within a few days after peace was granted he sent part of the money demanded, and the hostages to the Roman consul at Ephesus. He is ⁴ reported indeed to have borne his losses with great equanimity and temper, and said that he was much obliged to the Romans for easing him from a great deal of care and trouble, and for confining him within the bounds of a moderate empire. But whatever he might pretend, he lived in distress and poverty for a great king, being under the greatest difficulties how to raise the money which he had stipulated to pay to the Romans; and his necessity or his avarice prompted him at last to commit sacrilege. He ⁵ marched into the eastern provinces, to collect there the arrears of tribute, and amass what treasure he could; and attempting to plunder the rich temple of Jupiter Belus in Elymais, he was assaulted by the inhabitants of the country, was defeated, and himself and all his attendants were slain. So Diodorus Siculus, Strabo, Justin, and Jerome relate the manner and circumstances of his death. Aurelius Victor reports it otherwise, and affirms

¹ 1 Macc. viii. 7.

² Liv. Lib. xxxvii. cap. xlv. Appian. de Bell. Syr. p. 110. Edit. Steph. p. 177. Edit. Tollii.

³ Polyb. Legat. xxiv. p. 817. Liv. Lib. xxxvii. cap. xlv.

⁴ Cicero pro Deiotaro. cap. xiii. Valerius Maximus, Lib. iv. cap. i.

⁵ Diodor. Sic. in Excerpt. Valesii, p. 292 et 298. Strabo, Lib. xvi. p. 744. Edit. Paris. 1620, p. 1080. Edit. Amstel. 1707. Interea in Syriâ rex Antiochus, cum gravi tributo pacis, a Romanis victus, oneratus esset, seu inopiâ pecuniæ compulsus, seu avaritiâ sollicitatus, quâ sperabat se, sub specie tributariæ necessitatibus, excusatus sacrilegia commissurum, adhibito exercitu, nocte templum Elymæi Jovis aggreditur. Quâ re proditâ, concursu insularium, cum omni militiâ interficitur. [In the mean time king Antiochus in Syria, who, having been vanquished by the Romans, had been loaded with the payment of a heavy tribute, as the condition of peace, compelled either by want of money, or hurried on by his own covetousness, and hoping that in the pretext of the necessity under which he lay of paying the tribute, he might find a ready excuse for the commission of sacrilege, marches his army, and attacks in the night-time the temple of Jupiter of Elymais. But his design having been discovered, he and his whole army were slain in a conflict with the inhabitants.] Justin. Lib. xxxii. cap. ii. Victus ergo Antiochus, intra Taurum regnare jussus est; et inde fugit ad Apamiam, ac Susam, et ultimas regni sui penetravit urbes. Quumque adversum Elymæos pugnaret, cum omni est deletus exercitu. [Antiochus having been vanquished, was ordered to confine his authority within mount Taurus; from thence he fled to Apamia, and Susa, and advanced as far as the most distant cities of his kingdom. But when he was fighting against the Elymeans, he was destroyed with his whole army.] Hieron. ibid.

¹ that he was slain by some of his companions, whom in his liquor he had beaten at a banquet; but his account deserves not so much credit as the concurrent testimony of earlier historians. However it was, his death was inglorious, he stumbled and fell, and was no more found.

His successor was far from retrieving the splendour and glory of the nation. Then shall stand up in his estate a raiser of taxes in the glory of the kingdom; or rather according to the original, and as we read in the margin, one that causeth an exactor to pass over the glory of the kingdom: but within few days he shall be destroyed, neither in anger, nor in battle. (ver. 20.) Seleucus Philopator succeeded his father Antiochus the Great in the throne of Syria: but as ² Jerome affirms, he performed nothing worthy of the empire of Syria and of his father, and perished ingloriously without fighting any battles. As Appian also testifies, he reigned ³ both idly and weakly, by reason of his father's calamity. He had an inclination to break the peace, and shake off the Roman yoke; but had not the courage to do it. He ⁴ raised an army with intent to march over mount Taurus to the assistance of Pharnaces, king of Pontus: but this dread of the Romans confined him at home, within the bounds prescribed to him; and almost as soon as he had raised, he disbanded his army. The tribute of a thousand talents, which he was obliged to pay annually to the Romans, was indeed a grievous burden to him and his kingdom: and he was little more than a raiser of taxes all his days. He was tempted even to commit sacrilege; for ⁵ being informed of the money that was deposited in the temple of Jerusalem, he sent his treasurer Heliodorus to seize it. This was literally causing an exactor to pass over the glory of the kingdom, when he sent his treasurer to plunder that temple, which ⁶ even kings did honour, and magnify with their best gifts, and where Seleucus himself, of his own revenues, bare all the costs belonging to the service of the sacrifices. But within few days, or rather years, according to the prophetic style, he was to be destroyed; and his reign was of short duration in comparison of his father's; for he ⁷ reigned only twelve years, and his father thirty-seven. Or perhaps the passage may be better expounded thus, that within few days or

¹ A sodalibus, quos temulentus in convivio pulsaverat, occisus est. [Translated in the text.] Aurel. Victor. de Viris Illustr. cap. liv.

² Seleucum dicit cognomento Philopatorem filium magni Antiochi, qui nihil dignum Syriae, et patris gessit imperio; et absque ullis praeliis inglorius periit. [“He means Seleucus, surnamed Philopator, the son of Antiochus the Great, who performed nothing worthy of the kingdom of Syria, nor of his father; and who died without renown, having fought no battles.”] Hieron. ibid.

³ —ἀπράκτως ἄμα καὶ ἀσθενῶς, διὰ τὴν τοῦ πατρὸς συμφορὰν. otiosus nec admodum potens, propter cladem quam pater acceperat. [Translated in the text.] Appian. de Bell. Syr. p. 131. Edit. Steph. p. 212. Edit. Tollii.

⁴ Diod. Sic. in Excerpt. Valesii, p. 302. Usher's Annals, A.M. 3823. A.C. 181. p. 403.

⁵ 2 Macc. iii. 7. Josephus de Maccabæis, sect. iv. p. 1395. Edit. Hudson.

⁶ 2 Macc. iii. 2, 3.

⁷ Vide Appian. ibid.

years, after his attempting to plunder the temple of Jerusalem, he should be destroyed: and not long after that, as all chronologers agree, he was destroyed, neither in anger nor in battle, neither in rebellion at home, nor in war abroad, but ¹ by the treachery of his own treasurer Heliodorus. The same wicked hand that was the instrument of his sacrilege, was also the instrument of his death. Seleucus having ² sent his only son Demetrius to be an hostage at Rome instead of his brother Antiochus, and Antiochus being not yet returned to the Syrian court, Heliodorus thought this a fit opportunity to dispatch his master, and in the absence of the next heirs to the crown, to usurp it to himself. But he was disappointed in his ambitious projects, and only made way for another's usurped greatness instead of his own.

Few circumstances are mentioned relating to Seleucus Philopator; many more particulars are predicted of his brother and successor, Antiochus Epiphanes, as he was indeed a more extraordinary person, and likewise a greater enemy and oppressor of the Jews. And in his estate shall stand up a vile person, to whom they shall not give the honour of the kingdom; but he shall come in peaceably, and obtain the kingdom by flatteries. (ver. 21.) Antiochus returning from Rome ³ was at Athens, in his way to Syria, when his brother Seleucus died by the treachery of Heliodorus; and the honour of the kingdom was not given to him; for Heliodorus attempted to get possession of it himself; another ⁴ party declared in favour of Ptolemy Philometor king of Egypt, whose mother, Cleopatra, was the daughter of Antiochus the Great, and sister of the late king Seleucus; and neither was Antiochus Epiphanes the right heir to the crown, but his nephew Demetrius, the son of Seleucus, who was then an hostage at Rome. However, he obtained the kingdom by flatteries. He flattered ⁵ Eumenes king of Pergamus, and Attalus his brother, and by fair promises engaged their assistance, and they the more readily assisted him, as they were at that juncture jealous of the Romans, and were willing therefore to secure a friend in the king of Syria. He flattered too ⁶ the Syrians, and with great show of clemency obtained their concurrence. He flattered also ⁷ the Romans,

¹ ἐξ ἐπιβουλῆς Ἡλιοδώρου τινὸς τῶν περὶ αὐτὸν ἀποθνήσκει. Insidiis Heliodori cujusdam purpurati oppressus est. [He died by the treachery of Heliodorus, one of his courtiers.] App. de Bell. Syr. p. 116. Edit. Steph. p. 187. Edit. Tollii.

² Vide Appian. ibid.

³ Appian. ibid.

⁴ Hieron. in locum, col. 1127.

⁵ Appian. ibid.

⁶ Simulatione clementiæ obtinuit regnum Syriæ. [With a show of clemency he got possession of the kingdom of Syria.] Hieron. ibid.

⁷ Liv. Lib. xlii. cap. vi. Petere regem, ut quæ cum patre suo societas atque amicitia fuisset, ea secum renovaretur: imperaretque sibi populus Romanus, quæ bono fidelique socio regi essent imperanda; se nullo usquam cessaturum officio. [The king requested, that they would renew with him the alliance and friendship which had subsisted between them and his father; and that the Roman people might command him any thing that was consistent with a faithful ally and king, for that he never would be deficient in any duty.]

and sent ambassadors to court their favour, to pay them the arrears of tribute, to present them besides with golden vessels of five hundred pounds weight, and to desire that the friendship and alliance which they had had with his father might be renewed with him, and that they would lay their commands upon him as upon a good and faithful confederate king; he would never be wanting in any duty. Thus he came in peaceably; and as he flattered the Syrians, the Syrians flattered him again,¹ and bestowed upon him the title of Epiphanes, or the illustrious: but the epithet of vile, or rather despicable, given him by the prophet, agrees better with his true character. For, as² Polybius and other heathen historians describe him, he would steal out of the palace, and ramble about the streets in disguise; would mix with the lowest company, and drink and revel with them to the greatest excess; would put on the Roman gown, and go about canvassing for votes, in imitation of the candidates for offices at Rome; would sometimes scatter money in the streets among his followers, and sometimes pelt them with stones; would wash in the public baths, and expose himself by all manner of ridiculous and indecent gestures: with a thousand such freaks and extravagances, as induced³ Polybius, who was a contemporary writer, and others after him, instead of Epiphanes, or the illustrious, more rightly to call him Epimanes, or the madman.

But frantic and extravagant as he was, he was however successful and victorious. And with the arms of a flood shall they be overthrown from before him; or rather more agreeably to the⁴ original, And the arms of the overflow shall be overflowed from before him, and shall be broken; yea, also the prince of the covenant: and after the league made with him he shall work deceitfully. (ver. 22, 23.) The arms which were overflowed from before him, were those of his competitors for the crown. Heliodorus,⁵ the murderer of Seleucus, and his partizans, as well as those of the king of Egypt, who had formed some designs upon Syria, were vanquished by the forces of

¹ Appian. de Bell. Syr. p. 117. Edit. Steph. p. 187. Edit. Tollii.

² Polyb. apud Athenæum, Lib. v. p. 193. Lib. x. p. 438. Edit. Casaubon. Diod. Sic. in Excerptis Valesii, p. 305, 306. Liv. lib. xli. cap. xxiv. xxv.

³ Πολύβιος δ' ἐν τῇ ἑκτῇ καὶ εἰκοστῇ τῶν ἱστοριῶν καλεῖ αὐτὸν Ἐπιμανῆ καὶ οὐκ Ἐπιφανῆ, διὰ τὰς πράξεις. Polybius libro vigesimo sexto historiarum eum vocat Ἐπιμανῆ, non Ἐπιφανῆ, ob ea quæ ab illo gesta sunt. [Polybius, in the twenty-sixth book of his history, calls him Ἐπιμανῆ, (Epimanes), and not Ἐπιφανῆ (Epiphanes), in consequence of his actions.] Athenæus, Lib. x. p. 439. Vide etiam Lib. ii. p. 45. Lib. v. p. 193.

⁴ Καὶ βραχίονες τοῦ κατακλύζοντος κατακλυσθήσονται ἀπὸ προσώπου αὐτοῦ. [And the arms of the overflow shall be overflowed from before his face.] Sept.

Et brachia obruentis obruentur a conspectu ejus. [And the arms of the overwheeler shall be overwhelmed from before his face.] Arab. Et brachia pugnantis expugnabuntur a facie ejus. [And the arms of the fighter shall be subdued from before his face.] Vulg.

⁵ Heliodore meurtrier de Seleucus, et ses partisans, aussi bien que ceux du roi d'Egypte, qui avoient quelques desseins sur la Syrie, furent vaincus par les forces d'Attalus, et d'Eumenes; et dissipez par l'arrivée d'Antiochus, dont la présence déconcerta tous leurs desseins. [Translated in the text.] Calmet. Vide, si placet, Appian. Syriac. p. 116, 117. Grot. hic.

Eumenes and Attalus, and were dissipated by the arrival of Antiochus, whose presence disconcerted all their measures. The prince also of the covenant was broken, that is, the high-priest of the Jews, and so ¹ Theodoret understands and explains it. "The prince of the covenant: he speaketh of the pious high-priest, the brother of Jason, and foretellet that even he should be turned out of his office." As soon as Antiochus was seated in the throne, ² he removed Onias from the high-priesthood, and preferred Jason the brother of Onias to that dignity, not for any crime committed against him by the former, but for the great sums of money which were offered to him by the latter. For Jason offered to give him no less than three hundred and sixty talents of silver for the high-priesthood, besides eighty more upon another account; and good Onias was not only displaced to make way for a wicked usurper, but after a few years, living at Antioch, he was with as great treachery as cruelty murdered by the king's deputy. But though Antiochus had made a league with Jason the new high-priest, yet he did not faithfully adhere to it, but acted deceitfully. For Menelaus the brother of Jason, ³ being sent to the Syrian court, with a commission from his brother, to pay the tribute, and to transact some business with the king; he by his address and flattery so far insinuated himself into the royal favour, that he attempted to supplant his elder brother Jason, as Jason had supplanted his elder brother Onias, and proffered to give three hundred talents more for the high-priesthood than Jason had given for it. The king readily accepted the proposal, and issued his mandate for the deposing of Jason, and advancing of Menelaus in his room; but he could not effect the change without an armed force, which put Menelaus in possession of the place, and compelled Jason to fly, and take shelter in the land of the Ammonites.

What follows is not assigning a reason for any thing that preceded, and therefore ought not to have been translated, For he shall come up; but, And he shall come up, and shall become strong with a small people. He shall enter peaceably even upon the fattest places of the province, or as it is in the margin, He shall enter into the peaceable and fat places of the province, and he shall do that which his fathers have not done, nor his father's fathers, he shall scatter among them the prey, and spoil, and riches; yea, and he shall forecast his devices against the strong-holds, even for a time. (ver. 23, 24.) Antiochus Epiphanes had been many years a hostage at Rome, and coming from thence with only a few attendants, he appeared in Syria little at first, but soon received a great increase, and became strong with a small people. By the ¹ friendship of Eumenes and Attalus he entered peaceably upon the upper provinces, and appointed Timarchus and Heraclides, the one to be governor of Babylon, and the other to be his treasurer, two brothers, with both of whom he had unnatural commerce. He likewise entered peaceably upon the provinces of Coele-Syria and Palestine. And wherever he came, he outdid his fathers, and his father's fathers, in liberality and profusion. He scattered among them the prey, and spoil, and riches. The ² prey of his enemies, the spoil of temples, and the riches of his friends, as well as his own revenues, were expended in public shows, and bestowed in largesses among the people. The writer of the first book of Maccabees affirms, that ³ in the liberal giving of gifts he abounded above the kings that were before him. Josephus testifies, that ⁴ he was magnanimous and munificent. Polybius recounts ⁵ various instances of his extravagance, and relates particularly that ⁶ sometimes meeting accidentally with people whom he had never seen before, he would enrich them with unexpected presents; and ⁷ sometimes standing in the public streets, he would throw about his money, and cry aloud, "Let him take it to whom fortune shall give it." His generosity was the more requisite to fix the provinces of Coele-Syria and Palestine in his interest, because they were claimed as of right belonging to the king of Egypt. Ptolemy Epiphanes was now dead; his queen Cleopatra was dead too; and ⁸ Eulæus an eunuch, and Lenæus, who were administrators of the kingdom for the young king Ptolemy Philometor, demanded the restitution of these provinces, alleging, with very good reason, that they were assigned to the first Ptolemy in the last partition of the empire among Alexander's captains; that they had remained ever since in the possession of the kings of Egypt, till Antiochus the Great took them away unjustly in the minority of Ptolemy Epiphanes, the present king's father; and after he had taken them away, he agreed to surrender them again in dowry with his daughter Cleopatra. Anti-

¹ Καὶ γε ἡγούμενος διαθήκης. λέγει γὰρ τὸν ἀρχιερεῖα τὸν εὐσεβῆ, τὸν τοῦ Ἰασῶνος ἀδελφόν, καὶ προδιδάσκει, ὅτι κακέϊνον τοῦ ἀρχιερατεύειν παύσει. Et dux fœderis. Principem sacerdotum intelligi vult pium Jasonis fratrem, præmonetque fore ut illum etiam abdicet pontificatu maximo. [Translated in the text.] Theod. in locum, p. 683. Tom. II. Edit. Sirmondi.

² 2 Macc. iv. Joseph. de Maccabæis, sect. iv. p. 1395. Edit. Hudson.

³ 2 Macc. ibid. Sulpicii Severi Sac. Hist. Lib. ii. p. 85. Edit. Elzevir, 1656.

¹ Appian. de Bell. Syr. p. 117. Edit. Seph. p. 187. Edit. Tollii.

² Polyb. apud Athenæum, Lib. v. p. 195. Edit. Casaubon.

³ 1 Macc. iii. 30.

⁴ Joseph. Antiq. Lib. xii. cap. vii. sect. ii. p. 537. Edit. Hudson. μεγαλόψυχος και φιλόδορος. vir magni animi, et largitor. [Translated in the text.]

⁵ Polyb. ibid. p. 194, &c. Lib. x. p. 438, &c.

⁶ ἐξ ἀπαντήσεως δὲ τισι τυγχάνων οὓς μὴ ἑώρακε ποτε, ἐδίδον δωρεὰς ἀπροσδοκήτους. aliquando fortè obvius, quos nunquam viderat, insperatis muneribus afficeret. [Translated in the text.] p. 194.

⁷ ἄλλοτε δὲ ἐν ταῖς δημοσίαις ὁδοῖς ἰστάμενος λέγειν, τίνι ἢ τύχῃ δίδωσι λαβέτω, και ρίψας τὸ ἀργύριον ᾤχετο. nonnunquam publicâ viâ stantem cum proclamasset, Sumat cui fortuna dederit, jactis sparsisque aureis nummis discessisse. [Translated in the text.] p. 438.

⁸ Et quum post mortem Cleopatæ Eulæius eunuchus nutricius Philometoris, et Lenæus Ægyptum regerent, et repeterent Syriam quam Antiochus fraude occupaverat, ortum est inter avunculum et puerum Ptolemæum prælium. [And when, after the death of Cleopatra, Eulæus, the eunuch and tutor of Philometor, and Lenæus governed Egypt, and claimed the restitution of Syria, which Antiochus had unjustly seized, a battle took place between the young Ptolemy and his uncle.] Hieron. in locum, col. 1127. Polyb. Legat. lxxii. p. 892. Legat. lxxxii. p. 908. Edit. Casaubon.

ochus denied these pleas and pretences with the direct contrary assertions; and foreseeing, as well he might foresee, that these demands would prove the ground and occasion of a new war between the two crowns, ¹ he came to Joppa to take a view of the frontiers, and to put them in a proper posture of defence. In his progress he came to Jerusalem, where he was honourably received by Jason the high-priest, and by all the people; and as it was evening, he was ushered into the city with torch-light and with great rejoicings; and from thence he went into Phœnicia, to fortify his own strong-holds, and to forecast his devices against those of the enemy. The ² Seventy and the Arabic translator, with a little variation in the reading, render it to forecast his devices against Egypt. Thus he did even for a time, and employed some years in his hostile preparations.

At length Antiochus, in the fifth year of his reign, ³ despising the youth of Ptolemy, and the inertness of his tutors, and believing the Romans to be too much employed in the Macedonian war to give him any interruption, resolved to carry hostilities into the enemy's country, instead of waiting for them in his own, and marched with a powerful army against Egypt. And he shall stir up his power and his courage against the king of the south with a great army, and the king of the south shall be stirred up to battle with a very great and mighty army; but he shall not stand: for they shall forecast devices against him. Yea, they that feed of the portion of his meat shall destroy him, and his army shall overflow, or ⁴ rather shall be overflown, and many shall fall down slain. (ver. 25, 26.) These things ⁵ Porphyry rightly interprets of Antiochus, who marched against Ptolemy, his sister's son, with a great army. The king of the south too, that is the generals of Ptolemy, were stirred up to war with very many and exceeding strong forces, and yet could not resist the fraudulent councils of Antiochus. The two armies engaged ⁶ between Pelusium and Mount Casius, and Antiochus obtained the victory. The ⁷ next campaign he had greater success, routed the Egyptians, took Pelusium, ascended as far as Memphis, and made himself master of all Egypt except Alexandria. These transactions

¹ 2 Macc. iv. 21, 22.

² Καὶ ἐπ' Αἴγυπτον λογιέται λογισμούς. Sept. Et cogitabit adversus Ægyptum cogitationes. [Translated in the text.] Arab. Instead of מנצרים they read מצרים.

³ Liv. Lib. xlii. cap. 29.

⁴ Exercitus ejus inundabitur. [His army shall be overflown.] Pagn. Exercitusque ejus opprimetur. [And his army shall be overthrown.] Vulg. Exercitus ejus dissipabitur. [His army shall be dispersed.] Syr.

⁵ Hæc Porphyrius interpretatur de Antiocho, qui adversus Ptolemæum sororis suæ filium profectus est cum exercitu magno. Sed et rex austri, id est, duces Ptolemæi provocati sunt ad bellum multis auxiliis, et fortibus nimis; et non potuerunt resistere Antiochi consiliis fraudulentis. [Translated in the text.] Hieron. in locum, col. 1128.

⁶ Quumque inter Pelusium et montem Casium prælium commisissent, victi sunt duces Ptolemæi. [When they engaged between Pelusium and mount Casius, Ptolemy's generals were overcome.] Hieron. col. 1127, 1128.

⁷ 2 Macc. v. 1. Hieron. ibid. Joseph. Antiq. Lib. xii. cap. v. sect. ii. p. 532. Edit. Hudson. Valesii Excerpta ex Diodoro, p. 311.

are thus related by the ¹ writer of the first book of Maccabees: "Now when the kingdom was established before Antiochus, he thought to reign over Egypt, that he might have the dominion of two realms. Wherefore he entered into Egypt with a great multitude, with chariots, and elephants, and horsemen, and a great navy, and made war against Ptolemy king of Egypt; but Ptolemy was afraid of him and fled, and many were wounded to death. Thus they got the strong cities in the land of Egypt, and he took the spoils thereof." He shall stir up his power against the king of the south with a great army, says the prophet; he entered into Egypt with a great multitude, says the historian. The king of the south shall not stand, says the prophet; Ptolemy was afraid and fled, says the historian. Many shall fall down slain, says the prophet; and many were wounded to death, says the historian. The misfortunes of Ptolemy Philometor are by the prophet ascribed principally to the treachery and baseness of his own ministers and subjects: for they shall forecast devices against him; yea, they that feed of the portion of his meat shall destroy him. And it is certain that Eulæus ² was a very wicked minister, and bred up the young king in luxury and effeminacy, contrary to his natural inclination. Ptolemy Macron too, ³ who was governor of Cyprus, revolted from him, and delivered up that important island to Antiochus, and for the reward of his treason was admitted into the number of the king's principal friends, and was made governor of Coele-Syria and Palestine. Nay, even ⁴ the Alexandrians, seeing the distress of Philometor, renounced their allegiance, and taking his younger brother Euergetes, or Physcon, proclaimed him king instead of the elder brother.

History hath not informed us by what means Ptolemy Philometor came into the hands of Antiochus, whether he was taken prisoner or surrendered himself of his own accord, but that he was in the hands of Antiochus it is evident beyond all contradiction. And both these kings' hearts shall be to do mischief, and they shall speak lies at one table, but it shall not prosper; for yet the ends shall be at the time appointed. (ver. 27.) After Antiochus was come to Memphis, and the greater part of Egypt had submitted to him, ⁵ he and Philometor did frequently eat and converse together at one table; but notwithstanding this appearance of peace and friendship, their hearts were really bent to do mischief, and they spoke lies the one to the other. For ⁶ Antiochus pretended to take care of his nephew Philometor's interest, and promised to restore him to the crown, at

¹ 1 Macc. i. 16—19.

² Valesii Excerpta ex Diodoro, p. 311. 313.

³ Valesii Excerpta ex Polybio, p. 126. 2 Macc. x. 13. 1 Macc. iii. 38. 2 Macc. viii. 8.

⁴ Porphy. apud Eusebii Chron. Græc. p. 60 et 68.

⁵ Nulli dubium est quin Antiochus pacem cum Ptolemæo fecerit, et inierit cum eo convivium, et dolos machinatus sit, &c. [No one doubts but Antiochus concluded a peace with Ptolemy, feasted with him, and meditated mischief, &c.] Hieron. ibid. col. 1128.

⁶ Polyb. Legat. lxxxiv. p. 909. Edit. Casaubon. Liv. Lib. xlv. cap. xix. Lib. xlv. cap. xi.

the same time that he was plotting his ruin, and was contriving means to weaken the two brothers in a war against each other, that the conqueror, wearied and exhausted, might fall an easier prey to him. On the other side, ¹ Philometor laid the blame of the war on his governor Eulæus, professed great obligations to his uncle, and seemed to hold the crown by his favour, at the same time that he was resolved to take the first opportunity of breaking the league with him, and of being reconciled to his brother; and accordingly, as soon as ever Antiochus was withdrawn, he made proposals of accommodation, and by the mediation of their sister Cleopatra, a peace was made between the two brothers, who agreed to reign jointly in Egypt and Alexandria. But still this artifice and dissimulation did not prosper on either side. For ² neither did Antiochus obtain the kingdom, neither did Philometor utterly exclude him, and prevent his returning with an army, as each intended and expected by the measures which he had taken; for these wars were not to have an end till the time appointed, which was not yet come.

Antiochus hoping to become absolute master of Egypt more easily by the civil war between the two brothers, than by the exertion of his own forces, left the kingdom for a while, and returned into Syria. Then shall he return into his land with great riches, and his heart shall be against the holy covenant; and he shall do exploits, and return to his own land. (ver. 28.) He did indeed return with great riches; for the spoils which he took in Egypt were of immense value. The ³ writer of the first book of Maccabees says, "Thus they got the strong cities in the land of Egypt, and he took the spoils thereof. And after that Antiochus had smitten Egypt he returned." Polybius ⁴, describing his opulence and the great show that he made of gold, silver, jewels, and the like, affirms that he took them partly out of Egypt, having broken the league with the young king Philometor. Returning too from Egypt, he set his heart against the holy covenant. For it happened while he was in Egypt, that ⁵ a false report was spread of his death. Jason thinking

¹ Liv. ibid. Polyb. Legat. lxxxii. p. 908. Porphy. apud Eusebium, ibid.

² — et nihil profecerit: quia regnum ejus non potuerit obtinere; &c. [And it did not prosper; for he could not obtain his kingdom, &c.] Hieron. ibid.

³ 1 Macc. i. 19, 20: οὐκ ἔλαβεν τὸν ἀδελφὸν καὶ τὴν βασιλείαν αὐτοῦ καὶ τὰς πόλεις αὐτοῦ.

⁴ ταῦτα δὲ πάντα συνετέλεσθη, ἐξ ὧν τὰ μὲν ἐκ τῆς Αἰγύπτου ἐνοσφίσαιτο παρὰ σπονδῆσας τὸν Φιλομήτορα βασιλεῖα παιδίσκων ὄντα. Omnia porro hæc sic absoluta et exulta sunt partim iis quibus in Ægypto, perfide violato fœderis pacto, regem Ptolemæum Philometora adhuc puerulum defraudaverat. [All these were made partly from what he had taken away out of Egypt, when he violated the treaty with the young king Philometor.] Polyb. apud Athenæum, Lib. v. p. 195. Edit. Casaubon.

⁵ 2 Macc. v. 5—23. 1 Macc. i. 20—28. Joseph. Antiq. Lib. xii. cap. v. sect. iii. p. 532. Lib. xiii. cap. viii. sect. ii. p. 582. De Bell. Jud. Lib. i. cap. i. sect. i. p. 958. De Macc. sect. iv. p. 1396. Polybius Megalopolitanus, Strabo Cappadox, Nicolaus Damascenus, Timagenes, Castor et Apollodorus apud Joseph. contra Apion, Lib. ii. p. 1369. Edit. Hudson. Diodorus Siculus. Ex Lib. xxxiv. Ecloga prima, p. 901. Edit. Rhod. et apud Photii Biblioth. Cod. 244. p. 1149. Edit. Rothom. 1653.

this a favourable opportunity for him to recover the high-priesthood, marched to Jerusalem with a thousand men, assaulted and took the city, drove Menelaus into the castle, and exercised great cruelties upon the citizens. Antiochus hearing of this, concluded that the whole nation had revolted, and being informed that the people had made great rejoicings at the report of his death, he determined to take a severe revenge, and went up with a great army, as well as with great indignation against Jerusalem. He besieged and took the city by force of arms, slew forty thousand of the inhabitants, and sold as many more for slaves, polluted the temple and altar with swines' flesh, profaned the holy of holies by breaking into it, took away the golden vessels and other sacred treasures to the value of eighteen hundred talents, restored Menelaus to his office and authority, and constituted one Philip, by nation a Phrygian, in manners a barbarian, governor of Judea. When he had done these exploits, he returned to his own land. So says the ¹ writer of the first book of Maccabees, "When he had taken all away, he went into his own land, having made a great massacre, and spoken very proudly." So likewise the ² author of the second book of Maccabees, "When Antiochus had carried out of the temple a thousand and eight hundred talents, he departed in all haste into Antiochia." Josephus ³ too to the same purpose, "When he had gotten possession of Jerusalem, he slew many of the adverse party, and having taken great spoils he returned to Antioch." These things are not only recorded by Jews; for, as ⁴ Jerome observes, "both the Greek and Roman history relate, that after Antiochus returned from Egypt he came into Judea, that is, against the holy covenant, and spoiled the temple, and took away a great quantity of gold, and having placed a garrison of Macedonians in the citadel, he returned into his own land."

After ⁵ two years Antiochus marched into Egypt again. At the time appointed (and hinted at before, ver. 27.) he shall return and come toward the south, but it shall not be as the former, or as the latter; or as it is translated in the ⁶ Vulgar Latin, the latter shall not be like the former. For the ships of Chittim shall come against him;

¹ 1 Macc. i. 24.

² 2 Macc. v. 21.

³ ἔγκρατὴς δ' οὗτος τῶν Ἱεροσολύμων γεγόμενος, πολλοὺς ἀπέκτεινεν τῶν ἐνάντια φρονούντων· καὶ χρήματα πολλὰ συλήσας ὑπέστρεψεν εἰς Ἀντιοχείαν. Ubi autem is in suā potestate habuit Hierosolyma, multos diversarum partium interfecit; magnāque pecuniæ vi directā, Antiochiam rediit. [Translated in the text.] Joseph. Antiq. Lib. xii. cap. v. sect. iii. p. 532. Edit. Hudson.

⁴ Et Græca et Romana narrat historia: postquam reversus est Antiochus expulsus ab Ægyptiis, venisse eum in Judæam, hoc est adversus Testamentum sanctum, et spoliasse templum, et auri tulisse quam plurimum: positoque in arce præsidio Macedonum, reversum in terram suam. [Translated in the text.] Hieron. in locum, col. 1129.

⁵ Et post biennium rursum contra Ptolemæum exercitum congregasse, et venisse ad austrum. [And after two years he again assembled an army against Ptolemy, and came into the south.] Hieron. ibid.

⁶ Non erit priori simile novissimum. [Translated in the text.] Vulg.

therefore he shall be grieved, and return, and have indignation against the holy covenant: so shall he do, he shall even return, and have intelligence with them that forsake the holy covenant. (ver. 29, 30.) Antiochus perceiving that his fine-woven policy was all unravelled, and that the two brothers, instead of wasting and ruining each other in war, had provided for their mutual safety and interest by making peace,¹ was so offended, that he prepared war much more eagerly and maliciously against both, than he had before against one of them. Early, therefore, in the spring he set forwards with his army, and passing through Coele-Syria came into Egypt, and the inhabitants of Memphis and the other Egyptians, partly out of love, partly out of fear, submitting to him, he came by easy marches down to Alexandria. But this expedition was not as successful as his former ones; the reason of which is assigned in the next words, the ships of Chittim coming against him. In the fifth dissertation it was proved that the coast of Chittim and the land of Chittim is a general name for Greece, Italy, and the countries and islands in the Mediterranean. The ships of Chittim, therefore, are the ships which brought the Roman ambassadors, who came from Italy, touched at Greece, and arrived in Egypt, being sent by the senate, at the supplication of the Ptolemies, to command a peace between the contending kings. The story was related out of the Greek and Roman historians in the last dissertation; it is needless therefore to repeat it here; it will be sufficient to add what² St. Jerome says upon the occasion: "When the two brothers, Ptolemies, the sons of Cleopatra, were besieged by their uncle in Alexandria, the Roman ambassadors came; one of whom Marcus Popillius Lenas, when he had found him standing on the shore, and had delivered him the decree of the senate, by which he was commanded to depart from the friends of the Roman people, and to be content with his own empire; and he would have deferred the matter to consult with his friends; Popillius is said to have made a circle in the sand with the stick that he held in his hand, and to have circumscribed the king, and to have said, 'The senate and people of Rome order that in that place you answer what is your intention.' With these words being frightened, he said, 'If this pleases the senate and people of Rome, we must depart;’ and so presently drew off his army.” The reason of the Romans acting in this imperious manner, and of Antiochus so readily obeying, was, as ¹ Polybius suggests, the total conquest that Paulus Æmilius, the Roman consul, had just made of the kingdom of Macedonia. It was without doubt a great mortification to Antiochus to be so humbled, and so disappointed of his expected prey. Therefore he grieved and returned. He led back his forces into Syria, as ² Polybius says, grieved and groaning, but thinking it expedient to yield to the times for the present. And had indignation against the holy covenant; for ³ he vented all his anger upon the Jews. He detached Apollonius with an army of twenty-two thousand men, who coming to Jerusalem slew great multitudes, plundered the city, set fire to it in several places, and pulled down the houses and walls round about it. Then they builded, on an eminence in the city of David, a strong fortress, which might command the temple; and issuing from thence, they fell on those who came to worship, and shed innocent blood on every side of the sanctuary, and defiled it; so that the temple was deserted, and the whole service omitted; the city was forsaken of its natives, and became an habitation of strangers. So he did, and after his return to Antioch ⁴ he published a decree which obliged all persons upon pain of death to conform to the religion of the Greeks; and so the Jewish law was abrogated, the heathen worship was set up in its stead, and the temple itself was consecrated to Jupiter Olympius. In the transacting and ordering of these matters he had intelligence with them that forsook the holy covenant, Menelaus and the other apostate Jews of his party, who were the king’s chief instigators against their religion and their country. For, as the ⁵ writer of the first book of Maccabees says, “In those days went there out of Israel wicked men, who persuaded many, saying, Let us go and make a covenant with the heathen that are round about us: then certain of the people were so forward herein, that they went to the king, who gave them licence to do after the ordinances of the heathen; and they made themselves uncircumcised, and forsook the holy covenant, and joined themselves to the heathen, and were sold to do mischief.” Josephus ⁶ has plainly

¹ — adeo est offensus, ut multo acrius infestiusque adversus duos, quam ante adversus unum, pararet bellum:—ipse primo vere cum exercitu Ægyptum petens, in Cœlen-Syriam processit.—[receptus ab iis qui] ad Memphim incolebant, et ab cæteris Ægyptiis, partim voluntate, partim metu, ad Alexandriam modicis itineribus descendit. [Translated in the text.] Liv. Lib. xlv. cap. xi. xii.

² Quumque duo fratres Ptolemæi Cleopatæ filii, quorum avunculus erat, obsiderentur Alexandria, legatos venisse Romanos: quorum unus Marcus Popilius Lenas, quum eum stantem invenisset in littore, et senatus consultum dedisset, quo jubebatur ab amicis populi Romani recedere, et suo imperio esse contentus; et ille ad amicorum responsionem consilium distulisset; orbem dicitur fecisse in arenis baculo quem tenebat in manu, et circumscripsisse regem atque dixisse: Senatus et populus Romanus præcipiunt, ut in isto loco respondeas, quid consilii geras. Quibus dictis ille perterritus ait: Si hoc placet senatui et populo Romano, recedendum est; atque ita statim movit exercitum. [Translated in the text.] Hieron. ibid.

¹ Μη γὰρ γινόμενου τούτου και πιστευθέντος, οὐκ ἂν μοι δοκεῖ, πειθαρχῆσαι τοῖς ἐπιτατομένοις Ἀντίοχον. Nam hoc nisi accidisset, neque de eâ re constitisset, nunquam, opinor, esset adductus Antiochus, ut imperata faceret. [Unless this had happened, and had been credited, it doth not appear to me that Antiochus would have obeyed these orders.] Polyb. Legat. xcii. p. 917. Edit. Casaubon.

² οὗτος μὲν ἀπήγετο τὰς δυνάμεις εἰς τὴν Ἀγρίαν [Συρίαν ut putat Usseus] βαρύνόμενος καὶ στένων· εἰκὼν δὲ τοῖς καιροῖς κατὰ τὸ παρόν. Antiochus copias Agriam [Syriam] suas, gravate ille quidem ac gemens, sed tamen abduxit, in præsentia temporis cedendum ratus. [He indeed led off his army into Agria (into Syria as Usher thinks,) grieved and groaning, but yielding to the times for the present.] Polyb. ibid. p. 916.

³ 1 Macc. i. 29—40. 2 Macc. v. 24, 25, 26.

⁴ 1 Macc. i. 41—64. 2 Macc. vi. 1—9.

⁵ 1 Macc. i. 11. 13. 15.

⁶ Josephus de Bell. Jud. Lib. i. cap. i. sect. i. p. 958. Edit. Hudson. οἱ δὲ καταφυγόντες ascribed the distress of his country to the factions among his countrymen, and to those persons particularly who fled to Antiochus, and besought him that under their conduct he would invade Judea.

It may be proper to stop here, and reflect a little how particular and circumstantial this prophecy is concerning the kingdoms of Egypt and Syria, from the death of Alexander to the time of Antiochus Epiphanes. There is not so complete and regular a series of their kings,—there is not so concise and comprehensive an account of their affairs, to be found in any author of those times. The prophecy is really more perfect than any history. No one historian hath related so many circumstances, and in such exact order of time, as the prophet hath foretold them; so that it was necessary to have recourse to several authors, Greek and Roman, Jewish and Christian, and to collect here something from one, and to collect there something from another, for the better explaining and illustrating the great variety of particulars contained in this prophecy. We have been particularly obliged to Porphyry and Jerome, who made use of the same authors for different purposes, and enjoyed the advantages of having those histories entire, which have since, either in whole or in part, been destroyed. For ¹ they had not only Polybius, Diodorus, Livy, Trogius Pompeius, and Justin, some parts of whose works are now remaining; but they had likewise Sutorius Callinicus, Hieronymus, Posidonius, Claudius Theon, and Andronicus Alipius, historians who wrote of those times, and whose works have since entirely perished. If these authors were still extant, and those who are extant were still complete, the great exactness of the prophecy might, in all probability, have been proved in more particulars than it hath been. This exactness was so convincing, that Porphyry could not pretend to deny it; he rather laboured to confirm it, and drew this inference from it, that the πρὸς Ἀντίοχον ἰκέτευσαν, αὐτοῖς ἡγέμοσι χρώμενον, εἰς τὴν Ἰουδαίαν ἐμβαλεῖν. illi vero ad Antiochum se receperunt, eique supplicarunt ut ipsis ducibus in Judæam irrumperet. [But they betook themselves to Antiochus, and besought him that under their conduct he would invade Judæa.]

¹ Ad intelligendas autem extremas partes Danielis, multiplex Græcorum historia necessaria est; Sutorii videlicet, Callinici, Diodori, Hieronymi, Polybii, Posidonii, Claudii, Theonis, et Andronici cognomento Alipii, quos et Porphyrius esse se secutum dicit: Josephi quoque et eorum quos ponit Josephus, præcipueque nostri Livii, et Pompeii Trogi, atque Justinii, qui omnem extremæ visionis narrant historiam. [To understand the latter part of the book of Daniel, much of the Greek history is necessary, namely, what has been written by Sutorius, Callinicus, Diodorus, Hieronymus, Polybius, Posidonius, Claudius Theon, and Andronicus surnamed Alipius, all of whom Porphyry tells us he followed; as also Josephus and the authors mentioned by him, and especially our Livy, and Pompeius Trogius, and Justin, who all relate the history of this last vision.] Hieron. Præf. in Dan. col. 1074. Edit. Benedict. Sutorii videlicet Callinici, Diodori, Hieronymi, Polybii, Posidonii, Claudii Theonis, et Andronici cognomento Alipii. Ita eum locum emenda. In vulgatis est Sutorius, et ante Callinicus distinguitur, quasi a Sutorio sit diversus. [That is, Sutorius Callinicus, Diodorus, Polybius, Posidonius, Claudius Theon, and Andronicus surnamed Alipius. Thus correct this passage. In the common editions it is Sutorius, and a stop is placed before Callinicus, as if it were a different person from Sutorius.] Vossius de Hist. Græc. Lib. ii. cap. xiii.

prophecy was so very exact, that it could not possibly have been written before, but must have been written in, or soon after the time of Antiochus Epiphanes, all being true and exact to that time, and no farther. Others after him have asserted the same thing, not only without any proof, but contrary to all the proofs, which can be had in cases of this nature, as it hath been shown in a former dissertation. The prophecy, indeed, is wonderfully exact to the time of Antiochus Epiphanes, but it is equally so beyond that time, as you will evidently perceive in the sequel, which cannot all with any propriety be applied to Antiochus, but extends to remoter ages, and reaches even to the general resurrection. No one could thus declare the times and the seasons (Acts i. 7.) but he who hath them in his own power.

XVII.

THE SAME SUBJECT CONTINUED.

PART II.

THUS far the meaning and the completion of the prophecy is sufficiently clear and evident; there is more obscurity and difficulty in the part that remains to be considered. Thus far commentators are in the main agreed, and few or none have deviated much out of the common road: but hereafter they pursue so many different paths, that it is not always easy to know whom it is best and safest to follow. Some, ¹ as Porphyry, among the ancients, and Grotius, among the moderns, contend that the whole was literally accomplished in Antiochus Epiphanes. Others, ² as Jerome, and most of the Christian fathers, consider Antiochus as a type of Antichrist; as in the seventy-second psalm Solomon is exhibited as a type of Christ, and many things are said of the one, which are only applicable to the other. Some again understand what remains, partly of the tyranny of Antiochus, and partly of the great apostacy of the latter days, or the days of the Roman empire. Others again apply it wholly to the invasion and tyranny of the Romans, the subsequent corruptions in the church, and alterations in the empire. There is no writer, or commentator, whom we would choose to follow implicitly in all things; but in this we may agree with one, in that with another, and in some instances, perhaps, differ from all.

¹ Cætera quæ sequuntur usque ad finem voluminis, ille [Porphyrius] interpretatur super personâ Antiochi, qui cognominatus est Epiphanes, &c. ["The rest to the end of the book, he (Porphyry) understands with reference to Antiochus surnamed Epiphanes," &c.] Hieron. col. 1127.

² Nostri autem hæc omnia de Antichristo prophetari arbitrantur—Quumque multa quæ postea lecturi et exposituri sumus, super Antiochi personâ conveniant, typum eum volunt Antichristi habere—juxta illud quod de Domino Salvatore in septuagesimo primo [secundo apud Hebr. et Sept.] psalmo dicitur, qui prænotatur Salomonis; et omnia quæ de eo dicuntur, Salomoni non valent convenire, &c. ["All our writers are of opinion, that all these things are prophetically descriptive of Antichrist.—And since many of these things which we are about to read and expound, agree with the person of Antiochus, they think him in these to be typical of Antichrist;—just as what is said of our Lord and Saviour in the lxxist Psalm, (or the lxxi^{id} as it is reckoned in the Hebrew and Septuagint,) which is marked a Psalm for Solomon. For there all that is said of him cannot apply to Solomon, &c."] Hieron. ibid.

The prophet proceeds thus, (ver. 31.) And arms shall stand on his part, and they shall pollute the sanctuary of strength, (the temple so called by reason of its fortifications) and shall take away the daily sacrifice, and they shall place the abomination that maketh desolate. Porphyry and his adherents¹ would have those to be signified, who were sent by Antiochus two years after he had spoiled the temple, that they might exact tribute from the Jews, and take away the worship of God, and place in the temple of Jerusalem the image of Jupiter Olympius, and the statues of Antiochus, which are here called the abomination of desolation. And it is very true,² as the writer of the first book of Maccabees saith, that Apollonius, and others, commissioned by Antiochus, did “pollute the sanctuary, and forbid burnt-offerings, and sacrifice, and drink-offerings in the temple, and set up the abomination of desolation upon the altar, and builded idol-altars throughout the cities of Juda on every side.” Josephus likewise³ affirms, that Antiochus forbade the Jews to offer the daily sacrifices, which they offered to God according to the law: he compelled them also to leave off the service of their God, and to worship those whom he esteemed gods; and to build temples, and erect altars to them, in every city and village, and to sacrifice swine upon them every day. This interpretation, therefore, might very well be admitted, if the other parts were equally applicable to Antiochus; but the difficulty, or rather impossibility, of applying them to Antiochus, or any of the Syrian kings, his successors, obliges us to look out for another interpretation. Jerome and the Christians of his time⁴ contend, that all these things were a type of Anti-

¹ Volunt autem eos significari, qui ab Antiocho missi sunt post biennium quam templum expoliaverat, ut tributa exigenter a Judæis, et auferrent cultum Dei, et in templo Jerusalem, Jovis Olympii simulacrum, et Antiochi statuas ponerent; quas nunc abominationem desolationis vocat. [Translated in the text.] Hieron. in locum, col. 1129.

² 1 Macc. i. 45, 46, 54.

³ Καὶ γὰρ τὰς καθημερινὰς θυσίας, ἃς προσέφερον τῷ Θεῷ κατὰ τὸν νόμον, ἐκώλυσεν αὐτοὺς προσφέρειν. Nam et sacrificia quotidiana, quæ offerre solebant ex lege, offerre eos veluit. ἠνάγκασε δ' αὐτοὺς ἀφεμένους τῆς περὶ τὸν αὐτῶν Θεὸν θρησκείας, τοὺς ὑπ' αὐτοῦ νομιζομένους σέβεσθαι· οἰκοδομήσαντας δὲ ἐν ἐκάστῃ πόλει καὶ κώμῃ τεμένη αὐτῶν καὶ βωμοὺς καθιδρύσαντας, θύειν ἐπ' αὐτοῖς σὺς καθ' ἡμέραν. Coegit etiam eos, Dei ipsorum cultu omisso, eos colere quos ipse Deos existimaret; et cum fana ipsorum oppidatim vicatimque extruxissent et aras collocassent, quotidie ibi immolare sues. [Translated in the text.] Joseph. Antiq. Lib. xii. cap. v. sect. iv. p. 533. Edit. Hudson.

⁴ Quæ universa in typo Antichristi, nostri præcessisse contendunt; qui sessurus est in templo Dei, et se facturus ut Deum. [“All which things our writers contend, went before as typical of Antichrist, who is to sit in the temple of God, and to make himself as God.”] Hieron. ibid.

christ, who is about to sit in the temple of God, and to make himself as God : but the fathers had very confused and imperfect notions of Antichrist, the prophecies relating to him having not then received their completion. All things duly considered, no interpretation of this passage appears so rational and convincing, as that proposed by Sir¹ Isaac Newton. “In the same year that Antiochus, by the command of the Romans, retired out of Egypt, and set up the worship of the Greeks in Judea; the Romans conquered the kingdom of Macedon, the fundamental kingdom of the empire of the Greeks, and reduced it into a Roman province; and thereby began to put an end to the reign of Daniel’s third beast. This is thus expressed by Daniel. And after him arms, that is, the Romans, shall stand up. As מלך signifies² after the king, Dan. xi. 3 : so מננו may signify after him. Arms are every where, in this prophecy of Daniel, put for the military power of a kingdom : and they stand up when they conquer and grow powerful. Hitherto Daniel described the actions of the kings of the north and south; but upon the conquest of Macedon, by the Romans, he left off describing the actions of the Greeks, and began to describe those of the Romans in Greece. They conquered Macedon, Illyricum, and Epirus, in the year of Nabonassar 580; thirty-five years after, by the last will and testament of Attalus, the last king of Pergamus, they inherited that rich and flourishing kingdom, that is, all Asia, westward of mount Taurus; sixty-nine years after they conquered the kingdom of Syria, and reduced it into a province, and thirty-four years after they did the like to Egypt. By all these steps the Roman arms stood up over the Greeks; and after ninety-five years more, by making war upon the Jews, they polluted the sanctuary of strength, and took away the daily sacrifice, and then placed the abomination of desolation. For this abomination was placed after the days of Christ, Matt. xxiv. 15; in the sixteenth year of the emperor Adrian, A. C. 132, they placed this abomination by building a temple to Jupiter Capitolinus where the temple of God in Jerusalem had stood. Thereupon the Jews, under the conduct of Barchochab, rose up in arms against the Romans, and in the war had fifty cities demolished, nine hundred and eighty-five of their best towns destroyed, and five hundred and eighty thousand men slain by the sword; and in the end of the war, A. C. 136, were banished Judea upon pain of death, and thenceforward the land remained desolate of its old inhabitants.” In support of this interpretation it may be farther added, that the Jews themselves, as³ Jerome informs us, “understood this passage neither of Antiochus Epiphanes, nor of Antichrist, but of the Romans, of whom it was said above, that the ships of Chittim shall come, and he shall be grieved. After some time, says the prophet, out of the Romans themselves who came to assist Ptolemy, and menaced Antiochus, there shall arise the emperor Vespasian, there shall arise his arms and seed, his son Titus with an army; and they shall pollute the sanctuary, and take away the daily sacrifice, and deliver the temple to eternal desolation." Mr. Mede too assigns¹ the same reason for the prophet's passing from Antiochus Epiphanes to the Romans. "We must know, says he, that after the death of Antiochus Epiphanes the third kingdom comes no more in the holy reckoning, none of the Greek kings after him being at all prophesied of; yea, Daniel himself calling the time of Antiochus his reign the latter end of the Greek kingdom. (viii. 23.) The reason of this is, because during the reign of Antiochus, Macedonia (whence that kingdom sprung) with all the rest of Greece, came under the Roman obedience. From thence, therefore, the Holy Ghost begins the rise of the fourth kingdom, yea, the Roman historians themselves mark out that time for the rise of their empire." And for this purpose he alleges two quotations from Lucius Florus, and Velleius Paterculus. Our Saviour himself making use of this same phrase, the abomination of desolation, in his prediction of the destruction of Jerusalem, may convince us that this part of the prophecy refers to that event.

¹ Sir Isaac Newton’s Observations on Daniel, chap. xii. p. 188, &c. See also chap. ix. p. 125, &c.

² So מן־העת ההיא Nehem. xiii. 21. is after that time or from that time forth. So likewise in this very chap. ver. 23. מן־התחברות אליו is translated after the league made with him. See the particle מן in Noldius and Taylor’s Concordance.

³ Judei autem hoc nec de Antiocho Epiphane, nec de Antichristo, sed de Romanis intelligi volunt, de quibus supra dictum est, Et venient trieres, sive Itali atque Romani, et

What follows can be but in part applied to the times of Antiochus Epiphanes. And such as do wickedly against the covenant shall he corrupt by flatteries: but the people that do know their God shall be strong, and do exploits. And they that understand among the people shall instruct many; yet they shall fall by the sword, and by flame, by captivity, and by spoil many days: (ver. 32, 33.) If it may be said of Antiochus, that he corrupted many by flatteries, humiliabitur. Post multa, inquit, tempora de ipsis Romanis, qui Ptolemæo venire auxilio, et Antiocho comminati sunt, consurget rex Vespasianus, surgent brachia ejus et semina, Titus filius cum exercitu; et polluent sanctuarium, auferentque jube sacrificium, et templum tradent æternæ solitudini. [Translated in the text.] Hieron. ibid.

¹ Mede's Works, B. iv. Epist. xli. p. 797. See too B. iii. p. 667. 672. Lucius Florus, Lib. ii. cap. vii. Cedente Hannibale, præmium victoriæ Africa fuit, et secutus Africam terrarum orbis. Post Carthaginem vinci neminem puduit; secutæ sunt statim Africam gentes, Macedonia, Græcia, Syria, cæteraque omnia, quodam quasi æstu et torrente fortunæ: sed primi omnium Macedones, affectator quondam imperii populus. [Hannibal being worsted, Africa became the reward of the victory, and after Africa the whole world also. None thought it a shame to be overcome, after Carthage was. Macedonia, Greece, Syria, and all other nations, as if carried with a certain current and torrent of fortune, did soon follow Africa: but the first who followed were the Macedonians, a people that sometime affected the empire of the world.] In Velleius Paterculus, Lib. i. cap. vi. is an annotation out of one Æmilius Sura in these words; Assyrii principes omnium gentium rerum potiti sunt, deinde Medi, postea Persæ, deinde Macedones; exinde duobus regibus, Philippo et Antiocho, qui a Macedonibus oriundi erant, haud multo post Carthaginem subactam, devictis, summa imperii ad populum Romanum pervenit. [The Assyrians had the sovereign dominion the first of all nations, then the Medes and Persians; after them the Macedonians: afterwards those two kings, Philip and Antiochus, being overcome, and that a little after that Carthage was subdued, the imperial power came to the Romans.]

by rewards and promises, to forsake the holy covenant, and to conform to the religion of the Greeks; but the people who knew their God, the Maccabees, and their associates, were strong, and did exploits: Yet it cannot so properly be said of the Maccabees, or any of the devout Jews of their time, that they did instruct many, and make many proselytes to their religion; neither did the persecution which Antiochus raised against the Jews, continue many days, or years, according to the prophetic style, for it lasted only a few years. All these things are much more truly applicable to the Christian Jews: for now the daily sacrifice was taken away, the temple was given to desolation, and the Christian Church had succeeded in the place of the Jewish, the new covenant in the room of the old. And such as do wickedly against the covenant, shall he corrupt by flatteries; He, that is the power before described, who took away the daily sacrifice, and placed the abomination of desolation: nor is such a change of number unfrequent in the Hebrew language. “There are some,” saith an ¹ old commentator, “who think that the prophet here had respect to the Christians, whom the wicked idolaters endeavoured, from the beginning of the rising Church, to seduce by flatteries; but the persecutions of tyrants raged chiefly against the apostles and holy teachers.” The Roman magistrates and officers, it is very well known, made use of the most alluring promises, as well as of the most terrible threatenings, to prevail upon the primitive Christians to renounce their religion, and offer incense to the statues of the emperors and images of the gods. Many were induced to comply with the temptation, and apostatized from the faith, as we learn particularly from the famous ² epistle of Pliny to Trajan: but the true Christians, the people who knew their God, were strong, remained firm to their religion, and gave the most illustrious proofs of the most heroic patience and fortitude. It may too, with the strictest truth and propriety, be said of the primitive Christians, that being dispersed every where, and preaching the Gospel in all the parts of the Roman empire, they instructed many, and gained a great number of proselytes to their religion; yet they fell by the sword, and by flame, by captivity, and by spoil many days; for they were exposed to the malice and fury of ten general persecutions, and suffered all manner of injuries, afflictions, and tortures, with little intermission for the space of three hundred years.

After these violent persecutions the Church obtained some rest and relaxation. Now when they shall fall, they shall be holpen with a little help; but many shall cleave to them with flatteries. And some of them of understanding shall fall, to try them, and to purge, and to make them white, even to the time of the end; because it is yet for a time appointed. (ver. 34, 35.) Here Porphyry hath many followers besides Grotius: and he ¹supposeth that by the little help was meant Mattathias of Modin, who rebelled against the generals of Antiochus, and endeavoured to preserve the worship of the true God. It is called a little help, saith he, because Mattathias was slain in battle; and afterwards his son Judas, who was called Maccabæus, fell in fight; and his other brethren were deceived by the fraud of their adversaries. But this is not an exact nor just representation of the case. Mattathias ²was not slain in battle, but died of old age. His son, Judas Maccabæus, several times vanquished the generals of Antiochus, recovered the holy city, cleansed the sanctuary, restored the public worship of God, and not only survived Antiochus some years, but also received the good news of the dethroning and murdering of his son. His brother Jonathan was made high-priest, and his brother Simon sovereign prince of the Jews; and both these dignities, the high-priesthood and the sovereignty, descended to Simon's son, and continued united in the family for several generations. That, therefore, could not be deemed a little help, which prevailed and triumphed over all the power and malice of the enemy, and established the Jewish religion and government upon a firmer basis than before; so far were they from falling again into a state of persecution, as the next verse intimates that they should. It may be concluded, then, that Porphyry was mistaken in the sense of this passage. The Jewish doctors seem to have come nearer the mark: for some of them, as ³Jerome affirms, understood these things of the emperor Severus and Antoninus, who much loved the Jews; and others, of the emperor Julian, who pretended to love the Jews, and promised to sacrifice in their temple. But the most natural way of interpretation is to follow the course and series of events. The Church had now laboured under long and severe persecutions from the civil power. They had fallen by the sword, and by flame, by captivity, and by spoil, many days. The tenth and last general persecution was begun ⁴by Diocletian: it raged, though not at all times equally, ten years; and was suppressed entirely by Constantine, the first Roman emperor, as it is universally known, who made open profession of Christianity; and then the Church was no longer persecuted, but was protected and

¹ Sunt qui putent hic prophetam aspicere ad Christianos, quos impii idololatæ conati fuerunt ab initio nascentis ecclesiæ seducere blanditiis. Potissimè autem sæviit tyrannorum persecutio in apostolos et sanctos doctores. [Translated in the text.] Clarius in locum.

² Plinii Epist. Lib. x. Ep. xcvii.

¹ Parvulum auxilium, Mattathiam significari arbitratur Porphyrius de vico Modin; qui adversum duces Antiochi rebellavit, et cultum veri Dei servare conatus est. Parvum autem, inquit, auxilium vocat, quia occisus est in prælio Mattathias; et postea Judas filius ejus, qui vocabatur Maccabæus, pugnans cecidit; et cæteri fratres ejus adversariorum fraude decepti sunt. [Translated in the text.] Hieron. col. 1130.

² For these particulars the two books of Maccabees, Josephus, Usher, Prideaux, &c. must be consulted.

³ Hebræorum quidam hæc de Severo et Antonino principibus intelligunt, qui Judæos plurimum dilexerunt. Alii vero de Juliano imperatore:—Judæos amare se simulans, et in templo eorum immolaturum se esse promittens. [Translated in the text.] Hieron. ibid.

⁴ Eusebii Eccles. Hist. Lib. viii. cap. ii. et xv, &c. Lactant. de Mort. Persecut. cap. xii. et xlviii. Sic ab eversâ ecclesiâ usque ad restitutam fuerunt anni decem, &c. ["Thus, from the overthrow of the church to its restoration were ten years," &c.]

favoured by the civil power. But still this is called only a little help; because, though it added much to the temporal prosperity, yet it contributed little to the spiritual graces and virtues of Christians. It enlarged their revenues, and increased their endowments; but proved the fatal means of corrupting the doctrine, and relaxing the discipline of the Church. It was attended with this peculiar disadvantage, that many clave to them with flatteries. Many became Christians for the sake of the loaves and the fishes, and pretended to be of the religion, only because it was the religion of the emperor. Eusebius, who was a contemporary writer, ¹ reckons that one of the reigning vices of the time was the dissimulation and hypocrisy of men fraudulently entering into the Church, and borrowing the name of Christians without the reality. Julian himself, as a ² heathen historian relates, that he might allure the Christians to favour him, publicly professed the faith, from which he had long ago privately revolted; and even went to the church, and joined with them in the most solemn offices of religion. He did more; his dissimulation carried him so far as to ³ become an ecclesiastic in lower orders, or a reader in the church. Moreover, this is also called a little help, because the temporal peace and prosperity of the church lasted but a little while. The spirit of persecution presently revived; and no sooner were the Christians delivered from the fury of their heathen adversaries, than they began to quarrel among themselves, and to persecute one another. The ⁴ Consubstantialists, even in the time of Constantine, led the way by excommunicating and banishing the Arians. The latter, under the favour of Constantius and Valens more than retorted the injury, and were guilty of many horrible outrages and cruelties towards the former. Such, more or less, have been the fate and condition of the Church ever since: and generally speaking, those of understanding have fallen a sacrifice to others, some of the best and wisest men to some of the worst and most ignorant. At least, if the persecuted have not been always in the right, yet the persecutors have been always in the wrong. These calamities were to befall the Christians, to try them; and to purge, and to make them white, not only at that time, but even to the time of the end, because

¹ — εἰρωνείαν τ' ἄλεκτον τῶν τὴν ἐκκλησίαν ὑποδομένων, καὶ τὸ χριστιανῶν ἐπιπλάσως σχηματιζομένων ὄνομα.—et fraudulentam simulationem eorum qui callide in ecclesiam irrepebant, et Christianorum nomen falso ac specie tenuis præferebant. [And the inexpressible dissimulation of them who crept into the church, and hypocritically assumed the name of Christians.] Euseb. de vitâ Const. Lib. iv. cap. liv.

² Utque omnes, nullo impediēte, ad sui favorem illiceret, adhærere cultui Christiano fingeat, a quo jampridem occultè desciverat—Et—progressus in eorum ecclesiam, solemniter numine orato discessit. [Translated in the text.] Ammian. Marcell. Lib. xxi. cap. ii. p. 266. Edit. Valesii, Paris. 1681.

³ Theodoret Eccles. Hist. Lib. iii. cap. i. — καὶ τοῦ τῶν ἀναγνώστων ἡξιῶθη χοροῦ, καὶ τὰς ἱερὰς βίβλους ἐν τοῖς ἐκκλησιαστικοῖς συλλόγοις ὑπαγεγίνωσκε τῷ λαῷ. in lectorum numerum adscriptus est, et sacros libros in ecclesiasticis conventibus populo recitavit. [“And he was thought worthy to be admitted into the band of readers, and in ecclesiastical assemblies he read over the sacred books to the people.”] it is yet for a time appointed: And we see even at this day, not to allege other instances, how the poor Protestants are persecuted, plundered, and murdered, in the southern parts of France.

⁴ See Socrates, Sozomen, &c. and Jortin's Remarks on Ecclesiastical History, Vol. III. p. 104, 105.

The principal source of these persecutions is traced out in the following verses. And the king (who shall cause these persecutions) shall do according to his will, and he shall exalt himself, and magnify himself above every god, and shall speak marvellous things against the God of gods, and shall prosper till the indignation be accomplished; for that that is determined, shall be done. (ver. 36.) From this place, as ¹ Jerome asserts, the Jews as well as the Christians of his time understood all to be spoken of Antichrist. But Porphyry, and others who follow him, suppose it to be spoken of Antiochus Epiphanes, that he should be exalted against the worship of God, and grow to that height of pride, that he should command his statue to be placed in the temple of Jerusalem. But if it might be said of Antiochus that he spoke marvellous things against the God of Israel, yet it could not be so well affirmed of him, that he magnified and exalted himself above every god; when ² in his public sacrifices and worship of the gods he was more sumptuous and magnificent than all who reigned before him; and when in his solemn shows and processions were carried the images of all, who among men were called or reputed gods, or demons, and even heroes; as Athenæus reports out of Polybius. He was certainly very superstitious, though sometimes his extravagances and necessities might induce him to commit sacrilege. It is a strong argument in favour of the Jewish and Christian interpretation, that St. Paul appears to have understood this passage much in the same manner, because he applies the same expressions (2 Thess. ii. 3, 4.) to the man of sin, the son of perdition, who opposeth and exalteth himself above all that is called God, or that is worshipped: so that he as God sitteth in the temple of God, showing himself that he is God. The thread of the prophecy will also conduct us to the same conclusion. For the prophet was speaking of the persecutions which should be permitted for the trial and probation of the Church, after the empire was become Christian: and now he proceeds to describe the principal author of these persecutions. A king or kingdom, as we have shown before, and it appears in several instances, signifies any government, state or potentate: and the meaning of this verse we conceive to be, that after the empire was become Christian, there should spring up in the Church an antichristian power, that should act in the most absolute and arbitrary manner, exalt itself above all laws, divine and human, dispense with the most solemn and sacred obligations, and in many respects enjoin what God had forbidden, and forbid what God had commanded. This power began in the Roman emperors, who summoned councils, and directed and influenced their determinations almost as they pleased. After the division of the empire this power still increased, and was exerted principally by the Greek emperors in the east, and by the bishops of Rome in the west; as we shall see in the several particulars hereafter specified by the prophet. This power too was to continue in the Church, and prosper till the indignation be accomplished: for that that is determined shall be done. This must denote some particular period; or otherwise it is no more than saying, that God's indignation shall not be accomplished till it be accomplished. This is the same as what before was called (viii. 19.) the last end of the indignation, and (ix. 27.) the consummation; and it meaneth the last end and consummation of God's indignation against his people the Jews. This seemeth to be expressed plainer in the following chapter, (ver. 7.) And when he shall have accomplished to scatter the power of the holy people, all these things shall be finished. So long this antichristian power should continue. We see it still subsisting in the church of Rome: and it was an ancient tradition among the Jewish doctors, that the destruction of Rome and the restoration of the Jews should fall out about the same period. It is a saying of the famous rabbi David Kimchi, in his comment upon Obadiah, ¹ when Rome shall be laid waste, there shall be redemption for Israel. The curious reader may see more authorities cited by Mr. Mede, in a small Latin tractate upon this subject.

¹ Ab hoc loco Judæi dici de Antichristo putant—Quod quidem et nos de Antichristo intelligimus. Porphyrius autem et cæteri qui sequuntur eum, de Antiocho Epiphane dici arbitrantur, quod erectus sit contra cultum Dei, et in tantam superbiam venerit, ut in templo Jerusalem simulacrum suum poni jussit. [Translated in the text.] Hieron. col. 1131.

² ἐν δὲ ταῖς πρὸς τὰς πόλεις θυσίαις, καὶ ταῖς πρὸς τοὺς θεοὺς τιμαῖς, πάντας ὑπερβαλλε τοὺς βασιλευκώτας, omnes quotquot regnarunt, sacrorum magnificentiâ, quæ illius sumptu in claris urbibus fiebant, cultuque ac veneratione deorum exuperasse. ["In his public sacrifices, and in his acts of worship performed in honour of the gods, he surpassed all that had reigned before him."] πάντων γὰρ τῶν παρ' ἀνθρώποις λεγομένων ἢ νομιζομένων θεῶν ἢ δαιμόνων προσέτι δὲ ἡρώων, εἰδῶλα διήγετο, omnium enim quotquot apud homines vel dicuntur esse dii, aut dæmones, atque adeo heroum simulacra gestabantur. ["For he used to carry about images of all who were called or reputed by men as gods, or demons, or even heroes."] Polyb. apud Athen. Lib. v. p. 194, 195. Edit. Casaubon.

In this prophecy the antichristian power is described as exerted principally in the eastern empire, it was before described as exerted in the western empire, under the figure of the little horn of the fourth beast. Neither shall he regard the God of his fathers, nor the desire of women, nor regard any God; for he shall magnify himself above all. (ver. 37.) That he should not regard the God of his fathers, could not be truly affirmed of Antiochus, ² who compelled all, and especially the Jews and Samaritans, to conform their worship to the religion of the Greeks: and what were the idols that he set up among them, but the Grecian deities, as Jupiter Olympius in the temple of Jerusalem, and Jupiter Xenius, or the defender of strangers, in the temple of the Samaritans? This, therefore, as Jerome rightly observes, agrees better with Antichrist than with Antiochus. By not regarding the God of his fathers, Mr. Mede¹ understands the Roman state's cashiering and casting off the pagan deities and heathen gods which were worshipped in their empire. But the conversion of the Roman state was hinted before, (ver. 34.) and other events have been pointed out since; so that it would be breaking in upon the series and order of the prophecy, to resume the subject again. The character too here given, doth not seem in any part of it to be designed by way of commendation. It is not mentioned to the honour, but to the reproach, of the power here described, that he should forsake the religion of his ancestors, and in a manner set up a new religion. It was not the prophet's intention to praise him for renouncing the idolatry of his heathen fathers, but to blame him for apostatizing, in some measure, from the religion of his Christian fathers; as he did actually both in the Greek and Latin church, by worshipping Mahuzzim instead of the true God, blessed for ever. Another property of the power here described is, that he should not regard the desire of women: and neither could this with any truth be declared of Antiochus, who, besides having a wife,² was lewd and vicious to such a degree, that he had no regard to common decency, but would prostitute his royal dignity, and gratify and indulge his lusts publicly, in the presence of the people. He had a favourite concubine, whom he called after his own name, Antiochis. To her he assigned two cities in Cilicia, Tarsus and Mallus, for her maintenance; and the inhabitants, rather than they would submit to such an indignity, rebelled against him. As Jerome³ says, the interpretation is easier of Antichrist, that he should therefore counterfeit chastity, that he might deceive many. In the Vulgar Latin it is indeed,⁴ And he shall regard the desire of women: but this reading is plainly contrary to the original, and to most other versions; unless with Grotius we understand the copulative and, when it follows a negative, as becoming a negative too, and signifying neither. Grotius explains it of Antiochus,⁵ that he should not spare even women: but the words in the

¹ Cum devastabitur Roma, erit Israeli redemptio. [Translated in the text.] See Mede's Works, B. v. cap. vii. Placita doctorum Hebræorum de Babylonis seu Romæ excidio. [The decisions of the Jewish Rabbies concerning the destruction of Babylon or Rome.] p. 902.

² 1 Macc. i. 41—64. 2 Macc. vi. 1, &c. Joseph. Antiq. Lib. xii. cap. v. sect. iv. p. 533. Edit. Hudson. Hoc magis Antichristo quam Antiocho convenit. Legimus enim Antiochum idolorum Græciæ habuisse cultum, et Judæos atque Samaritanos ad venerationem suorum deorum compulisse. [This agrees better with Antichrist than with Antiochus. For we read that Antiochus worshipped the idols of Greece, and forced the Jews and Samaritans to adore his own gods.] Hieron. ibid.

¹ Mede's Works, B. iii. p. 668.

² — luxuriosissimus fuisse dicitur, et in tantum dedecus per stupra et corruptelas venisse regie dignitatis; ut mimis quoque et scortis publice jungeretur, et libidinem suam populo præsente compleret. [He is said to have been very lewd, and to have brought the royal dignity into such disgrace by his whoredoms and wickedness, that he would gratify his lust in the presence of the people, by connecting himself with actresses and prostitutes.] Hieron. ibid. Vide etiam Theodoret. in locum, p. 689. 2 Macc. iv. 30.

³ De Antichristo facilius interpretatio est; quod ideo simulet castitatem, ut plurimos decipiat. [Translated in the text.] Hieron. ibid.

⁴ Et erit in concupiscentiis fœminarum. [Translated in the text.] Vulg.

⁵ Apud Hebræos ׀ negativam sequens negat, et valet nec, ut sensus sit, neque desiderium

original will not, by any fair construction, admit of this interpretation. The word in the original for women ¹ signifieth, properly, wives, as desire doth conjugal affection. The meaning, therefore, of not regarding the desire of women, is neglecting and discouraging marriage; as both the Greeks and Latins did, to the great detriment of human society, and to the great discredit of the Christian religion. The Julian and Papian laws, which were enacted in the most flourishing times of the Romans for the favour and encouragement of those who were married, and had children, ² Constantine himself repealed, and allowed equal, or greater privileges and immunities, to those who were unmarried and had no children. Nay, he ³ held in the highest veneration those men who had devoted themselves to the divine philosophy, that is, to a monastic life; and almost adored the most holy company of perpetual virgins, being convinced that the God to whom they had consecrated themselves did dwell in their minds. His example was followed by his successors: and the married clergy were discountenanced and depressed; the monks were honoured and advanced; and in the fourth century like a torrent over-ran the eastern church, and soon after the western too. This was evidently not regarding the desire of wives, or conjugal affection. At first only second marriages were prohibited, but in time the clergy were absolutely restrained from marrying at all. So much did the power here described magnify himself above all, even God himself, by contradicting the primary law of God and nature; and making that dishonourable, which the Scripture (Heb. xiii. 4.) hath pronounced honourable in all.

More proofs are alleged in the next verse, of his apostatizing from the true religion of his ancestors. But in his estate shall he honour mulierum, id est, neque fœminas, quanquam amabiles, curabit quicquam, nullâ sexus illius tangetur misericordiâ. [In Hebrew ׀, coming after a negative, has a negative signification, and signifies nor, so that the meaning is, “nor the desire of women,” that is, he will have no regard for women, however lovely, he will not be touched with any pity for that sex.] Grot. in locum.

¹ See Mede's Works, B. iii. p. 668. And it might have been translated in this place, desire of wives, as well as desire of women; for there is no other word used in the original for wives above once or twice in the whole Scripture, but this מְשִׁיבָה, which is here termed women. With the like use of the word desire, the spouse in the Canticles vii. 10. expresseth her well beloved to be her husband; I am my beloved's, and his desire is towards me: that is, he is my husband; for so twice before she expressed herself, ii. 16. My beloved is mine, and I am his; and vi. 3. I am my beloved's, and my beloved is mine. So Ezek. xxiv. 16. the Lord threatening to take away Ezekiel's wife, saith, Behold, I take away from thee the desire of thine eyes מְשִׁיבָה, and afterwards ver. 18. it followeth, And at even my wife died. Yea, the Roman language itself is not unacquainted with this speech. Cicero ad uxorem, En mea lux, meum desiderium.

² Euseb. de Vit. Constantini, Lib. iv. cap. xxvi. Sozomen, Lib. i. cap. ix. Jortin's Remarks on Eccles. Hist. Vol. III. p. 231.

³ διαφερόντως δ' ἡξιοῦτο τιμῆς πλείονος, τοὺς τὸν σφῶν βίον τῇ κατὰ Θεὸν ἀναθένας φιλοσοφίᾳ τὸν οὖν πανάγιον τῶν ἀεί παρθένων τοῦ Θεοῦ χορὸν μονοουχὶ καὶ σέβων διέτελει, ταῖς τῶν τοιῶνδε ψυχαῖς ἔνοικον αὐτὸν ὑπάρχειν ψ καθιέρωσαν ἑαυτὰς Θεὸν πειθόμενοι. Præ cæteris vero eos maxime honorabat, qui se totos divinæ philosophiæ addixissent. Ipsum quidem sanctissimum perpetuarum Dei virginum cætum tantum non venerabatur, cum ipsum cui se consecraverant Deum in earum mentibus habitare, pro certo haberet. [Translated in the text.] Euseb. ibid. cap. xxviii.

the God of forces, or Mahuzzim; and a God whom his fathers knew not, shall he honour with gold and silver, and with precious stones, and pleasant things. (ver. 38.) How can this, with any propriety, or with any degree of sense, be applied to Antiochus? The God Mahuzzim, as ¹Jerome remarks, Porphyry hath ridiculously interpreted the God of Modin, the town from whence came Mattathias and his sons, and where the generals of Antiochus compelled the Jews to sacrifice to Jupiter, that is, to the God of Modin. The God whom his fathers knew not, Grotius also ²says, was Baal Semen, who was the same as Jupiter Olympius: but if so, how was he unknown to the Macedonians? It is necessary, therefore, to conclude with Jerome, ³that this likewise agrees better with Antichrist than with Antiochus. The word Mahuzzim is taken personally, and is retained ⁴in several translations. It is derived from ⁵a radical verb, signifying he was strong; and the proper meaning of it is, munitions, bulwarks, fortresses: but the Hebrews, often using abstracts for concretes, it signifies equally, protectors, defenders, and guardians, as Mr. Mede ⁶hath shown in several instances. This being the derivation and signification of the word, the verse may literally be translated thus, And the god Mahuzzim in his estate shall he honour; even a god whom his fathers knew not, shall he honour with gold and silver, and with precious stones, and desirable things. There are examples of the same construction in other parts of Scripture, as particularly in Psalm lxxxvi. 9, they shall glorify thy name; where ⁷in the original the verb and particle prefixed to the noun are the same as in this passage. But if it be thought requisite to separate God and Mahuzzim, and to express the force of the particle ⁸ל, then the verse may be translated thus, And with God, or, instead of God, Mahuzzim in his estate shall he honour; even with God, or, instead of God, ⁸those whom his fathers knew not, shall he honour with gold

¹ Deum Maozim ridicule Porphyrius interpretatus est, ut diceret in vico Modin, unde fuit Mattathias et filii ejus, Antiochi duces Jovis possuisse statuum, et compulisse Judæos, ut ei victimas immolarent, id est, Deo Modin. [Translated in the text.] Hieron. ibid.

² Is Deus est summus Phœnicum Deus Baal Semen, quem Græci appellant Jovem Olympium, quasi translato nomine. [This god is Baal-Semen, the supreme god of the Phœnicians, whom the Greeks call Olympian Jove, and is a translation of the name into their language.] Grot. in locum.

³ Hoc magis Antichristo quam Antiocho convenit. [Translated in the text.] Hieron. ibid.

⁴ Καὶ θεὸν Μωωζεὶμ ἐπὶ τόπον αὐτοῦ δοξάσει. [And he shall glorify the god Maozim in his place.] Sept. Deum autem Maozim in loco suo venerabitur. [And he shall worship Maozim in his place.] Vulg. Lat.

⁵ מַעוֹ Robur, item Arx, Munio, a עוֹ Roboravit, Roboravit se, Roboratus fuit, [מַעוֹ strength, also a fortress, a munition, from עוֹ he strengthened, he strengthened himself, he was strengthened.] Buxtorf.

⁶ Mede's Works, B. iii. p. 669, 670. Wherefore the Septuagint five times in the Psalms render the word מַעוֹ Mahoz ὑπερασπιστής, (a defender) and the Vulgar Latin as often protector. The places are these, Psalm xxvii. 1; xxviii. 8; xxxi. 3, 5; xxxvii. 39.

⁷ יַבְרִיכוּ לְשֵׁםךָ glorificabunt nomen tuum. [Translated in the text.]

⁸ אֲשֶׁר often signifies ille qui, [he who] illi qui, [they who] as in Numb. xxii. 6. Ruth ii. 2. Gen. vii. 23. Josh. xvii. 16. 1 Sam. xxx. 27, 28, 29, 30, 31. The accusative and silver, and with precious stones and desirable things. However it be translated, the meaning evidently is, that he should establish the worship of Mahuzzim, of protectors, defenders, and guardians. He should worship them as God, or with God; and who is there so little acquainted with ecclesiastical history, as not to know that the worship of saints and angels was established both in the Greek and Latin church? They were not only invoked and adored as patrons, intercessors, and guardians of mankind; but festival days were instituted to them: miracles were ascribed to them; churches were erected to them; their very relics were worshipped; and their shrines and images were adorned with the most costly offerings, and honoured with gold and silver, and with precious stones and desirable things. And what renders the completion of the prophecy still more remarkable is, that they were celebrated and adored under the title of Mahuzzim, of bulwarks and fortresses, of protectors and guardians of mankind. Mr. Mede and Sir Isaac Newton¹ have proved this point by a great variety of authorities cited from the fathers, and other ancient writers. It may be proper to recite some of the principal. Basil, a monk, who was made bishop of Cæsarea in the year 369, and died in the year 378, concludes his oration upon the martyr, Mamas, with praying, “that² God would preserve the church of Cæsarea unshaken, being guarded with the great towers of the martyrs.” In his oration upon the forty martyrs, whose relics were dispersed in all places thereabouts; “These are they,”³ saith he, “who having taken possession of our country, as certain conjoined towers, secure it from the incursions of our enemies:” and he farther invokes them, “O ye common keepers of mankind, good companions of our cares, coadjutors of our prayers, most powerful ambassadors to God,” &c. Chrysostom, in his thirty-second homily upon the Epistle to the Romans, speaking of the relics of Peter and Paul, “This corpse,” saith⁴ he, meaning of Paul, “fortifies that city of Rome more strongly than any tower, or than ten thousand rampires, as also doth the corpse of Peter.”

case is placed before the verb, as מַעֲיִים is in the former period; and otherwise there is no accusative case governed by the verb יִכְבֵּר.

¹ Mede's Works, B. iii. p. 673, 674. Sir Isaac Newton's Observations on Daniel, chap. xiv.

² ἄσειστον τὴν ἐκκλησίαν ταύτην, φρουρουμένην τοῖς μεγάλοις πύργοις τῶν μαρτύρων διατηρήσει. ecclesiam hanc quæ magnis martyrum turribus munitur, custodiat inconcussam. [Translated in the text.] Basil. Op. Vol. II. p. 189. Edit. Benedict.

³ οὗτοι εἰσιν οἱ τὴν καθ' ἡμᾶς χώραν διαλαβόντες, οἰονεὶ πύργοι τινὲς συνεχεῖς, ἀσφαλείαν ἐκ τῆς τῶν ἐναντίων καταδρομῆς παρεχόμενοι. Hi sunt qui regionem nostram obtinentes, veluti densæ quædam turres ipsam adversus hostium incursum tuto communiunt. [Translated in the text.] Ibid. p. 155. ὧ κοινοὶ φύλακες τοῦ γένους τῶν ἀνθρώπων, ἀγαθοὶ κοινωνοὶ φροντίδων, δέησεως συνεργοὶ, πρεσβεύται δυνατώτατοι, κ. τ. λ. O communes generis humani custodes, boni curarum socii, precum fautores, legati potentissimi, &c. [Translated in the text.] p. 156.

⁴ τοῦτο τὸ σῶμα τειχίζει τὴν πόλιν ἐκείνην, ὃ παντὸς πύργου καὶ μυρίων ἐστὶ περιβόλων ἀσφαλέστερον· καὶ μετὰ τούτου τὸ Πέτρον. Hoc corpus urbem illam quasi mœniis cingit, quod omni turre et vallis innumeris tutius est; et cum hoc etiam Petri corpus. [Translated in the text.] Chrysost. Op. Vol. IX. p. 759. Edit. Benedict.

Are not these strong Mahuzzim? In his homily likewise upon the Egyptian martyrs, he speaketh ¹ after this manner, "The bodies of these saints fortify our city more strongly than any impregnable wall of adamant; and as certain high rocks prominent on every side, not only repel the assaults of these enemies, who fall under the senses and are seen by the eyes, but also subvert and dissipate the snares of invisible demons, and all the stratagems of the devil." Hilary also will tell us, that neither the guards of saints, nor [angelorum munitiones] the bulwarks of angels are wanting to those who are willing to stand. Here angels are Mahuzzim, as saints were before. The Greeks at this day, in their Preces Horariæ, thus invoke the blessed virgin, "O thou virgin mother of God, thou impregnable wall, thou fortress of salvation [שועות מען Psalm xxviii.] we call upon thee, that thou would frustrate the purposes of our enemies, and be a fence to this city:" thus they go on, calling her The Hope, Safeguard, and Sanctuary of Christians. Gregory Nyssen, in his third oration upon the forty martyrs, calleth them [δορυφόροι καὶ ὑπερασπιστὰς] guarders and protectors: Eucherius his St. Gervase, the perpetual [propugnator] protector of the faithful. Theodoret ² calleth the holy martyrs Guardians of cities, Lieutenants of places, Captains of men, Princes, Champions and Guardians, by whom disasters are turned from us, and those which come from devils debarred and driven away. By these and other authorities it appears, not only that Mahuzzim were worshipped, but they were worshipped likewise as Mahuzzim. This superstition began to prevail in the fourth century; and in the eighth century, in the year 787, the worship of images and the like was fully established by the seventh general council, and the second which was held at Nice; such different fortune attended that city, that there the first general council established orthodoxy, and there also the seventh established idolatry by law.

Other instances of his regard to Mahuzzim are produced in the next verse. Thus shall he do in the most strong holds with a strange god, whom he shall acknowledge, and increase with glory: and he shall cause them to rule over many, and shall divide the land for gain. (ver. 39.) Porphyry¹ explains this of Antiochus fortifying the city of Jerusalem, and placing garrisons in the other cities, and persuading the people to worship Jupiter; and then giving much honour and glory to those whom he had so persuaded, and causing them to rule over the other Jews, and dividing possessions and distributing rewards to them for their prevarication. But if all the rest could be accommodated to Antiochus, how could Jupiter, whom he had always worshipped, be called a strange god whom he should acknowledge? The worship of Mahuzzim was, indeed, the worship of a strange god, both to those who imposed it, and to those who received it in the Christian church. But for the better understanding of this part of the prophecy, it may be proper to propose a more literal translation of it. Thus shall he do; to the defenders of Mahuzzim, together with the strange god whom he shall acknowledge, he shall multiply honour; and he shall cause them to rule over many, and the earth he shall divide for a reward. Mr. Mede's² translation is somewhat different: but I conceive it is neither so literal, nor so just to the original. And he shall make the holds of the Mahuzzim withal (or jointly) to the foreign god, whom acknowledging he shall increase with honour; and shall cause them to rule over many, and shall distribute the earth for a reward. Let us examine and compare the translations together. In our Bible translation it is, Thus shall he do in the most strong holds, or, as we read in the margin; in the fortresses of munitions, with a strange god: but here Mahuzzim is not taken personally, as it was in the foregoing verse. Mr. Mede translates it thus, And he shall make the holds of the Mahuzzim withal (or jointly) to the foreign god: but then he doth not express the force of the particle prefixed to holds in the Hebrew, which ought not to be neglected. Whom he shall acknowledge and increase with glory, says our Bible translation: but there is no conjunction like and, before increase, and no preposition like with, before glory, in the original. Mr. Mede hath avoided the former objection by changing the verb into a participle. Whom acknowledging he shall increase with honour; but the latter objection remains still in its full strength. The latter part is much the same in all translations: but in our Bible translation there is nothing to which them can be referred, And he shall cause them to rule over many; for it cannot well be said, that he shall cause the strong holds to rule over many. Let us now consider, how these inconveniences may be wholly avoided by a new translation. Thus ¹ shall he do: So the same words are translated, ver. 30, but then here a stop is to be made. To ² the defenders of Mahuzzim, or, to the priests of Mahuzzim: Here the force of the participle is expressed; here again the abstract is used for the concrete, as in the foregoing verse, holds or fortresses, for defenders and supporters, or priests, as it may be translated; and this notion of the word I find ³ approved and confirmed by Father Houbigant. It is manifest that persons must be meant, because they are said afterwards to rule over many. Together ⁴ with the strange god whom he shall acknowledge: This is the most usual signification of the preposition; and if Mahuzzim be not considered as the strange god, it is difficult to say who the strange god is. He ⁵ shall multiply honour: Here is no conjunction, nor preposition inserted, without authority from the original. He shall multiply honour: the noun is the same as the verb in the verse preceding, he shall honour. He shall multiply honour to the defenders and champions of Mahuzzim, as well as to Mahuzzim themselves. Deifying Mahuzzim, he shall also glorify their priests and ministers: ⁶ and he shall cause them to rule over many, and the earth he shall divide for a reward. The prophecy thus expounded, the completion becomes obvious and evident to the meanest capacity. The defenders and champions of Mahuzzim were the monks, and priests, and bishops: and of them it may most truly and properly be said, that they were increased with honour, that they ruled over many, and divided the land for gain. Mr. Mede ⁷ applies the latter part to the Mahuzzim themselves; and he paraphrases it after this manner: “Yea he shall distribute the earth among his Mahuzzim: so that besides several patrimonies which in every country he shall

¹ τὰ γὰρ τῶν ἁγίων σώματα τούτων τείχους παντὸς ἀδάμαντος καὶ ἀρράγους ἀσφαλέστερον ἡμῖν τειχίζει τὴν πόλιν· καὶ καθάπερ σκόπελοι τινες ὑψηλοὶ προβεβλημένοι πανταχόθεν, οὐχὶ τὰς τῶν αἰσθητῶν τούτων, καὶ ὁρμῶν ἐχθρῶν προσβολὰς ἀποκρούονται μόνον, ἀλλὰ καὶ τὰς τῶν ἀοράτων δαιμόνων ἐπιβουλὰς, καὶ πᾶσαν τοῦ διαβόλου μεθοδείαν ἀνατρέπουσι τε, καὶ διαλύουσιν. Sanctorum enim horum corpora quovis adamantino et inexpugnabili muro tutius nobis urbem muniunt; et tanquam excelsi quidam scopuli undique prominentes, non horum, qui sub sensus cadunt, et oculis cernuntur, hostium impetus propulsant tantum, sed etiam invisibilium dæmonum insidias omnesque diaboli fraudes subvertunt, ac dissipant. [Translated in the text.] Ibid. Vol. II. p. 699.

² καὶ ὡς πολιούχους τιμῶσι καὶ φύλακας, veneranturque tanquam urbium præsides atque custodes. [And they honour them as the keepers and guardians of cities.] οὗτοί γέ εἰσιν ἀτέχνως πρόμοι ἀνθρώπων, καὶ πρόμαχοι, καὶ ἐπικούροι, καὶ τῶν κακῶν ἀποτρόπαιοι, καὶ ὑπὸ τῶν δαιμόνων ἐπιφερομένης ἀποδιοπομπούμενοι βλάβας. Hi sunt vere hominum duces, et propugnatores, et auxiliares, malorumque depulsores, damna, quæ a dæmonibus infliguntur, procul arcentes. [These are truly the captains, the defenders and helpers of men, the averters of evils, who drive far away those injuries that are brought upon them from demons.] Theod. Op. Vol. IV. de Græcarum affectionum Curatione. Serm. viii. p. 593, 594. 600. Edit. Paris. 1642.

¹ Quod Porphyrius ita edisserit: faciet hæc omnia, ut muniat arcem Jerusalem, et in cæteris urbibus ponat præsidia, et Judæos doceat adorare Deum alienum: haud dubium quin Jovem significet. Quem quum illis ostenderit, et adorandum esse persuaserit: tunc dabit deceptis honorem, et gloriam plurimam: et faciet cæteris qui in Judæâ fuerint dominari, et pro prævaricatione possessiones dividet, et dona distribuet. [Which Porphyry thus explains: he will do all these things; he will fortify the city of Jerusalem, and put garrisons in the other cities, and teach the Jews to worship a strange god, that is without doubt Jupiter. Whom, when he has thus shown to them, and persuaded them that he is to be worshipped, he will bestow upon them, when thus deceived, much glory and honour, and he will make them to have authority over others in Judea, and for their transgressions of the law, he will divide possessions among them, and distribute presents.] Hieron. col. 1132.

² Mede's Works, B. iii. p. 667.

¹ ועשה Sic faciet. [Thus shall he do.]

² למבצרי מעוזים propugnatoribus Mahuzzimorum. [Translated in the text.]

³ למבצרי מעוזים custodibus Maozim, ex בצר, significatu Arabico videre, esse intelligentem, ut significentur sacerdotes, qui dei istius cultum callebant, atque in eo populum instituebant. Liquet ex verbo המשילים dominos faciet eos, notari in vocabulo מבצרי personas, non munitiones. [“to the defenders of Mahuzzim,” from בצר, which in Arabic signifies to see, to understand, and so denotes the priests, who were skilled in the worship of that god, and instructed the people therein. It is evident, from the word המשילים, “he shall make them lords,” that in the word מבצרי, persons, not munitions, are pointed out.] Houbigant in locum.

⁴ עם אלוה נכר אשר הכיד una cum deo alieno quem agnosceret. [Translated in the text.]

⁵ ירבה כבוד multiplicabit honorem. Ver. 38. יכבד honorabit. [Translated in the text.]

⁶ במחיר יחלק ואדמה et dominari faciet eos in multis: terramque partietur in mercedem. [Translated in the text.]

⁷ Mede's Works, p. 672.

allot them, he shall share whole kingdoms and provinces among them: St. George shall have England, St. Andrew Scotland, St. Denis France, St. James Spain, St. Mark Venice, &c. and bear rule as presidents and patrons of their several countries." But it appears more natural and easy to understand it of the principal teachers and propagators of the worship of Mahuzzim, the bishops, and priests, and monks, and religious orders: and that they have been honoured and revered, and almost adored in former ages; that their authority and jurisdiction have extended over the purses and consciences of men; that they have been enriched with noble buildings and large endowments, and have had the choicest of the lands appropriated for church lands; are points of such public notoriety, that they require no proof, as they will admit of no denial.

Such was the degeneracy of the Christian Church, and now we shall see its punishment, especially in the eastern part of it. And at the time of the end shall the king of the south push at him, and the king of the north shall come against him like a whirlwind, with chariots, and with horsemen, and with many ships, and he shall enter into the countries, and shall overflow, and pass over. (ver. 40.) These things also ¹ Porphyry refers to Antiochus: that in the eleventh year of his reign he warred again against his sister's son Ptolemy Philometor, who hearing of his coming gathered together many thousands of the people; but Antiochus, like a whirlwind, with chariots, and with horsemen, and with a great fleet, entered into many countries, and in passing over laid all waste: and came to the famous land, that is, Judea, and fortified the citadel out of the ruins of the walls of the city, and so marched forwards into Egypt. But here Porphyry may be convicted of falsifying history; for after Antiochus was dismissed out of Egypt by the Romans, he never ventured to go thither again. The ² eleventh was the last year of his reign: and all ³ historians agree, that the latter part of his reign was employed in his eastern expedition, in reducing Artaxias, king of Armenia, to his obedience, and in collecting the tribute among the Persians; and before he returned he died. Others, therefore, ⁴ have said, that the prophet here resumes his

¹ Et hæc Porphyrius ad Antiochum refert: quod undecimo anno regni sui rursus contra sororis filium Ptolemæum Philometorem dimicaverit. Qui audiens venire Antiochum, congregavit multa populorum millia. Sed Antiochus quasi tempestas valida in curribus, et in equitibus, et in classe magna ingressus sit terras plurimas, et transeundo universa vastaverit: veneritque ad terram inclytam, id est, Judæam, — et arcem munierit de ruinis murorum civitatis, et sic perrexerit in Ægyptum. [Translated in the text.] Hieron. ibid.

² Obiit cum regnasset annos solidos undecim. ["He died when he had reigned eleven full years."] Petavii Rat. Temp. Part i. Lib. iv. cap. x. So likewise Eusebius, Jerome, and Sulpitius Severus. Usher's Annals, A.M. 3840. Prideaux, Connect. Part ii. Book iii. Anno 164.

³ 1 Macc. iii. 31, &c. vi. 1, &c. 2 Macc. ix. 1, &c. Joseph. Antiq. Lib. xii. cap. viii. sect. i. p. 544. Edit. Hudson. Valesii Excerpta ex Polybio, p. 145. Appian. de Bell. Syr. p. 131. Edit. Steph. p. 212. Edit. Tollii. Diodorus Siculus apud Hieron. col. 1131.

⁴ Menochius, Sanctius, Maldonatus, &c. apud Poli Synops. Calmet, Houbigant, &c. in locum.

former subject of the wars between Antiochus Epiphanes, king of Syria, and Ptolemy Philometor, king of Egypt. But it is not likely, after giving an account of the conclusion of those wars by the interposition of the Romans, that he should return to them again. Having hitherto deduced things in a regular series, it is more probable that he should continue that series, and proceed to other subsequent events, than that of a sudden he should stop short, and revert to Antiochus, after the intermixture of so many other affairs. But the question is not so much what it was probable for him to do, as what he actually hath done : and we shall find that the remaining parts of the prophecy are more applicable to other subsequent events than to the transactions of Antiochus. The kings of the south and the north are to be taken and explained according to the times of which the prophet is speaking. As long as the kingdoms of Egypt and Syria were subsisting, so long the Egyptian and Syrian kings were the kings of the south and the north : but when these kingdoms were swallowed up in the Roman empire, then other powers became the kings of the south and the north. And at the time of the end, that is, (as Mr. Mede ¹ rightly expounds it) in the latter days of the Roman empire ; shall the king of the south push at him : that is, the Saracens, who were of the Arabians, and came from the south : and under the conduct of their false prophet Mohammed and his successors, made war upon the emperor Heraclius, and with amazing rapidity deprived him of Egypt, Syria, and many of his finest provinces. They were only to push at, and sorely wound the Greek empire, but they were not to subvert and destroy it. And the king of the north shall come against him like a whirlwind with chariots, and with horsemen, and with many ships, and he shall enter into the countries, and shall overflow and pass over : that is, the Turks, who were originally of the Scythians, and came from the north ; and after the Saracens seized on Syria, and assaulted with great violence the remains of the Greek empire, and in time rendered themselves absolute masters of the whole. The Saracens dismembered and weakened the Greek empire, but the Turks totally ruined and destroyed it : and for this reason, we may presume, so much more is said of the Turks than of the Saracens. Their chariots and their horsemen are particularly mentioned ; because their armies consisted chiefly of horse, especially before the institution of the Janizaries, and their standards still are horse-tails. Their ships too are said to be many ; and indeed without many ships they could never have gotten possession of so many islands and maritime countries, nor have so frequently vanquished the Venetians, who were at that time the greatest naval power in Europe. What fleets, what armies were employed in the besieging and taking of Constantinople, of Negropont or Eubœa, of Rhodes, of Cyprus, and lastly of Candia or Crete ? The words shall enter into the countries, and overflow, and pass over, give us an exact idea of their overflowing the western parts of Asia, and then passing over into Europe, and fixing the seat of their empire at Constantinople, as they did under their seventh emperor Mohammed the Second.

¹ Mede's Works, Book iii. p. 674. and Book iv. p. 816.

Among his other conquests this king of the north was to take possession of the holy land, and to subdue the neighbouring countries; but the mixed people of Arabia were to escape out of his hands. He shall enter also into the glorious land, and many countries shall be overthrown; but these shall escape out of his hand, even Edom, and Moab, and the chief of the children of Ammon. (ver. 41.) Porphyry and those of his opinion ¹ affirm, that Antiochus, marching hastily against Ptolemy the king of the south, did not meddle with the Idumeans, and Moabites, and Ammonites, who were situated on the side of Judea; lest his being engaged in another war should render Ptolemy the stronger. Grotius saith, ² that Antiochus spared these nations because they obeyed all his commands; and therefore the Maccabees made war upon them, as the friends of Antiochus. An ancient commentator and venerable father, Theodoret, on the contrary, ³ asserts, that neither do these things any more than the rest fit Antiochus; for having overthrown these nations, he constituted rulers over them, one of whom was Timotheus, the commander of the Ammonites. This Timotheus, I suppose, was the same who is mentioned in the fifth chapter of the first book of Maccabees. The diversity of these accounts demonstrates the difficulty of accommodating this passage to Antiochus. If we believe Theodoret, it cannot be applied to Antiochus in any sense. If we rather follow Porphyry or Grotius, it can be applied to Antiochus only in an improper sense. The words are, Many countries shall be overthrown, but these shall escape out of his hand. The manner of expression sufficiently implies, that he should attempt to conquer these as well as the rest, but not with the same success. These should not like the rest be overthrown; they should deliver themselves, and escape out of his hands; and we read of no such transaction in the history of Antiochus. We shall find that the whole may be much better accommodated to the Othman empire. He shall enter also into the glorious land: the same expression of the glorious land was used before, (ver. 16.) and in both places it is rendered by the Syriac translator ¹ the land of Israel. Now nothing is better known, than that the Turks took possession of the Holy Land, and remain masters of it to this day. Sultan Selim ² entered into Jerusalem in his way to Egypt. And many countries shall be overthrown: Aleppo, Damascus, Gaza, and the neighbouring cities and countries were forced to submit, and receive the yoke of the conqueror. But these shall escape out of his hand, even Edom, and Moab, and the chief of the children of Ammon: these were some of the people who inhabited Arabia, and the Arabians the Turks have never been able with all their forces to subdue entirely. Sultan Selim, their ninth emperor, was the conqueror of the neighbouring countries, and annexed them to the Othman empire; but he could not make a complete conquest of the Arabians. By large gifts ³ he brought over some of their chieftains, and so bribed them to a submission: and ever since his time ⁴ the Othman emperors have paid them an annual pension of forty thousand crowns of gold for the safe passage of the caravans and pilgrims going to Mecca: and for their farther security the Sultan commonly orders the Basha of Damascus to attend them with soldiers and water-bearers, and to take care that their number never fall short of fourteen thousand. This pension was not paid for some years on account of the war in Hungary: and what was the consequence? One of the Arabian princes, in the year 1694, with several thousand of his countrymen, attacked and plundered the caravan going in pilgrimage to Mecca, and made them all prisoners. The neighbouring Bashas were sent against him; but the prince defeated them all by a stratagem, and put them to flight. Among the prisoners who had been taken was the most illustrious Chan of Tartary, whom the Arabians dismissed upon his parole, that he would carry their complaints to the Sultan, and procure the continuance of the pension. He stood to his engagement, and never ceased importuning the Othman court, till the arrears of the pension were duly paid. But notwithstanding this pension, the Arabians, as often as they find a lucky opportunity, rob and plunder the Turks as well as other travellers. An instance of the same

¹ Antiochus, aiunt, festinans contra Ptolemæum regem austri, Idumæos, et Moabitas, et Ammonitas, qui ex latere Judææ erant, non tefigit; ne occupatus alio prælio, Ptolemæum redderet fortiorem. [Translated in the text.] Hieron. ibid.

² His pepercit Antiochus, quod omnia imperata facerent. Vide I Macc. v. Ideo Maccabæi his populis, ut Antiochi amicis, bellum intulere. [Translated in the text.] Grot. in locum.

³ Οὐδὲ ταῦτα δὲ ἀρμόττει τῷ Ἀντιόχῳ· καὶ γὰρ τοὺς καταστρεφάμενος ἡγεμόνας αὐτοῖς κατέστησεν, ὡς εἰς ἣν ὁ Τιμόθεος Ἀμμωνιτῶν ἡγούμενος. Neque hæc Antiocho conveniunt; etenim cum hos subegisset, duces ipsis præfecit, ex quibus unus erat Timotheus dux Ammanitarum. [Translated in the text.] Theodoret in locum, p. 690. Edit. Sirmondi.

¹ Stabitque in terrâ Israelis. [And he shall stand in the land of Israel.] ver. 16. Pervenietque ad terram Israël. [And he shall come into the land of Israel.] ver. 41. Syr.

² Savage's Abridgment of Knolles and Rycaut, Vol. I. p. 243. Prince Cantemir's Hist. of the Othman empire in Selim I. sect. xxi. p. 163. Joannis Leunclavii Pandect. Hist. Turcic. cap. cex. p. 486. Edit. Paris. p. 366. Edit. Venet. Pauli Jovii Hist. Lib. xvii. et Rerum Turc. Comment. in Selymo.

³ Savage, ibid. p. 248. Itaque Selymus per idoneos homines plures eorum duces datâ fide ad se Memphim evocavit, et summâ liberalitate prosecutus est: quorum exemplo fiebat, ut cæteri quotidie accederent, acceptisque muneribus in verba ejus continuo jurarent. [Therefore Selim, by fit persons, invited many of their commanders to Memphis, granting them a safe conduct, and treated them with the greatest munificence. Others, encouraged by their example, came daily to him, and receiving large presents, they swore fidelity to him.] Pauli Jovii Hist. Lib. xviii. p. 1064. Edit. Gryphii, 1561.

⁴ Prince Cantemir's Hist. in Ahmed II. sect. xlix. p. 393. with the note, and also in Bajazet II. sect. i. p. 116. with note 2.

kind happened lately, and is related in the London Gazette of Feb. 11, 1758. “Constantinople, December 23. The Mecca caravan, which has been lately plundered by the Arabs, was attacked by a numerous body of that people, some say from 30,000 to 40,000. The action lasted sixteen hours. They first cut off the Basha of Sidon, who marched out as usual to supply the pilgrims with provisions; he was killed in the engagement; then they turned and attacked the caravan. The Emir Hadge, or commanding Basha, offered them one thousand purses of money to desist; but they refused any terms, being determined by a mere principle of revenge, for their tribes having been laid aside as conductors or guards to the caravan, and others substituted in their place; and it is thought the removal of their favourite, Ezade-Basha, from that post to Aleppo, had also some share in it. At the return to Damascus of the fugitive soldiery, who convoyed the caravan, those in the town rose up in arms against them, as traitors to their faith; a great slaughter ensued, and continued some time; but there are advices since, that all is quieted there. The Basha of the caravan fled to Gaza, with about fifteen or sixteen of his people, and it is thought he will lose his head. The riches lost to many cities of this empire, which are either taken by the Arabs, or dispersed in the deserts, are computed to amount to an immense sum, as they are supplied from India with all sorts of valuable merchandize, spices, &c. by that canal. A like accident happened in the year 1694, under Ahmed the Second.” Other instances of the same kind have happened since; and are also recorded in the London Gazette; but I cannot recollect the dates, and at present have not the collection of Gazettes to apply to upon this occasion. So constantly have the Arabs maintained the same spirit in all ages; and there is no power that can effectually control them. Armies have been sent against parties of the Arabians, but without success. These free-booters have commonly been too cunning for their enemies; and when it was thought that they were well nigh surrounded and taken, they have still escaped out of their hands. So well doth this particular prediction relating to some of the tribes of the Arabians agree with that general one concerning the main body of the nation, (Gen. xvi. 12.) He will be a wild man; his hand will be against every man, and every man’s hand against him: and he shall dwell in the presence of all his brethren.

But though the Arabians should escape out of his hands, yet Egypt should not escape, but fall under his dominion, together with the adjoining countries. He shall stretch forth his hand also upon the countries, and the land of Egypt shall not escape. But he shall have power over the treasures of gold and of silver, and over all the precious things of Egypt: and the Libyans and the Ethiopians shall be at his steps, (ver. 42, 43.) We read, saith ¹ Jerome, that Anti-ochus did these things in part: but what follows, relating to the Libyans and Ethiopians, our doctors assert, agrees better with Antichrist; for Antiochus did not possess Libya and Ethiopia. Theodore too ¹ affirms, that these things also by no means fit Antiochus, for he neither possessed Libya, nor Ethiopia, nor even Egypt itself. This prophecy, then, cannot belong to Antiochus; and indeed the proper application is to the Othman emperor. He shall stretch forth his hand also upon the countries: this implies that his dominions should be of large extent; and he hath stretched forth his hand upon many, not only Asian and European, but likewise African countries. Egypt in particular was destined to submit to his yoke: And the land of Egypt shall not escape; but he shall have power over the treasures of gold and of silver, and over all the precious things of Egypt: and the conquest of Egypt with the neighbouring countries follows next in order after the conquest of Judea with the neighbouring countries, as in the prophecy, so likewise in history. The Othman emperor Selim ² having routed and slain Gauri, sultan of Egypt, in a battle near Aleppo, became master of all Syria and Judea. He then marched into Egypt against Tumanbäi, the new sultan, whom also having vanquished and taken prisoner, he barbarously ordered him to be hanged before one of the gates of Cairo: and so put an end to the government of the Mamalucs, and established that of the Turks in Egypt. The prophecy says particularly, that he should have power over the treasures of gold and of silver, and over all the precious things of Egypt: and history informs us, that ³ when Cairo was taken, "the Turks rifled the houses of the Egyptians, as well friends as foes, and suffered nothing to be locked up or kept private from them: and Selim caused five hundred of the chiefest families of the Egyptians to be transported to Constantinople, as likewise a great number of the Mamalucs' wives and children, besides the sultan's treasure and other vast riches." And since that time it is impossible to say what immense treasures have been drained out of this rich and fertile, but oppressed and wretched country. The prophecy says farther, that some others also of the African nations should submit to the conqueror, the Libyans and the Ethiopians should be at his steps.

¹ Hæc Antiochum ex parte fecisse legimus. Sed quod sequitur, per Libyas et Æthiopias

transibit, magis nostri asserunt Antichristo convenire. Antiochus enim Libyam, quam plerique Africam intelligunt, Æthiopiamque non tenuit. [We read that Antiochus did these things in part. But that which follows, he shall pass through Libya and Ethiopia, our writers affirm agrees better with Antichrist. For Libya, by which most people understand Africa and Ethiopia, Antiochus never possessed.] Hieron. ibid.

¹ Καὶ ταῦτα δὲ ἥκιστα ἀρμόττει τῷ Ἀντιόχῳ· οὔτε γὰρ Λιβύας, οὔτε Αἰθιοπίας ἐκράτησεν, οὔτε δὲ αὐτῆς τῆς Αἰγύπτου. Et hæc item minime conveniunt Antiocho: qui neque Libyâ, neque etiam ipsâ Ægypto potitus est. [Translated in the text.] Theod. ibid. p. 691.

² Prince Cantemir's Hist. in Selim I. sect. xvi. p. 156, &c. Savage's Abridgment of Knolles and Rycaut, Vol. I. p. 240, &c. Pauli Jovii Hist. Lib. xviii. et Rerum Turc. Comment. in Selymo. Leunclav. Annales Turc. p. 341. Edit. Paris. p. 265. Edit. Venet. Pandect. Hist. Turc. cap. ccvii. &c.

³ Savage, ibid. p. 246 et 248. Pauli Jovii Hist. Lib. xviii.

And we read in history, that ¹after the conquest of Egypt, “the terror of Selim’s many victories now spreading wide, the kings of Afric bordering upon Cyrenaica, sent their ambassadors with proffers to become his tributaries. Other more remote nations also towards Ethiopia were easily induced to join in amity with the Turks.” At this present time also many places in Africa besides Egypt, as Algiers, Tunis, &c. are under the dominion of the Turks. One thing more is observable with regard to the fate of Egypt, that the particular prophecy coincides exactly with the general one, as it did before in the instance of Arabia. It was foretold by Ezekiel, (xxix. 14; xxx. 12.) that Egypt should always be a base kingdom, and subject to strangers; and here it is foretold, that in the latter times it should be made a province to the Turks, as we see at this day.

The two next, which are the two last verses of this chapter, I conceive, remain yet to be fulfilled. But tidings out of the east, and out of the north, shall trouble him; therefore he shall go forth with great fury to destroy, and utterly to make away many. And he shall plant the tabernacles of his palace, or rather of his camp, between the seas in the glorious holy mountain, or as it is in the margin, the mountain of delight and holiness; yet he shall come to his end, and none shall help him. (ver. 44, 45.) Prideaux ² and other learned men, as well as Porphyry and Grotius, refer this passage to Antiochus; and to his hearing of the revolt of the provinces in the east, and of Artaxias in the north; and to his going forth therefore in great anger and with a great army to reduce them to obedience. But if this part might be fitly applied to Antiochus, yet how could he be said afterwards to plant the tabernacles of his camp between the seas in the glorious holy mountain; for he returned no more into Judea, but died in that eastern expedition? Porphyry, therefore, ³ considers the word Aphedno, which we translate his

¹ Savage, ibid. p. 248. Ipsique Africæ reges Cyrenaicæ finitimi, qui pendere tributa, et Sulthanis certo fœdere parere consueverant, legationes destinabant.—Omnesque hæ gentes, quæ ad Æthiopiam vergunt, sicuti amicitiam potius, quam imperium Sulthanorum agnoscebant, ita victoriæ famâ perductæ, in Turcarum fidem facile concessere. [Translated in the text.] Pauli Jovii Hist. Lib. xii. p. 1062 et 1065. Edit. Gryph. 1561.

² Prideaux, Connect. Part ii. B. iii. Anno 164. Houbigant in locum, &c. &c. Porphyry, apud Hieron. col. 1133. Grotius in locum. Nuntius belli a Partho et Armenio. Parthi ad orientem Antiocho, Armenii ad septentrionem. De Partho testimonium habemus Taciti, ubi de Judæis agit, “Rex Antiochus demere superstitionem et mores Græcorum dare adnixus, quo minus teterrimam gentem in melius mutaret, Parthico bello prohibitus est.” [“Tidings came of a war from the Parthians and Armenians. Parthia lay on the east of Antiochus, Armenia on the north. Concerning the Parthian war, we have the testimony of Tacitus, where he is treating of the Jews, “king Antiochus, attempting to destroy their superstition, and to introduce the Greek manners among them, was hindered by a Parthian war, from improving that most depraved nation.”]

³ Aphedno, qui inter duo latissima situs est flumina, Tigrim et Euphratem. Quumque hucusque processerit, in quo monte inclyto sederit, et sancto, dicere non potest: quanquam inter duo maria eum sedisse probare non potest: et stultum sit duo Mesopotamiæ flumina, duo maria interpretari. [“Aphedno, which is situated between two very large rivers, the Tigris and Euphrates. When he has proceeded thus far, he cannot tell us, in what illustrious or holy mountain he encamped; although he cannot prove that he encamped between

palace or his camp, as the proper name of a place situated between the two great rivers, Tigris and Euphrates; but, as Jerome replies, he cannot produce any history wherein mention is made of any such place; neither can he say which is the glorious and holy mountain; beside the folly of interpreting two seas by two rivers. Father Houbigant¹ understands it as the name of a place situated in the mountains, in which mountains the book of Maccabees relates Antiochus to have died. This place, says he, was between two seas, namely the Caspian and Euxine, in Armenia itself, where Artaxias prepared rebellion. But neither doth he produce any authority for his assertions. Where doth he read of any such place as Aphedno between the Caspian and Euxine seas? Where doth he read that Antiochus died in the mountains of Armenia? The book of Maccabees, which he allegeth, testifieth no such thing. Both the² books of Maccabees agree that Antiochus died returning out of Persia, through Babylon according to the first book, through Ecbatana according to the second, in the mountains indeed, but it is not said in what mountains. Antiochus was victorious in Armenia, and did not die there. Besides, with what propriety could any mountain in Armenia be called the glorious holy mountain? Theodotion and Aquila too³ render it Aphedanos, the proper name of a place, as doth Jerome also, who taketh it for a place near Nicopolis, which formerly was called Emmaus. Indeed if it be the name of any place, it must be some place in the Holy Land, because in the Psalms (cvi. 24.) the pleasant land, in Jeremiah (iii. 19.) the pleasant land, the goodly heritage, and in Ezekiel (xx. 6.) the glory of all lands, and constantly throughout the book of Daniel, the pleasant land, (viii. 9.) the glorious land, (xi. 16.) and again the glorious land, (ver. 41.) are appellatives of the Holy Land; and so consequently the glorious holy mountain must be Sion, or Olivet, or some mountain in the Holy Land, which lieth between the seas,⁴ the Dead Sea on the east, and the Mediterranean on the west. But after all, Aphedno doth not seem to be the name of any place. They who render it as the pro-two seas: it is besides foolish to interpret the two rivers of Mesopotamia by two seas."] Hieron. col. 1133.

¹ Accipimus Aphedno, ut nomen loci, in montibus situm, in quibus montibus narrat liber Machabæorum Antiochum occidisse. Hic locus erat inter duo maria, nimirum mare Caspium et Pontum Euxinum, in Armenia ipsâ, ubi rebellionem parabat Artaxias. ["We understand Aphedno to be the name of a place. The book of Maccabees relates that Antiochus died in a mountainous country. This place lay between two seas, namely, the Caspian and the Euxine, in Armenia itself, where Artaxias was organising a rebellion."] Houbigant in locum.

² 1 Macc. vi. 4. 2 Macc. ix. 2. 28.

³ Theodotio: Et figet tabernaculum suum in Aphedano inter maria. [And he shall fix his tent in Aphedanus between the seas.] Aquila: Et plantabit tabernaculum prætorii sui in Ἀφάδαν inter maria. [And he shall plant the tabernacle of his tent in Aphadanus between the seas.] Aphedno juxta Nicopolim, quæ prius Emmaus vocabatur. [Aphedno near Nicopolis, which was formerly called Emmaus.] Hieron. col. 1134.

⁴ Inter duo maria, mare videlicet quod nunc appellatur Mortuum ab oriente, et mare Magnum. ["Between two seas, namely, the sea on the east, which is now called the Dead Sea, and the Mediterranean."] Hieron. col. 1134.

per name of a place, most probably did not know what else to make of it; but the word ¹ occurs in Jonathan's Targum of Jeremiah, (xliii. 10.) and there it signifies a pavilion, and he shall spread his royal pavilion over them; and to the same purpose it should be translated here, he shall plant the tabernacles of his camp between the seas in the glorious holy mountain. This prophecy, then, cannot by the help of any explanation be made to fit and agree with Antiochus; and in our application of it to the Othman empire, as these events are yet future, we cannot pretend to point them out with any certainty and exactness. Mr. Mede ² supposeth that "the tidings from the east and north" may be that of the return of Judah and Israel from those quarters. For Judah was carried captive at the first into the east, and Israel by the Assyrian into the north, (namely in respect of the Holy Land,) and in those parts the greatest number of each are dispersed at this day. Of the reduction of Israel from the north, see the prophecies, Jer. xvi. 14, 15, and chap. xxiii. 8, also chap. xxxi. 8. Or if this tidings from the north may be some other thing, yet that from the east I may have some warrant to apply to the Jews' return from that of the sixth vial in the Apocalypse, (xvi. 12.) where the waters of the great river Euphrates are dried up, to prepare the way of the kings of the east." If this application be not admitted, yet it is universally known that the Persians are seated to the east of the Othman dominions, and the Russians to the north. Persia hath, indeed, of late years been miserably torn and distracted by intestine divisions; but when it shall unite again in a settled government, under one sovereign, it may become again, as it hath frequently been, a dangerous rival and enemy to the Othman emperor. The power of Russia is growing daily, and it is a current tradition among the common people in Turkey, that their empire shall one time or other be destroyed by the Russians. Sir Paul Rycaut, in his account of the ³ Present State of the Greek Church, speaking of the respect and reverence which the Muscovites have for the see of Constantinople, says also that "the Greeks on the other side have an esteem and affection for the Muscovites, as for those whom ancient prophecies mentioned to be designed by God for their avengers and deliverers in after ages." Which, if it proveth nothing more, yet proveth that the Greek Church interpreted this prophecy much in the same sense as we explain it. However this may be, the Porte is at all times jealous of the junction of the two powers of Persia and Russia, and exerts all its policy to prevent it. They are certainly two very formidable neighbours to the Turks, and who can say what tidings may or may not come from thence to trouble the Porte? who can say, how unlikely soever it be at present, that they may not hereafter be made instruments of providence in the restoration of the Jews? Whatever be the motive and occasion, the Turk shall go forth with great fury to destroy, and utterly to make away many. The original word, which we translate utterly to make away,¹ signifies to anathematize, to consecrate, to devote to utter perdition, so that it strongly implies that this war should be made upon a religious account. And he shall plant the tabernacles of his camp between the seas in the glorious holy mountain. It is a notion advanced by² some commentators, that here both the Turk and the Pope are signified, the former of whom hath fixed his seat between the Mediterranean and Euxine seas at Constantinople, and the latter between the Mediterranean and Adriatic at Rome; both Antichrists, the one without, the other within the temple of God. But such notions are more ingenious than solid, and have rather the resemblance of worth than the substance. Between the seas in the glorious holy mountain must denote, as we have shown, some part of the Holy Land. There the Turk shall encamp with all his power, yet he shall come to his end, and none shall help him, shall help him effectually, or deliver him. The same times and the same events seem to be presignified in this prophecy, as in that of Ezekiel concerning Gog of the land of Magog. He likewise is a northern power. He is represented as of³ Scythian extraction. (xxxviii. 2.) He cometh from his place out of the north parts. (ver. 15.) His army too is described as consisting chiefly of horses and horsemen. (ver. 4.) He likewise hath Ethiopia and Libya with him. (ver. 5.) He shall come up against the people of Israel in the latter days, (ver. 16.) after their return from captivity. (ver. 8.) He too shall encamp upon the mountains of Israel. (xxxix. 2.) He shall also fall upon the mountains of Israel, and all the people that is with him. (ver. 4.) There the Divine judgments shall overtake him, (xxxviii. 22, 23.) and God shall be magnified and sanctified in the eyes of many nations.

¹ אֶפְרָיִם Et extendet tentorium suum super eos. [And he shall spread his pavilion over them.]

² Mede's Works, B. iv. p. 816.

³ Cap. iii. p. 83.

At that time there shall be great tribulation, (xii. 1.) such as never was since there was a nation, even to that same time; and after that shall be the general resurrection, (ver. 2.) and many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt. They certainly are guilty of manifest violence and injury to the sacred text, and rack and torture the words to confess a meaning which they never meant, who contend that nothing more was meant in this passage, than the persecution of the Jews by Antiochus, and the Maccabees after some time coming out of the holes and caves of the earth, wherein they had concealed themselves from the fury and cruelty of their enemies. These critics usually pretend to be strong advocates for the literal and obvious meaning of the prophecies; but here they pervert the plainest expressions into figures, and prefer the most forced to the most natural interpretation. The troubles under Antiochus were neither in degree nor duration to be compared to what the nation had suffered under Nebuchadnezzar; so that the time of Antiochus could not be reckoned a time of trouble, such as never was since there was a nation. The Maccabees too came out of their lurking holes and caves, and recovered their city, and cleansed the sanctuary, even before the death of Antiochus himself: but the resurrection in this place is described as something subsequent to the destruction of the king of the north. Besides, how could the Maccabees, who were a set of brave virtuous men, zealously devoted to their religion, liberty, and country, by coming forth from the rocks and caves to oppose the enemy in the open field, be said to awake, some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt? Such expressions can with truth and propriety be applied only to the general resurrection of the just and unjust; and though it be said many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, yet that is no objection to the truth here delivered; for as ¹Theodoret observed long ago, the prophet had said many for all, in the same manner as St. Paul hath put many for all, when he said, If through the offence of one man be dead, much more the grace of God, and the gift by grace which is by one man, Jesus Christ, hath abounded unto many: (Rom. v. 15.) and again, (ver. 19.) As by one man's disobedience many were made sinners, so by the obedience of one shall many be made righteous. The proper conclusion of all is the general resurrection, and the consequent happiness of the wise and good; (ver. 3.) And they that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament, and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars for ever and ever.

¹ חָרַם Anathematizavit, anathemate vel anathemati, interneconi, perditioni devovit: consecravit, devotum effecit. [He anathematized, or devoted to a curse, to utter destruction, to perdition, he consecrated, or rendered devoted.] Buxtorf.

² See Poole, and his additional commentators.

³ Vide Bocharti Phaleg. Lib. iii. cap. xiii. col. 187, &c.

The angel having thus finished his prophecy of the things noted in the Scripture of truth, an inquiry is made relating to the time of these events. It was said before (xi. 40.) At the time of the end shall the king of the south push at him: and here the question is asked, (ver. 6.) ²*How long shall be the end of these wonders*? The answer is returned in the most solemn manner, (ver. 7.) that it shall be for a time, times, and a half. A time, times, and a half, as there hath been occasion to show in a former dissertation, are three prophetic years and a half; and three prophetic years and a half are 1260 prophetic days; and 1260 prophetic days are 1260 years. The same time; therefore, is prefixed for the desolation and oppression of the eastern church, as for the tyranny of the little horn (vii. 25.) in the western church. And it is wonderfully remarkable, that the doctrine of Mohammed was first forged at Mecca, and the supremacy of the pope was established by virtue of a grant from the wicked tyrant Phocas, in the very same year of Christ 606. "It is to be observed," says ¹ Dean Prideaux, "that Mahomet began this imposture about the same time that the bishop of Rome, by virtue of a grant from the wicked tyrant Phocas, first assumed the title of Universal Pastor, and thereon claimed to himself that supremacy which he hath been ever since endeavouring to usurp over the Christian church. [Phocas made this grant A.D. 606, which was the very year that Mahomet retired to his cave to forge that imposture there, which two years after, A.D. 608, he began to propagate at Mecca.] And from this time, both having conspired to found themselves an empire in imposture, their followers have been ever since endeavouring by the same methods, that is, those of fire and sword, to propagate it among mankind; so that Antichrist seems at this time to have set both his feet upon Christendom together, the one in the east, and the other in the west; and how much each have trampled upon the Church of Christ, the ages ever since succeeding have abundantly experienced." There is a farther notation of the time in the following words, And when he shall have accomplished to scatter the power of the holy people, all these things shall be finished: when the Jews shall be recalled from their dispersion, then all these things shall receive their full and final completion. The prophet, not sufficiently understanding this answer, ² inquired, (ver. 8.) What or how long shall be these latter times or latter wonders? And it is answered again, (ver. 11.) that from the time of taking away the daily sacrifice, and setting up the abomination that maketh desolate, there shall be a thousand two hundred and ninety days. The days still are prophetic days or years; but even if they were natural days, they could by no manner of computation be accommodated to the times of Antiochus Epiphanes. The setting up of the abomination of desolation appears to be a general phrase, and comprehensive of various events. It is applied by the writer of the first book of Maccabees (i. 54.) to the profanation of the temple by Antiochus, and his setting up the image of Jupiter Olympius upon the altar of God. It is applied by our Saviour (Matt. xxiv. 15.) to the destruction of the city and temple by the Romans, under the conduct of Titus, in the reign of Vespasian. It may, for the same reason, be applied to the Roman emperor Adrian's building a temple to Jupiter Capitolinus, in the same place where the temple of God had stood, and to the misery of the Jews, and the desolation of Judea that followed. It may with equal justice be applied to the Mohammedans invading and desolating Christendom, and converting the churches into mosques; and this latter event seemeth to have been particularly intended in this passage. If this interpretation be true, the religion of Mohammed will prevail in the east the space of 1260 years, and then a great and glorious revolution will follow: perhaps the restoration of the Jews, perhaps the destruction of Antichrist; but another still greater and more glorious will succeed; and what can this be so probably as the full conversion of the Gentiles to the Church of Christ, and the beginning of the millennium or reign of the saints upon earth? For (ver. 12.) blessed is he that waiteth, and cometh to the thousand three hundred and five and thirty days. Here are, then, three different periods assigned, 1260 years, 1290 years, and 1335 years; and what is the precise time of their beginning, and consequently of their ending, as well as what are the great and signal events which will take place at the end of each period, we can only conjecture, time alone can with certainty discover. If we are mistaken in our conjectures, it is no more than ¹Mr. Mede and other much more learned men have been, who have gone before us in this argument. It is, indeed, no wonder that we cannot fully understand and explain these things; for as the angel said to Daniel himself, (ver. 4 and 9.) though many should run to and fro, should inquire and examine into these things, and thereby knowledge should be increased; yet the full understanding of them is reserved for the time of the end, the words are closed up, and sealed till the time of the end. But however the great uncertainty of these events, which remain yet to be fulfilled, cannot shake the credit and certainty of those particulars which have already been accomplished. As ²Prideaux judiciously observes, it is the nature of such prophecies not to be thoroughly understood till they are thoroughly fulfilled. Not that such prophecies are therefore like the pagan oracles, of an ambiguous, equivocal, and delusive nature. Obscure they may be, but there is a wide difference between obscurity and equivocation. The pagan oracles were purposely worded in such a manner, that if they failed in one sense, they might hold good in another, though ³directly the contrary; the Scripture prophecies have a determined meaning, and though sometimes they may comprehend more events than one, yet are they never applicable to contrary events. The pagan oracles were delivered for the immediate direction of those who consulted them, and therefore a mistake at first was of more fatal consequence; the Scripture prophecies were intended more for the instruction and illumination of future ages,

¹ πολλοὶ δὲ, ἀντὶ τοῦ πάντες ἔφη. καὶ γὰρ ὁ μακάριος Παῦλος ἀντὶ τοῦ πάντες, οἱ πολλοὶ τέθεικε λέγων, κ. τ. λ. Multi autem pro omnes dixit. Etenim beatus quoque Paulus multi pro omnes posuit, cum dixit, &c. [Translated in the text.] Theod. in locum, p. 693.

² עֲדֹמְתִי קֵץ הַפְּלִאוֹת Usque quo finis mirabilium? [How long the end of wonderful things?] Pagnin. Usque quo finis horum mirabilium? [How long the end of these wonderful things?] Vulg. "ἕως πότε τὸ πέρας ὧν εἰρηκας τῶν θαυμασίων; [How long the end of the wonders which thou hast declared?] Sept.

¹ Life of Mahomet, p. 13. 8th Edit. See also Bishop Jewel's Reply to Harding, p. 181.

² מָה אַחֲרֵית אֱלֹהִים. [Translated in the text.]

¹ See Mede's Works, B. iii. p. 717. De numeris Danielis.

² Prideaux, Connect. Part ii. Book iii. in the conclusion.

³ As in these instances:

Cræsus Halym penetrans magnam pervertet opum vim. [Cræsus, in passing the river Halys, will destroy a great empire.]

Aio te, Æacida, Romanos vincere posse. [I declare, you, son of Æacus, Romans can subdue.]

and therefore it is sufficient if time shall illustrate the particulars. The pagan oracles are no sooner understood than they are despised, whereas the reverse is true of the Scripture prophecies, and the better you understand, the more you will admire them. The completion of the former demonstrates their fraud and futility, the completion of the latter their truth and dignity.

Upon the whole, what an amazing prophecy is this, comprehending so many various events, and extending through so many successive ages, from the first establishment of the Persian empire, above 350 years before Christ, to the general resurrection! And the farther it extends, and the more it comprehends, the more amazing surely, and the more divine it must appear, if not to an infidel like Porphyry, yet to all who like Grotius have any belief of revelation. How much nobler and more exalted the sense, more important and more worthy to be known by men and to be revealed by God, when taken in this extended view, and applied to this long and yet regular series of affairs, by the most easy and natural construction, than when confined and limited to the times and actions of Antiochus, to which yet it cannot be reconciled by the most strained and unnatural interpretation! What stronger and more convincing proofs can be given or required of a Divine providence, and a Divine revelation, that there is a God who directs and orders the transactions of the world, and that Daniel was a prophet inspired by him, a man greatly beloved, as he is often addressed by the angel! Our blessed Saviour (Matt. xxiv. 15.) hath bestowed upon him the appellation of Daniel the prophet, and that is authority sufficient for any Christian; but in this work have been produced such instances and attestations of his being a prophet, as an infidel cannot deny, or, if he denies, cannot disprove. The character that is given of him by Josephus is nothing more than strictly his due. It expresseth the sense of the Jewish church, and the same must be the sentiments of every man who will consider and compare the prophecies and events together. This historian is commending the superior excellence of Daniel's predictions; "for he was wont,"¹ says he, "not only to foretel future things, as other prophets also did, but he likewise determined the time wherein they should happen." Afterwards, having mentioned some of Daniel's prophecies, he² proceeds thus:

¹ Οὐ γὰρ τὰ μέλλοντα μόνον προφητεύων διετέλει, καθάπερ καὶ οἱ ἄλλοι προφήται, ἀλλὰ καὶ καιρὸν ὥριζεν, εἰς ὃν ταῦτα ἀποβήσεται. Non enim futura solum, quemadmodum et alii vates, prædicere solebat, sed et tempus, quo hæc eventura erant, præfinivit. [Translated in the text.] Joseph. Antiq. Lib. x. cap. xi. sect. vii. p. 465. Edit. Hudson.

² ταῦτα πάντα ἐκείνος, Θεοῦ δείξαντος αὐτῷ, συγγράψας κατέλειψεν ὥστε τοὺς ἀναγινώσκοντας, καὶ τὰ συμβαίνοντα σκοποῦντας, θανατῶν ἐπὶ τῇ παρὰ τοῦ Θεοῦ τιμῇ τὸν Δανιήλον· καὶ τοὺς Ἐπικουρείους ἐκ τούτων εὐρίσκειν πεπλανημένους, οἱ τὴν τε πρόνοιαν ἐκβάλλουσι τοῦ βίου, καὶ τὸν Θεὸν οὐκ ἀξιοῦσιν ἐπιτροπεύειν τῶν πραγμάτων, οὐδ' ὑπὸ τῆς μακαρίας καὶ ἀφθάρτου πρὸς διαμονὴν τῶν ὅλων οὐσίας κυβερνᾶσθαι τὰ σύμπαντα, ἄμοιρον δ' ἡνιώχου καὶ φροντιστοῦ τὸν κόσμον αὐτομάτως φέρεσθαι λέγουσιν. ὃς εἰ τούτον ἀπροσάτῃτος ἦν τὸν τρόπον, καθάπερ καὶ τὰς ναῖς ἐρήμους κυβερνητῶν καταδομένους ὁρῶμεν ὑπὸ τῶν πνευμάτων, ἧ καὶ τὰ ἄρματα περιτρεπόμενα μὴ ἔχοντα τοὺς ἡνιοχοῦντας, συντριβείς ἂν ἀπὸ τῆς ἀπρονοήτου φορᾶς,

“All these things, God having shown them to him, he left in writing, that they who read them, and behold the events, might admire Daniel for the honour vouchsafed unto him by God, and by these things might be convinced how much the Epicureans are mistaken, who deny a providence, and allow not that God regards human actions, nor that all things are governed by a blessed and immortal Being for the preservation of the whole, but assert that the world is carried on at random, without a guide or ruler; which, if it was without a governor, as they pretend, would have been destroyed by the blind impulse, and have perished and come to nought, as we see ships, which are destitute of pilots, overwhelmed by the storms, and chariots overturned and broken to pieces, which have no drivers. For by these things predicted by Daniel, they appear to me widely to err from the truth, who declare that God hath no care of human affairs; for we should not see all things succeed according to his prophecies, if it happened that the world was governed by chance.”

In short, we see how well Daniel deserves the character which his contemporary Ezekiel hath given him (xiv. and xxviii.) for his piety and wisdom, and these usually go together, for as the angel saith, (ver. 10.) none of the wicked shall understand, but the wise shall understand. Happy are they who both know the will of God and do it!

XVIII.

OUR SAVIOUR'S PROPHECIES RELATING TO THE DESTRUCTION OF JERUSALEM.

IN FOUR PARTS.

PART I.

THE Jewish Church, consisting only of a single nation, and living under a theocracy or the immediate government of God, experienced continual interpositions of a particular extraordinary provi-ἀπολώλει καὶ διεφθίρειτο. τοῖς γὰρ προειρημένοις ὑπὸ Δανιήλου, δοκοῦσί μοι σφόδρα τῆς ἀληθοῦς δόξης διαμαρτάνειν, οἱ τῷ Θεῷ μηδεμίαν εἶναι περὶ τῶν ἀνθρωπίνων ἀποφαινόμενοι πρόνοιαν· οὐ γὰρ ἂν κατὰ τὴν ἐκείνου προφητείαν, εἰ συνίβαiven αὐτοματισμῷ τιμὴν τὸν κόσμον διάγειν, πάντα ἐωρῶμεν ἀποβαίνοντα. Ista omnia, a Deo sibi monstrata, scriptis consignata reliquit: ut qui ea legerint, et eventus perspexerint, Danielum mirentur ob tam insignem honorem illi a Deo habitum; et Epicureos magno in errore versari deprehendant, qui providentiam e vita ejiciunt, et e Deo res humanas curari non existimant, nec omnia a natura beata et immortalī (ad universitatis rerum perennitatem) regi et administrari volunt, sed sine rectore et curatore mundum suo pte impetu ferri asseverant: qui si ita ut illi autumant præsīde careret, quemadmodum naves sine gubernatoribus videmus procellis et fluctibus obrui, currusque aurigis destitutos percelli, temerario sane motu labefactatus concideret periretque. Cumque ista prædicta fuerint a Daniele, videntur mihi a verâ opinione multum aberrare, qui Deum non curare pronunciant quid agat genus humanum: non enim vaticiniis ejus eventus respondisse conspiceremus, si omnia in mundo temeritate regerentur. [Translated in the text.] Ibid. p. 466.

dence in its favour and protection, and was from time to time instructed by prophets raised up and sent one after another as occasions required. But the Christian Church being designed to comprehend the whole world, was like the world at first erected by miracle, but like the world too is since governed by a general ordinary providence, by established laws, and the mediation of second causes. This difference in the nature and constitution of the two churches is the reason why prophecies and miracles, and other supernatural powers, which were continued so long, and repeated so frequently in the Jewish Church, were in the Christian Church confined to the first ages, and limited chiefly to the persons of our blessed Saviour, and his disciples, and their companions. There were prophets (Acts xi. 27.) who came from Jerusalem unto Antioch. One of them, named Agabus (ver. 28.) foretold the great dearth, which came to pass in the days of Claudius Cæsar. The same prophet foretold likewise (Acts xxi. 10, 11.) the bonds and imprisonment of St. Paul. Philip the Evangelist had also (ver. 9.) four daughters, virgins, which did prophesy. Prophetic as well as other spiritual gifts abounded in the primitive church; their sons and their daughters did prophesy, (Acts ii. 17.) their young men saw visions, and their old men dreamed dreams. But the only prophecies which the Spirit of God hath thought fit to record and preserve, are some delivered by our blessed Saviour himself and by his apostles, particularly St. Paul and St. John.

Our blessed Saviour, as he was the great subject of prophecy, so was an illustrious prophet himself; as he excelled in all other spiritual gifts and graces, so was eminent in this also; and gave ample proofs of his Divine commission by his prophecies as well as by his miracles. What he said upon one occasion is equally applicable to all his predictions, that their accomplishment is a sufficient attestation of his being the Messiah; (John xiii. 19.) Now I tell you before it come, that when it is come to pass, ye may believe that I am he. He foretold not only his own passion, death, and resurrection, but also the manner and circumstances of them, that he should be betrayed by one of the twelve, even by Judas Iscariot the son of Simon; that all the rest should be offended because of him that very night, and, notwithstanding their protestations to the contrary, should forsake him and fly; that Peter particularly, who was more zealous and eager than the rest, before the cock crew twice should deny him thrice; that he should be betrayed to the chief priests, and be delivered to the Gentiles to mock, and to scourge, to spit upon, and to kill him; that he should be crucified, and the third day should rise again, and appear to his disciples in Galilee. He foretold that his apostles should be enabled of plain fishers to become fishers of men; that they should be endued with power from on high to speak with new tongues and to work miracles; that they should go forth into all nations, and publish the glad tidings of the Gospel unto the uttermost parts of the earth. He foretold the persecutions and sufferings which his disciples should undergo, and particularly by what manner of death Peter in his old age should glorify God, and that John should survive till after the destruction of Jerusalem. He foretold the rejection of the Jews and the calling of the Gentiles; that the kingdom of heaven should be taken away from the former and be given to the latter, who should bring forth the fruits thereof; that the number of his disciples, from small beginnings, should increase wonderfully, as a little seed groweth into a tree, and a little leaven leaveneth the whole lump; that his Church should be so founded upon a rock, that it should stand for ever, and all the powers of hell should not prevail against it. These things were most of them contrary to all human appearances, and impossible to be foreseen by human prudence or effected by human power; and he must be thoroughly acquainted with the hearts of men, and with the direction and disposition of future events, who could foretel them with such certainty and exactness; and some of them are actually accomplishing in the world at this present time.

But none of our Saviour's prophecies are more remarkable than those relating to the destruction of Jerusalem, as none are more proper and pertinent to the design of these discourses; and we will consider them as they lie in the twenty-fourth chapter of St. Matthew, taking in also what is superadded by the other evangelists upon parallel occasions. These prophecies were delivered by our Saviour about forty years, and were committed to writing by St. Matthew about thirty years, before they were to take effect. St. Matthew's is universally allowed to be the ¹ first of the four Gospels; the first in time, as it is always placed the first in order. It was written, as ² most writers affirm, in the eighth year after the ascension of our Saviour. It must have been written before the dispersion of the apostles, because ³ St. Bartholomew is said to have taken it along with him into India, and to have left it there, where it was found

¹ πρῶτον μὲν γέγραπται τὸ κατὰ τὸν ποτε τελώνην, ὕστερον δὲ ἀπόστολον Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ Ματθαῖον. Primum evangelium scriptum esse a Matthæo, prius quidem publicano, postea vero apostolo Jesu Christi. Origen. apud Euseb. Eccles. Hist. Lib. vi. cap. xxv. &c. &c. ["The first was written by Matthew, who once was a publican, but afterwards an apostle of Jesus Christ." See Origen quoted by Eusebius in his Ecclesiastical history, Book vi. chap. xxv. &c.]

² On croit que saint Matthieu commença a travailler a son évangile, la huitième année après la résurrection du Sauveur; c'est à dire, l'an 41 de l'ère vulgaire. Presque tous les anciens manuscrits Grecs le marquent ainsi à la fin de son volume. Calmet Preface. Magno consensu perhibent Patres, Matthæum, in gratiam credentium ex Judæis in Palæstinâ, evangelium suum scripsisse, et quidem, ut multi addunt, Hierosolymis, octavo post ascensionem Christi anno, qui Claudii imperatoris primus fuit. Wetstein. ["It is believed that St. Matthew began to engage in writing his Gospel in the eighth year after the resurrection of the Saviour; that is, in the forty-first year of the Vulgar Æra. This is marked in almost all the Greek manuscripts at the end of his book." See Calmet's Preface. "The Christian fathers, with general consent, declare, that Matthew wrote his Gospel for the sake of believers among the Jews in Palestine, and indeed, as many add, in the city of Jerusalem, in the eighth year after the ascension of Christ, which was the first of the emperor Claudius." Wetstein.]

³ Euseb. Eccles. Hist. Lib. v. cap. x. Hieron. Catalog. Script. Eccles. in Pantæno, p. 112. Vol. IV. Part ii. Edit. Bened.

several years afterwards by Pantænus. If the general tradition of antiquity be true, that it was written originally in Hebrew, it certainly was written before the destruction of Jerusalem, for there was no occasion for writing in that language after the destruction of Jerusalem, and the dispersion of the Jews into all nations. It is asserted upon ¹ good authority, that the Gospels of Mark and Luke were approved and confirmed, the one by St. Peter, the other by St. Paul. So Papias, bishop of Hierapolis and Clemens Alexandrinus say expressly that the Gospel of St. Mark was written at the desire of the new converts and ratified by St. Peter. So the learned Origen affirms, that the second Gospel is that of Mark, who wrote as Peter dictated to him; and the third Gospel is that of Luke, which is commended by Paul. So Tertullian saith, that Mark's Gospel is affirmed to be Peter's, whose interpreter Mark was; and Luke's Gospel they are wont to ascribe to Paul. So Jerome saith that the Gospel according to Mark, who was the disciple and interpreter of Peter, is said to be Peter's. These authorities are more than sufficient to weigh down the single testimony of Irenæus to the contrary; but besides these, Gregory Nazianzen, Athanasius, and other fathers might be alleged to prove, that the Gospels of Mark and Luke received the approbation, the one of St. Peter, the other of St. Paul; and it is very well known that both these apostles suffered martyrdom under Nero. The Gospel of St. Mark must have been written at latest in the reign of Nero, for he died in that reign, in the ² eighth year of Nero according to Jerome. The Gospel of St. Luke was written before the Acts of the Apostles, as appears from the preface to the latter; and the Acts of the Apostles concluding with St. Paul's dwelling at Rome two years, it is probable that this book was written soon after that time, and before the death of St. Paul. It may be concluded then as certain, that three of the four Gospels were written and published before the destruction of Jerusalem; Dr. Lardner himself, who fixed the time of writing the three first Gospels later than most other authors, yet ³ maintains that they were all published some years before the destruction of Jerusalem; and in all probability the writers themselves were dead before that period; St. Matthew and St. Mark were certainly so; and consequently it cannot with any colour of reason be pretended, that the predictions were written after the events. St. John is the only evangelist who lived and wrote after the destruction of Jerusalem, and he purposely omits these prophecies, to prevent this very cavil, as we may suppose with reason. Neither can it be pretended that these predictions were ¹ interpolations made afterwards, because they are inserted in several places, and woven into the very substance of the Gospels, and because they are cited and alluded to by ancient writers, as well as other parts, and because they were not to be accomplished all at once, but required several ages to their perfect completion, and we see them, in some instances, fulfilling to this very day.

¹ Papias et Clemens Alex. apud Euseb. Hist. Eccles. Lib. ii. cap. xv. Origen apud Euseb. Lib. vi. cap. xxv. Tertull. advers. Marcion. Lib. iv. sect. v. p. 416. Edit. Rigaltii, Paris. 1675. Hieron. de Script. Eccles. p. 101. Vol. IV. Edit. Benedict. &c. &c.

² Mortuus est autem octavo Neronis anno. ["But he died in the eighth year of Nero's reign."] De Script. Eccles. p. 105. Vol. IV. Edit. Benedict.

³ See Vol. I. of his Supplement to the Credibility of the Gospel History.

In the conclusion of the twenty-third chapter of St. Matthew, our Saviour had, with the most merciful severity, with the most compassionate justice, pronounced the sentence of desolation upon Jerusalem; (ver. 37, 38.) O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them which are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not! Behold, your house is left unto you desolate. In like manner, upon another occasion, when he was approaching to Jerusalem, (Luke xix. 41, 42.) he beheld the city, and wept over it, saying, If thou hadst known, even thou, at least in this thy day, the things which belong unto thy peace! but now they are hid from thine eyes. So deeply was our Saviour affected, and so tenderly did he lament over the calamities which were coming upon his nation! Such a generous and amiable pattern of a patriot spirit hath he left to his disciples; and so contrary to truth is the insinuation of a ² noble writer, that there is nothing in the Gospels to recommend and encourage the love of one's country.

When our Saviour uttered that pathetic lamentation recorded in the twenty-third chapter of St. Matthew, he was in the temple, speaking to a mixed audience of his disciples and the multitude; and as he was departing out of the temple, (ver. 1st of the twenty-fourth chapter,) his disciples came to him for to show him the buildings of the temple, intimating what a pitiable calamity they thought it, that so magnificent a structure should be destroyed. In the other Gospels they are represented as saying, (Mark xiii. 1.) Master, see what manner of stones, and what buildings are here; and as speaking of the temple, (Luke xxi. 5.) how it was adorned with goodly stones and gifts. The gifts of ages were repositied there, the ³ presents of kings and emperors, as well as the offerings of the Jews; and as the whole temple was built with the greatest cost and magnificence, so nothing was more stupendous than the uncommon measure of the stones. The disciples appear to have admired them particularly, and to have thought them very extraordinary, and indeed they were of a size almost incredible. Those ⁴ employed in the foundations

¹ See this argument pursued more at large in Dr. Jortin's Remarks on Ecclesiastical History, Vol. I. p. 72—77.

² Shaftesbury's Characteristics, Vol. I. p. 99.

³ Vide Joseph. de Bell. Jud. Lib. v. cap. xiii. sect. vi. Edit. Hudson.

⁴ πέτραι δὲ τεσσαρακονταπύχεις τὸ μέγεθος ἦσαν τοῦ δομήματος. Saxs vero in were in magnitude forty cubits, that is above sixty feet, a cubit being somewhat more than a foot and a half, and the superstructure was worthy of such foundations. There were some stones of the whitest marble forty-five cubits long, five cubits high, and six cubits broad, as a priest of the temple hath described them.

Such a structure as this, one would have expected, might have endured for many generations, and was indeed worthy of the highest admiration; but notwithstanding, our Saviour assures his disciples, (ver. 6.) There shall not be left here one stone upon another that shall not be thrown down. Our Saviour in his prophecies frequently alludes to phrases and expressions used by the ancient prophets; and as the prophet Haggai (ii. 15.) expresseth the building of the temple by a stone being laid upon a stone, so Christ expresseth the destruction of it by one stone not being left upon another. In the same manner he speaketh of and to the city, (Luke xix. 44.) They shall lay thee even with the ground, and shall not leave in thee one stone upon another. It is a proverbial and figurative manner of expression, to denote an utter destruction; and the prophecy would have been amply fulfilled, if the city and temple had been utterly ruined, though every single stone had not been overturned. But it happened in this case, that the words were almost literally fulfilled, and scarce one stone was left upon another. For when the Romans had taken Jerusalem¹, Titus ordered his soldiers to dig up the foundations both of all the city and the temple. The temple was a building of such strength and grandeur, of such splendour and beauty, that it was likely to be preserved, as it was worthy to be preserved, for a monument of the victory and glory of the Roman empire. Titus was accordingly very desirous of preserving it, and² protested to the Jews, who had fortified themselves within it, that he would preserve it, even against their will. He had³ expressed the like desire of preserving the city too, and sent Josephus and other Jews again and again to their countrymen, to persuade them to a surrender. But an over-ruling Providence directed things otherwise.

exstructione usi sunt quadragenorum cubitorum magnitudinis. [The size of the stones used for the foundation of the building was forty cubits.] Ἦν δὲ ἀξία τῶν τοιούτων θεμελίων καὶ τὰ ὑπὲρ αὐτῶν ἔργα. Tantis autem fundamentis digna erant opera illis imposita. [The magnificence of the superstructure was worthy of such a foundation.] τῶν δὲ ἐν αὐτῷ λίθων ἔνιοι μῆκος πέντε καὶ τεσσαράκοντα πηχῶν ἦσαν, ὕψος πέντε, εὖρος δὲ ἕξ. Saxorum autem, quibus exstructum erat templum, quedam erant xlv. cubitos longa, alta v. et lata vi. [Some of the stones with which the temple was reared, were forty-five cubits in length, five in height, and six in breadth.] Joseph. de Bell. Jud. Lib. v. cap. v. sect. i. ii. vi. Edit. Hudson.

¹ κελεύει Καῖσαρ ἡδὴ τὴν τε πόλιν ἅπασαν καὶ τὸν νεῶν κατασκάπτειν. jubet eos Cæsar totam funditus jam evertere civitatem et templum. [Cæsar now orders them to dig up the whole city and the temple from their foundations.] Joseph. de Bell. Jud. Lib. vii. cap. i. sect. i. p. 1295. Edit. Hudson.

² τηρήσω δὲ τὸν ναὸν ὑμῖν καὶ μὴ θέλουσι. Vobis autem etiam invitis templum servabo. [But I will preserve the temple even against your will.] Joseph. de Bell. Jud. Lib. vi. cap. ii. sect. iv. p. 1269. Edit. Hudson.

³ Joseph. de Bell. Jud. Lib. v. cap. viii. sect. i. cap. ix. sect. ii. &c. cap. xi. sect. ii. Lib. vi. cap. ii. sect. i. Edit. Hudson.

The Jews themselves ¹ first set fire to the porticos of the temple, and then the Romans. One of the soldiers, ² neither waiting for any command, nor trembling for such an attempt, but urged by a certain divine impulse, threw a burning brand in at the golden window, and thereby set fire to the buildings of the temple itself. Titus ³ ran immediately to the temple, and commanded his soldiers to extinguish the flame. But neither exhortations nor threatenings could restrain their violence. They either could not hear, or would not hear, and those behind encouraged those before to set fire to the temple. He was still for preserving the holy place. He commanded his soldiers even to be beaten for disobeying him; but their anger, and their hatred of the Jews, and a certain warlike vehement fury, overcame their reverence for their general, and their dread for his commands. A soldier in the dark set fire to the doors, and thus, as Josephus ⁴ says, the temple was burnt against the will of Cæsar. Afterwards, as we ⁵ read in the Jewish Talmud and Maimonides, Turnus Rufus, or rather ⁶ Terentius Rufus, who was left to command the army at Jerusalem, did with a ploughshare tear up the foundation of the temple, and thereby signally fulfilled those words of Micah, (iii. 12.) Therefore shall Zion for your sake be ploughed as a field. Eusebius ⁷ too affirms, that it was ploughed up by the Romans, and he saw it lying in ruins. The ⁸ city also shared the same fate, and was burnt and destroyed as well as the temple. The ⁹ Romans burnt the extremest parts of the city, and demolished the walls. Three ¹⁰ towers only and some part of the wall were left standing, for the better encamping of the soldiers, and to show to posterity what a city and how fortified the valour of the Romans had taken. All the rest of the city was so demolished and levelled with the ground, that they who came to see it could not believe that

¹ Joseph. de Bell. Jud. Lib. vi. cap. ii. sect. ix. Edit. Hudson.

² ἔνθα δὴ τῶν στρατιωτῶν τις, οὔτε παράγγελμα περιμένοντας, οὔτε ἐπὶ τηλικούτῃ δείσας ἐγχειρήματι, δαιμονίῳ ὁρμῇ τινι χρώμενος κ. τ. λ. Quo tempore miles quidam, non expectato ejusquam mandato, neque tantum facinus veritus, divino quodam impetu fretus, &c. [When one of the soldiers, neither waiting for the word of command, nor fearing to perpetrate such an action, but hurried on by a certain divine impulse, &c.] Joseph. de Bell. Jud. Lib. vi. cap. iv. sect. v. p. 1278. Edit. Hudson.

³ Joseph. ibid. sect. vi. et vii.

⁴ ὁ μὲν οὖν ναὸς οὕτως, ἄκοντος Καίσαρος, ἐμπιπράται. Et templum quidem hoc modo exurit, invito Cæsare. [And thus the temple was burnt contrary to the will of Cæsar.] Sect. vii. p. 1279.

⁵ See them quoted in Lightfoot, Whitby, Wetstein, &c. upon the place.

⁶ Τερέντιος Ροῦφος. οὗτος γὰρ ἄρχων τῆς στρατιᾶς κατελέλειπτο. Terentius Rufus: namque is exercitu præfectus relictus erat. [Terentius Rufus, for he was left commander of the army.] Joseph. de Bell. Jud. Lib. vii. cap. ii. p. 1298.

⁷ Eusebii Demons. Evangel. Lib. vi. cap. xiii. p. 273. Edit. Paris. 1628.

⁸ Joseph. de Bell. Jud. Lib. vi. cap. vi. sect. iii. cap. vii. sect. ii. cap. viii. sect. v. Edit. Hudson.

⁹ Ῥωμαῖοι δὲ τὰς τε ἐσχάτιας τοῦ ἁστέος ἐνέπρησαν, καὶ τὰ τεῖχη κατέσκαψαν. Romani vero extremas urbis partes incenderunt, et moenia funditus everterunt. [But the Romans set fire to the extremities of the city, and dug up the foundations of the walls.] Joseph. ibid. cap. ix. sect. iv. p. 1292. Edit. Hudson.

¹⁰ Joseph. de Bell. Jud. Lib. vii. cap. i. sect. i. Edit. Hudson.

it was ever inhabited. After the city was thus taken and destroyed, ¹ great riches were found among the ruins, and the Romans dug it up in search of the treasures, which had been concealed and buried in the earth. So literally were our Saviour's words accomplished in the ruin both of the city and of the temple; and well might Eleazar ² say, that God had delivered his most holy city to be burnt, and to be subverted by their enemies, and ³ wish that they had all died before they saw that holy city demolished by the hands of their enemies, and the sacred temple so wickedly dug up from the foundations.

In this plain manner, our Saviour, now drawing near to his fatal hour, foretold the absolute ruin and destruction of the city and temple. The disciples were curious to know more of these events, when they should be, and how they should be, but yet thought it not proper to ask him at present, the multitude probably still flocking about him, and therefore they take an opportunity of coming unto him privately, as he was sitting upon the Mount of Olives, from whence was a good prospect of the city and temple, and there prefer their request to him, (ver. 3.) Tell us when these things shall be, and what shall be the sign of thy coming, and of the end of the world? These are only different expressions to denote the same period with the destruction of Jerusalem; for when they conceived would be the destruction of Jerusalem, then they conceived would be the coming of Christ; and when they conceived would be the coming of Christ, then they conceived would be the end of the world, or ⁴ rather (as it should be rendered) the conclusion of the age. The end of the world or the conclusion of the age is the same period with the destruction of Jerusalem; for there being two ages, as they were called, among the Jews, the one under the law, the other under the Messiah; when the city and temple were destroyed, and the Jewish polity in church and state was dissolved, the former age must of course be concluded, and the age under the Messiah be commenced. It is true the phrase συντέλεια τοῦ αἰῶνος most usually signifies the end of the world properly so called; as in the parable of the tares, (Matt. xiii. 39.) the harvest is συντέλεια τοῦ αἰῶνος the end of the world; As therefore the tares (ver. 40.) are gathered and burnt in the fire, so shall it be ἐν τῇ συντελείᾳ τοῦ αἰῶνος τούτου in

¹ Joseph. ibid. cap. v. sect. ii.

² προήκατο δὲ τὴν ἱερωτάτην αὐτοῦ πόλιν πυρὶ καὶ κατασκαφαῖς πολεμίων. Urbemque sibi sacratissimam tradidisset hostibus, ut incendio periret et funditus dirueretur. [And he hath delivered up his most holy city to the enemy, to be burnt with fire, and to be dug up from its foundations.] Joseph. ibid. cap. viii. sect. vi. p. 1318.

³ ἀλλ' εἴθε πάντες ἐτεθνήκειμεν, πρὶν τὴν ἱερὰν ἐκείνην πόλιν χερσὶν ἰδεῖν κατασκαπτομένην πολεμίων, πρὶν τὸν ναὸν τὸν ἅγιον οὕτως ἀνοσίως ἐξορωρυγμένον. Atque utinam omnes fuissetis mortui, priusquam illam sacram civitatem hostium manibus excindi videremus, priusquam templum tantâ impietate funditus erui. [And I wish we had all died, sooner than seen that holy city utterly destroyed by the hands of the enemy, and that holy temple thus impiously dug up from its foundations.] Joseph. ibid. sect. vii. p. 1322. Edit. Hudson.

⁴ συντελείᾳ τοῦ αἰῶνος. [Translated in the text.]

the end of this world. And again (ver. 49.) So shall it be ἐν τῇ συντελείᾳ τοῦ αἰῶνος at the end of the world, the angels shall come forth and sever the wicked from among the just. In like manner our Saviour says to his disciples, (Matt. xxviii. 20.) Lo, I am with you alway, ἕως τῆς συντελείας τοῦ αἰῶνος even unto the end of the world. But here the phrase appears to be used much in the same manner as in the Epistle to the Hebrews, (ix. 26.) But now once in the end of the world hath he appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself; in the end of the world, ἐπὶ συντελείᾳ τῶν αἰώνων, in the conclusion of the Jewish age or ages; and these, I think, are all the places where the phrase occurs in Scripture. The coming of Christ is also the same period with the destruction of Jerusalem, as may appear from several places in the Gospels, and particularly from these two passages: There are some standing here, saith our blessed Lord, (Matt. xvi. 28.) who shall not taste of death till they see the Son of man coming in his kingdom, that is, evidently, there are some standing here who shall live, not till the end of the world, to the coming of Christ to judge mankind, but till the destruction of Jerusalem, to the coming of Christ in judgment upon the Jews. In another place, (John xxi. 22.) speaking to Peter concerning John, he saith, If I will that he tarry till I come, what is that to thee? What is it to thee, if I will that he live till the destruction of Jerusalem? as in truth he did, and longer. The coming of Christ and the conclusion of the age being therefore only different expressions to denote the same period with the destruction of Jerusalem; the purport of the question plainly is, when shall the destruction of Jerusalem be, and what shall be the signs of it? In the parallel place of St. Mark, (xiii. 4.) the question is put thus: When shall these things be, and what shall be the sign when all these things shall be fulfilled? In the parallel place of St. Luke (xxi. 7.) the question is put thus, When shall these things be, and what sign will there be when these things shall come to pass? So that the disciples ask two things, first, the time of the destruction of Jerusalem, when these things shall be? and secondly, the signs of it, and what shall be the sign when all these things shall be fulfilled, as it is in St. Mark, and what will be the sign when these things shall come to pass, as it is in St. Luke, and what shall be the sign of thy coming and of the conclusion of the age, as it is in St. Matthew. The latter part of the question our Saviour answereth first, and treateth of the signs of his coming and the destruction of Jerusalem from the 4th to the 31st verse inclusive; and then passeth on to the other part of the question concerning the time of his coming; and these two heads of our Saviour's answer shall likewise in the same method and order be made the subject of this and some subsequent discourses.

Our blessed Saviour treateth of the signs of his coming and the destruction of Jerusalem from the 4th to the 31st verse inclusive; by signs meaning the circumstances and accidents which should forerun, usher in, and attend this great event; and I am persuaded the whole compass of history cannot furnish us with a prophecy more exactly fulfilled in all points than this hath been.

False Christs our Saviour mentions as the first sign of his coming, (ver. 4 and 5.) Take heed that no man deceive you; for many shall come in my name, saying, I am Christ, and shall deceive many. With this he begins in all the evangelists, and in all useth almost the very same words; only in St. Luke (xxi. 8.) he addeth the time draweth near; and, indeed, within a little time, this part of the prophecy began to be fulfilled. For very soon after our Saviour's decease appeared Simon Magus, (Acts viii. 9, 10.) and bewitched the people of Samaria, giving out that himself was some great one: to whom they all gave heed, from the least to the greatest, saying, This man is the great power of God. He boasted himself likewise ¹ among the Jews, as the Son of God. Of the same stamp and character was also ² Dositheus the Samaritan, who pretended that he was the Christ foretold by Moses. In the reign of Claudius, about twelve years after the death of our Saviour, when Cuspius Fadus was procurator of Judea, a certain impostor, named Theudas, persuaded a great multitude with their best effects to follow him to the river Jordan, for he said that he was a prophet, and promised to divide the river for their passage, and saying these things he deceived many, ³ saith Josephus. But Fadus sent a troop of horse against them, who falling unexpectedly upon them, killed many, and made many prisoners, and having taken Theudas himself alive, they cut off his head and brought it to Jerusalem. A few years afterwards, in the reign of Nero, and under the procuratorship of Felix, these impostors arose so frequent, that ⁴ many of them were apprehended and killed every day. They seduced great numbers of the people still expecting the Messiah, and well therefore might our Saviour caution his disciples against them.

The next signs he giveth of his coming are several terrible calamities, as wars and rumours of wars, famines, and pestilences, and earthquakes in divers places, (ver. 6 and 7.) And ye shall hear of wars and rumours of wars; see that ye be not troubled: for all these

¹ Irenæi, Lib. i. cap. xx. p. 94. Edit. Grabe. Theodoret. Hæretic. Fab. Lib. i. cap. i. p. 192. Vol. IV. Edit. Paris. 1642.

² Καὶ μετὰ τοῦς Ἰησοῦ δὲ χρόνους ἠθέλησε καὶ ὁ Σαμαρεὺς Δοσιθεὺς πείσαι Σαμαρεῖς, ὅτι αὐτὸς εἶη ὁ προφητευόμενος ὑπὸ Μωσέως Χριστός· καὶ ἔδοξε τινων τῇ ἑαυτοῦ διδασκαλίᾳ κεκρατηκέναι. Post Jesu tempora voluit et Dositheus quidam Samarita suis persuadere, se esse Christum illum, quem Moyses prædixerat, visusque est nonnullos sibi suâ doctrinâ conciliare. ["And after the time of Jesus, the Samaritan, Dositheus, wished to persuade the Samaritans that he was the Christ prophesied of by Moses; and he seemed to gain some by his teaching."] Origen contra Celsum, Lib. i. p. 372. Vide etiam, Lib. vi. p. 638. Vol. I. In Matt. Tract. xxvii. p. 851. col. ii. Vol. III. Edit. Benedict.

³ Καὶ ταῦτα λέγων πολλοὺς ἡπάτησεν. et hujusmodi sermonibus plurimos deceptit. ["And saying these things he deceived many."] Joseph. Antiq. Lib. xx. cap. iv. sect. i. p. 886. Edit. Hudson.

⁴ Τούτων μὲν ὁ Φῆλιξ πολλοὺς καθ' ἐκάστην ἡμέραν—λαμβάνων ἀνῆρει. horum quidem multos,—quotidie captos, Felix sustulit. ["Felix, apprehending many of them day after day, caused them to be put to death."] Joseph. ibid. cap. vii. sect. v. p. 892.

things must come to pass, but the end is not yet. For nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom; and there shall be famines, and pestilences, and earthquakes in divers places. Accordingly there were wars and rumours of wars, as appears in all the historians of those times, and above all in Josephus. To relate the particulars would indeed be to transcribe great part of his history of the Jewish wars. There were more especially rumours of wars, ¹ when Caligula the Roman emperor ordered his statue to be set up in the temple of Jerusalem, which the Jews refused to suffer, and persisted in their refusal; and having therefore reason to apprehend a war from the Romans, were in such a consternation, that they omitted even the tilling of their lands; but this storm was soon blown over, and their fears were dissipated by the timely death of that emperor.

It is said, moreover, that nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom. Here, as ² Grotius well observes, Christ declares that greater disturbances than those which happened under Caligula, should fall out in the latter times of Claudius, and in the reign of Nero. That of nation against nation portended the dissensions, insurrections, and mutual slaughter of the Jews, and those of other nations who dwelt in the same cities together; as particularly at ³ Cæsarea, where the Jews and Syrians contended about the right of the city, which contention at length proceeded so far, that above twenty-thousand Jews were slain, and the city was cleared of the Jewish inhabitants. At this blow, the ⁴ whole nation of the Jews were exasperated, and dividing themselves into parties, they

¹ Joseph. Antiq. Lib. xviii. cap. ix. De Bell. Jud. Lib. ii. cap. x. Edit. Hudson. Philo contra Flaccum. Tacitus Hist. Lib. v.

² Indicat Christus majores quam sub Caio evenerant cædes imminere ultimis temporibus Claudianis, et Neronis principatu. Illud ἔθνος ἐπὶ ἔθνος significat Judæos et qui aliarum erant gentium iisdem in civitatibus morantes mutuis inter se cædibus collidendos; quod contigit Cæsareæ primum, deinde Scythopoli, Ptolemaide, Tyri, Gadaris, rursum Alexandria, deinde et Damasci. Illud autem βασιλεία ἐπὶ βασιλείαν significat tetrarcharum aut provinciarum aperta inter se bella.—Huc referri debet Judæorum in Peræâ habitantium bellum adversus Philadelphenos ob finium controversiam, Cuspido Fado procuratore; Judæorum et Galilæorum bellum adversus Samaritanas, procuratore Cumanus; postremo bellum primum a sicariis quos vocabant, deinde ab universâ Judæorum gente sumptum adversus Romanos et Agrippam aliosque Romani imperii socios, quod initium habuit Gessio Floro procuratore. [“Christ declares that greater slaughter should fall out in the latter years of Claudius, and in the reign of Nero, than had taken place in the time of Caligula. That expression of ‘nation against nation,’ portends that the Jews, and the people of other nations dwelling in the same cities, should mutually kill one another. This happened first at Cæsarea, then at Scythopolis, Ptolemais, Tyre, Gadara, again at Alexandria, and afterwards at Damascus. That of ‘kingdom against kingdom,’ designates the open wars of tetrarchs, and provinces against one another. Of this kind was the war of the Jews dwelling in Peræa, against the Philadelphians, during the procuratorship of Cuspido Fado; the war of the Jews and Galileans against the Samaritanas, during the procuratorship of Cumanus; and lastly, the first war carried on by those that were called assassins, and afterwards by the whole Jewish nation against the Romans, against Agrippa, and the allies of the Roman people, which began during the procuratorship of Gessius Florus.”] Grot.

³ Joseph. Antiq. Lib. xx. cap. vii. sect. vii. &c. De Bell. Jud. Lib. ii. cap. xiii. sect. vii. cap. xviii. sect. i. Edit. Hudson.

⁴ Ibid. cap. xviii. sect. i.

burnt and plundered the neighbouring cities and villages of the Syrians, and made an immense slaughter of the people. The Syrians in revenge destroyed not a less number of the Jews, and every city, as ¹ Josephus expresseth it, was divided into two armies. At ² Scythopolis the inhabitants compelled the Jews who resided among them to fight against their own countrymen, and after the victory, basely setting upon them by night, murdered above thirteen thousand of them, and spoiled their goods. At ³ Ascalon they killed two thousand and five hundred; at Ptolemais two thousand, and made not a few prisoners. The Tyrians put many to death, and imprisoned more. The people of Gadara did likewise, and all the other cities of Syria, in proportion as they hated or feared the Jews. At Alexandria ⁴ the old enmity was revived between the Jews and heathens, and many fell on both sides, but of the Jews to the number of fifty thousand. The ⁵ people of Damascus too conspired against the Jews of the same city, and assaulting them unarmed, killed ten thousand of them. That of kingdom against kingdom portended the open wars of different tetrarchies and provinces against one another; as ⁶ that of the Jews who dwelt in Peræa against the people of Philadelphia concerning their bounds, while Cuspius Fadus was procurator; and ⁷ that of the Jews and Galilæans against the Samaritans, for the murder of some Galilæans going up to the feast at Jerusalem, while Cumanus was procurator; and ⁸ that of the whole nation of the Jews against the Romans and Agrippa and other allies of the Roman empire, which began while Gessius Florus was procurator. But as ⁹ Josephus saith, there was not only sedition and civil war throughout Judea, but likewise in Italy, Ôtho and Vitellius contending for the empire.

It is farther added, and there shall be famines, and pestilences, and earthquakes in divers places. There were famines, as particularly that prophesied of by Agabus, and mentioned in the Acts of the Apostles, (xi. 28.) and by ¹⁰ Suetonius, and other profane historians, referred to by Eusebius, which came to pass in the days of Claudius Cæsar, and was so severe at Jerusalem, that, as ¹¹ Josephus

¹ Ibid. sect. ii. καὶ πᾶσα πόλις εἰς δύο διήρητο στρατόπεδα. et unaquæque civitas in duos divisa erat exercitus. ["And every city was divided into two armies."] P. 1095.

² Ibid. sect. iii. Vita Josephi, sect. vi.

³ De Bell. Jud. Lib. ii. cap. xviii. sect. v.

⁴ Ibid. sect. vii. et viii.

⁵ Ibid. cap. xx. sect. ii.

⁶ Joseph. Antiq. Lib. xx. cap. i. sect. i.

⁷ Ibid. cap. v. De Bell. Jud. Lib. ii. cap. xii. sect. iii. &c.

⁸ Ibid. cap. xvii.

⁹ Οὐ μόνον δὲ κατὰ τὴν Ἰουδαίαν στάσις ἦν καὶ πόλεμος ἐμφύλιος· ἀλλὰ καὶ ἐπὶ τῆς Ἰταλίας. Verum non solum per Judæam erat seditio et bellum civile, sed etiam in Italiâ. ["But there was not only sedition and a civil war throughout Judæa, but also in Italy."] De Bell. Jud. Lib. iv. cap. ix. sect. ix. p. 1200.

¹⁰ Suetonius in Claudio xviii. Taciti Annal. Lib. xii. Euseb. Eccles. Hist. Lib. ii. cap. viii.

¹¹ Πολλῶν ὑπ' ἐνδείας ἀναλωμάτων φθειρομένων, multis alimentorum inopiâ peruntibus. ["Many perishing through want of necessary food."] Joseph. Antiq. Lib. xx. cap. ii. sect. vi. p. 881. Ibid. cap. iv. sect. ii. Edit. Hudson.

saith, many perished for want of victuals.—And pestilences, for these are the usual attendants upon famines. Scarcity and badness of provisions almost always end in some epidemical distemper. We see many died by reason of the famine in the reign of Claudius; and ¹ Josephus farther informs us, that when Niger was killed by the Jewish zealots, he imprecated, besides other calamities, famine and pestilence upon them, (Λιμόν τε καὶ λοιμὸν, the very words used by the Evangelist,) all which, saith he, God ratified and brought to pass against the ungodly.—And earthquakes in divers places, as particularly that ² in Crete, in the reign of Claudius, mentioned by Philostratus in the life of Apollonius, and those also mentioned by Philostratus at Smyrna, Miletus, Chios, Samos, in all which places some Jews inhabited; and those ³ at Rome mentioned by Tacitus; and that ⁴ at Laodicea in the reign of Nero, mentioned by Tacitus, which city was overthrown, as were likewise Hierapolis and Colosse; and that in ⁵ Campania, mentioned by Seneca; and that at ⁶ Rome, in the reign of Galba, mentioned by Suetonius; and that in Judea, mentioned by ⁷ Josephus. For by night there broke out a most dreadful tempest, and violent strong winds, with the most vehement showers, and continual lightnings, and horrid thunderings, and prodigious bellowings of the shaken earth: and it was manifest, as he saith, that the constitution of the universe was confounded for the destruction of men; and any one might easily conjecture that these things portended no common calamity.

To these St. Luke addeth, (xxi. 11.) that there shall be fearful sights and great signs from heaven. Josephus, in ⁸ the preface to his

¹ "Α δὴ πάντα κατὰ τῶν ἀσεβῶν ἐκύρωσεν ὁ Θεός. Quæ sane universa contra improbos rata habuit Deus. ["All which things God ratified against the wicked."] Joseph. de Bell. Jud. Lib. iv. cap. vi. sect. i. p. 1186. Edit. Hudson.

² Gravis terræ motus, qui in Cretâ accidit Claudio imperante, meminit Philostratus in vitâ Apollonii. Item terræ motuum Smyrnæ, Miletî, Chii, Sami paulo ante tempora excisæ urbis Hierosolymorum. ["Philostratus, in his life of Apollonius, makes mention of a dreadful earthquake, which happened in Crete, during the reign of Claudius. He also takes notice of earthquakes at Smyrna, Miletus, Chios, Samos, a little before the destruction of the city of Jerusalem."] Grot. in locum.

³ Tacit. Annal. Lib. xii. p. 91. Edit. Lipsii.

⁴ Tacit. Annal. Lib. xiv. p. 113. Edit. Lipsii. Orosius, Lib. vii. cap. vii. p. 473. Edit. Havercamp.

⁵ Nat. Quæst. Lib. vi. cap. i.

⁶ Suet. Galb. cap. xviii.

⁷ Joseph. De Bell. Jud. Lib. iv. cap. iv. sect. v. διὰ γὰρ τῆς νυκτὸς ἀμήχανος ἐκρήγνυται χειμῶν, ἀνέμοι τε βίαιοι σὺν ὄμβροις λαβροτάτοις καὶ συνεχεῖς ἀστραπαί, βρονταὶ τε φοικῶδεις, καὶ μυκηματα σιωμένης τῆς γῆς ἐξαίσια· πρόδηλον δ' ἦν, ἐπ' ἀνθρώπων ὀλέθρῳ, τὰ κατὰστημα τῶν ὄλων συγκεχυμένον· καὶ οὐχὶ μικροῦ τις ἂν εἰκόσαι συμπτόματος τὰ τέρατα. Nocte enim gravissima erumpit tempestas, ventusque violentus cum imbre vehementi conjunctus, et crebra fulgura, horrendaque tonitrua, et ingentes terræ concussæ mugitus: manifestumque erat hominum in exitum, mundi statum fuisse conturbatum: eratque ut quis conjiceret ea non vulgares portendere calamitates. ["For during the night there burst forth a most violent storm, and strong winds accompanied with the heaviest rains, and constant flashes of lightning, and horrible thunderings, and prodigious roarings of the shaken earth. And it was evident that the constitution of the universe was thrown into confusion for the destruction of men; and any one might divine that these were the forerunners of no common calamities."] P. 1181. Edit. Hudson.

⁸ Καὶ τὰ πρὸ ταύτης σημεῖα καὶ τέρατα. quæque præcesserant signa et prodigia. ["The signs and the wonders which preceded this."] Sect. xi. p. 957.

history of the Jewish war, undertakes to relate the signs and prodigies which preceded the taking of the city; and he relates accordingly, that ¹ a star hung over the city like a sword, and the comet continued for a whole year; that ² the people being assembled to celebrate the feast of unleavened bread, at the ninth hour of the night, there shone so great a light about the altar and the temple, that it seemed to be bright day, and this continued for half an hour; that ³ at the same feast, a cow, led by the priest to sacrifice, brought forth a lamb in the middle of the temple; that ⁴ the eastern gate of the temple, which was of solid brass and very heavy, and was scarcely shut in an evening by twenty men, and was fastened by strong bars and bolts, was seen at the sixth hour of the night opened of its own accord, and could hardly be shut again; that ⁵ before the setting of the sun there were seen over all the country chariots and armies fighting in the clouds, and besieging cities; that ⁶ at the feast of Pentecost, as the priests were going into the inner temple by night as usual to attend their service, they heard first a motion and noise, and then a voice as of a multitude, saying, Let us depart hence; and ⁷ what he reckons as the most terrible of all, that one

¹ Ὑπὲρ τὴν πόλιν ἄστρον ἔσθη ῥομφαία παραπλήσιον, καὶ παρατείνας ἐπ' ἐνιαυτὸν κομήτης. supra civitatem stetit sidus simile gladio, et anni spatio ardere perseverabat cometes. ["Over the city a star hung in the shape of a sword, and a comet continued a whole year."] Lib. vi. cap. v. sect. iii. p. 1281.

² Ἀθροισμένου τοῦ λαοῦ πρὸς τὴν τῶν Ἀζύμων ἑορτὴν, —κατὰ νυκτὸς ἐννάτην ὥραν, τοσούτον ὥς περιέλαμψε τὸν βωμὸν καὶ τὸν ναὸν, ὡς δοκεῖν ἡμέραν εἶναι λαμπρὰν, καὶ τοῦτο παρέτεινεν ἐφ' ἡμισίαν ὥραν. populo ad festum diem Azymorum congregato—horâ noctis nonâ, tanta lux circa altare templumque circumfusa est, ut dies clarus esse videretur, atque hoc horæ dimidiæ spatio duravit. ["When the people were assembled, to celebrate the feast of unleavened bread,—At the ninth hour of the night, so great a light shone round about the altar and temple, that it seemed to be bright day, and this lasted for the space of half an hour."] Ibid.

³ Καὶ κατὰ τὴν αὐτὴν ἑορτὴν βοῦς μὲν ἀχθεῖσα ὑπὸ τοῦ ἀρχιερέως πρὸς τὴν θυσίαν, ἔτεκεν ἄρνα ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ μέσῳ. in eâdem quoque solennitate, vacca, cum a pontifice ad sacrificium adduceretur, agnum in medio templo enixa est. ["At the same feast also, a cow led by the priest to sacrifice, brought forth a lamb in the midst of the temple."] Ibid.

⁴ Ἡ δὲ ἀνατολικὴ πύλη κ. τ. λ. sed et janua, &c. ["And the eastern gate," &c.] Ibid.

⁵ Πρὸς ἡλίου δύσεως ὥφθη μετέωρα περὶ πᾶσαν τὴν χώραν ἄρματα καὶ φάλαγγες ἑνοπιοὶ διάττονσαι τῶν νεφῶν, καὶ κυκλοῦμεναι τὰς πόλεις. ante solis occasum per universam regionem currus in aëre sublimes ferri, et armatæ phalanges, per nubes discurrere, urbesque circumvallare sunt visæ. ["Before the setting of the sun there were seen over the whole country, in the air, chariots and armies equipped for war, skirmishing through the clouds, and besieging cities."] Ibid. p. 1282.

⁶ Κατὰ δὲ τὴν ἑορτὴν, ἣ Πεντεκοστή καλεῖται, νύκτωρ οἱ ἱερεῖς παρελθόντες εἰς τὸ ἕνδον ἱερὸν, ὥσπερ αὐτοῖς ἔθος ἦν πρὸς τὰς λειτουργίας, πρῶτον μὲν κινήσεως ἀντιλαβέσθαι ἔφασαν καὶ κτύπον, μετὰ δὲ ταῦτα καὶ φωνῆς ἀθρόας, μεταβαίνωμεν ἐντεύθεν. Festo autem die qui Pentecoste appellatur, sacerdotes noctu templum ingressi ad obeunda ex more ministeria, primum quidem motum ac strepitum se exaudisse dixerunt, tum deinde vocem quasi confertæ multitudinis simul clamantis, Migremus hinc. ["On the festival which is called Pentecost, the priests by night having come into the inner temple, to perform their service, as was their custom, they reported that they heard first a motion and a noise, and then the voice as it were of a great crowd, saying, Let us depart hence."] Ibid.

⁷ Τὸ δὲ τούτων φοβερώτερον. Ἰησοῦς γάρ τις, κ. τ. λ. Quod vero his omnibus ter-

Jesus, an ordinary country fellow, four years before the war began, when the city was in peace and plenty, came to the feast of tabernacles, and ran crying up and down the streets day and night, "A voice from the east, a voice from the west, a voice from the four winds, a voice against Jerusalem and the temple, a voice against the bridegrooms and the brides, a voice against all the people." The magistrates endeavoured by stripes and torture to restrain him, but he still cried with a mournful voice, "Woe, woe to Jerusalem!" This he continued to do for seven years and five months together, and especially at the great festivals; and he neither grew hoarse nor was tired, but went about the walls, and cried with a loud voice, "Woe, woe to the city, and to the people, and to the temple;" and as he added at last, "Woe, woe also to myself," it happened that a stone from some sling or engine immediately struck him dead. These were, indeed, fearful signs and great sights from heaven; and there is not a more credible historian than the author who relates them, and who appeals to the testimony of those who saw and heard them. But it may add some weight to his relation, that Tacitus, the Roman historian, also gives us a summary account of the same occurrences. He saith that ¹there happened several prodigies, armies were seen engaging in the heavens, arms were seen glittering, and the temple shone with the sudden fire of the clouds, the doors of the temple opened suddenly, and a voice greater than human was heard, that the gods were departing, and likewise a great motion of their departing. Dr. Jortin's ² remark is very pertinent: "If Christ had not expressly foretold this, many who give little heed to portents, and who know that historians have been too credulous in that point, would have suspected that Josephus exaggerated, and that Tacitus was misinformed, but as the testimonies of Josephus and Tacitus confirm the predictions of Christ, so the predictions of Christ confirm the wonders recorded by these historians."—But even allowing all that incredulity can urge—that in the great calamities of war, and famine, and pestilence, the people always grow superstitious, and are struck with religious panics;—that they see nothing then but prodigies and portents, which in happier seasons are overlooked;—that some of these appear to be formed in imitation of the Greek and Roman historians, as particularly the cow's bringing forth a lamb;—that armies fighting in the clouds seen in calamitous times, in all ages and countries, are nothing more than ribilius est, Jesus quidam, &c. ["And what was more terrible than all the rest, there was one Jesus, &c."] Ibid.

¹ Evenerant prodigia.—Visæ per cælum concurrere acies, rutilantia arma, et subito nubium igne collucere templum. Expassæ repente delubri fores, et audita major humanâ vox, Excedere deos. Simul ingens motus excedentium. ["Prodigies happened.—Armies were seen engaging in the heavens.—Arms appeared glittering.—The temple shone with the sudden fire of the clouds.—The doors of the temple were suddenly thrown wide open, and a voice more than human was heard, that the gods were departing, and at the same time a great motion of their departing."] Tacit. Hist. Lib. v. p. 217. Edit. Lipsii.

² Remarks on Ecclesiastical History, Vol. I. p. 41.

meteors, such as the aurora borealis;—in short, allowing that some of these prodigies were feigned, and others were exaggerated, yet the prediction of them is not the less divine on that account. Whether they were supernatural, or the fictions only of a disordered imagination, yet they were believed as realities, and had all the effects of realities, and were equally worthy to be made the objects of prophecy. Fearful sights and great signs from heaven they certainly were, as much as if they had been created on purpose to astonish the earth.

But notwithstanding all these terrible calamities, our Saviour exhorts his disciples not to be troubled. The Jews may be under dreadful apprehensions, as they were particularly in the case of Caligula above mentioned; but be not ye troubled, for all these things must come to pass, but the end is not yet, but the destruction of Jerusalem is not yet. All these are only the beginning of sorrows, (ver. 8.) ἀρχὴ ὠδινῶν. Great troubles and calamities are often expressed in Scripture language metaphorically by the pains of travailing women. All these are only the first pangs and throes, and are nothing to that hard labour which shall follow.

From the calamities of the nation in general, he passeth to those of the Christians in particular; and indeed the former were in great measure the occasion of the latter; famines, pestilences, earthquakes, and the like calamities being reckoned judgments for the sins of the Christians, and the poor Christians being often maltreated and persecuted on that account, as we learn from some of the earliest apologists for the Christian religion. Now the calamities which were to befall the Christians were cruel persecutions, (ver. 9.) Then shall they deliver you up to be afflicted, and shall kill you; and ye shall be hated of all nations, not only of the Jews, but likewise of the Gentiles, for my name's sake. St. Mark and St. Luke are rather more particular. St. Mark saith (xiii. 9. 11.) They shall deliver you up to councils, and in the synagogues ye shall be beaten, and ye shall be brought before rulers and kings for my sake, for a testimony against them. But when they shall lead you, and deliver you up, take no thought beforehand what ye shall speak, neither do ye premeditate; but whatsoever shall be given you in that hour, that speak ye; for it is not ye that speak, but the Holy Ghost. St. Luke saith, (xxi. 12, 13, 14, 15.) But before all these, they shall lay their hands on you, and persecute you, delivering you up to the synagogue, and into prisons, being brought before kings and rulers for my name's sake. And it shall turn to you for a testimony. Settle it therefore in your hearts, not to meditate before, what ye shall answer. For I will give you a mouth and wisdom, which all your adversaries shall not be able to gainsay nor resist. We need look no farther than the Acts of the Apostles for the completion of these particulars. There are instances enough of the sufferings of some Christians, and of the deaths of others. Some are delivered to councils, as Peter and John, (iv. 5, &c.) Some are brought before rulers and kings, as Paul before Gallio, (xviii. 12.) Felix, (xxiv.) Festus and Agrippa. (xxv.) Some have a mouth and wisdom which all their adversaries were not able to gainsay nor resist, as it is said of Stephen, (vi. 10.) that they were not able to resist the wisdom and the spirit by which he spake, and Paul made even Felix to tremble, (xxiv. 25.) and the Gospel still prevailed against all opposition and persecution whatever. Some are imprisoned, as Peter and John. (iv. 3.) Some are beaten, as Paul and Silas. (xvi. 23.) Some are put to death, as Stephen (vii. 59.) and James the brother of John. (xii. 2.) But if we would look farther, we have a more melancholy proof of the truth of this prediction, in the persecutions under Nero, in which (besides numberless other Christians) fell those ¹ two great champions of our faith, St. Peter and St. Paul. And it was nominis praelium, as ² Tertullian calleth it; it was a war against the very name. Though a man was possessed of every human virtue, yet it was crime enough if he was a Christian; so true were our Saviour's words, that they should be hated of all nations for his name's sake.

But they were not only to be hated of all nations, but were also to be betrayed by apostates and traitors of their own brethren, (ver. 10.) And then shall many be offended, and shall betray one another, and shall hate one another. By reason of persecution many shall be offended, and apostatize from the faith; as particularly those mentioned by St. Paul in his second Epistle to Timothy, (i. 15.) Phygellus and Hermogenes, who with many others in Asia turned away from him, and (vi. 10.) Demas who forsook him, having loved this present world. But they shall not only apostatize from the faith, but also shall betray one another, and shall hate one another. To illustrate this point we need only cite a sentence out of Tacitus speaking of the persecution under Nero. At first, says ³ he, several were seized who confessed, and then by their discovery a great multitude of others were convicted and barbarously executed.

False teachers too and false prophets were to infest the Church, (ver. 11.) And many false prophets shall rise, and shall deceive many. Such particularly was Simon Magus, and his followers the Gnostics were very numerous. Such also were the Judaizing teachers, false apostles, as they are called by St. Paul, (2 Cor. xi. 13.) deceitful workers, transforming themselves into the apostles of Christ. Such also were Hymeneus and Philetus, of whom the apostle complains, (2 Tim. ii. 17, 18.) that they affirmed the resurrection to be past already, and overthrew the faith of some.

¹ Euseb. Eccles. Hist. Lib. ii. cap. 25.

² Tertull. Apol. cap. ii. p. 4. Edit. Rigaltii, Paris. 1675.

³ Primò correpti qui fatebantur, deinde indicio eorum multitudo ingens convicti sunt. Et pereuntibus addita ludibria, &c. [“ At first a few were laid hold on who confessed: by their evidence great multitudes were afterwards convicted. Mockery was used also in putting them to death,” &c.] Tacit. Annal. Lib. xv. p. 128. Edit. Lipsii.

The genuine fruit and effect of these evils was lukewarmness and coolness among Christians, (ver. 12.) And because iniquity shall abound, the love of many shall wax cold. By reason of these trials and persecutions from without, and these apostacies and false prophets from within, the love of many to Christ and his doctrine, and also their love to one another shall wax cold. Some shall openly desert the faith, (as ver. 10.) others shall corrupt it, (as ver. 11.) and others again (as here) shall grow indifferent to it. And (not to mention other instances) who can hear St. Paul complaining at Rome, (2 Tim. iv. 16.) that at his first answer no man stood with him, but all men forsook him; who can hear the divine author of the Epistle to the Hebrews exhorting them (x. 25.) not to forsake the assembling of themselves together, as the manner of some is; and not conclude the event to have sufficiently justified our Saviour's prediction.

But he that shall endure unto the end; (ver. 13.) but he who shall not be terrified by these trials and persecutions; he who shall neither apostatize from the faith himself, nor be seduced by others; he who shall not be ashamed to profess his faith in Christ, and his love to the brethren; the same shall be saved, saved both here and hereafter. There shall not an hair of your head perish, as it is in St. Luke; (xxi. 18.) and indeed it is very remarkable, and was certainly a most signal act of Providence, that none of the Christians perished in the destruction of Jerusalem. So true and prophetic also was that assertion of St. Peter upon this same occasion, (2 Pet. ii. 9.) The Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptations.

But notwithstanding the persecutions and calamities of the Christians, there was to be an universal publication of the Gospel before the destruction of Jerusalem, (ver. 14.) And this gospel of the kingdom (this gospel of the kingdom of God) shall be preached in all the world, for a witness unto all nations, and then shall the end come; and then shall the destruction of Jerusalem and the end of the Jewish polity come to pass; when all nations shall be or may be convinced of the crying sin of the Jews in crucifying the Lord of glory, and of the justice of God's judgments upon them for it. The Acts of the Apostles contain only a small part of the history of a small part of the apostles; and yet even in that history we see the Gospel was widely disseminated, and had taken root in the most considerable parts of the Roman empire. As early as in the reign of Nero, ¹ the Christians were grown so numerous at Rome, as to raise the jealousy of the government, and the first general persecution was commenced against them under pretence of their having set fire to the city, of which the emperor himself was really guilty, but willing to transfer the blame and odium upon the poor innocent Christians. Clement, who was a contemporary and fellow-labourer with St. Paul, ¹says of him in particular, that he was a preacher both in the east and in the west, that he taught the whole world righteousness, and travelled as far as to the utmost borders of the west: and if such were the labours of one apostle, though the chiefest of the apostles, what were the united labours of them all? It appears indeed from the writers of the history of the Church, that before the destruction of Jerusalem the Gospel was not only preached in the Lesser Asia, and Greece, and Italy, the great theatres of action then in the world; but was likewise propagated as far northward as Scythia, as far southward as Ethiopia, as far eastward as Parthia and India, as far westward as Spain and Britain. Our ancestors of this island seem to have lain as remote from the scene of our Saviour's actions as almost any nation, and were a ²rough inhospitable people, as unlikely to receive so civilized an institution as any people whatever. But yet there is ³some probability that the Gospel was preached here by St. Simon the apostle; there is much greater probability that it was preached here by St. Paul; and there is absolute certainty that Christianity was planted in this country in the days of the apostles, before the destruction of Jerusalem.* Agreeably to this ⁴Eusebius informs us, that the apostles preached the Gospel in all the world; and some of them passed beyond the ocean to the Britannic isles. Theodoret ⁵likewise affirms, that the apostles had induced every nation and kind of men to embrace the Gospel, and among the converted nations he reckons particularly the Britons. St. Paul himself, in his epistle to the Colossians, (i. 6. 23.) speaketh of the Gospel's being come into all the world, and preached to every creature under heaven: and in his epistle to the Romans (x. 18.) very elegantly applies to the lights of the Church what the Psalmist said of the lights of heaven, their sound went into all the earth, and their words unto the ends of the world. But how improbable, and in all human appearance impossible was it, that a few poor fishermen and such inferior illiterate persons should propagate and establish a new religion, in so short a space of time, throughout the world? Doubt-

¹ Tacit. Annal. Lib. xv.

¹ Κήρυξ γενόμενος ἐν τε τῇ ἀνατολῇ καὶ ἐν τῇ δύσει, —δικαιοσύνην διδάξας ὅλον τὸν κόσμον, καὶ ἐπὶ τὸ τέρμα τῆς δόσεως ἐλθών. Præco factus in oriente ac occidentem — totum mundum docens justitiam, et ad occidentis terminum veniens. ["He was a preacher in the east and west.—The whole world was taught righteousness by him. In his travels he came to the utmost bounds of the west."] Clem. Epist. ad Corinth. i. cap. v.

² Britannos hospitibus feros. ["Britons of inhospitable strain."] Hor. Od. iii. iv. 33.

³ See Stillingfleet's Origines Britannicæ, chap. i. Collier's Eccles. Hist. Book i. Usserii Britan. Eccles. Antiquitates, cap. i. &c.

⁴ ὑπὲρ τὸν ὠκεανὸν παρελθεῖν ἐπὶ τὰς καλουμένας Βρεττανικὰς νήσους.—trans oceanum evasisse, ad eas insulas quæ Britannicæ vocantur. [They passed over the ocean to the islands called Britannia.] Demons. Evangel. Lib. iii. cap. v. p. 112. Edit. Paris. 1628.

⁵ Theod. Serm. ix. Tom. IV. p. 610. Edit. Paris. 1642. Καὶ οὐ μόνον Ῥωμαίους—ἀλλὰ καὶ—Βρεττάνους—καὶ ἀπαξ ἀπλῶς πᾶν ἔθνος καὶ γένος ἀνθρώπων—κ. τ. λ. neque solum Romanos—sed et—Britannos—atque, ut semel dicam, omne hominum genus nationesque omnes, &c. [And not only the Romans,—but also the Britons,—and in one word, every nation and kindred of mankind, &c.]

less it was not man's but God's work, and from the same divine Spirit proceeded both the prophecy and the completion!

We have deduced the prophecies as low as to the siege of Jerusalem; and now let us stop to make a few short reflections upon what hath been said.

The first reflection that naturally occurs, is the strange and surprising manner in which these prophecies have been fulfilled, and the great argument that may thence be drawn for the truth of our Saviour's divine mission: but we shall have a fitter opportunity for enlarging upon this hereafter.

Another reflection we may make on the sincerity and ingenuity of Christ, and the courage and constancy of his disciples. Had Jesus been an impostor, he would, like all other impostors, have fed his followers with fair hopes and promises: but on the contrary we see that he denounced persecution to be the lot of his disciples, he pointeth out to them the difficulties they must encounter, the fiery trials they must undergo; and yet they did not therefore stagger in their faith, they did not therefore, like faint-hearted soldiers, forsake their colours and desert his service. One hardly knoweth whom to admire most, him for dealing so plainly with them, or them for adhering so steadily to him. Such instances are rarely found of openness on one side, and of fidelity on the other.

A third reflection we may make on the sudden and amazing progress of the Gospel, that it should spread so far and so wide before the destruction of Jerusalem. The greatness of the work that was wrought, the meanness of the instruments which wrought it, and the short time that it was wrought in, must force all considering men to say (Psalm cxviii. 23.) This is the Lord's doing, it is marvelous in our eyes. The Mohammedan religion, indeed, in less than a century overran a great part of the world; but then it was propagated by the sword, and owed its success to arms and violence. But the Christian religion was diffused over the face of the earth in the space of forty years, and prevailed not only without the sword but against the sword, not only without the powers civil and military to support it, but against them all united to oppress it. And what but the Spirit of God could bid it thus go forth (Rev. vi. 2.) conquering and to conquer? Had this counsel or this work been of men, as Gamaliel argued, (Acts v. 38.) it would have come to nought; but being of God, nothing could overthrow it.

A fourth reflection we may make, and it is the last that I shall make, that seldom any state is ruined, but there are evident signals and presages of it. Few people have their fate particularly foretold by prophets, like the Jews; nor indeed can the fate of any people be so particularly foretold, the time, the manner, and all the circumstances preceding and succeeding, without divine inspiration. So many passages and circumstances cannot be particularly foretold unless particularly revealed; but in the general, without the spirit of prophecy, it is no difficult matter to perceive when cities and kingdoms are tending toward their final period and dissolution. There are as certain tokens and symptoms of a consumption and decay in the body politic, as in the body natural. I would not presage ill to my country; but when we consider the many heinous and presumptuous sins of this nation, the licentiousness and violation of all order and discipline, the daring insolence of robbers and smugglers in open defiance of all law and justice, the factions and divisions, the venality and corruption, the avarice and profusion of all ranks and degrees among us, the total want of public spirit, and ardent passion for private ends and interests, the luxury and gaming and dissoluteness in high life, and the laziness and drunkenness and debauchery in low life, and above all that barefaced ridicule of all virtue and decency, and that scandalous neglect, and I wish I could not say contempt, of all public worship and religion; when we consider these things, these signs of the times, the stoutest and most sanguine of us all must tremble at the natural and probable consequences of them. God give us grace, that we may know (Luke xix. 42.) at least in this our day, the things which belong unto our peace, before they are hid from our eyes. Never may such blindness happen to us as befel the Jews; but may we (Isai. lv. 6, 7.) seek the Lord while he may be found, and call upon him while he is near; and return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon us, and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon.

XIX.

THE SAME SUBJECT CONTINUED.

PART II.

THE preceding discourse was concerning the signs of the destruction of Jerusalem, that is, the circumstances and accidents which were to be the forerunners and attendants of this great event. Those are already specified which passed before the siege, and now we proceed to treat of those which happened during the siege and after it. Never was prophecy more punctually fulfilled, and it will be very well worth our time and attention to trace the particulars.

When ye therefore shall see the abomination of desolation, spoken of by Daniel the prophet, stand in the holy place, (whoso readeth let him understand,) Then let them which be in Judæa, flee into the mountains, (ver. 15, 16.) Whatever difficulty there is in these words, it may be cleared up by the parallel place in St. Luke, (xxi. 20, 21.) And when ye shall see Jerusalem compassed with armies, then know that the desolation thereof is nigh. Then let them which are in Judæa flee to the mountains. So that the abomination of desolation is the Roman army, and the abomination of desolation standing in the holy place is the Roman army besieging Jerusalem. This, saith our Saviour, is the abomination of desolation, spoken of by Daniel the prophet, in the ninth and eleventh chapters; and so let every one who readeth those prophecies understand them. The Roman army is called the abomination for its ensigns and images, which were so to the Jews. As Chrysostom affirms, ¹ every idol and every image of a man was called an abomination among the Jews. For this reason, as ² Josephus informs us, the principal Jews earnestly intreated Vitellius, governor of Syria, when he was conducting his army through Judæa, against Aretas, king of the Arabians, to lead it another way; and he greatly obliged them by complying with their request. We farther learn from ³ Josephus, that after the city was taken, the Romans brought their ensigns into the temple, and placed them over against the eastern gate, and sacrificed to them there. The Roman army is therefore fitly called the abomination, and the abomination of desolation, as it was to desolate and lay waste Jerusalem: and this army's besieging Jerusalem is called standing where it ought not, as it is in St. Mark, (xiii. 14.) or standing in the holy place, as it is in St. Matthew; the city, and such a compass of ground about it, being accounted holy. When therefore the Roman army shall advance to besiege Jerusalem, then let them who are in Judæa consult their own safety, and fly into the mountains. This counsel was wisely remembered, and put in practice by the Christians afterwards. Josephus informs us, that when Cestius Gallus came with his army against Jerusalem, ⁴ many fled from the city as if it would be taken presently: and after his retreat ⁵ many of the noble Jews departed out of the city, as out of a sinking ship: and a few years afterwards, when Vespasian was drawing his forces towards Jerusalem, ⁶ a great multitude fled from Jericho, εἰς τὴν ὄρεινὴν, into the mountainous country for their security. It is probable that there were some Christians

¹ ἅπαν εἰδωλον, καὶ πᾶν τύπωμα ἀνθρώπου παρὰ τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις βδέλυγμα ἐκαλεῖτο. omne simulacrum et hominis effigies apud Judæos appellabatur abominatio. [Every idol, and every image of a man, by the Jews was called an abomination.] Advers. Judæos v. Orat. v. p. 645. Vol. I. Edit. Benedict.

² Joseph. Antiq. Lib. xviii. cap. vi. sect. iii. Edit. Hudson.

³ κομισάντες τὰς σημαίας εἰς τὸ ἱερὸν, καὶ θέμενοι τῆς ἀνατολικῆς πόλης ἀντικρὺς, ἔθυσάν τε αὐταῖς αὐτόθι. signis in templum illatis positisque contra portam orientalem, et illis ibi sacrificarunt. [Having brought their standards into the temple, and having placed them opposite to the eastern gate, they sacrificed to them in that place.] Joseph. de Bell. Jud. Lib. vi. cap. vi. sect. i. p. 1283. Edit. Hudson.

⁴ ἥδη δὲ πολλοὶ διέδρασκον ἀπὸ τῆς πόλεως, ὥς ἀλωσομένης αὐτίκα. jamque multi ex civitate diffugiebant, ac si continuo esset expugnanda. [And now many fled from the city, from a persuasion that it would soon be taken.] Joseph. de Bell. Jud. Lib. ii. cap. xix. sect. vi. p. 1103.

⁵ πολλοὶ τῶν ἐπιφανῶν Ἰουδαίων, ὥσπερ βαπτιζομένης νεώς, ἀπενήχοντο τῆς πόλεως. nobilium Judæorum multi, quasi in eo esset navis ut mergeretur, e civitate veluti natando egressi sunt. [Many of the illustrious Jews departed from the city, as from a sinking ship.] Ibid. cap. xx. sect. i. p. 1105.

⁶ Ibid. Lib. iv. cap. viii. sect. ii. p. 1193. Edit. Hudson.

among these, but we learn more certainly from ¹ ecclesiastical historians, that at this juncture all who believed in Christ left Jerusalem, and removed to Pella, and other places beyond the river Jordan, so that they all marvellously escaped the general shipwreck of their country, and we do not read any where that so much as one of them perished in the destruction of Jerusalem. Of such signal service was this caution of our Saviour to the believers.

He prosecutes the same subject in the following verses. Let him which is on the house-top not come down to take any thing out of his house. (ver. 17.) The ² houses of the Jews, as well as those of the ancient Greeks and Romans, were flat on the top for them to walk upon, and had usually stairs on the outside, by which they might ascend and descend without coming into the house. In the eastern walled cities these flat-roofed houses usually formed continued terraces from one end of the city to the other, which terraces terminated at the gates. He therefore who is walking and regaling himself upon the house-top, let him not come down to take any thing out of his house; but let him instantly pursue his course along the tops of the houses, and escape out at the city-gate as fast as he possibly can. Neither let him which is in the field return back to take his clothes. (ver. 18.) Our Saviour maketh use of these expressions to intimate, that their flight must be as sudden and hasty as Lot's was out of Sodom. And the Christians escaping just as they did was the more providential, because afterwards ³ all egress out of the city was prevented.

And woe unto them that are with child, and unto them that give suck in those days. (ver. 19.) For neither will such persons be in a condition to fly, neither will they be well able to endure the distress and hardships of a siege. This woe was sufficiently fulfilled in the cruel slaughters which were made both of the women and children, and particularly in that grievous famine, which so miserably afflicted Jerusalem during the siege. For as Josephus reports, ⁴ mothers snatched the food from their infants out of their very mouths: and again in another place, ⁵ the houses were full of women and children, who perished by famine. But Josephus still relates a more horrid story; and I make no question, that our Saviour with his spirit of prophecy had this particular incident in

¹ Euseb. Eccles. Hist. Lib. iii. cap. v. cum notis Valesii. Epiphanius adversus Nazæos, Lib. i. Tom. II. sect. vii. Vol. I. Edit. Petavii. Idem de Mens. et Pond. sect. xv. Vol. II.

² See Grotius on the place, and the Miracles of Jesus vindicated by Bishop Pearce, Part iv. p. 27, 28.

³ Joseph. de Bell. Jud. Lib. iv. cap. ix. sect. i. et x. Edit. Hudson.

⁴ μητέρες νηπίων ἐξήρπαζον ἐξ αὐτῶν τῶν στομάτων τὰς τροφάς· matres infantibus cibum ex ipso ore rapiebant. [Translated in the text.] Ibid. Lib. v. cap. x. sect. iii. p. 1245.

⁵ καὶ τὰ μὲν τέγη πεπλήρωτο γυναικῶν καὶ βρεφῶν λελυμένων. ac tecta quidem plena erant mulieribus et infantibus fame enectis. [Translated in the text.] Ibid. cap. xii. sect. iii. p. 1252.

view. There ¹ was one Mary, the daughter of Eleazar, illustrious for her family and riches. She having been stripped and plundered of all her substance and provisions by the soldiers, out of necessity and fury killed her own sucking child, and having boiled him devoured half of him, and covering up the rest preserved it for another time. The soldiers soon came, allured by the smell of victuals, and threatened to kill her immediately, if she would not produce what she had dressed. But she replied that she had preserved a good part for them, and uncovered the relics of her son. Dread and astonishment seized them, and they stood stupified at the sight. "But this," said she, "is my own son, and this my work. Eat, for even I have eaten. Be not you more tender than a woman, nor more compassionate than a mother. But if you have a religious abhorrence of my victim, I truly have eaten half, and let the rest remain for me." They went away trembling, fearful to do this one thing; and hardly left this food for the mother. The whole city was struck with horror, says the historian, at this wickedness; and they were pronounced blessed, who died before they had heard or seen such great evils. So true also was what our Saviour declared on another occasion, when the women were bewailing and lamenting him, as he was led to execution, (Luke xxiii. 28—30.) Daughters of Jerusalem, weep not for me, but weep for yourselves, and for your children. For behold, the days are coming, in the which they shall say, Blessed are the barren, and the wombs that never bare, and the paps which never gave suck. Then shall they begin to say to the mountains, Fall on us; and to the hills, Cover us. Proverbial expressions to signify their desire of any shelter or refuge; and so very desirous were they of hiding themselves, that ² some thousands of them crept even into the common-sewers, and there miserably perished, or were dragged out to slaughter.

But pray ye that your flight be not in the winter, neither on the sabbath-day. (ver. 20.) Pray that these evils be not farther aggravated by the concurrence of other natural and moral evils, such as the inclemencies of the seasons and your own superstitions. Pray that your flight be not in the winter; for the hardness of the season, the badness of the roads, the shortness of the days, will all be great impediments to your flight: neither on the sabbath-day: that you may not raise the indignation of the Jews by travelling on that day, nor be hindered from doing it by your own superstition. It seemeth to be spoken a good deal in condescension to the Jewish prejudices, a sabbath-day's journey among the Jews being but about a mile. In the parallel place of St. Mark (xiii. 18.) it is observable, that the evangelist saith only, And pray ye that your flight be not in the winter, without any mention of the sabbath-day.

As our Saviour cautioned his disciples to fly, when they should see Jerusalem encompassed with armies, so it was very providentially ordered, that Jerusalem should be compassed with armies, and yet that they should have such favourable opportunities of making their escape. In the twelfth year of Nero, Cestius Gallus, the president of Syria, came against Jerusalem with a powerful army. He might, as Josephus ¹ affirms, if he would have assaulted the city, have presently taken it, and thereby have put an end to the war. But without any just reason, and contrary to the expectation of all, he raised the siege, and departed. Vespasian was deputed in his room to govern Syria, and to carry on the war against the Jews. This great general, ² having subdued all the country, prepared to besiege Jerusalem, and invested the city on every side. But the news of Nero's death, and soon afterwards of Galba's, and the disturbances which thereupon ensued in the Roman empire, and the civil wars between Otho and Vitellius, held Vespasian and Titus in suspense; and they thought it unseasonable to engage in a foreign war, while they were anxious for the safety of their own country. By these means the expedition against Jerusalem was deferred for some time; and the city was not actually besieged in form till after Vespasian was confirmed in the empire, and Titus was sent to command the forces in Judea. These incidental delays were very opportune for the Christians, and for those who had any thoughts of retreating and providing for their own safety. Afterwards there was hardly any possibility of escaping; for as our Saviour said in St. Luke's Gospel, (xix. 43.) The days shall come upon thee, that thine enemies shall cast a trench about thee, and compass thee round, and keep thee in on every side. Accordingly the Romans having begirt Jerusalem with their forces, and having made several assaults without the desired success, ³ Titus resolved to surround the city with a wall; and by the diligence and emulation of the soldiers, animated by the presence, and acting under the continual inspection of the general, this work, which was worthy of months, was with incredible speed completed in three days. The wall was of the dimensions of thirty-nine furlongs, and was strengthened with thirteen forts at proper distances; so that, as the ⁴ historian saith, all hope of safety was cut off from the Jews, together with all the means of escaping out of the city. No provisions could be carried in, and no person could come out unknown to the enemy. But to return to St. Matthew.

¹ Joseph. de Bell. Jud. Lib. vi. cap. iii. sect. iv. Edit. Hudson.

² Ibid. Lib. vi. cap. ix. sect. iv.

¹ Josephus de Bell. Jud. Lib. ii. cap. xix. κἂν εἴπερ ᾗθέλῃσε κατ' αὐτὴν ἐκείνην τὴν ὥραν ἐντὸς τῶν τευχῶν βιάσασθαι, παρ' αὐτίκα τὴν πόλιν ἔσχε, καὶ τὸν πόλεμον συνέβη καταλεῦσθαι. Et si eadem illâ horâ voluisset vi muros perrumpere, e vestigio urbem cepisset, bellumque ab ipso confectum fuisse contigisset. ["And if in the same hour, he had been inclined to break through the walls of the city by force, he instantly would have taken it, and put an end to the war."] Sect. iv. p. 1102. Edit. Hudson.

² Joseph. ibid. Lib. iv. cap. ix. sect. i. ii. &c.

³ Joseph. ibid. Lib. v. cap. xii. sect. i. et ii.

⁴ Ἰουδαίοις δὲ μετὰ τῶν ἐξόδων ἀπεκόπη πᾶσα σωτηρίας ἐλπὶς. Judæis autem cum egrediendi facultate spes quoque omnis salutis præcisa erat. ["But along with all means of escaping, all hope of safety was cut off to the Jews."] Sect. iii. p. 1252. Edit. Hudson.

In the preceding verses our Saviour had warned his disciples to fly, as soon as ever they saw Jerusalem besieged by the Romans; and now he assigns the reason of his giving them this caution, (ver. 21.) For then shall be great tribulation, such as was not from the beginning of the world to this time, no nor ever shall be. St. Mark expresseth it much in the same manner, (xiii. 19.) For in those days shall be affliction, such as was not from the beginning of the creation which God created unto this time, neither shall be. This seemeth to be a proverbial form of expression, as in Exodus, (x. 14.) And the locusts were very grievous, before them there were no such locusts as they, neither after them shall be such: and again in Joel, (ii. 2.) A great people and a strong, there hath not been ever the like, neither shall be any more after it, even to the years of many generations. Of the same kind is that in Daniel, (xii. 1.) There shall be a time of trouble, such as never was since there was a nation, even to that same time: and that in the first book of Maccabees, (ix. 27.) There was great affliction in Israel, the like whereof was not since the time that a prophet was not seen amongst them. Our Saviour, therefore, might fitly apply the same manner of speaking upon the present occasion: but he doth not make use of proverbial expressions without a proper meaning, and this may be understood even literally. For indeed all history cannot furnish us with a parallel to the calamities and miseries of the Jews; rapine and murder, famine and pestilence within; fire and sword, and all the terrors of war without. Our Saviour wept at the foresight of these calamities, and it is almost impossible for persons of any humanity to read the relation of them in Josephus without weeping too. That historian might therefore well say, as he doth in ¹ the preface to his history, “Our city of all those which have been subjected to the Romans, was advanced to the highest felicity, and was thrust down again to the extremest misery: for if the misfortunes of all from the beginning of the world were compared with those of the Jews, they would appear much inferior upon the comparison: and again in another ² place he saith, to speak in brief, no other city ever suffered such things, as no other generation from the beginning of the world was ever more fruitful of wickedness.” St. Luke expresseth the reason thus, (xxi. 22.) For these be the days of vengeance, that all things which are written may be fulfilled. These be the days of vengeance, wherein the calamities foretold by Moses, Joel, Daniel, and other prophets, as well as those predicted by our Saviour, shall all meet as in one common centre, and be fulfilled with aggravation on this generation. These be the days of vengeance too in another sense, as if God's vengeance had certain periods and revolutions, and the same days were fatal to the Jews, and destined to their destruction. For it is very memorable, and matter of just admiration according to ¹ Josephus, that the temple was burnt by the Romans in the same month, and on the same day of the month, as it was before by the Babylonians.

¹ πόλιν γὰρ δὴ τῶν ὑπὸ Ῥωμαίους πασῶν τὴν ἡμετέραν ἐπὶ πλεῖστον τε εὐδαιμονίας συνέβη προελθεῖν, καὶ πρὸς ἔσχατον συμφορῶν αὐτῆς καταπεσεῖν. τὰ γοῦν πάντων ἀπ’ αἰῶνος ἀνυχήματα, πρὸς τὰ Ἰουδαίων, ἡττάσθαι μοι δοκεῖ κατὰ σύγκρισιν. nam ex omnibus civitatibus, quæ Romanorum jugum subierunt, nostræ sane contigit ad summum felicitatis pervenisse, ac deinde in extremam calamitatem incidisse, namque omnium ab omni ævi memoriâ res adversæ, si cum iis conferantur quæ Judæis acciderunt, longe ab illis superari mihi videntur. [Translated in the text.] Joseph. Procem. sect. iv. p. 955.

² συνέλόντα δ’ εἰπεῖν, μήτε πόλιν ἄλλην τοιαῦτα πεπονθέναι, μήτε γενεάν ἐξ αἰῶνος γεγενῆσθαι κακίας γονιμωτέραν. illud autem breviter dici potest, neque aliam urbem talia perpassam esse, neque hominum genus aliud ab omni ævo sceleratius exstitisse. [Translated in the text.] Lib. v. cap. x. sect. v. p. 1246.

Nothing so violent can be of long continuance. These calamities were so severe, that like fire, they must in time have consumed all, and have left nothing for themselves to prey upon. And except those days should be shortened, there should no flesh be saved. (ver. 22.) If these wars and desolations were to continue, none of the Jews would escape destruction, they would all be cut off root and branch. I think ² Josephus computes the number of those who perished in the siege at eleven hundred thousand, besides those who were slain in other places: and if the Romans had gone on destroying in this manner, the whole nation of the Jews would certainly in a little time have been extirpated. But for the elect's sake, but for the sake of the Christian Jews, those days shall be shortened. But for the elect's sake, whom he hath chosen, the Lord hath shortened the days, as it is expressed in St. Mark. (xiii. 20.) The elect is a well known appellation in Scripture and antiquity for the Christians; and the Christian Jews, partly through the fury of the Zealots on one hand, and the hatred of the Romans on the other, and partly through the difficulty of subsisting in the mountains without houses or provisions, would in all probability have been almost all destroyed either by the sword or by famine, if the days had not been shortened. But providentially the days were shortened. Titus himself ³ was desirous of putting a speedy end to the siege, having Rome and the riches and the pleasures there before his eyes. Some of his officers ⁴

¹ Lib. vi. cap. iv. sect. v. θαυμάσαι δ' ἂν τις ἐν αὐτῇ τῇς περιόδου τὴν ἀκρίβειαν. καὶ μῆνα γούν, ὡς ἔφην, καὶ ἡμέραν ἐπετήρησε τὴν αὐτὴν, ἐν ᾗ πρότερον ὑπὸ Βαβυλωνίων ὁ ναὸς ἐνεπρήσθη. est autem ut mirari quis possit in eo accuratam circumacti temporis rationem, nam eundem, ut dictum est, mensem et diem servavit, quo prius templum a Babyloniiis exustum fuerat. ["One cannot help admiring here, an exact coincidence in respect of time. For the temple was burnt by the Romans in the same month, and on the very day wherein it had been formerly consumed by the Babylonians."] Sect. viii. p. 1279. Edit. Hudson.

² Lib. vi. cap. ix. sect. iii.

³ Ipsi Tito Roma, et opes, voluptatesque ante oculos; ac ni statim Hierosolyma conciderent, morari videbantur. [Unless Jerusalem had quickly fallen, time would have appeared tedious to Titus, who had the wealth and pleasures of Rome in view.] Tacit. Hist. Lib. v. p. 217. Edit. Lipsii.

⁴ Joseph. de Bell. Jud. Lib. v. cap. xii. sect. i. αὐτῷ δὲ τὸ μὲν ἀργεῖν καθόλου μετὰ τοσαύτης δυνάμεως οὐκ ἔδοκει πρέπειν. Ipsi autem Tito cessare quidem prorsus tanto cum exercitu honestum non videbatur. [It appeared to him, (Titus) very unbecoming to be idle, having so great an army under his command.] δεδιέναι τε μὴ τὴν δόξαν τοῦ κατορθώματος αὐτῷ τὸ μῆκος ἐλαττώσῃ τοῦ χρόνου. τοῦτ' αὖ μὲν γὰρ εἶναι πᾶν ἀνύσιproposed to him to turn the siege into a blockade, and since they could not take the city by storm, to starve it into a surrender: but he thought it not becoming to sit still with so great an army: and he feared lest the length of the time should diminish the glory of his success; every thing indeed may be effected in time, but celerity contributes much to the fame and splendour of actions. The besieged too helped to shorten the days by ¹ their divisions and mutual slaughters; by ² burning their provisions, which would have sufficed for many years; and by ³ fatally deserting their strongest holds, where they could never have been taken by force, but by famine alone. By these means the days were shortened; and indeed otherwise Jerusalem could never have been taken in so short a time, so well fortified as it was, and so well fitted to sustain a longer siege. The enemy without could hardly ever have prevailed but for the factions and seditions within. Titus himself could not but ascribe his success to God, as he was viewing the fortifications, after the city was taken. His words to his friends were very remarkable, "We have fought," ⁴ said he, "with God on our side; and it is God who hath pulled the Jews out of these strong holds; for what could the hands of men or machines do against these towers?" God, therefore, in the opinion of Titus as well as of St. Mark shortened the days. After the destruction of Jerusalem too, God inclined the heart of Titus to take some pity upon the remnant of the Jews, and to restrain the nations from exercising the cruelty that they would have exercised towards them. At Antioch particularly (where the disciples were first called Christians) ⁵ the senate and the people earnestly importuned him to expel the Jews out of the city; but he prudently answered, that their country whither they should return being laid waste, there was no place that could receive them. Then they requested him to deprive the Jews of their former privileges, but those he permitted them to enjoy as before. Thus for the elect's sake those days of persecution were shortened.

μον, πρὸς δὲ τῆς εὐκλείας τὸ τάχος. metuendumque ne successus gloriam ipsi diminuat temporis longitudo, hac enim cuncta quidem effici posse, sed ad gloriam facere celeritatem. [He was afraid lest the length of time should take away from the splendour of his success, he knew that all things might be executed in time, but that celerity in the execution adds to their glory.] P. 1251. Edit. Hudson.

¹ Ibid. cap. i. &c.

² Sect. iv. ὅς ἂν αὐτοῖς οὐκ ἐπ' ὀλίγα διήρκεσεν ἔτη πολιορκουμένοις. quod non paucis annis illis sufficere potuisset obsessis. [Which would have sufficed the besieged for many years.] P. 1213.

³ Lib. vi. cap. viii. sect. iv. ἐφ' ὧν βία μὲν οὐδέποτ' ἁλῶναι, μόνῳ δ' ἐδύναντο λιμῶ. in quibus vi quidem nunquam, solâ vero fame expugnari poterant. [Wherein by force they could never have been taken, but only by famine.] P. 1289.

⁴ Ibid. cap. ix. sect. i. σὺν Θεῷ γ' ἐπολεμήσαμεν, ἔφη, καὶ Θεὸς ἦν ὁ τῶνδε τῶν ἐρυνμάτων Ἰουδαίους καθελὼν, ἐπεὶ χεῖρες τε ἀνθρώπων ἢ μηχαναὶ τί πρὸς τοὺτους τοὺς πύργους δύνανται; Deo, inquit, favente bellavimus, Deus est qui Judæos ex istis munitentis detraxit; nam humanæ manus et machinæ quid contra tales turres valeant? [Translated in the text.] P. 1290.

⁵ Joseph. ibid. Lib. vii. cap. v. sect. ii.

Our blessed Lord had cautioned his disciples against false Christs and false prophets before, but he giveth a more particular caution against them about the time of the siege and destruction of Jerusalem, (ver. 23, 24.) Then if any man shall say unto you, Lo, here is Christ or there, believe it not; For there shall arise false Christs and false prophets, and shall show great signs and wonders, insomuch that (if it were possible) they shall deceive the very elect. And in fact many such impostors did arise about that time, as we learn from ¹ Josephus, and promised deliverance from God, being suborned by the tyrants or governors to prevent the people and soldiers from deserting to the Romans; and the lower the Jews were reduced, the more disposed would they be to listen to these deceptions, and the more ready to follow the deceivers. Hegesippus too in ² Eusebius mentions the coming of false Christs and false prophets about the same time. But as it was to little purpose for a man to take upon him the character of the Christ, or even of a prophet, without miracles to vouch his divine mission; so it was the common artifice and pretence of these impostors to show signs and wonders, σημεῖα καὶ τέρατα, the very words used by Christ in his prophecy, and by ³ Josephus in his history. Simon Magus performed great wonders according to the account that is given of him in the Acts of the Apostles, (viii. 9—11.) There was a certain man called Simon, which before time in the same city used sorcery, and bewitched the people of Samaria, giving out that himself was some great one: to whom they all gave heed from the least to the greatest, saying, This man is the great power of God: and to him they had regard, because that of long time he had bewitched them with sorceries. Dositheus likewise was reputed to work wonders according to ⁴ Origen: Barchochebas too, who ⁵ Jerome saith pretended to vomit flames. Such also were the Jews, of whom St. Paul speaketh, (2 Tim. iii. 8. 13.) comparing them to Jannes and Jambres, famous magicians of Egypt, who withstood Moses, as these also resisted the truth, men of corrupt minds, reprobate concerning the faith, πονηροὶ ἄνθρωποι καὶ γόητες, wicked men and impostors.

¹ πολλοὶ δ' ἦσαν ἐγκάθετοι παρὰ τῶν τυράννων τότε πρὸς τὸν δῆμον προφῆται, προσμένειν τὴν ἀπὸ τοῦ Θεοῦ βοήθειαν καταγγέλλοντες, ὥς ἤττον αὐτομολοίεν, καὶ τοὺς ἐπάνω δέουσιν καὶ φυλακῆς γινόμενους ἐλπίς παρακρατῶν. πείθεται δὲ ταχέως ἄνθρωπος ἐν συμφοραῖς. Multi autem tunc a tyrannis subornati erant ad populum prophetæ, denunciantes esse auxilium a Deo expectandum, ut populus minus transfugeret, et eos, qui supra metum erant et custodes, spes retineret. Cito autem in adversis homini persuadetur. [And there were many prophets, suborned by the tyrants, among the common people, who gave out that they might expect help from God, that they might be the less disposed to desert, and that hope might retain them, who were above fear, and were the guards of the city. In the time of adversity a man is quickly persuaded.] Lib. vi. cap. v. sect. ii. p. 1281. Edit. Hudson.

² Euseb. Eccles. Hist. Lib. iv. cap. xxii.

³ Joseph. Antiq. Lib. xx. cap. vii. sect. vi. p. 893. Edit. Hudson. Vide etiam de Bell. Jud. Lib. vii. cap. xi. sect. i.

⁴ Contra Celsum, Lib. vi. cap. xi. p. 638. Vol. I. Edit. Benedict.

⁵ Adversus Rufinum, Lib. iii. col. 466. Vol. IV. Edit. Benedict.

There is a strange propensity in mankind to believe things marvellous and astonishing: and no wonder that weak and wicked men, Jews and Samaritans, were deceived by such impostors; when if it had been possible they would have deceived the very elect, the Christians themselves.

But behold, saith our Saviour, I have told you before. (ver. 25.) Behold I have given you sufficient warning. Wherefore, if they shall say unto you, Behold, he is in the desert, go not forth; behold, he is in the secret chambers, believe it not. (ver. 26.) It is surprising that our Saviour should not only foretel the appearance of these impostors, but also the manner and circumstances of their conduct. For some he mentions as appearing in the desert, and some in the secret chambers; and the event hath in all points answered to the prediction. Several of the false Christs and false prophets conducted their followers into the desert. Josephus in his ¹ Antiquities saith expressly, that many impostors and cheats persuaded the people to follow them into the desert, where they promised to show manifest wonders and signs done by the providence of God: and many being persuaded suffered the punishment of their folly; for Felix brought them back, and chastised them. Again, in his ² history of the Jewish war, speaking of the same persons, he saith, that these impostors, under a pretence of divine inspiration, affected innovations and changes, persuaded the multitude to grow mad, and led them forth into the desert, as if God would there show them the signs of liberty. Against these Felix, for it seemed to be the foundation of a revolt, sent horse and foot soldiers, and slew a great number of them. The Egyptian false prophet mentioned by ³ Josephus, and in the Acts of the Apostles, (xxi. 38.) led out into the wilderness four thousand men that were murderers: but Felix, marching with his forces, and coming to an engagement with him, the Egyptian himself with a few others fled away, and most of those who had been with him were slain or taken prisoners. There was likewise another impostor mentioned by ¹ Josephus, who promised salvation to the people, and a cessation of all evils, if they would follow him into the desert; but Festus sent horse and foot against him, and destroyed the deceiver himself, and those who followed him. These things happened before the destruction of Jerusalem, and a little after ² Jonathan, a weaver, persuaded not a few indigent fellows to adhere to him, and led them forth into the desert, promising there to show signs and apparitions; but his followers most were slain, some were made prisoners, and he himself was afterwards taken, and burnt alive by order of Vespasian. As several of these impostors thus conducted their followers into the desert, so did others into the secret chambers, or places of security: as particularly the pseudoprophet mentioned by ³ Josephus, who declared to the people in the city, that God commanded them to go up into the temple, and there they should receive the signs of deliverance. A multitude of men, women, and children, went up accordingly; but instead of deliverance, the place was set on fire by the Romans, and six thousand perished miserably in the flames, or by throwing themselves down to escape them.

¹ οἱ δὲ γόητες καὶ ἀπατεῶνες ἄνθρωποι τὸν ὄχλον ἔπειθον αὐτοῖς εἰς τὴν ἐρημίαν ἐπεσθαι. δείξιν γὰρ ἔφασαν ἑταργῇ τέρατα καὶ σημεῖα, κατὰ τὴν τοῦ Θεοῦ πρόνοιαν γεγόμενα. Καὶ πολλοὶ πεισθέντες, τῆς ἀφροσύνης τιμωρίας ὑπέσχον. ἀναχθέντας γὰρ αὐτοὺς Φῆλιξ ἐκόλασεν. Impostores vero et fallacii pleni homines suadebant multitudini, ut ipsos in solitudinem sequerentur. Se enim ipsi ostensuros dicebant manifesta prodigia et signa, quæ Dei curâ et providentiâ evenirent. Multique, fidem habentes, dementiae suæ pœnas pertulerunt. Eos quippe retractos Felix supplicio affecit. [Translated in the text.] Ant. Lib. xx. cap. vii. sect. vi. p. 893. Edit. Hudson.

² πλάνοι γὰρ ἄνθρωποι καὶ ἀπατεῶνες, προσχήματι θιασμοῦ, νεωτερισμοὺς καὶ μεταβολὰς πραγματευόμενοι, δαμονῶν τὸ πλῆθος ἀνέπειθον, καὶ προῆγον εἰς τὴν ἐρημίαν, ὡς ἐκεῖ τοῦ Θεοῦ δείξαντος αὐτοῖς σημεῖα ἐλευθερίας ἐπὶ τοῖς τοῖς Φῆλιξ, ἰδοὺ γὰρ ἀποστάσεως εἶναι καταβολή, πέμψας ἱππεῖς καὶ πεζοὺς ὀπλίτας, πολὺ πλῆθος διέφθειρε. Nam homines seductores et fallacii pleni, specie divini afflatus, novis rebus et mutationibus studentes, vulgo ut insanirent persuadebant, et proliciebant in solitudinem; ac si illic Deus ostensurus esset eis signa libertatis. Contra istos (inde enim videtur oritura esse insurrectio) milites, tam pedites quam equites, misit Felix, magnumque eorum numerum interfecit. [Translated in the text.] De Bell. Jud. Lib. ii. cap. xiii. sect. iv. p. 1075.

³ Antiq. Lib. xx. cap. vii. sect. vi. De Bell. Jud. Lib. ii. cap. xiii. sect. v. ὥστε συμβολῆς γενομένης, τὸν μὲν Αἰγύπτιον φυγεῖν μετ' ὀλίγων, διαφθαρήναι δὲ καὶ ζωγρηθῆναι πλείστους τῶν σὺν αὐτῷ. Facto igitur congressu, Ægyptius quidem ipse cum paucis evasit; plurimique eorum, qui cum eo erant, partim trucidati, partim vivi capti sunt. [So that a battle having ensued, the Egyptian escaped with a few, but the greater part of his followers were either slain or made prisoners.] P. 1076.

Our Saviour, therefore, might well caution his disciples both against the former and the latter sort of these deceivers. For as the lightning cometh out of the east, and shineth even unto the west; so shall also the coming of the Son of man be. (ver. 27.) His coming will not be in this or that particular place, but like the lightning will be sudden and universal. The appearance of the true Christ will be as distinguishable from that of the false Christ, as lightning which shineth all round the hemisphere is from a blaze of straw. What a learned ¹prelate observes from Josephus is very memorable, that "the Roman army entered into Judæa on the east side of it, and carried on their conquests westward, as if not only the extensiveness of the ruin, but the very route which the army would take was intended in the comparison of the lightning coming out of the east, and shining even unto the west." For wheresoever the carcase is, there will the eagles be gathered together. (ver. 28.) By the word carcase, as the same excellent ²prelate justly remarks, is meant the Jewish nation, which was morally and judicially dead, and whose destruction was pronounced in the decrees of heaven. Our Saviour, after his usual manner, applied a proverbial expression with a particular meaning. For as, according to the old proverb, wheresoever the carcase is, there will the eagles be gathered together; so wheresoever the Jews are, there will Christ be taking vengeance upon them by the Romans, who are properly compared to eagles as the fiercest birds of prey, and whose ensign was an eagle, to which probably our Saviour in this passage alluded. And as it was said so was it done; for the victories of the Romans were not confined to this or that place, but like a flood overran the whole land. Josephus saith, that ³there was no part of Judea which did not partake of the calamities of the capital city. At Antioch ⁴, the Jews being falsely accused of a design to burn the city, many of them were burnt in the theatre, and others were slain. The Romans pursued; and took, and slew them every where, as particularly ⁵at the siege of Machærus; at ⁶the wood Jarden, where the Jews were surrounded, and none of them escaped, but being not fewer than three thousand were all slain; and ⁷at Masada, where being closely besieged, and upon the point of being taken, they first murdered their wives and children, and then themselves to the number of nine hundred and sixty, to prevent their falling into the enemies' hands. When ⁸Judæa was totally subdued, the danger extended to those who dwelt at a distance. Many ⁹were slain in Egypt, and their temple there was shut up: and ¹⁰in Cyrene the followers of Jonathan, a weaver, and author of

¹ πέμπει δὲ Φῆστος δύναμιν ἱππικὴν τε καὶ πεζικὴν ἐπὶ τοὺς ἀπατηθέντας ἀπὸ τινος ἀνθρώπου γόητος, σωτηρίαν αὐτοῖς ἐπαγγελλομένου καὶ παυλὰν κακῶν εἰ βουληθεῖεν ἔπεισθαι μέχρι τῆς ἔρημίας αὐτῷ. καὶ αὐτὸν τε ἐκείνον τὸν ἀπατήσαντα, καὶ τοὺς ἀκολουθήσαντας διέφθειραν οἱ πεμφθέντες. Quin et Festus equestres pedestresque copias contra eos misit, qui decepti erant ab homine quodam præstigiatore, salutem ipsis pollicente et malorum cessationem, si se usque ad desertum sequi vellent; atque ipsum deceptorem, pariter ac eos qui illum comitati sunt, interfecerunt milites ab eo missi. [But Festus sends a force of horse and foot against them who had been deceived by a certain impostor, who had promised to them safety and an end to their evils, if they would follow him into the wilderness. They that were sent put to death both the deceiver and his followers.] Antiq. Lib. xx. cap. vii. sect. x. p. 895.

² De Bell. Jud. Lib. vii. cap. xi. οὐκ ὀλίγους τῶν ἀπόρων ἀνέπεισε προσέχειν αὐτῷ, καὶ προήγαγεν εἰς τὸν ἔρημον, σημεῖα καὶ φάσματα δείξιν ὑπισχνούμενος. Pauperum et indigentium non paucis, ut ipsi se adjungerent, persuasit, et in desertum eduxit, promittens se signa ipsis et apparitiones ostensurum. [He persuaded not a few indigent persons to adhere to him, and he led them forth into the wilderness, promising to show them signs and apparitions.] Sect. i. p. 1327.

³ τοῦτοις αἷτιος τῆς ἀπωλείας ψευδοπροφήτης τις κατέστη, κατ' ἐκείνην κηρύξας τὴν ἡμέραν τοῖς ἐπὶ τῆς πόλεως, ὥς ὁ Θεὸς ἐπὶ τὸ ἱερὸν ἀναβῆναι κελεύει, δεξομένους τὰ σημεῖα τῆς σωτηρίας. His causa interitus erat pseudopropheta quidam qui illo tempore prædicaverat populo in civitate, "jubere Deum eos in templum ascendere, signa salutis accepturos." [The cause of their destruction was a certain false prophet who arose at that time, and proclaimed to the inhabitants of the city, that God ordered them to go up into the temple, for there they should receive the signs of their deliverance.] Lib. vi. cap. v. sect. ii. p. 1281.

¹ Bishop Pierce's Dissertation on the destruction of Jerusalem, inserted in Dr. Jortin's Remarks on Ecclesiastical History, Vol. I. p. 27.

² Ditto, p. 22.

³ οὐδὲν δὲ μέρος ἦν τῆς Ἰουδαίας, ὃ μὴ τῇ προανειχοῦσῃ πόλει συναπώλλυτο. Nulla autem pars Judææ erat, quæ simul cum urbe eminentissimâ non interibat. [Translated in the text.] De Bell. Jud. Lib. iv. cap. vii. sect. ii. p. 1190. Edit. Hudson.

⁴ Lib. vii. cap. iii. sect. iii.

⁵ Ibid. cap. vi.

⁶ Ibid. sect. v.

⁷ Ibid. cap. ix.

⁸ Ibid. cap. x. sect. i.

⁹ Ibid. cap. x.

¹⁰ Ibid. cap. xi.

new disturbances, were most of them slain ; he himself was taken prisoner, and by his false accusation three thousand of the richest Jews were condemned and put to death : and with this account Josephus concludes his history of the Jewish war.

There was something so very extraordinary in the conduct of these false Christs and false prophets, and in their appearance at that time particularly, that it may not be improper to bestow some considerations upon this subject, especially as these considerations may tend to confirm and strengthen us in our most holy religion.

1. It is obvious to observe from hence, that in all probability there hath been a true prophet, a true Christ, otherwise there would hardly have been so many cheats and counterfeits. Fictions are usually formed upon realities ; and there would be nothing spurious, but for the sake of something true and genuine. There would be no bad money if there was none current and good. There would be no quacks and empirics, if there were no physicians able to perform real cures. In like manner there would be no pretenders to divine inspiration, were none truly and divinely inspired. There would not, we may reasonably presume, have been so many false Messiahs, had not a true Messiah been promised by God, and expected by men. And if a Messiah hath come from God, whom can we so properly pitch upon for the person as the man Christ Jesus ? If there were also some mock prophets in imitation of Mohammed, yet their number was nothing near so considerable, and his success was sufficient to excite and encourage them ; whereas the fate and condition of Jesus would rather have deterred any impostors from following his example.

2. Another natural observation from hence is, that the Messiah was particularly expected about the time of our Saviour, and consequently that the prophets had beforehand marked out that very time for his coming. For we read not of any false Messiahs before the age of our Saviour, nor of so many in any age after ; and why did they rise at that time particularly, if the Messiah was not at that time particularly expected ? and why did the Jews expect their Messiah at that time more than at any other, if that was not the time before appointed for his coming ? The prophet Daniel in particular had foretold, (ix. 25, &c.) that Messiah the prince should come towards the end of seventy weeks of years, or 490 years, from the going forth of the decree to restore and rebuild Jerusalem. Before these weeks of years were, by one account or other, near expiring, history saith nothing of the false Messiahs ; but when the prophetic weeks drew towards a conclusion, then those impostors arose frequent, like so many meteors to dazzle the eyes, and mislead the wandering steps of Jews and Samaritans. Nothing can be a more evident and convincing proof, that the Jews then understood the prophecy in the same sense as the Christians, however they may endeavour to evade the force of it now. They pretend that the coming of the Messiah was delayed for the sins of the people, and therefore they still live in expectation of him, though they know neither the time nor the place of his appearing. Strange! that he who was to come for the sins of the people should delay his coming for their sins; and more strange still! that God should falsify so many of his promises made by the mouths of his holy prophets. (Numb. xxiii. 19.) God is not a man that he should lie, neither the son of man that he should repent: hath he said, and would he not do it? or hath he spoken, and would he not make it good?

3. It may be farther observed from hence, that the Messiah was expected to work miracles. Miracles are the credentials of a Messenger from God; and it was foretold particularly of the Messiah, that he should work miracles. There was no pretending therefore to the character of the Messiah without the necessary qualifications. Had not the power of working miracles been esteemed an essential ingredient in the character of the Messiah, these impostors would never have had the assurance to pretend to it, or been so foolish as to hazard their reputation, and venture their whole success upon such an experiment; but all of them to a man drew the people after them with a pretence of working miracles, of showing signs, and wonders, and apparitions. Now the very miracles which the Messiah was to perform, Jesus hath performed, and none other besides Jesus. The prophet Isaiah foretold, that the Messiah shall cure the lame and the blind, the deaf and the dumb, and accordingly these very persons were cured in great numbers by Jesus. The prophet Isaiah foretold likewise that these miracles should be wrought in the desert, and accordingly in the desert Jesus wrought them; and, by the way, I suppose this prophecy was one principal reason why most of the false Christs and false prophets led their followers into solitudes and deserts, promising there to show signs and wonders. The prophet Isaiah foretold (xxxv. 1, &c.) The wilderness and the solitary place shall be glad for them, and the desert shall rejoice, and blossom as the rose. They shall see the glory of the Lord, and the excellency of our God. The eyes of the blind shall be opened, and the ears of the deaf shall be unstopped. The lame man shall leap as an hart, and the tongue of the dumb sing. The apostle and evangelist St. Matthew relates (xv. 29, &c.) that Jesus departed from thence (from the coasts of Tyre and Sidon) and came nigh unto the sea of Galilee, and went up into a mountain, and sat down there. And great multitudes came unto him, having with them those that were lame, blind, dumb, maimed, and many others, and cast them down at Jesus' feet, and he healed them: insomuch that the multitude wondered when they saw the dumb to speak, the maimed to be whole, the lame to walk, and the blind to see: and they glorified the God of Israel. Since then the miracles of the Messiah were wrought by Jesus alone, Jesus alone can have any just claim to be the Messiah, and from his works we may conclude, (John vi. 14.) This is of a truth that prophet that should come into the world.

4. Very observable is the difference between the conduct and success of these deceivers and of Jesus Christ; for in him we have all the marks and characters of simplicity and truth, in them of fraud and imposture. They were men of debauched lives and vicious principles: he did no sin, (1 Pet. ii. 22.) neither was guile found in his mouth. Even Pilate his judge declared (John xix. 6.) that he could find no fault in him. They lived by rapine and spoil, by plunder and murder: He (Luke ix. 56.) came not to destroy men's lives, but to save them: He fed the hungry, healed the sick, and went from place to place doing good. Their conduct breathes nothing but ambition and pride, cruelty and revenge: his behaviour was all humility and meekness, charity and love of mankind. They were actuated by worldly motives, and proposed to themselves secular ends and interests; Jesus was the farthest removed from any suspicion of that kind, and when the people would have taken him (John vi. 15.) to make him a king, he withdrew himself from them, and departed again into a mountain himself alone. Their pretensions were accommodated to the carnal expectations of the Jews, and withal were backed by force and violence, and yet could not succeed and prosper; on the contrary, the religion of Jesus was spiritual, disclaiming all force, and took the way, humanly speaking, not to prevail, and yet prevailed against all the power and opposition of the world. Now of these who were the deceivers think you, who was the true Christ? Had Jesus been an impostor, he would have lived and acted like an impostor. Had his design been any thing like theirs, like theirs it would have been discovered and brought to nought. Nothing could make his religion stand, but its coming from God. This is the reasoning of one who cannot be suspected to favour the cause of Christianity, the learned Gamaliel in the Jewish Sanhedrim, and to him that great council agreed. (Acts v. 36, &c.) Before these days rose up Theudas, boasting himself to be somebody, to whom a number of men, about four hundred, joined themselves, who was slain, and all, as many as obeyed him, were scattered and brought to nought. After this man rose up Judas of Galilee, in the days of the taxing, and drew away much people after him; he also perished, and all, even as many as obeyed him, were dispersed. And now I say unto you, refrain from these men, and let them alone; for if this counsel or this work be of men, it will come to nought; but if it be of God, ye cannot overthrow it; lest haply ye be found even to fight against God. And to him they agreed.

5. But though the truth will at last prevail over error and imposture, yet it is a melancholy proof of the weakness, and superstition, and enthusiasm of mankind, that these false Christs and false prophets should delude such numbers as they did to their destruction. The false Messiahs had for a time many more disciples and followers than the true Messiah. The Christians were once (Luke xii. 32.) a little flock. The number of the names together (Acts i. 15.)

were about an hundred and twenty. Whereas these impostors attracted and drew away great multitudes, one of them ¹ six thousand, another ² even thirty thousand. With a pretence of divine inspiration, they taught the people, as ³ Josephus expresseth it, δαμονῶν to grow enthusiastically mad, as if they were possessed and actuated by some spirit or dæmon; and indeed no plague or epidemical distemper is more catching and contagious than enthusiasm. It passeth from man to man like wild-fire. The imagination is soon heated, and there is rarely judgment enough to cool it again. The very elect, even good Christians themselves, if they attend to enthusiasts, will be in danger of taking the infection, and be continually liable to be (Eph. iv. 14.) tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine, if they have not, as all have not, a sufficient ballast of discretion to keep them steady. In reality, enthusiasts know as little of the revelation given us by Christ, as of the reason given us by God. They are blind leaders of the blind. Wherefore if they shall say unto you, Behold, he is in the desert, behold, his power is experienced in field-preaching, go not forth; behold, he is in the secret chambers, behold, his presence is conspicuous in the tabernacles or conventicles, believe it not. He is best sought in his word and in his works, and he will certainly be found by those, and those alone, who love him, not with fanaticism and enthusiasm, but in truth and soberness, so as to keep his commandments, which is the only infallible proof and legitimate issue of love. For as our Saviour himself saith, (John xiv. 23.) If a man love me, he will keep my words; and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him.

6. Once more it is to be observed, that we must not credit every one who cometh to us with a pretence of working miracles; for the false Christs and false prophets pretended to show great signs and wonders, and yet notwithstanding all their miraculous pretensions, our blessed Lord cautions his disciples not to believe or follow them. But then the question will be naturally asked, if we must not believe those who work miracles, whom must we believe? how shall we know whether a person doth or doth not act by commission from heaven? how shall we distinguish whether the doctrine is of God or of men? Indeed, if miracles were not possible to be wrought at all, as some have pretended, or could be wrought only by God, or those who are commissioned by him, as others have argued, the reply would be obvious and easy; but that miracles are possible to be wrought is a truth agreeable to reason, and that they may be wrought by evil spirits is a supposition agreeable to Scripture, and therefore the best answer is, that reason must judge in this case as in every other, and determine of the miracles by the doctrines which they are alleged to confirm. If a doctrine is evil, no miracle can be wrought by a divine power in its behalf, for God can never set his hand and seal to a lie. If a doctrine is good, then we may be certain that the miracles vouched for it were not wrought by the power of evil spirits, for at that rate, according to our Saviour's argument, (Luke xi. 18.) Satan would be divided against himself, and his kingdom could not stand. Good spirits can never confirm and establish what is evil, neither can evil spirits be supposed to promote what is good. Supposing that the miracles pretended in favour of Paganism were all real miracles, yet as they lead men to a corrupt religion and idolatrous worship, no reverence, no regard is to be paid to them, according to the command of Moses, (Deut. xiii. 1, &c.) If there arise among you a prophet, or a dreamer of dreams, and giveth thee a sign or a wonder, and the sign or the wonder come to pass, whereof he spake unto thee, saying, Let us go after other gods, which thou hast not known, and let us serve them: Thou shalt not hearken unto the words of that prophet, or that dreamer of dreams, for the Lord your God proveth you, to know whether you love the Lord your God with all your heart, and with all your soul. In like manner, we must not admit any thing contrary to the doctrines of Christ and his apostles, whatever miracles are boasted to recommend and authorize it. For the doctrines of the Christian religion are not only perfectly agreeable to reason, but moreover God hath confirmed it, amply confirmed it, by miracles, and hath enjoined us strictly to adhere to it, and God can never be supposed to work miracles to confirm contradictions; and therefore allowing, what we cannot reasonably allow, that the miracles of Apollonius and other impostors were true and well attested, yet the foundation of Christ standeth firm, and cannot at all be shaken by them. Should any man, or number of men, with ever so great and confident a pretence to infallibility, assert that it is our duty implicitly to believe and obey the church; when Christ commands us (Matt. xxiii. 9.) to call no man father upon earth, for one is our Father which is in heaven—that the service of God is to be performed in an unknown tongue; when St. Paul, in his first epistle to the Corinthians, hath written a whole chapter (xiv.) expressly against it—that the sacrament of the Lord's Supper is to be administered only in one kind: when Christ instituted it, (Matt. xxvi.) and his apostles ordered it (1 Cor. xi.) to be celebrated in both—that the propitiatory sacrifice of Christ is to be repeated in the mass; when the divine author of the epistle to the Hebrews teaches us, (x. 10.) that the body of Jesus Christ was offered once for all, and (ver. 14.) that by one offering he hath perfected for ever them that are sanctified—that men may arrive at such heights of virtue as to perform works of merit and supererogation; when our Saviour orders us, (Luke xvii. 10.) after we have done all those things which are commanded us, to say, we are unprofitable servants, we have done but that which was our duty to do—that attrition and confession, together with the absolution of the priest, will put a dying sinner into a state of grace and salvation; when the Scripture again and again declares (Heb. xii. 14.) that without holiness no man shall see the Lord, and (1 Cor. vi. 9.) the unrighteous shall not inherit the kingdom of God—that the souls of men, even of good men, immediately after death pass into purgatory; when St. John is commanded from heaven to write, (Rev. xiv. 13.) Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord, that they may rest from their labours, and their works do follow them—that we must worship images and the relics of the saints; when our Saviour teaches us, (Matt. iv. 10.) that we must worship the Lord God, and him only we must serve—that we must invoke and adore saints and angels; when the apostle chargeth us (Col. ii. 18.) to let no man beguile us of our reward in a voluntary humility and worshipping of angels—that we must pray to the Virgin Mary and all saints to intercede for us; when St. Paul affirms, (1 Tim. ii. 5.) that as there is only one God, so there is only one mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus—that it is lawful to fill the world with rebellions and treasons, with persecutions and massacres, for the sake of religion and the church; when St. James assures us, (i. 20.) that the wrath of man worketh not the righteousness of God; and when Christ maketh universal love and charity the distinguishing mark and badge of his disciples, (John xiii. 35.) By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another—I say should any man assert these things, so directly contrary to reason and to the word of God, and vouch ever so many miracles in confirmation of them, yet we should make no scruple to reject and renounce them all. Nay, we are obliged to denounce anathema against the teacher of such doctrines, though he were an apostle, though he were an angel from heaven, and for this we have the warrant and authority of St. Paul; and to show that he laid peculiar stress upon it, he repeats it twice with great vehemence, (Gal. i. 8, 9.) Though we or an angel from heaven preach any other Gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed. As we said before, so say I now again, If any one preach any other gospel unto you than that ye have received, let him be accursed. Indeed, the miracles alleged in support of these doctrines are such ridiculous, incredible things, that a man must have faith, I do not say to remove mountains, but to swallow mountains, who can receive for truth the legends of the church of Rome. But admitting that any of the Romish miracles were undeniable matters of fact, and were attested by the best and most authentic records of time, yet I know not what the bishop of Rome would gain by it, but a better title to be thought Antichrist. For we know that the coming of Antichrist, as St. Paul declares, (2 Thess. ii. 9, 10.) is after the working of Satan with all power and signs, and lying wonders, and with all deceivableness of unrighteousness: and he doeth great wonders in the sight of men, according to the prophecy of St. John, (Rev. xiii. 13, 14.) and deceiveth them that dwell on the earth by the means of those miracles which he hath power to do. Nor indeed is any thing more congruous and reasonable, than that God (2 Thess. ii. 10, 11.) should send men strong delusion, that they should believe a lie, because they received not the love of the truth, that they might be saved.

¹ Joseph. de Bell. Jud. Lib. vi. cap. v. sect. ii. καὶ σύμμικτος ὄχλος πλείστος εἰς ἑξακισχίλιους. et plurima multitudo promiscua, ad sex hominum millia. [And a very great mixed multitude, amounting to six thousand.] P. 1281. Edit. Hudson.

² Lib. ii. cap. xiii. sect. v. περὶ τρισμυρίους μὲν ἀθροίζει τῶν ἡπατημένων. usque ad triginta hominum millia, quos præstigiis suis deceperat, congregavit. [He draws together thirty thousand of those who were deceived.] P. 1075, 6.

³ προσχήματι θειασμοῦ, δαμονῶν τὸ πλῆθος ἀνέπειθον. specie divini afflatus,—vulgo ut insanirent persuadebant. [Under pretence of divine inspiration,—they persuaded the people to grow mad.] Ibid. sect. iv. p. 1075.

But to return from this digression, though I hope neither an improper nor unedifying digression, to our main subject.

XX.

THE SAME SUBJECT CONTINUED.

PART III.

WE are now come to the last act of this dismal tragedy, the destruction of Jerusalem and the final dissolution of the Jewish polity in church and state, which our Saviour for several reasons might not think fit to declare nakedly and plainly, and therefore chooseth to clothe his discourse in figurative language, verse 29, and so on. "He might possibly do it," as ¹Dr. Jortin conceives, "to perplex the unbelieving persecuting Jews, if his discourses should ever fall into their hands, that they might not learn to avoid the impending evil." Immediately after the tribulation of those days shall the sun be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars shall fall from heaven, and the powers of the heavens shall be shaken. Commentators generally understand this and what follows of the end of the world and of Christ's coming to judgment; but the words immediately after the tribulation of those days show evidently that he is not speaking of any distant event, but of something immediately consequent upon the tribulation before mentioned, and that must be the destruction of Jerusalem. It is true, his figures are very strong, but no stronger than are used by the ancient prophets upon similar occasions. The prophet Isaiah speaking in the same manner of Babylon, (xiii. 9, 10.) Behold, the day of the Lord cometh, cruel both with wrath and fierce anger, to lay the land desolate, and he shall destroy the sinners thereof out of it. For the stars of heaven and the constellations thereof shall not give their light; the sun shall be darkened in his going forth, and the moon shall not cause her light to shine. The prophet Ezekiel speaking in the same manner of Egypt, (xxxii. 7, 8.) And when I shall put thee out, I will cover the heaven, and make the stars thereof dark; I will cover the sun with a cloud, and the moon shall not give her light. And the bright lights of heaven will I make dark over thee, and set darkness upon thy land, saith the Lord God. The prophet Daniel speaketh in the same manner of the slaughter of the Jews by the little horn, whether by the little horn be understood Antiochus Epiphanes or the power of the Romans; (viii. 10.) And it waxed great even to the host of heaven; and it cast down some of the host, and of the stars to the ground, and stamped upon them. And the prophet Joel of this very destruction of Jerusalem, (ii. 30, 31.) And I will show wonders in the heavens and in the earth, blood and fire and pillars of smoke. The sun shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood, before the great and the terrible day of the Lord come. Thus it is that in the prophetic language great commotions and revolutions upon earth are often represented by commotions and changes in the heavens.

¹ Dr. Jortin's Remarks on Ecclesiast. History, Vol. I. p. 75.

Our Saviour proceedeth in the same figurative style, (ver. 30.) And then shall appear the sign of the Son of man in heaven; and then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven, with power and great glory. The plain meaning of it is, that the destruction of Jerusalem will be such a remarkable instance of Divine vengeance, such a signal manifestation of Christ's power and glory, that all the Jewish tribes shall mourn, and many will be led from thence to acknowledge Christ and the Christian religion. In the ancient prophets, God is frequently described as coming in the clouds, upon any remarkable interposition and manifestation of his power, and the same description is here applied to Christ. The destruction of Jerusalem will be as ample a manifestation of Christ's power and glory, as if he was himself to come visibly in the clouds of heaven.

The same sort of metaphor is carried on in the next verse, (ver. 31.) And he shall send his angels with the great sound of a trumpet, and they shall gather together his elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other. This is all in the style and phraseology of the prophets, and, stript of its figures, meaneth only that, after the destruction of Jerusalem, Christ by his angels or ministers will gather to himself a glorious church out of all the nations under heaven. The Jews shall be thrust out, as he expresseth himself in another place, (Luke xiii. 28, 29.) and they shall come from the east, and from the west, and from the north, and from the south, and shall sit down in the kingdom of God. No one ever so little versed in history needeth to be told, that the Christian religion spread and prevailed mightily after this period, and hardly any one thing contributed more to this success of the Gospel than the destruction of Jerusalem, falling out in the very manner, and with the very circumstances, so particularly foretold by our blessed Saviour.

What Dr. Warburton hath ¹ written upon the same subject will much illustrate and enforce the foregoing exposition. "The prophecy of Jesus, concerning the approaching destruction of Jerusalem by Titus, is conceived in such high and swelling terms, that not only the modern interpreters, but the ancient likewise, have supposed that our Lord interweaves into it a direct prediction of his second coming to judgment. Hence arose a current opinion in those times, that the consummation of all things was at hand, which hath afforded a handle to an infidel objection in these, insinuating that Jesus, in order to keep his followers attached to his service, and patient under sufferings, flattered them with the near approach of those rewards which completed all their views and expectations. To which, the defenders of religion have opposed this answer, That the distinction of short and long, in the duration of time, is lost in eternity, and with the Almighty, a thousand years are but as yesterday, &c.

"But the principle both go upon is false; and if what hath been said be duly weighed, it will appear that this prophecy doth not respect Christ's second coming to judgment but his first; in the abolition of the Jewish policy, and the establishment of the Christian: that kingdom of Christ which commenced on the total ceasing of the theocracy. For as God's reign over the Jews entirely ended with the abolition of the temple service, so the reign of Christ, in spirit and in truth, had then its first beginning.

"This was the true establishment of Christianity, not that effected by the donations or conversion of Constantine. Till the Jewish law was abolished, over which the Father presided as king, the reign of the Son could not take place, because the sovereignty of Christ over mankind was that very sovereignty of God over the Jews, transferred and more largely extended.

"This therefore being one of the most important æras in the economy of grace, and the most awful revolution in all God's religious dispensations; we see the elegance and propriety of the terms in question, to denote so great an event, together with the destruction of Jerusalem, by which it was effected; for in the old prophetic language the change and fall of principalities and powers, whether spiritual or civil, are signified by the shaking heaven and earth, the darkening the sun and moon, and the falling of the stars; as the rise and establishment of new ones are by processions in the clouds of heaven, by the sound of trumpets, and the assembling together of hosts and congregations."

This language, as he observes ² in another place, was borrowed from the ancient hieroglyphics. "For, as in the hieroglyphic writing, the sun, moon, and stars were used to represent states and empires, kings, queens, and nobility; their eclipse and extinction, temporary disasters, or entire overthrow, &c.; so, in like manner, the holy prophets call kings and empires by the names of the heavenly luminaries; their misfortunes and overthrow are represented by eclipses and extinction; stars falling from the firmament are employed to denote the destruction of the nobility, &c. In a word, the prophetic style seems to be a speaking hieroglyphic. These observations will not only assist us in the study of the Old and New Testament, but likewise vindicate their character from the illiterate cavils of modern libertines, who have foolishly mistaken that for the peculiar workmanship of the prophet's heated imagination, which was the sober established language of their times, and which God and his Son condescended to employ as the properest conveyance of the high mysterious ways of providence in the revelation of themselves to mankind."

¹ Warburton's Julian, Book i. chap. i. p. 21, &c. 2d edit.

² Divine Legation, Vol. II. Book iv. sect. iv.

To St. Matthew's account St. Luke addeth, (xxi. 24.) And they shall fall by the edge of the sword, and shall be led away captive into all nations; and Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled. The number of those who fell by the edge of the sword was indeed very great. Of those who perished during the whole siege, there were, as Josephus¹ saith, eleven hundred thousand. Many were also slain² at other times and in other places. By the command of Florus, who was the first author of the war, there were slain at Jerusalem³ three thousand and six hundred; by the inhabitants of Cæsarea⁴ above twenty thousand; at Scythopolis⁵ above thirteen thousand; at Ascalon⁶ two thousand five hundred, and at Ptolemais two thousand; at Alexandria, under Tiberius Alexander the president,⁷ fifty thousand; at Joppa, when it was taken by Cestius Gallus,⁸ eight thousand four hundred; in a mountain called Asamon, near Sephoris,⁹ above two thousand; at Damascus¹⁰ ten thousand; in a battle with the Romans at Ascalon¹¹ ten thousand; in an ambuscade near the same place¹² eight thousand; at Japha¹³ fifteen thousand: Of the Samaritans upon Mount Garizin¹⁴ eleven thousand and six hundred; at Jotapa¹⁵ forty thousand; at Joppa, when taken by Vespasian,¹⁶ four thousand two hundred; at Tarichea¹⁷ six thousand five hundred, and after the city was taken twelve hundred; at

¹ τῶν δ' ἀπολουμένων κατὰ πᾶσαν τὴν πολιορκίαν, μυριάδες ἑκατὸν καὶ δέκα, totius autem obsidionis tempore undecies centena hominum millia perierunt. ["Of them that perished during the whole siege, there were eleven hundred thousand."] De Bell. Jud. Lib. vi. cap. ix. sect. iii. p. 1291. Edit. Hudson.

² Just. Lipsius de Constantia, Lib. ii. cap. xxi. Usher's Annals in the conclusion. Basnage's Hist. of the Jews, B. i. chap. viii. sect. xix.

³ Joseph. ibid. Lib. ii. cap. xiv. sect. ix.

⁴ Ibid. cap. xviii. sect. i.

⁵ Ibid. sect. v.

⁶ Ibid. sect. x.

⁷ Ibid. cap. xx. sect. ii.

⁸ Ibid. sect. iii.

⁹ Ibid. sect. xxxii.

¹⁰ Ibid. cap. viii. sect. iii.

⁵ Ibid. sect. iii.

⁷ Ibid. sect. viii.

⁹ Ibid. sect. xi.

¹¹ Lib. iii. cap. ii. sect. ii.

¹³ Ibid. cap. vii. sect. xxxi.

¹⁵ Ibid. sect. xxxvi.

¹⁷ Ibid. cap. ix. sect. ix. x.

Gamala ¹ four thousand slain, besides five thousand who threw themselves down a precipice; of those who fled with John from Gischala ² six thousand; of the Gadarenes ³ fifteen thousand slain, besides an infinite number drowned; in the villages of Idumea ⁴ above ten thousand slain; at Gerasa ⁵ a thousand; at Machærus ⁶ seventeen hundred; in the wood of Jarden ⁷ three thousand; in the castle of Masada ⁸ nine hundred and sixty; in Cyrene, by Catullus the governor, ⁹ three thousand. Besides these, many of every age, sex, and condition were slain in this war who are not reckoned, but of these who are reckoned, the number amounts to above one million three hundred fifty seven thousand six hundred and sixty, which would appear almost incredible, if their own historian had not so particularly enumerated them.

But besides the Jews who fell by the edge of the sword, others were also to be led away captive into all nations; and, considering the numbers of the slain, the number of the captives too was very great. There were taken particularly at Japha ¹⁰ two thousand one hundred and thirty; at Jotapa ¹¹ one thousand two hundred; at Tarichea ¹² six thousand chosen young men were sent to Nero, the rest sold to the number of thirty thousand and four hundred, besides those who were given to Agrippa; of the Gadarenes ¹³ two thousand two hundred; in Idumea ¹⁴ above a thousand. Many besides these were taken at Jerusalem, so that, as Josephus himself ¹⁵ informs us, the number of the captives taken in the whole war amounted to ninety-seven thousand. The tall and handsome young men Titus reserved for his triumph; of the rest, those above seventeen years of age were sent to the works in Egypt, but most were distributed through

¹ Joseph. Lib. iv. cap. i. sect. x.

² Ibid. cap. ii. sect. v.

³ Ibid. cap. vii. sect. v.

⁴ Ibid. cap. viii. sect. i.

⁵ Ibid. cap. ix. sect. i.

⁶ Lib. vii. cap. vi. sect. iv.

⁷ Ibid. sect. v.

⁸ Ibid. cap. ix. sect. i.

⁹ Ibid. cap. xi. sect. ii.

¹⁰ Lib. iii. cap. vii. sect. xxxi.

¹¹ Ibid. sect. xxxvi.

¹² Ibid. cap. ix. sect. x.

¹³ Lib. iv. cap. vii. sect. v.

¹⁴ Ibid. cap. viii. sect. i.

¹⁵ Τῶν δὲ νέων τοὺς ὑψηλοτάτους καὶ καλοὺς ἐπιλέξας ἐτήρει τῷ θριάμβῳ· τοῦ δὲ λοιποῦ πλήθους τοὺς ὑπὲρ ἑπτακαίδεκα ἔτη δῆσας ἐπεμψεν εἰς τὰ κατ' Αἴγυπτον ἔργα, πλείστους δ' εἰς τὰς ἐπαρχίας διεδώρησατο Τίτος, φθαρησομένους ἐν τοῖς θεάτροις σιδήρῳ καὶ θηρίοις· οἱ δ' ἐντὸς ἑπτακαίδεκα ἐτῶν ἐπράθησαν.—Τῶν μὲν οὖν αἰχμαλώτων πάντων, ὅσα καθ' ὅλον ἐλήφθη τὸν πόλεμον, ἀριθμὸς ἑννέα μυριάδες καὶ ἑπτακισχίλιοι συνήχθη. juvenes autem lectos, qui proceritate et formâ cæteris præstarent, triumpho servabat. Ex reliquâ autem multitudine, annis xvii. majores vinctos ad metalla exercenda, in Ægyptum misit; plurimos etiam per provincias distribuit Titus, in theatris ferro et bestiis consumendos. Quicunque vero infra xvii. annum ætatis erant, sub coronâ venditi sunt.—Et captivorum quidem omnium, qui totius belli tempore capti sunt, numerus erat ad nonaginta septem millia. [“ Having selected the tallest and finest young men, he reserved them for his triumph. Of the remaining multitude he put in chains those that were above seventeen years of age, and sent them to the works in Egypt. And a very great number Titus distributed in the provinces, to be killed in the theatres by the sword, and by wild beasts. Such as were under seventeen years of age, were sold. The number of all the captives taken, during the whole war, amounted to ninety-seven thousand.”] Lib. vi. cap. ix. sect. ii. et iii. p. 1291. Pro ἑννέα ἑννεήκοντα scripsisse Josephum censet Villalpandus, Tom. III. p. 123. [Villalpandus thinks that Josephus wrote ἑννεήκοντα, ninety, instead of ἑννέα, nine.]

the Roman provinces, to be destroyed in their theatres by the sword or by the wild beasts; those under seventeen were sold for slaves. Of these captives many underwent hard fate. Eleven thousand of them ¹perished for want. Titus exhibited all sorts of shows and spectacles at Cæsarea, and ²many of the captives were there destroyed, some being exposed to the wild beasts, and others compelled to fight in troops against one another. At Cæsarea too, in honour of his brother's birth-day, ³two thousand five-hundred Jews were slain; and a great number likewise at Berytus, in honour of his father's. The like ⁴was done in other cities of Syria. Those whom he reserved for his triumph ⁵were Simon and John, the generals of the captives, and seven hundred others of remarkable stature and beauty. Thus were the Jews miserably tormented and distributed over the Roman provinces; and are they not still distressed and dispersed over all the nations of the earth?

As the Jews were to be led away captive into all nations, so Jerusalem was to be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled. And accordingly Jerusalem has never since been in the possession of the Jews, but hath constantly been in subjection to some other nation, as first to the Romans, and afterwards to the Saracens, and then to the Franks, and then to the Mamalucs, and now to the Turks.

Titus, as it was related before, ⁶commanded all the city as well as the temple to be destroyed: only three towers were left standing for monuments to posterity of the strength of the city, and so much of the wall as encompassed the city on the west, for barracks for the soldiers who were left there in garrison. All the rest of the city was so totally demolished, that there was no likelihood of its ever being inhabited again. The soldiers who were left there ⁷were the tenth legion, with some troops of horse and companies of foot, ⁸under the command of Terentius Rufus. When Titus ⁹came again to Jerusalem, in his way from Syria to Egypt, and beheld the sad devastation of the city, and called to mind its former splendour and beauty, he could not help lamenting over it, and cursing the authors of the rebellion, who had compelled him to the cruel necessity of destroying so fine a city. Vespasian ¹⁰ordered all the lands of the Jews to be sold for his own use, and all the Jews, wheresoever they dwelt, to pay each man every year the same sum to the

¹ Joseph. Lib. vi. cap. ix. sect. ii.

² Lib. vii. cap. ii. sect. i.

³ Ibid. cap. iii. sect. i.

⁴ Ibid. cap. v. sect. i.

⁵ Ibid. sect. iii.

⁶ Joseph. de Bell. Jud. Lib. vii. cap. i. sect. i. Edit. Hudson.

⁷ Ibid. sect. ii.

⁸ Ibid. cap. ii.

⁹ Ibid. cap. v. sect. ii.

¹⁰ Ibid. cap. vi. sect. vi.

capitol of Rome that they had before paid to the temple at Jerusalem. The desolation was so complete, that Eleazar¹ said to his countrymen, "What is become of our city, which was believed to be inhabited by God? It is rooted up from the very foundations, and the only monument of it that is left, is the camp of those who destroyed it still pitched upon its remains. Some unhappy old men sit over the ashes of the temple, and a few women reserved by the enemy for the basest of injuries."

The first who² rebuilt Jerusalem, though not all exactly on the same spot, was the Roman emperor Ælius Adrian, and he called it after his own name Ælia, and placed in it a Roman colony, and dedicated a temple to Jupiter Capitolinus in the room of the temple of the true God. While he was visiting the eastern parts of the empire, he came to Jerusalem, as³ Epiphanius informs us, forty-seven years after its destruction by Titus, and found the city all levelled with the ground, and the temple of God trodden under foot, except a few houses; and he then formed the resolution of rebuilding it, but his design was not put into execution till towards the latter end of his reign. The Jews, naturally of a seditious spirit, were inflamed⁴ upon this occasion into open rebellion, to recover their native city and country out of the hands of heathen violators and oppressors, and they were headed by a man called⁵ Barchobad, a vile robber and murderer, whose name signifying the son of a star, he confidently pretended that he was the person prophesied of by Balaam in those words, (Numb. xxiv. 17.) There shall come a star out of Jacob, and a sceptre shall rise out of Israel. They were⁶ successful in their first enterprises, through the neglect of the Romans, and it is probable, as the rebellion was raised for this purpose, that they made themselves masters of Ælia, or the new Jerusalem, and massacred or chased from thence the heathen inhabitants, and the Romans besieged and took it again; for we read in several authors, in⁷ Eusebius, in⁸ Jerome, in⁹ Chrysostom,

¹ τοῦ γέγονεν ἡμῖν ἢ τὸν Θεὸν ἔχειν οἰκιστὴν πεπιστευμένη; πρόρρητος ἐκ βάθρων ἀνῆρπασται, καὶ μόνον αὐτῆς μνημεῖον ὑπολείπεται, τὸ τῶν ἀνγρηκότων αὐτὴν στρατόπεδον, ἔτι τοῖς λειψάνοις ἐποικοῦν, πρέσβυται δὲ δύστηνοι τῇ σποδῇ τοῦ τεμένους παρακάθηνται, καὶ γυναῖκες ὀλίγαι πρὸς ὕβριν αἰσχίστην ὑπὸ τῶν πολεμίων τετηρημέναι. quid de eâ factum est, quam Deum habitasse credidimus? Radicitus ex fundamentis evulsa est, et id solum ejus monumentum relictum, castra scilicet illorum i quibus excisa est jam reliquiis ejus imposita. Senes vero infelices templi cineribus assident, et paucæ mulieres ad turpissimam pudoris injuriam ab hostibus reservatæ. [Translated in the text.] Ibid. cap. viii. sect. vii. p. 1322.

² Dionis Cass. Hist. Lib. lxxix. p. 793. Edit. Leunclav. Hanov. 1606.

³ Epiphan. de Mens. et Pond. cap. xiv. p. 170. Vol. II. Edit. Petavii.

⁴ Dionis Hist. ibid.

⁵ Euseb. Eccles. Hist. Lib. iv. cap. vi. Vide etiam Scaligeri Animadvers. in Eusebii Chron. p. 216.

⁶ Dionis Hist. ibid.

⁷ Euseb. Demons. Evang. Lib. ii. cap. xxxviii. p. 71. Lib. vi. cap. xviii. p. 286. Edit. Paris. 1628.

⁸ Hieron. in Jerem. xxxi. col. 679. in Ezek. v. col. 725. in Dan. ix. col. 1117. in Joel i. col. 1340. Vol. III. Edit. Benedict.

⁹ Orat. v. advers. Judæos, Vol. I. p. 645. Edit. Benedict.

and in ¹ Appian, who lived at that time, that Jerusalem was again besieged by the Romans under Adrian, and was entirely burnt and consumed. However that be, the Jews were at length subdued with most terrible slaughter; ² fifty of their strongest castles, and nine hundred and eighty-five of their best towns were sacked and demolished; five hundred and eighty thousand men fell by the sword in battle, besides an infinite multitude who perished by famine, and sickness, and fire, so that Judea was almost all desolated. The Jewish ³ writers themselves reckon that doubly more Jews were slain in this war than came out of Egypt, and that their sufferings under Nebuchadnezzar and Titus were not so great as what they endured under the emperor Adrian. Of the Jews who survived this second ruin of their nation, ⁴ an incredible number of every age and sect were sold like horses, and dispersed over the face of the earth. The emperor completed his design, rebuilt the city, re-established the colony, ordered the ⁵ statue of a hog in marble to be set up over the gate that opened towards Bethlehem, and ⁶ published an edict strictly forbidding any Jew upon pain of death to enter the city, or so much as to look upon it at a distance.

In this state Jerusalem continued, being better known by the name of Ælia, till the reign of the first Christian emperor, Constantine the Great. The name of Jerusalem had grown into such disuse, and was so little remembered or known, especially among the heathens, that when ⁷ one of the martyrs of Palestine, who suffered in the persecution under Maximin, was examined of what country he was, and answered of Jerusalem, neither the governor of the province, nor any of his assistants could comprehend what city it was, or where situated. But in Constantine's time it began to resume its ancient name, and this emperor enlarged and beautified it with so many stately edifices and churches, that ⁸ Eusebius said, more like a courtier than a bishop, that this perhaps was the new

¹ Appian de Bell. Syr. p. 119. Edit. Steph. p. 191. Edit. Tollii.

² Dionis Hist. ibid. p. 794.

³ Author libri Juchasin scribit Hadrianum duplo plures Judæos in hoc bello trucidasse quam egressi sint ex Ægypto. Alius libro qui inscribitur רומי מלכי, quem Drusius laudat in Præteritis, Non sic afflixisse eos Nebuchadnezzarem neque Titum, sicut Hadrianus imperator. [The author of the book Juchazin writes, that Adrian put to death in this war twice as many Jews as came up out of Egypt. Another, in a book entitled Malche-Rome, commended by Drusius in his Annals of the New Testament, saith, that neither Nebuchadnezzar nor Titus afflicted them so much as the emperor Adrian.] Mede's Works, B. iii. p. 443.

⁴ Hieron. in Jerem. xxxi. col. 679. in Zach. xi. col. 1774. Vol. III. Edit. Benedict. Chron. Alex. p. 596.

⁵ Euseb. et Hieron. Chron. Ann. 137.

⁶ Euseb. Hist. Lib. iv. cap. vi. Hieron. in Isa. vi. col. 65. Vol. III. Edit. Benedict. Justin. Mart. Apol. Prim. p. 84. Edit. Paris. p. 71. Edit. Thirlbii.

⁷ Euseb. de Mart. Palæst. cap. xi.

⁸ τὰχα που ταύτην οὖσαν τὴν διὰ προφητικῶν θεοπισμμάτων κεκηρυγμένην καινὴν καὶ νέαν Ἱερουσαλὴμ. atque hæc forsitan fuerit recens illa ac nova Hierusalem, prophetarum vaticiniis prædicata. [Perhaps this is the new Jerusalem foretold by the prophets.] Euseb. de Vit. Const. Lib. iii. cap. xxxiii.

Jerusalem which was foretold by the prophets. The Jews, who hated and abhorred the Christian religion as much or more than the heathen, ¹ assembled again, as we learn from St. Chrysostom, to recover their city, and to rebuild their temple, but the emperor with his soldiers repressed their vain attempt, and having caused their ears to be cut off, and their bodies to be marked for rebels, he dispersed them over all the provinces of his empire as so many fugitives and slaves.

The laws of Constantine, and of his son and successor Constantius, were likewise in other respects very severe against the Jews; but Julian, called the Apostate, the nephew of Constantine, and successor of Constantius, was more favourably inclined towards them; not that he really liked the Jews, but disliked the Christians, and out of prejudice and hatred to the Christian religion, resolved to re-establish the Jewish worship and ceremonies. Our Saviour had said that Jerusalem should be trodden down of the Gentiles, and he would defeat the prophecy and restore the Jews. For this purpose, he ² wrote kindly to the whole body or community of the Jews, expressing his concern for their former ill treatment, and assuring them of his protection from future oppression, and concluding with a promise, that ³ if he was successful in the Persian war, he would rebuild the holy city Jerusalem, restore them to their habitations, live with them there, and join with them in worshipping the great God of the universe. His zeal even exceeded his promise; for before he set out from Antioch on his Persian expedition, he proposed to begin with ⁴ rebuilding the temple of

¹ Chrysostom. Orat. v. advers. Jud. sect. xi. p. 645. Orat. vi. sect. ii. p. 651. Vol. I. Edit. Benedict.

² Juliani Epist. xxv. 'Ιουδαίων τῷ κοινῷ. [To the community of the Jews.] P. 396. Edit. Spanhemii.

³ — ἵνα καὶ γὼ τὸν τῶν Περσῶν πόλεμον διορθωσάμενος, τὴν ἐκ πολλῶν ἐτῶν ἐπιθυμουμένην παρ' ὑμῖν ἰδεῖν οἰκουμένην πόλιν ἁγίαν Ἱερουσαλὴμ, ἐμοῖς καμάτοις ἀνοικοδομήσας οἰκήσω, καὶ ἐν αὐτῇ δοῶμαι δῶσω μεθ' ὑμῶν τῷ κρείττονι.—quo et ipse Persico bello ex animi sententiâ gesto, sanctam urbem Hierusalem, quam multos jam annos habitatam videre desideratis, meis laboribus refectionem incolam, et una vobiscum in eâ optimo Deo gratias agam. [In order that when I shall have finished the Persian war, having rebuilt the holy city Jerusalem, which for so many years you have earnestly desired to see inhabited again, I may dwell in it, and give glory there together with you to the great God.] Ibid. p. 398.

⁴ Ambitiosum quondam apud Hierosolimam templum, quod post multa et interneciva certamina obsidente Vespasiano posteaque Tito ægrè est expugnatum, instaurare sump-tibus cogitabat immodicis: negotiumque maturandum Alypius dederat Antiochensi, qui olim Britannias curaverat pro præfectis. Cum itaque rei idem fortiter instaret Alypius, juvaretque provinciæ rector, metuendi globi flammaram prope fundamenta crebris assultibus erumpentes, fecere locum exustis aliquoties operantibus inaccessum: hocque modo elemento destinatus repellente, cessavit inceptum. [He thought of rebuilding, at a vast expense, the once magnificent temple of Jerusalem, which with difficulty was destroyed, after many ruinous battles, in a siege under Vespasian, and afterwards under Titus. He gave the charge of preparing for, and hastening on this work, to Alypius of Antioch, who formerly had been lieutenant in Britain. When Alypius, assisted by the governor of the province, was vigorously engaged in this business, horrible balls of fire bursting out from near the foundation with frequent attacks, rendered the place inaccessible to the workmen, who were burnt several times. In this manner the element of fire obstinately opposing Jerusalem with the greatest magnificence. He assigned immense sums for the building. He gave it in charge to Alypius of Antioch, who had formerly been lieutenant in Britain, to superintend and hasten the work. Alypius set about it vigorously. The governor of the province assisted him in it. But horrible balls of fire bursting forth near the foundations, with frequent assaults, rendered the place inaccessible to the workmen, who were burnt several times, and in this manner the fiery element obstinately repelling them, the enterprise was laid aside. What a signal providence was it, that this no more than the former attempts should succeed and prosper, and that rather than the prophecies should be defeated, a prodigy was wrought, even by the testimony of a faithful heathen historian? The interposition certainly was as providential as the attempt was impious, and the account here given is nothing more than what Julian himself and his own historian have testified. There are, indeed, many witnesses to the truth of the fact, whom an ¹ able critic hath well drawn together, and ranged in this order. "Am-mianus Marcellinus an heathen, Zemus David a Jew, who confessed that Julian was divinitus impeditus, hindered by God in this attempt; Nazianzen and Chrysostom among the Greeks, St. Ambrose and Ruffinus among the Latins, who flourished at the very time when this was done; Theodoret and Sozomen orthodox historians, Philostorgius an Arian, Socrates a favourer of the Novatians, who writ the story within the space of fifty years after the thing was done, and whilst the eye-witnesses of the fact were yet surviving." But the public hath lately been obliged with the best and fullest account of this whole transaction in Dr. Warburton's Julian, where the evidence for the miracle is set in the strongest light, and all objections are clearly refuted, to the triumph of faith and the confusion of infidelity.

Julian was the last of the heathen emperors. His successor Jovian made it the business of his short reign to undo, as much as was possible, all that Julian had done; and the succeeding emperors were generally for repressing Judaism in the same proportion as they were zealous for promoting Christianity. Adrian's edict ² was revived, which prohibited all Jews from entering into Jerusalem, or coming near the city, and guards were posted to enforce the execution of it. This was a very lucrative station to the soldiers, for the Jews ³ used to give money for permission to come and see the ruins of their city and temple, and to weep over them, especially on the day whereon Jerusalem had been taken and them, the undertaking was laid aside.] Amm. Marcell. Lib. xxiii. cap. i. p. 350. Edit. Valesii, 1681.

¹ Whitby's general Preface, p. xxviii.

² Augustini Serm. v. sect. v. Tom. V. p. 23. Edit. Benedict. Antwerp. Sulpicii Severi Hist. Lib. ii. p. 99. Edit. Elzevir, 1656.

³ Hieron. in Sophon. i. col. 1655. Vol. III. Edit. Benedict.

destroyed by the Romans. It doth not appear that the Jews had ever the liberty of approaching the city, unless by stealth or by purchase, as long as it continued in subjection to the Greek emperors, till this, as well as the neighbouring cities and countries, fell under the dominion of the Saracens. Only in the former part of the seventh century after Christ, and in the beginning of the reign of the emperor Heraclius, it was ¹ taken and plundered by Chosroes king of Persia, and the greatest cruelties were exercised on the inhabitants. Ninety thousand Christians are said to have been sold and sacrificed to the malice and revenge of the Jews. But Heraclius soon repelled and routed the Persians, rescued Jerusalem out of their hands, and banished all Jews, forbidding them, under the severest penalties, to come within three miles of the city.

Jerusalem was hardly recovered from the depredations of the Persians, before it was exposed to a worse evil by the conquering arms of the Saracens. It was in the beginning of the same seventh century, that Mohammed began to preach and propagate his new religion: and this little cloud, which was at first no bigger than a man's hand, soon overspread and darkened the whole hemisphere. Mohammed himself conquered some parts of Arabia. His successor Abubeker broke into Palestine and Syria. Omar, the next caliph, was one of the most rapid conquerors who ever spread desolation upon the face of the earth. His reign was of no longer duration than ten years and a half; and in that time he subdued all Arabia, Syria, Mesopotamia, Persia, and Egypt. His ² army invested Jerusalem. He came thither in person; and the Christians after a long siege being reduced to the greatest extremities, in the year of Christ 637, surrendered the city upon capitulation. He granted them honourable conditions; he would not allow any of their churches to be taken from them; but only demanded of the Patriarch, with great modesty, a place where he might build a mosque. The Patriarch showed him Jacob's stone, and the place where the temple of Solomon had been built, which the Christians had filled with ordure in hatred to the Jews. Omar began himself to cleanse the place, and he was followed in this act of piety by the principal officers of his army; and it was in this place that the first mosque was erected at Jerusalem. Sophronius the patriarch ³ said upon Omar's taking possession of the city, "This is of a truth the abomination of desolation spoken of by Daniel the prophet standing in the holy place." Omar, the conqueror of Jerusalem, is by some authors said also to have died there, being stabbed by a slave at morning prayers in the mosque which he had erected. Abdolmelik, the son of Merwan, the twelfth caliph, ¹ enlarged the mosque at Jerusalem, and ordered the people to go thither on pilgrimage, instead of Mecca, which was then in the hands of the rebel Abdollah; and afterwards ² when the pilgrimage to Mecca was by any accident interrupted, the Mussulmen used to repair to Jerusalem for the same purposes of devotion.

¹ Theoph. ad Heracl. p. 252, &c. Edit. Paris. p. 200, &c. Edit. Venet. Cedren. ad Heracl. p. 408. Edit. Paris. p. 322, &c. Edit. Venet. Basnage's Hist. of the Jews, Book vi. chap. xviii. sect. vii.

² Elmacini Hist. Saracen. Lib. i. p. 22 et 28. Edit. Erpenii. Herbelot. Biblioth. Orientale, p. 687. Basnage's Hist. of the Jews, B. vi. chap. xix. sect. ii. Ockley's Hist. of the Saracens, Vol. I. p. 243, &c.

³ Theophanes, p. 281. Edit. Paris. p. 224. Edit. Venet. Basnage, ibid. Ockley, p. 249.

In this manner the holy city was transferred from the possession of the Greek Christians into the dominion of the Arabian Mussulmen, and continued in subjection to the caliphs till the latter part of the eleventh century, that is, above 400 years. At that time ³ the Turks of the Selzuccian race had made themselves masters of Persia, had usurped the government, but submitted to the religion of the country; and being firmly seated there, they extended their conquests as far as Jerusalem, and farther. They drove out the Arabians, and also despoiled the caliphs of their power over it; and they kept possession of it, till being weakened by divisions among themselves, they were ejected by the caliph of Egypt. The caliph of Egypt, perceiving the divisions and weakness of the Turks, advanced to Jerusalem with a great army; and the Turks expecting no succour, presently surrendered it to him. But though it thus changed masters, and passed from the Arabians to the Turks, and from the Turks to the Egyptians, yet the religion professed there was still the same, the Mohammedan being authorized and established, and the Christian only tolerated upon payment of tribute.

The Egyptians enjoyed their conquest but a little while; for in ⁴ the same year that they took possession of it, they were dispossessed again by the Franks, as they are generally denominated, or the Latin Christians. Peter the hermit, of Amiens, in France, went on a pilgrimage to Palestine, and there having seen and shared in the distresses and miseries of the Christians, he represented them at his return in such pathetic terms, that by his preaching and instigation, and by the authority of pope Urban II. and the Council of Clermont, the west was stirred up against the east, Europe against Asia, the Christians against the Mussulmen, for the retaking of Jerusalem, and for the recovery of the Holy Land out of the hands of the infidels. It was the epidemic madness of the time; and old and young, men and women, priests and soldiers, monks and merchants, peasants and mechanics, all were eager to assume the cross, and to set out for what they thought the holy wars. Some assert that the number of those who went out on this expedition amounted to above a million. They who make the lowest

¹ Elmacini Hist. Saracen. Lib. i, p. 58. Ockley, Vol. II. p. 299.

² Herbelot, Bib. Orient. p. 270.

³ Elmacini Hist. Saracen. Lib. iii. p. 267—287. Abul-Pharajii Hist. Dyn. ix. p. 243. Vers. Pocockii. Herbelot, Bib. Orient. p. 269.

⁴ Abul-Pharajii Hist. Dyn. ix. p. 243. Vers. Pocockii. Elmacini Hist. Saracen. Lib. iii. p. 293. Herbelot, Bib. Orient. p. 269. Savage's Abridg. of Knolles and Ricaut, Vol. I. p. 12, &c. Voltaire's Hist. of Europe, of the Crusades. Blair's Chronol. Tables.

computation affirm, that there were at least three hundred thousand fighting men. After some losses and some victories the army sat down before Jerusalem, and after a siege of five weeks took it by storm, on the fifteenth of July, in the year of Christ 1099; and all who were not Christians they put to the sword. They massacred above seventy thousand Mussulmen: and all the Jews in the place they gathered and burnt together; and the spoil that they found in the mosques was of inestimable value. Godfrey of Boulogne, the general, was chosen king: and there reigned nine kings in succession; and the kingdom subsisted eighty-eight years, till the year of Christ 1187, when the Mussulmen regained their former dominion, and with scarce any interruption have retained it ever since.

At that time the famous Saladin, having subverted the government of the caliphs, had caused himself to be proclaimed sultan of Egypt. Having also subdued Syria and Arabia, he formed the ¹ design of besieging Jerusalem, and of putting an end to that kingdom. He marched against it with a powerful and victorious army, and took it by capitulation on Friday, the second of October, after a siege of fourteen days. He compelled the Christians to redeem their lives at the price of ten pieces of gold for a man, five for a woman, and two for a boy or girl. He restored to the oriental Christians the church of the holy sepulchre; but forced the Franks, or western Christians, to depart to Tyre, or other places, which were in the possession of their countrymen. But though the city was in the hands of the Mussulmen, yet the Christians had still their nominal king of Jerusalem; and for some time Richard I. of England, who was one of the most renowned crusaders, and had eminently distinguished himself in the holy wars, gloried in the empty title. The city, however, ² did not remain so assured to the family of Saladin, but thirty years after his nephew Al Moadham, sultan of Damascus, was obliged to demolish the walls, not being able to keep it himself, and fearing lest the Franks, who were then again become formidable in those parts, should establish themselves again in a place of such strength. Afterwards, in the year 1228, ³ another of Saladin's family, Al Kamel, the sultan of Egypt, who after the death of his kinsman Al Moadham, enjoyed part of his estates, to secure his own kingdom, made a treaty with the Franks, and yielded up Jerusalem to the emperor Frederic II. upon condition that he should not rebuild the walls, and that the mosques should be reserved for the devotions of the Mussulmen. Frederic was accordingly crowned king there, but soon returned into Europe. Not many years intervened before ⁴ the Christians broke the truce;

¹ Elmacini, ibid. p. 293. Abul-Pharaj. ibid. p. 273, 274. Herbelot, ibid. p. 269 et 743. Knolles and Savage, p. 54. Voltaire, ibid. Blair's Chronol. Tables.

² Herbelot, ibid. p. 269. Knolles and Savage, p. 74. Voltaire, ibid.

³ Abul-Pharaj. ibid. p. 305. Herbelot, ibid. p. 269 et 745. Knolles and Savage, p. 81. Voltaire, ibid. and Annals of the Empire, Ann. 1229.

⁴ Herbelot, ibid. p. 269. Knolles and Savage, p. 83.

and Melecsalah, sultan of Egypt, being greatly offended, marched directly towards Jerusalem, put all the Franks therein to the sword, demolished the castle which they had built, sacked and razed the city, not even sparing the sepulchre of our Saviour, which till that time had never been violated or defiled; and ¹ before the end of the same century the Crusaders, or European Christians, were totally extirpated out of the Holy Land, having lost in their eastern expeditions, according to some accounts, above two millions of persons.

Before this time the Mamalucs, or the foreign slaves to the Egyptian sultans, had usurped the government from their masters: and soon after this ² Kazan, the chan of the Mogul Tartars, made an irruption into Syria, routed Al Naser, the sultan of Egypt, had Damascus surrendered to him, and ordered Jerusalem to be repaired and fortified. But being recalled by great troubles in Persia, he was obliged to quit his new conquests, and the Mamaluc sultan of Egypt soon took possession of them again. In like manner ³ when the great Timur or Tamerlane, like a mighty torrent, overwhelmed Asia, and vanquished both the Turkish and Egyptian sultans, he went twice in passing and repassing to visit the holy city, gave many presents to the religious persons, and freed the inhabitants from subsidies and garrisons. But the ebb was almost as sudden as the flood. He died within a few years, and his sons and grandsons quarrelling about the succession, his vast empire in a little time mouldered away; and Jerusalem with the neighbouring countries reverted to the obedience of the Mamalucs again. It was indeed in a ruined and desolate state, as Chalcocondylas⁴ describes it, and the Christians paid large tribute to the sultans of Egypt for access to the sepulchre of Jesus. And in the same state it continued, with little variation, under the dominion of the Mamalucs, for the space of above 260 years, till at length this with the other territories of the Mamalucs fell a prey to the arms of the Turks of the Othman race.

It was about the year 1516 that ⁵ Selim, the ninth emperor of the Turks, turned his arms against Egypt; and having conquered one sultan and hanged another, he annexed Syria, Egypt, and all the dominions of the Mamalucs to the Othman empire. In his way to Egypt he did as Kazan and Tamerlane had done before him; he

¹ Knolles and Savage, p. 95. Voltaire, ibid.

² Pocockii Supplem. ab Abul-Pharaj. p. 2. Knolles and Savage, p. 96.

³ Chalcocondylas de rebus Turc. Lib. iii. Herbelot, p. 377, &c. Knolles and Savage, p. 138, &c.

⁴ Τὸν δὲ τάφον Ἰησοῦ, κ. τ. λ. Sepulchrum Jesu sub potestate istius regis in Palæstinâ situm est, unde plurimum lucri ei accidit.—Situm in urbe Hierusalem, quæ devastata est cum maritimis regionibus. ["The sepulchre of Jesus was situated in Palestine, which was under the dominion of that king, from whence he derived much gain.—It was situated in the city of Jerusalem, which, with the country on the sea-coast, was in a state of desolation."] Chalcocond. ibid. p. 75. Edit. Paris. p. 59. Edit. Venet.

⁵ Pocockii Supplem. ad Abul-Pharaj. p. 29, 30, 49. Herbelot, Bib. Orient. p. 802. Knolles and Savage, p. 240, &c. Prince Cantemir's Hist. of the Othman empire, in Selim I.

¹ went to visit the holy city, the seat of so many prophets, and the scene of so many miracles. It lay at that time miserably deformed and ruined, according to the ² account of a contemporary historian, not inhabited by the Jews, who were banished into all the world, but by a few Christians, who paid large tribute to the Egyptian sultans for the possession of the holy sepulchre. Selim offered up his devotions at the monuments of the old prophets, and presented the Christian priests with as much money as was sufficient to buy them provisions for six months; and having stayed there one night he went to join his army at Gaza. From that time to this the Othman emperors have ³ possessed it under the title of Hami, that is, of protectors, and not of masters; though they are more properly tyrants and oppressors. Turks, Arabians, and Christians of various sects and nations dwell there out of reverence to the place; but very few Jews; and of those the greatest part, as ⁴ Basnage says, are beggars, and live upon alms. The Jews say, that when the Messiah shall come, the city will undergo a conflagration and inundation in order to be purified from the defilements which the Christians and Mohammedans have committed in it; and therefore they choose not to settle there. But the writer just mentioned assigns two more probable and natural reasons. "One is, that the Mohammedans look upon Jerusalem as a holy place; and therefore there are a great many Santons and devout Mussulmen, who have taken up their abode there, who are persecutors of the Jews as well as of the Christians, so that they have less tranquillity and liberty in Jerusalem than in other places: and as there is very little trade, there is not much to be got, and this want of gain drives them away."

By thus tracing the history of Jerusalem from the destruction by Titus to the present time, it appears evidently that as the Jews have been led away captive into all nations, so Jerusalem hath been trodden down of the Gentiles. There are now almost 1700 years, in which the Jewish nation have been a standing monument

¹ Pauli Jovii Hist. Lib. xvii. Herbelot, ibid. Knolles and Savage, p. 243. Prince Cantemir, ibid. sect. xxi. p. 163.

² Paulus Jovius ibid. Ea tunc miserabili sacrarum ruinarum deformitate inculata atque deserta, non a Judæis veteribus incolis, qui tunc toto orbe extorres in admissi sceleris pœnam, nec sedem nec patriam habent, sed a paucis Christianis incolebatur. Ii cum ignominia et gravi admodum contumeliâ Christiani nominis, ob concessam venerandi sepulchri possessionem, grave tributum Ægyptiis regibus persolvunt, &c. ["Then its sacred ruins were in a state of miserable deformity, neglected and forsaken. It was inhabited not by the Jews, its former occupiers, who, banished and scattered over the whole face of the earth, as a punishment of their crime, have no fixed place of abode, but by a few Christians. These, loaded with all the ignominy and reproach attached to the Christian name in those parts, pay a heavy tribute to the Egyptian sultan, for the possession granted to them of the holy sepulchre."] of the truth of Christ's predictions, themselves dispersed over the face of the whole earth, and their land groaning under the yoke of foreign lords and conquerors: and at this day there is no reason to doubt but they will continue in the same state, nor ever recover their native country, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled. Our Saviour's words are very memorable, Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled. It is still trodden down by the Gentiles, and consequently the times of the Gentiles are not yet fulfilled. When the times of the Gentiles shall be fulfilled, then the expression implies, that the Jews shall be restored: and for what reason, can we believe, that though they are dispersed among all nations, yet by a constant miracle they are kept distinct from all, but for the farther manifestation of God's purposes towards them? The prophecies have been accomplished to the greatest exactness in the destruction of their city, and its continuing still subject to strangers, in the dispersion of their people, and their living still separate from all people; and why should not the remaining parts of the same prophecies be as fully accomplished too in their restoration, at the proper season, when the times of the Gentiles shall be fulfilled? The times of the Gentiles will be fulfilled, when the times of the four great kingdoms of the Gentiles, according to Daniel's prophecies, shall be expired, and the fifth kingdom, or the kingdom of Christ, shall be set up in their place, and the saints of the most High shall take the kingdom, and possess the kingdom for ever, even for ever and ever. Jerusalem, as it hath hitherto remained, so probably will remain in subjection to the Gentiles, until these times of the Gentiles be fulfilled; or as St. Paul expresseth it, (Rom. xi. 25, 26.) until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in; and so all Israel shall be saved, and become again the people of God. The fulness of the Jews will come in as well as the fulness of the Gentiles. For (ver. 12, &c.) if the fall of them be the riches of the world, and the diminishing of them the riches of the Gentiles; how much more their fulness? For I would not, brethren, that ye should be ignorant of this mystery, that blindness in part is happened to Israel, until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in; and so all Israel shall be saved.

³ — et ses successeurs l'ont possédée jusqu'à présent sous le titre de Hami, c'est à dire, de protecteurs, et non pas de maîtres. ["And his successors have possessed it to the present time, under the title of Hami, that is, of protectors, not of masters."] Herbelot, p. 270.

⁴ Basnage's Hist. of the Jews, B. vii. chap. xxiv. sect. x.

XXI.

THE SAME SUBJECT CONTINUED.

PART IV.

WHEN we first entered on an explanation of our Saviour's prophecies relating to the destruction of Jerusalem, comprised chiefly in this twenty-fourth chapter of St. Matthew, it was observed that the disciples in their question propose two things to our Saviour, first, when should be the time of his coming or the destruction of Jerusalem, and secondly, what should be the signs of it, (ver. 3.) Tell us when shall these things be, and what shall be the signs of thy coming, and of the conclusion of the age? The latter part of the question our Saviour answereth first, and treateth at large of the signs of the destruction of Jerusalem from the fourth verse of the chapter to the thirty-first inclusive. He toucheth upon the most material passages and accidents, not only of those which were to forerun this great event, but likewise of those which were to attend, and immediately to follow upon it: and having thus answered the latter part of the question, he proceeds now in verse thirty-second to answer the former part of the question, as to the time of his coming and the destruction of Jerusalem.

He begins with observing, that the signs which he had given would be as certain an indication of the time of his coming, as the fig-tree's putting forth its leaves is of the approach of summer; (ver. 32, 33.) Now learn a parable of the fig-tree: when his branch is yet tender, and putteth forth leaves, ye know that summer is nigh: so likewise ye, when ye shall see all these things, know that it is near, or he is near, even at the doors. He proceeds to declare that the time of his coming was at no very great distance, and to show that he hath been speaking all this while of the destruction of Jerusalem, he affirms with his usual affirmation, (ver. 34.) Verily I say unto you, This generation shall not pass till all these things be fulfilled. It is to me a wonder how any man can refer part of the foregoing discourse to the destruction of Jerusalem, and part to the end of the world, or any other distant event, when it is said so positively here in the conclusion, All these things shall be fulfilled in this generation. It seemeth as if our Saviour had been aware of some such misapplication of his words, by adding yet greater force and emphasis to his affirmation, (ver. 35.) Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my words shall not pass away. It is a common figure of speech in the oriental languages, to say of two things that the one shall be and the other shall not be, when the meaning is only that the one shall happen sooner or more easily than the other. As in this instance of our Saviour, Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my words shall not pass away, the meaning is, Heaven and earth shall sooner or more easily pass away than my words shall pass away; the frame of the universe shall sooner or more easily be dissolved than my words shall not be fulfilled. And thus it is expressed by St. Luke upon a like occasion, (xvi. 17.) It is easier for heaven and earth to pass than one tittle of the law to fail.

In another place he says, (Matt. xvi. 28.) There are some standing here who shall not taste of death till they see the Son of man coming in his kingdom; intimating that it would not succeed immediately, and yet not at such a distance of time, but that some then living should be spectators of the calamities coming upon the nation. In like manner, he says to the women, who bewailed and lamented him as he was going to be crucified, (Luke xxiii. 28.) Daughters of Jerusalem, weep not for me, but weep for yourselves and for your children, which sufficiently implied, that the days of distress and misery were coming, and would fall on them and their children. But at that time there was not any appearance of such immediate ruin. The wisest politician could not have inferred it from the then present state of affairs. Nothing less than Divine prescience could have certainly foreseen and foretold it.

But still the exact time of this judgment was unknown to all creatures, (ver. 36.) But of that day and hour knoweth no man, no not the angels in heaven, but my Father only. The word ὥρα¹ is of larger signification than hour, and besides it seemeth somewhat improper to say, Of that day and hour knoweth no man, for if the day was not known, certainly the hour was not, and it was superfluous to make such an addition. I conceive, therefore, that the passage should be rendered, not Of that day and hour knoweth no man, but Of that day and season knoweth no man, as the word is frequently used in the best authors, both sacred and profane. It is true our Saviour declares, All these things shall be fulfilled in this generation; it is true the prophet Daniel hath given some intimation of the time in his famous prophecy of the seventy weeks; but though this great revolution was to happen in that generation—though it was to happen towards the conclusion of seventy weeks or 490 years, to be computed from a certain date that is not easy to be fixed, yet the particular day, the particular season in which it was to happen, might still remain a secret to men and angels; and our Saviour had before (ver. 20.) advised his disciples to pray, that their flight be not in the winter, neither on the sabbath-day; the day not being known, they might pray that their flight be not on the sabbath-day; the season not being known, they might pray that their flight be not in the winter. As it was in the days of Noah, saith our Saviour, (ver. 37, 38, 39.) so shall it be now. As then, they were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, till they were surprised by the flood, notwithstanding the frequent warnings and admonitions of that preacher of righteousness: so now they shall be engaged in the business and pleasures of the world, little expecting, little thinking of this universal ruin, till it come upon them, notwithstanding the express predictions and declarations of Christ and his apostles. Then shall two be in the field, the one shall be taken and the other left: Two women shall be grinding at the mill. Dr. Shaw in his travels, making some observations upon the kingdoms of Algiers and Tunis, says, in p. 297, that "women alone are employed to grind their corn, and that when the uppermost millstone is large, or expedition is required, then only a second woman is called in to assist." This observation I owe to Bishop Pearce.—Two women shall be grinding at the mill, the one shall be taken, and the other left. (ver. 40, 41.) That is, Providence will then make a distinction between such as are not at all distinguished now. Some shall be rescued from the destruction of Jerusalem, like Lot out of the burning of Sodom, while others, no ways perhaps different in outward circumstances, shall be left to perish in it.

¹ "ὥρα hic non diei particulam, sed latius sumti temporis ambitum intelligo, &c. ["I consider ὥρα here as denoting, not a part of the day, but a portion of time, taken in a larger sense."] Grot. in locum.

The matter is carried somewhat farther in the parallel place of St. Mark; and it is said not only that the angels were excluded from the knowledge of the particular time, but that the Son himself was also ignorant of it. The 13th chapter of that Evangelist answers to the 24th of St. Matthew. Our Saviour treateth there of the signs and circumstances of his coming and the destruction of Jerusalem, from the 5th to the 27th verse inclusive; and then at verse 28th he proceeds to treat of the time of his coming and the destruction of Jerusalem. The text in St. Matthew is, Of that day and season knoweth no man, no not the angels of heaven, but my Father only. The text in St. Mark is, Of that day and season knoweth no man, no not the angels which are in heaven, neither the Son, but the Father. It is true the words οὐδὲ ὁ υἱός, neither the Son, were omitted in some copies of St. Mark, as they are inserted in some copies of St. Matthew; but there is no sufficient authority for the omission in St. Mark, any more than for the insertion in St. Matthew. Erasmus and some of the moderns¹ are of opinion, that the words were omitted in the text of St. Matthew lest they should afford a handle to the Arians for proving the Son to be inferior to the Father; but it was to little purpose to erase them out of St. Matthew and to leave them standing in St. Mark. On the contrary, St. Ambrose and some of the ancients² assert that they were inserted in the text of St. Mark by the Arians, but there is as little foundation or pretence for this assertion as there is for the other. It is much more probable that they were omitted in some copies of St. Mark by some indiscreet orthodox, who thought them to bear too hard upon our Saviour's divinity. For all the most ancient copies and translations extant retain them; the most ancient fathers quote them and comment upon them; and certainly it is easier for words to be omitted in a copy, so as that the omission should not generally prevail afterwards, than it is for words to be inserted in a copy, so as that the insertion should generally prevail afterwards. Admit the words therefore as the genuine words of St. Mark we must, and we may, without any prejudice to our Saviour's divinity. For Christ may be considered in two respects, in his human and his divine nature, and what is said with regard only to the former, doth not at all affect the latter. As he was the great teacher and revealer of his Father's will, he might know more than the angels, and yet he might not know all things. It is said in St. Luke (ii. 52.) that Jesus increased in wisdom and stature, and in favour with God and man. He increased in wisdom, and consequently in his human nature he was not omniscient. In his human nature he was the son of David; in his divine nature he was the Lord of David. In his human nature he was upon earth; in his divine nature he was in heaven, (John iii. 13.) even while upon earth. In like manner it may be said, that though as God he might know all things, yet he might be ignorant of some things as man. And of this particular the Messiah might be ignorant, because it was no part of his office or commission to reveal it. It is not for you to know the times or the seasons, which the Father hath put in his own power, as our Saviour said, (Acts i. 7.) when a like question was proposed to him. It might be proper for the disciples, and for the Jews too by their means, to know the signs and circumstances of our Saviour's coming and the destruction of Jerusalem; but upon many accounts it might be unfit for them both to know the precise time.

¹ Proinde suspicor hoc a nonnullis subtractum, ne Arianis esset ansa confirmandi Filium esse Patre minorem, &c. Erasm. in loc. ["Wherefore I suspect that these words have been withdrawn by some, lest they should give the Arians a handle for proving their doctrine, that the Son is inferior to the Father," &c.]

² Ambros. de Fide, Lib. v. cap. viii. Veteres Græci codices non habent, Quod nec filius scit; sed non mirum est, si et hoc falsârunt, qui scripturas interpolavêre divinas. ["The

Hitherto we have explained this 24th chapter of St. Matthew, as relating to the destruction of Jerusalem, and without doubt as relating to the destruction of Jerusalem it is primarily to be understood. But though it is to be understood of this primarily, yet it is not to be understood of this only; for there is no question that our Saviour had a further view and meaning in it. It is usual with the prophets to frame and express their prophecies so as that they shall comprehend more than one event, and have their several periods of completion. This every one must have observed, who hath been ever so little conversant in the writings of the ancient prophets; and this I conceive to be the case here, and the destruction of Jerusaancient Greek copies have not these words, knoweth, neither the Son, but it is not to be wondered at, that men who have interpolated the Holy Scriptures, should have falsified them here."]

lem to be typical of the end of the world. The destruction of a great city is a lively type and image of the end of the world; and we may observe, that our Saviour no sooner begins to speak of the destruction of Jerusalem, than his figures are raised, his language is swelled, and he expresseth himself in such terms, as in a lower sense indeed are applicable to the destruction of Jerusalem, but describe something higher in their proper and genuine signification. The sun shall be darkened, the moon shall not give her light, the stars shall fall from heaven, the powers of the heavens shall be shaken, the Son of man shall come in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory, and he shall send his angels with a great sound of a trumpet, and they shall gather together his elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other. These passages, in a figurative sense, as we have seen, may be understood of the destruction of Jerusalem, but in their literal sense can be meant only of the end of the world. In like manner that text, Of that day and season knoweth no man, no not the angels of heaven, but my Father only; the consistence and connexion of the discourse oblige us to understand it as spoken of the time of the destruction of Jerusalem; but in a higher sense it may be true also of the time of the end of the world and the general judgment. All the subsequent discourse too, we may observe, doth not relate so properly to the destruction of Jerusalem, as to the end of the world and the general judgment. Our Saviour loseth sight, as it were, of his former subject, and adapts his discourse more to the latter. And the end of the Jewish state was in a manner the end of the world to many of the Jews.

The remaining part of the chapter is so clear and easy as to need no comment or explanation. It will be more proper to conclude with some useful reflections upon the whole.

It appears next to impossible that any man should duly consider these prophecies, and the exact completion of them; and, if he is a believer, not be confirmed in the faith; or, if he is an infidel, not be converted. Can any stronger proof be given of a divine revelation than the spirit of prophecy, and can any stronger proof be given of the spirit of prophecy, than the examples now before us, in which so many contingencies, and I might say improbabilities, which human wisdom or prudence could never foresee, are so particularly foretold, and so punctually accomplished! At the time when Christ pronounced these prophecies, the Roman governor resided at Jerusalem, and had a force sufficient to keep the people in obedience; and could human prudence foresee that the city as well as the country would revolt and rebel against the Romans? Could human prudence foresee famines, and pestilence, and earthquakes in divers places? Could human prudence foresee the speedy propagation of the Gospel, so contrary to all human probability? Could human prudence foresee such an utter destruction of Jerusalem, with all the circumstances preceding and following it? It was never the custom of the Romans absolutely to ruin any of their provinces. It was improbable, therefore, that such a thing should happen at all, and still more improbable that it should happen under the humane and generous Titus, who was indeed, as he was ¹ called, the love and delight of mankind.

What is usually objected to the other predictions of Holy Writ, cannot with any pretence be objected to these prophecies of our Saviour, that they are figurative and obscure; for nothing can be conveyed in plainer, simpler terms, except where he affected some obscurity, as it hath been shown, for particular reasons. It is allowed, indeed, that some of these prophecies are taken from Moses and Daniel. Our Saviour, prophesying of the same events, hath borrowed and applied some of the same images and expressions. But this is a commendation rather than any discredit to his predictions. He hath built upon the foundations of the inspired writers before him; but what a superstructure hath he raised? He hath acted in this case as in every other, like one who came not to destroy the law and the prophets, but to fulfil them. He hath manifested himself to be a true prophet, by his exact interpretation and application of other prophets. He is also much more particular and circumstantial than either Moses or Daniel. In several instances his prophecies are entirely new, and properly his own; and besides he uses greater precision in fixing and confining the time to that very generation.

For the completion of these prophecies the persons seem to have been wonderfully raised up and preserved by Divine Providence. Vespasian was promoted from obscurity, and though feared and hated by Nero, yet was preferred by him, and singled out as the only general among the Romans who was equal to such a war; God perhaps, as ² Josephus intimates, so disposing and ordering affairs. He had subdued the greatest part of Judea, when he was advanced to the empire, and he was happy in putting an end to the civil wars, and to the other troubles and calamities of the state, or otherwise he would hardly have been at leisure to prosecute the war with the Jews. Titus was wonderfully preserved in the most critical articles of danger. While he was taking a view of the city, he was surrounded by the enemy, and nothing less was expected than that he should be slain or made prisoner, but he resolutely broke through the midst of them, and though unarmed, yet arrived unhurt at his own camp; upon which ³ Josephus maketh this reflection, that from hence it is obvious to understand, that the turns of war and the dangers of princes are under the peculiar care of God. Josephus himself was also no less wonderfully preserved than Titus, the one to destroy the city, and the other to record its destruction. He marvellously escaped from the snares which were laid for him ¹ by John of Gischala, and ² by Jesus the chief of the robbers; and when ³ his companions were determined to kill him and themselves rather than surrender to the Romans, he prevailed with them to draw lots who should be killed, the one after the other, and at last he was left with only one other, whom he persuaded to submit with him to the Romans. Thus was he saved from the most imminent destruction, and he himself esteemed it, as it certainly was, a singular instance of Divine Providence.

¹ Amor ac deliciæ humani generis. [Translated in the text.] Suet. in Tito, sect. i.

² τάχα τὶ καὶ περὶ τῶν ὅλων ἤδη τοῦ Θεοῦ προοικονομουμένου. forsan et Deo aliquid de universis præordinante. ["God, perhaps, in his decrees concerning the world, having so ordained."] Joseph. de Bell. Jud. Lib. iii. cap. i. sect. iii. p. 1118. Edit. Hudson.

³ ἔνθα δὴ μάλιστα πάρεστι νοεῖν, ὅτι καὶ πολέμων ῥοπαὶ καὶ βασιλέων κίνδυνοι μέλονται τῷ Θεῷ. hinc sane maxime licet intelligere, Deo curæ esse et belli momenta et regum pericula. [Translated in the text.] Ib. Lib. v. cap. ii. sect. ii. p. 1216.

As Vespasian and Titus seem to have been raised up and preserved for the completion of these prophecies, so might Josephus for the illustration of their completion. For the particular passages and transactions, by which we prove the completion of these prophecies, we derive not so much from Christian writers, who might be suspected of a design to parallel the events with the predictions, as from Heathen authors, and chiefly from Josephus, the Jewish historian, who, though very exact and minute in other relations, yet avoids as much as ever he can the mention of Christ and the Christian religion. He doth not so much as once mention the name of false Christs, though he hath frequent occasion to speak largely of false prophets; so cautious was he of touching upon any thing, that might lead him to the acknowledgment of the true Christ. His silence here is as remarkable, as his copiousness upon other subjects. It is indeed very providential, that a more particular detail, a more exact history, is preserved of the destruction of Jerusalem, and of all the circumstances relating to it, than of any other matter whatsoever transacted so long ago: and it is an additional advantage to our cause, that these accounts are transmitted to us by a Jew, and by a Jew who was himself an eye-witness to most of the things which he relates. As a general in the wars he must have had an exact knowledge of all transactions, and as a Jewish priest he would not relate them with any favour or partiality to the Christian cause. His history ⁴ was approved by Vespasian and Titus (who ordered it to be published), and by king Agrippa and many others, both Jews and Romans, who were present in those wars. He had likewise many enemies, who would readily have convicted him of any falsification, if he had been guilty of any. He designed nothing less, and yet, as if he had designed nothing more, his history of the Jewish wars may serve as a larger comment on our Saviour's prophecies of the destruction of Jerusalem. If any

¹ Josephi Vita, sect. xvii. &c.

² Ibid. sect. xxii.

³ De Bell. Jud. Lib. iii. cap. vii.

⁴ Josephi Vita, sect. lxxv. Contra Apion. Lib. i. sect. ix.

one would compare our Saviour's words with that writer's history of the whole war, as ¹ Eusebius very well observes, he could not but admire and acknowledge our Saviour's prescience and prediction to be wonderful above nature, and truly divine.

The predictions are the clearest, as the calamities were the greatest which the world ever saw; and what heinous sin was it that could bring down such heavy judgments on the Jewish church and nation? Can any other with half so much probability be assigned, as what the Scripture assigns, their crucifying the Lord of Glory? As St. Paul expresseth it, (1 Thess. ii. 15, 16.) They both killed the Lord Jesus and their own prophets, and persecuted the apostles, and so filled up their sins, and wrath came upon them to the uttermost. This is always objected as the most capital sin of the nation; and, upon reflection, we shall find really some correspondence between their crime and their punishment. They put Jesus to death, when the nation was assembled to celebrate the passover; and when the ² nation was assembled too to celebrate the passover, Titus shut them up within the walls of Jerusalem. The rejection of the true Messiah was their crime, and the following of false Messiahs to their destruction was their punishment. They sold and bought Jesus as a slave, and they themselves were afterwards sold and bought as slaves at the lowest prices. They preferred a robber and murderer to Jesus, whom they crucified between two thieves; and they themselves ³ were afterwards infested with bands of thieves and robbers. They put Jesus to death, lest the Romans should come and take away their place and nation; and the Romans did come and take away their place and nation. They crucified Jesus before the walls of Jerusalem; and before the walls of Jerusalem they themselves were crucified in such numbers, that it is ⁴ said room was wanted for the crosses, and crosses for the bodies. I should think it hardly possible for any man to lay these things together, and not conclude the Jews' own imprecation to be remarkably fulfilled upon them, (Matt. xxvii. 25.) His blood be on us, and on our children.

We Christians cannot, indeed, be guilty of the very same offence in crucifying the Lord of Glory; but it behoves us to consider, whether we may not be guilty in the same kind, and by our sins

¹ συγκρίνας δὲ τις τὰς τοῦ Σωτῆρος ἡμῶν λέξεις ταῖς λοιπαῖς τοῦ συγγραφέως ιστορίας ταῖς περὶ τοῦ παντὸς πολέμου, πῶς οὐκ ἂν ἀποθανυμάσειεν, θείαν ὡς ἀληθῶς καὶ ὑπερφῶς παράδοξον τὴν πρόγνωσιν τε καὶ πρόρρησιν τοῦ Σωτῆρος ἡμῶν ὁμολογήσας. Quod si quis Servatoris nostri verba cum iis comparet, quæ ab eodem scriptore de universo bello commemorata sunt, fieri non potest quin admiretur præscientiam ac prædictionem Servatoris nostri, eamque verè divinam et supra modum stupendam esse fateatur. [Translated in the text.] Euseb. Eccles. Hist. Lib. iii. cap. vii.

² Joseph. de Bell. Jud. Lib. vi. cap. ix. sect. iii. et iv. Euseb. Hist. Lib. iii. cap. v.

³ Joseph. ibid. Lib. ii. cap. iv. et xiii. Lib. iii. cap. viii. Lib. iv. cap. iii. Lib. vii. cap. viii. &c.

⁴ Καὶ διὰ τὸ πλῆθος χώρα τε ἐνελείπετο τοῖς σταυροῖς, καὶ σταυροὶ τοῖς σώμασιν. Et propter multitudinem spatium crucibus deerat, et corporibus cruces. ["And on account of the multitude, space was wanting for crosses, and crosses for bodies."] Ibid. Lib. v. cap. xi. sect. i. p. 1247.

and iniquities (Heb. vi. 6.) crucify the Son of God afresh, and put him to an open shame; and therefore whether being like them in their crime, we may not also resemble them in their punishment. They rejected the Messiah, and we indeed have received him; but have our lives been at all agreeable to our holy profession, or rather as we have had opportunities of knowing Christ more, have we not obeyed him less than other Christians, and (Heb. x. 29.) trodden under foot the Son of God, and counted the blood of the covenant wherewith we are sanctified an unholy thing, and done despite unto the Spirit of grace? The flagrant crimes of the Jews, and the principal sources of their calamities, in the opinion of ¹ Josephus, were their trampling upon all human laws, deriding divine things, and making a jest of the oracles of the prophets as so many dreams and fables; and how hath the same spirit of licentiousness and infidelity prevailed likewise among us? How have the laws and lawful authority been insulted with equal insolence and impunity? How have the Holy Scriptures, those treasures of divine wisdom, not only been neglected, but despised, derided, and abused to the worst purposes? How have the principal articles of our faith been denied, the prophecies and miracles of Moses and the prophets, of Christ and his apostles, been ridiculed, and impiety and blasphemy not only been whispered in the ear, but proclaimed from the press? How hath all public worship and religion, and the administration of the sacraments been slighted and contemned, and the Sabbath profaned by those chiefly who ought to set a better example, to whom much is given, and of whom therefore much will be required? And if for their sins and provocations (Rom. xi. 21. 20.) God spared not the natural branches, take heed lest he also spare not thee. Because of unbelief they were broken off, and thou standest by faith. Be not high-minded, but fear. God bore long with the Jews; and hath he not borne long with us too? But he cut them off, when the measure of their iniquities was full; and let us beware lest our measure be not also well nigh full, and we be not growing ripe for excision. What was said of the church of Ephesus is very applicable to us and our own case; (Rev. ii. 5.) Remember therefore from whence thou art fallen, and repent, and do the first works; or else I will come unto thee quickly, and will remove thy candlestick out of his place, except thou repent.

¹ Κατεπατέϊτο μὲν οὖν πᾶς αὐτοῖς θεσμός ἀνθρώπων, ἐγελάτο δὲ τὰ θεῖα, καὶ τοὺς τῶν προφητῶν θεσμούς [Al. χρησμούς] ὥσπερ ἀγυρτικὰς λογοποιίας ἐχλεύαζον. Et ab illis quidem omne jus humanum conculcabatur, divina autem quæque deridebantur, et prophetarum oracula ut præstigatorum commenta subsannabant. ["Every law of man was trampled under foot by them. Things divine were ridiculed, and they made a jest of the laws (others read, the oracles) of the prophets, as if they had been the devices of jugglers."] Ibid. Lib. iv. cap. vi. sect. iii. p. 1188. Edit. Hudson.

XXII.

ST. PAUL'S PROPHECY OF THE MAN OF SIN.

As our blessed Saviour hath cited and appealed to the book of Daniel, so likewise have his apostles drawn from the same fountain. St. Paul's and St. John's predictions are in a manner the copies of Daniel's originals, with some improvements and additions. The same times, the same persons, and the same events are described by St. Paul and St. John as well as by Daniel, and it might therefore with reason be expected that there should be some similitude and resemblance in the principal features and characters.

St. Paul hath left in writing, besides others, two most memorable prophecies, both relating to the same subject, the one concerning the man of sin, the other concerning the apostacy of the latter times, the former contained in the second Epistle to the Thessalonians, and the latter in the first Epistle to Timothy. The prophecy concerning the man of sin, having been delivered first in time, may fitly be considered first in order; and for the fuller manifestation of the truth and exactness of this prediction, it may be proper first to investigate the genuine sense and meaning of the passage; secondly, to show how it hath been mistaken and misapplied by some famous commentators; and thirdly, to vindicate and establish what we conceive to be the only true and legitimate application.

I. In the first place, it is proper to investigate the genuine sense and meaning of the passage, for a prophecy must be rightly understood before it can be rightly applied. The Apostle introduces the subject thus, (2 Thess. ii. 1, 2.) Now we beseech you, brethren, by the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, and by our gathering together unto him, That ye be not soon shaken in mind, or be troubled, neither by spirit, nor by word, nor by letter, as from us, as that the day of Christ is at hand. The preposition, which is translated by, ought rather to have been translated concerning, as it signifies ¹ in other places of Scripture, and in other authors, both Greek and Latin. Now we beseech you, brethren, concerning the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, and our gathering together unto him. For he doth not beseech them by the coming of Christ, but the coming of Christ is the subject of which he is treating, and it is in relation to this subject that he desires them not to be disturbed or affrighted, neither by revelation, nor by message, nor by letter, as from him, as if the day of Christ's coming was at hand. The phrases of the coming of Christ and the day of Christ may be understood, either figuratively of his coming in judgment upon the Jews, or literally of his coming in glory to judge the world. Sometimes, indeed, they are used in the former sense, but they are more generally employed in the latter, by the writers of the New Testament; and the latter is the proper signification in this place, as the context will evince beyond contradiction. St. Paul himself had planted the Church in Thessalonica, and it consisted principally of converts from among the Gentile idolaters, because it is said (1 Thess. i. 9.) that they turned to God from idols, to serve the living and true God. What occasion was there therefore to admonish them particularly of the destruction of Jerusalem? Or ¹ why should they be under such agitations and terrors upon that account? What connexion had Macedonia with Judea, or Thessalonica with Jerusalem? What share were the Christian converts to have in the calamities of the rebellious and unbelieving Jews, and why should they not rather have been comforted than troubled at the punishment of their inveterate enemies? Besides, ² how could the apostle deny that the destruction of the Jews was at hand, when it was at hand, as he saith himself, (1 Thess. ii. 16.) and the wrath is come upon them to the uttermost? He knew, and they knew, for our Saviour had declared that the destruction of Jerusalem would come to pass in that generation; and what a ridiculous comfort must it be to tell them that it would not happen immediately, but would be accomplished within less than twenty years? The phrases therefore of the coming of Christ and the day of Christ cannot in this place relate to the destruction of Jerusalem, but must necessarily be taken in the more general acceptation of his coming to judge the world. So the phrase is constantly used in the former Epistle. In one place the apostle saith, (ii. 19.) What is our hope, or joy, or crown of rejoicing? are not even ye in the presence of our Lord Jesus Christ at his coming? In another place he wisheth (iii. 13.) that the Lord may establish their hearts unblameable in holiness before God, even our Father, at the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ with all his saints. And in a third place he prayeth (v. 23.) that their whole spirit, and soul, and body be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ.

¹ So it is rendered Rom. ix. 27. Ἡσαίας δὲ κρᾶζει ὑπὲρ τοῦ Ἰσραὴλ, Esaias also crieth concerning Israel. See likewise 2 Cor. i. 7. viii. 23, 24, &c. Galen, Lib. i. ad Glauc. ὑπὲρ πάντων γράψαι οὐκ ἐγγωφεῖ, de omnibus scribere non datur. ["One cannot write concerning all things."] Virgil. Æn. I. 750. Multa super Priamo rogatans, super Hectore multa. ["Asking many things concerning Priam, many things concerning Hector."]]

These texts evidently refer to the general judgment; and if the phrase be constantly so employed in the former Epistle, why should it not be taken after the same manner in this Epistle? In the former Epistle the apostle had exhorted the Thessalonians to moderate sorrow for the dead by the consideration of the resurrection and the general judgment, (iv. 13, &c.) I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not, even as others which have no hope. For if we believe that Jesus died, and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus, will God bring with him. For this we say unto you by the word of the Lord, that we which are alive, and remain unto the coming of the Lord, shall not prevent them which are asleep. For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first. Then we which are alive, and remain, shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air, and so shall we ever be with the Lord. But of the times and the seasons of these things, as he proceeds, (v. 1, 2.) brethren, ye have no need that I write unto you. For yourselves know perfectly that the day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night. Some persons having mistaken the apostle's meaning, and having inferred from some of these expressions, that the end of the world was now approaching, and the day of Christ was now at hand, the apostle sets himself in this place to rectify that mistaken notion; and it is with reference to this coming of Christ, to this day of the Lord, to this our gathering together unto him in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air, that he beseeches the Thessalonians not to be shaken from their steadfastness, nor to be troubled and terrified, as if it was now at hand. Nothing then can be more evident and undeniable, than that the coming of Christ here intended is his second coming in glory to judge the world; and of this his second coming the apostle had spoken before, in this same Epistle, and in the chapter before this, (ver. 6, 7, 8, 9, 10.) It is a righteous thing with God to recompense tribulation to them that trouble you; and to you who are troubled rest with us, when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels, in flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ: Who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power; When he shall come to be glorified in his saints, and to be admired in all them that believe in that day.

¹ At quis huic terrori locus, si de Judæorum excidio agebatur? Quid Macedoniae cum Judæâ, Thessal. cum Hieros.? quid commune Christianis cum periculo rebellium Judæorum? &c. ["But what ground was there for this terror, if he was treating concerning the destruction of the Jews? What had Macedonia to do with Judea, or Thessalonica with Jerusalem? Or what danger could Christians be in from the rebellion of the Jews?"] Simplicius in Poli Synops.

² Præterea, quo jure potest apostolus inficiari, Judæorum excidium imminere, cum reipsâ jam adesset; uti liquet ex prioris epistolæ cap. ii. ver. 16. ["Besides, how could the apostle deny that the destruction of the Jews was approaching, when in reality it was at hand, as is plain from chap. ii. ver. 16. of his former epistle?"] Bocharti Examen libelli de Antichristo, Tom. II. col. 1049.

It was a point of great importance for the Thessalonians not to be mistaken in this particular; because if they were taught to believe that the coming of Christ was at hand, and he should not come according to their expectation, they might be staggered in their faith, and finding part of their creed to be false, might be hasty enough to conclude that the whole was so. Where, by the way, we may observe Mr. Gibbon's want of judgment in assigning the notion of Christ's coming speedily as one of the great causes of the growth and increase of the Christian church, when it appears from this passage that it had a contrary effect, and tended to shake and unsettle their minds, and to disturb and trouble instead of inviting and engaging them. The apostle therefore cautions them in the strongest manner against this delusion; and assures them that other memorable events will take place before the coming of our Lord, (ver. 3 and 4.) Let no man deceive you by any means: for that day shall not come, except there come a falling away first, and that man of sin be revealed, the son of perdition; who opposeth and exalteth himself above all that is called God, or that is worshipped; so that he as God sitteth in the temple of God, showing himself that he is God. The day of Christ shall not come, ἐὰν μὴ ἔλθῃ ἡ ἀποστασία πρῶτον, except there come the apostacy first. The apostacy here described is plainly not of a civil, but of a religious nature; not a revolt from the government, but a defection from the true religion and worship, a departing from the faith, (1 Tim. iv. 1.) a departing from the living God, (Heb. iii. 12.) as the word is used by the apostle in other places. In the original it is the apostacy with an article to give it an emphasis. The article being added, as Erasmus¹ remarks, signifies that famous and before predicted apostacy. So likewise it is ὁ ἄνθρωπος τῆς ἁμαρτίας the man of sin with the like article and the like emphasis: and St. Ambrose², that he might express the force of the article, hath rendered it that man, as have likewise our English translators. If then the notion of the man of sin be derived from any ancient prophet, it must be derived from Daniel, who hath described the like arrogant and tyrannical power: (vii. 25.) He shall speak great words against the Most High, and shall wear out the saints of the Most High, and think to change times and laws: and again, (xi. 36.) The king shall do according to his will, and he shall exalt himself, and magnify himself above every God, and shall speak marvellous things against the God of gods. Any man may be satisfied, that St. Paul alluded to this description by Daniel, because he hath not only borrowed the ideas, but hath even adopted some of the phrases and expressions. The man of sin may signify either a single man, or a succession of men. A succession of men being meant in Daniel, it is probable, that the same was intended here also. It is the more probable, because a single man appears hardly sufficient for the work here assigned: and it is agreeable to the phraseology of Scripture, and especially to that of the prophets, to speak of a body or a number of men under the character of one. Thus a king (Dan. vii. viii. Rev. xvii.) is often used for the succession of kings, and the high priest (Heb. ix. 7. 25.) for the series and order of high priests. A single beast (Dan. vii. viii. Rev. xiii.) often represents a whole empire or kingdom in all its changes and revolutions from the beginning to the end. The woman clothed with the sun (Rev. xii. 1.) is designed as an emblem of the true church; as the woman arrayed in purple and scarlet (Rev. xvii. 4.) is the portrait of a corrupt communion. No commentator ever conceived the whore of Babylon to be meant of a single woman: and why then should the man of sin be taken for a single man? The man of sin seemeth to be expressed from Daniel (vii. 24.) according to the Greek translation, ὃς ὑπεροσσει κακοῖς πάντας τοὺς ἔμπροσθεν, he shall exceed in evil all who went before him: and he may fulfil the character either by promoting wickedness in general, or by advancing idolatry in particular, as the word sin frequently signifies in Scripture. The son of perdition is also the denomination of the traitor Judas, (John xvii. 12.) which implies that the man of sin should be, like Judas, a false apostle, like him betray Christ, and like him be devoted to destruction. Who opposeth and exalteth himself above all that is called God, or that is worshipped: this is manifestly copied from Daniel, He shall exalt himself, and magnify himself above every God, and speak marvellous things against the God of gods. The features, you see, exactly resemble each other. He opposeth and exalteth himself above all, ἐπὶ πάντα above every one, that is called God, or that is worshipped: ἢ σέβασμα, alluding to the title of the Roman emperors, σεβαστὸς, august or venerable. He shall oppose, for the prophets speak of things future as present; he shall oppose, and exalt himself not only above inferior magistrates, who are sometimes called gods in Holy Writ, but even above the greatest emperors, and shall arrogate to himself divine honours. So that he as God sitteth in the temple of God, showing himself that he is God: by the temple of God the apostle could not well mean the temple of Jerusalem, because that he knew very well would be totally destroyed within a few years. It is an observation of the learned Bochart, that ¹ after the death of Christ the temple at Jerusalem is never called by the apostles the temple of God; and if at any time they make mention of the house or temple of God, they mean the church in general, or every particular believer. It is certain, the temple or house of God is the Christian church in the usual style of the apostles. St. Paul thus addresseth the Corinthians in his first epistle, (iii. 16, 17.) Know ye not that ye are the temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you? If any man defile the temple of God, him shall God destroy: for the temple of God is holy, which temple ye are: and thus again in his second epistle, (vi. 16.) What agreement hath the temple of God with idols? for ye are the temple of the living God. He adviseth Timothy (1 Tim. iii. 15.) how he ought to behave himself in the house of God, which is the church of the living God, as a pillar and ground of the truth. St. John also writeth thus to the angel of the church in Philadelphia, (Rev. iii. 12.) Him that overcometh will I make a pillar in the temple of my God. These few examples out of many are sufficient to prove, that under the Gospel dispensation the temple of God is the church of Christ: and the man of sin's sitting implies his ruling and presiding there, and sitting there as God implies his claiming divine authority in things spiritual as well as temporal, and showing himself that he is God implies his doing it with great pride and pomp, with great parade and ostentation.

¹ ἡ articulus additus significat insignem illam et ante prædictam defectionem. [Translated in the text.] Erasm. in locum.

² D. Ambrosius, ut explicaret vim articuli, legit homo ille, &c. [Translated in the text.] Erasm. ibid.

¹ Verum a Christi obitu templum Hierosolymitanum nunquam ab apostolis templum Dei vocatur; et si quando de Dei aede vel templo sermonem habeant, tum vel ecclesiam in genere, vel singularem quemque fidelem, iis vocibus intellecta volunt. [Translated in the text.] Bocharti Examen libelli de Antichristo, Tom. II. col. 1047.

These things were not asserted now merely to serve the present occasion. The apostle had insisted upon these topics while he was at Thessalonica, so that he thought it a part of his duty, as he made it a part of his preaching and doctrine, to forewarn his new converts of the grand apostacy that would infest the church, (ver. 5, 6, 7.) Remember ye not, that when I was yet with you, I told you these things? And now ye know what withholdeth, that he might be revealed in his time. For the mystery of iniquity doth already work; only he who now letteth, will let, until he be taken out of the way. The man of sin therefore was not then revealed. His time was not yet come, or the season for his manifestation. The mystery of iniquity was indeed already working; for there is a mystery of iniquity as well as a mystery of godliness, (1 Tim. iii. 16.) the one in direct opposition to the other. The seeds of corruption were sown, but they were not yet grown up to any maturity. The leaven was fermenting in some parts, but it was far from having yet infected the whole mass. The man of sin was yet hardly conceived in the womb; it must be some time before he could be brought forth. There was some obstacle that hindered his appearance; the apostle speaketh doubtfully whether thing or person; and this obstacle would continue to hinder, till it was taken out of the way. What this was we cannot determine with absolute certainty at so great a distance of time; but if we may rely upon the concurrent testimonies of the fathers, it was the Roman empire. Most probably it was somewhat relating to the higher powers, because the apostle observes such caution. He mentioned it in discourse, but would not commit it to writing. He afterwards exhorts the Thessalonians, (ver. 15.) Brethren, stand fast, and hold the traditions which ye have been taught, whether by word or our epistle. This was one of the traditions which he thought more proper to teach by word than by epistle.

When this obstacle shall be removed, then, as the apostle proceeds, (ver. 8.) shall that Wicked be revealed, whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of his coming. Nothing can be plainer than that ὁ ἄνομος, the lawless, the wicked one here mentioned, and the man of sin must be one and the same person. The apostle was speaking before of what hindered that he should be revealed, and would continue to hinder until it was taken out of the way: And then shall the wicked one be revealed, whom the Lord shall consume, &c. Not that he should be consumed immediately after he was revealed, but the apostle, to comfort the Thessalonians, no sooner mentions his revelation, than he foretels also his destruction, even before he describes his other qualifications. His other qualifications should have been described first in order of time, but the apostle hastens to what was first and warmest in his thoughts and wishes. Whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of his coming. If these two clauses refer to two distinct and different events, the meaning manifestly is, that the Lord Jesus shall gradually consume him with the free preaching and publication of his word, and shall utterly destroy him at his second coming in the glory of his Father with the holy angels. If these two clauses relate to one and the same event, it is a pleonasm that is very usual in the sacred as well as in all oriental writings; and the purport plainly is, that the Lord Jesus shall destroy him with the greatest facility, when he shall be revealed from heaven (as the apostle hath expressed it in the preceding chapter) with his mighty angels, in flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ.

The apostle was eager to foretel the destruction of the man of sin; and for this purpose, having broken in upon his subject, he now returns to it again, and describes the other qualifications by which this wicked one should advance and establish himself in the world. He should rise to credit and authority by the most diabolical methods, should pretend to supernatural powers, and boast of revelations, visions, and miracles, false in themselves, and applied to promote false doctrines, (ver. 9.) Whose coming is after the working of Satan, with all power, and signs, and lying wonders. He should likewise practise all other wicked arts of deceit, should be guilty of the most impious frauds and impositions upon mankind, but should prevail only among those who are destitute of a sincere affection for the truth, whereby they might obtain eternal salvation, (ver. 10.) And with all deceivableness of unrighteousness, in them that perish, because they received not the love of the truth, that they might be saved. And indeed it is a just and righteous judgment of God, to give them over to vanities and lies in this world, and to condemnation in the next, who have no regard for truth and virtue, but delight in falsehood and wickedness, (ver. 11 and 12.) And for this cause God shall send them strong delusion, that they should believe a lie: That they all might be damned, who believed not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness.

II. Upon this survey there appears little room to doubt of the genuine sense and meaning of the passage; but it hath strangely been mistaken and misapplied by some famous commentators, though more agree in the interpretation than in the application of this prophecy.

1. Excellently learned as Grotius was, a consummate scholar, a judicious critic, a valuable author; yet was he certainly no prophet, nor son of a prophet. In explaining the prophecies, scarcely have more mistakes been committed by any of the worst and weakest commentators, than by him who is usually one of the best and ablest. He understands this prophecy of the times preceding the destruction of Jerusalem. *The man of sin*¹ was the Roman emperor Caligula, who did not at first discover his wicked disposition. He vainly preferred himself before all the gods of the nation, even before Jupiter Olympius and Capitolinus, and ordered his statue to be set up in the temple at Jerusalem. He was hindered from disclosing and exercising his intended malice against the Jews by his awe of Vitellius, who was at that time governor of Syria and Judea, and was as powerful as he was beloved in those provinces. What follows, Grotius could not by any means accommodate to Caligula, and therefore substitutes another, and supposes that the wicked one was Simon Magus, who was revealed and came to Rome soon after the beginning of the reign of Claudius. He was there baffled and disgraced by St. Peter; but Christ may well be said to have done what was done by Peter. He pretended also to work great miracles, and by his magical illusions deceived many, the Samaritans first, and afterwards the Romans. But in answer it may be observed, that this epistle of St. Paul, as² all other good critics and chronologers agree, and as is evident indeed from history, was written in the latter part of the reign of Claudius, who was successor to Caligula; and if so, the apostle, according to this interpretation, is here prophesying of things which were past already. The coming of Christ, as it hath been before proved undeniably, relates to a more distant period than the destruction of Jerusalem. Besides, how could Caligula, with any tolerable sense and meaning, be called an apostate from either the Jewish or the Christian religion? He never sat in the temple of God; he commanded, indeed, his statue to be placed there, but was dissuaded from his purpose, as ¹ Philo testifies, by the entreaties of king Agrippa, and sent an order to Petronius, governor of Syria, not to make any innovation in the temple of the Jews. He was so far from being kept in awe by the virtues of Vitellius, that Vitellius, on the contrary, was a most sordid adulator, as both ² Tacitus and Suetonius expressly affirm, and instead of restraining Caligula from affecting divine honours, he was the first who incited him to it. Moreover, it is doing the greatest violence to the context, to make the man of sin and the wicked one two distinct persons, when they are so manifestly one and the same. The contest between St. Peter and Simon Magus at Rome, if ever it happened at all, did not happen in the reign of Claudius, but most probably there never was any such transaction; the whole story is probably a fabulous legend, and consequently can be no foundation for a true exposition of any prophecy. Where too is the consistency and propriety in interpreting the coming of Christ, in ver. 1. of the destruction of Jerusalem, and in ver. 8. of the destruction of Simon Magus, though Simon Magus was not destroyed, but was only thrown out of his chariot, and his leg broken in the fall? These are some of the absurdities in Grotius's interpretation and application of this prophecy, which you may see more largely exposed and refuted by ³ Bochart among the foreign, and by Dr. Henry More among our English writers.

¹ Denudet ingenium suum Caius.—Sic et Caius omnibus se Diis gentium prætulit, etiam Jovi Olympio et Capitolino.—Recte autem dicitur Caius semet posuisse in templo Dei, quia simulacrum suum ibi collocari jussit.—L. Vitellius, cum Paulus ista diceret, et hæc scriberet, Syriam et Judæam tenebat, vir apud Judæos gratosus, et magnis exercitibus imperans, cui propterea facile fuisset, si tam graviter Judæorum animos exasperasset Caius, eorum tutelam suscipere et provinciam sui facere juris. Ideo Caius, antequam propositum exsequeretur, tempus exspectabat quo L. Vitellius e provinciâ decederet.—Recte autem impius dicitur Simon Magus, qui paulo post initia Claudiani principatus Romam venit.—Bene autem dicitur Christus fecisse quod fecit per Petrum.—Ostenta ista et prodigia Simonis magica, &c.—Decipiuntur ab eo homines malè perituri. Intelligit Samaritanæ primum, deinde et Romanos. [Let Caius lay open his wicked disposition.—Thus Caius preferred himself before all the gods of the nations, even before Jupiter Olympius and Capitolinus.—It is said with propriety, that Caius “had seated himself in the temple of God,” for he had ordered his image to be placed there.—L. Vitellius, at the time that Paul spake and wrote these words, was governor of Syria and Judæa, a man very acceptable to the Jews, and commanding a powerful army. To him, on that account, it would have been a very easy matter, if Caius had so much exasperated the minds of the Jews, to have obtained, by patronizing them, the sovereignty of that province.—Therefore Caius, before he executed his design, waited till Vitellius should depart from the province.—With propriety, Simon Magus is called “the wicked one.” He, soon after Claudius began to reign, came to Rome.—Christ may well be said to have done that which he did by Peter. The prodigies and magical deceptions of Simon, &c. Men that were to perish miserably are deceived by him.—He means the Samaritans first, and after them the Romans.] Vide Grot. in locum et de Antichristo.

² Pearsonii Annales Paulini, p. 13. Sam. Basnagii Annales, A.D. 51. sect. lxxiv. A.D. 52. sect. xii. Whitby Pref. Calmet. Pref. &c. &c.

2. Dr. Hammond is every where full of Simon Magus and the Gnostics, so that it is the less to be wondered that he should introduce them upon this occasion, and apply this whole prophecy to them, wherein he is more consistent than Grotius, who applies part to Simon Magus and part to Caligula. The apostacy, ⁴ according to him, was a great departure and defection from the faith to the heresy of the Gnostics. The man of sin and the wicked one was Simon Magus, that wicked impostor, together with his followers the Gnostics. What hindered their showing themselves and making open profession of their hostility against the orthodox Christians, was the apostles not having yet given over preaching to the Jews, and turned to the Gentiles. This same magician opposed himself

¹ Philo de Legatione ad Caium. μηδὲν ἐπὶ τῷ ἱερῷ τῶν Ἰουδαίων ἐπὶ νεώτερον κινεῖν. nequid in Judæorum templo novaret. [That he should not make any innovation in the temple of the Jews.] P. 1038. Edit. Paris. 1640.

² Exemplar apud posteros adulatorii dedecoris habetur. [By posterity he is regarded as a pattern of disgraceful adulation.] Tacit. Annal. Lib. vi. p. 71. Edit. Lipsii. Idem miri in adulando ingenii, primus C. Cæsarem adorari ut Deum instituit. [This same man, who had a wonderful talent at flattery, was the first that prompted Cæsar to affect divine honours.] Suet. in Vitellio, sect. ii.

³ Bocharti Examen libelli de Antichristo. Op. Tom. II. col. 1044—1051. More's Mystery of Iniquity, Part ii. Book ii. chap. xx.

⁴ See Hammond's Paraphrase and Annotations.

against Christ, setting himself up for the chief or first God, superior to all other Gods; and accordingly was publicly worshipped by the Samaritans and others, and had a statue erected to him at Rome by the emperor Claudius. Him Christ destroyed in an extraordinary manner by the preaching and miracles of St. Peter, and all the apostatizing Gnostics who adhered to him were involved in the destruction of the unbelieving Jews, with whom they had joined against the Christians. But the principal objection to this exposition is the same as to that of Grotius, that the apostle is here made to foretel things after the events. Simon Magus was already revealed, (Acts viii. 9, 10.) and had bewitched the people of Samaria, giving out that himself was some great one; to whom they all gave heed from the least to the greatest, saying, This man is the great power of God. Dr. Hammond himself contends that Simon came to Rome, and was there honoured as God, at the beginning of the reign of Claudius; but this Epistle was written in the latter part of the same reign, and even the Doctor in ¹ another place confesseth it. The apostles too had already turned from the Jews to the Gentiles. Paul and Barnabas had declared to the Jews at Antioch, in Pisidia, (Acts xiii. 46.) It was necessary that the word of God should first have been spoken to you; but seeing ye put it from you, and judge yourselves unworthy of everlasting life, lo, we turn to the Gentiles: but this transaction was before this Epistle was written, and indeed before ever Paul went to Thessalonica. As part of the facts here predicted as future were already past, so the other part are manifestly false, or of uncertain credit at best. The statue erected to Simon Magus at Rome, and his public defeat there by the preaching and miracles of St. Peter, in the presence of the emperor, are no better than fables. Even papists doubt the truth of these things, and well may others deny it. Simon Magus might perhaps have many followers, but it doth not appear that many of the Christians apostatized to him. Simon Magus might perhaps be worshipped by the Samaritans, but it doth not appear that he was ever worshipped in the temple of God in Jerusalem, or in any house of God belonging to the Christians. He died by all accounts some years before the destruction of Jerusalem, and it doth not appear that any of the Gnostics were involved in the destruction of the unbelieving Jews. They were so far from being all involved in the same destruction, as Dr. Hammond asserts, that that sect flourished most after the destruction of Jerusalem, and the second century after Christ is sometimes distinguished by the title of Seculum Gnosticum, or the age of the Gnostics. Besides, when it is said, Whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of his coming, it is evident that the same person who was to be consumed with the spirit of his mouth was also to be destroyed with the brightness of his coming: but according to this exposition, Simon Magus was consumed by the spirit of his mouth, that is, by the prayer and preaching of St. Peter; and the unbelieving Jews and Gnostics were destroyed together by the brightness of his coming, that is, by the destruction of Jerusalem. They who desire to see a farther refutation of this exposition may find it in ¹ Le Clerc among the foreign, and in Whitby among our English commentators.

¹ See his Pref. to the 1st Epist. to the Thessalonians.

3. Le Clerc, whose comment on the New Testament is a translation and supplement of Hammond's, hath not demolished his hypothesis without erecting ² another of his own, which he esteems much more probable than the conjecture both of Grotius and Hammond. He supposeth that the apostacy was the great revolt of the Jews from the Romans. The man of sin was the rebellious Jews, and especially their famous leader Simon, not Magus, but the son of Gioras. They trampled upon all authority, divine and human. They seized and profaned the temple of God. What hindered was what restrained the Jews from breaking into open rebellion, which was partly the reverence of the Jewish magistrates, and partly the fear of the Roman armies. The mystery of iniquity was the spirit of rebellion, then working under the mask of liberty. The seditious Jews were also the wicked one; and they had among them false prophets and impostors, who pretended to show great signs and wonders. But to this hypothesis it may be replied, that the apostacy is plainly a defection from the true religion, and it is used in no other sense by the apostle. It was not likely that he should entertain his new Gentile converts with discourses about the Jewish state and government, wherewith they had little concern or connexion. It was also scarce worthy of the spirit of prophecy to say, that the destruction of Jerusalem should not happen unless there was first a rebellion of the Jews. No good reason is assigned why Simon the son of Gioras should be reputed the man of sin, rather than other factious leaders, John and Eleazar. No proof is alleged that he was ever worshipped in the temple of God as God. He was not exalted above every God or emperor; for he was vanquished and made the emperor's prisoner. His coming was not with all signs and lying wonders; for he never pretended to any such power. He was not destroyed in the destruction of Jerusalem, but was preserved alive, and ¹ was afterwards led in triumph at Rome, and then was dragged through the streets with a rope about his neck, and was severely scourged, and at last put to death in the common prison. Besides, it is not very consistent in this learned critic, by the coming of Christ, in ver. 8. to understand the destruction of Jerusalem; and in his note upon ver. 1. to say that ² the coming of Christ, both in the first Epistle to the Thessalonians and in this, is the coming of Christ to judge the quick and dead.

¹ Clericus in locum. Whitby's Pref. to the 2d Epist. to the Thessalonians.

² Nihil vetat in medium suspicionem proferre, quæ haud paulo verisimilior videtur, et Grotianâ et Hammondianâ conjecturâ. Ἀποστασίαν ergo suspicor Paulum vocare defectionem illam magnam Judæorum, quâ imperii Romani jugum excutere frustra conaturi sunt,—sequitur hominem peccati esse rebelles Judæos; et præsertim eximium eorum ducem Simonem, non Magum, sed Gioræ filium.—Seditiosi Judæi auctoritatem omnem legitimam, cum exteriorum, tum popularium, tantum abest ut coluerint, ut contrâ sese eâ superiores existimarent. Scelerati illi Zelotæ et Idumæi, qui templum Jerosolymitanum invaserant, &c.—Τὸ κατέχον est quod coercerat Judæos, ne in âpertam rebellionem erumperent; hoc est, partim reverentia procerum Judææ gentis,—partim metus exercituum Romanorum, &c. Μυστήριον ἀνομίας, quod fieri incipiebat hoc tempore, erat in eo situm, ut specie libertatis, &c.—Verè quidem noster ἀνομον vocari animadvertit scelestos homines, qui antea designati fuerunt voce ὁ ἀντικείμενος; sed intelligendi seditiosi Judæi, &c.—Fuere et alii impostores, quorum non uno loco meminit Josephus, &c. [“ Nothing forbids my bringing forward a conjecture which appears to be more probable than either that advanced by Grotius or Hammond. I think that by ἀποστασίαν [apostacy] Paul intends that great revolt of the Jews, whereby they would vainly attempt to shake off the yoke of the Romans.—It follows that by the man of sin, are intended the rebellious Jews, and especially Simon, not he who is called Magus, but the son of Gioras. The seditious Jews were so far from respecting the lawful authority either of foreigners or of their own people, that on the contrary they considered themselves as superior to both. The wicked zealots and Idumeans, who had seized the temple of Jerusalem, &c. Τὸ κατέχον [that which letteth] was that which restrained the Jews from breaking out into open rebellion,—that was, partly their reverence for the Jewish nation, and partly their fear of the Roman army.—Μυστήριον ἀνομίας, [the mystery of iniquity,] which began about this time, consisted in this, that under the mask of liberty, &c.—Truly indeed our author hath observed, that by ἀνομον [the wicked one,] are designed profligate and abandoned persons, who were before pointed out by the word ὁ ἀντικείμενος [he that opposeth himself,] but the seditious Jews are here to be understood, &c. There were other impostors, of whom Josephus frequently makes mention,” &c.] Cleric. in locum.

4. Dr. Whitby's ³ scheme is somewhat perplexed and confused, as if he was not satisfied himself with his own explication. "The apostacy is the revolt of the Jews from the Roman empire, or from the faith." If the former, it is the same mistaken notion as Le Clerc's. If the latter, it is true that many were to apostatize from the faith, before the destruction of Jerusalem, according to the prediction of our Saviour; but it doth not appear that their number was so very great, as to deserve to be called, by way of eminence and distinction, the apostacy. "The man of sin is the Jewish nation, with their high-priest and sanhedrim." But the Jewish nation, with their high-priest and sanhedrim, could not be said to apostatize from the faith which they never received; and those Christian Jews who did apostatize were never united under any one head or leader, famous or infamous enough to merit the title of the man of sin. The Jewish nation too, with their high-priest and sanhedrim, were already revealed; and most of the instances which this author allegeth, of their opposing the Christian religion, and exalting themselves above all laws divine and human, were prior to the date of this Epistle. He was himself aware of this objection, and endeavours to prevent it by saying, "that these are the descriptions of the man of sin, by which the Thessalonians might then know him, and they run all in the present tense, showing what he already did." But it is the known and usual style of prophecy to speak of things future as present, intimating that though future, they are as sure and certain as if they were even now present. "He who now letteth is the Roman emperor Claudius, and he will let until he be taken out of the way, that is, he will hinder the Jews from breaking out into an open rebellion in his time, they being so signally and particularly obliged by him." But how utterly improbable it is, that the apostle should talk and write of Jewish politics to Gentile converts! If Claudius withheld the Jews from revolting from the Roman government, did he withhold them also from apostatizing from the Christian faith? or what was it that withheld them? and what then becomes of that interpretation? "When Claudius shall be taken out of the way, as he was by poison, then they shall be revealed, either by actual apostacy from the Roman government, or by the great apostacy of the believers of that nation." But the apostacy of believers was not near so great nor universal as the apostacy from the Roman government. Here too is the same ambiguity and uncertainty as before. The prophecy plainly intends one sort of apostacy, and this learned commentator proposeth two, and inclines sometimes to the one, and sometimes to the other, as may best suit his hypothesis. He is guilty too of the same inconsistency as Le Clerc, in interpreting the coming of Christ in the former Epistle, and in this Epistle, and in the first verse of this very chapter, of his coming to judge the world; and yet, in verse the eighth, of his coming to destroy Jerusalem. But if the destruction of Jerusalem only was meant, what need had the Thessalonians to be under such consternation, to be shaken in mind, and to be troubled, that the wrath is come upon them to the uttermost, as the apostle saith, (1 Thess. ii. 15, 16.) who both killed the Lord Jesus, and their own prophets, and have persecuted us; and they please not God, and are contrary to all men, forbidding us to speak to the Gentiles, that they might be saved. It was matter of consolation, rather than of trouble or terror to the Thessalonians; and as such the apostle mentions it in his former Epistle.

¹ Josephus de Bell. Jud. Lib. vii. cap. v. sect. vi. Edit. Hudson.

² Παρουσία Christi et in 1 Ep. ad Thessalonicenses, et in hac est adventus Christi, ad judicandum de vivis et mortuis. [Translated in the text.] Cleric. ibid.

³ See Whitby's Paraphrase and Commentary.

5. But of all the applications of this prophecy, none is more extraordinary than that of the late professor Wetstein, the learned and laborious editor of the New Testament, with the various readings and copious annotations. "By the man of sin and the wicked one, he ¹ understands Titus or the Flavian family. The mystery of iniquity was then working, because at that time Vespasian had borne the office of consul, had received the honours of a triumph, and even under Caligula had entertained some hopes of the empire. He who letteth was Nero, who was now adopted by the emperor." One is really ashamed and grieved to see a scholar and critic fall into such absurdities. What! was Titus then, as well as the emperor Julian, an apostate? Was he, who was one of the best emperors, the love and delight of mankind, to be branded with the odious appellations of the man of sin and the wicked one? Even Domitian was not worse than several other emperors, both before and after him. How did Titus and the Flavian family oppose and exalt themselves above every God or emperor? How did they as God sit in the temple of God, showing themselves that they were Gods? Why was Vespasian's hoping for the empire the mystery of iniquity more than Galba's, or Otho's, or Vitellius's hoping for the same? When Nero was taken out of the way, were not these three emperors, Galba, Otho, and Vitellius, all revealed before the Flavian family? How was the coming of Titus and the Flavian family with all power, and signs, and lying wonders, and with all deceivableness of unrighteousness? How were their adherents and followers such eminently as received not the love of truth that they might be saved, but believed a lie, that they might be damned, and had pleasure in unrighteousness? How were Titus and the Flavian family destroyed in the destruction of Jerusalem, when they were themselves the destroyers of it, and reigned several years afterwards? Was there an illustrious coming of Christ, when Titus or any of the Flavian family died? Or how can the Lord be said to consume them with the spirit of his mouth, and to destroy them with the brightness of his coming? It surpasseth all comprehension, how this learned professor could think of such an application, without asking himself some such questions; or how he could ask himself any such questions, without clearly perceiving the impossibility of answering them. We cannot suppose that he would have made a compliment of his religion, but he hath certainly of his understanding, to Cardinal Quirini, in this instance as well as in his comment upon the Revelation, which, ¹ as he humbly hopeth, will not displease his eminency, and then he shall be transcendently happy.

¹ Intelligo Titum sive domum Flavianam—μυστήριον τῆς ἀνομίας, Eo tempore Vespasianus consulatum jam gesserat, triumphalia acceperat, et jam sub Caio in spem imperii venerat.—ὁ κατέχων, Nero jam adoptatus erat, &c. [Translated in the text.] Wetstenius in locum.

It is a farther objection to Wetstein, as also to Grotius, Hammond, Le Clerc, and Whitby, that they are so singular in their opinions; they differ as much from one another as from the generality of interpreters; and as they dissent from all who went before them, so they are followed by none who came after them. If this prophecy was fulfilled, as these critics conceive, before the destruction of Jerusalem, it is surprising that none of the fathers should agree with any of them in the same application, and that the discovery should first be made sixteen or seventeen hundred years after the completion. The fathers might differ and be mistaken in the circumstances of a prophecy which was yet to be fulfilled; but that a prophecy should be remarkably accomplished before their time, and they be totally ignorant of it, and speak of the accomplishment as still future, is not very credible, and will always be a strong presumptive argument against any such interpretation. The foundation of all the mistakes of these learned men is their interpreting the coming of Christ, of the destruction of Jerusalem; whereas the context, as it hath been shown, plainly evinces, and they themselves at other times acknowledge, that it is to be understood of his coming to judge the world. They therefore bid fairer for the true interpretation, who apply this prophecy to events after the destruction of Jerusalem.

¹ — cui si, uti spero, vel interpretationem Apocalypseos, vel conatum saltem meum non displicuisse intellexero, sublimi feriam sidera vertice. ["Whom if, as I hope, I shall understand, that my interpretation of the Revelation, or at least the attempt that I have made, has not displeased, I shall transcendently exult."] Idem de Interpret. Apoc. Tom. II. p. 394.

6. Of those who apply this prophecy to events after the destruction of Jerusalem, some papists, and some persons who think like papists, contend that the character of the man of sin was drawn for the great impostor Mohammed; and it must be confessed, that the portrait resembles him in many respects. He was, indeed, a man of sin, both in life and in doctrine. He might be said to sit in the temple of God, when he converted the churches into mosques. He likewise rose upon the ruins of the Roman empire, and the Roman empire is generally thought to be what withholdeth. But though some features are alike, yet others are very much unlike, and demonstrate a manifest difference. He was not properly an apostate, for he and his countrymen the Arabians were not Christians but heathens, though he made many Christians afterwards apostatize from the faith. The mystery of iniquity, as we have seen, was working in the days of the apostles, but there were not then any indications of the rise and increase of Mohammedism; it sprung up of a sudden, like a mushroom, whose seeds the winds scattered over the face of the earth. The apostacy was to precede and introduce the man of sin, but this man of sin was the first author of this apostacy. And what is the most material, he never pretended to confirm his mission, or authorize his doctrine by miracles. His coming was not with all power, and signs, and lying wonders; on the contrary, he¹ declared, that "God had sent Moses and Jesus with miracles, and yet men would not be obedient to their word, and therefore he had now sent him in the last place without miracles, to force them by the power of the sword to do his will." Some of his followers have ascribed miracles to him, but, as Dr. Prideaux observes, "those who relate them are only such who are reckoned among their fabulous and legendary writers. Their learned doctors renounce them all, as doth Mohammed himself, who in several places in his Koran owns that he wrought no miracles."

7. Others of the papists affirm, that the apostacy is the falling away from the church of Rome by the doctrines of the Reformation. But who then is the man of sin, Luther and his followers, or Calvin and his followers, or who? for the Protestants are far from being united under any one head. Which of the Protestant churches exalts herself above every God and magistrate? Which of them arrogates to herself divine honours and titles? Which of them pretends to establish her doctrine and discipline by miracles? These things would be ridiculously and absurdly objected to the Protestant Churches, and more ridiculously and absurdly still by the members of the Church of Rome.

¹ See Prideaux's Life of Mahomet, p. 26 and 28. 8th edit. 1723.

8. The greater part of the Romish doctors, it must be confessed, give another interpretation, and acknowledge that ¹ the fathers and the best interpreters understand this unanimously of Antichrist, who will appear in the world before the great day of judgment, to combat religion and the saints. But then they conceive that Antichrist is not yet revealed, that he is only one man, and that he will continue only three years and a half. But we have shown before, that the man of sin is not a single man, any more than the whore of Babylon is a single woman. The one as well as the other is to be understood of a whole order and succession of persons. The mystery of iniquity was working and preparing the way for the man of sin even in the apostle's days; and is it not very extraordinary that 1700 years should elapse, and that he should not yet be revealed? What withholdeth, they say, was the Roman empire: and the Roman empire might be powerful enough to hinder his appearance at that time, but how hath it withheld and hindered all this while? As this evil began in the apostle's days, and was to continue in the world till the second coming of Christ in power and great glory, it necessarily follows that it was to be carried on not by one man, but by a succession of men in several ages. It cannot be taking root and growing imperceptibly 1700 years and more, and yet flourish under its chief head only three years and a half. There needeth not surely so much preparation for so little effect. Neither are three years and a half a period sufficient for Antichrist to act the parts and to fulfil the characters which are assigned him; unless he hath also this property of divinity, that one day is with him as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day.

III. The detection of falsehood is the next step towards the discovery of truth: and having seen how this passage hath been mistaken and misapplied by some famous commentators, we may be the better enabled to vindicate and establish what we conceive to be the only true and legitimate application. The Thessalonians, from some expressions in the former epistle, were alarmed, as if the end of the world was at hand, and Christ was coming to judgment. The apostle, to correct their mistakes and dissipate their fears, assures them, that the coming of Christ will not be yet awhile; there will be first a great apostacy or defection of Christians from the true faith and worship. This apostacy all the concurrent marks and characters will justify us in charging upon the church of Rome. The apostle mentions this apostacy in another place, (1 Tim. iv. 1, &c.) and specifies some articles, as doctrines of dæmons, forbidding to marry, and commanding to abstain from meats, which will warrant the same conclusion. The true Christian worship is the worship of the one only God, through the one only Mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus: and from this worship the church of Rome hath notoriously departed by substituting other mediators, and invoking and adoring saints and angels. Nothing is apostacy, if idolatry be not; and the same kind of idolatry is practised in the church of Rome, that the prophets and inspired writers arraign and condemn as apostacy and rebellion in the Jewish church. The Jews never totally rejected the true God, but only worshipped him through the medium of some image, or in conjunction with some other beings: and are not the members of the church of Rome ¹ guilty of the same idolatry and apostacy in the worship of images, in the adoration of the host, in the invocation of angels and saints, and in the oblation of prayers and praises to the Virgin Mary, as much or more than to God blessed for ever? This is the grand corruption of the Christian church, this is the apostacy, as it is emphatically called, and deserves to be called, the apostacy, that the apostle had warned the Thessalonians of before, the apostacy that had also been foretold by the prophet Daniel.

¹ Les Pères et les meilleurs interprètes entendent unanimement ceci de l'Anti-Christ, qui doit paroître dans le monde avant le grand jour du jugement, pour combattre la religion et les saints. [Translated in the text.] Calmet, Comment. et Dissertation sur l'Anti-Christ.

If the apostacy be rightly charged upon the church of Rome, it follows of consequence that the man of sin is the pope, not meaning this or that pope in particular, but the pope in general, as the chief head and supporter of this apostacy. The apostacy produces him, and he again promotes the apostacy. He is properly the man of sin, not only on account of the scandalous lives of many popes, but by reason of their more scandalous doctrines and principles, dispensing with the most necessary duties, and granting or rather selling pardons and indulgences to the most abominable crimes. Or if by sin be meant idolatry particularly, as in the Old Testament, it is evident to all how he hath corrupted the worship of God, and perverted it from spirit and truth to superstition and idolatry of the grossest kind. He also, like the false apostle Judas, is the son of perdition, whether actively as being the cause and occasion of destruction to others, or passively as being destined and devoted to destruction himself. He opposeth; he is the great adversary to God and man, excommunicating and anathematizing, persecuting and destroying by croisadoes and inquisitions, by massacres and horrid executions, those sincere Christians, who prefer the word of God to all the authority of men. The Heathen emperor of Rome may have slain his thousand of innocent Christians, but the Christian bishop of Rome hath slain his ten thousands. There is scarce any country, that hath not at one time or other been made the stage of these bloody tragedies : scarce any age, that hath not in one place or other seen them acted. He exalteth himself above all that is called God or that is worshipped; not only above inferior magistrates, but likewise above bishops and primates, exerting an absolute jurisdiction and uncontrolled supremacy over all; not only above bishops and primates, but likewise above kings and emperors, deposing some, and advancing others, obliging them to prostrate themselves before him, to kiss his toe, to hold his stirrup, to ¹ wait barefooted at his gate, treading ² even upon the neck, and ³ kicking off the imperial crown with his foot; nor only above kings and emperors, but likewise above Christ and God himself, making the word of God of none effect by his traditions, forbidding what God hath commanded, as marriage, communion in both kinds, the use of the Scriptures in the vulgar tongue, and the like, and also commanding or allowing what God hath forbidden, as idolatry, persecution, works of supererogation, and various other instances. So that he as God sitteth in the temple of God, showing himself that he is God. He is therefore in profession a Christian, and a Christian bishop. His sitting in the temple of God, plainly implies his having a seat or cathedra in the Christian church: and he sitteth there as God, especially at his inauguration, when he sitteth upon the high altar in St. Peter's church, and maketh the table of the Lord his foot stool, and in that position receiveth adoration. At all times he exerciseth divine authority in the church, showing himself that he is God, affecting divine titles and attributes, as holiness and infallibility, assuming divine powers and prerogatives in condemning and absolving men, in retaining and forgiving sins, in asserting his decrees to be of the same or greater authority than the word of God, and commanding them to be received under the penalty of the same or greater damnation. Like another Salmoneus he is proud to imitate the state and thunder of the Almighty; and is styled, and pleased to be ⁴ styled, "Our Lord God the pope; another God upon earth; king of kings, and lord of lords. The same is the dominion of God and the pope. To believe that our Lord God the pope might not decree, as he decreed, it were a matter of heresy. The power of the pope is greater than all created power, and extends itself to things celestial, terrestrial, and infernal. The pope

¹ See Stillingfleet's Discourse concerning the Idolatry of the church of Rome, chap. i. and ii. Vol. V. of his Works.

¹ As Hildebrand or Gregory VII. did to Henry IV.

² As Alexander III. did to Frederic I.

³ As Celestine did to Henry VI.

⁴ Dominus Deus noster papa. Alter Deus in terra. Rex regum, dominus dominorum. Idem est dominium Dei et papæ. Credere Dominum Deum nostrum papam non potuisse statuere, prout statuit, hæreticum censeretur. Papæ potestas est major omni potestate creata, extenditque se ad cælestia, terrestria, et infernalìa. Papa facit quicquid libet, etiam illicita, et est plus quam Deus. [Translated in the text.] See these and the like instances quoted in Bishop Jewel's Apology and Defence, in Downham's Treatise de Antichristo, and Poole's English Annotations. See likewise Barrow's Treatise of the Pope's Supremacy in the Introduction.

doeth whatsoever he listeth, even things unlawful, and is more than God." Such blasphemies are not only allowed, but are even approved, encouraged, rewarded in the writers of the church of Rome; and they are not only the extravagances of private writers, but are the language even of public decretals and acts of councils. So that the pope is evidently the God upon earth: at least there is no one like him, who exalteth himself above every God; no one like him, who sitteth as God in the temple of God, showing himself that he is God.

But if the bishop of Rome be the man of sin, it may seem somewhat strange that the apostle should mention these things in an Epistle to the Thessalonians, and not rather in his Epistle to the Romans. But this Epistle was written four or five years before that to the Romans, and there was no occasion to mention the same things again in another Epistle. What was written to the Thessalonians, or any particular church, was in effect written to all the churches, the Epistles being designed for general edification, and intended to be read publicly in the congregations of the faithful. When St. Paul wrote his Epistle to the Romans, he had not been at Rome, and consequently could not allude to any former discourse with them, as with the Thessalonians: and these things were not proper to be fully explained in a letter, and especially in a letter addressed to the Christian converts at the capital city of the empire. The apostles, with all their prudence, were represented as enemies to government, and were charged with turning the world upside down (Acts xvii. 6.); but the accusation would have been sounded higher, if St. Paul had denounced openly, and to Romans too, the destruction of the Roman empire. However he admonished them to beware of apostacy, (Rom. xi. 20. 22.) and to continue in God's goodness, or otherwise they shall be cut off: and afterwards when he visited Rome, and dwelt there two whole years, (Acts xxviii. 30.) he might have frequent opportunities of informing them particularly of these things. It is not to be supposed, that he discoursed of these things only to the Thessalonians. It was a matter of concern to all Christians to be forewarned of the great corruption of Christianity, that they might be neither surprised into it, nor offended at it; and the caution was the more necessary, as the mystery of iniquity was already working. The seeds of popery were sown in the apostle's time; for even then idolatry was stealing into the church, (1 Cor. x. 14.) and a voluntary humility and worshipping of angels, (Col. ii. 18.) strife and divisions, (1 Cor. iii. 3.) an adulterating and handling of the word of God deceitfully, (2 Cor. ii. 17; iv. 2.) a gain of godliness, and teaching of things for filthy lucre's sake, (1 Tim. vi. 5. Tit. i. 11.) a vain observation of festivals, (Gal. iv. 10.) a vain distinction of meats, (1 Cor. viii. 8.) a neglecting of the body, (Col. ii. 23.) traditions, and commandments, and doctrines of men, (Col. ii. 8. 22.) with other corruptions and innovations. All heretics were, in a manner, forerunners of the man of sin; and Simon Magus, in particular, was so lively a type and figure of the wicked one, that he hath been mistaken, as we see, for the wicked one himself.

The foundations of popery were laid indeed in the apostle's days, but the superstructure was raised by degrees, and several ages passed before the building was completed, and the man of sin was revealed in full perfection. St. Paul having communicated to the Thessalonians what it was that hindered his appearance, it was natural for other Christians also who read this epistle, to inquire what withholdeth that he might be revealed in his time; and the apostle without doubt would impart it to other Christians as freely as to the Thessalonians; and the Thessalonians and other Christians might deliver it to their successors, and so the tradition might generally prevail, and the tradition that generally prevailed was that what hindered was the Roman empire: and therefore the primitive Christians in the public offices of the church prayed for its peace and welfare, as knowing that when the Roman empire should be dissolved and broken into pieces, the empire of the man of sin would be raised on its ruins. How this revolution was effected, no writer can better inform us than ¹ Machiavel. "The emperor of Rome, quitting Rome to hold his residence at Constantinople, the Roman empire began to decline, but the church of Rome augmented as fast. Nevertheless, until the coming in of the Lombards, all Italy being under the dominion either of emperors or kings, the bishops assumed no more power than what was due to their doctrine and manners; in civil affairs they were subject to the civil power.—But Theodoric, king of the Goths, fixing his seat at Ravenna, was that which advanced their interest, and made them more considerable in Italy; for there being no other prince left in Rome, the Romans were forced for protection to pay greater allegiance to the pope. And yet their authority advanced no farther at that time, than to obtain the preference before the church of Ravenna. But the Lombards having invaded, and reduced Italy into several cantons, the pope took the opportunity, and began to hold up his head. For being as it were governor and principal at Rome, the emperor of Constantinople and the Lombards bare him a respect, so that the Romans (by mediation of their pope) began to treat and confederate with Longinus [the emperor's lieutenant] and the Lombards, not as subjects, but as equals and companions; which said custom continuing, and the popes entering into alliance sometimes with the Lombards, and sometimes with the Greeks, contracted great reputation to their dignity. But the destruction of the eastern empire following so close under the reign of the emperor Heracleus,—the pope lost the convenience of the emperor's protection in time of adversity, and the power of the Lombards increasing too fast on the other side, he thought it but necessary to address himself to the king of France for assistance.—Gregory the Third being created pope, and Aistolfus king of the Lombards, Aistolfus, contrary to league and agreement, seized upon Ravenna, and made war upon the pope. Gregory not daring (for the reasons abovesaid) to depend upon the weakness of the empire, or the fidelity of the Lombards (whom he had already found false) applied himself to Pepin—for relief against the Lombards. Pepin returned answer, that he would be ready to assist him, but he desired first to have the honour to see him, and pay his personal respects. Upon which invitation pope Gregory went into France, passing through the Lombards' quarters without interruption, so great reverence they bare for religion in those days. Being arrived and honourably received in France, he was after some time dismissed with an army into Italy; which having besieged Pavia, and reduced the Lombards to distress, Aistolfus was constrained to certain terms of agreement with the French, which were obtained by the intercession of the pope.—Among the rest of the articles of that treaty it was agreed, that Aistolfus should restore all the lands he had usurped from the church. But when the French army was returned into France, Aistolfus forgot his engagement, which put the pope upon a second application to king Pepin, who supplied him again, sent a new army into Italy, overcame the Lombards, and possessed himself of Ravenna, and (contrary to the desire of the Grecian emperor) gave it to the pope, with all the lands under that exarchate.—In the interim Aistolfus died, and Desiderio, a Lombard, and duke of Tuscany, taking up arms to succeed him, begged assistance of the pope, with promise of perpetual amity for the future.—At first Desiderio was very punctual,—delivered up the towns as he took them to the pope, according to his engagement to king Pepin; nor was there any exarch sent afterwards from Constantinople to Ravenna, but all was arbitrary, and managed according to the pleasure of the pope. Not long after Pepin died, and Charles, his son, succeeded in the government, who was called the Great, from the greatness of his exploits. About the same time Theodore the First was advanced to the papacy, and falling out with Desiderio, was besieged by him in Rome. In his exigence the pope had recourse to the king of France (as his predecessor had done before him,) and Charles not only supplied him with an army, but marching over the Alps at the head of it himself, he besieged Desiderio in Pavia, took him and his son in it, sent them both prisoners into France, and went in person to Rome to visit the pope, where he adjudged and determined, that his holiness being God's vicar, could not be subject to the judgment of men. For which the pope and people together declared him emperor, and Rome began again to have an emperor of the west: and whereas formerly the popes were confirmed by the emperors, the emperor now in his election was to be beholden to the pope; by which means the power and dignity of the empire declined, and the church began to advance, and by these steps to usurp upon the authority of temporal princes."

¹ Machiavel's Hist. of Florence, Book i. p. 6, &c. of the English translation.

In this manner the emperor of Rome, or he who letteth, was taken out of the way, and the bishop of Rome was advanced in his stead. In the same proportion as the power of the empire decreased, the authority of the church increased, the latter at the expense and ruin of the former; till at length the pope grew up above all, and ὁ ἄνομος, the wicked one, was fully manifested and revealed, or the lawless one, as he may be called; for the pope¹ is declared again and again not to be bound by any law of God or man. His coming is after the energy of Satan, with all power, and signs, and lying wonders, and with all deceivableness of unrighteousness: and doth it require any particular proof, or is it not too generally known, that the pretensions of the pope, and the corruptions of the church of Rome are all supported and authorized by feigned visions and miracles, by pious frauds and impostures of every kind? Bellarmin reckons² the glory of miracles as the eleventh note of the Catholic church, but the apostle assigns them as a distinguishing mark and character of the man of sin. The church of Rome pretends to miracles, Mohammed disclaims them; and this is one very good reason, why the man of sin is the Pope rather than the Turk. There hath been printed at London so lately as in the year 1756, a book entitled, The miraculous power of the church of Christ asserted through each successive century from the apostles down to the present time; and from thence the author draweth the conclusion, that the Catholic church is the true church of Christ. They must certainly not receive the love of the truth, but have pleasure in unrighteousness, who can believe such fabulous and ridiculous legends, who hold it a mortal sin but to doubt of any article of their religion, who deny the free exercise of private judgment, who take away the free use of the holy Scriptures, and so shut up the kingdom of heaven against men, neither going in themselves, neither suffering them, who were entering, to go in. If they will still maintain their miracles to be true, yet they are no proof of the true church, but rather of the contrary. They are the miracles here predicted, and if they were really wrought, were wrought in favour of falsehood: and indeed it is a proper retaliation, that God in his judgments should send men strong delusion that they should believe a lie, who received not the love of the truth that they might be saved; a proper retaliation, that he should suffer some real miracles to be wrought, to deceive those, who have counterfeited so many miracles to deceive others.

But how much soever the man of sin may be exalted, and how long soever he may reign, yet at last the Lord shall consume him with the spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy him with the brightness of his coming. This is partly taken from the prophet Isaiah, (xi. 4.) and with the breath of his lips shall he slay the wicked one: where the Jews, as ¹Lightfoot observes, “put an emphasis upon that word in the prophet, the wicked one, as it appeareth by the Chaldee paraphrast, who hath uttered it, He shall destroy the wicked Roman.” If the two clauses, as it was said before, relate to two different events, the meaning manifestly is, that the Lord Jesus shall gradually consume him with the free preaching of his Gospel, and shall utterly destroy him at his second coming in the glory of his Father. The former began to take effect at the Reformation, and the latter will be accomplished in God's appointed time. The man of sin is now upon the decline, and he will be totally abolished when Christ shall come in judgment. The kingdom of falsehood and sin shall end, and the reign of truth and virtue shall succeed. Great is the truth, and will at last prevail.

¹ See Bishop Jewel's Apology and Defence, p. 313, 314. 430, &c.

² Undecima nota est gloria miraculorum. [The eleventh note is, the glory of miracles.] Bellar. de Notis ecclesiae, Lib. iv. cap. xiv.

The man of sin then, is the same arbitrary and wicked power that is described by Daniel under the characters of the little horn and the mighty king. In St. Paul he is revealed, when the Roman empire is taken out of the way; and in Daniel the Roman empire is first broken into several kingdoms, and he cometh up among them. In St. Paul he opposeth; and in Daniel he doeth according to his will, and weareth out the saints of the most High. In St. Paul he exalteth himself above all that is called God, or that is worshipped, showing himself that he is God; and in Daniel he exalteth himself and magnifieth himself above every God, and speaketh marvellous things against the God of Gods. In St. Paul he is the lawless one; and in Daniel he changeth times and laws. In St. Paul his coming is with all deceivableness of uprightness; and in Daniel he practiseth and prospereth, and through his policy causeth craft to prosper in his hand. According to St. Paul the Lord shall consume him with the spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy him with the brightness of his coming: and according to Daniel a fiery stream shall issue and come forth from the Judge, and his body shall be given to the burning flame, and they shall take away his dominion, to consume and to destroy it unto the end. The characters and the circumstances are so much the same, that they must belong to one and the same person.

The tyrannical power thus described by Daniel and St. Paul, and afterwards by St. John, is both by ancients and moderns generally denominated Antichrist: and the name is proper and expressive enough, as it may signify ²both the enemy of Christ, and the vicar of Christ; and no one is more the enemy of Christ than he who arrogates his name and power, as no one more directly opposes the king than he who assumes his title and authority. The name began to prevail in St. John's time. For he addresseth himself to the Christians as having heard of the coming of Antichrist, and calleth the heretics of his time by the same common name: (1 John ii. 18. 22.) As ye have heard that Antichrist shall come, even now are there many Antichrists: Who is a liar, but he that denieth that Jesus is the Christ? he is Antichrist that denieth the Father and the Son. As St. Paul hath said, the mystery of iniquity doth already work: so St. John speaketh of the spirit of Antichrist as then in the world; (iv. 3.) This is that spirit of Antichrist, whereof ye have heard that it should come, and even now already is it in the world. Afterwards (2 John 7, 8.) he styleth him emphatically the deceiver and the Antichrist, and warneth the Christians to look to themselves. The fathers too speak of Antichrist and of the man of sin as one and the same person; and give much the same interpretation that hath here been given of the whole passage: only it is not to be supposed, that they who wrote before the events could be so very exact in the application of each particular, as those who have the advantage of writing after the events, and of comparing the prophecy and completion together.

¹ Lightfoot's Works, Vol. I. p. 296.

² Ἀντὶ signifies pro, vice, loco [for, in the room of, in the place of,] as well as contra, e regione, ex adverso; against, contrary to, in opposition to, and ἀντιβασιλεὺς is prorex, [a viceroy,] ἀνθύπατος, proconsul, [a proconsul.]

Justin Martyr, who flourished before the middle of the second century, ¹ considers the man of sin, or as he elsewhere calleth him, the man of blasphemy, as altogether the same with the little horn in Daniel; and affirms that he, who shall speak blasphemous words against the Most High, is now at the doors. Iræneus, who lived in the same century, hath written ² a whole chapter of the fraud, and pride, and tyrannical reign of Antichrist, as they are described by Daniel, and St. Paul in his second Epistle to the Thessalonians. Tertullian, who became famous at the latter end of the same century, expounding those words, only he who now letteth will let, until he be taken out of the way, ³ says, “Who can this be but the Roman state, the division of which into ten kingdoms will bring on Antichrist, and then the wicked one shall be revealed.” And in his Apology he ⁴ assigns it as a particular reason why the Christians

¹ Dial. cum Tryph. p. 250. Edit. Paris. p. 201. Edit. Thirlbii. καὶ τοῦ βλάσφημα καὶ τολμηρὰ εἰς τὸν ὑψιστον μέλλοντος λαλεῖν ἤδη ἐπὶ θύραις ὄντος. eoque qui impie et temerarie maledicta in Altissimum prolocuturus est, jam pro foribus assistente. [And he that is to speak with blasphemy and audacity against the Most High, is truly now standing at the door.] Vide etiam, p. 336. Edit. Paris. p. 371. Edit. Thirlbii.

² Adversus Hæreses, Lib. v. cap. xxv. Antichristi fraus, superbia, et tyrannicum regnum, prout a Daniele et Paulo descripta sunt. [The fraud, pride, and tyrannical government of Antichrist, as they are described by Daniel and Paul.] P. 437. Edit. Grabe.

³ Quis, nisi Romanus status? cujus abscessio in decem reges dispersa Antichristum superducat, et tunc revelabitur iniquus. [Translated in the text.] De Resurrect. Carnis, cap. xxiv. p. 340. Edit. Rigaltii, Paris. 1675.

⁴ Est et alia major necessitas nobis orandi pro imperatoribus, etiam pro omni statu imperii, rebusque Romanis, qui vim maximam universo orbi imminentem—Romani imperii commeatu scimus retardari. [There is still another and greater necessity that we should pray for the emperors, for the whole state of the empire, and for whatever relates to the Roman affairs, because we know that it is by these the greatest calamity awaiting the whole world is withheld.] Apol. cap. xxxii. p. 27. Ibid.

prayed for the Roman empire, because they knew that the greatest calamity hanging over the world was retarded by the continuance of it.

Origen, the most learned father and ablest writer of the third century, ¹recites this passage at large as spoken of him who is called Antichrist. To the same purpose he likewise alleges the words of Daniel as truly divine and prophetic. Daniel and St. Paul, according to him, both prophesied of the same person.

Lactantius, who flourished in the beginning of the fourth century, describes Antichrist in the same manner, and almost in the same terms as St. Paul; and ²concludes, "This is he who is called Antichrist, but shall feign himself to be Christ, and shall fight against the truth." A shorter and fuller character of the vicar of Christ could not be drawn even by a Protestant. Cyril of Jerusalem, in the same century, alleges this passage of St. Paul together with other prophecies concerning Antichrist, and ³says, that "This the predicted Antichrist will come, when the times of the Roman empire shall be fulfilled, and the consummation of the world shall approach. Ten kings of the Romans shall arise together, in different places indeed, but they shall reign at the same time. Among these the eleventh is Antichrist, who by magical and wicked artifice shall seize the Roman power." Ambrose, archbishop of Milan, in the same century, or Hilary the deacon, or the author (whoever he was) of the comment upon St. Paul's epistles, which passeth under the name of St. Ambrose, proposes much the same interpretation, and ⁴affirms that after the falling or decay of the Roman empire Antichrist shall appear.

Jerome, Austin, and Chrysostom flourished in the latter end of the fourth, or the beginning of the fifth century. St. Jerome, in his explanation of this passage, ⁵says, "that Antichrist shall sit in

¹ Contra Celsum, Lib. vi. p. 668. Opera, Tom. I. Edict. Benedict.

² Hic est autem, qui appellatur Antichristus; sed se ipse Christum mentietur, et contra verum dimicabit. [Translated in the text.] Lactant. Lib. vii. cap. xix.

³ Ἐρχεται δὲ ὁ προειρημένος Ἀντίχριστος οὗτος, ὅταν πληρωθῶσιν οἱ καιροὶ τῆς Ῥωμαίων βασιλείας, καὶ πλησιάξει λοιπὸν τὰ τῆς τοῦ κόσμου συντέλειαν· ἴδεα μὲν ὁμοῦ Ῥωμαίων ἐγείρονται βασιλεῖς. ἐν διαφόροις μὲν ἴσως τόποις, κατὰ δὲ τὸν αὐτὸν βασιλεύουσι καιρὸν. μετὰ δὲ τούτους ἐνδέκατος ὁ Ἀντίχριστος, ἐκ τῆς μαγικῆς κακοτεχνίας τὴν Ῥωμαϊκὴν ἐξουσίαν ἀρπάσας. Veniet autem hic prædictus Antichristus, cum impleta fuerint tempora imperii Romani, et mundi consummatio appropinquabit. Decem simul reges Romanorum excitabuntur, in diversis quidem locis, eodem tamen tempore regnantes. Post istos autem undecimus Antichristus, per magicum maleficium Romanorum potestatem rapiens. [Translated in the text.] Catech. xv. cap. v. p. 211. Edit. Milles. Oxon. 1703.

⁴ Post defectum regni Romani appariturum Antichristum, &c. [Translated in the text.] Ambros. in locum.

⁵ Et in templo Dei, vel Jerosolymis (ut quidam putant) vel in ecclesiâ (ut verius arbitramur) sederit, ostendens se tanquam ipse sit Christus et filius Dei: Nisi, inquit, fuerit Romanum imperium ante desolatum, et Antichristus præcesserit, Christus non veniet.—Et nunc quid detineat, scitis, ut reveletur in suo tempore; hoc est, quæ causa sit, ut Antichristus in præsentiam non veniat, optime nostis. Nec vult apertè dicere Romanum imperium destruendum, quod ipsi qui imperant, æternum putant.—Si enim apertè audacthe temple of God, either at Jerusalem (as some imagine) or in the church (as we may more truly judge) showing himself that he is Christ and the Son of God: and unless the Roman empire be first desolated, and Antichrist precede, Christ shall not come—And now ye know what withholdeth that he might be revealed in his time, that is, ye know very well what is the reason why Antichrist doth not come at present. He is not willing to say openly, that the Roman empire should be destroyed, which they who command think to be eternal.—For if he had said openly and boldly, that Antichrist shall not come, unless the Roman empire be first destroyed, it might probably have proved the occasion of a persecution against the church.” Jerome was himself a witness to the barbarous nations beginning to tear in pieces the Roman empire, and upon this occasion ¹ exclaims, “He who hindered is taken out of the way, and we do not consider that Antichrist approaches, whom the Lord Jesus shall consume with the spirit of his mouth.” St. Austin having cited this passage ² affirms, that “No one questions that the apostle spoke these things concerning Antichrist: and the day of judgment (for this he calleth the day of the Lord) should not come, unless Antichrist come first. And now ye know what withholdeth. Some think this was spoken of the Roman empire; and therefore the apostle was not willing to write it openly, lest he should incur a præmunire, and be falsely accused of wishing ill to the Roman empire, which was hoped to be eternal.” St. Chrysostom, in one of his homilies upon this passage, speaking of what hindered the revelation of Antichrist, ³ asserts, that “when the Roman empire shall be taken out of the way, then he shall come; and it is very likely: for as long as the dread of this empire shall remain, no one shall quickly be substituted; but when this shall be dissolved, he shall seize on the vacant empire, and shall endeavour to assume the power both of God and men.” And who hath seized on the vacant terque dixisset, non veniet Antichristus, nisi prius Romanum deleatur imperium, justa causa persecutionis in orientem tunc ecclesiam consurgere videbatur. [Translated in the text.] Algasiæ Quæst. xi. col. 209. Prior Pars, Tom. IV. Edit. Benedict.

¹ Qui tenebat, de medio fit, et non intelligimus Antichristum appropinquare, quem Dominus Jesus Christus interficiet spiritu oris sui. [Translated in the text.] Ad Ageruchiam de Monogamia, col. 748. Secund. Pars, Tom. IV.

² Nulli dubium est, eum de Antichristo ista dixisse; diemque judicii (hunc enim appellat diem Domini) non esse venturum, nisi ille prior venerit—Et nunc quid detineat scitis—Quidam putant hoc de imperio dictum fuisse Romano; et propterea Paulum apostolum non id aperte scribere voluisse, ne calumniam videlicet incurreret, quod Romano imperio male optaverit, cum speraretur æternum. [Translated in the text.] De civitat. Dei, Lib. xx. cap. xix. col. 451. Tom. VII. Edit. Benedict. Antwerp.

³ Ἡ ἀρχὴ ἣ Ῥωμαϊκὴ ὅταν ἀρθῇ ἐκ μέσου, τότε ἐκεῖνος ἥξει· καὶ εἰκότως ἕως γὰρ ἂν ὁ ταύτης ἢ τῆς ἀρχῆς φόβος, οὐδεὶς ταχέως ὑποταγήσεται· ὅταν δὲ αὐτὴ καταλύθῃ, ἐπιθήσεται τῇ ἀναρχίᾳ, καὶ τὴν τῶν ἀνθρώπων, καὶ τὴν τοῦ θεοῦ ἐπιχειρήσει ἀρπάζαι ἀρχὴν. quando Romanorum imperium de medio fuerit sublatum, tunc ille veniet. Et merito. Quamdiu enim fuerit metus hujus imperii, nemo cito subjicietur. Quando autem hoc fuerit eversum, vacans invadet imperium, hominumque et Dei imperium aggredietur rapere. [Translated in the text.] In locum, p. 530. Tom. XI. Edit. Benedict.

empire in Rome, and assumed the power both of God and man, let the world judge.

In this manner these ancient and venerable fathers expound this passage; and in all probability they had learned by tradition from the apostle, or from the church of the Thessalonians, that what retarded the revelation of Antichrist was the Roman empire, but when the Roman empire should be broken in pieces, and be no longer able to withhold him, then he should appear in the Christian church, and domineer principally in the church of Rome. Even in the opinion of a bishop of Rome, Gregory the Great, who sat in the chair at the end of the sixth century, whosoever affected the title of universal bishop, he was Antichrist, or the forerunner of Antichrist. "I speak it confidently," says ¹ he, "that whosoever calleth himself universal bishop, or desireth so to be called, in the pride of his heart, he doth forerun Antichrist." When John, then bishop of Constantinople, first usurped this title, Gregory made answer, "By this pride of his, what thing else is signified, but that the time of Antichrist is now at hand?" Again he says upon the same occasion, "The king of pride (that is, Antichrist) approacheth; and what is wicked to be spoken, an army of priests is prepared." When the papal doctrines and the papal authority prevailed over all, it was natural to think and expect, that the true notion of Antichrist would be stifled, and that the doctors of the church would endeavour to give another turn and interpretation to this passage. That night of ignorance was so thick and dark, that there was hardly here and there a single star to be seen in the whole hemisphere. But no sooner was there any glimmering or dawning of a reformation, than the true notion of Antichrist, which had been so long suppressed, broke out again. As early as the year 1120 a treatise was published concerning Antichrist, wherein ² the faithful are admonished, that "the great Antichrist was long ago come, in vain was he still expected, he was now by the permission of God advanced in years:" and the author, having described the corrupt state of the church at that time, says afterwards, "This state of men (not a single man) is Antichrist, the whore of Babylon, the fourth beast of Daniel, (to wit, in his last state as it is said) that man of sin and son of perdition, who is exalted above every God, so that he sitteth in the temple of God, that is, the church, showing himself that he is God; who is now come with all kind of seduction and lies in those who perish." The Waldenses and Albigenses propagated the same opinions in the same century. That the pope was Antichrist was indeed the general doctrine of the first reformers every where. Here in England it was ¹ advanced by Wickliff, and was learnedly established by that great and able champion of the Reformation, Bishop Jewel, in his Apology and Defence, and more largely in his Exposition upon the two Epistles of St. Paul to the Thessalonians. This doctrine contributed not a little to promote the Reformation; and wheresoever the one prevailed the other prevailed also.

¹ Ego fidenter dico, quod quisquis se universalem sacerdotem vocat, vel vocari desiderat, in elatione sua Antichristum præcurrit. Lib. vi. Epist. xxx. Ex hac ejus superbiâ quid aliud, nisi propinqua jam esse Antichristi tempora designatur. Lib. iv. Epist. xxxiv. Rex superbiæ prope est; et, quod dici nefas est, sacerdotum est præparatus exercitus. [Translated in the text.] Lib. iv. ibid. See Jewel's Defence of the Apology, Part iv. cap. xvi. p. 413. Barrow's Treatise of the Pope's Supremacy, Suppos. v. p. 123. Edit. 1683.

² Anno Domini 1120—emissus est tractatus de Antichristo,—In hoc libro admonentur fideles "Antichristum illum magnum jamdudum venisse, frustra adhuc expectari, esse jam Dei permissione ætate provectum:—Hunc hominem statum (non singularem hominem) esse Antichristum, meretricem Babylonicam, quartam bestiam Danielis, nempe in statu ejus novissimo, (ut dictum est) hominem illum peccati, et filium perditionis, qui extollitur super omnem Deum, ita ut in templo Dei, id est, ecclesiâ, sedeat, ostendens se tanquam sit Deus; qui jam venit in omni genere seductionis et mendacii in iis qui pe-reunt." [Translated in the text.] Mede's Works, Book III. De numeris Danielis, p. 721, 722.

Such doctrine as this must necessarily give great offence to the bigots and devotees of the church of Rome: and no wonder, therefore, that ² in the last Lateran council the pope gave strait commandment to all preachers, that no man should presume once to speak of the coming of Antichrist. The king of France also ³ with the advice of his council interdicted, that any one should call the pope Antichrist: and Grotius, who was ambassador in France from the crown of Sweden, in a vain hope and expectation of reconciling the disputes and differences between papists and protestants, composed his treatise concerning Antichrist, not wickedly, but weakly; with an honest intention, it may be presumed, but it is certain with pernicious effect; more like an advocate for one party than a moderator between both. At the same time in England, though James the First had written a treatise to prove the pope Antichrist, yet this doctrine was growing unfashionable during his reign, and more so in that of his son, who married a bigoted popish princess; even while Mr. Mede was living, who had exerted more learning and sagacity in explaining the prophecies, and in fixing the true idea of Antichrist, than perhaps any writer in any age. But probably for this very reason he was looked upon with an evil eye, and (to the disgrace of the times) obtained no preferment, though he was eminently deserving of the best and greatest. He says himself in one of his letters (Epist. 56.) that his notions about genuflexion towards the altar "would have made another man a dean, or a prebend, or something else ere this: but the point of the pope's being Antichrist, as a dead fly, marred the savour of that ointment." The abuse also that some fanatics made of this doctrine greatly prejudiced the world against it. It was esteemed a mark of a puritan, and was a certain obstacle to preferment, for any man to preach that the pope was Antichrist: and Dr. Montague, a famous court chaplain at that time, who endeavoured to prove that the power of the king was absolute, ¹endeavoured also to prove that the notes and characters of Antichrist belonged to the Turk rather than to the pope: and herein he was followed by several divines, and by no less a man than bishop Fell, if he was the compiler or approver (as he is commonly said to have been) of ²the Paraphrase and Annotations upon all St. Paul's Epistles. There are fashions in divinity as well as in every thing else: and therefore the true doctrine of Antichrist was for some time suspended, and false hypotheses were invented; and it may surprise any one, that so little was said upon this subject in the long controversies concerning popery during the reigns of Charles and James the Second. It is hoped that the truth is now emerging again. Some laudable ³attempts have lately been made to revive and restore it: and if I have not proved that this interpretation is preferable to all others, I have taken pains and proved nothing.

¹ Dialogorum libri iv. quorum—quartus Romanæ ecclesiæ sacramenta, Antichristi regnum, &c. perstringit. ["Four books of Dialogues, of which the fourth touches upon the sacraments of the church of Rome, and the kingdom of Antichrist."] Cave Hist. Litt. Vol. II. Appendix, p. 63.

² Conc. Lateran. sub Julio et Leone, Sess. xi. Jewel's Defence, ibid.

³ Prudentissimorum virorum usus consilio interdixit ne quis papam Antichristum vocet. ["Following the counsel of the most prudent men, he interdicted all from calling the pope by the name of Antichrist."] Grot. de Antichristo in principio.

But it hath been proved, as I conceive, that this is the genuine sense and meaning of the apostle, that this only is entirely consistent with the context, that every other interpretation is forced and unnatural, that this is liable to no material objection, that it coincides perfectly with Daniel, that it is agreeable to the tradition of the primitive church, and that it hath been exactly fulfilled in all particulars, which cannot be said of any other interpretation whatsoever. Such a prophecy as this is at once an illustrious proof of Divine revelation, and an excellent antidote to the poison of popery. It is like a two-edged sword, that will cut both ways, and wound the deist with one side, and the papist with the other. The papists are in some respect like the Jews. As the Jews believe not that Christ is come according to the prophecies, but still live in expectation of him; so neither do the papists perceive that Antichrist is come according to the prophecies, but still maintain that he shall arise hereafter. The apostle not only foretels this blindness and infatuation, but likewise assigns the reason, because they received not the love of the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness. But to the protestants, who believe and profess that both the Christ and Antichrist are come, we may say with the apostle (ver. 13, 14.) We are bound to give thanks alway to God for you, brethren, beloved of the Lord, because God hath chosen you to salvation, through sanctification of the spirit, and belief of the truth: whereunto he called you by the Gospel, to the obtaining of the glory of our Lord Jesus

¹ See his book entitled Appello Cæsarem, Part ii. chap. v.

² Printed at the Theatre in Oxford, 1684, and said to be published under the direction of Bishop Fell.

³ Mr. Langford's Notes and Characters of the Man of Sin. Printed in 1746. Dr. Benson's Dissertation concerning the Man of Sin, &c. &c.

Christ. The apostle proceeds (ver. 15.) Therefore, brethren, stand fast, and hold the traditions which ye have been taught, whether by word, or our epistle : and certainly there is not any oral tradition that hath a juster claim to be thought apostolical, than this of the man of sin's succeeding upon the decline of the Roman empire, and exalting himself over all. Wherefore to conclude, as the apostle concludes the subject, (ver. 16, 17.) Now our Lord Jesus Christ himself, and God even our Father, who hath loved us, and hath given us everlasting consolation, and good hope, through grace, comfort your hearts, and stablish you in every good word and work.

XXIII.

ST. PAUL'S PROPHECY OF THE APOSTACY OF THE LATTER TIMES.

ST. PAUL was a man of lively thought and strong imagination. None of the apostles had a warmer zeal for Christ and the Christian religion. He was, as he saith himself, (2 Cor. xi. 23. 28, 29.) in labours more abundant, he had the care of all the churches; who is weak, saith he, and I am not weak? who is offended, and I burn not? It was natural for such a mind to be deeply affected with the foresight of the great apostacy of Christians from the true Christian faith and worship, and to lament it, and to forewarn his disciples of it, as often as there was occasion. He made this apostacy one topic of his discourse to the Thessalonians, while he was yet with them: and afterwards, in his second epistle to them, he gave them to understand that the day of Christ was not at hand, as they apprehended; for there should come the apostacy first; implying that it should be both extensive and of long duration. He mentions this apostacy again in his first Epistle to Timothy, and describes more particularly wherein it should consist, and at what time, and by what means it should be propagated and advanced in the world. (1 Tim. iv. 1—3.) Now the Spirit speaketh expressly, that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils. Speaking lies in hypocrisy, having their conscience seared with a hot iron; forbidding to marry, and commanding to abstain from meats, which God hath created to be received with thanksgiving of them which believe and know the truth. The passage perhaps may better be translated thus, But the Spirit speaketh expressly; he had been speaking before of the mystery of godliness, and now he proceeds to speak of the mystery of iniquity in opposition to it. But the Spirit speaketh expressly, that in the latter times some shall apostatize from the faith, giving heed to erroneous spirits, and doctrines concerning demons, Through the hypocrisy of liars, having their conscience seared with a hot iron, Forbidding to marry, and commanding to abstain from meats, which God hath created to be received with thanksgiving by the believers and them who know the truth. This translation will be justified by the following considerations, wherein it is proposed to show the true interpretation and exact completion of this prophecy. But this subject hath been so fully and learnedly discussed by the excellent 'Mr. Mede, that we must be greatly obliged to him in the course of this dissertation. The dress and clothing may be somewhat different, but the body and substance must be much the same: and they must be referred to his works who are desirous of obtaining farther satisfaction. Not that we would make a transcript only of any writer; we should hope to enforce and improve the subject by some new arguments and new illustrations; as every scribe instructed unto the kingdom of heaven (Matt. xiii. 52.) is like unto a man that is an householder, who bringeth forth out of his treasure things new as well as old.

I. The first thing to be considered is the apostacy here predicted, Some shall depart, or rather shall apostatize from the faith. The apostle had predicted the same thing before to the Thessalonians, The day of Christ shall not come, except there come a falling away or rather the apostacy first. In the original the words are of the same import and derivation, ἀποστασία and ἀποστήσονται, and they should have been translated both alike, as the same thing was intended in both places. An apostacy from the faith may be total or partial, either when we renounce the whole, or when we deny some principal and essential article of it. The writers of the New Testament frequently derive their language as well as their ideas from the Old: and by considering what was accounted apostacy under the Mosaical economy, we may form the better notion of what it is under the Christian dispensation. It doth not appear that the Jews or Israelites ever totally renounced and abandoned the living and true God; he never ceased altogether to be their God, or they to be his people: but they revolted from their allegiance to God, when they worshipped him in an image, as in the golden calves, which was the sin and apostacy of Jeroboam; and when they worshipped other gods besides him, as Baalim and the host of heaven, which was the sin and apostacy of Ahab and Manasseh: and for the same reason the idolatry of Ahaz is by the Greek interpreters called (2 Chron. xxix. 19.) ἀποστασία αὐτοῦ, his apostacy, and it is said of him (xxviii. 19.) that ἀπέστη ἀποστάσει ἀπὸ τοῦ Κυρίου, he apostatized greatly from the Lord. Apostacy, therefore, was idolatry in the Jewish church, and it is the same in the Christian. This argument may receive some illustration from a

¹ See Mede's Works, Book iii. p. 623—693. See likewise Mons. Jurieu's Accomplishment of the Prophecies, Part i. chap. xviii. xix. xx. xxi.

¹ similar passage in St. Peter; (2 Pet. ii. 1.) There were false prophets also among the people, even as there shall be false teachers among you, who privily shall bring in damnable heresies, even denying the Lord that bought them. As there were false prophets among the children of Israel, who seduced them to idolatry and the worshipping of other gods besides the true God; so there shall be false teachers among Christians, who by plausible pretences and imperceptible degrees shall bring in the like damnable heresies, even denying the Lord that bought them, professing themselves to be his servants bought with a price, and yet denying him to be their lord and master by applying to other lords and mediators. It is not any error, or every heresy, that is apostacy from the faith. It is a revolt in the principal and essential article, when we worship God by any image or representation, or when we worship other beings besides God, and pray unto other mediators besides the one mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus. This is the very essence of Christian worship, to worship the one true God through the one true Christ; and to worship any other God or any other mediator, is apostacy and rebellion against God and against Christ. It is, as St. Paul saith, (Col. ii. 19.) not holding the head, but depending upon other heads: it is, as St. Peter expresseth it, denying the Lord that bought us, and serving other lords: and the denial of such an essential part may as properly be called apostacy, as if we were to renounce the whole Christian faith and worship. It is renouncing them in effect, and not treating and regarding God as God, or Christ as Christ.

Such is the nature of apostacy from the faith; and it is implied that this apostacy should be general, and infect great numbers. For though it is said only some shall apostatize, yet by some in this place many are understood. The word some may usually denote few in English; but in the learned languages it frequently signifies a multitude, and there are abundant instances in Scripture. In St. John's Gospel it is said (vi. 60.) that many of Jesus his disciples, when they had heard this, said, This is an hard saying, who can hear it? and again a little afterwards (ver. 66.) many of his disciples went back, and walked no more with him: but Jesus himself, speaking of those many saith, (ver. 64.) there are some of you that believe not; so that some are plainly the same as many. St. Paul, speaking of the infidelity and rejection of the Jews saith, (Rom. xi. 17.) that some of the branches are broken off: but those some, it is evident, were the main body of the nation. The same apostle informs the Corinthians, (1 Cor. x. 5, 6.) that with many of the Israelites God was not well pleased; for they were overthrown in the wilderness: and their punishments were intended for examples to Christians. Wherefore he concludes (ver. 7.) Neither be *ye idolaters, as were some of them ; as it is written, The people sat down to eat and drink, and rose up to play : where some are manifestly the same as the people. Again, (ver. 8.) Neither let us commit fornication, as some of them committed, and fell in one day three and twenty thousand : where some are equivalent to many thousands. Again, (ver. 9.) Neither let us tempt Christ, as some of them also tempted, and were destroyed of serpents : where some are the same with much people ; for we read (Numb. xxi. 6.) that the Lord sent fiery serpents among the people ; and they bit the people, and much people of Israel died. And again (ver. 10.) Neither murmur ye, as some of them also murmured, and were destroyed of the destroyer : where some are the same with all the congregation except Joshua and Caleb ; for we read (Num. xiv. 1, 2.) that all the congregation lifted up their voice, and cried ; and the people wept that night : and all the children of Israel murmured against Moses, and against Aaron ; and the whole congregation said unto them, Would God that we had died in the land of Egypt, or would God we had died in this wilderness : and they had their wish, for except Joshua and Caleb they all died in the wilderness. Some therefore may signify many, but not all ; as the apostle speaketh elsewhere, (Heb. iii. 16.) For some when they had heard did provoke ; howbeit not all that came out of Egypt by Moses. The apostle might have the same meaning in this place ; and this apostacy may be general and extensive, and include many but not all. If only some few persons were to be concerned and engaged in it, it was scarcely an object worthy of prophecy : nor could that properly be pointed out as a peculiarity of the latter times, which is common to all times, for in all times there are some apostates or other. It must necessarily be a great apostacy ; and it is called, as it hath been shown, the apostacy by way of eminence and distinction ; but it would hardly have been distinguished in this emphatical manner, if only an inconsiderable number were to profess and embrace it. Other prophecies likewise intimate, that there should be a great and general corruption and apostacy in the Christian church ; and the event will also confirm us in our opinion. For we have seen and still see a great part of Christendom guilty of the same sort of apostacy and defection as the Israelites were in former times. As the Israelites worshipped God in the golden calf and golden calves ; for (Exod. xxxii. 5.) they proclaimed a feast to the Lord, and said (ver. 4. and 1 Kings xii. 28.) Behold thy Gods, O Israel, which brought thee up out of the land of Egypt : so there are Christians who worship their Creator and Redeemer in an image, or in a crucifix, or in the sacramental bread. As the Israelites worshipped Baalim or departed heroes, and as the Psalmist saith, (Ps. cvi. 28.) ate the sacrifices of the dead : so there are Christians who worship departed saints, and institute fasts and festivals, and offer up prayers and praises unto them. And as this apostacy overspread the church of Israel for many ages, so it hath for many ages too overspread the church of* Christ. The apostacy, therefore, is the very same in both churches. The apostle foresaw and foretold it; and upon the mention of Israel's provocation, very properly admonished the Christians to beware of the like infidelity and apostacy, (Heb. iii. 12.) Take heed, brethren, lest there be in any of you an evil heart of unbelief, ἐν τῷ ἀποστῆναι, in apostatizing from the living God.

¹ See Mede's Discourse xliiii. upon this text, p. 238, &c.

II. It is more particularly shown wherein this apostacy should consist, in the following words, giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils, or rather giving heed to erroneous spirits and doctrines concerning dæmons. For I conceive not the meaning to be, that this apostacy should proceed from the suggestion of evil spirits and instigation of devils. That would be no peculiar mark of distinction; that might be said of any wickedness in general, as well as of this in particular. The means too by which this apostacy should be propagated, and the persons who should propagate it, are described afterwards; so that this part is to be understood rather of things than of persons, rather of the matter wherein this apostacy should consist, than of the first teachers and authors of it. Spirits seem to be much the same in sense as doctrines, as Mr. Mede and other divines have observed the same word to be used also by St. John, (1 John iv. 1.) Beloved, believe not every spirit, that is, every doctrine, but try the spirits, that is, the doctrines, whether they are of God; because many false prophets are gone out into the world. Spirits and doctrines, therefore, may be considered, the latter word as explanatory of the former: and error sometimes signifying ¹ idolatry, erroneous doctrines may comprehend idolatrous as well as false doctrines. But it is still farther added for explanation, that these doctrines should be doctrines of devils or of dæmons, where the genitive case is not to be taken actively, as if dæmons were the authors of these doctrines, but passively, as if dæmons were the subject of these doctrines. Thus a doctrine of vanities (διδασκαλία ματαιῶν, Jer. x. 8.) is a doctrine concerning vanities or idols. The doctrine of the Lord (διδασχὴ τοῦ Κυρίου, Acts xiii. 12.) is the doctrine concerning him: Then the deputy, when he saw what was done, believed, being astonished at the doctrine of the Lord. The doctrine of baptisms (διδασχαὶ βαπτισμῶν, Heb. vi. 2.) and of laying on of hands, and of resurrection of the dead, and of eternal judgment, are doctrines relating to all these particulars. And by the same construction, διδασκαλαὶ δαιμονίων, doctrines of dæmons, are doctrines about and concerning dæmons. This is therefore a prophecy that the idolatrous theology of dæmons professed by the Gentiles should be revived among Christians. Christians should in process of time degenerate, and resemble the Gentiles as well as the apostate Jews. They should not only apostatize after the manner of the Jews, but should also worship dæmons after the manner of the Gentiles.

¹ שׁוּת et שׁוּת, i. e. πλάνη, Chaldæis et Targumistis est idolum: et שׁוּת פּלאנָאִשׁ, est idola colere et scortari. [שׁוּת and שׁוּת, i. e. πλάνη, an error, are made use of by the Chaldeans and Targumists to signify an idol; and שׁוּת פּלאנָאִשׁ, is to worship idols, or to commit fornication.] Rom. i. 27. 2 Thess. ii. 2 Pet. ii. 18. Mede, p. 626.

Dæmons, according to the theology of the Gentiles, were middle powers between the sovereign gods and mortal men. So saith Plato, the most competent judge and the most consummate writer in these subjects; ¹ “Every dæmon is a middle being between God and mortal man.” These dæmons were regarded as mediators and agents between the gods and men. So saith Plato again, ² “God is not approached by man, but all the commerce and intercourse between gods and men is by the mediation of dæmons. The dæmons,” saith he, “are interpreters and conveyers from men to the gods, and from the gods to men, of the supplications and sacrifices on the one part, and of the commands and rewards of sacrifices on the other.” Apuleius, a later philosopher, giveth ³ the like description. “Dæmons are middle powers, by whom both our desires and deserts pass unto the gods; they are carriers between man on earth and the gods in heaven; hence of prayers, thence of gifts; they convey to and fro, hence petitions, thence supplies; or they are interpreters on both sides, and bearers of salutations; for it would not be,” saith he, “for the majesty of the celestial gods, to take care of these things.” The whole is summed up by the said Apuleius ⁴ in few words. “All things are done by the will, power, and authority of the celestial gods, but by the obedience, service, and ministry of the dæmons.” Of these dæmons there were accounted two kinds. One kind of dæmons were the souls of men deified, or canonized after death. So Hesiod, one of the most ancient heathen writers, if not the most ancient, describing that happy race of men, who lived in the first and golden age of the world, ⁵ saith that,

¹ Καὶ γὰρ πᾶν τὸ δαιμόνιον μεταξύ ἐστι θεοῦ τε καὶ θνητοῦ. Omnis enim dæmonum natura inter deum et mortale est intermedia. [Translated in the text.] Platonis Sympos. p. 202. Tom. III. Edit. Serrani.

² Θεὸς δὲ ἀνθρώπῳ οὐ μίγνυται, ἀλλὰ διὰ τούτου πᾶσά ἐστιν ἡ ὁμιλία καὶ ἡ διάλεκτος θεοῖς πρὸς ἀνθρώπους. Deus autem cum homine non miscetur, sed per hanc dæmonum naturam naturam commercium omne atque colloquium inter deos hominesque conficitur. Ἑρμῆνιον καὶ διαπόρθευμενον θεοῖς τὰ παρ’ ἀνθρώπων, καὶ ἀνθρώποις τὰ παρὰ θεῶν, τῶν μὲν τὰς δεήσεις καὶ θυσίας, τῶν δὲ τὰς ἐπιτάξεις τε καὶ ἀμοιβὰς τῶν θυσιῶν. Interpretis et portitoris quasi munere fungitur, ut res humanas ad deos, divinas ad homines transmittat; horum quidem preces et sacrificia, illorum vero præcepta et sacrificiorum remunerationes. [Translated in the text.] Ibid. p. 202, 203.

³ Mediæ potestates, per quas et desideria nostra et merita ad deos commeant, inter terribiles cœlicolasque vectores, hinc precum, inde donorum, qui ultro citroque portant hinc petitiones, inde suppetias, seu quidem utrinque interpretes et salutigeri.—Neque enim pro majestate deûm cœlestium fuerit, hæc curare. [Translated in the text.] Apuleius de Deo Socratis, p. 674, 677. Edit. Delfh.

⁴ Cuncta cœlestium voluntate, numine, et autoritate, sed dæmonum obsequio, et operâ, et ministerio fieri arbitrandum est. [Translated in the text.] Ibid. p. 675.

⁵ Αὐτὰρ ἐπεὶ μὲν τοῦτο γένος κατὰ γαῖα κάλυψε,
Τοὶ μὲν δαίμονές εἰσι, Διὸς μεγάλου διὰ βουλὰς, Ἑσθλοὶ, ἐπιχθόνιοι, [ἀλεξικάκοι] φύλακες θνητῶν ἀνθρώπων.
Οἳ ῥα φυλάσσουσὶ τε δίκας καὶ σχέτλια ἔργα,
Ἥερα ἰσάμενοι, πάντῃ φοιτῶντες ἐπ’ αἶαν,
Πλουτόδοται· καὶ τοῦτο γέρας βασιλῆϊον ἴσχον.

"after this generation were dead, they were by the will of great Jupiter promoted to be dæmons, keepers of mortal men, observers of their good and evil works, givers of riches, &c.; and this," saith he, "is the royal honour that they enjoy." Plato concurs with Hesiod, and ¹ asserts, that "he and many other poets speak excellent, who affirm, that when good men die they attain great honour and dignity, and become dæmons." The same Plato in another place ² "maintains, that all those who die valiantly in war are of Hesiod's golden generation, and are made dæmons; and we ought for ever afterwards to serve and adore their sepulchres, as the sepulchres of dæmons. The same also we decree, whenever any of those, who were judged excellently good in life, die either of old age, or in any other manner." The other kind of dæmons were such as had never been the souls of men, nor ever dwelt in mortal bodies. Thus Apuleius ³ informs us, "There is another and higher kind of dæmons, who were always free from the incumbrances of the body; and out of this higher order Plato supposeth that guardians were appointed unto men." Ammonius likewise, in Plutarch, ⁴ reckons two kinds of dæmons, "souls separated from bodies, or such as had never inhabited bodies at all." These latter dæmons

Verum postquam hoc genus terra abscondit,
 Ii quidem divi facti sunt, Jovis magni consilio,
 Boni, in terris versantes, custodes mortalium hominum:
 Qui quidem observant judicia et prava opera,
 Caligine amicti, passim euntes per terram,
 Opum datores: atque hoc munus regale consecuti sunt.

[Translated in the text.] Hesiod. Op. et Dier. Lib. i. 120.

¹ Λέγει οὖν καλῶς καὶ οὗτος καὶ ἄλλοι ποιηταὶ πολλοί, ὅσοι λέγουσιν, ὡς ἐπειδὴν τις ἀγαθὸς ὢν τελευτήσῃ, μεγάλῃν μοῖραν καὶ τιμὴν ἔχει, καὶ γίνεται δαίμων. Præclare igitur et hic et alii poetæ, quicunque affirmant eum qui bonus sit, ubi mortuus fuerit, magnæ cujusdam sortis consequi dignitatem, et δαίμονα esse. [Translated in the text.] Platonis Cratylus, p. 398. Tom. I. Edit. Serrani.

² Τῶν δὲ δὴ ἀποθανόντων ἐπὶ στρατείᾳ, ὃς ἂν εὐδοκίμησας τελευτήσῃ, ἀρ' οὐ πρῶτον μὲν φήσομεν τοῦ χρυσοῦ γένους εἶναι; Πάντων γε μάλιστα. Ἀλλ' οὐ πεισόμεθα Ἡσιόδῳ; ἐπειδὴν τινες τοῦ τοιοῦτου γένους τελευτήσωσιν, ὡς ἄρα

Οἱ μὲν δαίμονες—

καὶ τὸν λοιπὸν δὲ χρόνον, ὡς δαιμόνων, οὕτω θεραπεύσομέν τε καὶ προσκυνήσομεν αὐτῶν τὰς θήκας· ταῦτα δὲ ταύτῃ νομιούμεν ὅταν τις γέρα ἢ τινι ἄλλῳ τρόπῳ τελευτήσῃ τῶν ὅσοι ἂν διαφερόντως ἐν τῷ βίῳ ἀγαθοὶ κριθῶσι. Eum vero qui re præclare gestâ in bello occubuerit, nonne dicemus ad genus aureum pertinere? Maxime omnium. Nonne Hesiodi sententiam sequemur? quod videlicet illi homines, qui ex aureo illo fuerint genere, ubi primum fato concesserint,

Dæmones existunt,—

Reliquum autem tempus eorum sepulcra veluti dæmonum colemus, et divinis honoribus prosequemur. Eadem quoque sancimus atque exhibebimus iis, qui quum singularis cujusdam probitatis dignitate excellerint, vel senio vel alio quopiam modo e vitâ excesserint. [Translated in the text.] Plato de Republ. Lib. v. p. 468. Tom. II. Edit. Serrani.

³ Superius aliud augustiusque dæmonum genus, qui semper a corporis compedibus et nexibus liberi—Ex hac sublimiori dæmonum copiâ autumat Plato singulis hominibus in vitâ agendâ testes et custodes singulos additos. [Translated in the text.] Apuleius de Deo Socratis, p. 690.

⁴ Αἱ διακριθεῖσαι σώματος ἢ μὴ μετασχοῦσαι τὸ παράπαν ψυχαί. animi secreti a corporibus, aut omnino quibus nullum est cum corporibus commercium. [Translated in the text.] Plut. de Defect. Orac. p. 431. Tom. II. Edit. Paris. 1624.

may be paralleled with angels, as the former may with canonized saints: and as we Christians believe that there are good and evil angels, so did the Gentiles that there were good and evil dæmons. According to Plutarch, ¹ "it was a very ancient opinion, that there are certain wicked and malignant dæmons, who envy good men, and endeavour to hinder them in the pursuit of virtue, lest they should be partakers at last of greater happiness than they enjoy." This was the opinion of all the later philosophers, and Plutarch undeniably affirms it of the very ancient ones.

But here it is objected, that though this might be the notion of the Gentiles concerning dæmons, yet the Scripture account of them is very different: for in the Scripture, as St. Austin² observes, we never read of good dæmons; but wheresoever in those writings the name of dæmon occurs, none but evil spirits are meant: and it must be confessed and allowed, that this is the most usual signification of the word; but some instances may be alleged to the contrary. When St. Paul was at Athens, and preached the Gospel in that city, certain philosophers of the Epicureans and of the Stoics encountered him (Acts xvii. 18.) and charged him with being a setter forth of strange gods, ξένων δαιμονίων, of strange dæmons, because he preached unto them Jesus and the resurrection. Here dæmons could not possibly signify devils, but must necessarily refer to Jesus, who according to Paul's preaching (ver. 31.) was raised from the dead, and appointed to be the lord and judge of the world. At the same time the apostle retorts the charge upon the Athenians (ver. 22.) Ye men of Athens, I perceive that in all things ye are too superstitious, δεισιδαιμονεστέρους, too much addicted to the worship of dæmons; and they worshipped dæmons or dead men deified in abundance: but he declared unto them (ver. 24.) God who made the world, and all the things therein. St. Paul, in his first epistle, thus exhorts the Corinthians, (1 Cor. x. 14. 20, 21.) Flee from idolatry. The things which the Gentiles sacrifice, they sacrifice to devils, δαιμονίοις, to dæmons, and not to God: and I would not that ye should have fellowship with devils, δαιμονίοις, dæmons. Ye cannot drink the cup of the Lord, and the cup of devils, δαιμονίων, of dæmons; ye cannot be partakers of the Lord's table and of the table of devils, δαιμονίων, of dæmons. The apostle is here showing the great inconsistency of the Christian worship with the idolatrous worship performed by the heathens. The heathens worshipped Jupiter, Apollo, Venus, and numberless other beings, who were reputed dæmons, but who were properly deceased men and women deified. Corinth in particular¹ was much devoted to the worship of Venus; there she had a most magnificent temple and service; and the city was called the city of Venus. The apostle, therefore, declares that all such worship is utterly inconsistent with the true worship of Christ. For that would be acknowledging him for their only lord, and at the same time acknowledging other lords. And, (ver. 22.) Do we provoke the Lord to jealousy? are we stronger than he? These passages, together with the text that we are considering, are, I think, all the places in St. Paul's discourses or epistles where the word dæmon occurs; and as he was of all the apostles the most learned in the philosophy and theology of the Gentiles, and as he was speaking and writing to Gentiles, that might be the reason of his adopting the same notion of dæmons. He had plainly alluded to this notion a little before in the same Epistle to the Corinthians, (1 Cor. viii. 4—6.) and the passage cannot be so well understood without it. There is none other God but one. For though there be that are called gods, whether in heaven or in earth; whether Dei cælestes, celestial gods, as they are usually denominated, or δαίμονες ἐπιχθόνιοι, earthly dæmons, as they are named by Hesiod, mediators and agents between heaven and earth: as there be gods many, and lords many; as the Gentiles acknowledge a plurality of such superior and inferior deities; but to us Christians there is but one God the Father, of whom are all things, and we in him, εἰς αὐτὸν, we to him are to direct all our services; and one Lord Jesus Christ by whom are all things, and we by him, δι' αὐτοῦ, we by or through him alone have access unto the Father. They have a multitude of gods and lords, but we have only one of each sort. It is the same doctrine that he inculcates likewise in his first Epistle to Timothy, (ii. 5.) For there is one God, and one mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus. As St. Paul here foretels that Christians in the latter times should attend to doctrines concerning dæmons, so St. John also foretels (Rev. ix. 20.) that notwithstanding the plagues of the Arabian locust and of the Euphratæan horsemen, yet they should not repent of the works of their hands, that they should not worship devils, δαίμόνια, dæmons, where the word is plainly used in the same sense as by St. Paul: for Christians never actually worshipped devils, but they worshipped dæmons, deceased men and women and angels, and idols of gold, and silver, and brass, and stone, and of wood, which neither can see, nor hear, nor walk; and they still continue to worship them, notwithstanding the grievous calamities inflicted on the Christian church by the Saracens first, and by the Turks afterwards, as we shall see in the proper place.

¹ Τῶν πάντων παλαιῶν—λόγον, ὡς τὰ φαῦλα δαιμόνια καὶ βάσκανα, προσφθοροῦντα τοῖς ἀγαθοῖς ἀνδράσιν, καὶ ταῖς πράξεσιν ἐνιστάμενα, ταραχὰς καὶ φόβους ἐπάγει, σείοντα καὶ σφάλλοντα τὴν ἀρετὴν ὡς μὴ διαμείναντες ἀπώπτες ἐν τῷ καλῷ καὶ ἀκέραιοι, βελτίονος ἐκείνων μοιρὰς μετὰ τὴν τελευτὴν τύχουσιν. ex veteribus opinionibus—mala dæmonia et invida esse bonis viris æmulantia, quæ, quo obstrepant illorum actionibus, commotiones iis et pavores invehant, hisque concutiant et impellant virtutem, ne erecti et integri in virtute permanentes, potiorum quam ipsi consequantur a fati sortem. [Translated in the text.] Plut. Dion. in initio, p. 958. Tom. I. Edit. Paris. 1624.

² —nunquam vero bonos dæmones legimus: sed ubicunque illarum literarum hoc nomen positum reperitur, sive dæmones, sive dæmonia dicantur, non nisi maligni significantur spiritus. [Translated in the text.] Augustin. de Civitat. Dei, Lib. vi. cap. xix. col. 178. Tom. VII. Edit. Benedict. Antwerp.

¹ Strabo, Lib. viii. et Euripides apud Strabonem, p. 378, 379. Edit. Paris. 1620. p. 581, 582. Edit. Amstel. 1707.

There is a passage in Epiphanius, which will very much illustrate and confirm our explanation of St. Paul. That father, who was very zealous against the worship of saints and images, which was then springing up in the church, loudly complains of some Arabian Christians, who made a goddess of the blessed virgin, and offered a cake to her as to the queen of heaven. He condemns their heresy as impious and abominable, and ¹ declares that “upon these also is fulfilled that of the apostle, Some shall apostatize from the sound doctrine, giving heed to fables, and doctrines of dæmons; for they shall be, saith the apostle, worshippers of the dead, as in Israel also they were worshipped,” meaning the Baalim and Ashtaroth, who were worshipped by the children of Israel. It is observable that he explains as well as recites the words of the apostle. He expounds the faith by the sound doctrine, erroneous spirits by fables, and doctrines of dæmons by worshipping of the dead; and to show more particularly what he meant, he subjoins two examples more of such worship; one of the Sichemites, who had a goddess under the title of Jephthah’s daughter; and the other of the Egyptians; who worshipped Thermutis, that daughter of Pharaoh, who was at the charge of educating Moses. Now whether this latter clause, For they shall be worshippers of the dead, as in Israel also they were worshipped, be genuine or not, it may serve our purpose in some measure either way. If it was the original text of St. Paul, as ² Beza, and more particularly Mr. Mann contend, then the point that we have been proving is established beyond all possible contradiction. If it was only a marginal reading added by way of explication, as ³ Mr. Mede and Dr. Mill suppose, it still evinces that Epiphanius, and some before his time, understood the passage in the same manner that we have explained it. The apostle delivers the prophecy as a plain and express one; and it cannot be denied, that the passage is much improved, and the sense is made much clearer by this addition. Epiphanius too recites this addition, as the very words of the apostle; and a man of his character for probity and piety would not be guilty of forging such a testimony. If it be not quoted by other fathers, nor appear in other copies, it is probable that the fathers, who began this worship very early, would not be forward to produce a text to their own conviction and confusion; and it is possible that when this worship prevailed almost universally, a text which so plainly condemned it, might be wholly omitted; as in later times, for the same reason, we have seen¹ in some catechisms and manuals of devotion, the second left out of the ten commandments, and the tenth divided into two to make up the number. It ought not indeed to be concealed, that Clemens Alexandrinus, a celebrated father and writer of the second century, hath² cited this passage of St. Paul, just as it appears in our present copies, which is a considerable argument in support of the common reading. But possibly the same persons who left the words in question out of St. Paul, might also leave them out of Clemens Alexandrinus; and they might have struck them out of Epiphanius too if they had been equally aware of them, or if the thing had been equally practicable, and the context would have suffered it without the palpable discovery of the fraud. Upon the whole it may be concluded concerning this passage in Epiphanius, that if it does not exhibit the genuine reading, yet at least it establisheth the genuine sense and meaning of the text of St. Paul.

¹ πληροῦται γὰρ καὶ ἐπὶ τούτους τὸ, ἀποστήσονται τινες τῆς ὑγιоῦς διδασκαλίας, προσέχοντες μύθοις καὶ διδασκαλίαις δαιμονίων. ἔσονται γάρ, φησι, νεκροῖς λατρεύοντες, ὡς καὶ ἐν τῷ Ἰσραὴλ ἐσεβάσθησαν. Hoc enim in ipsis impletur; Deficient quidam a sanâ doctrinâ, intendentes fabulis, et doctrinis dæmoniorum: erunt enim, inquit, mortuos colentes, quemadmodum apud Israelitas honore sunt affecti. [Translated in the text.] Epiphan. advers. Hær. lxxviii. p. 1055. Tom. I. Edit. Petav.

² Beza in locum. Mr. Mann’s Critical Notes on some passages of Scripture, p. 92—103.

³ Mede’s Works, p. 637. Mill. in locum.

It appears then that the doctrines of dæmons, which prevailed so long in the Heathen world, should be revived and established in the Christian church: and is not the worship of saints and angels now in all respects the same that the worship of dæmons was in former times? The name only is different, the thing is identically the same. The Heathens, as we see, looked upon their dæmons as mediators and intercessors between God and men: and are not the saints and angels regarded in the same light by many professed Christians? Some tendency to the worshipping of angels was observed even in the apostle's time, insomuch that he thought proper to give this caution to the Colossians, (ii. 18.) Let no man beguile you of your reward, in a voluntary humility and worshipping of angels: and this admonition, we may suppose, checked and suppressed this worship for some generations. The worshipping of the dead was not introduced so early into the church; it was advanced by slower degrees; and what was at first nothing more than a pious and decent respect to the memory of saints and martyrs, degenerated at last into an impious and idolatrous adoration. At first ¹ annual festivals were instituted to their honour: the next step was praying in the cemeteries at their sepulchres; then their bodies were translated into churches; then a power of working miracles was attributed to their dead bodies, bones, and other relics; then their wonder-working relics were conveyed from place to place, and distributed among the other churches; then they were invoked and adored for performing such miracles, for assisting men in their devotions, and interceding for them with God; and not only the churches, but even the fields and highways, were filled with altars for invoking them.

¹ Bishop Stillingfleet in his Doctrines and Practices of the Church of Rome, in answer to the author of A Papist misrepresented and represented, treating of the second commandment, says, "The dispute about this is not whether the second commandment may be found in any of their books, but by what authority it comes to be left out in any; as he confesses it is in their short catechisms and manuals: but not only in these, for I have now before me the Reformed Office of the Blessed Virgin, printed at Salamanca, A.D. 1588, published by order of Pius V., where it is so left out; and so in the English Office at Antwerp, A.D. 1658. I wish he had told us in what public Office of their church it is to be found." Stillingfleet's Works, Vol. VI. p. 572. See also Adrichomii Theatrum Terræ Sanctæ, p. 212 et 300. where the ten commandments are thus ranged and divided; 1. Se Deum unum colant, idolis rejectis. 2. Suum nomen in vanum ne assumant. 3. Sababata significant. 4. Parentes honorent. 5. Non occidant. 6. Non mœchentur. 7. Non furentur. 8. Falsè ne testentur. 9. Non concupiscant proximi uxorem. 10. Non rem ejus quamcunque. [1. That they should worship one God, rejecting idols. 2. That they should not take his name in vain. 3. That they should sanctify the sabbath. 4. That they should honour their parents. 5. That they should not kill. 6. That they should not commit adultery. 7. That they should not steal. 8. That they should not bear false witness. 9. That they should not covet their neighbour's wife. 10. Nor any thing that belonged to him.]

² Clem. Alex. Stromat. Lib. iii. p. 550. Edit. Potter.

As early as the time of Constantine, the first Christian emperor, we find Eusebius, one of the best and most learned of the fathers, quoting and approving Hesiod's and Plato's notions before-mentioned concerning dæmons, and then ² adding, "These things are befitting upon the decease of the favourites of God, whom you may properly call the champions of the true religion: whence it is our custom to assemble at their sepulchres, and to make our prayers at them, and to honour their blessed souls." Here Eusebius compares the saints and martyrs with the dæmons of the Gentiles, and esteems them worthy of the same honour. The famous Antony, who was one of the great founders of monkery, gave it in charge ³ to the monks with his dying breath, "To take care and adhere to Christ in the first place, and then to the saints, that after death they may receive you as friends and acquaintance into the everlasting tabernacles." His advice was but too well followed; and the emperor Julian ⁴ reproacheth the Christians for adding many new dead men to that ancient dead man, Jesus. All the fathers almost of the fourth and fifth centuries contributed too much to the support and propagation of this superstition: and Theodoret in particular, having

¹ See these particulars historically deduced in Sir Isaac Newton's Observations on Daniel, chap. xiv. p. 203—231.

² Καὶ ταῦτα δὲ ἀρμόζει ἐπὶ τῇ τῶν θεοφιλῶν τελευτῇ, οὗς στρατιώτας τῆς ἀληθοῦς εὐσεβείας οὐκ ἂν ἀμάρτοις εἰπὼν, παραλαμβάνεσθαι. ὅθεν καὶ ἐπὶ τὰς θήκας αὐτῶν ἔθος ἡμῖν παρίναι, καὶ τὰς εὐχὰς παρὰ ταύταις ποιεῖσθαι, τιμῶν τε τὰς μακαρίας αὐτῶν ψυχάς. Quæ quidem in hominum Deo carissimorum obitus egregie conveniunt, quos veræ pietatis milites jure appellaris. Nam et eorum sepulchra celebrare, et preces ibi votaue nuncupare, et beatas illorum animas venerari consuevimus. [Translated in the text.] Euseb. Præp. Evang. Lib. xiii. cap. xi. p. 663. Edit. Vigeri.

³ σπουδάσατε δὲ μᾶλλον καὶ ὑμεῖς αἰεὶ συνάπτειν ἑαυτοὺς, προηγουμένως μὲν τῷ κυρίῳ, ἔπειτα δὲ τοῖς ἁγίοις. ἵνα μετὰ θάνατον ὑμᾶς εἰς τὰς αἰωνίους σκηνάς, ὡς φίλους καὶ γνωρίμους, δέξωνται καὶ αὐτοί. Id curate ut in primis vos Domino, dehinc Sanctis adjungatis: ut post mortem vos in æterna tabernacula, quasi amicos notosque sibi recipiant. [Translated in the text.] Vita Antonii, cap. xci. p. 863. Athanasii Oper. Tom. I. Part ii. Edit. Benedict.

⁴ — πολλοὺς ἐπιεισάγοντες τῷ πάλαι νεκρῷ τοὺς προσφάτους νεκροὺς—additis ad priscum illum mortuum novis mortuis. [Adding many new dead men to that ancient dead man.] Julian. apud Cyril. Lib. x. p. 335. Edit. Spanhemii.

cited the same passages of Hesiod and Plato,¹ reasons thus, “If then the poet hath called good men, after their decease, the deliverers and guardians of mortal men; and the best of philosophers hath confirmed the poet’s saying, and asserted that we ought to serve and adore their sepulchres; why, I beseech you, sirs, (speaking to the Greeks) do you blame these things which are done by us: for such as were illustrious for piety, and for the sake thereof received martyrdom, we also name deliverers and physicians, not calling them dæmons, (let us not be so desperately mad) but the friends and sincere servants of God.” Here Theodoret plainly allows the thing, and only disapproves the name. Again, he² saith in the same exalted strain concerning the martyrs, “They who are well pray for the continuance of health, and they who have been long sick pray for recovery: the barren also pray for children; and they who are to make a long journey desire them to be their companions and guides in the way; not going to them as gods, but applying to them as to divine men, and beseeching them to become intercessors for them with God.” Nay, he saith³ “that the martyrs have blotted out of the minds of men the memory of those who were called gods. For our Lord hath brought his dead into the place of your gods, whom he hath utterly abolished, and hath given their honour to the martyrs: for instead of the feasts of Jupiter and of Bacchus are now celebrated the festivals of Peter, and Paul, and Thomas, and the other martyrs. Wherefore, seeing the advantage of honouring the martyrs, fly, O friends, from the error of the dæmons; and using the martyrs as lights and guides, pursue the way which leadeth directly to God." Here are the doctrines of dæmons evidently revived, only the name is altered, and the saints are substituted for the dæmons, the divi or deified men of the Christians for the divi or deified men of the Heathens.

¹ Εἰ τοίνυν καὶ ὁ ποιητὴς καὶ ἐσθλοὺς καὶ ἀλεξικάκους καὶ φύλακας θνητῶν ἀνθρώπων, τοὺς ἀρίστα βεβιωκότας, εἰτα τελευτήσαντας, προσηγόρευσεν· ἐκράτυνε δὲ τόνδε τὸν λόγον τῶν φιλοσόφων ὁ ἀριστος, καὶ χρῆναι ἕξαι καὶ θεραπεύειν τούτων καὶ προσκυνεῖν τὰς θήκας· τί δῆτα μέμφεσθε τοῖς παρ’ ἡμῶν γιγνομένοις, ὧ βέλτιστοι; τοὺς γὰρ ἐν εὐσεβείᾳ λάμψαντας, καὶ ὑπὲρ ταύτης τὴν σφαγὴν δεξαμένους, ἀλεξικάκους ἡμεῖς καὶ ἱατροὺς ὀνομάζομεν, οὐ δαίμονας καλοῦντες, μὴ οὕτω λυτῆσαιμεν, ἀλλὰ θεοῦ φίλους καὶ εὐνοῦς θεράποντας. Quod si poeta, et bonos, et malorum depulsores, et custodes mortalium vocavit eos, qui optime vixerunt, deinde mortui sunt: ejusque sententiam philosophorum præstantissimus confirmavit, atque horum sepulcra colenda et adoranda censuit; quæ a nobis fiunt, optimi viri, cur damnatis? Nos enim pari modo, eos qui pietate claruerunt, proque eâ cæsi sunt, malorum depulsores, et medicos nominamus, dæmonas non appellamus, (absit a nobis hic furor) sed Dei amicos servosque benevolos. [Translated in the text.] Theod. Serm. viii. De Martyribus, p. 602. Tom. iv. Edit. Paris. 1642.

² οἱ μὲν ὑγιαίνοντες, αἰτοῦσι τῆς ὑγείας τὴν φυλακὴν, οἱ δὲ τινι νόσῳ παλαίοντες, τὴν τῶν παθημάτων ἀπαλλαγὴν· αἰτοῦσι δὲ καὶ ἄγονοι παῖδας—καὶ οἱ μὲν εἰς τινα ἀποδημίαν στελλόμενοι λιπαροῦσι τούτους ξυνοδοιπόρους γενέσθαι, καὶ τῆς ὁδοῦ ἡγεμόνας—οὐκ ὡς θεοῖς αὐτοῖς προσίοντες, ἀλλ’ ὡς θεοῖς ἀνθρώπους ἀντιβολοῦντες, καὶ γενέσθαι πρεσβύτας ὑπὲρ σφῶν παρακαλοῦντες. Qui integræ sunt valetudine, hanc sibi conservari, qui autem morbo quopiam conflictantur, hunc depelli petunt. Petunt et liberos qui his carent.—Qui peregrinationem aliquam auspicantur, ab his petunt, ut viæ sibi comites sint, ducesque itineris—non illos adeuntes ut deos, sed tanquam divinos homines eos orantes, intercessoresque sibi ut esse velint postulantes. [Translated in the text.] Ibid. p. 605, 606.

³ καὶ γὰρ αὐτῶν τῶν καλουμένων θεῶν τὴν μνήμην ἐκ τῆς τῶν ἀνθρώπων ἐξήλειψαν διανοίας.—τοὺς γὰρ οἰκίους νεκροὺς ὁ δεσπότης ἀντίεισεν τοῖς ὑμετέροις θεοῖς. καὶ τοὺς μὲν φρούρους ἀπέφηνε, τούτοις δὲ τὰ ἐκείνων ἀπένειμε γέρα. ἀντὶ γὰρ δὴ τῶν Πανδίων, καὶ Διονυσίων—Πέτρον, καὶ Παύλον, καὶ Θωμᾶ,—καὶ τῶν ἄλλων μαρτύρων, ἐπιτελοῦνται δημοθόιναι,—ὁρῶντες τοίνυν τῆς τῶν μαρτύρων τιμῆς τὸ ὠφέλιμον, φεύγετε, ὦ φίλοι, τῶν δαιμόνων τὸν πλάνον, καὶ τούτους φωστήησι καὶ ποδηγοῖς κεχημένοι, τὴν πρὸς θεὸν ἄγουνσαν πορείαν ὁδεύσατε.—cum eorum quoque qui passim dii ferebantur, memoriam e mente hominum aboleverint—suos enim mortuos dominus deus noster in templa pro diis vestris induxit: ac illos quidem cassos vanosque reddidit, his autem honorem illorum attribuit. Pro Pandiis enim ac Dionysiis—Petri, et Pauli, et Thomæ—aliorumque martyrum solemnitates peraguntur.—Cum igitur ex honore martyribus delato quid utilitatis proveniat cernatis, fugite, amici, dæmonum errorem, præviāque

The promoters of this worship were sensible that it was the same, and that the one succeeded to the other; and as the worship is the same, so likewise is it performed with the same ceremonies, whether these ceremonies were derived from the same source of superstition common to the whole race of mankind, or were the direct copies of one another. The ¹ burning of incense or perfumes on several altars at one and the same time; the sprinkling of holy water, or a mixture of salt and common water, at going into and coming out of places of public worship; the lighting up of a great number of lamps and wax candles, in broad day-light, before the altars and statues of their deities; the hanging up of votive offerings and rich presents as attestations of so many miraculous cures and deliverances from diseases and dangers; the canonization or deification of deceased worthies; the assigning of distinct provinces or prefectures to departed heroes and saints; the worshipping and adoring of the dead in their sepulchres, shrines, and relics; the consecrating and bowing down to images; the attributing of miraculous powers and virtues to idols; the setting up of little oratories, altars, and statues, in the streets and highways, and on the tops of mountains; the carrying of images and relics in pompous processions with numerous lights, and with music and singing; flagellations at solemn seasons, under the notion of penance; the making a sanctuary of temples and churches; a great variety of religious orders and fraternities of priests; the shaving of priests, or the tonsure, as it is called, on the crown of their heads; the imposing of celibacy and vows of chastity on the religious of both sexes; all these and many more rites and ceremonies are equally parts of Pagan and of Popish superstition. Nay, the very same temples, the very same altars, the very same images, which once were consecrated to Jupiter and the other dæmons, are now re-consecrated to the Virgin Mary and the other illorum face atque ductu, viam capessite, quæ ad deum perducit. [Translated in the text.] Ibid. p. 606, 607.

¹ The reader may see this conformity between Popery and Paganism proved at large by Dr. Henry More, in his Second Part of the Mystery of Iniquity, B. i. chap. xvii. by Dr. Middleton, in his Letter from Rome, by Mr. Seward, in his Dissertation on the Conformity between Popery and Paganism, and other learned and ingenious authors.

saints. The very same titles and inscriptions are ascribed to both; the very same prodigies and miracles are related of these as of those. In short, the whole almost of Paganism is converted and applied to Popery; the one is manifestly formed upon the same plan and principles as the other; so that there is not only a conformity, but even an uniformity in the worship of ancient and modern, of Heathen and Christian Rome.

III. Such an apostacy as this, of reviving the doctrines of dæmons and worshipping the dead, was not likely to succeed and take place immediately; it should prevail and prosper in the latter times. The phrase of the latter times or days, or the last times or days, as it hath been observed upon ¹ a former occasion, signifies any time yet to come; but denotes more particularly the times of Christianity. So we find it used by some of the ancient prophets, as, for example, Isaiah, Micah, and Joel. Isaiah saith, (ii. 2.) And it shall come to pass in the last days that the mountain of the Lord's house shall be established in the top of the mountains, and shall be exalted above the hills; and all nations shall flow unto it. Micah to the same purpose, and almost in the same words, (iv. 1.) But in the last days it shall come to pass, that the mountain of the house of the Lord shall be established in the top of the mountains, and it shall be exalted above the hills, and people shall flow unto it. And Joel, as he is quoted by St. Peter, (Acts ii. 16, 17.) But this is that which was spoken by the prophet Joel; And it shall come to pass in the last days (saith God), I will pour out of my Spirit upon all flesh. The times of Christianity may properly be called the latter times or days, or the last times or days, because it is the last of all God's revelations to mankind. Daniel also having measured all future time by the succession of four principal kingdoms, and having affirmed that the kingdom of Christ should be set up during the last of the four kingdoms, the phrase of the latter times or days, or of the last times or days, may still more properly signify the times of the Christian dispensation. Thus it is applied by the author of the epistle to the Hebrews, (Heb. i. 1, 2.) God, who, at sundry times, and in divers manners, spake in time past unto the fathers by the prophets, hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son. Thus also St. Peter, (1 Pet. i. 20.) Christ verily was fore-ordained before the foundation of the world, but was manifest in these last times for you.

But there is a farther notation of time in the prophet Daniel; there are the last times taken singly and comparatively, or the latter times (as I may say after Mr. Mede) of the last times, which are times of the little horn or of Antichrist, (Dan. vii.) who should arise during the latter part of the last of the four kingdoms, and should be destroyed together with it, after having continued a time and times and half a time. What these times signify, and how they are to be computed, hath been ¹ shown in a former dissertation; and it is in reference to these times especially, that many things under the Gospel dispensation are predicted to fall out in the latter times or days, or in the last times or days. So St. Peter speaketh (2 Pet. iii. 3.) There shall come in the last days scoffers, walking after their own lusts. So too St. Jude, (ver. 17, 18.) Beloved, remember ye the words which were spoken before of the apostles of our Lord Jesus Christ: How that they told you, there should be mockers in the last time, who should walk after their own ungodly lusts. So likewise St. Paul (2 Tim. iii. 1.) This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come. These also are the latter times spoken of in the text. In these times the worship of the dead should principally prevail; and that it hath so prevailed, all mankind can testify. The practice might begin before, but the popes have authorized and established it by law. The popish worship is more the worship of dæmons than of God or Christ.

¹ In Dissertation iv.

IV. Another remarkable peculiarity of this prophecy is the solemn and emphatic manner in which it is delivered, The Spirit speaketh expressly. Every one will readily apprehend, that by the Spirit is meant the Holy Spirit of God, which inspired the prophets and apostles. So the Spirit (Acts viii. 29.) said unto Philip, Go near, and join thyself to this chariot. So the Spirit (Acts x. 19.) said unto Peter, Behold, three men seek thee. So the Spirit (Rev. xiv. 13.) saith, Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord, that they may rest from their labours. But these things the Spirit only said; it is not affirmed, that he said them expressly. The Spirit's speaking expressly, as ² Erasmus and others expound it, is his speaking precisely and certainly, not obscurely and involvedly, as he was wont to speak in the prophets: and Whitby argues farther, that in those times of prophecy, when the prophets had the government of the churches, and spake still in the public assemblies, it might reasonably be said, The Spirit speaketh expressly, what they taught expressly in the church. St. Paul had indeed before predicted this apostacy both in discourse and in a letter to the Thessalonians, and he is by some supposed to refer to that epistle in this place. But though the predictions are alike, yet they are not expressly the same: the general subject is the same in both, but the particular circumstances are different, so that the one cannot be said to be copied from the other. There the apostacy is predicted, here it is specified wherein it is to consist. I would therefore prefer Mr. Mede's interpretation, that the Spirit speaketh expressly what he speaketh in express words in some place or other of divine writ; and the Spirit hath spoken the same things in express words before in the prophecy of Daniel. Daniel hath foretold in express words the worship of new dæmons or demi-gods: (Dan. xi. 38.) And with God, or instead of God, Mahuzzim in his estate shall he honour; even with God, or instead of God, those whom his fathers knew not shall he honour with gold and silver, and with precious stones, and desirable things. The Mahuzzim of Daniel are the same as the dæmons of St. Paul, Gods-protectors, or saints-protectors, defenders and guardians of mankind. Daniel also hath foretold in express words, that this worship should be accompanied with a prohibition of marriage: (ver. 37.) Neither shall he regard the God of his fathers, nor the desire of women; that is, he shall neglect and discourage the desire of wives, and all conjugal affection. Daniel hath likewise intimated that this worship should take place in the latter times; for he hath described it in the latter part of his prophecy, and these times he hath expressly named a time and times and half a time. If the reader hath been at the trouble of perusing the latter dissertation upon the eleventh chapter of Daniel, he will more easily perceive the connexion and resemblance between the two prophecies. This, therefore, is a prophecy not dictated merely by private suggestion and inspiration, but taken out of the written word. It is a prophecy not only of St. Paul, but of Daniel too, or rather of Daniel confirmed and approved by St. Paul.

¹ In Dissertation xiv.

² Πηρώς præscriptè sive præcisè, non obscurè et involutè, quemadmodum loqui solet in prophetis. [Πηρώς signifies in a limited and precise manner, in opposition to that which is obscure and involved, as God useth to speak by the prophets.] Erasm. in locum. Whitby, ibid.

V. Having shown wherein the great apostacy of the latter times consists, namely, in reviving the doctrines concerning dæmons, and worshipping the dead, the apostle proceeds to describe by what means and by what persons it should be propagated and established in the world: speaking lies in hypocrisy, having their conscience seared with a hot iron, or rather through the hypocrisy of liars, having their conscience seared with a hot iron. For the preposition ἐν in, often signifies as well by or through: as in St. Mark's Gospel, (ix. 29.) This kind can come forth by nothing but ἐν προσευχῇ καὶ νηστείᾳ, by prayer and fasting: and again in the Acts of the Apostles, (xvii. 31.) God hath appointed a day in the which he will judge the world in righteousness, ἐν ἀνδρὶ, by that man whom he hath ordained: and again in St. Paul's epistle to the Romans, (xii. 21.) Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil, ἐν ἀγαθῷ, by or with good: and again in St. Paul's epistle to Titus, (i. 9.) That he may be able ἐν διδασκαλίᾳ ὑγιαίνουσῃ by sound doctrine both to exhort and to convince the gainsayers: and so likewise in the text, ἐν ὑποκρίσει, by or through hypocrisy. Liars too or speaking lies, ψευδολόγων, cannot possibly be joined in conjunction with τινὲς, some, and προσέχοντες, giving heed, because they are in the nominative case, and this in the genitive. Neither can it well be joined in conjunction with δαμονίων, dæmons or devils: for how can dæmons or devils be said to speak lies in hypocrisy, and to have their conscience seared with a hot iron? Besides, if δαμονίων, dæmons, be taken for devils, and not in the sense that we have explained it, nor with the addition of Epiphanius, then it is not expressed at all, wherein the great apostacy of the latter times consists. The forbidding to marry and commanding to abstain from meats are circumstances only and appendages of the great apostacy, and not the great apostacy itself, which is always represented in Scripture as spiritual fornication or idolatry of one kind or other, and it is not likely that the apostle should specify the circumstantial errors, and omit the main and capital crime. In this place it is not the great apostacy that he is describing, but the characters and qualities of the authors and promoters of it. Castalio, therefore, very properly ¹ translates ἐν ὑποκρίσει ψευδολόγων, through the dissimulation of men speaking lies: I have added men, says he, lest speaking lies and what follows should be referred to dæmons or devils. It is plain then that the great apostacy of the latter times was to prevail through the hypocrisy of liars having their conscience seared with a hot iron: and hath not the great idolatry of Christians, and the worship of the dead particularly, been diffused and advanced in the world by such instruments and agents, who have (Rom. i. 25.) changed the truth of God into a lie, and worshipped and served the creature more than the Creator, who is blessed for ever? It is impossible to relate or enumerate all the various falsehoods and lies, which have been invented and propagated for this purpose; the fabulous books forged under the names of apostles, saints, and martyrs; the fabulous legends of their lives, actions, sufferings, and deaths; the fabulous miracles ascribed to their sepulchres, bones, and other relics; the fabulous dreams and revelations, visions and apparitions of the dead to the living; and even the fabulous saints, who never existed but in the imagination of their worshippers. And all these stories the monks, the priests, the bishops of the church, have imposed and obtruded upon mankind, it is difficult to say, whether with greater artifice or cruelty, with greater confidence or hypocrisy and pretended sanctity, a more hardened face or a more hardened conscience. The history of the church, saith Pascal, is the history of truth; but as written by bigoted papists, it is rather the history of lies. So well doth this prophecy coincide and agree with the preceding one, that the coming of the man of sin should be after the working of Satan, with all power, and signs, and lying wonders, and with all deceivableness of unrighteousness.

VI. A farther character of these men is given in the following words, Forbidding to marry. The same hypocritical liars, who should promote the worship of dæmons, should also prohibit lawful marriage. Saturnius, or Saturninus, who flourished in the second century, was, as Theodoret ² affirms, the first Christian who declared

¹ Per simulationem hominum falsiloquorum] Hominum addi, ne falsiloquorum et sequentia referrentur ad dæmonia. [Translated in the text.] Castal. in locum.

² τὸν δὲ γάμον οὗτος πρῶτος τοῦ διαβόλου διδασκαλίαν ὠνόμασε, νομοθετεῖ δὲ καὶ ἐμψύχων ἀπέχεσθαι. Nuptias hic primus omnium diaboli doctrinam appellavit. Jubet autem et ab animatis abstinere. [And he first of all called marriage a doctrine of the devil, and brings in a law to abstain from animal food.] Theod. Hæret. Fab. Lib. i. cap. iii. p. 194. Tom. IV. Edit. Paris. 1642.

matrimony to be the doctrine of the devil, and exhorted men to abstain from animal food. But according ¹ to Irenæus and Eusebius, Tatian, who had been a disciple of Justin Martyr, was the first author of this heresy; at least he concurred in opinion with Saturninus and Marcion; and their followers were called the Continents, from their continence in regard to marriage and meats. The Gnostics likewise, as Irenæus and Clemens Alexandrinus ² inform us, asserted that to marry and beget children proceeded from the devil; and under pretence of continence were impious both against the creature and Creator, teaching that men ought not to bring into the world other unhappy persons, nor supply food for death. Other heretics in the third century advanced the same doctrines, but they were generally reputed heretics, and their doctrines were condemned by the church. The council of Eliberis in Spain, which was held in the year of Christ 305, was I think the first that by public authority ³ forbade the clergy to marry, and commanded even those who were married to abstain altogether from their wives. The council of Neocæsarea, in the year 314, only ⁴ forbade unmarried presbyters to marry on the penalty of degradation. At the first general council of Nice, in the year 325, a motion was ⁵ made to restrain the clergy from all conjugal society with their wives: but it was strongly opposed by Paphnutius, a famous Egyptian bishop, who yet himself was never married; and to him the whole council agreed, and left every man to his liberty as before. But the monks had not yet prevailed; the monks soon after overspread the eastern church, and the western too: and as the monks were the first who brought single life into repute, so they were the first also who revived and promoted the worship of dæmons. It is a thing universally known, that one of the primary and most essential laws and constitutions of all monks, whether solitary or associated, whether living in deserts or in convents, is the profession of single life, to abstain from marriage themselves, and to discourage it all they can

¹ Iren. apud Euseb. Eccles. Hist. Lib. iv. cap. xxix.

² Nubere et generare a Satana dicunt esse. ["They say to marry and beget children proceeds from Satan."] Iren. Lib. i. cap. xxii. p. 97. Edit. Grabe. Τοῖς δὲ εὐφύμως δι' ἐγκρατείας ἀσεβοῦσιν, εἰς τὴν κρίσιν καὶ τὸν δημιουργόν, τὸν παντοκράτορα μόνον Θεόν, καὶ διδάσκουσι μὴ δεῖν παραδέχεσθαι γάμον καὶ παιδοποιεῖν, μηδὲ ἀντιεσάγειν τῷ κόσμῳ δυστυχήσαντας ἑτέρους, μηδὲ ἐπιχορηγεῖν τῷ θανάτῳ τροφήν.—Adversus autem alterum genus hæreticorum, qui speciose per continentiam impie se gerunt, tum in creaturam, tum in sanctum opificem, qui est solus Deus omnipotens; et dicunt non esse admittendum matrimonium et liberorum procreationem, nec in mundum esse inducendos alios infelices futuros, nec suppeditandum morti nutrimentum—["And against those who under a specious appearance of a regard to continency, are guilty of impiety both against the creature and the Creator, the Almighty and only God; who teach that men ought not to marry and beget children, nor to introduce other miserable beings into the world, nor to furnish food for death."] Clem. Alex. Strom. Lib. iii. cap. vi. p. 531. Edit. Potter.

³ Conc. Elib. c. xxxiii. S. Basnagii Annales, Vol. II. p. 522 et 600.

⁴ Conc. Neoc. Can. i. Presbyter si uxorem duxerit, ab ordine suo removeatur. ["If a Presbyter marry let him be degraded."] S. Basnag. ibid. p. 522 et 657.

⁵ Socratis Hist. Eccles. Lib. i. cap. xi. Sozomen, Lib. i. cap. xxiii. S. Basnag. ibid. p. 707. Bingham's Antiquities, Book iv. chap. v. sect. vii.

in others. It is equally certain, that the monks had the principal share in promoting and propagating the worship of the dead; and either out of credulity, or for worse reasons, recommended it to the people with all the pomp and power of their eloquence in their homilies and orations. Read only some of the most celebrated fathers; read the ¹orations of Basil on the martyr Mamas, and on the forty martyrs; read the orations of Ephraim Syrus on the death of Basil, and on the forty martyrs, and on the praises of the holy martyrs; read the orations of Gregory Nazianzen on Athanasius, and on Basil, and on Cyprian; read the orations of Gregory Nysen on Ephraim Syrus, and on the martyr Theodorus, and on Meletius, bishop of Antioch; read the sixty-sixth, and other homilies of Chrysostom; read his oration on the martyrs of Egypt, and other orations: and you will be greatly astonished to find how full they are of this sort of superstition, what powers and miracles are ascribed to the saints, what prayers and praises are offered up to them. All these were monks, and most of them bishops too, in the fourth century: and the superstitious worship which these monks began, the succeeding monks completed, till at length the very relics and images of the dead were worshipped as much as the dead themselves. The monks then were the principal promoters of the worship of the dead in former times: and who are the great patrons and advocates of the same worship now? Are not their legitimate successors and descendants the monks and priests and bishops of the church of Rome? and do not they also profess and recommend single life, as well as the worship of saints and angels? As long ago as the year 386, pope ²Siricius held a council of eighty bishops at Rome, and forbad the clergy to cohabit with their wives. This decree was confirmed by pope ³Innocent at the beginning of the fifth century; and the celibacy of the clergy was fully decreed by ⁴Gregory the Seventh, in the eleventh century; and this hath been the universal law and practice of the church ever since. Thus hath the worship of dæmons and the prohibition of marriage constantly gone hand in hand together: and as they who maintain the one maintain the other, so it is no less remarkable, that they who disclaim the one disclaim also the other, and assert the liberty which nature, or (to speak more properly) the Author of nature hath indulged to all mankind.

Our Maker bids increase: Who bids abstain,
But our destroyer, foe to God and man?

MILTON.

VII. The last note and character of these men is commanding to abstain from meats, which God hath created to be received with ¹ The reader may see some extracts out of all these in Sir Isaac Newton's Observations on Daniel, chap. xiv.

² Siric. Decr. c. vii. S. Basnage, ibid. p. 522.

³ Innocent Decr. c. xii. S. Basnage, ibid. et Vol. III. p. 106.

⁴ S. Basnage, Vol. II. p. 523.

thanksgiving of them which believe and know the truth: where in the original the word commanding is not expressed but understood, with an ellipsis that commentators¹ have observed to be sometimes used by the best classic authors. The same lying hypocrites who should promote the worship of dæmons, should not only prohibit lawful marriage, but likewise impose unnecessary abstinence from meats: and these two, as indeed it is fit they should, usually go together, as constituent parts of the same hypocrisy. As we learn from² Irenæus, the ancient heretics called Continents, who taught that matrimony was not to be contracted, reprobating the primitive work of God, and tacitly accusing Him who made man and woman for the procreation of human kind, introduced abstinence also from animal food, showing themselves ungrateful to God who created all things. It is as much the law and constitution of all monks to abstain from meats as from marriage. Some never eat any flesh, others only of certain kinds and on certain days. Frequent fasts are the rule, the boast of their order; and their carnal humility is their spiritual pride. So lived the monks of the ancient church; so live, with less strictness perhaps but with greater ostentation, the monks and friars of the church of Rome: and these have been the principal propagators and defenders of the worship of the dead, both in former and in later times. The worship of the dead is indeed so monstrously absurd as well as impious, that there was hardly any possibility of its ever succeeding and prevailing in the world, but by hypocrisy and lies: but that these particular sorts of hypocrisy, celibacy under pretence of chastity, and abstinence under pretence of devotion, should be employed for this purpose, the Spirit of God alone could foresee and foretel. There is no necessary connexion between the worship of the dead, and forbidding to marry, and commanding to abstain from meats: and yet it is certain that the great advocates of this worship have, by their pretended purity and mortification, procured the greater reverence to their persons, and the readier reception to their doctrines. But this idle, popish, monkish abstinence, is as unworthy of a Christian as it is unnatural to a man. It is perverting the purpose of nature, and commanding to abstain from meats, which God hath created to be received with thanksgiving by the believers and them who know the truth. The apostle therefore approves and sanctifies the religious custom of blessing God at our meals, as our Saviour, when he was to distribute the loaves and the fishes, (Matt. xiv. 19; xv. 36.) looked up to heaven, and blessed, and brake: and what then can be said of those, who have their tables spread with the most plentiful gifts of God, and yet constantly sit down and rise up again without suffering so much as one thought of the Giver to intrude upon them? It is but a thought; it is but a glimpse of devotion; and can they, who refuse even that, be reputed either to believe, or to know the truth? Man is free to partake of all the good creatures of God, but thanksgiving is the necessary condition. For, as the apostle subjoins in the next verses, (ver. 4, 5.) every creature of God is good, and nothing to be refused, if it be received with thanksgiving: for it is sanctified by the word of God and prayer. The apostle proceeds to say, that it is the duty of the ministers of the Gospel to press and inculcate these things, (ver. 6.) If thou put the brethren in remembrance of these things, thou shalt be a good minister of Jesus Christ, nourished up in the words of faith, and of good doctrine, whereunto thou hast attained. All that is preached up of such abstinence and mortification, as well as all the legends of the saints, are no better than profane and old wives' fables: godliness is the only thing that will truly avail us here and hereafter, (ver. 7, 8.) But refuse profane and old wives' fables, and exercise thyself rather unto godliness: for bodily exercise profiteth little: but godliness is profitable unto all things, having promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come.

¹ Est hic ἔλλειψις contrarii. Deest enim κελεύοντων, quod addit hunc locum citans Epiphanius, aut ποιούντων quod addit Syrus. Similis ferme ἔλλειψις, 1 Cor. xiv. 34. et hic supra, ii. 12. Sic Phædrus, Non veto dimitti, verum cruciari fame, supple jubeo. ["There is here an ellipsis, or a word wanting, of a contrary signification. For the word κελεύοντων, commanding, which Epiphanius when quoting this passage supplies, or ποιούντων, making, which is the word supplied by the Syriac interpreter, is wanting. There is a similar ellipsis in 1 Cor. xiv. 34. and in chap. ii. 12. Thus Phædrus also saith, Non veto dimitti, verum cruciari fame, that is, I do not forbid her to be divorced, but command that she should be tortured to death by hunger, where the word jubeo, I command, is to be supplied."] Grot. in locum.

² οἱ καλούμενοι ἐγκρατεῖς ἀγαμίαν ἐκήρυξαν ἀθετοῦντες τὴν ἀρχαίαν πλάσιν τοῦ Θεοῦ, καὶ ἥρέμα κατηγοροῦντες τοῦ ἄρρεν καὶ θῆλυ εἰς γένεσιν ἀνθρώπων πεποιηκότος: καὶ τῶν λεγομένων παρ' αὐτοῖς ἐμψύχων ἀποχὴν εἰσηγήσαντο, ἀχαριστοῦντες τῷ παντὰ πεποιηκότι Θεῷ. Qui vocantur continentes, docuerunt non contrahendum esse matrimonium: reprobantes scilicet primitivum illud opificium Dei, et tacite accusantes Deum qui masculinum et feminam condidit ad propagationem generis humani. Induxerunt etiam abstinentiam ab esu eorum quæ animata appellant, ingratos se exhibentes erga eum qui universa creavit Deum. ["They who are called Continents, preach that marriage is not to be contracted, making void the primitive work of God, and tacitly blaming him who made male and female for the procreation of mankind. They have brought in an abstinence from the use of what is called animal food, showing themselves unthankful to that God who created all things."] Iren. apud Euseb. Eccles. Hist. lib. iv. cap. xxix.

XXIV.

AN ANALYSIS

OF

THE REVELATION.

IN TWO PARTS.

 PART I.

It is very useful, as well as very curious and entertaining, to trace the rise and progress of religions and governments; and in taking a survey of all the different religions and governments of the world, there is none perhaps that will strike us more with wonder and astonishment than that of Rome, how such a mystery of iniquity could succeed at first, and prosper so long, and under the name of Christ introduce Antichrist. Other heresies and schisms have obtained place and credit among men for a time, and then have been happily exposed and suppressed. Arianism once succeeded almost universally; for a while it grew and flourished mightily, but in process of time it withered and faded away. But popery hath now prevailed I know not how many centuries, and her renowned hierarchs have not, like the fathers of other sects, stole into secret meetings and conventicles, but have infected the very heart of the Christian church, and usurped the chief seat of the western world: have not only engaged in their cause private persons, and led captive silly women, but have trampled on the necks of princes and emperors themselves, and the lords and tyrants of mankind have yet been the blind slaves and vassals of the holy see. Rome Christian hath carried her conquests even farther than Rome Pagan. The Romanists themselves make universality and perpetuity the special marks and characters of their church: and no people more industrious than they in compassing sea and land to make proselytes.

All sincere protestants cannot but be greatly grieved at the success and prevalence of this religion, and the papists as much boast and glory in it, and for this reason proudly denominate theirs the catholic religion. But it will abate all confidence on the one hand, and banish all scruples on the other, if we consider that this is nothing more than what was signified beforehand by the Spirit of prophecy. It is directly foretold, that there should be such a power as that of the Pope of Rome, exercised in the Christian church, and that it should prevail for a long season, but at last should have a fall. Several clear and express prophecies to this purpose have been produced out of Daniel and St. Paul in the course of these dissertations; but others clearer still, and more copious and particular, may be found in the Apocalypse or Revelation of St. John, who was the greatest, as he was the last, prophet of the Christian dispensation, and hath comprehended in this book, and pointed out the most memorable events and revolutions in the church from the apostles' days to the consummation of the mystery of God.

But to this book of the Apocalypse or Revelation it is usually objected, that it is so wrapt and involved in figures and allegories, is so wild and visionary, is so dark and obscure, that any thing or nothing, at least nothing clear and certain, can be proved or collected from it. So learned a man as Scaliger is noted for saying that ¹Calvin was wise, because he wrote no comment upon the Revelation. A celebrated ²wit and divine of our own church hath not scrupled to assert that that book either finds a man mad, or makes him so. Whitby, though an useful commentator on the other books of the New Testament, would not yet adventure upon the Revelation. "I confess I do it not ³(says he) for want of wisdom; that is because I neither have sufficient reading nor judgment, to discern the intendment of the prophecies contained in that book." Voltaire is pleased to say, that Sir Isaac Newton wrote his comment upon the Revelation, to console mankind for the great superiority that he had over them in other respects: but Voltaire, though a very agreeable, is yet a very superficial writer, and often mistaken in his judgment of men and things. He never was more mistaken, than in affirming that Sir Isaac Newton has explained the Revelation in the same manner with all those who went before him; a most evident proof that he had never read either the one or the others, for if ever he had read them, he must have perceived the difference. However, it is undeniable that even the most learned men have miscarried in nothing more than in their comments and explanations of this book. To explain this book perfectly is not the work of one man or of one age, and probably it will never all be clearly understood, till it is all fulfilled. It is a memorable thing that Bishop Burnet ⁴relates to this purpose of his friend the most learned Bishop Lloyd of Worcester. He says that that ex-

¹ Calvinus sapit, quod in Apocalypsin non scripsit. [Translated in the text.] Vide Scaligerana secunda, p. 41. But Scaliger was not very consistent in his opinion of the Revelation. For, as the Bishop of Rochester remarks, he says in another place, Hoc possum gloriari me nihil ignorare eorum quæ in Apocalypsi, Canonico vere libro, prophetice scribuntur, præter illud caput in quo væ septies repetitur: ignoro enim idne tempus præterierit, an futurum sit. ["This I can boast of, that I am ignorant of none of those things that are prophetically written in that truly canonical book the Revelation, excepting that chapter where a woe is seven times repeated. For I know not whether that time be past, or still to come."] Scaligeran. 1^{ma} p. 13.

² Dr. South. See Vol. II. Sermon ii. p. 422. 6th edition.

³ See Whitby's Preface to his Treatise of the Millennium.

⁴ Burnet's History of his own Times, Vol. II. p. 204.

cellent person was employed above twenty years in studying the Revelation with an amazing diligence and exactness, and that he had foretold and proved from the Revelation the peace made between the Turk and the emperor in the year 1698, long before it was made, and that after this he said the time of the Turk's hurting the Papal Christians was at an end: and he was so positive in this, that he consented that all his scheme should be laid aside, if ¹ ever the Turk engaged in a new war with them. But it is very well known, that the Turk and the emperor have engaged in a new war since that time, and probably may engage again, so that by his own consent all his scheme is to be laid aside: and if so great a master of learning, so nice a critic in chronology and history, one who perhaps understood the prophetic writings better than any man of his time, was so grossly mistaken in the most positive of his calculations, it may serve at least as an admonition to others of inferior abilities to beware how they meddle with these matters, and rather to avoid the rocks and shelves about which they see so many shipwrecks.

Not that this book is therefore to be despised or neglected. They who censure and dissuade the study of it, do it for the most part because they have not studied it themselves, and imagine the difficulties to be greater than they are in reality. It is still the sure word of prophecy; and men of learning and leisure cannot better employ their time and abilities than in studying and explaining this book, provided they do it, as Lord ² Bacon adviseth, "with great wisdom, sobriety, and reverence." Lord Bacon adviseth it with regard to all the prophecies, but such caution and reverence are more especially due to this of St. John. "The folly of interpreters has been," as Sir Isaac Newton ³ observes, "to foretel times and things by this prophecy, as if God designed to make them prophets. By this rashness they have not only exposed themselves, but brought the prophecy also into contempt. The design of God was much otherwise. He gave this and the prophecies of the Old Testament, not to gratify men's curiosities by enabling them to foreknow things, but that after they were fulfilled they might be interpreted by the event, and his own providence, not the interpreters, be then manifested thereby to the world." If therefore we would confine ourselves to the rules of just criticism, and not indulge lawless and extravagant fancies; if we would be content with sober and genuine interpretation, and not pretend to be prophets, nor presume to be wise above what is written; we should more consider those passages which have already been accomplished, than frame conjectures about those which remain yet to be fulfilled. Where the facts may be compared with the predictions, there we have some clue to guide us through the labyrinth: and though it may be difficult to trace out every minute resemblance, yet there are some strong lines and features, which I think cannot fail of striking every one, who will but impartially and duly examine them.

¹ Upon reflection, I think it not impossible that Bishop Burnet might mistake, and so might misrepresent Bishop Lloyd's meaning. If he said, indeed, that the Turks would never engage in a new war with the papal Christians, he was plainly in the wrong, the event hath shown that he was in the wrong. If he said only that the Turks would no more hurt the papal Christians, would no more subdue any Christian state or potentate, he was probably in the right; the prophet seemeth to intimate the same thing, and the event hitherto confirms it.

² — Magnâ cum sapientiâ, sobrietate, et reverentiâ. [Translated in the text.] See the quotation prefixed to the Introduction.

³ Sir Isaac Newton's Observations upon the Apocalypse, chap. i. p. 251.

We should be wanting to the subject, and leave our work unfinished, if we should omit so material a part of prophecy. And yet such a disquisition is not to be entered upon hastily, but after a diligent perusal of the best authors, both foreign and domestic; and it will be happy if out of them all there can be formed one entire system, complete and consistent in all its parts. As Sir Isaac Newton ¹says, "Among the interpreters of the last age, there is scarce one of note who hath not made some discovery worth knowing." But our greatest obligations are owing to three particularly, Mr. Mede, Vitringa, and Daubuz. We shall find reason generally to concur with one or more of them; but as they often differ from one another, so we shall differ sometimes from all the three, and follow other guides, or perhaps no guides at all. What satisfaction we may give to others is very uncertain; we shall at least have the satisfaction ourselves of tracing the ways of providence. It is little encouragement to this kind of studies to reflect, that two of the most learned men of their times, as well as two of the best interpreters of this book, Mr. Mede and Mr. Daubuz, the one died a fellow of a college, and the other a vicar of a poor vicarage in Yorkshire. Mr. Mede, as we read in the memoirs of his life, was so modest, that he wished for nothing more than a donative or sinecure to be added to his fellowship, but even this he could not obtain.

Alas! what boots it with incessant care,
To tend the homely slighted shepherd's trade,
And strictly meditate the thankless Muse?
Were it not better done as others use, &c.

MILTON'S LYCIDAS.

But, however, let us proceed, encouraged by that divine benediction, Blessed is he that readeth, and they that hear the words of this prophecy, and keep those things which are written therein.

CHAPTER I.

1 THE Revelation of Jesus Christ, which God gave unto him, to show unto his servants things which must shortly come to pass; and he sent and signified it by his angel unto his servant John:

¹ Sir Isaac Newton, ibid. p. 253.

2 Who bare record of the word of God, and of the testimony of Jesus Christ, and of all things that he saw.

3 Blessed is he that readeth, and they that hear the words of this prophecy, and keep those things which are written therein for the time is at hand.

The book opens (ver. 1—3.) with the title or inscription of the book itself; the scope and design of it, to foretel things which should shortly begin to be fulfilled, and succeed in their due season and order, till all were accomplished; and the blessing pronounced on him who shall read and explain it, and on them who shall hear and attend to it. The distinction is remarkable of him that readeth, and of them that hear; for books being then in manuscript were in much fewer hands, and it was a much readier way to publish a prophecy or any thing by public reading than by transcribing copies. It was too the custom of that age to read all the apostolical writings in the congregations of the faithful: but now only some few parts of this book are appointed to be read on certain festivals.

4 John to the seven churches which are in Asia: Grace be unto you, and peace from him which is, and which was, and which is to come; and from the seven spirits which are before his throne:

5 And from Jesus Christ, who is the faithful witness, and the first-begotten of the dead, and the prince of the kings of the earth: Unto him that loved us, and washed us from our sins in his own blood,

6 And hath made us kings and priests unto God and his Father: to him be glory and dominion for ever and ever. Amen.

7 Behold he cometh with clouds; and every eye shall see him, and they also which pierced him: and all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of him: even so, Amen.

8 I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the ending, saith the Lord, which is, and which was, and which is to come, the Almighty.

The apostle dedicates his book (ver. 4—6.) to the seven churches of the Lydian or proconsular Asia, wishing them grace and peace from the eternal God as the author and giver; and from the seven spirits, the representatives and ministers of the Holy Ghost, as the instruments; and from Jesus Christ as the mediator, who is mentioned last, because the subsequent discourse more immediately relates to him. To the dedication he subjoins a short and solemn preface (ver. 7, 8.) to show the great authority of the Divine Person, who had commissioned him to write the Revelation.

9 I John, who also am your brother, and companion in tribulation, and in the kingdom and patience of Jesus Christ, was in the isle that is called Patmos, for the word of God, and for the testimony of Jesus Christ.

10 I was in the spirit on the Lord's day, and heard behind me a great voice, as of a trumpet, 11 Saying, I am Alpha and Omega, the first and the last: and, What thou seest, write in a book, and send it unto the seven churches which are in Asia: unto Ephesus, and unto Smyrna, and unto Pergamos, and unto Thyatira, and unto Sardis, and unto Philadelphia, and unto Laodicea.

12 And I turned to see the voice that spake with me, and being turned, I saw seven golden candlesticks;

13 And in the midst of the seven candlesticks, one like unto the Son of Man, clothed with a garment down to the foot, and girt about the paps with a golden girdle.

14 His head and his hairs were white like wool, as white as snow; and his eyes were as a flame of fire;

15 And his feet like unto fine brass, as if they burned in a furnace: and his voice as the sound of many waters.

16 And he had in his right hand seven stars: and out of his mouth went a sharp two-edged sword: and his countenance was as the sun shineth in his strength.

17 And when I saw him, I fell at his feet as dead: and he laid his right hand upon me, saying unto me, Fear not; I am the first and the last:

18 I am he that liveth, and was dead; and behold I am alive for evermore, Amen; and have the keys of hell and of death.

19 Write the things which thou hast seen, and the things which are, and the things which shall be hereafter.

20 The mystery of the seven stars which thou sawest in my right hand, and the seven golden candlesticks. The seven stars are the angels of the seven churches: and the seven candlesticks which thou sawest, are the seven churches.

He then (ver. 9—20.) mentions the place where the Revelation was given, and describes the manner and circumstances of the first vision. The place where the Revelation was given was Patmos, a desolate island in the Archipelago, whither he was banished for the confession of the Gospel. It is not well known at what time, or by whom he was banished into this island; but we may suppose it to have happened in the reign of Nero more probably than in that of Domitian. It is indeed the more general opinion, that the Apocalypse was written in Domitian's reign; and this opinion is founded upon the ¹ testimony of Irenæus, who was the disciple of Polycarp, who had been the disciple of St. John. This authority is great, and is made still greater, as it is confirmed by ² Eusebius in his Chronicle and in his Ecclesiastical History. But Eusebius a little afterwards, in the ¹same history, recites a memorable story out of Clemens Alexandrinus; that St. John, after he returned from Patmos, committed a hopeful young man to the care of, a certain bishop; that the bishop received him into his house, educated, instructed, and at length baptized him; that the bishop afterwards remitting of his care and strictness, the young man was corrupted by idle and dissolute companions, revelled with them, robbed with them, and forming them into a gang of highwaymen was made their captain, and became the terror of all the country; that after some time St. John, coming upon other occasions to revisit the same bishop, inquired after the young man, and was informed that he was not to be found in the church, but in such a mountain with his fellow-robbers; that St. John called for a horse, and rode immediately to the place; that when the young man saw him, he fled away from him; that St. John, forgetting his age, pursued eagerly after him, recalled him, and restored him to the church. Now all these transactions must necessarily take up some years; and may seem credible if St. John was banished by Nero, but are altogether impossible if he was banished by Domitian; for he survived Domitian but a very few years, and he was then near one hundred years old, and so very weak and infirm that ²he was with great difficulty carried to church, and could hardly speak a few words to the people, and much less ride briskly after a young robber. Epiphanius ³asserts, that he was banished into Patmos, and wrote the Apocalypse there, in the reign of Claudius: but Epiphanius being not a correct writer, he might possibly mistake Claudius for his successor Nero, especially as Nero had assumed the name of Claudius, by whom he was adopted, Nero Claudius Cæsar. This date is perhaps near as much too early, as the time of Domitian is too late. The churches of Syria have thus ⁴inscribed their version, “The Revelation made to John the Evangelist by God in the island Patmos, into which he was banished by Nero the Cæsar.” The ancient commentators ⁵Andreas and Arethas affirm, that it was understood to be written before the destruction of Jerusalem. But if it was written before the destruction of Jerusalem, it might naturally be expected that such a memorable event would not have been unnoticed in this prediction; and neither was it unnoticed in this prediction, as will be seen hereafter. Our Saviour’s repeating so frequently in this book, Behold, I come quickly—Behold, he cometh with clouds, and every eye shall see him, and they also who pierced

¹ Iren. advers. Hæres. Lib. v. cap. xxx. p. 449. Edit. Grabe.

² Eusebii Chron. Lib. i. Edit. Scalig. p. 80. Gr. p. 44. Lat. Vide etiam, p. 164. Libri posterioris, et Chron. Can. p. 208. Hist. Eccles. Lib. iii. cap. xviii.

¹ Euseb. Hist. ibid. cap. xxiii.

² Hieron. in Epist. ad Galat. cap. vi. Tom. IV. Part. Prior. col. 314. Edit. Benedict.

³ Epiphan. advers. Hæres. Lib. i. Tom. II. sect. xii. p. 434. sect. xxxiii. p. 456. Edit. Petav.

⁴ Revelatio quæ facta est Joanni evangelistæ a Deo in Patmo insulâ, in quam injectus fuit a Nerone Cæsare. [Translated in the text.]

⁵ Andreas in Apoc. vi. 16. Arethas in Apoc. xviii. 19.

him, and all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of him—and the like expressions, cannot surely be so well understood of any other event as of the destruction of Jerusalem, which coming was also spoken of in the Gospels, and what other coming was there so speedy and conspicuous? So many spurious Apocalypses, written by Cerinthus and others in early times, demonstrate evidently that the Apocalypse of St. John, in imitation whereof they were written, was still earlier, and was held in high estimation among Christians. But what is to me an unanswerable argument, the style itself, so full of Hebraisms, and as I may say, so full of barbarisms and even solecisms, as some¹ even of the ancients have observed, manifestly evinces, that the author was but lately come out of Judæa, was little accustomed to write in Greek, and had not yet attained to that greater purity of style which appears in his Gospels and Epistles. On the contrary it is urged, that there are internal marks in the book itself of its being of a later date than Nero's reign, that the churches of Asia could not have changed and degenerated so much in so short a space of time, that they had not then been exposed to persecution, nor had Antipas suffered martyrdom at Pergamos, the persecutions by Nero being confined to the metropolis of the empire. But why might not St. John charge the churches of Asia with having degenerated and fallen from their first love, as well as St. Paul accuse the church of Corinth, (1 Cor. iii. 3.) of being carnal, and having envying and strife, and divisions among them: or complain of the churches of Galatia, (Gal. i. 6.) I marvel that ye are so soon removed from them that called you into the grace of Christ unto another gospel (iii. 1.) O foolish Galatians, who hath bewitched you, that ye should not obey the truth, before whose eyes Jesus Christ hath been evidently set forth; or write to Timothy, the first bishop of Ephesus (2 Tim. i. 15.) This thou knowest, that all they which are in Asia be turned away from me! Why might not the churches of Asia be liable to persecution, when it is said (2 Tim. iii. 12.) that all who will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution; when unto the Philippians (i. 29.) it was given in the behalf of Christ, not only to believe on him, but also to suffer for his sake; and when the Thessalonians (1 Thess. ii. 14.) suffered like things of their own countrymen, as the churches in Judæa of the Jews; and manifested (2 Thess. i. 4.) their patience and faith in all their persecutions and tribulations which they endured? As for Antipas there is no genuine history or authentic account of him; it is not known who or what he was, when he suffered, or who caused him to be put to death, so that nothing can be from thence inferred one way or other. Neither is it certain that the persecutions by Nero were confined to the metropolis; they raged indeed most there, but were extended likewise over all the provinces, as ¹ Orosius testifies with others. Sir Isaac Newton hath further ² shown, that in the epistles of St. Peter, and in St. Paul's epistle to the Hebrews, there are several allusions to this book of the Apocalypse; and St. Peter and St. Paul, all the ancients agree, suffered martyrdom in the end of Nero's reign. It may indeed be retorted, that St. John might borrow from St. Peter and St. Paul, as well as St. Peter and St. Paul from St. John: but if you will consider and compare the passages together, you will find sufficient reason to be convinced, that St. Peter's and St. Paul's are the copies, and St. John the original. Moreover it is to be observed, that this Revelation was given on the Lord's day, when the apostle's heart and affections, as we may reasonably suppose, were sublimed by the meditations and devotions of the day, and rendered more recipient of divine inspiration. The heavenly visions were vouchsafed to St. John, as they were before to Daniel, (Dan. ix. x.) after supplication and prayer: and there being ³ two kinds of prophetic revelation in a vision and a dream, the Jews accounted a vision superior to a dream, as representing things more perfectly and to the life.

¹ Διάλεκτον μέντοι καὶ γλῶσσαν οὐκ ἀκριβῶς ἐλληνίζουσιν αὐτοῦ βλέπω, ἀλλ' ἰδιώμασι μὲν βαρβαρικοῖς χρώμενον καὶ πον καὶ σολεκίζοντα. Verum dictionem ejus non admodum Græcam animadverto, sed barbarismis atque interdum solécismis inquinatam. ["But I observe that his dialect and language are not purely Greek, but that he uses barbarous idioms, and sometimes solecisms."] Dionysius Alex. apud Euseb. Hist. Eccles. Lib. vii. cap. xxv.

In the first vision Jesus Christ or his angel, speaking in his name, and acting in his person, appears amid the seven golden candlesticks, meaning the seven churches. His clothing is somewhat like the high-priest's, and he is described much in the same manner as the divine appearances in Daniel's visions. (Dan. vii. 9; x. 5.) St. John, at the sight of so glorious a person, fell down senseless before him, as Daniel did upon the same occasion; and like Daniel too, he is graciously raised and encouraged, and commanded to write the things which he had seen, contained in this chapter, and the things which are, the present state of the seven churches represented in the two next chapters, and the things which shall be hereafter, the future events which begin to be exhibited in the fourth chapter, as it is there said (ver. 1.) Come up hither, and I will show thee things which must be hereafter.

¹ Primus Romæ Christianos supplicii et mortibus affecit; ac per omnes provincias pari persecutione excruciarî imperavit. [He first punished and put to death the Christians at Rome, and gave order that the same persecution should extend to all the provinces.] Lib. vii. cap. vii. p. 473. Edit. Havercamp.

² Sir Isaac Newton's Obs. upon the Apoc. chap. i. p. 239—246.

³ In istis duabus partibus, somnio et visione, continentur omnes prophetiæ gradus. [All the gradations of prophecy may be summed up in these two kinds, dreams and visions.] Maimon. in More Nevoch. Part ii. cap. xxxvi. Smith's Discourse of Prophecy, chap. ii. p. 174, 175.

CHAPTER II.

1 Unto the angel of the church of Ephesus, write; These things saith he that holdeth the seven stars in his right hand, who walketh in the midst of the seven golden candlesticks;

2 I know thy works, and thy labour, and thy patience, and how thou canst not bear them which are evil: and thou hast tried them which say they are apostles, and are not; and hast found them liars:

3 And hast borne, and hast patience, and for my name's sake hast laboured, and hast not fainted.

4 Nevertheless, I have somewhat against thee, because thou hast left thy first love.

5 Remember therefore from whence thou art fallen, and repent, and do the first works; or else I will come unto thee quickly, and will remove thy candlestick out of his place, except thou repent.

6 But this thou hast, that thou hatest the deeds of the Nicolaitans, which I also hate.

7 He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches. To him that overcometh I will give to eat of the tree of life, which is in the midst of the paradise of God.

8 And unto the angel of the church in Smyrna, write; These things saith the first and the last, which was dead, and is alive;

9 I know thy works, and tribulation, and poverty, (but thou art rich) and I know the blasphemy of them which say they are Jews, and are not, but are the synagogue of Satan.

10 Fear none of those things which thou shalt suffer: behold, the devil shall cast some of you into prison, that ye may be tried; and ye shall have tribulation ten days: be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life.

11 He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches, He that overcometh shall not be hurt of the second death.

12 And to the angel of the church in Pergamos, write; These things saith he, which hath the sharp sword with two edges;

13 I know thy works, and where thou dwellest, even where Satan's seat is: and thou holdest fast my name, and hast not denied my faith, even in those days wherein Antipas was my faithful martyr, who was slain among you, where Satan dwelleth.

14 But I have a few things against thee, because thou hast there them that hold the doctrine of Balaam, who taught Balak to cast a stumbling-block before the children of Israel, to eat things sacrificed unto idols, and to commit fornication.

15 So hast thou also them that hold the doctrine of the Nicolaitans, which thing I hate.

16 Repent ; or else I will come unto thee quickly, and will fight against them with the sword of my mouth.

17 He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches, To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the hidden manna, and will give him a white stone, and in the stone a new name written, which no man knoweth, saving he that receiveth it.

18 And unto the angel of the church in Thyatira, write ; These things saith the Son of God, who hath his eyes like unto a flame of fire, and his feet are like fine brass :

19 I know thy works, and charity, and service, and faith, and thy patience, and thy works ; and the last to be more than the first.

20 Notwithstanding, I have a few things against thee, because thou sufferest that woman Jezebel, which calleth herself a prophetess, to teach and to seduce my servants to commit fornication, and to eat things sacrificed unto idols.

21 And I gave her space to repent of her fornication, and she repented not.

22 Behold, I will cast her into a bed, and them that commit adultery with her into great tribulation, except they repent of their deeds.

23 And I will kill her children with death ; and all the churches shall know that I am he which searcheth the reins and hearts : and I will give unto every one of you according to your works.

24 But unto you I say, and unto the rest in Thyatira, As many as have not this doctrine, and which have not known the depths of Satan, as they speak, I will put upon you none other burden :

25 But that which ye have already, hold fast till I come.

26 And he that overcometh, and keepeth my works unto the end, to him will I give power over the nations :

27 (And he shall rule them with a rod of iron : as the vessels of a potter shall they be broken to shivers) even as I received of my Father.

28 And I will give him the morning star.

29 He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches.

CHAPTER III.

1 And unto the angel of the church in Sardis, write, These things saith he that hath the seven spirits of God, and the seven stars ; I know thy works, that thou hast a name, that thou livest, and art dead.

2 Be watchful and strengthen the things which remain, that are ready to die : for I have not found thy works perfect before God.

3 Remember therefore how thou hast received and heard, and hold fast, and repent. If therefore thou shalt not watch, I will come on thee as a thief, and thou shalt not know what hour I will come upon thee.

4 Thou hast a few names even in Sardis, which have not defiled their garments ; and they shall walk with me in white : for they are worthy.

5 He that overcometh, the same shall be clothed in white raiment ; and I will not blot out his name out of the book of life, but I will confess his name before my Father and before his angels.

6 He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches.

7 And to the angel of the church in Philadelphia, write, These things saith he that is holy, he that is true, he that hath the key of David, he that openeth, and no man shutteth ; and shutteth, and no man openeth :

8 I know thy works : behold, I have set before thee an open door, and no man can shut it : for thou hast a little strength, and hast kept my word, and hast not denied my name.

9 Behold, I will make them of the synagogue of Satan (which say they are Jews, and are not, but do lie) behold, I will make them to come and worship before thy feet, and to know that I have loved thee.

10 Because thou hast kept the word of my patience, I also will keep thee from the hour of temptation, which shall come upon all the world, to try them that dwell upon the earth.

11 Behold, I come quickly : hold that fast which thou hast, that no man take thy crown.

12 Him that overcometh, will I make a pillar in the temple of my God, and he shall go no more out : and I will write upon him the name of my God, and the name of the city of my God, which is new Jerusalem, which cometh down out of heaven from my God : and I will write upon him my new name.

13 He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches.

14 And unto the angel of the church of the Laodiceans, write, These things saith the Amen, the faithful and true witness, the beginning of the creation of God ;

15 I know thy works, that thou art neither cold nor hot : I would thou wert cold or hot.

16 So then, because thou art lukewarm, and neither cold nor hot, I will spue thee out of my mouth :

17 Because thou sayest, I am rich, and increased with goods, and have need of nothing : and knowest not that thou art wretched, and miserable, and poor, and blind, and naked.

18 I counsel thee to buy of me gold tried in the fire, that thou mayest be rich; and white raiment, that thou mayest be clothed; and that the shame of thy nakedness do not appear; and anoint thine eyes with eye-salve, that thou mayest see.

19 As many as I love, I rebuke and chasten: be zealous, therefore, and repent.

20 Behold, I stand at the door and knock: if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me.

21 To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father in his throne.

22 He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches.

The second and third chapters contain the seven epistles to the seven churches of Asia, Ephesus, Smyrna, Pergamus, Thyatira, Sardis, Philadelphia, and Laodicea. These seven are addressed particularly, because they were under St. John's immediate inspection; he¹ constituted bishops over them; he was as it were their metropolitan, and resided much at Ephesus, which is therefore named the first of the seven. The main subjects, too, of this book are comprised of sevens, seven churches, seven seals, seven trumpets, and seven vials; as seven was also a mystical number throughout the Old Testament. Many contend, and among them such learned men as More and Vitringa, that the seven epistles are prophetic of so many successive periods and states of the church from the beginning to the conclusion of all. But it doth not appear, that there are or were to be seven periods of the church, neither more or less; and no two men can agree in assigning the same periods. There are likewise in these epistles several innate characters, which are peculiar to the church of that age, and cannot be so well applied to the church of any other age. Besides other arguments, there is also this plain reason; the last state of the church is described in this very book as the most glorious of all, but in the last state, in these epistles, that of Laodicea, the church is represented as wretched, and miserable, and poor, and blind, and naked.

But though these epistles have rather a literal than a mystical meaning, yet they contain excellent moral precepts and exhortations, commendations and reproofs, promises and threatenings, which may be of use and instruction to the church in all ages. The form and order of the parts you will find the same almost in all the epistles; first a command to write; then some character and attributes of the speaker, taken from the vision in the first chapter, and appropriated to the matter of each epistle; then commendations or reproofs, with suitable promises or threatenings; and then in all the same conclusion, He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches. What, therefore, the Spirit saith unto one church, he saith, in some measure, to all the churches. The Church of Ephesus, in particular, is admonished to repent, and forewarned that if she would not repent, her candlestick should be removed out of his place. But this admonition belonged equally to all the churches; and hath not their candlestick been accordingly removed out of its place, and the light of the Gospel taken from them? Were they not ruined and overthrown by their heresies and divisions from within, and by the arms of the Saracens from without? and doth not Mohammedism still prevail and prosper in those countries, which were once the glory of Christendom, their churches turned into mosques, their worship into superstition? Ephesus in particular,¹ which was once so magnificent and glorious a city, is become a mean sordid village, with scarcely a single family of Christians dwelling in it, as approved authors testify. To the church of Smyrna it is predicted, that she should have tribulation ten days, or ten years, according to the usual style of prophecy: and the greatest persecution that the primitive church ever endured was the persecution of Diocletian, which lasted² ten years, and grievously afflicted all the Asian, and indeed all the eastern churches. This character can agree to none of the other general persecutions, for none of the others lasted³ so long as ten years. As the commendatory and reproving part of these epistles exhibits the present state of the churches, so the promissory and threatening part foretels something of their future condition; and in this sense, and in none other, can these epistles be said to be prophetic.

¹ Tertull. advers. Marcion, Lib. iv. sect. v. p. 415. Edit. Rigaltii, Paris. 1675. Millii Prolegom. in Nov. Test. p. 20.

The first epistle is addressed to the church of Ephesus, as it was the metropolis of the Lydian Asia, and the place of St. John's principal residence. It was, according to⁴ Strabo, one of the best and most glorious cities, and the greatest emporium of the proper Asia, It is called by Pliny⁵ one of the eyes of Asia, Smyrna being the

¹ Hodie enim hæc urbs Asianæ olim magnificentiae exemplum, plane sordet, casulis et gurgustii deformata, non civitas, sed vicus; et vix ibidem superest una Christianorum familia, ut ex certis constat testibus, iisdemque eruditis viris, qui hodiernam Ephesum descripserunt, Smitho (Notit. Sept. Eccles. As. p. 4.) et Ricaultio. (de Stat. Eccl. Græc. p. 50.) [For at present this city, which was once the model of Asiatic magnificence, is now a sordid village, defaced by little cottages and cabins, and is rather a village than a city. Here there is scarcely to be found one family of Christians remaining, as we are assured by credible witnesses, men of learning, who have given us a description of modern Ephesus; viz. Smith (Present State of the Seven Churches of Asia, page 4.) and Ricaut (State of the Greek Church, page 50.)] Vitring. p. 73, 74.

² Euseb. Eccles. Hist. Lib. viii. cap. xv. et xvi. Lactant. de Mort. Persecut. cap. xlviii.

³ Quæ persecutio omnibus fere ante actis diuturnior—Nam per decem annos, &c. [Which persecution was of longer continuance than any that went before it,—for during ten years, &c.] Oros. Lib. vii. cap. xxv. p. 528. Edit. Havercamp.

⁴ Strabo, Lib. xiv. p. 634. Edit. Paris. p. 941. Edit. Amstel. 1707. Lib. xii. p. 577. Edit. Paris. p. 865. Edit. Amstel. 1707.

⁵ Plin. Nat. Hist. Lib. v. cap. xxxi. p. 280. Edit. Harduin.

other: but now, as eye-witnesses¹ have related, it is venerable for nothing but the ruins of palaces, temples, and amphitheatres. It is called by the Turks Ajasaluk, or the temple of the moon, from the magnificent structure formerly dedicated to Diana. The church of St. Paul is wholly destroyed. The little which remains of that of St. Mark is nodding to ruin. The only church remaining is that dedicated to St. John, which is now converted into a Turkish mosque. The whole town is nothing but a habitation for herdsmen and farmers, living in low and humble cottages of dirt, sheltered from the extremities of weather by mighty masses of ruinous walls; the pride and ostentation of former days, and the emblem in these, of the frailty of the world, and the transient vanity of human glory. All the inhabitants of this once famous city amount not now to above forty or fifty families of Turks, without one Christian family among them: so strikingly hath the denunciation been fulfilled, that their candlestick should be removed out of his place.

Smyrna was the nearest city to Ephesus, and for that reason probably was addressed in the second place. It is situated² on lower ground than the ancient city, and lieth about forty-five miles northward of Ephesus. It is called Esmir by the Turks, and is celebrated not so much for the splendour and pomp of the buildings (for they are rather mean and ruinous) as for the number, and wealth, and commerce of the inhabitants. The Turks have here fifteen mosques, and the Jews several synagogues. Among these enemies of the Christian name the Christian religion also flourishes in some degree. Smyrna still retains the dignity of a metropolis, although there are only two churches of the Greeks. But besides them, here is a great number of Christians of all nations, sects, and languages. The Latin church hath a monastery of Franciscans. The Armenians have one church. But the English, who are the most considerable number, next to the Greeks and Armenians, have only a chapel in the consul's house, which is a shame, says Wheler, considering the great wealth they heap up here, beyond all the rest: yet they commonly excel them in their pastor; for I esteem a good English priest an evangelist, if compared with any of the rest. Frequent plagues and earthquakes are the great calamities of the place; but the Christians are here more considerable, and in a far better condition than in any other of the seven churches: as if the promise was still in some measure made good to Samaria, Fear none of those things which thou shalt suffer; be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life.

Pergamus, formerly the metropolis of the Hellespontic Mysia,

¹ Smith, Sept. Asiæ Eccles. Notit. Rycaut's Present State of the Greek Church, chap. ii. Wheler and Spon's Voyage, B. iii. Van Egmont's and Heyman's Travels, Vol. I. chap. ix.

² Smith, Rycaut, Wheler, and Spon. ibid. Van Egmont's and Heyman's Travels, chap. viii.

and the seat of the Attalic kings, is ¹ by the Turks, with some little variation, still called Bergamo, and hath its situation about sixty-four miles to the north of Smyrna. Here are some good buildings, but more ruins. All the city almost is occupied by the Turks, very few families of Christians being left, whose state is very sad and deplorable. Here is only one church remaining, dedicated to St. Theodorus; and that the name of Christ is not wholly lost and forgotten in Pergamus, is owing to the care of the metropolitan of Smyrna, who continually sendeth hither a priest to perform the sacred offices. The cathedral church of St. John is buried in its own ruins; their angel or bishop removed; and its fair pillars adorn the graves, and rotten carcases of its destroyers, the Turks; who are esteemed about two or three thousand souls in number. Its other fine church, called Santa Sophia, is turned into a mosque, and daily profaned with the blasphemies of the false prophet. There are not in the whole town above a dozen or fifteen families of miserable Christians, who till the ground to gain their bread, and live in the most abject and sordid servitude. There is the less reason to wonder at the wretched condition of this church, when we consider that it was the very throne of Satan; that they ran greedily after the error of Balaam, to eat things sacrificed unto idols, and to commit fornication; and that they held the impure doctrines of the Nicolaitans, which Christ detested. It was denounced unto them to repent, or else he would come unto them quickly, and fight against them, as the event evinces that he hath done.

Next to Pergamus is Thyatira, ² situated at the distance of about forty-eight miles to the south-east. Certain heretics called Alogi (which may not improperly be interpreted unreasonable men) have ³ affirmed, but have only affirmed without any proof, that at the time of St. John's writing there was no Christian church at Thyatira. Epiphanius admits it, and thence infers that St. John must have written with a prophetic spirit. The objection is frivolous, and Epiphanius might have returned a better answer than argumentum ad homines, and instead of allowing the fact, and arguing from thence for the divinity of the book, he should absolutely have denied their affirmation. For there is no just reason for doubting, that at this time there was a Christian church at Thyatira. This very epistle is a sufficient proof of it. It is said expressly, (Acts xix. 10.) that all they who dwell in Asia (meaning Asia Minor) heard the word of the Lord Jesus, both Jews and Greeks: and what ground is there for thinking that the city of Thyatira was alone excepted? It is said particularly, (Acts xvi. 14.) that Lydia, an eminent trader, and seller of purple, of the city of Thyatira, was baptized with her household. At present the city is called by the Turks ⁴ Akhisar, or the white castle, from the great quantities of white marble there

¹ Smith, Rycaut, Wheler, and Spon. ibid.

² Smith and Rycaut, ibid.

³ Epiphanius. advers. Hæres. Lib. ii. Tom. I. cap. xxxiii. p. 455. Vol. I. Edit. Petav.

⁴ Smith and Rycaut, ibid.

abounding. Only one ancient edifice is left standing. The rest, even the churches, are so destroyed, that no vestiges of them are to be found. The principal inhabitants are Turks, who have here eight mosques, when not so much as one Christian church is still remaining. So terribly have the divine judgments been poured upon this church for committing fornication, and eating things sacrificed unto idols: And I gave her space to repent of her fornication, and she repented not.

Sardis, once the renowned capital of Cræsus, and the rich Lydian kings, ¹ is now no longer worthy of the name of a city. It lieth about thirty-three miles to the south of Thyatira, and is called by the Turks Sart, or Sard, with little or no variation from the old original name. It is a most sad spectacle, nor can one forbear weeping over the ruins of so great a city. For now it is no more than an ignoble village, with low and wretched cottages of clay; nor hath it any other inhabitants besides shepherds and herdsmen, who feed their flocks and cattle in the neighbouring plains. Yet the great extent and grandeur of the ruins abundantly show how large and splendid a city it was formerly. The Turks themselves have only one mosque, a beautiful one indeed, perverted to that use from a Christian church. Very few Christians are here to be found; and they with great patience, or rather senseless stupidity, sustain a miserable servitude; and what is far more miserable, are without a church, without a priest among them. Such is the deplorable state of once the most glorious city; but her works were not found perfect, that is, they were found blameable before God; she was dead, even while she lived; and she is punished accordingly.

Philadelphia, so called from Attalus Philadelphus, its builder, ² is distant from Sardis about twenty-seven miles to the south-east. It is called by the Turks Alah Shahr, or the beautiful city, on account of its delightful situation, standing on the declivity of the mountain Timolus, and having a most pleasant prospect on the plains beneath, well furnished with divers villages, and watered by the river Pactolus. It still retains the form of a city, with something of trade to invite people to it, being the road of the Persian caravans. Here is little of antiquity remaining, besides the ruins of a church dedicated to St. John, which is now made a dunghill to receive the offals of dead beasts. Howsoever, God hath been pleased to preserve some of this place to make profession of the Christian faith, there being above two hundred houses of Christians, and four churches; whereof the chief is dedicated to Panagia, or the holy Virgin; the other to St. George, who is of great fame among the oriental Christians; the third to St. Theodore; and the fourth to St. Taxarchius, as St. Michael the archangel is called by the Greeks. Next to Smyrna this city hath the greatest number of Christians, and Christ hath promised a more particular protection to it; I know thy works: behold

¹ Smith, Rycaut, Wheler, and Spon. ibid. Van Egmont's and Heyman's Travels, chap. x.

² Smith, Rycaut, Wheler, and Spon. ibid.

I have set before thee an open door, and none can shut it: for thou hast a little strength, and hast kept my word, and hast not denied my name. Because thou hast kept the word of my patience, I also will keep thee from the hour of temptation which shall come upon all the world, to try them that dwell upon the earth. Than which, as Dr. Spon saith, what could be said more formally to foretel the coming of the Turks, the open enemies of Christianity, who seem to be sent on purpose for the punishment of our crimes, and to distinguish the faithful from the false Christians, who pretend to be so, and are not?

Laodicea lay south of Philadelphia, in the way to return to Ephesus; and if you will inspect the maps of Asia Minor, you will find the seven churches to lie in a kind of circular form, so that the natural progress was from Ephesus to Smyrna, from Smyrna to Pergamus, from Pergamus to Thyatira, from Thyatira to Sardis, from Sardis to Philadelphia, from Philadelphia to Laodicea, and from Laodicea round to Ephesus again; which is the method and order that St. John hath observed in addressing them, and was probably the circuit that he took in his visitation. That there was a flourishing church at Laodicea, in the primitive times of Christianity, is evident from St. Paul's epistle to the Colossians, wherein frequent mention is made of the Laodiceans, as well as from this epistle of St. John. But the doom of Laodicea¹ seemeth to have been more severe and terrible than that of almost any other of the seven churches. For it is now utterly destroyed and forsaken of men, and is become an habitation only for wolves, foxes, and jackals, a den of dragons, snakes, and vipers. And that because the Lord hath executed the judgment that he had pronounced upon her: that all the world might know, and tremble at the fierce anger of God against impenitent, negligent, and careless sinners. For such was the accusation of the lukewarm Laodiceans, who grew proud and self-conceited, thinking themselves much better than they really were. Wherefore, because they were neither hot nor cold, they were loathsome to Christ; and he therefore assured them, that he would spit them out of his mouth. The ruins show it to have been a very great city, situate upon six or seven hills, and encompassing a large space of ground. Some notion may be formed of its former greatness and glory from three theatres, and a circus, which are remaining, one of which is truly admirable, as it was capable of containing above thirty thousand men, into whose area they descended by fifty steps. This city is now called Eski Hisar, or the old castle; and though it was once the mother-church of sixteen bishoprics, yet it now lieth desolate, not so much as inhabited by shepherds, and so far from showing any of the ornaments of God's ancient worship, it cannot now boast of an anchorite's or hermit's chapel, where God's name is praised or invoked.

Such is the state and condition of these seven once glorious and flourishing churches; and there cannot be a stronger proof of the truth of the prophecy, nor a more effectual warning to other Christians. "These objects, as Wheler¹ justly observes, ought to make us, who yet enjoy the divine mercies, to tremble, and earnestly contend to find out from whence we are fallen, and do daily fall from bad to worse; that God is a God of purer eyes than to behold iniquity; and seeing the axe is thus long since put to the root of the tree, should it not make us repent and turn to God, lest we likewise perish?—We see here what destruction the Lord hath brought upon the earth. But it is the Lord's doing: and thence we may reap no small advantage by considering how just he is in all his judgments, and faithful in all his promises." We may truly say, (1 Cor. x. 11, 12.) that all these things happened unto them for ensamples: and they are written for our admonition, upon whom the ends of the world are come. Wherefore let him that thinketh he standeth, take heed lest he fall.

¹ Smith, Rycaut, Wheler, and Spön. ibid.

CHAPTER IV.

1 AFTER this I looked, and behold, a door was open in heaven: and the first voice which I heard was as it were of a trumpet talking with me; which said, Come up hither, and I will show thee things which must be hereafter.

2 And immediately I was in the spirit: and behold, a throne was set in heaven, and one sat on the throne.

3 And he that sat was to look upon like a jasper, and a sardine stone: and there was a rainbow round about the throne, in sight like unto an emerald.

4 And round about the throne were four and twenty seats: and upon the seats I saw four and twenty elders sitting, clothed in white raiment; and they had on their heads crowns of gold.

5 And out of the throne proceeded lightnings, and thunderings, and voices: and there were seven lamps of fire burning before the throne, which are the seven spirits of God.

6 And before the throne there was a sea of glass like unto crystal: and in the midst of the throne, and round about the throne, were four beasts full of eyes before and behind.

7 And the first beast was like a lion, and the second beast like a calf, and the third beast had the face of a man, and the fourth beast was like a flying eagle.

8 And the four beasts had each of them six wings about him, and they were full of eyes within; and they rest not day and night, saying, Holy, holy, holy, Lord God Almighty, which was, and is, and is to come.

9 And when those beasts give glory, and honour, and thanks to him that sat on the throne, who liveth for ever and ever,

¹ Wheler's Voyage, B. iii. p. 259, &c.

10. The four and twenty elders fall down before him that sat on the throne, and worship him that liveth for ever and ever, and cast their crowns before the throne, saying,

11 Thou art worthy, O Lord, to receive glory, and honour, and power: for thou hast created all things, and for thy pleasure they are, and were created.

After this vision relating to the things which are, other visions succeed of the things which must be hereafter, (ver. 1.) The scene is laid in heaven; and the scenery is drawn in allusion to (Numbers i. ii.) the encampment of the children of Israel in the wilderness. God is represented (ver. 2, 3.) sitting on his throne, as in the tabernacle or temple, much in the same manner as the prophet Ezekiel (i. 26, 27, 28.) hath described him. Next to the tabernacle encamped the priests and Levites, and next to the throne (ver. 4.) were four and twenty elders sitting, answering to the princes of the four and twenty courses of the Jewish priests; clothed in white raiment, as emblems of their purity and sanctity; and they had on their heads crowns of gold, Christ having made them (1 Pet. ii. 9.) a royal priesthood, and (Rev. v. 10.) kings and priests unto God. Out of the throne proceedeth (ver. 5.) lightnings, and thunderings, and voices, the usual concomitants and attendants of the Divine presence: and there were seven lamps of fire burning before the throne, answering to the golden candlestick with seven lamps, which was before the most holy place in the tabernacle. Before the throne there was also (ver. 6.) a sea of glass, like unto crystal, answering to the great molten sea or laver in the temple of Solomon: and in the midst of the throne, and round about the throne, that is, before and behind the throne, and on each side of the throne, were four beasts or rather four living creatures, (ζῶα) representing the heads of the whole congregation in the four quarters of the world, and resembling the Cherubim and Seraphim in Ezekiel's and Isaiah's visions, (Ezek. i. 10; x. 14. Isa. vi. 2, 3.) or rather resembling the four standards or ensigns of the four divisions in the camp of Israel, according to the ¹ traditionary description of them by Jewish writers. The first living creature was like a lion, (ver. 7.) which was the standard of Judah, with the two other tribes in the eastern division; and the second like a calf, or ox, which was the standard of Ephraim, with the two other tribes in the western division; and the third had a face as a man, which was the standard of Reuben, with the two other tribes in the southern division: and the fourth like a flying eagle, which was the standard of Dan, with the two other tribes in the northern division: and this traditionary description agrees also with the four faces of the Cherub, in Ezekiel's visions. Of these living creatures, and of the elders, the constant employment (ver. 8—11.) is to celebrate, in hymns of praise and thanksgiving, the great and wonderful works of creation and providence.

¹ Majores nostri dixerunt, &c. [Our forefathers have said, &c.] See Aben Ezra and others, quoted by Mr. Mede, p. 437.

CHAPTER V.

1 AND I saw in the right hand of him that sat on the throne, a book written within and on the backside, sealed with seven seals.

2 And I saw a strong angel, proclaiming with a loud voice, Who is worthy to open the book, and to loose the seals thereof?

3 And no man in heaven, nor in earth, neither under the earth, was able to open the book, neither to look thereon.

4 And I wept much because no man was found worthy to open and to read the book, neither to look thereon.

5 And one of the elders saith unto me, Weep not: behold the Lion of the tribe of Judah, the Root of David, hath prevailed to open the book, and to loose the seven seals thereof.

6 And I beheld, and lo, in the midst of the throne, and of the four beasts, and in the midst of the elders, stood a Lamb, as it had been slain, having seven horns, and seven eyes, which are the seven spirits of God sent forth into all the earth.

7 And he came and took the book out of the right hand of him that sat upon the throne.

8 And when he had taken the book, the four beasts and four and twenty elders fell down before the Lamb, having every one of them harps, and golden vials full of odours, which are the prayers of saints.

9 And they sung a new song, saying, Thou art worthy to take the book, and to open the seals thereof; for thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood, out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation;

10 And hast made us unto our God kings and priests; and we shall reign on the earth.

11 And I beheld, and I heard the voice of many angels round about the throne, and the beasts and the elders; and the number of them was ten thousand times ten thousand, and thousands of thousands;

12 Saying with a loud voice, Worthy is the Lamb that was slain, to receive power, and riches, and wisdom, and strength, and honour, and glory, and blessing.

13 And every creature which is in heaven, and on the earth, and under the earth, and such as are in the sea, and all that are in them, heard I, saying, Blessing, and honour, and glory, and power be unto him that sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb for ever and ever.

14 And the four beasts said, Amen. And the four and twenty elders fell down and worshipped him that liveth for ever and ever.

Future events are supposed by St. John, as well as by Daniel and other prophets, in a beautiful figure, to be registered in a book, for the greater certainty of them. This book (ver. 1.) is in the right hand of God, to denote that as he alone directs the affairs of futurity, so he alone is able to reveal them. This book, through the abundance of the matter, was ¹ written within and on the backside; as the roll of the book, which was spread before Ezekiel, (ii. 10.) was written within and without. It was also sealed, to signify that the decrees of God are inscrutable, and sealed with seven seals, referring to so many signal periods of prophecy. In short, we should conceive of this book, that it was such a one as the ancients used, a volume or roll of a book, or more properly a volume consisting of seven volumes, so that the opening of one seal laid open the contents only of one volume. All creatures are challenged (ver. 2.) to open the book and to loose the seals thereof. But (ver. 3.) no one (οὐδεὶς) in heaven, nor in earth, neither under the earth, neither angels, nor men, nor departed spirits, were any of them qualified to comprehend and communicate the secret purposes of God. St. John wept much (ver. 4.) at the sad disappointment: but who now is concerned or grieved, that he cannot understand these prophecies? However he is comforted (ver. 5.) with an assurance, that still there was one who had power and authority to reveal and accomplish the counsels of God. The Son of God, and he alone, was found worthy to be the great revealer and interpreter of his Father's oracles; (ver. 6, &c.) and he obtained this privilege by the merits of his sufferings and death. Whereupon the whole church, (ver. 8, &c.) and all the angels, (ver. 11, &c.) and all creatures, (ver. 13, &c.) sing praises to God and to the Lamb for such glorious manifestations of divine providence. All this is by way of preface or introduction, to show the great dignity, importance, and excellence of the prophecies here delivered.

CHAPTER VI.

1 AND I saw when the Lamb opened one of the seals, and I heard as it were the noise of thunder, one of the four beasts, saying, Come and see.

2 And I saw, and behold, a white horse; and he that sat on him had a bow, and a crown was given unto him, and he went forth conquering and to conquer.

¹ So in Juvenal, Sat. i. 5.

—summi plena jam margine libri,
Scriptus et in tergo, needum finitus Orestes.

[——— and Orestes' bulky page
Unsatisfy'd with margins closely writ,
Foams o'er the covers, and not finish'd yet.]

DRYDEN.

As the seals are opened in order, so the events follow in order too. The first seal or period (ver. 1, 2.) is memorable for conquest, and was proclaimed by the first of the four living creatures, who was like a lion, and had his station in the east. And I saw, and behold, a white horse; and he that sat on him had a bow, and a crown was given unto him, and he went forth conquering and to conquer. This first period commenceth with Vespasian and Titus, who from commanding¹ in the east were advanced to the empire; and Vespasian for this reason was regarded,² both by Romans and foreigners, as that great prince who was to come out of the east, and obtain dominion over the world. They went forth to conquer; for they made an entire conquest of Judæa, destroying Jerusalem, and carried the Jews captive into all nations. As these prophecies were written a few years before the destruction of Jerusalem, they properly begin with some allusion to that memorable event; and a short allusion was sufficient, our Saviour himself having enlarged so much upon all the particulars. The bow, the white horse, and the crown are proper emblems of victory, triumph, and royalty; and the proclamation for conquest is fitly made by a creature like a lion. This period continued during the reigns of the Flavian family and the short reign of Nerva, about twenty-eight years.

They who suppose this book to have been written in Domitian's time, some years after the destruction of Jerusalem, are obliged to give another explanation of this first seal, applicable to some subsequent event, that it may not be deemed a history of things past instead of a prophecy of things to come. Now their notion is, that this first seal exhibits a representation of the person and dignity of Christ, and of the triumphs of the Christian religion over all the powers of paganism. At the same time they allow (as it is generally allowed) that the six first seals especially relate to heathen Rome, and comprehend so many notable periods in the Roman history. But where then is the propriety or consistence of understanding this first seal of Christ and the Christian religion, and the succeeding seals of successive revolutions in the Roman empire, during its pagan and unconverted state? And what good reason can be given for representing the Church in triumph and glory, at a period when it was most grievously persecuted and afflicted? Would it not have been more uniform and of a piece, and have agreed better with the series and order of true history, if they had applied this first seal to the conquests of Vespasian and Titus, and the destruction of Jerusalem; as they have applied the second seal to the wars of Trajan and Adrian with the Jews, and the third and following seals to transactions of other Roman emperors? The four living creatures have their stations, as we have shown, in the four quarters, east, west, south, and north, to denote from what part we are to look for the completion of the prophecy: and as Trajan proceeded from the west, Septimius Severus from the south, and Maximin from the north, what other emperor before them, besides Vespasian, came from the east, which was the station of the lion, who made the first proclamation? It should seem therefore that the interpretation which was first proposed is the more eligible, and indeed I cannot see how this first seal can be well explicated otherwise, consistently with the truth of history and other circumstances of the prophecy; and if this be the true interpretation, this is a farther argument that the book was more probably written in the persecutions under Nero than in those under Domitian.

¹ Hujus (Vitellii) tempore Vespasianus in oriente principatum arripuit. [In his (Vitellius') time, Vespasian seized the chief command in the east.] Aurel. Victor. Epit. cap. viii.

² Tacit. Hist. Lib. v. p. 217. Edit. Lipsii. Sueton. in Vesp. cap. iv. Joseph. de Bell. Jud. Lib. vi. cap. v. sect. iv. p. 1283. Edit. Hudson.

3 And when he had opened the second seal, I heard the second beast say, Come and see.

4 And there went out another horse that was red: and power was given to him that sat thereon to take peace from the earth, and that they should kill one another: and there was given unto him a great sword,

The second seal or period (ver. 3, 4.) is noted for war and slaughter, and was proclaimed by the second living creature, who was like an ox, and had his station in the west. And there went out another horse that was red; and power was given to him that sat thereon to take peace from the earth, and that they should kill one another; and there was given unto him a great sword. This second period commenceth with Trajan, who came from the west, being ¹ a Spaniard by birth, and was the first foreigner who was elevated to the imperial throne. In his reign and that of his successor Adrian there were horrid wars and slaughters, and especially between the rebellious Jews and the Romans. Dion relates, ² that the Jews about Cyrene slew of the Romans and Greeks two hundred and twenty thousand men with the most shocking circum-

¹ Ἰβηρ ὁ Τραϊανος, ἀλλ' οὐκ Ἰταλός, οὐδ' Ἰταλιώτης ἦν—μηδεὶς πρόσθεν ἄλλο-έθνους τὸ πῶν Ῥωμαίων κράτος ἐσχέκει. Trajanus homo Hispanus, nec Italus erat, nec Italicus—ante eum nemo alterius nationis imperium Romanum obtinuerat. [Trajan was a Spaniard, and neither an Italian, nor of Italian extraction. No foreigner before him had held the empire of Rome.] Dion. Hist. Lib. lxxviii. p. 771. Edit. Leunclav.

² Καὶ ἐν τούτῳ οἱ κατὰ Κυρήνην Ἰουδαῖοι—τούς τε Ῥωμαίους καὶ τοὺς Ἕλληνας ἐφθονον,—ὥστε τὰς πάσας δύο καὶ εἴκοσι μυριάδας ἀπολέσθαι. ἐν τῇ Αἰγύπτῳ πολλὰ ἐδράσαν ὁμοία, καὶ ἐν τῇ Κύπρῳ—καὶ ἀπώλοντο καὶ ἐκεῖ μυριάδες τέσσαρες καὶ εἴκοσι.—
ἀλλ' Ἰουδαίους μὲν ἄλλοι τε καὶ Λούκιος ὑπὸ Τραϊάνου πεμφθεὶς κατεστρέψαντο.
Interim Judæi, qui circum Cyrenen habitabant—Romanos pariter atque Græcos concid-unt—ita ut interierint hominum ad ducenta viginti millia. Præterea in Ægypto Cy-proque—consimilia quædam perpetrarunt, ubi desiderata sunt hominum ducenta quadraginta millia.—Sed Judæi et ab aliis, et maxime a Lucio, quem Trajanus miserat, subacti sunt. [At this time the Jews who inhabited Cyrene—slew the Romans and Greeks, so that there perished in the whole two hundred and twenty thousand. In Egypt and in Cyprus they committed like barbarities,—for they destroyed there two hundred and forty thousand. But Lucius and other generals, who were sent by Trajan, subdued the Jews.]
Dion. ibid. p. 786.

stances of barbarity. In Egypt also and in Cyprus they committed the like barbarities, and there perished two hundred and forty thousand men more. But the Jews were subdued in their turn by the other generals and Lucius sent against them by Trajan. Eusebius writing of the same time saith, ¹ that the Jews, inflamed as it were by some violent and seditious spirit, in the first conflict gained a victory over the Gentiles, who flying to Alexandria, took and killed the Jews in the city. The emperor sent Marcius Turbo against them, with great forces by sea and land, who in many battles slew many myriads of the Jews. The emperor also suspecting that they might make the like commotions in Mesopotamia ordered Lucius Quietus to expel them out of the province, who marching against them, slew a very great multitude of them there. Orosius treating of the same time, saith ² that the Jews, with an incredible commotion, made wild as it were with rage, rose at once in different parts of the earth. For throughout all Libya they waged the fiercest wars against the inhabitants, and the country was almost desolated. Egypt also and Cyrene and Thebais they disturbed with cruel seditions. But in Alexandria they were overcome in battle. In Mesopotamia also war was made upon the rebellious Jews by the command of the emperor. So that many thousands of them were destroyed with vast slaughter. They utterly destroyed Salamis, a city of Cyprus, having first murdered all the inhabitants. These things were transacted in the reign of Trajan; and in the reign of Adrian ³ was their great rebellion under their false Messiah Barchochab, and their final dispersion, after fifty of their strongest castles, and nine hundred and eighty-five of their best towns had been demolished, and after five hundred and eighty thousand men had been slain by the sword, besides an infinite number who had perished by famine and sickness and other casualties, with great loss and slaughter too of the Romans, insomuch that the emperor forbore the usual salutations in his letters to the senate. Here was another illustrious triumph of Christ over his enemies; and the Jews and the Romans, both the persecutors of the Christians, were remarkably made the dreadful executioners of Divine vengeance upon one another. The great sword and the red horse are expressive emblems of this slaughtering and bloody period; and the proclamation for slaughter is fitly made by a creature like an ox that is destined for slaughter. This period continued during the reigns of Trajan and his successors, by blood or adoption, ninety-five years.

¹ — ὥσπερ ὑπὸ πνεύματος δεινοῦ τιγος καὶ στασιωδοῦς ἀναρρίπισθέντες—ἐν τῇ πρώτῃ συμβολῇ ἐπικρατῆσαι αὐτοὺς συνέβη τῶν Ἑλλήνων οἱ καὶ καταφυγόντες εἰς τὴν Ἀλεξανδρείαν, τοὺς ἐν τῇ πόλει Ἰουδαίους ἐξώγρησάν τε καὶ ἀπέκτειναν.—ἐφ' οὗς ὁ αὐτοκράτωρ ἐπεμψε Μάρκιον Τουρβῶνα σὺν δυνάμει πεζῇ τε καὶ ναυτικῇ, ἔτι δὲ καὶ ἱππικῇ. ὁ δὲ πολλὰς μάχαις—πολλὰς μυριάδας Ἰουδαίων—ἀναίρει. ὁ δὲ αὐτοκράτωρ ὑποπτεύσας καὶ τοὺς ἐν Μεσοποταμίᾳ Ἰουδαίους ἐπιθήσεται τοῖς αὐτόθι, Λουκίῳ Κυρήνῃ προσέταξεν ἐκκαθαίρει τῆς ἐπαρχίας αὐτοὺς· ὃς καὶ παραταξάμενος πᾶμπόλιν πλῆθος τῶν αὐτόθι φονεύει—velut a violento quodam et seditioso demone exagitati—et primo quidem conflictu forte Judæi Gentiles superaverant. Qui mox Alexandriam confugientes, Judæos qui in ea urbe degebant, captos interfecerunt.—Itaque imperator Marcium Turbonem adversus eos misit cum pedestribus ac navalibus copiis, et cum equitatu. Hic multis præliis consertis—infinita Judæorum millia—neci dedit. Sed imperator veritus ne Judæi qui Mesopotamiam habitabant, incolas perinde aggrederentur, mandavit Lucio Quietō, ut eos extra provinciæ fines deportaret. Qui instructa adversus illos acie, ingentem eorum multitudinem prostravit. [Translated in the text.] Euseb. Eccles. Hist. Lib. iv. cap. ii.

² Incredibili deinde motu sub uno tempore Judæi, quasi rabie efferati, per diversas terrarum partes exarserunt. Nam et per totam Lybiam adversus incolas atrocissima bella gesserunt: quæ adeo tunc interfectis cultoribus desolata est.—Ægyptum vero totam et Cyrenem et Thebaida cruentis seditionibus turbaverunt. In Alexandriâ autem commisso prælio vincti et adtriti sunt. In Mesopotamiâ quoque rebellantibus jussu imperatoris bellum illatum est. Itaque multa millia eorum vastâ cæde deleta sunt. Sane Salaminam, urbem Cyprî, interfectis omnibus accolis deleverunt. [Translated in the text.] Oros. Hist. Lib. vii. cap. xii. p. 487. Edit. Havercamp.

³ Euseb. ibid. cap. vi. Dion. ibid. Lib. lxi. p. 794.

5 And when he had opened the third seal, I heard the third beast say, Come and see. And I beheld, and lo, a black horse; and he that sat on him had a pair of balances in his hand.

6 And I heard a voice in the midst of the four beasts say, A measure of wheat for a penny, and three measures of barley for a penny; and see thou hurt not the oil and the wine.

The third seal or period (ver. 5, 6.) is characterized by the strict execution of justice and judgment, and by the procuration of corn and oil and wine, and was proclaimed by the third living creature, who was like a man, and had his station in the south. And I beheld, and lo, a black horse; and he that sat on him had a pair of balances in his hand. And I heard a voice in the midst of the four living creatures say, A measure of wheat for a penny, and three measures of barley for a penny, and see thou hurt not the oil and the wine. Where Grotius and others have¹ observed that a chœnix of corn, the measure here mentioned, was a man's daily allowance, as a penny was his daily wages; so that if his daily labour could earn no more than his daily bread, without other provision for himself or his family, corn must needs bear a very high price. But whatever may be the capacity of the chœnix, which is difficult to be determined, as it was different in different times and countries; yet such care and such regulations about the necessities of life imply some want and scarcity of them. Scarcity obligeth men to exactness in the price and measure of things. In short, the intent of the prophecy is, that corn should be provided for the people, but it should be distributed in exact measure and proportion. This third period commenceth with Septimius Severus, who was an emperor from the south, being ¹ a native of Africa. He was an ² enactor of just and equal laws, and was very severe and implacable to offences; he would not suffer even petty larcenies to go unpunished; as neither would Alexander Severus in the same period, who ³ was a most severe judge against thieves, and was so fond of the Christian maxim, Whatsoever you would not have done to you, do not you to another, that he commanded it to be engraven on the palace, and on the public buildings. These two emperors were also no less celebrated for the procuring of corn and oil and other provisions, and for supplying the Romans with them after they had experienced the want of them. They repaired the neglects of former times, and corrected the abuses of former princes. Of Septimius Severus it is said, that ⁴ the provision of corn, which he found very small, he so far consulted, that at his death he left a certain rate or allowance to the Roman people for seven years; and also of oil as much as for the space of five years might supply not only the uses of the city, but likewise of all Italy which might want oil. Of Alexander Severus it is also said, that ⁵ he took such care in providing for the Roman people, that the corn which Heliogabalus had wasted, he replaced out of his own money; the oil also, which Septimius Severus had given to the people, and which Heliogabalus had lessened, he restored whole as before. The colour of the black horse befits the severity of their nature and their name, and the balances are the well known emblem of Justice, as well as an intimation of scarcity; and the proclamation for justice and judgment, and for the procuration of corn and oil and wine, is fitly made by a creature like a man. This period continued during the reign of the Septimian family, about forty-two years.

¹ Est autem χοῖνιξ tritici tantum, quanto homo sanus in diem indiget, ut ex Herodoti libro tertio et septimo observarunt eruditi, alii etiam ex Hippocrate, Diogene Laertio et Athenæo. Denarius vero tantum, quantum quoque die mereri poterat homo strenue laborans, ut videre est Matt. xx. 2, &c. [But a chœnix of wheat was as much as a man in health stands daily in need of, as the learned have remarked out of the third and seventh books of Herodotus, others from Hippocrates, Diogenes Laertius, and Athenæus. But a Denarius was as much money as a man working vigorously could earn in a day, as is manifest from Matt. xx. 2, &c.] Grot. in locum. Vide etiam Vitring. p. 259.

7 And when he had opened the fourth seal, I heard the voice of the fourth beast say, Come and see.

¹ Septimius Severus—oriundus ex Africâ.—Solutus omni memoriâ et ante et postea ex Africâ imperator fuit. [Septimius Severus,—a native of Africa. He was the only emperor both of those that went before or that followed, who was an African.] Eutropius, Lib. viii. cap. x. Interfecto Didio Juliano, Severus Africâ oriundus imperium obtinuit. [Didius Julianus being killed, Severus, a native of Africa, obtained the empire.] Ælius Spartianus in Severo, Hist. August. Scriptores vi. p. 64. Edit. Salmasii.

² Legum conditor longe æquilibrium—implacabilis delictis—ne parva latrocinia quidem impunita patiebatur. [Translated in the text.] Aurel. Victor de Cæsar. cap. xx.

³ Severissimus judex contra fures—Quod tibi fieri non vis, alteri ne feceris; quam sententiam usque adeo dilexit, ut et in palatio et in publicis operibus præscribi juberet. [Translated in the text.] Lampridius in Alexandro, Hist. August. Script. vi. p. 123 et 132. Edit. Salmasii.

⁴ Rei frumentariæ, quam minimam repererat, ita consuluit, ut excedens vitâ, septem annorum canonem P. R. relinqueret. Spartian. ibid. p. 67. olei vero tantum ut per quinquennium non solum urbis usibus, sed et totius Italiæ quæ oleo egeret, sufficeret. [Translated in the text.] Spartian. in Severo, ibid. p. 73.

⁵ Commeatum populi Romani sic adjuvit, ut quum frumenta Heliogabalus evertisset, vicem de propriâ pecuniâ loco suo reponeret—Oleum quod Severus populo dederat, quodque Heliogabalus imminuerat, integrum restituit. [Translated in the text.] Lamprid. in Alex. ibid. p. 121.

8 And I looked, and behold, a pale horse; and his name that sat on him was Death, and Hell followed with him; and power was given unto them, over the fourth part of the earth, to kill with sword, and with hunger, and with death, and with the beasts of the earth.

The fourth seal or period (ver. 7, 8.) is distinguished by a concurrence of evils, war, and famine, and pestilence, and wild beasts; and was proclaimed by the fourth living creature, who was like an eagle, and had his station in the north. And I looked, and behold, a pale horse; and his name that sat on him was Death, and Hell followed with him: and power was given unto them, over the fourth part of the earth, to kill with sword, and with hunger, and with death, and with the beasts of the earth. These are the same four sore judgments with which Ezekiel (xiv. 21.) threatened Jerusalem, the sword, and the famine, and the noisome beast, and the pestilence: for in the oriental languages the pestilence is emphatically¹ styled death. These four were to destroy the fourth part of mankind, and the image is very poetical of death riding on a pale horse, and hell or the grave following with him, ready to swallow up the dead corpses. This period commenceth with Maximin, who was an emperor from the north, being² born of barbarous parents in a village of Thrace. He was indeed a barbarian in all respects. There was not, as an³ historian affirms, a more cruel animal upon the earth; he was so cruel, that he was deservedly called by the name of Cyclops, Busiris, Phalaris, and the worst of tyrants. The history of his and several succeeding reigns is full of wars and murders,

¹ Voce θανάτου intelligendus est λοιμός ex Hebraismo: Nam ita מות sumitur apud Jer. ix. 21. et xviii. 21. Sic apud Sirachidem legimus xxxix. 29. λοιμός καὶ θάνατος, ubi itidem θάνατος haud dubie pestilentiam significat. Syrus quoque tum hic tum apud Lucam λοιμός vertit מותנא, i. e. θανάτους, et LXX. Hebræorum דבר, i. e. pestem vertunt θάνατον, ut et Chaldæus et Latinus Lev. xxvi. 25. Horum exemplo Severus Sulpicius, Hist. I. mortem pro pestilentia posuit. ["By the word θανάτου, death, we are to understand λοιμός, the pestilence, according to the Hebrew idiom. For so מות, death, is taken, Jer. ix. 21. and xviii. 21. Thus we read in the son of Sirach, xxxix. 29. λοιμός καὶ θάνατος, famine and death, where in like manner θάνατος, death, no doubt signifies the pestilence. The Syriac translator, both here and in Luke, renders λοιμός, pestilences, by מותנא, deaths. And the LXX. translate the Hebrew דבר, i. e. the pestilence, by θάνατον, death, as do also the Chaldee and Latin versions of Lev. xxvi. 25. After their example Severus Sulpicius, Hist. i. has put mortem, death, for pestilentiam, the pestilence."] Grot. in Matt. xxiv. 7.

² Hic de vico Thraciæ, vicino barbaris, barbaro etiam patre et matre genitus. ["He was of a town in Thrace, near to the barbarians, and descended from barbarians both by the father and the mother's side."] Julius Capitolin. in Maximin. Hist. August. Script. vi. Edit. Salmas. p. 138. Vide etiam notas Salmas. et Casauboni. Μαξιμίνος, τὸ μὲν γένος τῶν ἐνδοτάτων Θράκων καὶ μισοβαρβάρων. Max. qui quod ad genus attinet, ex intimis Thracibus, et semibarbaris erat. ["Maximinus, as to his extraction, came from the interior of Thrace, where they are half barbarians."] Herodian. Lib. vi. p. 143. Edit. H. Steph. 1581.

³ Neque enim fuit crudelius animal in terris—tam crudelis fuit, ut illum alii Cyclopem, alii Busiridem, alii Scironem, nonnulli Phalarim, multi Typhonem, vel Gygem vocarent. ["There was not a more cruel animal upon the earth.—He was so cruel, that some called him Cyclops, others Busiris, others Sciron, some Phalaris, many Typho, or Gyges."] Jul. Capit. ibid. p. 141.

mutinies of soldiers, and invasions of foreign armies, rebellions of subjects, and deaths of princes. There were more than twenty emperors in the space of fifty years, and all or most of them died in war, or were murdered by their own soldiers and subjects. Besides lawful emperors, there were in the reign of Gallienus¹ thirty tyrants or usurpers, who set up in different parts of the empire, and came all to violent and miserable ends. Here was sufficient employment for the sword; and such wars and devastations must necessarily produce a famine, and the famine is another distinguishing calamity of this period. In the reign of Gallus the Scythians made such incursions, that² not one nation subject to the Romans was left unwasted by them, and every unwall'd town, and most of the walled cities were taken by them. In the reign of Probus also³ there was a great famine throughout the world; and for want of victuals the army mutinied and slew him. An usual consequence of famine is the pestilence, and the pestilence is the third distinguishing calamity of this period. This pestilence, according to⁴ Zonaras, arising from Ethiopia, while Gallus and Volusian were emperors, pervaded all the Roman provinces, and for fifteen years together incredibly exhausted them; and so learned a man as Lipsius declares, that he never read of any greater plague, for the space of time that it lasted, or of land that it overspread. Zosimus, speaking of the devastations of the Scythians in the reign of Gallus before mentioned, farther addeth, that⁵ the pestilence, not less pernicious than the war, destroyed whatever was left of human kind, and made such ναι. adeo quidem, ut nulla gens Romanæ ditionis ab eis non vastata manserit, sed omnia, prope dixerim, oppida destituta mœnibus, et iisdem munitorum magna pars, capta fuerint. [Translated in the text.] Zosim. in Gall. Lib. i. sect. 26.

¹ Vide Trebell. Pollio. de triginta tyrannis. Hist. Aug. Script. vi. p. 184, &c. Edit. Salmasii.

² Ὅστε μὴδὲ ἐν ἔθνος Ῥωμαῖος ὑπήκουον ἀπόρρητον ὑπὸ τούτων καταλειφθῆναι, πᾶσαν δὲ ὥς εἰπεῖν ἀτείχιστον πόλιν, καὶ τῶν ὠχυρωμένων τείχεσι τὰς πλείους ἀλώ-

³ Ἐγένετο λιμός κοσμικός μέγας, καὶ μὴ εὐρεθέντων ἀναλωμάτων, ἐστασίασεν ὁ στρατός καὶ ἐπελθόντες ἐσφάζαν αὐτόν. fames ingens per totum orbem grassata est: annonâ autem deficiente, seditione in exercitu excitâ, a militibus interfectus est. [Translated in the text.] Joan. Malalæ Chronograph. p. 400. Edit. Oxon. 1691.

⁴ Zonaras author est, nec cæteri tacuere, sub Gallo et Volusiano imperatoribus, pestem ab Æthiopiâ exortam omnes Romanas provincias pervasisse, et per quindecim continuos annos incredibiliter exhausisse. Nec alia unquam major lues mihi lecta (inquit vir nostro ævo celebris) spatio temporum, sive terrarum. [“Zonaras tells us, nor are other writers silent, that under the reign of Gallus and Volusian, a pestilence originating in Ethiopia, pervaded all the Roman provinces, and for the space of fifteen successive years, incredibly exhausted them. A celebrated author of the present age hath said, that in the course of his reading, he had never met with a plague of so long continuance, nor so extensive.”] Mede, p. 446. Zonar. in Gal. et Volus. Lipsius de Constantiâ, Lib. ii. cap. xxiii.

⁵ Οὐκ ἦντον δὲ τοῦ πανταχόθεν ἐπιβρίσαντος πολέμου, καὶ ὁ λοιμός πόλεσι τε καὶ κώμασι ἐπιγενόμενος, εἴ τι λελεμμένος ἦν, ἀνθρώπειον γένος διέφθαιεν, οὕτω πρότερον ἐν τοῖς φθασᾶσι χρόνοις τοσαύτην ἀνθρώπων ἀπωλείαν ἐργασάμενος. Nec minus bello, quod undique scaturiendo velut emerserat, lues etiam pestilens in oppidis atque vicis subsecuta, quicquid erat humani generis reliquum, absumsit: quæ sane nunquam superioribus sæculis tantam hominum stragem ediderat. [And not less than the war which burst out in all directions, a pestilence brake forth in all the cities and villages, and destroyed every thing of human kind which the war had left, and wrought such havoc among men, as had never occurred in former ages.] Zosim. ib.

havoc as it had never done in former times. He saith also, that in the reign of Gallienus, ¹ such a grievous pestilence as never happened at any time before, rendered the calamities inflicted by the barbarians more moderate. He saith afterwards too in the reign of Claudius, that ² the pestilence seizing on the Romans as well as the barbarians, many of the army died, and also Claudius the emperor. Dionysius, in ³ Eusebius, treating of the same time, mentions the war, and the famine, and the pestilence, as succeeding one another in their natural order. St. Cyprian too mentions ⁴ all the three together as troubling the world more at that time than at any other. He wrote also a ⁵ treatise upon this very pestilence, which he entitled De Mortalitate, as if he had taken the name from the prophecy which had predicted it. In short, without alleging more testimonies, Eutropius affirms of Gallus and Volusian, that ⁶ their reign was remarkable only for the pestilence and diseases and sickness. Orosius ⁷ asserts much the same thing, and Trebellius Pollio likewise ⁸ informs us, that in the reign of Gallienus the pestilence was so great that five thousand men died in one day. When the countries lie thus uncultivated, uninhabited, unfrequented, the wild beasts multiply, and come into the towns to devour men, which is the fourth distinguishing calamity of this period. This would appear a probable consequence of the former calamities, if history had recorded nothing of it; but we read in history that ⁹ five hun-

¹ Λοιμός ἐπιβρίσας ταῖς πόλεσιν, οἷος οὕτω πρότερον ἐν παντὶ τῇ χρόνῳ συνέβη, τὰς μὲν ὑπὸ τῶν βαρβάρων συμφορὰς μετριωτέρας ἀπέφηνε. tanta pestis in civitatibus exorta, quanta nunquam prius ullo tempore exstiterat, calamitates a barbaris illatas leviores reddidit. [A pestilence such as never had been in any former age, burst forth in the cities, and rendered the calamities occasioned by the barbarians more moderate.] Zosim. ibid. sect. xxxvii.

² Ἀφαιμένον δὲ τοῦ λοιμοῦ καὶ Ῥωμαίων, ἀπέθανον μὲν πολλοὶ τοῦ στρατεύματος, τελευτᾷ δὲ καὶ Κλαύδιος. Sed quod in Romanos quoque pestis sævire cœpisset, cum alii complures in exercitu mortui sunt, tum etiam Claudius vivendi finem fecit. [Translated in the text.] Zosim. ibid. sect. xlvii.

³ Euseb. Eccles. Hist. Lib. vii. cap. xxii.

⁴ Sed enim cum dicas, plurimos conqueri quod bella crebrius surgant, quod lues, quod fames sæviant, &c. [But when you say, that many complain of the frequency of wars, of the ravages of pestilence and famine, &c.] Ad Demetrianum, p. 129. Edit. Felli. Quod autem crebrius bella continuant, quod sterilitas et fames solitudinem cumulant, quod sævientibus morbis valetudo frangitur, quod humanum genus suis populatione vastatur, &c. [That wars continue to be more frequent, that sterility and famine add to our anxiety, that our health is impaired by the ravages of diseases, that the human race is wasted by the pestilence, &c.] Ibid. p. 130.

⁵ Vide Edit. Felli, p. 110.

⁶ Solâ pestilentia, et morbis, atque ægreditudinibus notus eorum principatus fuit. [Translated in the text.] Eutrop. Lib. ix. cap. v.

⁷ Hâc solâ pernicië insignes Gallus et Volusianus. [Gallus and Volusian have been remarkable for these miseries alone.] Oros. Hist. Lib. vii. cap. xxi.

⁸ Pestilentia tanta existerat, ut uno die quinque millia hominum perirent. [Translated in the text.] Trebell. Pollio. in Gall. p. 177. ibid.

⁹ Lupi urbem quingenti simul ingressi sunt, in quam se Maximinus contulerat—quæ deserta a civibus venienti Maximino patuit. [Five hundred wolves at once entered a city into which Maximin had betaken himself. That city, deserted by its inhabitants, had its gates standing open to that prince when he came to it.] Julius Capitolin. in Max. Jun. p. 150. ibid.

dred wolves together entered into a city, which was deserted by its inhabitants, and where the younger Maximin chanced to be. It is well known that the heathens maliciously ascribed all public calamities to the Christians, and among them we find objected ¹ the wars which they were obliged to wage with lions and wild beasts, as we may collect from Arnobius, who wrote soon after this time. The colour of the pale horse is very suitable to the mortality of this period; and the proclamation for death and destruction is fitly made by a creature like an eagle that watches for carcasses. This period continued from Maximin to Diocletian, about fifty years.

9 And when he had opened the fifth seal, I saw under the altar the souls of them that were slain for the word of God, and for the testimony which they held.

10 And they cried with a loud voice, saying, How long, O Lord, holy and true, dost thou not judge and avenge our blood on them that dwell on the earth?

11 And white robes were given unto every one of them, and it was said unto them, that they should rest yet for a little season, until their fellow servants also, and their brethren that should be killed as they were, should be fulfilled.

The following seals have nothing extrinsical, like the proclamation of the living creatures, to determine from what quarter we must expect their completion; but they are sufficiently distinguished by their internal marks and characters. The fifth seal or period is remarkable for a dreadful persecution of the Christians, who are represented (ver. 9.) lying under the altar, (for the scene is still in the tabernacle or temple) as sacrifices newly slain and offered to God. They cry aloud (ver. 10.) for the Lord to judge and avenge their cause; that is, the cruelties exercised upon them were of so barbarous and atrocious a nature, as to deserve and provoke the vengeance of the Lord. White robes are given unto every one of them (ver. 11.) as a token of their justification and acceptance with God; and they are exhorted to rest for a season, till the number of the martyrs be completed, when they shall receive their full reward, as we shall see hereafter. Where Mr. Lowman ² observes very well, that "this representation seems much to favour the immediate happiness of departed saints, and hardly to consist with that uncomfortable opinion, the insensible state of departed souls till after the resurrection." There were other persecutions before, but this was by far the most considerable, the tenth and last general persecution which was begun by Diocletian, and continued by others, and lasted longer, and extended farther, and was sharper and more bloody than any or all preceding; and therefore this was particularly predicted. Eusebius and Lactantius, who were two eye-witnesses, have¹ written large accounts of it. Orosius² asserts, that this persecution was longer and more cruel than all the past, for it raged incessantly for ten years by burning the churches, proscribing the innocent, and slaying the martyrs. Sulpicius Severus too³ describes it as the most bitter persecution, which for ten years together depopulated the people of God; at which time all the world almost was stained with the sacred blood of the martyrs, and was never more exhausted by any wars. So that this became a memorable æra to the Christians, under the name of the æra of Diocletian, or as it is otherwise called, the æra of martyrs.

¹ Quando cum feris bella, et praelia cum leonibus gesta sunt? Non ante nos? [When had we wars with wild beasts, and battles with lions? was it not so in former times?] Arnob. advers. Gentes, Lib. i. p. 5. Edit. Lugd. Bat. 1651.

² See Lowman on the Rev. p. 51.

12 And I beheld when he had opened the sixth seal, and lo, there was a great earthquake, and the sun became black as sackcloth of hair, and the moon became as blood.

13 And the stars of heaven fell unto the earth, even as a fig-tree casteth her untimely figs when she is shaken of a mighty wind:

14 And the heaven departed as a scroll when it is rolled together; and every mountain and island were moved out of their places:

15 And the kings of the earth, and the great men, and the rich men, and the chief captains, and the mighty men, and every bond-man, and every free-man, hid themselves in the dens, and in the rocks of the mountains:

16 And said to the mountains and rocks, Fall on us, and hide us from the face of him that sitteth on the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb;

17 For the great day of his wrath is come; and who shall be able to stand?

The sixth seal or period produceth mighty changes and revolutions, which according to the prophetic style are expressed by great commotions in the earth and in the heavens. The very same images, the very same expressions are employed by other prophets concerning the mutations and alterations of religions and governments: and why may they not therefore with equal fitness and propriety be applied to one of the greatest and most memorable revolutions which ever were in the world, the subversion of the heathen religion, and establishment of the Christian, which was begun by Constantine the Great, and was completed by his successors? The series of the prophecy requires this application, and all the phrases and expressions will easily admit of such a construction. And I beheld when he had opened the sixth seal, (ver. 12.) and lo there was σεισμός μέγας, a great earthquake, or rather a great concussion; for the word in the original comprehends the shaking of heaven as well as of earth. The same phrase is used by the prophet Haggai, (ii. 6. 21.) concerning the first coming of Christ, I will shake the heavens and the earth: and this shaking, as the apostle saith, (Heb. xii. 27.) signifieth the removing of those things which are shaken; and so the prophet Haggai himself explains it, I will shake the heavens and the earth, and I will overthrow the throne of kingdoms, and I will destroy the strength of the kingdoms of the heathen; and where was ever a greater concussion or removal, than when Christianity was advanced to the throne of Paganism, and idolatry gave place to the true religion? Then follow the particular effects of this general concussion, (ver. 12—14.) And the sun became black as sackcloth of hair, and the moon became as blood; and the stars of heaven fell unto the earth, even as a fig-tree casteth her untimely figs when she is shaken of a mighty wind; and the heavens departed as a scroll when it is rolled together; and every mountain and island were moved out of their places. Isaiah speaketh much in the same manner concerning Babylon and Idumea, (xiii. 10; xxxiv. 4.) For the stars of heaven, and the constellations thereof, shall not give their light; the sun shall be darkened in his going forth, and the moon shall not cause her light to shine. And all the host of heaven shall be dissolved, and the heavens shall be rolled together as a scroll: and all their host shall fall down as the leaf falleth off from the vine, and as a falling fig from the fig-tree. And Jeremiah, concerning the land of Judah, (iv. 23, 24.) I beheld the earth, and lo, it was without form and void: and the heavens, and they had no light: I beheld the mountains, and lo, they trembled, and all the hills moved lightly. And Ezekiel, concerning Egypt, (xxxii. 7.) And when I shall put thee out, I will cover the heaven, and make the stars thereof dark; I will cover the sun with a cloud, and the moon shall not give her light. And Joel, concerning Jerusalem, (ii. 10. 31.) The earth shall quake before them, the heavens shall tremble, the sun and the moon shall be dark, and the stars shall withdraw their shining: the sun shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood, before the great and the terrible day of the Lord come. And our Saviour himself also concerning the destruction of Jerusalem, (Matt. xxiv. 29.) The sun shall be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars shall fall from heaven, and the powers of the heavens shall be shaken. Now it is certain, that the fall of any of these cities and kingdoms was not of greater concern and consequence to the world, nor more deserving to be described in such pompous figures, than the fall of the Pagan Roman empire, when the great lights of the heathen world, the sun, moon, and stars, the powers, civil and ecclesiastical, were all eclipsed and obscured, the heathen emperors and Cæsars were slain, the heathen priests and augurs were extirpated, the heathen officers and magistrates were removed, the heathen temples were demolished, and their revenues appropriated to better uses. It is customary with the prophets, after they have described a thing in the most symbolical and figurative diction, to represent the same again in plainer language: and the same method is observed here, (ver. 15—17.) And the kings of the earth, and the great men, and the rich men, and the chief captains, and the mighty men, and every bondman, and every freeman, that is, Maximian, Galerius, Maximin, Maxentius, Licinius, &c. with all their adherents and followers, were so routed and dispersed, that they hid themselves in the dens, and in the rocks of the mountains, and said to the mountains and rocks, Fall on us, and hide us; expressions used, as in other prophets, (Isai. ii. 19. 21. Hos. x. 8. Luke xxiii. 30.) to denote the utmost terror and consternation: Fall on us, and hide us from the face of him that sitteth on the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb; for the great day of his wrath is come; and who shall be able to stand? This is therefore a triumph of Christ over his heathen enemies, and a triumph after a severe persecution; so that the time and all the circumstances, as well as the series and order of the prophecy, agree perfectly with this interpretation. ¹ Galerius, ² Maximin, and ³ Licinius made even a public confession of their guilt, recalled their decrees and edicts against the Christians, and acknowledged the just judgments of God and of Christ in their destruction.

¹ Euseb. Eccles. Hist. Lib. viii. cum supplemento. Lactantius de Mortibus Persecut. cap. vii. &c.

² — quæ persecutio omnibus fere ante actis diuturnior atque immanior fuit. Nam per decem annos incendiis ecclesiarum, proscriptionibus innocentum, cædibus martyrum, incessabiliter acta est. [Translated in the text.] Oros. Hist. Lib. vii. cap. xxv. p. 528. Edit. Havercamp.

³ Acerbissima persecutio, quæ per decem continuos annos plebem Dei depopulata est; quâ tempestate omnis fere sacro martyrum cruore orbis infectus est:—Nullis unquam magis bellis mundus exhaustus est. [Translated in the text.] Sulp. Sever. Hist. Sacr. Lib. ii. p. 99. Edit. Elzevir. 1656.

CHAPTER VII.

1 AND after these things, I saw four angels standing on the four corners of the earth, holding the four winds of the earth, that the wind should not blow on the earth, nor on the sea, nor on any tree.

2 And I saw another angel ascending from the east, having the seal of the living God: and he cried with a loud voice to the four angels, to whom it was given to hurt the earth and the sea,

3 Saying, Hurt not the earth, neither the sea, nor the trees, till we have sealed the servants of our God in their foreheads.

4 And I heard the number of them which were sealed: and there were sealed an hundred and forty and four thousand, of all the tribes of the children of Israel.

¹ Euseb. Eccles. Hist. Lib. viii. cap. xvii. De Vitâ Constant. Lib. i. cap. lvii. Lactantius de Mort. Persecut. cap. xxxiii. &c.

² Euseb. Eccles. Hist. Lib. ix. cap. ix. x. xi. De Vitâ Constant. Lib. i. cap. lix. Lactantius de Mort. Persecut. cap. xlix. &c.

³ Euseb. de Vitâ Constant. Lib. ii. cap. xviii.

5 Of the tribe of Juda were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Reuben were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Gad were sealed twelve thousand.

6 Of the tribe of Aser were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Nephthalim were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Manasses were sealed twelve thousand.

7 Of the tribe of Simeon were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Levi were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Issachar were sealed twelve thousand.

8 Of the tribe of Zabulon were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Joseph were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Benjamin were sealed twelve thousand.

9 After this I beheld, and lo, a great multitude, which no man could number, of all nations, and kindreds, and people, and tongues, stood before the throne, and before the Lamb, clothed with white robes, and palms in their hands ;

10 And cried with a loud voice, saying, Salvation to our God which sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb.

11 And all the angels stood round about the throne, and about the elders, and the four beasts, and fell before the throne on their faces, and worshipped God, 12 Saying, Amen : Blessing, and glory, and wisdom, and thanksgiving, and honour, and power, and might be unto our God for ever and ever. Amen.

13 And one of the elders answered, saying unto me, What are these which are arrayed in white robes ? and whence came they ?

14 And I said unto him, Sir, thou knowest. And he said to me, These are they which came out of great tribulation, and have washed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb.

15 Therefore are they before the throne of God, and serve him day and night in his temple ; and he that sitteth on the throne shall dwell among them.

16 They shall hunger no more, neither thirst any more, neither shall the sun light on them, nor any heat.

17 For the Lamb which is in the midst of the throne shall feed them, and shall lead them unto living fountains of waters : And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes.

What follows in this chapter is still a continuation of the sixth seal, for the seventh seal is not opened till the beginning of the next chapter. It is a description of the state of the church in Constantine's time, of the peace and protection that it should enjoy under the civil powers, and of the great accession that should be made to it both of Jews and Gentiles. Four angels (ver. 1—3.) are ordered by another angel to restrain the four winds from blowing with violence on any part of the world; to show that these were halcyon days, wherein the former wars and persecutions should cease, and peace and tranquillity be restored for a season. Eusebius is very copious upon this subject in several parts of his writings; and hath¹ applied that passage of the Psalmist in the version of the Seventy, (Ps. xlv. 8, 9.) Come hither, and behold the works of the Lord, what wonders he hath wrought in the earth: he maketh wars to cease unto the end of the earth, he breaketh the bow, and cutteth the spear asunder, he burneth the chariot in the fire; which things, saith he, being manifestly fulfilled in our times, we rejoice over them. Lactantius also² saith in the same triumphant strain, that “tranquillity being restored throughout the world, the church which was lately ruined riseth again. Now after the violent agitations of so great a tempest, a calm air and the desired light become resplendent. Now God hath relieved the afflicted. Now he hath wiped away the tears of the sorrowful.” These are testimonies of contemporary writers; and some³ medals of Constantine are still preserved with the head of this emperor on one side and this inscription CONSTANTINUS AUG. and on the reverse BEATA TRANQUILLITAS, Blessed Tranquillity. During this time of tranquillity the servants of God were to be sealed in their foreheads. It is an expression in allusion to the ancient custom of marking servants in their foreheads to distinguish what they were, and to whom they belonged. Now among Christians baptism being the seal of the covenant between God and man, is therefore by ancient writers⁴ often called the seal, the sign, the mark and character of the Lord: and it was the⁵ practice in early times, as it is at present, to make the sign of the cross upon the foreheads of the parties baptized. The same sign of the cross was also made at confirmation; and upon many other occasions the Christians signed themselves with the sign of the cross in their foreheads, as a token that they were not ashamed of a crucified Master, that on the contrary they gloried in the cross of Christ, and triumphed in that symbol and representation of it. The sealing therefore of the servants of God in their foreheads at this juncture can imply no less, than that many converts should be baptized, and those who before, in times of persecution, had been compelled to worship God in private, should now make a free, open, and public profession of their religion; and

¹ Euseb. Eccles. Hist. Lib. x. cap. i. ἐφ' οἷς εἰς ἡμᾶς ἐναργῶς πεπληρωμένοις χαίροντες—Quæ cum omnia nostris temporibus manifestè completa sint, læti deinceps et gratulabundi. [“Over which things as manifestly fulfilled in our time, we greatly rejoice.”]

² Restitutâ per orbem tranquillitate, profligata nuper ecclesia rursum exurgit.—Nunc post tantæ tempestatis violentos turbines placidus aër et optata lux refulsit. Nunc Deus afflictos sublevavit. Nunc mœrentium lachrymas detersit. [Translated in the text.] Lactantius de Mort. Persecut. cap. i.

³ See Daubuz, p. 311.

⁴ See Mede, p. 511. Bingham's Antiquities, B. xi. chap. i. sect. vi. et vii.

⁵ See Cave's Primitive Christianity, Part i. chap. x. Bingham, ibid. chap. ix. sect. iv. &c.

that such an accession was made to the church, every one knoweth who knoweth any thing of the history of this time.

As the church of Christ was first formed out of the Jewish church and nation, so here (ver. 4—8.) the spiritual Israel is first mentioned; and the number of the thousands of Israel is that of the twelve patriarchs multiplied by the twelve apostles, which we shall find to be a sacred number throughout the Revelation. But the twelve tribes are not enumerated here in the same method and order as they are in other places of Holy Scripture. Judah hath the first rank and precedence, because from him descended the Messiah. Dan is entirely omitted, and Ephraim is not mentioned, because they were the principal promoters of idolatry, and therefore Levi is substituted in the room of the one, and Joseph is mentioned instead of the other. The children too of the bond-women and of the free-women are confounded together, there being (Gal. iii. 28.) in Christ Jesus neither bond nor free. Besides some of all the tribes of Israel, there was an innumerable multitude of all nations and tongues, clothed with white robes, and palms in their hands, (ver. 9, 10.) who received and embraced the Gospel: and as Sulpicius Severus ¹says, it is wonderful how much the Christian religion prevailed at that time. The historians who have written of this reign, ²relate how even the most remote and barbarous nations were converted to the faith, Jews as well as Gentiles. One historian in particular ³affirms, that at the time when Constantine took possession of Rome, after the death of Maxentius, there were baptized more than twelve thousand Jews and heathens, besides women and children. The angels also (ver. 11, 12.) join in the celebration of God upon this occasion: for if there is joy (Luke xv. 10.) in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth, much more may those heavenly spirits rejoice at the conversion of whole countries and nations. Then one of the elders (ver. 13—17.) explains to St. John some particulars relating to this innumerable multitude of all nations. They have palms in their hands, as tokens of their victory and triumph over tribulation and persecution. They are arrayed in white robes, as emblems of their sanctity and justification through the merits and death of Christ. They are, like the children of Israel, arrived at their Canaan or land of rest, and they shall no more suffer hunger, or thirst, or heat, as they did in the wilderness. They are now happily freed from all their former troubles and molestations; and their heathen adversaries shall no more prevail against them. This period we may suppose to have continued with some little interruption from the reign of Constantine the Great to the death of Theodosius the Great, about seventy years.

¹ Hoc temporum tractu mirum est quantum invaluerit religio Christiana. [Translated in the text.] Sulpic. Sever. Sacr. Hist. Lib. ii. p. 100. Edit. Elzevir. 1656.

² Socrates, Hist. Eccles. Lib. i. cap. xviii. xix. xx. Sozomen, Hist. Eccles. Lib. ii. cap. v. vi. vii. viii. &c. &c.

³ Hoc tempore Romæ baptizati sunt e Judæis et Idololatriis ultra duodecim hominum millia, præter mulieres et pueros. ["At this time were baptized at Rome, of Jews and Idolaters, upwards of twelve thousand men, besides women and children."] Abul Pharajii Hist. Dyn. vii. p. 85. Vers. Pocockii. Vide etiam Epiphaniæ Hæres. xxx. sect. iv. &c. p. 127. Vol. I. Edit. Petavii.

CHAPTER VIII.

1 And when he had opened the seventh seal, there was silence in heaven about the space of half an hour.

2 And I saw the seven angels which stood before God; and to them were given seven trumpets.

3 And another angel came and stood at the altar, having a golden censer; and there was given him much incense, that he should offer it with the prayers of all saints upon the golden altar which was before the throne.

4 And the smoke of the incense, which came with the prayers of the saints, ascended up before God, out of the angel's hand.

5 And the angel took the censer, and filled it with fire of the altar, and cast it into the earth: and there were voices, and thundings, and lightnings, and an earthquake.

6 And the seven angels which had the seven trumpets, prepared themselves to sound.

The seventh seal or period is of much longer duration, and comprehends many more events than any of the former seals. It comprehends indeed seven periods distinguished by the sounding of seven trumpets. At the opening of this seal (ver. 1.) there was silence in heaven about the space of half an hour. This silence of half an hour is a sign that the peace of the church would continue but for a short season. It is an interval and pause, as it were, between the foregoing and the succeeding visions. It is a mark of solemnity, to procure attention, and to prepare the mind for great and signal events: and not without an allusion to a ceremony among the Jews. Philo¹ informs us, the incense used to be offered before the morning, and after the evening sacrifice: and while the sacrifices were made, (2 Chron. xxix. 25—28.) the voices and instruments and trumpets sounded; while the priest went into the temple to burn incense, (Luke i. 10.) all were silent, and the people prayed without to themselves. Now this was the morning of the church, and therefore the silence precedes the sounding of the trumpets. It was necessary before the trumpets could be sounded, that they should be given (ver. 2.) to the seven archangels, who were to execute the will of God, and to sound the trumpets each in his season. At the same time (ver. 3—5.) another angel, like the priest, having a golden censer, offereth incense with the prayers of all saints; and then filleth the censer with fire of the altar, and casteth it into the earth; as in Ezekiel, (x. 2.) coals of fire are taken from between the cherubim, and scattered over Jerusalem, to denote the judgments of God to be executed upon that city. Whereupon immediately ensue voices, and thunderings, and lightnings, and an earthquake, the usual prophetic signs and preludes of great calamities and commotions upon earth. Then the angels (ver. 6.) prepare themselves to sound: and as the seals foretold the state and condition of the Roman empire before and till it became Christian, so the trumpets foreshew the fate and condition of it afterwards. The sound of the trumpet, as Jeremiah (iv. 19.) says, and as every one understands it, is the alarm of war: and the sounding of these trumpets is designed to rouse and excite the nations against the Roman empire, called the third part of the world, as perhaps including the third part of the world, and being seated principally in Europe, the third part of the world at that time.

¹ — πρό τε τῆς ἑωθινῆς θυσίας καὶ μετὰ τὴν ἱσπερινὴν— ante matutinum et post vespertinum sacrificium. [“ Before the morning and after the evening sacrifice.”] Philo de Victimis, p. 836. Edit. Paris. 1640.

7 The first angel sounded, and there followed hail and fire mingled with blood, and they were cast upon the earth: and the third part of trees was burnt up, and all green grass was burnt up.

At the sounding of the first trumpet (ver. 7.) the barbarous nations, like a storm of hail and fire mingled with blood, invade the Roman territories; and destroy the third part of trees, that is, the trees of the third part of the earth, and the green grass, that is, both old and young, high and low, rich and poor together. Theodosius the Great died in the year 395; and no sooner was he dead, than the ¹ Huns, Goths, and other barbarians, like hail for multitude, and breathing fire and slaughter, broke in upon the best provinces of the empire both in the east and west, with greater success than they had ever done before. But by this trumpet, I conceive, were principally intended the irruptions and depredations of the Goths² under the conduct of the famous Alaric, who began his incursions in the same year 395, first ravaged Greece, then wasted Italy, besieged Rome, and was bought off at an exorbitant price, besieged it again in the year 410, took and plundered the city, and set fire to it in several places. Philostorgius, who lived in and wrote of these times, ³ saith that “the sword of the barbarians destroyed the greatest multitude of men; and among other calamities, dry heats with flashes of flame and whirlwinds of fire, occasioned various and intolerable terrors; yea, and hail greater than could be held in a man's hand fell down in several places, weighing as much as eight pounds." Well therefore might the prophet compare these incursions of the barbarians to hail and fire mingled with blood. Claudian in like manner compares them to ¹ a storm of hail in his poem on this very war. Jerome also ² saith of some of these barbarians, "that they came on unexpectedly every where, and marching quicker than report, spared not religion, nor dignities, nor age, nor had compassion on crying infants; those were compelled to die who had not yet begun to live." So truly did they destroy the trees and the green grass together.

¹ Socratis Eccles. Hist. Lib. vi. cap. i. Sozomen, Lib. viii. cap. i. Zosimi Hist. Lib. v. et vi. Pauli Orosii Hist. Lib. vii. cap. xxxvii. &c. Car. Sigonii Hist. de Occidentali Imperio, Lib. x.

² Zosim. Oros. Sigon. ibid. &c. Philostorgius, Lib. xi. et xii.

³ βαρβαρική μὲν γὰρ τὸ τῆς φθορᾶς πλῆθος εἰργάζετο μάχαιρα.—αὐχομοὶ φλογωδεῖς, προσητῆρές τέ ἐστιν οἷς ἐμβαλλόμενοι, ποικίλον τε τὸ δεινὸν ἐποιοῦν καὶ ἀφόρητον· καὶ δὴ καὶ χάλαζα μείζων ἢ κατὰ χειρὰ πολλοῦ γῆς κατεφέρετο. ἄχρι γὰρ καὶ ὀκτῶ τῶν λεγομένων λίτρων ἔλκουσα βάρος ὥσθι κατασκήψασα. Nam et barbaricus ensis maximam hominum multitudinem delevit;—siccitates flammæ, et ignis turbines cœlitus immissi, multiplicem atque intolerabilem intulerunt calamitatem. Sed et grando, lapide

8 And the second angel sounded, and as it were a great mountain burning with fire was cast into the sea; and the third part of the sea became blood:

9 And the third part of the creatures which were in the sea, and had life, died; and the third part of the ships were destroyed.

At the sounding of the second trumpet (ver. 8, 9.) as it were a great mountain burning with fire, that is, a great warlike nation or hero, (for in the ³ style of poetry, which is near akin to the style of prophecy, heroes are compared to mountains;) cast into the sea, turneth the third part of it into blood, and destroyeth the fishes and the ships therein; that is, falling on the Roman empire, maketh a sea of blood, with horrible destruction of the cities and inhabitants: for waters, as the angel afterwards (xvii. 15.) explains them to St. John, are peoples, and multitudes, and nations, and tongues, and the manum implente major, multis in locis decidit. Deprehensa enim est alicubi, quæ octo librarum, ut vocant, pondus æquaret. [Translated in the text.] Philostorgii Hist. Eccles. Lib. xi. cap. vii.

¹ Claudian de Bello Getico, ver. 173.

Ex illo, quocunque vagos impegit Erinny's,
Grandinis aut morbi ritu per devia rerum
Præcipites, per clausa, ruunt.

[Wheresoever the fury dashed these rovers, like hail, or a disease, they rushed headlong through all barriers opposed to them.] Where Mr. Daubuz would read nimbi, a shower, instead of morbi, a disease.

² Insuperati ubique aderant, et famam celeritate vincentes, non religioni, non dignitatibus, non ætati parebant, non vagientis miserabantur infantie. Cogebantur mori, qui nondum vivere cœperant. [Translated in the text.] Hieron. Epist. lxxxiv. de morte Fabiolæ, col. 661. Tom. IV. Par. ii. Edit. Benedict.

³ So Virgil, of his hero, Æn. xii. 701.

Quantus Athos, aut quantus Eryx, aut ipse coruscis
Cum fremit ilicibus quantus, gaudetque nivali
Vertice se attollens pater Apenninus ad auras.

[Like Eryx, or like Athos, great he shows,
Or father Apennine, when, white with snows,
His head divine obscure in clouds he hides,
And shakes the sounding forest on his sides.]

DRYDEN.

third part is all along the Roman empire; for it possessed in Asia and Africa, as much as it wanted in Europe to make up the third part of the world, and the principal part was in Europe, the third part of the world at that time. The next great ravagers after Alaric and his Goths, were Attila and his Huns, who for the space of fourteen years, as ¹ Sigonius says, shook the east and west with the most cruel fear, and deformed the provinces of each empire with all kind of plundering, slaughter, and burning. They ² first wasted Thrace, Macedon, and Greece, putting all to fire and sword, and compelled the eastern emperor, Theodosius the Second, to purchase a shameful peace. Then Attila turned his arms against the western emperor, Valentinian the Third; entered Gaul with seven hundred thousand men, and not content with taking and spoiling, set most of the cities on fire. But at length being there vigorously opposed, he fell upon Italy, took and destroyed Aquileia with several other cities, slaying the inhabitants, and laying the buildings in ashes, and ³ filled all places between the Alps and Apennine with flight, depopulation, slaughter, servitude, burning, and desperation. He was preparing to march to Rome, but was diverted from his purpose by a solemn embassy from the emperor, and the promise of an annual tribute; and so concluding a truce, retired out of Italy, and passed into his own dominions beyond the Danube. Such a man might properly be compared to a great mountain burning with fire, who really was, as he called himself, the scourge of God and the terror of men, and boasted that he was sent into the world by God for this purpose, that as the executioner of his just anger he might fill the earth with all kind of evils, and he bounded his cruelty and passion by nothing less than blood and burning.

10 And the third angel sounded, and there fell a great star from heaven, burning as it were a lamp, and it fell upon the third part of the rivers, and upon the fountains of waters:

11 And the name of the star is called Wormwood: and the third part of the waters became wormwood: and many men died of the waters because they were made bitter.

At the sounding of the third trumpet (ver. 10, 11.) a great prince

¹ Sigonius de Occidentali Imperio, Lib. xiii. Hunnica jam hinc bella scribere ordiemur, quæ post per quatuordecim annos sævissimâ orientem occidentemque formidine concusserunt, atque utriusque imperii provincias omni direptione, strage, atque incendio deformatarunt. [Here we shall begin our account of the wars of the Huns, which for fourteen years shook the east and west with the most cruel terror, and which, by plundering, slaughtering, and burning, disfigured the provinces of both empires.]

² Sigonius, ibid. Jornandes de rebus Get. &c. &c.

³ Jam omnia, quæ intra Apenninum et Alpes erant, fugâ, populatione, cæde, servitute, incendio, et desperatione repleta erant. [Translated in the text.] Sigon. ibid. Ann. 452.

⁴ Qui se Flagellum Dei, et Terrorem hominum appellabat, et ad id in mundum a Deo missum jactabat, ut tanquam justæ illius vindicæ iræ terras omni malorum genere permisceret, et crudelitatem ac libidinem suam non nisi sanguine et incendio terminabat. [Translated in the text.] Sigon. ibid.

appears like a star shooting from heaven to earth; a similitude not ¹unusual in poetry. His coming, therefore, is sudden and unexpected, and his stay but short. The name of the star is called Wormwood, and he infects the third part of the rivers and fountains with the bitterness of wormwood; that is, he is a bitter enemy, and proveth the author of grievous calamities to the Roman empire. The rivers and fountains have a near connexion with the sea: and it was within two years after Attila's retreat from Italy, that Valentinian was murdered, and Maximus, who had caused him to be murdered, reigning in his stead, ² Genseric, the king of the Vandals, settled in Africa, was solicited by Eudoxia, the widow of the deceased emperor, to come and revenge his death. Genseric accordingly embarked with three hundred thousand Vandals and Moors, and arrived upon the Roman coast in June, 455, the emperor and people not expecting nor thinking of any such enemy. He landed his men, and marched directly towards Rome; whereupon the inhabitants flying into the woods and mountains, the city fell an easy prey into his hands. He abandoned it to the cruelty and avarice of his soldiers, who plundered it for fourteen days together, not only spoiling the private houses and palaces, but stripping the public buildings, and even the churches, of their riches and ornaments. He then set sail again for Africa, carrying away with him immense wealth, and an innumerable multitude of captives, together with the empress Eudoxia, and her two daughters; and left the state so weakened, that in a little time it was utterly subverted. Some critics understand rivers and fountains with relation to doctrines; and in this sense the application is still very proper to Genseric, who was a most bigoted Arian, and during his whole reign most cruelly persecuted the orthodox Christians. Victor Uticensis, or Vitensis, as he is more usually called, who ³ wrote in three books the history of this persecution by the Vandals, speaking of St. Austin, ⁴ hath used this very same metaphor, of the river of his eloquence being dried up, and his sweetness turned into the bitterness of wormwood.

¹ Homer, Iliad, iv. 75.

Ὅλον δ' ἀστέρα ἦκε Κρόνου παῖς ἀγκυλομήτεω,
Ἡ ναύτησι τέρας, ἥε στρατῷ εὐρέϊ λαῶν,
Λαμπρόν· τοῦ δέ τε πολλοὶ ἀπὸ σπινθήρες ἔενται.

[As the red comet from Saturnius sent
To fright the nations with a dire portent,
With sweeping glories glides along in air,
And shakes the sparkles from its blazing hair.]

² Evagrii Hist. Eccles. Lib. ii. cap. vii. Zonaræ Annal. Lib. xiii. in fine. Sigonius de Imperio Occidentali, Lib. xiv. An. 455, &c. &c.

³ Vossius de Hist. Latinis, Lib. ii. cap. xviii. Hofmanni Lex.

⁴ Tunc illud eloquentiæ, quod ubertim per omnes campos ecclesiæ decurrebat, ipso metu siccatum est flumen; atque dulcedo suavitatis dulcius propinata, in amaritudinem absinthii versa est. ["Then that river of eloquence, which flowed in such abundance through all the fields of the church, was dried up through very fear, and his melodious sweetness was changed into the bitterness of wormwood."] Victor Vit. de Persecut. Vandal. Lib. i. n. 3. Vide etiam Vitam Augustini, Lib. viii. cap. xi. sect. ii. Edit. Benedict.

12 And the fourth angel sounded, and the third part of the sun was smitten, and the third part of the moon, and the third part of the stars; so as the third part of them was darkened, and the day shone not for a third part of it, and the night likewise.

At the sounding of the fourth trumpet (ver. 12.) the third part of the sun, moon, and stars, that is, the great lights of the Roman empire, are eclipsed and darkened, and remain in darkness for some time. Genseric left the western empire in a weak and desperate condition. It struggled hard, and gasped as it were for breath, through ¹ eight short and turbulent reigns, for the space of twenty years, and at length expired in the year 476, under Momyllus, or Augustulus, as he was named in derision, being a diminutive Augustus. This change was effected by Odoacer, king of the Heruli, who coming to Rome with an army of barbarians, stripped Momyllus of the imperial robes, put an end to the very name of the western empire, and caused himself to be proclaimed King of Italy. His kingdom, indeed, was of no long duration; for after a reign of sixteen years he was overcome and slain, ² in the year 493, by Theodoric, king of the Ostrogoths, who founded the kingdom of the Ostrogoths in Italy, which continued about sixty years under his successors. Thus was the Roman sun extinguished in the western emperor; but the other lesser luminaries, the moon and stars, still subsisted; for Rome was still allowed to have her senate, and consuls, and other subordinate magistrates, as before. Odoacer ³ at first suppressed them, but after two or three years restored them again. Theodoric ⁴ changed none of the Roman institutes; he retained the senate, and consuls, and patricians, and all the ancient magistrates, and committed those offices only to Romans. These lights, we may suppose, shone more faintly under barbarian kings than under Roman emperors; but they were not totally suppressed and extinguished, till after the kingdom of the Ostrogoths was destroyed by the emperor of the east's lieutenants, and Italy was made a province of the eastern empire. Longinus was ⁵ sent then, in the year 566, by the emperor Justin II., to govern Italy with absolute authority: and he changed the whole form of the government, abolished the senate, and consuls, and all the former magistrates in Rome and Italy, and in every city of note constituted a new governor, with the title of Duke. He himself presided over all; and residing at Ravenna, and not at Rome, he was called the

¹ Sigonius de Occidentali Imperio, Lib. xiv. et xv. in initio.

² Sigonius, ibid. Lib. xv. in fine. Procop. de Bell. Goth. Lib. i. cap. i.

³ Sigonius, ibid. Lib. xv. Ann. 476 et 479.

⁴ Jam vero nullum Romanum institutum mutavit: siquidem et senatum, et consules, patricios,—cæterosque qui fuerant in imperio, magistratus retinuit, eosque Romanis hominibus tantum mandavit. ["But he changed no Roman institute; for he retained the senate, the consuls, the patricians, and all the ancient magistrates, and he bestowed these offices on such only as were Romans."] Sigonius, ibid. Lib. xvi. Ann. 494.

⁵ Sigonii Hist. de Regno Italix, Lib. i. Blondi Decad. primæ, Lib. viii.

Exarch of Ravenna, as were also his successors in the same office. Rome was degraded to the same level with other places, and from being the queen of cities, and empress of the world, was reduced to a poor dukedom, and made tributary to Ravenna, which she had used to govern.

13 And I beheld, and heard an angel flying through the midst of heaven, saying with a loud voice, Woe, woe, woe to the inhabitants of the earth, by reason of the other voices of the trumpet of the three angels which are yet to sound.

Notice is then proclaimed by an angel (ver. 13.) that the three other trumpets sound to still greater and more terrible plagues, and are therefore distinguished from the former by the name of woes. The design of this messenger is to raise our attention to the following trumpets; and the following we shall find to be more strongly marked than the foregoing. The foregoing relate chiefly to the downfall of the western empire; the two following relate chiefly to the downfall of the eastern empire. The foregoing are described more succinctly, and contain a less compass of time; the following are set forth with more particular circumstances, and are of longer duration as well as of larger description.

CHAPTER IX.

1 AND the fifth angel sounded, and I saw a star fall from heaven unto the earth: and to him was given the key of the bottomless pit.

2 And he opened the bottomless pit, and there arose a smoke out of the pit, as the smoke of a great furnace: and the sun and the air were darkened, by reason of the smoke of the pit.

3 And there came out of the smoke locusts upon the earth; and unto them was given power, as the scorpions of the earth have power.

4 And it was commanded them that they should not hurt the grass of the earth, neither any green thing, neither any tree; but only those men which have not the seal of God in their foreheads.

5 And to them it was given that they should not kill them, but that they should be tormented five months: and their torment was as the torment of a scorpion, when he striketh a man.

6 And in those days shall men seek death, and shall not find it; and shall desire to die, and death shall flee from them.

7 And the shapes of the locusts were like unto horses prepared unto battle; and on their heads were as it were crowns like gold, and their faces were as the faces of men.

8 And they had hair as the hair of women, and their teeth were as the teeth of lions.

9 And they had breast-plates, as it were breast-plates of iron; and the sound of their wings was as the sound of chariots of many horses running to battle.

10 And they had tails like unto scorpions, and there were stings in their tails: and their power was to hurt men five months.

11 And they had a king over them, which is the angel of the bottomless pit, whose name, in the Hebrew tongue, is Abaddon, but in the Greek tongue hath his name Apollyon.

12 One woe is past, and behold, there come two woes more hereafter.

At the sounding of the fifth trumpet (ver. 1—3.) a star fallen from heaven, meaning the wicked impostor Mohammed, opened the bottomless pit, and there arose a smoke out of the pit, and the sun and the air were darkened by it; that is, a false religion was set up, which filled the world with darkness and error; and swarms of Saracen or Arabian locusts overspread the earth. A false prophet is very fitly typified by a blazing star or meteor. The Arabians likewise are properly compared to locusts, not only because numerous armies frequently are so, but also because swarms of locusts often arise from Arabia: and also because in the plagues of Egypt, to which constant allusion is made in these trumpets, the locusts, (Exod. x. 13.) are brought by an east-wind, that is, from Arabia, which lay eastward of Egypt: and also because in the book of Judges (vii. 12.) the people of Arabia are compared to locusts or grasshoppers for multitude, for in the original the word for both is the same. As the natural locusts ¹ are bred in pits and holes of the earth, so these mystical locusts are truly infernal, and proceed with the smoke from the bottomless pit. It is too a remarkable coincidence, that at this time the sun and the air were really darkened. For we learn from an ² eminent Arabian historian, that “in the seventeenth year of Heraclius half the body of the sun was eclipsed, and this defect continued from the former Tisrin to Haziran, (that is, from October to June) so that only a little of its light appeared.” The seventeenth year of Heraclius ³ coincides with the year of Christ 626, and with the fifth year of the Hegira; and at this time Mohammed was training and exercising his followers in depredations at home, to fit and prepare them for greater conquests abroad.

It was commanded them (ver. 4.) that they should not hurt the grass of the earth, neither any green thing, neither any tree; which demonstrates that these were not natural, but symbolical locusts.

¹ Vide Gesner. de Insect. Plin. Nat. Hist. Lib. xi. cap. xxix. sect. xxxv. Edit. Harduin.

² Anno Heraclii decimo septimo dimidium corporis solaris lumine defecit, mansitque ejus deliquium a Tisrin priori ad Haziran, adeo ut non appareret nisi parum quid de lumine ipsius. [Translated in the text.] Abul-Pharajii Hist. Dyn. viii. p. 99. Vers. Pocockii.

³ Blair's Chron. Tab. No. xxxiii. Abul-Pharajii Dyn. ix. p. 102. Elmacini Hist. Saracen. Lib. i. p. 6.

The like injunctions were given to the Arabian officers and soldiers. When Yesid was marching with the army to invade Syria, Abubeker charged him ¹ with this among other orders; "Destroy no palm-trees, nor burn any fields of corn; cut down no fruit-trees, nor do any mischief to cattle, only such as you kill to eat." Their commission is to hurt only those men who have not the seal of God in their foreheads; that is, those who are not the true servants of God, but are corrupt and idolatrous Christians. Now from history it appears evidently, that in those countries of Asia, Africa, and Europe, where the Saracens extended their conquests, the Christians were generally guilty of idolatry in the worshipping of saints, if not of images; and it was the pretence of Mohammed and his followers to chastise them for it, and to re-establish the unity of the Godhead. The parts which remained the freest from the general infection were Savoy, Piedmont, and the southern parts of France, which were afterwards the nurseries and habitations of the Waldenses and Albigenses; and it is very memorable, that ² when the Saracens approached these parts, they were defeated with great slaughter, by the famous Charles Martel, in several engagements.

As they were to hurt only the corrupt and idolatrous Christians, so these (ver. 5, 6.) they were not to kill, but only to torment, and should bring such calamities upon the earth, as should make men weary of their lives. Not that it could be supposed that the Saracens would not kill many thousands in their incursions. On the contrary their angel (ver. 11.) hath the name of the destroyer. They might kill them as individuals, but still they should not kill them as a political body, as a state or empire. They might greatly harass and torment both the Greek and the Latin churches, but they should not utterly extirpate the one nor the other. They besieged Constantinople, and ³ even plundered Rome; but they could not make themselves masters of either of those capital cities. The Greek empire suffered most from them, as it lay nearest to them. They dismembered it of Syria, and Egypt, and some other of its best and richest provinces; but they were never able to subdue and conquer the whole. As often as they besieged Constantinople, they were repulsed and defeated. They attempted it ⁴ in the reign of Constantine Pogonatus, A.D. 672; but their men and ships were miserably destroyed by the sea-fire invented by Callinicus, and after seven years' fruitless pains they were compelled to raise the siege, and to conclude a peace. They attempted it again ⁵ in the reign of Leo Isauricus, A.D. 718; but they were forced to desist by famine,

¹ Ockley's Hist. of the Saracens, Vol. I. p. 25.

² Petavii Rationar. Temp. Part i. Lib. viii. cap. v. Mezeray Abregé Chronol. A.D. 732, &c.

³ Sigonii Hist. de Regno Italiæ, Lib. v. Ann. 846.

⁴ Theoph. Cedren. ad an. Const. v. Zonaræ Annales, Lib. xiv. cap. xx. &c. Petavii Rationar. Temp. Part i. Lib. viii. cap. i. Blair's Chronol. Tab. No. xxxiv. Part ii.

⁵ Sigonii Hist. de Regno Italiæ, Lib. iii. Anno 718. Petav. ibid. cap. v.

and pestilence, and losses of various kinds. In this attempt they exceeded their commission, and therefore they were not crowned with their usual success. The taking of this city, and the putting an end to this empire, was a work reserved for another power, as we shall see under the next trumpet.

In the following verses (7—10.) the nature and qualities of these locusts are described, partly in allusion to the properties of natural locusts, and the description given of them by the prophet Joel, and partly in allusion to the habits and manners of the Arabians, to show that not real but figurative locusts were here intended. The first quality mentioned is their being like unto horses prepared unto battle; which is copied from Joel, (ii. 4.) The appearance of them is as the appearance of horses, and as horsemen, so shall they run. Many authors have¹ observed that the head of a locust resembles that of a horse. The Italians, therefore, call them cavalette, as it were little horses. The Arabians too have in all ages been famous for their horses and horsemanship. Their strength is well known to consist chiefly in their cavalry.

Another distinguishing mark and character is their having on their heads as it were crowns like gold; which is an allusion to the head-dress of the Arabians,² who have constantly worn turbans or mitres, and boast of having those ornaments for their common attire, which are crowns and diadems with other people. The crowns also signify the kingdoms and dominions which they should acquire. For, as Mr. Mede³ excellently observes, “No nation had ever so wide a command, nor ever were so many kingdoms, so many regions subjugated in so short a space of time. It sounds incredible, yet most true it is, that in the space of eighty, or not many more years, they subdued and acquired to the diabolical kingdom of Mohammed, Palestine, Syria, both Armenias, almost all Asia Minor, Persia, India, Egypt, Numidia, all Barbary, even to the river

¹ Vide Albertum, Aldrovandum, Theodoretum, &c. apud Bochart. Hieroz. Part. Post. Lib. iv. cap. v.—caput aut faciem equinæ non absimilem. A quâ locustæ ab Italīs vocantur cavalette. [The head and face is not unlike to that of a horse. Hence locusts are called by the Italians “cavalette,” or little horses.] Col. 474.

² Arabes mitrati degunt. [“The Arabians wear mitres,” &c.] Plin. Nat. Hist. Lib. vi. cap. xxviii. sect. xxxii. Edit. Harduin. Hic mitrâ velatus Arabs. [Here the Arabians covered with a mitre.] Claudian de Laud. Stil. i. 156. Pocockii Not. in Carm. Tograi Arab. pag. ult.

³ Nulli unquam genti tam late regnatum fuit, neque tam brevi temporis spatio unquam tot regna, tot regiones, sub jugum missa. Incredibile dictu, verissimum tamen est; Octoginta, aut non multo plurium annorum spatio subjugârunt illi et diabolico regno Muhammedis acquisiverunt Palæstinam, Syriam, Armeniam utramque, totam ferme Asiam minorem, Persiam, Indiam, Ægyptum, Numidiam, Barbariam totam ad Nigrum usque fluvium, Lusitaniam, Hispaniam. Neque hic stetit illorum fortuna, aut ambitio, donec et Italiæ magnam quoque partem adjecerint, ad portas usque urbis Romæ; quin etiam Siciliam, Candiam, Cyprum, et reliquas maris Mediterranei insulas. Deus bone, quantus hic terrarum tractus! quot hic coronæ! Unde dignum quoque observatu est, non hic, ut in cæteris tubis, trientis mentionem fieri: siquidem non minus extra imperii Romani fines quam intra ipsum caderet hæc clades, ad extremos usque Indos sese porrectura. [Translated in the text.] Mede, p. 468.

Niger, Portugal, Spain. Neither did their fortune or ambition stop here, till they had added also a great part of Italy, as far as to the gates of Rome; moreover Sicily, Candia, Cyprus, and the other islands of the Mediterranean sea. Good God! how great a tract of land! how many crowns were here! Whence also it is worthy of observation, that mention is not made here, as in the other trumpets, of the third part; forasmuch as this plague fell no less without the bounds of the Roman empire than within it, and extended itself even to the remotest Indies."

They had also faces as the faces of men, and hair as the hair of women: and the Arabians wore their beards, or at least mustaches, as men; while the hair of their heads was flowing or plaited like that of women; as ¹ Pliny and the other ancient authors testify. Another property, copied from Joel, is their having teeth as the teeth of lions; that is, strong to devour. So Joel describes the locusts (i. 6.) as a nation whose teeth are the teeth of a lion, and he hath the cheek-teeth of a great lion; and it is wonderful how they bite and gnaw all things, as ² Pliny says, even the doors of houses. They had also breast-plates as it were breast-plates of iron: and the locusts have a hard shell or skin, which ³ hath been called their armour. This figure is designed to express the defensive, as the former was the offensive, arms of the Saracens. And the sound of their wings was as the sound of chariots of many horses running to battle. Much the same comparison hath been used by Joel, (ii. 5.) Like the noise of chariots on the tops of mountains shall they leap: and ⁴ Pliny affirms, that they fly with so great a noise of their ¹ Arabes mitrati degunt, aut intonso crine: barba abraditur, præterquam in superiore labro. Alii et hæc intonsa. [The Arabians wear mitres, or keep the hair unshorn; their beard is shaven off, excepting on the upper lip. Some do not shave this also.] Plin. ibid. Plurimis crinis intonsus, mitrata capita, pars rasa in cutem barba. [The hair of many of them is not cut, their heads are covered with a mitre, a part of the beard is shaven close to the skin.] Solinus, cap. xxxiii. p. 46. Edit. Salmasii. Crinitus quidam, &c. [A certain man with long hair.] Ammian. Marcell. Lib. xxxi. ubi notat Valesius, Talis erat habitus Saracenorum, ut docet Hieronymus in Vitâ Malchi. Ecce subito equorum camelorumque sessores Ismaëlitæ irruunt, crinitis vittatisque capitibus, &c. et Theodorus Mopsuestenus in caput X Hieremiæ, Saracenos ait comam a fronte quidem detondere, retro autem intonsam demittere, &c. [Where Valesius has this note. Such was the dress of the Saracens, as Jerome informs us in his Life of Malchus. "Lo, suddenly the Ishmaelites, riding on horses and camels, rush in, wearing long hair, and having their heads tied up with ribands," &c. and Theodorus, bishop of Mopsuesta, on Jerem. x. saith "that the Saracens polled off the hair from their foreheads, but behind suffered it to hang down," &c.] P. 654. Edit. Paris. 1681.

² Omnia vero morsu erodentes, et fores quoque tectorum. ["They gnaw every thing by their biting, not even excepting the doors of houses."] Plin. Nat. Hist. Lib. xi. cap. xxix. sect. xxxv. Edit. Harduin.

³ Claudian. Epigram. xxxii. De Locustâ; Fragmentum.
— cognatus dorso durescit amictus.

Armavit natura cutem.

[Their kindred covering hardens on their back.
Nature hath armed their skin.]

⁴ Tanto volant pennarum stridore, ut aliæ alites credantur. [Translated in the text.] Plin. ibid.

wings, that they may be taken for birds. Their wings, and the sound of their wings, denote the swiftness and rapidity of their conquests; and it is indeed astonishing, that in less than a century they erected an empire, which extended from India to Spain.

Moreover they are thrice compared unto scorpions, (ver. 3. 5. 10.) and had stings in their tails like unto scorpions; that is, they should draw a poisonous train after them, and wherever they carried their arms, there also they should distil the venom of a false religion. It is farther added (ver. 11.) that they had a king over them; the same person should exercise temporal as well as spiritual sovereignty over them; and the caliphs were their emperors, as well as the heads of their religion. The king is the same as the star or angel of the bottomless pit, whose name is Abaddon in Hebrew, and Apollyon in Greek, that is the destroyer. Mr. Mede¹ imagines, that this is some allusion to the name of Obodas, the common name of the kings of that part of Arabia from whence Mohammed came, as Pharaoh was the common name of the kings of Egypt, and Cæsar of the emperors of Rome: and such allusions are not unusual in the style of Scripture. However that be, the name agrees perfectly well with Mohammed, and the caliphs, his successors, who were the authors of all those horrid wars and desolations, and openly taught and professed that their religion was to be propagated and established by the sword.

One difficulty, and the greatest of all, remains yet to be explained; and that is the period of five months assigned to these locusts, which being twice mentioned, merits the more particular consideration. They tormented men five months, (ver. 5.) and again, (ver. 10.) their power was to hurt men five months. It is said without doubt in conformity to the type; for locusts² are observed to live about five months, that is from April to September. Scorpions too, as³ Bochart asserts, are noxious for no longer a term, the cold rendering them torpid and inactive. But of these locusts it is said, not that their duration or existence was only for five months, but their power of hurting and tormenting men continued five months.

¹ Mede, ibid. p. 470.

² Vergiliarum exortu parere, [circa Maii Nonas] deinde ad Canis ortum obire, [circa xv. Calendas Augusti] et alias renasci. [They bring forth young about the time of the rising of the constellation of the seven stars, (that is about the 7th of May) and die about the rising of the dog star, (about the 18th of July) and then others come up in their place.] Plin. Nat. Hist. Lib. xi. cap. xxix. sect. xxxv. Edit. Hard. Locustæ vere natæ sub finem ætatis obeunt, nec supra quinque menses vivere solent. ["Locusts are produced in the spring, they die at the end of summer, nor do they usually live more than five months."] Bochart. Hieroz. Part. Post. Lib. iv. cap. viii. col. 495.

³ Nec frustra est, quod mysticis locustis, quæ scorpionum caudas habent, non datur potestas nocendi hominibus, nisi per menses quinque. Quippe ut locustæ, ita nec scorpiones diutius nocent. Nam per frigora torpent, nec quidquam ab iis est periculi. ["Nor is it in vain said, that the power of hurting was not given to these mystical locusts, which have the tails of scorpions, for more than five months. For neither do locusts nor scorpions prove hurtful for a longer time. For they are benumbed by the cold, and danger from them is no longer to be feared."] Bochart. ibid. Lib. iv. cap. xxix. col. 640.

Now these months may either be months commonly so taken, or prophetic months, consisting each of thirty days, as St. John reckons them, and so making one hundred and fifty years at the rate of each day for a year; or the number being repeated twice, the sums may be thought to be doubled, and five months and five months in prophetic computation will amount to three hundred years. If these months be taken for common months, then, as the natural locusts live and do hurt only in the five summer-months, so the Saracens, in the five summer-months too, made their excursions, and retreated again in the winter. It appears that this was their usual practice, and particularly when ¹ they first besieged Constantinople, in the time of Constantine Pogonatus. For “from the month of April till September, they pertinaciously continued their siege, and then despairing of success, departed to Cyzicum, where they wintered, and in spring again renewed the war; and this course they held for seven years, as the Greek annals tell us.” If these months be taken for prophetic months or one hundred and fifty years, it was within that space of time that the Saracens made their principal conquests. Their empire might subsist much longer, but their power of hurting and tormenting men was exerted chiefly within that period. Read the history of the Saracens, and you will find that their greatest exploits were performed, their greatest conquests were made, between the ² year 612, when Mohammed first opened the bottomless pit, and began publicly to teach and propagate his imposture, and the year 762, when the caliph Almansor built Bagdad, to fix there the seat of his empire, and called it the city of peace. Syria, Persia, India, and the greatest part of Asia; Egypt, and the greatest part of Africa; Spain, and some parts of Europe, were all subdued in the intermediate time. But when the caliphs, who before had removed from place to place, fixed their habitation at Bagdad, then the Saracens ceased from their excursions and ravages like locusts, and became a settled nation; then they made no more such rapid and amazing conquests as before, but only engaged in common and ordinary wars like other nations; then their power and glory began to decline, and their empire by little and little to moulder away; then they had no longer, like the prophetic locusts, one king over them, Spain ³ having revolted in the year 756, and set up another caliph in opposition to the reigning house of Abbas. If these months be taken doubly, or for three hundred years, then, according to ¹ Sir Isaac Newton, "the whole time that the caliphs of the Saracens reigned with a temporal dominion at Damascus and Bagdad together was three hundred years, viz. from the year 637 to the year 936 inclusive;" when ² their empire was broken and divided into several principalities or kingdoms. So that let these five months be taken in any possible construction, the event will still answer, and the prophecy will still be fulfilled; though the second method of interpretation and application appears much more probable than either the first or the third.

¹ Howel's Hist. of the World, Part iii. chap. iv. sect. vii. p. 288.—ἀπὸ μῆνος Ἀπριλλίου εἰς Σεπτέμβριον. Καὶ ὑποστρέψαντες ἐν Κυζίκῳ, ταύτην παραλαμβάνουσι, καὶ χειμάζουσιν ἐκεῖ. Καὶ κατὰ ἕαρ ὁμοίως ἐπολέμουν μετὰ τῶν Χριστιανῶν, ἐπὶ ἑπτὰ ἔτη.—ab Aprilis usque ad Septembrem mensem. Inde barbari revertentes Cyzicum occupaverunt, atque ibi hyemarunt: et vere rursus Christianis bellum fecerunt. Hoc modo septem annos se gesserunt. [Translated in the text.] Cedreni Hist. Compend. p. 437. Edit. Paris. p. 345. Edit. Venet. Vide etiam Theophanis Chronograph. p. 294. Edit. Paris. p. 234. Edit. Venet.

² Prideaux, Life of Mahomet, p. xiv. 8th edit. Elmacini Hist. Saracen, Lib. i. cap. i. p. 3. and Lib. ii. cap. iii. p. 102. Abul-Pharajii Hist. Dyn. ix. p. 141. Vers. Pocockii. Blair's Chronol. Tab. No. xxxvi. Part ii.

³ Elmacini Hist. Saracen. Lib. ii. cap. iii. p. 101. Blair, ibid.

In the conclusion it is added, (ver. 12.) One woe is past, and behold there come two woes more hereafter. This is added not only to distinguish the woes, and to mark more strongly each period, but also to suggest that some time will intervene between this first woe of the Arabian locusts, and the next of the Euphratean horsemen. The similitude between the locusts and Arabians is indeed so great that it cannot fail of striking every curious observer; and a farther resemblance is ³ noted by Mr. Daubuz, that "there hath happened in the extent of this torment a coincidence of the event with the nature of the locusts. The Saracens have made inroads into all those parts of Christendom where the natural locusts are wont to be seen and known to do mischief, and no where else; and that too in the same proportion. Where the locusts are seldom seen, there the Saracens stayed little; where the natural locusts are often seen, there the Saracens abode most; and where they breed most, there the Saracens had their beginning and greatest power. This may easily be verified by history."

13 And the sixth angel sounded, and I heard a voice from the four horns of the golden altar, which is before God,

14 Saying to the sixth angel which had the trumpet, Loose the four angels which are bound in the great river Euphrates.

15 And the four angels were loosed, which were prepared for an hour, and a day, and a month, and a year, for to slay the third part of men.

16 And the number of the army of the horsemen were two hundred thousand thousand; and I heard the number of them.

17 And thus I saw the horses in the vision, and them that sat on them, having breast-plates of fire, and of jacinth, and brimstone; and the heads of the horses were as the heads of lions, and out of their mouths issued fire, and smoke, and brimstone.

18 By these three was the third part of men killed, by the fire, and by the smoke, and by the brimstone, which issued out of their mouths.

¹ Sir Isaac Newton on the Apoc. chap. iii. p. 305. See likewise p. 91. of Mr. Jackson's Address to the Deists: wherein are some pertinent observations concerning the completion of this and the succeeding woe.

² Elmacin. Lib. iii. cap. i. p. 203. Blair's Tab. No. xxxix.

³ Daubuz, p. 409.

19 For their power is in their mouth, and in their tails; for their tails were like unto serpents, and had heads, and with them they do hurt.

20 And the rest of the men which were not killed by these plagues, yet repented not of the works of their hands, that they should not worship devils, and idols of gold and silver, and brass, and stone, and of wood, which neither can see, nor hear, nor walk :

21 Neither repented they of their murders, nor of their sorceries, nor of their fornication, nor of their thefts.

At the sounding of the sixth trumpet, (ver. 13, 14, 15.) a voice proceeded from the four horns of the golden altar, (for the scene was still in the temple,) ordering the angel of the sixth trumpet to loose the four angels which were bound in the great river Euphrates; and they were loosed accordingly. Such a voice proceeding from the four horns of the golden altar is a strong indication of the Divine displeasure, and plainly intimates that the sins of men must have been very great, when the altar, which was their sanctuary and protection, called aloud for vengeance. The four angels are the four sultanies, or four leaders of the Turks and Othmans. For there were four principal sultanies or kingdoms of the Turks, bordering upon the river Euphrates; ¹ one at Bagdad, founded by Togrul Beg, or Tangrolipix, as he is more usually called, in the year 1055; another at Damascus, founded by Tagjuddaulas, or Ducas, in the year 1079; a third at Aleppo, founded by Sjarfuddaulas, or Melech, in the same year 1079; and the fourth at Iconium, in Asia Minor, founded by Sedyduddaulas, or Cutlu Muses, or his son, in the year 1080. These four sultanies subsisted several years afterwards, and the sultans were bound and restrained from extending their conquests farther than the territories and countries adjoining to the river Euphrates, primarily by the good providence of God, and secondarily by the croisades or expeditions of the European Christians into the Holy Land, in the latter part of the eleventh, and in the twelfth and thirteenth centuries. Nay, the European Christians took several cities and countries from them, and confined them within narrower bounds. But when an end was put to the croisades, and the Christians totally abandoned their conquests in Syria and Palestine, as they did in the latter part of the thirteenth century, then the four angels in the river Euphrates were loosed. Soliman Shah ² the first and chief founder of the Othman race, retreating with his three sons from Jingiz Chan and the Tartars, would have passed the river Euphrates, but was unfortunately drowned, the time of loosing the four angels being not yet come. Discouraged at this sad accident, two of his sons returned to their former habitations; but Ortogrul the third, with his three sons Condoz, Sarubani, and Othman, remained some time in those parts, and having obtained leave of Aladin, the sultan of Iconium, he came with four hundred of his Turks, and settled in the mountains of Armenia. From thence they began their excursions, and the other Turks associating with them, and following their standard, they gained several victories over the Tartars on one side, and over the Christians on the other. Ortogrul¹ dying in the year 1288, Othman his son succeeded him in power and authority, and in the year 1299, as some say with the consent of Aladin himself, he was proclaimed sultan, and founded a new empire, and the people afterwards, as well as the new empire, were called by his name. For though they disclaim the name of Turks, and assume that of Othmans, yet nothing is more certain, than that they are a mixt multitude, the remains of the four sultanies above mentioned, as well as the descendants particularly of the house of Othman.

¹ Elmacini Hist. Saracen. Lib. iii. cap. vii. et viii. p. 271 et 284. Edit. Erpenii. Heylin's Cosm. B. iii. p. 726. Edit. 1703. Introduct. to the Hist. of Asia, chap. xi. sect. ii. et iii. Sandys's Travels, B. i. p. 34. 7th edit.

² Pocockii Supplem. Abul-Pharaj. Hist. p. 41, 42. Herbelot. Bib. Orien. p. 822. 694, &c.

In this manner, and at this time the four angels were loosed, which were prepared for an hour, and a day, and a month, and a year, for to slay the third part of men, that is as before, the men of the Roman empire, and especially in Europe, the third part of the world. The Latin or Western empire was broken to pieces under the four first trumpets; the Greek or Eastern empire was cruelly hurt and tormented under the fifth trumpet; and here, under the sixth trumpet, it is to be slain and utterly destroyed. Accordingly all Asia Minor, Syria, Palestine, Egypt, Thrace, Macedon, Greece, and all the countries which formerly belonged to the Greek or eastern Cæsars, the Othmans have conquered, and subjugated to their dominion. They first² passed over into Europe in the reign of Orchan their second emperor, and the year 1357; they³ took Constantinople in the reign of Mohammed their seventh emperor and in the year 1453; and in time all the remaining parts of the Greek empire shared the fate of the capital city. The last of their conquests were⁴ Candia, or the ancient Crete, in 1669, and Cameniec in 1672. For the execution of this great work, it is said that they were prepared for an hour, and a day, and a month, and a year, which will admit either of a literal or a mystical interpreta-

¹ Pocock. ibid. Herbelot. p. 694, 697.

² Pocockii Supplem. p. 43. Herbelot, p. 693. A. H. 758. cæpit Decem. 25. 1356. Pocockii Index.

³ Leunclav. Pandect. Hist. Turc. cap. 129. p. 448. Edit. Paris. p. 339. Edit. Venet. Pocock. ibid. p. 47. Herbelot, p. 615. Prince Cantemir's Hist. of the Othman Empire, B. iii. chap. i. sect. ix. p. 103. Savage's Abridgment of Knolles and Rycaut, Vol. I. p. 180, &c.

⁴ Prince Cantemir, B. iii. chap. xii. sect. viii. p. 262. sect. xvi. p. 265. Savage, ibid. Vol. II. p. 192 et 200.

tion, and the former will hold good, if the latter should fail. If it be taken literally, it is only expressing the same thing by different words, as peoples and multitudes and nations and tongues are jointly used in other places, and then the meaning is that they were prepared and ready to execute the Divine commission at any time or for any time, any hour, or day, or month, or year, that God should appoint. If it be taken mystically, and the hour, and day, and month, and year be a prophetic hour, and day, and month, and year, then a year (according to St. John's, who follows herein Daniel's computation,) consisting of three hundred and sixty days is three hundred and sixty years, and a month consisting of thirty days is thirty years, and a day is a year, and an hour in the same proportion is fifteen days; so that the whole period of the Othmans' slaying the third part of men, or subduing the Christian states in the Greek or Roman empire, amounts to three hundred and ninety-one years and fifteen days. Now it is wonderfully remarkable, that the first conquest mentioned in history of the Othmans over the Christians was ¹ in the year of the Hegira 680, and the year of Christ 1281. For Ortogrul "in that year (according to the accurate historian Saadi) crowned his victories with the conquest of the famous city of Kutahi upon the Greeks." Compute three hundred and ninety-one years from that time, and they will terminate in the year 1672; and in that year, as it was hinted before, Mohammed the fourth ² took Cameniec from the Poles, "and forty-eight towns and villages in the territory of Cameniec were delivered up" to the sultan upon the treaty of peace. Whereupon Prince Cantemir hath made this memorable reflection: "This was the last victory by which any advantage accrued to the Othman state, or any city or province was annexed to the ancient bounds of the empire." Agreeably to which observation, he hath entitled the former part of his history of the growth of the Othman empire, and the following part of the decay of the Othman empire. Other wars and slaughters, as he says, have ensued. The Turks even besieged Vienna in 1683, but this exceeding the bounds of their commission, they were defeated. Belgrade and other places may have been taken from them, and surrendered to them again; but still they have subdued no new state or potentate of Christendom now for the space of between eighty and ninety years, and in all probability they never may again, their empire appearing rather to decrease than increase. Here, then, the prophecy and the event agree exactly in the period of three hundred and ninety-one years; and if more accurate and authentic histories of the Othmans were brought to light, and we knew the very day wherein Kutahi was taken as certainly as we know that wherein Cameniec was taken, the like exactness might also be found in the fifteen days. But though the time be limited for the Othmans' slaying the third part of men, yet no time is fixed for the duration of their empire; only this second woe will end when the third woe, (xi. 14.) or the destruction of the beast, shall be at hand.

¹ Prince Cantemir's History, Book i. chap. ii. sect. v. p. 10.

² Ibid. Book iii. chap. xii. sect. xviii. xix. p. 265.

A description is then given (ver. 16, 17, 18, 19.) of the forces, and of the means and instruments, by which the Othmans should effect the ruin of the eastern empire. Their armies are described as very numerous, myriads of myriads, and who knoweth not what mighty armies the Othman emperors have brought into the field? When Mohammed the Second besieged Constantinople, he had ¹ about four hundred thousand men in his army, besides a powerful fleet of thirty larger and two hundred lesser ships. They are described too chiefly as horsemen, and so they are described both by Ezekiel and by Daniel, as there was occasion to observe in the last dissertation upon Daniel; and it is well known that their armies consisted chiefly of cavalry, especially before the order of Janizaries was instituted by Amurath the First. The Janizaries may be the guard of the court, but the Timariots, or horsemen holding lands by serving in the wars, are the strength of the government, and these, as Heylin ² affirms, are in all accounted between seven and eight hundred thousand fighting men; some say that they are a million; and besides these, there are Spahis and other horsemen in the emperor's pay.

In the vision, that is, in appearance, and not in reality, they had breast-plates of fire, and of jacinth or hyacinth, and brimstone. The colour of fire is red, of hyacinth blue, and of brimstone yellow; and this, as Mr. Daubuz ³ observes, "hath a literal accomplishment; for the Othmans, from the first time of their appearance, have affected to wear such warlike apparel of scarlet, blue, and yellow." Of the Spahis particularly some have red, and some have yellow standards, and others red or yellow mixed with other colours. In appearance too the heads of the horses were as the heads of lions, to denote their strength, courage, and fierceness; and out of their mouths issued fire, and smoke, and brimstone. A manifest allusion to great guns and gunpowder, which were invented under this trumpet, and were of such signal service to the Othmans in their wars. For by these three was the third part of men killed, by these the Othmans made such havoc and destruction in the Greek or eastern empire. Amurath the Second ⁴ broke into Peloponnesus,

¹ λέγεται δὲ γενέσθαι, κ. τ. λ. Quadraginta myriades hominum dicuntur tunc temporis in exercitu regis fuisse—classis regiæ, in quâ erant triremes triginta, naves minores ducentæ. ["It is said, that at that time, the king's army consisted of forty myriads of men,—and that his fleet was composed of thirty vessels which had three banks of oars, and of two hundred smaller."] Laonicus Chalcocondylas de rebus Turcicis, Lib. viii. p. 203. Edit. Paris. p. 158. Edit. Venet.

² Heylin's Cosm. Book iii. p. 729. Edit. 1703. Sandys's Travels, Book i. p. 38. 7th edit.

³ Daubuz, p. 444. See too Rycaut's Present State of the Othman Empire, Book iii. chap. iii. Tournefort's Voyage, Vol. II. Let. i. p. 36, &c.

⁴ Chalcocond. ibid. Lib. vii.

and took several strong places by the means of his artillery. But his son Mohammed, at the siege of Constantinople¹, employed such great guns as were never made before. One is described to have been of such a monstrous size, that it was drawn by seventy yoke of oxen and by two thousand men. There were two more, each of which discharged a stone of the weight of two talents. Others emitted a stone of the weight of half a talent. But the greatest of all discharged a ball of the weight of three talents, or about three hundred pounds; and the report of this cannon is said to have been so great, that all the country round about was shaken to the distance of forty furlongs. For forty days the walls were battered by these guns, and so many breaches were made, that the city was taken by assault, and an end put to the Grecian empire.

Moreover they had power to do hurt with their tails, as well as by their mouths, their tails being like unto serpents, and having heads. In this respect they very much resemble the locusts; only the different tails are accommodated to the different creatures, the tails of scorpions to locusts; the tails of serpents with a head at each end to horses. By this figure it is meant, that the Turks draw after them the same poisonous trains as the Saracens; they profess and propagate the same imposture; they do hurt not only by their conquests, but also by spreading their false doctrine; and wherever they establish their dominion, there too they establish their religion. Many indeed of the Greek church remained, and are still remaining among them: but they are² made to pay dearly for the exercise of their religion; are subjected to a capitation tax, which is rigorously exacted from all above fourteen years of age; are burdened besides with the most heavy and arbitrary impositions upon every occasion; are compelled to the lowest and most servile drudgery, are abused in their persons, and robbed of their property; have not only the mortification of seeing some of their friends and kindred daily apostatize to the ruling religion, but had even their children taken from them to be educated therein, of whom the more robust and hardy were trained up to the soldiery, the more weakly and tender were castrated for the seraglio : but notwithstanding these persecutions and oppressions, some remains of the Greek church are still preserved among them, as we may reasonably conclude, to serve some great and mysterious ends of Providence.

¹ τηλεβόλους ποιούμενος μέγιστους, κ. τ. λ. Bombardæ fieri curavit maximas, quantas novimus eâ tempestate nunquam extitisse.—Tanta hujus bombardæ magnitudo extitit, ut a septuaginta jugis boum et a viris bis mille trahenda fuerit.—Bombardæ quas rex habebat, duæ maximæ, emittebant lapidem qui appendebat talenta duo.—Hæ emittebant lapidem, cujus pondus erat dimidium talentum.—Bombardæ maxima torquebat globum, cujus pondus continebat tria circiter talenta.—Bombardæ hujus tonitru tantum esse traditum est, ut finitima regio usque ad quadraginta stadia concuteretur. Jam quadraginta diebus murus bombardæ fortiter quassatus erat, &c. [“He ordered guns of the largest calibre to be made, such as exceeded all that were known before his time.—The size of one gun was so great that it required seventy yoke of oxen and two thousand men to drag it along.—The king had two very large guns, each of which threw a stone that weighed two talents.—Others threw a stone of the weight of half a talent.—The largest gun discharged a ball which weighed about three talents.—At the discharging of this gun, we are told that the neighbouring country, to the distance of forty furlongs, was shaken.—Already had the wall of the city been vigorously battered for the space of forty days.”] Chalcocond. ibid. lib. viii. p. 203, 204. Edit. Paris. p. 158, 159. Edit. Venet.

² See Smith's and Rycant's accounts of the Greek church.

But though the Greek church was thus ruined and oppressed the rest of men, (ver. 20, 21.) who were not killed by these plagues, the Latin church which pretty well escaped these calamities, yet repented not of the works of their hands, that they should not worship devils, δαίμόνια, dæmons, or second mediatory gods, as it hath largely been shown before, saints and angels, and idols of gold and silver and brass and stone and wood. From hence it is evident, that these calamities were inflicted upon the Christians for their idolatry. As the eastern churches were first in the crime, so they were first likewise in the punishment. At first they were visited by the plague of the Saracens, but this working no change nor reformation, they were again chastised by the still greater plague of the Othmans ; were partly overthrown by the former, and were entirely ruined by the latter. What churches were then remaining, which were guilty of the like idolatry, but the western, or those in the communion with Rome ? And the western were not at all reclaimed by the ruin of the eastern, but persisted still in the worship of saints, and (what is worse) the worship of images, which neither can see, nor hear, nor walk : and the world is witness to the completion of this prophecy to this day. Neither repented they of their murders, their persecutions and inquisitions, nor of their sorceries, their pretended miracles and revelations, nor of their fornication, their public stews and uncleanness, nor of their thefts, their exactions and impositions on mankind : and they are as notorious for their licentiousness and wickedness, as for their superstition and idolatry. As they therefore refused to take warning by the two former woes, the third woe, as we shall see, will fall with vengeance upon them.

CHAPTER X.

1 AND I saw another mighty angel come down from heaven, clothed with a cloud, and a rainbow was upon his head, and his face was as it were the sun, and his feet as pillars of fire.

2 And he had in his hand a little book open : and he set his right foot upon the sea, and his left foot on the earth.

3 And cried with a loud voice, as when a lion roareth : and when he had cried, seven thunders uttered their voices.

4 And when the seven thunders had uttered their voices, I was about to write : and I heard a voice from heaven saying unto me, Seal up those things which the seven thunders uttered, and write them not.

5 And the angel which I saw stand upon the sea and upon the earth, lifted up his hand to heaven,

6 And sware by him that liveth for ever and ever, who created heaven and the things that therein are, and the earth and the things that therein are, and the sea and the things which are therein, that there should be time no longer.

7 But in the days of the voice of the seventh angel, when he shall begin to sound, the mystery of God should be finished, as he hath declared to his servants the prophets.

8 And the voice which I heard from heaven spake unto me again, and said, Go, and take the little book which is open in the hand of the angel which standeth upon the sea, and upon the earth.

9 And I went unto the angel, and said unto him, Give me the little book. And he said unto me, Take it, and eat it up; and it shall make thy belly bitter, but it shall be in thy mouth as sweet as honey.

10 And I took the little book out of the angel's hand, and ate it up; and it was in my mouth as sweet as honey: and as soon as I had eaten it, my belly was bitter.

11 And he said unto me, Thou must prophesy again before many peoples, and nations, and tongues, and kings.

St. John, in the conclusion of the last chapter, having touched upon the corruption of the western church, proceeds now to deliver some prophecies relating to this lamentable event. But before he enters upon this subject, he (and the church in him) is prepared for it by an august and consolatory vision. Another mighty angel came down from heaven (ver. 1.) described somewhat like the angel in the three last chapters of Daniel, and in the first chapter of the Revelation. He had in his hand (ver. 2.) a little book, βιβλαρίδιον, a little book or codicil different from the βιβλίον, or book, mentioned before: and it was open, that all men might freely read and consider it. It was indeed a codicil to the larger book, and properly cometh under the sixth trumpet, to describe the state of the western church after the description of the state of the eastern: and this is with good reason made a separate and distinct prophecy, on account of the importance of the matter, as well as for engaging the greater attention. He set his right foot upon the sea, and his left foot on the earth, to show the extent of his power and commission: and when he had cried aloud, (ver. 3.) seven thunders uttered their voices. St. John would have written down (ver. 4.) those things which the seven thunders uttered, but was forbidden to do it. As we know not the subjects of the seven thunders, so neither can we know the reasons for suppressing them: but it may be conceived, that some things might be proper to be revealed to the apostle, and yet not to be communicated to the church. By these seven thunders ¹Vitringa understands the seven great croisades or expeditions of the western Christians for the conquest of the Holy Land, and Daubuz the seven kingdoms which received and established the Protestant Reformation by law. But doth it not savour rather of vanity and presumption than of wisdom and knowledge, to pretend to conjecture what they are, when the Holy Spirit hath purposely concealed them? Then the angel (ver. 5—7.) lifted up his hand to heaven, like the angel in Daniel, (xii. 7.) and swore by him that liveth for ever and ever, the great Creator of all things, ὅτι χρόνος οὐκ ἔσται ἔτι, that the time shall not be yet, but it shall be in the days of the seventh trumpet, that the mystery of God shall be finished, and the glorious state of his church be perfected, agreeably to the good things which he hath promised, ὡς εὐηγγέλισε, to his servants the prophets. This is said for the consolation of Christians, that though the little book describes the calamities of the western church, yet they shall all have a happy period under the seventh trumpet. St. John is then ordered (ver. 8—10.) to eat the little book, as Ezekiel (iii. 3.) did upon a like occasion: and he ate it up; he thoroughly considered and digested it: and found it to be, as he was informed it would be, sweet as honey in his mouth, but bitter in his stomach. The knowledge of future things at first was pleasant, but the sad contents of the little book afterwards filled his soul with sorrow. But these contents were not to be sealed up like those of the seven thunders; this little book was to be published (ver. 11.) as well as the larger book of the Apocalypse; it was a kind of second prophecy, added to the former; and as it concerned kings and nations, so it was to be made public for their use and information. But if here, as some contend, the prophecy begins again anew, the subject is resumed from the beginning, and all that follows is contained in the little book, then the little book contains more matter than the larger book, and part of the sealed book is made part of the open book, which is contrary to the regularity and order of the Apocalypse, and in great measure destroys the beauty and symmetry of the different parts; for it is evident and undeniable, that the seventh trumpet is the seventh part of the seventh seal, as the seventh seal is the seventh part of the sealed book, and consequently can be no part of the little open book, which endeth, as we shall see, with the sixth trumpet, and immediately before the sounding of the seventh.

¹ Vitring. in locum, p. 431. Daubuz, p. 469.

CHAPTER XI.

1 AND there was given me a reed like unto a rod: and the angel stood, saying, Rise, and measure the temple of God, and the altar, and them that worship therein.

2 But the court, which is without the temple, leave out, and measure it not; for it is given unto the Gentiles: and the holy city shall they tread under foot forty and two months.

3 And I will give power unto my two witnesses, and they shall prophecy a thousand two hundred and threescore days, clothed in sackcloth.

4 These are the two olive-trees, and the two candlesticks standing before the God of the earth.

5 And if any man will hurt them, fire proceedeth out of their mouth, and devoureth their enemies: and if any man will hurt them, he must in this manner be killed.

6 These have power to shut heaven, that it rain not in the days of their prophecy: and have power over waters to turn them to blood, and to smite the earth with all plagues as often as they will.

7 And when they shall have finished their testimony, the beast that ascendeth out of the bottomless pit shall make war against them, and shall overcome them, and kill them.

8 And their dead bodies shall lie in the street of the great city, which spiritually is called Sodom and Egypt, where also our Lord was crucified.

9 And they of the people, and kindreds, and tongues, and nations, shall see their dead bodies three days and a half, and shall not suffer their dead bodies to be put in graves.

10 And they that dwell upon the earth shall rejoice over them, and make merry, and shall send gifts one to another; because these two prophets tormented them that dwelt on the earth.

11 And after three days and a half the spirit of life from God entered into them: and they stood upon their feet, and great fear fell upon them which saw them.

12 And they heard a great voice from heaven, saying unto them, Come up hither. And they ascended up to heaven in a cloud, and their enemies beheld them.

13 And the same hour was there a great earthquake, and the tenth part of the city fell, and in the earthquake were slain of men seven thousand: and the remnant were affrighted, and gave glory to the God of heaven.

14 The second woe is past, and behold, the third woe cometh quickly.

In the former part of this chapter, from the first verse to the fourteenth, are exhibited the contents of this little book. St. John is commanded (ver. 1.) to measure the inner court, the temple of God, and the altar, and them who worship therein, to show that during all this period there were some true Christians, who conformed to the rule and measure of God's word. This measuring might allude more particularly to the reformation from popery, which fell out under this sixth trumpet; and one of the moral causes of it was the Othmans taking of Constantinople, whereupon the Greeks flying from their own country, and bringing their books with them into the more western parts of Europe, proved the happy occasion of the revival of learning; as the revival of learning opened men's eyes, and proved the happy occasion of the Reformation. But though the inner court, which includes the smaller number, was measured, yet the outer court, which implies the far greater part, was left out (ver. 2.) and rejected, as being in the possession of Christians only in name, but Gentiles in worship and practice, who profaned it with heathenish superstition and idolatry: and they shall tread under foot the holy city, they shall trample upon, and tyrannize over the church of Christ, for the space of forty and two months.

At the same time God should raise up some true and faithful witnesses (ver. 3.) to preach and protest against these innovations and corruptions of religion; for there were protestants long before ever the name came into use. Of these witnesses there should be, though but a small, yet a competent number; and it was a sufficient reason for making them two witnesses, because that is the number required by the law, and approved by the Gospel, (Deut. xix. 15. Matt. xviii. 16.) In the mouth of two witnesses shall every word be established: and upon former occasions two have often been joined in commission, as Moses and Aaron in Egypt, Elijah and Elisha in the apostacy of the ten tribes, and Zerubbabel and Joshua after the Babylonish captivity, to whom these witnesses are particularly compared. Our Saviour himself sent forth his disciples (Luke x. 1.) two and two: and it hath been observed also, that the principal reformers have usually appeared as it were in pairs, as the Waldenses and Albigenses, John Huss and Jerome of Prague, Luther and Calvin, Cranmer and Ridley, and their followers. Not that I conceive that any two particular men, or two particular churches, were intended by this prophecy; but only it was meant in the general, that there should be some in every age, though but a few in number, who should bear witness to the truth, and declare against the iniquity and idolatry of their times. They should not be discouraged even by persecution and oppression, but though clothed in sackcloth, and living in a mourning and afflicted state, should yet prophesy, should yet preach the sincere word of God, and denounce the Divine judgments against the reigning idolatry and wickedness: and this they should continue to do as long as the grand corruption itself lasted, for the space of a thousand two hundred and threescore days. It is the same space of time with the forty and two months before mentioned. For forty and two months, consisting each of thirty days, are equal to a thousand two hundred and threescore days, or years, in the prophetic style: and a thousand two hundred and threescore years, as we have seen before in Daniel, and shall see hereafter in the Revelation, is the period assigned for the tyranny and idolatry of the church of Rome. The witnesses therefore cannot be any two men, or any two churches, but must be a succession of men and a succession of churches.

A character is then given of these witnesses, and of the power and effect of their preaching. These are the two olive-trees, and the two candlesticks standing before the God of the earth, (ver. 4.) that is, they are like Zerubbabel and Joshua, (Zech. iv.) the great instructors and enlighteners of the church. Fire proceedeth out of their mouth, and devoureth their enemies, (ver. 5.) that is, they are like unto Moses and Elijah, (Numb. xvi. 2 Kings i.) who called for fire upon their adversaries. But their fire was real, this is symbolical, and proceedeth out of the mouth of the witnesses, denouncing the Divine vengeance on the corrupters and opposers of true religion; much in the same manner as it was said to Jeremiah, (v. 14.) I will make my words in thy mouth fire, and this people wood, and it shall devour them. These have power to shut heaven, that it rain not in the days of their prophecy, (ver. 6.) that is, they are like Elijah, who foretold a want of rain in the days of Ahab, (1 Kings xvii. 1; Jam. v. 17.) and it rained not on the earth for the space of three years and six months, which, mystically understood, is the same space of time as the forty and two months, and the thousand two hundred and three-score days, which are allotted for the prophesying of the witnesses. During this time the Divine grace, and protection, and blessing shall be withheld from those men who neglect and despise their preaching and doctrine. They have also power over the waters to turn them to blood, and to smite the earth with all plagues as often as they will, that is, they are like Moses and Aaron, who inflicted these plagues on Egypt; and they may be said to smite the earth with the plagues which they denounce, for in Scripture language the prophets are often said to do those things, which they declare and foretel. But it is most highly probable, that these particulars will receive a more literal accomplishment when the plagues of God and the vials of his wrath (chap. xvi.) shall be poured out upon men, in consequence of their having so long resisted the testimony of the witnesses. Their cause, and the cause of truth will finally be avenged on all their enemies.

Next after this description of the power and office of the witnesses, follows a prediction of those things which shall befall them at the latter end of their ministry; and their passion, and death, and resurrection, and ascension are copied from our Saviour's, who is emphatically styled (iii. 14.) the faithful and true witness; but with this difference, that his was real, their's are figurative and mystical. And when they shall have finished, ὅταν τελέσωσι, when they shall be about finishing their testimony, (ver. 7.) the beast that ascendeth out of the abyss, the tyrannical power of Rome, of which we shall hear more hereafter, shall make war against them, and shall overcome them, and kill them. The beast, indeed, shall make war against them all the time that they are performing their ministry; but when they shall be near finishing it, he shall so make war against them, as to overcome them, and kill them. They shall be subdued and suppressed, be degraded from all power and authority, be deprived of all offices and functions, and be politically dead, if not naturally so. In this low and abject state they shall lie some time (ver. 8.) in the street of the great city, in some conspicuous place within the jurisdiction of ¹ Rome, which spiritually is called Sodom, for corruption of manners, and Egypt, for tyranny and oppression of the people of God, where also our Lord was crucified spiritually, being crucified afresh in the sufferings of his faithful martyrs. Nay, to show the greater indignity and cruelty to the martyrs, their dead bodies shall not only be publicly exposed, (ver. 9.) but they shall be denied even the common privilege of burial, which is the case of many protestants in popish countries; and their enemies shall rejoice and insult over them, (ver. 10.) and shall send mutual presents and congratulations one to another, for their deliverance from these tormentors, whose life and doctrine were a continual reproach to them. But after three days and a half, (ver. 11.) that is, in the prophetic style, after three years and a half, for no less time is requisite for all these transactions, they shall be raised

¹ Mr. Mann, the late learned Master of the Charter-house, in some manuscript notes upon Vitringa's book on the Revelation, communicated to me by my friend Dr. Jortin, hath the following to prove that not Jerusalem but Rome was intended in this place, Rev. xi. 8. The great city which spiritually is called Sodom and Egypt, where their Lord was crucified. 1. "Jerusalem, in ver. 2. of this very chapter, is called the holy city: can it be in so few periods intended under the names of Sodom and Egypt?"

2. "The holy city or Jerusalem (ver. 2.) was to be wasted and trod under foot by the Gentiles for forty-two months: the two witnesses were to prophesy the same space of time; how then should their carcasses lie in the streets of Jerusalem so wasted?"

3. "Jerusalem, in this book, is four times called the Holy City, never the Great (unless it be here meant.) The Great City is twelve times repeated only of Babylon, i. e. Rome; is it probable it should be here used of Jerusalem?"

4. "In ver. 13., at the revival of the two witnesses, after lying dead three days and a half, the tenth part of the city fell: but in ver. 2, Jerusalem is already wasted, and not supposed to be rebuilt; and therefore incapable of being so damaged."

5. "And were Jerusalem rebuilt, the enemies of Christ out of all people, tongues, and nations (ver. 9.) would not assemble there, nor the beast expose the slain witnesses but in his own capital."

1. "Object. There are two characteristics assigned, which fit Jerusalem only, That it is spiritually or figuratively called Sodom and Egypt; as Jerusalem is compared to Sodom, Isa. i. 10; iii. 9. (of Egypt no instance.)"

1. "Answ. That Capernaum (Matt. xi. 23, 24.) is likewise compared to Sodom by Christ; and so is any city that shall reject the Gospel (Matt. x. 15.). Whence Tertullian (adv. Jud. c. ix.) observes of this very name, Nec hoc novum Scripturis divinis, figurate uti translatione nominum, ex comparatione criminum. So Rome might be called Sodom for lewdness, and Egypt for the oppression of God's people."

2. "Object. The second characteristic, where also our Lord was crucified, determines the place to Jerusalem beyond all possibility of doubting."

2. "Answ. Mills says, "The text should be read, ὅπου ὁ Κύριος αὐτῶν ἐσταυρώθη, where their Lord was crucified, or had been crucified; yet indeed without making any great difference to the literal sense. But why may not this expression be used figuratively as well as the preceding? why may not the Lord of the two witnesses be spiritually crucified; where they are spiritually slain? St. Paul to the Galatians uses this expression figuratively three or four times: the epistle to the Hebrews (vi. 6.) uses it figuratively, and perhaps in the very sense it may bear here. Though it is capable too of another, which is authorized by Christ himself; for in Matt. x. and xxv. and Acts ix. 4, 5. he declares himself to suffer what is done to his followers. In that great city, therefore, which was drunk with the blood of the saints, and the martyrs of Jesus, (chap. xvii. 6.) Jesus himself might be said to be crucified."

again by the Spirit of God, and (ver. 12.) shall ascend up to heaven: they shall not only be restored to their pristine state, but shall be farther promoted to dignity and honour, and that by a great voice from heaven, by the voice of public authority. At the same hour there shall be a great earthquake, there shall be great commotions in the world; and the tenth part of the city shall fall, as an omen and earnest of a still greater fall; and seven thousand names of men, or seven thousand men of name, shall be slain; and the remainder in their fright and fear shall acknowledge the great power of God.

Some interpreters are of opinion that this prophecy of the death and resurrection of the witnesses received its completion¹ in the case of John Huss and Jerome of Prague, who were two faithful witnesses and martyrs of the blessed Jesus. It is very well known that they were condemned to death, and afterwards burnt for heresy, by the council of Constance. Which council sitting about three years and a half, from November 1414 to April 1418, their bodies may that time be said to have lain unburied in the street of the great city, in Constance, where was the greatest assembly not only of bishops and cardinals, but likewise of ambassadors, barons, counts, dukes, princes, and the emperor himself. But after the council was dissolved, these two preachers were restored, as it were, to life in their disciples and followers, who propagated the same doctrines, maintained them by force of arms as well as by preaching, and even vanquished the Imperialists in several battles. It was truly said to them, Come up hither, when they were invited to the council of Basil, with a promise of redress of grievances; but the council having dealt fraudulently with them, they broke out again into open rebellion, and the tenth part of the city fell, the kingdom of Bohemia revolted, and fell alike from its obedience to the pope and emperor.

Others refer this prophecy to² the Protestants of the league of Smalcald, who were entirely routed by the emperor Charles V., in the battle of Mulburg, on the 24th of April, 1547, when the two great champions of the Protestants, John Frederic, elector of Saxony, was taken prisoner, and the landgrave of Hesse was forced to surrender himself, and to beg pardon of the emperor. Protestantism was then in a manner suppressed, and the mass restored. The witnesses were dead, but not buried, and the papists rejoiced over them, and made merry, and sent gifts one to another. But this joy and triumph of theirs were of no very long continuance, for in the space of about three years and a half, the Protestants were raised again at Magdeburgh, and defeated and took the duke of Mecklenburg prisoner, in December, 1550. From that time their affairs changed for the better almost every day; success attended their arms and counsels; and the emperor was obliged by the treaty of Passau to allow them the free exercise of their religion, and to readmit them into the imperial chamber, from which they had, ever since the victory of Mulburg, been excluded. Here was, indeed, a great earthquake, a great commotion, in which many thousands were slain; and the tenth part of the city fell, a great part of the German empire renounced the authority, and abandoned the communion of the church of Rome.

¹ Fox et Vitring. p. 487, &c. Vide etiam Fred. Spanhemii Hist. Christ. Sæc. xv. cap. vi. vii. Histoire du Concile de Constance par Jaques Lenfant. Voltaire's General History and State of Europe, Part ii. and Annals of the Empire, Vol. II.

² Brightman and Vitring, p. 493, &c. See also Sleidan's Hist. of the Reformation, B. xix. &c. Voltaire's Annals of the Empire, Vol. II.

Some again may think this prophecy very applicable to ¹ the horrid massacre of the Protestants at Paris, and in other cities of France, begun on the memorable eve of St. Bartholomew's day, 1572. According to the best authors, there were slain thirty or forty thousand Hugonots in a few days, and among them, without doubt, many true witnesses and faithful martyrs of Jesus Christ. Their dead bodies lay in the street of the great city, one of the greatest cities of Europe; for they were not suffered to be buried, being the bodies of heretics, but were dragged through the street, or thrown into the river, or hung upon gibbets, and exposed to public infamy. Great rejoicings too were made in the courts of France, Rome, and Spain; they went in procession to the churches, they returned public thanks to God, they sung Te Deums, they celebrated jubilees, they struck medals, and it was enacted that St. Bartholomew's day should ever afterwards be kept with double pomp and solemnity. But neither was this joy of long continuance, for in little more than three years and a half, Henry III., who succeeded his brother Charles IX., entered into a treaty with the Hugonots, which was concluded and published on the 14th of May, 1576, whereby all the former sentences against them were reversed, and the free and open exercise of their religion was granted to them; they were to be admitted to all honours, dignities, and offices, as well as the papists, and the judges were to be half of the one religion and half of the other, with other articles greatly to their advantage, which were in a manner the resurrection of the witnesses, and their ascension into heaven. The great earthquake, and the falling of the tenth part of the city, and the slaying of thousands of men, according to this hypothesis, must be referred to the great commotions and civil wars, which for several years afterwards cruelly disturbed, and almost destroyed the kingdom of France.

Others again have recourse to later events, and the later indeed the better and fitter for the purpose. Peter Jurieu, a famous divine of the French church at Rotterdam, ² imagined that the persecution then carried on by Lewis XIV. against the protestants of

¹ Vitring. p. 496, &c. Thuani Hist. Lib. lii. liii. et lxii. Davila's Hist. B. v. et vi. Mezeray, Charles IX. and Henry III.

² Jurieu's Accomplishment of the Prophecies, Part ii. chap. xii. and xiii.

France, after the revocation of the edict of Nantes in October, 1685, would be the last persecution of the church; that during this time the witnesses would lie dead, but should recover and revive within a few years, and the Reformation should be established in that kingdom by royal authority; the whole country should renounce Popery, and embrace the Protestant religion. Bishop Lloyd, and after him Mr. Whiston, ¹ apply this prophecy to the poor Protestants in the valleys of Piedmont, who by a cruel edict of their sovereign, the duke of Savoy, instigated by the French king, were imprisoned and murdered, or banished, and totally dissipated, at the latter end of the year 1686. They were kindly received and succoured by the Protestant states; and after a while secretly entering Savoy with their swords in their hands, they regained their ancient possessions, with great slaughter of their enemies; and the duke himself, having then left the French interest, granted them a full pardon; and re-established them, by another edict signed June 4, 1690, just three years and a half after their total dissipation. Bishop Lloyd not only understood the prophecy in this manner, but what is very remarkable, made the application even before the event took place, as Mr. Whiston relates, and upon this ground encouraged a refugee minister of the Vaudois, whose name was Jordan, to return home, and returning he heard the joyful news of the deliverance and restitution of his country. These were indeed most barbarous persecutions of the Protestants both in France and Savoy; and at the same time popery here in England was advanced to the throne, and threatened an utter subversion of our religion and liberties, but in little more than three years and a half a happy deliverance was wrought by the glorious Revolution.

In all these cases there may be some resemblance to the prophecy before us, of the death and resurrection of the witnesses; and it may please an over-ruling Providence so to dispose and order events, that the calamities and afflictions of the church may in some measure run parallel one to another, and all the former efforts of that tyrannical and persecuting power called the beast, may be the types and figures, as it were, of this his last and greatest effort against the witnesses. But though these instances sufficiently answer in some respects, yet they are deficient in others, and particularly in this, that they are none of them the last persecution; others have been since, and in all probability will be again. Besides, as the two witnesses are designed to be the representatives of the Protestants in general, so the persecution must be general too, and not confined to this or that particular church or nation. We are now living under the sixth trumpet: and the empire of the Euphratean horsemen, or Othmans, is still subsisting, and perhaps in as large extent as ever: the beast is still reigning; and the witnesses are still, in some times and places more, in some less, prophesying in sackcloth. It will not be till toward the end of their testimony, and that end seemeth to be yet at some distance, that the great victory and triumph of the beast, and the suppression, and resurrection, and exaltation of the witnesses will take effect. When all these things shall be accomplished, then the sixth trumpet will end, then the second woe shall be past, (ver. 14.) the Othman empire shall be broken in the same manner that Ezekiel, (xxxviii. xxxix.) and Daniel, (xi. 44, 45.) have predicted; the sufferings of the witnesses shall cease, and they shall be raised and exalted above their enemies: and when the second woe shall be thus past, behold the third woe, or the total destruction of the beast, cometh quickly. Some time intervened between the first and the second woes; but upon the ceasing of the second, the third shall commence immediately.

¹ Whiston's Essay on the Revelations, Part iii. Vision ii.

It appears then that the greater part of this prophecy relating to the witnesses remains yet to be fulfilled: but possibly some may question, whether any part of it hath been fulfilled; whether there have been any such persons as the witnesses, any true and faithful servants of Jesus Christ, who have in every age professed doctrines contrary to those maintained by the pope and church of Rome. The truth of the fact will best appear by an historical deduction; and if it can be proved, that there have constantly been such witnesses from the seventh century down to the Reformation, during the most flourishing period of popery, I presume there can be little doubt about the times preceding or following. As there hath been occasion to observe before, the seeds of popery were sown even in the apostles' time, but they were not grown up to maturity, the power of the pope as a horn, or temporal prince, was not established till the eighth century; and from thence, therefore, it will be proper to begin our deduction, when the beast began to reign, and the witnesses to prophecy in sackcloth.

Great as the power of the Latin church was grown in the eighth century, the Greek church still dissented from it, and opposed it. The emperors ¹ Leo Isauricus, and his son Constantine Copronymus, not only vigorously opposed the worship of images, but also denied the intercession of saints, and burnt and destroyed their relics. In the year 754 Constantine Copronymus held a general council at Constantinople of 338 bishops, who prohibited unanimously the worship of saints as well as of images; and ² declared that "only one image was constituted by Christ himself, namely, the bread and wine in the eucharist, which represent the body and blood of Christ:" than which there cannot be a stronger declaration against the doctrine of transubstantiation as well as against the worship of images. It is true that the second council of Nice, in the year 787, restored and established the worship of images, and the pope ratified and confirmed it; but nevertheless great opposition was made to it by several churches in the west. Charlemagne ¹ held a council at Francfort in the year 794, consisting of 300 bishops of various nations, who condemned equally the second council of Nice and the worship of images. The Carolin books were also set forth under the name and authority of that great monarch; and the doctrines therein contained, of the sufficiency of the Scriptures, of the worship of God alone, of prayers in the vulgar tongue, of the eucharist, of justification, of repentance, of pretended visions and miracles, and various other points, are such as a Papist would abhor, and a Protestant would subscribe. Not to seek for farther instances, the ² British churches lamented and execrated the second council of Nice; and the famous Albin or Alcuin wrote a letter against it, disproving and refuting it by express authorities of Holy Scripture; which letter was transmitted to Charles the Great in the name of the bishops and other great men of the kingdom. Even at Italy ³ the council of Forojulio prescribed the use of no other creed but that of the apostles, so that they had no conception of the necessity of so many additional articles, as have since been made by pope Pius IV. and received by the church. Some even of the Italian bishops assisted at the council of Francfort before mentioned, and particularly Paulinus, bishop of Aquileia, bore a principal part in it.

¹ Theophr. Cedren. Zonar. &c. &c. Fred. Spanhemii Hist. Christian. Sæc. viii. cap. vi. vii. &c.

² Aliis explosis imaginibus, [verba sunt Bellarmini, Tom. I. p. 535.] unicam definiverunt esse imaginem ab ipso Christo institutam, nimirum panem et vinum in Eucharistiâ, quæ repræsentant Christi corpus et sanguinem. ["Having rejected other images (these are the words of Bellarmine, Vol. I. p. 535.) they determined, that there is but one only image instituted by Christ himself, namely, the bread and the wine in the eucharist, which represent the body and the blood of Christ."] Ex Concil. Constantinop. Tom. III. p. 359. Edit. Binnii. Usserius de Christian. Eccles. successione et statu, cap. ii. sect. iv. p. 19.

Popery prevailed still more in the ninth century, but yet not without considerable opposition. Not only ⁴ the emperors of the east, Nicephorus, Leo Arminius, Michael Balbus, Theophilus, and the emperors of the west, Charles the Great, and Lewis the Pious, but also several prelates and ecclesiastics, opposed the absolute power and supremacy of the pope, together with the worship of images, and invocation of saints and angels. The capitularies and edicts of Charles the Great and Lewis the Pious ⁵ enjoined the reading of the canonical Scripture as the sole rule of faith, without any regard to human traditions or apocryphal writings. Private masses and pilgrimages, and other such superstitions ⁶ were forbid-

¹ Spanhem. ibid. cap. vi. et ix. Usser. ibid. p. 20. Allix's Remarks upon the ancient churches of the Albigenes, chap. viii.

² Hoveden. Annal. Pars prior, p. 232. Simeon Dunelm. Hist. p. 111. Matt. Westm. Flores Hist. Ann. 793. Usser. ibid. p. 19, 20. Collier's Eccles. Hist. B. ii. p. 139.

³ Tom. VII. Concil. p. 1002. Allix's Remarks upon the ancient churches of Piedmont, chap. viii. Spanhem. ibid. cap. ix. x.

⁴ Fred. Spanhemii Hist. Christian. Sæc. ix. cap. ix. Miscell. Sacræ Antiq. Lib. vi. Hist. Imag. sect. vii. viii. ix.

⁵ Capit. Aquisgranens. Spanhem. Hist. Christian. Sæc. ix. cap. iii. sect. ii. cap. ix. sect. ii.

⁶ Spanhem. ibid. cap. ix. sect. v. viii. &c.

den by the same capitularies. Lewis the Pious held a council at Paris in the year 824, which ¹ agreed with the council of Francfort in rejecting the second council of Nice, and forbidding the worship of images. Agobard, archbishop of Lyons, in his book against pictures and images, maintains that we ought not to adore any image of God, but only that which is God himself, even his eternal Son, and that there is no other mediator between God and men, save Jesus Christ, God and man; so that it is no wonder that this book is condemned in the Index Expurgatorius of the church of Rome. It was in this century that the doctrine of transubstantiation was first advanced here in the west by Paschasius Radbertus, abbot of Corbie in France; but it was strenuously opposed by Rabanus Maurus, Bertramus, Johannes Scotus, and many other bishops and learned men of that age. Rabanus Maurus, archbishop of Mentz, ² passes this censure upon the novelty of the doctrine: "Some," says he, "of late, not rightly conceiving concerning the sacrament of the body and blood of our Lord, have affirmed that this is the very same body of our Lord, which was born of the Virgin Mary, and in which our Lord himself suffered, &c., which error we have opposed to the utmost of our power," &c. He thus ³ expresses his own sentiments: "Our Lord would have the sacrament of his body and blood be taken and eaten by the faithful, that by a visible work an invisible effect might appear. For as the material food outwardly nourishes and refreshes the body, so also the word of God inwardly nourishes and strengthens the soul." Again: "the sacrament is reduced into the nourishment of the body, but by the virtue of the sacrament eternal life is obtained." Bertramus, or Ratramnus, as he is otherwise called, a monk of Corbie, wrote a book of the body and blood of our Lord, which he inscribed to the emperor Charles the Bald. The emperor ⁴ had inquired of him, "whether the same body, which was born of Mary, and suffered, and was dead and buried, and which sitteth at the right hand of the Father, is what is

¹ Spanhem. ibid. cap. ix. sect. iii. cap. xii. sect. ii. Hist. Imag. sect. ix. Allix's Remarks upon the ancient churches of the Albigenes, chap. ix.

² Quidam nuper de ipso sacramento corporis et sanguinis Domini non recte sentientes, dixerunt, hoc ipsum corpus Domini quod de Mariâ virgine natum est, et in quo ipse Dominus passus est, &c.; cui errori quantum potuimus, &c. [Translated in the text.] Lib. Pœnitent. cap. xxxiii. Spanhem. Hist. Christian. Sæc. ix. cap. x. sect. iv.

³ Maluit Dominus corporis et sanguinis sui sacramenta fidelium ore percipi, et in partem [al. pastum] eorum redigi, ut per visibile opus invisibilis ostenderetur effectus. Sicut enim cibus materialis forinsecus nutrit corpus et vegetat, ita etiam verbum Dei intus animam nutrit et roborat. Sacramentum in alimentum corporis redigitur, virtute autem sacramenti æterna vita adipiscitur. [Translated in the text.] Institut. Cleric. Lib. i. cap. xxxi. et de Universo, Lib. v. cap. xi. Usser. de Christian. Eccles. successionem et statu, cap. ii. sect. xvi.

⁴ Ubi quærenti imperatori utrum ipsum corpus quod de Mariâ natum est et passum, mortuum et sepultum, quodque ad dexteram Patris consideat, sit quod ore fidelium per sacramentorum mysterium in ecclesiâ quotidie sumitur: respondet Bertramus discrimen inter utrumque esse tantum, quantum est inter pignus, et eam rem pro quâ pignus traditur; quantum inter imaginem, et rem cujus est imago; et quantum inter speciem et veritatem. [Translated in the text.] Usser. ibid. sect. xvii.

daily taken in the mouth of the faithful by the mystery of the sacrament in the church;" and Bertram answers, that the difference between them is "as great as between the pledge and the thing for which the pledge is delivered; as great as between the image and the thing whose image it is; as great as between the representation and the reality." He says ¹ in several places, that "the bread and wine are figuratively the body of Christ, spiritually, not corporally, in figure, in image, in mystery, not in truth, or real existence, or presence of the substance." Johannes Scotus, the famous Irishman, for the Irish were the Scots of those times, ² wrote also a book of the eucharist, by the command of Charles the Bald, and therein he asserted, that "the sacrament of the altar is not the true body, nor the true blood of our Lord, but only the memorial of the true body and of the true blood." He was after this invited into England by king Alfred, was preferred by him, and honoured with the title of martyr after his death, which is at least a strong presumption that the Church of England had not at that time received the doctrine of transubstantiation. In Italy itself ³ Angilbertus, archbishop of Milan, would not acknowledge the supremacy of the pope, nor did the church of Milan submit to the see of Rome till two hundred years afterwards. But no one was more willing, as indeed no one of that age was more able to stem the torrent of superstition than Claude bishop of Turin, in his numerous writings and comments upon Scripture. He ⁴ asserted the equality of all the apostles with St. Peter, and maintained that Jesus Christ was the only head of the church. He overthrew the doctrine of merit and all pretences to works of supererogation. He rejected traditions in matters of religion, held the church to be subject to error, and denied the use of prayers for the dead. He proposed the doctrine of the eucharist in a manner totally different from Paschasius Radbertus, and entirely conformable to the sense of the ancient church. He opposed with all his might the worship of saints, of relics, of images, together with pilgrimages, penances, and other superstitions of the like kind. He may in a manner be said to have sown the seeds of the Reformation in his diocese of Turin, and his doctrines took such deep root, especially in the valleys of Piedmont, that they continued to flourish there for some centuries, as the papists themselves acknowledge.

¹ Ibi fuit Bertramus, Panem vinumque figuratè corpus Christi existere; spiritualiter, non corporaliter; in figurâ, in imagine, in mysterio; non in veritate, suâ reali existentia, vel presentia substantiæ, &c. [Translated in the text.] Spanhem. ibid.

² Sacramentum altaris non esse verum corpus, nec verum sanguinem Domini, sed solummodo memoriale veri corporis et veri sanguinis. [Translated in the text.] Spanhem. ibid. Usser. ibid. sect. xix. Dupin ix. Siècle, chap. vii. Cave, Hist. Litt. Ann. 858. p. 45. Vol. II. Collier's Ecclesiast. Hist. B. iii. p. 165.

³ Sigon. de Regn. Ital. Lib. v. Ann. 844. Spanhem. ibid. cap. ix. sect. i.

⁴ See these points proved by quotations and extracts from his works in Dr. Allix's Remarks upon the ancient churches of Piedmont, chap. ix. See also Spanheim, Dupin, Cave, &c.

The tenth century even the writers of the Romish communion lament and describe as the most debauched and wicked,—the most illiterate and ignorant age since the coming of Christ. Genebrard¹ says, “This is called the unhappy age, being destitute of men famous for wit and learning, as also of famous princes and popes; in which scarce any thing was done worthy of the memory of posterity.” He subjoins, “But chiefly unhappy in this one thing, that for almost one hundred and fifty years about fifty popes totally degenerated from the virtue of their ancestors, being more like apostates than apostles.” Baronius himself² denominates it an iron, a leaden, and obscure age, and declares that “Christ was then, as it appears, in a very deep sleep, when the ship was covered with waves, and what seemed worse, when the Lord was thus asleep, there were wanting disciples who by their cries might awaken him, being themselves all fast asleep.” It is not to be wondered, that in so long and dark a night as this, while all were asleep, the subtle enemy should sow his tares in great abundance. However, there were some few like lights shining in a dark place, who remonstrated against the degeneracy and superstition of the times. The resolutions and decrees of the councils of Francfort and Paris against the worship of images³ had still some force and influence in Germany, in France, in England, and other countries. In the former part of this century, in the year 909, a council⁴ was held at Troffy, a village near Soissons in France; and having made several wise and good regulations, they concluded with a profession of the things which Christians ought to believe and practise, and in that profession are none of those things which constitute the sum of popish doctrine, nothing of the pope’s being head of the church, nothing of the daily sacrifice of the mass, or of purgatory, or of the worship of creatures, or of commentitious sacraments, or of confession to the priest, but of pure and sincere confession to God; so much did this council differ from the spirit and principles of the council of Trent. Many churches⁵ still retained the use of

¹ Infelix dicitur hoc sæculum, exhaustum hominibus ingenio et doctrinâ claris, sic etiam claris principibus, et pontificibus; in quo nihil fere dignum memoriâ posteritatis gestum sit—Hoc vero uno infelix, quod per annos fere 150 pontifices circiter 50 a virtute majorum prorsus defecerint, Apotactici Apostaticive potius quam Apostolici. [Translated in the text.] Genebrard. Chron. Lib. iv. in initio x. Sæc. Usser. de Christian. Eccles. successionem et statu, cap. ii. sect. xxxiv. Spanhemii Hist. Christian. Sæc. x. cap. iii. sect. i.

² En novum inchoatur sæculum, quod sui asperitate ac boni sterilitate ferreum, malique exundantis deformitate plumbeum, at inopiâ scriptorum appellari consuevit obscurum. [Behold a new age commences, which, from its roughness, and barrenness of what is good, has usually been called the iron age; from its deformity through the evil that abounded therein, the leaden age; and from the want of writers, the obscure age.] Baron. ad ann. 900. Dormiebat tunc planè alto (ut apparet) sopore Christus, cum navis fluctibus operiretur: et quod deterius videbatur, deerant qui Dominum sic dormientem clamoribus excitarent discipuli, stertentibus omnibus. [Translated in the text.] Ibid. ad ann. 912. Usser. ibid. Spanhem. ibid.

³ Spanhem. ibid. cap. vi. sect. viii. Hist. Imag. sect. ix.

⁴ Tom. III. Concil. Gallie. Spanhem. ibid. cap. viii. sect. iii. Dupin. x. Siècle, chap. iii.

⁵ Spanhem. ibid. cap. vi. sect. ii. et x. Scripturas divinas verti fecit in Anglo-Saxonithe Scriptures in the vulgar tongue, and in England particularly Athelstan caused them to be translated into the Anglo-Saxon idiom. Great opposition ¹ was also made in several countries to the celibacy of the clergy, and several councils were held upon the controversy between the monks and the secular clergy, and particularly in England, where Elfere earl of Mercia expelled the monks out of the monasteries in that province, and introduced the clergy with their wives. Many too, even in this age, denied the doctrine of transubstantiation. Heriger, abbot of Lobes, near Liege, ² wrote expressly against it; as did also ³ Alfric in England, whose homily for Easter used to be read publicly in the churches. His principal aim therein ⁴ is to prove, "that we spiritually taste the body of Christ, and drink his blood, when with true faith we partake of that holy sacrament; the bread and wine cannot by any benediction be changed into the body and blood of Christ, they are indeed the body and blood of Christ, yet not corporally, but spiritually;" with much more to the same purpose. He wrote also two epistles, the one addressed to Wulfen, bishop of Sherborne, and the other to Wulfstan, archbishop of York, wherein he asserts the same doctrine. In the former he thus ⁵ explains the doctrine of the sacrament: "The host is the body of Christ, not corporally, but spiritually. Not the body in which he suffered, but the body of which he spake, when he consecrated the bread and wine the night preceding his passion, and said of the consecrated bread, This is my body; and again of the consecrated wine, This is my blood, which is shed for many for the remission of sins." In the latter, he hath these ⁶ memorable words, which some papists, of more zeal than knowledge, attempted to erase out of the manuscript copy. "Yet this sacrifice is not made his body in which he suffered for us, nor his blood which he poured out for us, but it is spiritually cum idioma. [He caused the divine Scriptures to be translated into the Anglo-Saxon idiom.] Wilh. Malmes. et Balæus.

¹ Spanhem. ibid. sect. v. Spelmanni Concil. Brit. Vol. I. Collier's Eccles. Hist. B. iii. p. 199.

² Sigebert de Ecclesiast. Script. cap. cxxxviii. Usser. ibid. sect. xx. Spanhem. ibid. cap. vii. sect. iii. Dupin. ibid. chap. iv.

³ Usser. ibid. sect. xx. xxi. Spanhem. ibid. sect. ii. Dupin. ibid. chap. v. Cave, Hist. Litt. Vol. II. p. 108, &c. Collier's Eccles. Hist. B. iii. p. 204, &c.

⁴ — idene unice agit, "ut ostendat nos spiritualiter corpus Christi gustare ejusque sanguinem bibere, cum verâ fide sacram illam gustamus eucharistiam; panem et vinum non posse per ullam benedictionem in Christi corpus et sanguinem mutari; vere quidem Christi corpus et sanguinem esse, non tamen corporaliter, sed spiritualiter," &c. [Translated in the text.] Cave, ibid. p. 110.

⁵ Hostia illa est Christi corpus non corporaliter, sed spiritualiter. Non corpus in quo passus est: sed corpus de quo locutus est, quando panem et vinum, ea quæ passionem antecessit nocte, in hostiam consecravit: et de sacrato pane dixit, Hoc est corpus meum; rursumque de sacro vino, Hic est sanguis meus, qui pro multis effunditur in remissionem peccatorum. [Translated in the text.] Apud Usser. ibid. sect. xxi.

⁶ Non fit tamen hoc sacrificium corpus ejus in quo passus est pro nobis, neque sanguis ejus pro nobis effudit, sed spiritualiter corpus ejus efficitur et sanguis: sicut manna quod de cœlo pluit, et aqua quæ de petrâ fluxit, sicut Paulus apostolus ait. [Translated in the text.] Apud Usser. ibid. et Cave, ibid.

made his body and blood ; as the manna which rained from heaven, and the water which flowed from the rock, as Paul the apostle saith." The synods and councils, which were held in this age by the authority of kings and bishops, show evidently that the power of the pope had not yet extended over all. Nay, there were kings and bishops who opposed the supremacy of the pope, and none more than ¹ the council of Rheims, in the year 991, and Gerbert archbishop of Rheims, who declared, " that if the pope did amiss, he was liable to the censures of the church : " and speaking of the pope then reigning, John XV., " What," says he, " do you conceive this man, sitting on a lofty throne, glittering in purple clothing and in gold, what, I say, do you conceive him to be ? If he is destitute of charity, and is puffed up by knowledge alone, he is Antichrist sitting in the temple of God, and showing himself that he is God." He was afterwards himself chosen pope, under the name of Sylvester II. and possibly the change of his situation might produce a change in his sentiments.

Much of the same complexion with the tenth was the eleventh century, equally sunk in profligacy, superstition, and ignorance, but yet not without some superior spirits to bear testimony against it. The papal power was in this century carried beyond all bounds by the ambition and arrogance of the reigning popes, and particularly by the violence and haughtiness of Gregory VII., whose former name was Hildebrand, or Hell-brand, as he hath often been denominated. But yet there were emperors and councils, who strenuously opposed the pretensions and usurpations of the see of Rome ; and these contests and struggles between the popes and emperors, about the right of investitures and other articles, make a principal part of the history of this age. Our English kings, devoted as they were to the religion, yet would not entirely submit to the authority of the bishop of Rome, but contradicted it in several instances. When William I. was required by the pope to pay him homage, he made ² answer, " To pay homage I have been unwilling, nor am I willing ; for neither did I promise it, neither do I find that my predecessors paid it to your predecessors." His son William Rufus exerted somewhat of the same spirit, and ³ insisted that the pope, without his permission, had no manner of jurisdiction in England. Early in this century, there ⁴ appeared at Orleans some heretics, as

¹ Spanhem. ex Baronio ad ann. 992. Num. x. &c. et ex Epist. Gerberti. Si peccaverit, subesse judicio ecclesiæ.—Quid hunc, reverendi patres, in sublimi solio residentem, veste purpureâ et auro radiantem, quid hunc, inquam, esse censetis ? Nimirum si charitate destituitur, solâque scientiâ inflatur et extollitur, Antichristus est in templo Dei sedens, et se ostendens tanquam sit Deus. [Translated in the text.] Cap. vi. sect. iii. &c. Dupin. ibid. chap. v. See also Allix's Remarks upon the ancient churches of the Albigenes, chap. x.

² Fidelitatem facere nolui, nec volo ; quia nec ego promisi, nec antecessores meos antecessoribus tuis id fecisse comperio. [Translated in the text.] Apud Baron. Ann. 1079 sect. xxv. Usser. de Christian. Eccles. successionem et statu, cap. vii. sect. ix.

³ Eadmer. Hist. Lib. ii. Collier's Eccles. Hist. B. iv. p. 279.

⁴ Dupin. xi. Siècle, chap. xiii. Fred. Spanhemii Hist. Christian. Sæc. xi. cap. x. sect. i.

they were called, who maintained that the consecration of the priest could not change the bread and wine into the body and blood of Christ, and that it was unprofitable to pray to saints and angels, and they were condemned by the council of Orleans, in the year 1017. Not long after these ¹ appeared other heretics of the same stamp in Flanders, who were also condemned by the synod of Arras, in the year 1025. They came originally from Italy, where they had been the disciples of Gundulphus, and they are said to have admitted no Scripture but the Gospels and apostolical writings; to have denied the reality of the body and blood of Christ in the eucharist; to have attributed no religious worship to the holy confessors, none to the cross, none to images, nor to temples, nor altars; and to have asserted that there was no purgatory, and that penances after death could not absolve the deceased from their sins. Other tenets were ascribed to them, which were really heretical; and perhaps they might hold some errors, as well as some truths; or perhaps their adversaries, as it hath been their usual artifice, might lay things to their charge merely to blacken and defame them. Not long after these ² arose the famous Berengarius, a native of Tours, and archdeacon of Angers, who more professedly wrote against the doctrine of transubstantiation, and also ³ called "the church of Rome a church of malignants, the council of vanity, and the seat of Satan." It is true that he was compelled by the authority of popes and councils to renounce, abjure, and burn his writings. But his was all a forced, and not in the least a voluntary recantation. As often as he recanted, he relapsed again. He returned like a dog to his vomit, as a ⁴ contemporary popish writer expresseth it. He lived and died in the same sentiments. His heresy was from him called the Berengarian heresy, and his followers were so numerous, that, as ⁵ old historians relate, he had corrupted almost all the French, Italians, and English with his depravities. When Gregory VII. had, both by letters, and by a council held at Rome in the year 1074, strictly forbidden the marriage of the clergy, it raised ⁶ great commotions among the ecclesiastics in Germany, who not only complained of the pope for impos-

¹ Spanhem. ibid. Dupin. ibid. Allix's Remarks upon the ancient church of Piedmont, chap. xi.

² Usser. ibid. cap. vii. sect. xxiv. &c. Dupin. ibid. chap. ii. Spanhem. ibid. cap. viii. &c. &c.

³ Ecclesiam Romanam, ecclesiam malignantium, concilium vanitatis, et sedem Satanæ vocabat. [Translated in the text.] Gulielm. Reginald. Calvino Turcism. Lib. ii. cap. v. Usser. ibid. sect. xxiv.

⁴ Qui licet eandem hæresin sæpissime in synodo abjuravit, ad vomitum tamen suum canino more non expavit redire. [Who, although he frequently abjured in the synod the same heresy, yet he was not afraid like a dog to return to his vomit.] Bertoldus Constantiensis presbyter apud Usser. ibid. sect. xxxiv.

⁵ Eodem tempore, Berengarius Turonensis, in hæreticam prolapsus pravitatem, omnes Gallos, Italos, et Anglos, suis jam pene corruperat pravitatibus. [At the same time Berenger of Tours, having fallen into heretical depravity, had already nearly corrupted all the French, the Italians, and the English, with his errors.] Matt. Westmonast. et Hist. Roffen. in anno 1087. Usser. ibid. sect. xxvii.

⁶ Dupin. ibid. chap. v. Spanhem. ibid. cap. vii. sect. iv.

ing this yoke, but likewise accused him of advancing a notion insupportable, and contrary to the words of our Saviour, who saith, that all are not able to live in continence, and to the words of the apostle, who ordereth those who have not the gift of continence to marry. They added that this law, in forcing the ordinary course of nature would be the cause of great disorders; that they would rather renounce the priesthood than marriage; and the pope should provide, if he could, angels to govern the church, since he refused to be served by men. This was the language of these corrupt ecclesiastics, as ¹ Dupin hath called them; but the decree of the pope was no less opposed in France, in Flanders, in Italy, and England, than in Germany. A council was held at Winchester in the year 1076, wherein it was ² decreed indeed, that no canon should marry, but the priests in the country, who were already married, were allowed to cohabit with their wives; whereas the pope had enjoined all priests without distinction to put away their wives, or to forbear the exercise of their office. Whereupon Mr. Collier hath made this just reflection: "From hence it appears that the papal supremacy had not reached its zenith in this century, and that the English bishops did not believe the patriarchal power arbitrary and unlimited, but that a national church had some reserves of liberty, and might dissent from the constitutions of the see of Rome upon occasion."

Europe hitherto was involved in the dark night of popery, with only some stars appearing here and there in the horizon; but in the twelfth century there began to be visible some streaks of the morning light, some dawnings of a reformation. Here in England, during the reign of Henry II. the famous constitutions of Clarendon were sworn to and signed both by the clergy and the laity, in recognition of the rights of the crown, particularly forbidding all appeals to Rome without the king's licence, and appointing the trial of criminal clerks before secular judges: but the best account of this as well as of the other memorable transactions of this reign, the public expects with some impatience from one of the most masterly and elegant writers of the present age, a friend to religion and virtue, a friend to liberty and his country; and the public expectations have been since fully answered. Fluentius, bishop of Florence³, taught publicly, that Antichrist was born, and come into the world: whereupon pope Paschal II. went to Florence, held a council there in the year 1105, and severely reprimanded the bishop, and strictly forbade him to preach any such doctrine. St. Bernard himself, devoted as he was and bigoted to the church of Rome in other respects, ⁴ yet inveighed loudly against the corruption of the clergy, and the pride and tyranny of the popes, saying

¹ C'est ainsi que ces ecclésiastiques corrompus parloient. [It was thus that these corrupt ecclesiastics used to speak.] Dupin. ibid. p. 36.

² Collier's Ecclesiast. Hist. B. iv. p. 248, 249. Spelmanni Concil. Vol. II.

³ Platina in vitâ Paschal. ii. Spanhemii Hist. Christian. Sæc. xii. cap. v. sect. ii. Cave, Hist. Litt. Sæc. xii. Concilia, Vol. II. p. 258. Calmet, Dict. in ANTICHRIST.

⁴ Spanhem. ibid. Usser. de Christian. Eccles. successione et statu, cap. vii. sect. v. vi.

that they were the ministers of Christ and served Antichrist, that nothing remained but that the man of sin should be revealed, that the beast in the Apocalypse occupied St. Peter's chair, with other expressions to the same effect. While our king Richard I. was at Messina, in Sicily, going upon his expedition to the Holy Land, he¹ sent for the famous abbot Joachim, of Calabria, and heard him with much satisfaction explain the Apocalypse, and discourse of Antichrist. He said that Antichrist was already born in the city of Rome, and that he would be advanced to the apostolical chair, and exalted above all that is called God, or is worshipped. So that some true notion of Antichrist began to spread even among the members of the church of Rome; and no wonder it prevailed among those who more directly opposed the doctrines of that church. Peter de Bruis and Henry his disciple² taught in several parts of France, that "the body and blood of Christ were not offered in the theatrical mass; that the doctrine of the change of the substances in the sacrament is false; that sacrifices, that is, masses, prayers, alms, and other works of the living for the dead, are foolish and impious, and profit them nothing; that priests and monks ought rather to marry than to burn; that crosses are not to be adored or venerated, and so many crosses, serving to superstition, ought rather to be removed than retained:" and they both were martyrs, the one being burnt, and the other imprisoned for life, on account of their doctrines. Other heresies were laid to their charge, and their own writings are not extant to speak for them; but these things they taught and professed, their enemies themselves being judges. Arnold of Brescia³ held opinions contrary to those of the church concerning the sacrament, and preached mightily against the temporal power and jurisdiction of the pope and the clergy; for which he was burnt at Rome, in the year 1155, and his ashes were thrown into the Tiber, to prevent the people from expressing any veneration for his relics. But the true witnesses, and as I may say the protestants of this age, were the Waldenses and Albigenses, who began to be famous at this time, and being dispersed into various places were distinguished by various appellations. Their first and proper name seemeth to have been Vallenses, or inhabitants of the valleys; and so saith ¹ one of the oldest writers, Ebrard of Bethune, who wrote in the year 1212; "They call themselves Vallenses, because they abide in the valley of tears," alluding to their situation in the valleys of Piedmont. They were called Albigenses from Alby, a city in the southern parts of France, where also great numbers of them were situated. They were afterwards denominated Valdenses or Waldenses, from Peter Valdo or Waldo, a rich citizen of Lyons, and a considerable leader of the sect. From Lyons too they were called Leonists, and Cathari from the professed purity of their life and doctrine, as others since have had the name of Puritans. As there was a variety of names, so there might be some diversity of opinions among them; but that they were not guilty of Manicheism and other abominable heresies, which have been charged upon them, is certain and evident from all the remains of their creeds, confessions, and writings. Their opinions ² are thus recited from an old manuscript by the Centuriators of Magdeburgh.

¹ Rogeri de Hoveden Annal. Pars Posterior, p. 681. Edit. Francof. 1601. Jam natus est in civitate Romanâ, et in sede apostolicâ sublimabitur, &c. [He hath already been born in the city of Rome, and he will be raised to the apostolical chair, &c.] Collier's Eccles. Hist. B. vi. p. 401.

² Corpus et sanguinem Christi in theatricâ missâ non offerri. Doctrinam de speciebus sacramenti, ipsis nimirum substantiis mutatis, esse falsam. Sacrificia, id est missas, orationes, eleemosynas, et reliqua vivorum opera pro defunctis, esse stultitiam et impietatem, nihilque eis prodesse. Sacerdotes et monachos debere uxores potius ducere, quam comburi. Cruces non adorandas aut venerandas: et tot cruces superstitioni servientes, potius amovendas quam retinendas, &c. [Translated in the text.] Hist. Eccles. Magdeburg. Vol. III. Cent. xii. cap. v. p. 331, &c. Edit. Basil. 1624. Spanhem. ibid. cap. vii. sect. ii. Dupin. xii. Siècle, chap. vi. Allix's Remarks upon the ancient churches of the Albigenses, chap. xiv.

³ Otho Frising de Gestis Frederici, Lib. i. Spanhem. ibid. cap. vii. sect. iv. Dupin. ibid. Allix's Remarks on the ancient church of Piedmont, chap. xviii.

"In articles of faith the authority of the Holy Scripture is the highest, and for that reason it is the rule of judging; so that whatsoever agreeth not with the word of God, is deservedly to be rejected and avoided.

¹ Vallenses se appellant, eo quod in valle lachrymarum maneat. [Translated in the text.] Ebrard. Beth. Antihæres. chap. xxv. Usser. ibid. cap. viii. sect. iv. Allix, ibid.

² In articulis fidei summam esse sacræ scripturæ auctoritatem, eamque ob causam esse illam normam judicandi; ut quicquid cum verbo Dei non congruat, merito sit repudiandum et fugiendum.

Patrum et conciliorum dogmata eatenus probanda, quatenus cum verbo Dei conveniunt.

Sacrarum scripturarum lectionem et cognitionem, omnibus hominibus tum laicis, tum sacris viris, liberam et necessariam esse; imo potius prophetarum et apostolorum monumenta legenda esse, quam hominum commenta.

Duo esse ecclesiæ Christi sacramenta, baptismum et cœnam Domini.

Utriusque speciei usum, pro sacerdotibus et laicis, a Christo institutum esse.

Missas esse impias; ac furorem esse, pro mortuis missificare.

Purgatorium esse figmentum hominum; credentes enim, in vitam æternam, non credentes autem in damnationem æternam venire.

Sanctorum mortuorum invocationes et cultum, esse idololatriam.

Romanam ecclesiam esse meretricem Babyloniam.

Papæ et episcopis non obtemperandum; quia sint lupi ecclesiæ Christi.

Papam non habere primatum super omnes ecclesias Christi, nec habere potestatem utriusque gladii.

Ecclesiam Christi esse, quæ sincerum Christi verbum audiat, et sacramentis ab ipso institutis utatur, ubicunque locorum ea existat.

Vota esse hominum figmenta, Sodomam nutrientia.

Tot ordines esse tot characteres bestiarum.

Monochatum esse cadaver fœtidum.

Templorum tot superstitiosas dedicationes, memorias mortuorum, benedictiones creaturarum, peregrinationes, tot coacta jejunia, tot festa superflua, perpetuos istos hominum indoctorum boatius, ac reliquarum ceremoniarum observationes, verbi doctrinam et institutionem manifeste impediennes, esse inventiones diabolicas.

Conjugium sacerdotum esse licitum et necessarium. [Translated in the text.]

Hæc ex antiquo manuscripto libro proferimus. [These things we produce from an old manuscript.] Hist. Eccles. Magdeburg Vol. III. Cent. xii. cap. viii. p. 548, 549. Edit. Basil. 1624. See also the Confession of the Faith of the Waldenses in Perrin's Hist. B. i. chap. xii. &c.

"The decrees of fathers and councils are so far to be approved, as they agree with the word of God.

"The reading and knowledge of the Holy Scriptures is free and necessary for all men, the laity as well as the clergy; yea and the writings of the prophets and apostles are to be read rather than the comments of men.

"The sacraments of the church of Christ are two, baptism and the supper of the Lord.

"The receiving in both kinds for priests and people was instituted by Christ.

"Masses are impious; and it is madness to say masses for the dead.

"Purgatory is an invention of men; for they who believe go into eternal life, they who believe not into eternal damnation.

"The invoking and worshipping of dead saints is idolatry.

"The church of Rome is the whore of Babylon.

"We must not obey the pope and bishops; because they are the wolves of the church of Christ.

"The pope hath not the primacy over all the churches of Christ, neither hath he the power of both swords.

"That is the church of Christ which heareth the sincere word of Christ, and useth the sacraments instituted by him, in what place soever it exist.

"Vows of celibacy are inventions of men, and occasions of sodomy.

"So many orders are so many characters of the beast.

"Monkery is a stinking carcase.

"So many superstitious dedications of churches, commemorations of the dead, benedictions of creatures, pilgrimages, so many forced fastings, so many superfluous festivals, those perpetual bellowings (meaning the singing and chanting) of unlearned men, and the observations of the other ceremonies, manifestly hindering the teaching and learning of the word, are diabolical inventions.

"The marriage of priests is lawful and necessary."

Much hath been written in censure and commendation of this sect both by enemies and friends, by papists and protestants. If they have been grossly misrepresented and vilified on one side, they have been amply vindicated and justified on the other; but I will only produce the testimonies of three witnesses concerning them, whom both sides must allow to be unexceptionable, Reinerius, Thuanus, and Mezerius. Reinerius¹ flourished about the year

¹ Inter omnes sectas, quæ adhuc sunt vel fuerunt, non est perniciosior ecclesiæ quam Leonistarum. Et hoc tribus de causis. Prima est, quia est diuturnior; aliqui enim dicunt, quod duraverit a tempore Sylvestri; aliqui, a tempore apostolorum. Secunda, quia est generalior; fere enim nulla est terra, in quâ hæc secta non sit. Tertia, quia cum omnes aliæ sectæ immanitate blasphemiarum in Deum audientibus horrorem inducant, hæc Leonistarum magnam habet speciem pietatis; eo quod coram hominibus juste vivant, et bene omnia de Deo credant, et omnes articulos qui in symbolo continentur; solummodo Ro-

1254; and his testimony is the more remarkable, as he was a Dominican, and inquisitor general. "Among all the sects, which still are or have been, there is not any more pernicious to the church than that of the Leonists. And this for three reasons. The first is, because it is older; for some say that it hath endured from the time of pope Sylvester; others from the time of the apostles. The second, because it is more general; for there is scarce any country wherein this sect is not. The third, because when all other sects beget horror in the hearers by the outrageousness of their blasphemies against God, this of the Leonists hath a great show of piety; because they live justly before men, and believe all things rightly concerning God, and all the articles which are contained in the creed, only they blaspheme the church of Rome and the clergy, whom the multitude of the laity is easy to believe." The credit of manam ecclesiam blasphemant et clerum; cui multitudo laicorum facilis est ad credendum. [Translated in the text.] Reiner. contra Hæret. cap. iv. p. 54. Edit. Ingolst. 1613. Usser. ibid. cap. vi. sect. xi. cap. viii. sect. i. Cave, Hist. Litt. Vol. II. ad ann. 1254. p. 302. Usher hath added other remarkable testimonies concerning the morals of the Waldenses and their followers. Pontificius quidam inquisitor [Rerum Bohem. Script. a Frehero edit. p. 231.] Leonistarum sive Waldensium mores descripturus, hujusmodi utitur præfatiunculâ: Cognoscuntur hæretica per mores et verba. Sunt enim in moribus compositi, et modesti; superbiam in vestibus non habent, &c. Miserrima profecto tempora in quibus compositi et modesti mores hæreticorum haberentur insignia. De iisdem Claudius Seysillius archiepiscopus Taurinensis; [Seysil. tract. adversus errores et sectam Waldensium, Edit. Paris. Ann. 1520. fol. 9.] Nonnihil etiam ad horum Valdensium confirmandam tolerandamque sectam confert, quod præter hæc quæ contra fidem religionemque nostram assumunt, in reliquis ferme puriorem quam cæteri Christiani vitam agunt. Non enim nisi coacti jurant, raroque nomen Dei in vanum proferunt, promissaque sua bonâ fide implent, et in paupertate pars maxima degentes, apostolicam vitam doctrinamque servare se solos protestantur: ob idque potestatem ecclesiæ apud se, velut innoxios et veros Christi discipulos, residere affirmant; pro cuius fide religioneque in egestate vivere, et a nobis persecutionem pati, pulchrum et gloriosum ducunt. Fratribus Bohemis, Waldensium soboli, non dissimile perhibuit testimonium, qui fidei ipsorum fuit inimicissimus, Jacobus Liclenstenius Dominicanus. [Citatus a Joachim Camerario de Eccles. Fratr. Bohem.] Dico (inquit) quod in moribus et vitâ boni sunt, veraces in sermone, in caritate fraternâ unanimes. Sed fides eorum est incorrigibilis et pessima, ut patuit in tractatu meo. [A certain Popish Inquisitor, (see for this the writers of the Bohemian affairs published by Freherus, p. 231.) when he is about to describe the morals of the Leonists or Waldenses, maketh use of this preamble. Heretics are known by their manners and words. In their manners they are quiet and modest. Nothing of pride appears in their dress, &c. Truly wretched were those times, wherein quiet and modest manners were to be accounted the marks of heretics. Claude Seyssel, archbishop of Turin, (in his treatise against the errors and sect of the Waldenses, in the Paris edition of 1520, and ninth leaf,) speaking of the same, hath these words. "It contributes not a little towards the establishment and toleration of the sect of the Waldenses, that excepting in these things which they take for granted against our faith and religion, in most other things they lead a purer life than other Christians. For they do not take an oath, unless compelled, and seldom pronounce the name of God in vain. They are scrupulously exact in fulfilling their promises. The greater part of them live in poverty, and profess that they alone observe the practice and doctrine of the apostles: and on that account they assert that the power of the church is lodged with them as the innocent and true disciples of Christ, for the sake of whose faith and religion they regard it honourable and glorious to live in poverty and to suffer persecution from us." James Liclenstein, a Dominican, hath given a similar testimony to the Bohemian brethren, who descended from the Waldenses; (he is quoted by Joachim Camerarius, concerning the church of the Bohemian Brethren) "I affirm," saith he, "that they are excellent in their morals and life, true in their words, of one mind in brotherly love, but their doctrines are most depraved and incorrigible, as hath been made evident in my treatise." Usser. cap. vi. sect. xv.

Thuanus as an historian is too well established to need any recommendation; and he is ¹so candid and impartial, as to distinguish between their real opinions and those heresies which were falsely imputed to them by their enemies. “Peter Valdo, a wealthy citizen of Lyons, about the year of Christ 1170, gave name to the Waldenses. He (as Guy de Perpignan, bishop of Elna, in Rousillon, who exercised the office of inquisitor against the Valdenses, hath left testified in writing) leaving his house and goods, devoted himself wholly to the profession of the Gospel, and took care to have the writings of the prophets and apostles translated into the vulgar tongue—When now in a little time he had many followers about him, he sent them forth as his disciples into all parts to propagate the Gospel—Their fixed opinions were said to be these: that the church of Rome, because she hath renounced the true faith of Christ, is the whore of Babylon, and that barren tree, which Christ himself hath cursed, and commanded to be rooted up; therefore we must by no means obey the pope, and the bishops who cherish his errors: that the monastic life is the sink of the church, and an hellish institution; its vows are vain, and subservient only to the filthy love of boys: the orders of the presbytery are the marks of the great beast, which is mentioned in the Apocalypse; the fire of purgatory, the sacrifice of the mass, the feast of the dedications of churches, the worship of saints, and propitiations for the dead, are inventions of Satan. To these, the principal and certain heads of their doctrine, others were feigned and added, concerning marriage, the resurrection, the state of the soul after death, and concerning meats.” Mezeray, the celebrated historiographer of France, is short, but full to our purpose; for ²he saith, that “they had almost the same opinions as those who are now called Calvinists.” It cannot be objected that this is protestant evidence, for they were all three members of the church of Rome.

In the thirteenth century the Waldenses and Albigenes had spread and prevailed so far, and were prevailing still farther, that the pope thought it necessary to exert his utmost efforts to suppress them. For this purpose the first crusade was proclaimed of Christians against Christians, and the office of inquisition was first erected, the one to subdue their bodies, the other to enslave their souls. It is enough to make the blood run cold, to read of the horrid murders and devastations of this time, how many of these poor innocent Christians were sacrificed to the blind fury and malice of their enemies. It is ¹computed that in France alone were slain a million: and what was the consequence of these shocking barbarities? No writer can better inform us than ²the wise and moderate historian Thuanus. "Against the Waldenses," saith he, "when exquisite punishments availed little, and the evil was exasperated by the remedy which had been unseasonably applied, and their number increased daily, at length complete armies were raised; and a war of no less weight than what our people had before waged against the Saracens, was decreed against them: the event of which was, that they were rather slain, put to flight, spoiled every where of their goods and dignities, and dispersed here and there, than that, convinced of their error, they repented. So that they who had at first defended themselves by arms, at last overcome by arms fled into Provence and the neighbouring Alps of the French territory, and found a shelter for their life and doctrine in those places. Part withdrew into Calabria, and continued there a long while, even to the pontificate of Pius IV. Part passed into Germany, and fixed their abode among the Bohemians, and in Poland and Livonia. Others turning to the west obtained refuge in Britain." But there were others in this age who proceeded not so far as the Waldenses and Albigenses, and yet opposed the church of Rome in many respects. At the beginning of this century ³Almeric and his disciples were charged with several heresies, and were condemned by the second council of Paris, in the year 1209. They might possibly hold some heterodox opinions, but their great offence was their denying the change of the substance of the bread and wine in the eucharist, their opposing the worship of saints, images, and relics, and their affirming that the pope was Antichrist, that Rome was

¹ Petrus Valdus locuples civis Lugdunensis, anno Christi circiter MCLXX Valdensibus nomen dedit. Is (ut monumentis testatum reliquit Vidus Perpinianus præsul Elnensis, qui quæsitōis in Valdenses munus exercuit) domo ac bonis relictis totum se evangelicæ professioni devoverat, et prophetarum atque apostolorum scripta populari linguâ vertenda curaverat—Cum jam multos sectatores exiguo tempore circa se haberet, eos tanquam discipulos ad evangelium promulgandum in omnes partes ablegat—Eorum hæc dogmata ferebantur; Ecclesiam Romanam, quoniam veræ Christi fidei renunciaverit, Babyloniam meretricem esse, et arborem illam sterilem, quam ipse Christus diris devovit et revellendam esse præcepit; proinde minime parendum pontifici, et episcopis, qui ejus errores fovēt: monasticam vitam ecclesiæ sentinam ac Plutonium esse; vana illius vota, nec nisi fœdis puerorum amoribus servientia: presbyterii ordines magnæ bestię, quæ in Apocalypsi commemoratur, notas esse: ignem purgatorium, solemne sacrum, templorum encænias, cultum sanctorum, ac pro mortuis propitiatorium, Satanæ commenta esse. His præcipuis ac certis eorum doctrinæ capitibus alia afficta, de conjugio, resurrectione, animæ statu post mortem, et de cibis. [Translated in the text.] Thuani Hist. Lib. vi. sect. xvi. Vol. I. p. 221. Edit. Buckley.

² — avoient à peu près les mesmes opinions que ceux qu'on nomme aujourd'huy Calvinistes. [Translated in the text.] Abrégé Chronol. Philippe Auguste, p. 657. Edit. Amsterdam, 1674.

¹ Vide Mede in Apoc. p. 503.

² Contra quos [Valdenses] cum exquisita supplicia parum proficerent, et remedio, quod intempestive adhibitum fuerat, malum exacerbaretur, numerusque eorum in dies cresceret, justi tandem exercitus conscripti sunt: nec minoris molis bellum quam quod antea nostri adversus Saracenos gesserant, contra eosdem decretum est: cujus is exitus fuit, ut potius cæsi, fugati, bonis ac dignitatibus ubique spoliati atque huc illuc dissipati sint, quam erroris convicti resipuerint. Itaque qui armis se initio tutati fuerant, postremo armis victi in Provinciam apud nos et Gallicæ ditionis Alpes vicinas confugerunt, latebrasque vitæ ac doctrinæ suæ iis in locis reppererunt. Pars in Calabriam concessit, in eaque diu, atque adeo usque ad Pii IV. pontificatum, se continuit. Pars in Germaniam transiit, atque apud Bohemos, et in Poloniâ et Livoniâ, larem fixit. Alii ad occidentem versi in Britannîâ per-fugium habuerunt. [Translated in the text.] Thuani Præfat. ad Henric. IV. p. 7. Edit. Buckley.

³ Dupin. xiii. Siècle, chap. viii. Spanhem. Hist. Christian. Sæc. xiii. cap. ix. sect. ii.

Babylon, and that the prelates were the members and ministers of Antichrist: so that these differed little from the Waldenses and Albigenses. William of St. Amour, a doctor of the Sorbonne, ¹ wrote a treatise of the perils of the last times, wherein he applied that prophecy of St. Paul, (2 Tim. iii. 1.) This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come, to the mendicant orders and preachers of his time; and it was so severe a satire upon the Dominicans, that pope Alexander IV. condemned it, as containing perverse sentiments, contrary to the power and authority of the Roman pontiff and of the other bishops, and in fine, as a book capable of causing great scandals and troubles in the church. Robert Grosthead or Greathead, bishop of Lincoln ², in his speeches and writings inveighed bitterly against the corruption and superstition, the lewdness and wickedness of the clergy in general, and the rapacity and avarice, the tyranny and antichristianism of pope Innocent IV. in particular. He was also no less a friend to ³ civil than to religious liberty, and ordered all the violaters of Magna Charta, whosoever and wheresoever they were within his diocese, to be excommunicated. Matthew Paris, a contemporary historian, hath ⁴ related the substance of his dying discourses, wherein he proves the pope to be a heretic, and deservedly to be called Antichrist: and concludes with giving him the character of “refuter of the pope, reprover of prelates, corrector of monks, director of priests, instructor of the clergy, and in short the hammer to beat down the Romans and to bring them into contempt.” It is no marvel that such a man was excommunicated; but he ⁵ little regarded the censure, and appealed from the court of Innocent to the tribunal of Christ. Not to mention others, Matthew Paris himself hath painted in the most lively colours the corruptions and abominations of the see of Rome, the tyranny, superstition, simony, and wickedness of the popes and clergy. A protestant historian could not more freely lash and expose the vices of the times, than he did who was a monk of St. Albans.

As they are not all Israel which are of Israel, so neither have all the members of the Romish church believed all her doctrines. Dante and Petrarch, the former of whom died, and the latter was born as well as died, in the fourteenth century, were ⁶ severe satirists

¹ Hist. Ecclesiast. Magdeburg. Cent. xiii. cap. x. p. 588. Edit. Basil. 1624. Dupin, ibid. chap. vii. Spanhem. ibid. cap. ix. sect. i.

² Vide Cent. Magdeburg. Balæum, Dupin, Cave, Tanner, &c.

³ Matt. Paris ad ann. 1253, p. 874. Edit. Wats. 1646.

⁴ Matt. Paris, ibid. Papæ redargutor, prælatorum corrector, monachorum corrector, presbyterorum director, clericorum instructor—Romanorum malleus et contemptor. [Translated in the text.] P. 876.

⁵ Excommunicatus appellavit a curiâ Innocentii ad tribunal Christi. [When excommunicated, he appealed from the court of Innocent to the tribunal of Christ.] Henr. de Knyghton, Lib. ii. inter Scriptores x. p. 2436.

⁶ Spanhemii Hist. Christian. Sæc. xiv. cap. v. sect. viii. et ix. Robertus Gerius et Henricus Wharton in Appendice ad Cave, Hist. Lit. p. 9 et 50.

upon the times, and wrote freely against the temporal dominion of the pope and the corruptions of the clergy, treating Rome as Babylon, and the pope as Antichrist: and they probably did more hurt to the court and church of Rome by their wit and raillery, than others by invective and declamation. Peter Fitz Cassiodor, whether a fictitious or a real person, ¹ addressed a remonstrance to the church of England against the tyranny, avarice, and exactions of the court of Rome, advising and exhorting the English to shake off the Roman yoke from their necks. Michael Cæsenas and William Occam ² exposed the various errors and heresies of John XXII. to the number of seventy-seven; and secure in the protection of the emperor, they set at nought the thunder of the pope's excommunications. Marsilius, a famous lawyer of Padua ³, wrote a treatise entitled The defender of peace, wherein he advanced the power of the emperor above that of the pope in things spiritual as well as temporal; painted in the strongest colours the pride, ambition, and luxury of the court of Rome: and abundantly proved that the pope had not by divine right the least authority or pre-eminence over other bishops. It is no wonder that the author and his book were condemned together. But there were other and better witnesses than these in this age. It was shown before from Thuanus, that the Waldenses and Albigenses being persecuted in their own country, fled for refuge into foreign nations, some into Germany, and some into Britain. In Germany they grew and multiplied so fast, notwithstanding the rage and violence of croisaders and inquisitors, that at the beginning of this century ⁴ it is computed that there were eighty thousand of them in Bohemia, Austria, and the neighbouring territories; and they pertinaciously defended their doctrines even unto death. Among a variety of other names they were called Lollards, from ⁵ one Walter Lollard, who preached in Germany about the year 1315, against the authority of the pope, the intercession of saints, the mass, extreme unction, and other ceremonies and superstitions of the church of Rome; and was burned alive at Cologne in the year 1322. In England also they were denominated Lollards, though there was a man more worthy to have given name to the sect, the deservedly famous John Wickliff, the honour of his own and the admiration of all succeeding times. Rector only of Lutterworth, he ⁶ filled all England, and almost all Europe, with his doctrine. He began to grow famous about the year 1360, by preaching and writing against the superstitions of the age; the tyranny of the pope, the erroneous doctrines and vicious lives of the

¹ Appendix ad Cave, p. 10. Collier's Ecclesiast. Hist. B. v. p. 502, &c.

² H. Wharton in Append. ad Cave, p. 10 et 28. Dupin xiv. Siècle, chap. v.

³ Wharton, ibid. p. 26, 27. Dupin, ibid. chap. v. et viii.

⁴ Bzovius ad Ann. 1315. Spanhem. ibid. cap. vi. sect. i. Dupin, ibid. chap. viii.

⁵ Dupin, ibid. Hoffmanni Lex. Spelman. Skinner, &c.

⁶ H. Wharton in Append. ad Cave, p. 60, &c. Spanhem. ibid. cap. vi. Leland, Bale, Tanner, &c. &c.

monks and the clergy; and especially by defending the royal and ecclesiastical jurisdiction against the usurpations of the popes and mendicant friars. The more he opposed, the more reason he found for opposition. He translated the canonical Scriptures into the English language, and wrote comments upon them. He demonstrated the antichristianity of popery, and the abomination of desolation in the temple of God. He asserted the one true sacrifice of Christ, and opposed the sacrifice of the mass, transubstantiation, the adoration of the host, the seven sacraments, purgatory, prayers for the dead, the worship of saints and images, and in short all the principal corruptions and superstitions of the church of Rome. His success too was greater than he could have expected. The princes, the people, the University of Oxford, many even of the clergy, favoured and supported him, and embraced his opinions. His enemies have charged him with several heterodox notions; but many years ago was published An apology for John Wickliff, showing his conformity with the now church of England, &c. collected out of his written works in the Bodleian library, by Thomas James, keeper of the same at Oxford, 1608. This truly great and good man died of a palsy the last day of the year 1387, but his doctrines did not die with him. His books were read in the public schools and colleges at Oxford, and were recommended to the diligent perusal of each student in the university, till they were condemned and prohibited by the council of Constance in the next century. His followers, the Lollards, in the year 1395, presented ¹a remonstrance to the parliament, which contained these with other articles; that when the church of England began to mismanage her temporalities in conformity to the precedents of Rome, faith, hope, and charity began to take their leave of her communion; that the English priesthood derived from Rome, and pretending to a power superior to angels, is not that priesthood which Christ settled upon his apostles; that enjoining celibacy to the clergy was the occasion of scandalous irregularities in the church; that the pretended miracle of transubstantiation runs the greatest part of Christendom upon idolatry; that exorcisms and benedictions pronounced over wine, bread, water, the mitre, the cross, &c. have more of necromancy than religion in them; that prayer made for the dead is a wrong ground for charity and religious endowments; that pilgrimages, prayers, and offerings made to images and crosses, are near of kin to idolatry; that auricular confession makes the priests proud, lets them into the secrets of the penitent, gives opportunities for intrigues, and is attended with scandalous consequences, as well as the doctrine of indulgences; that the vow of single life undertaken by women in the church of England is the occasion of horrible disorders, &c. Some false tenets might be contained in the same remonstrance; for alas, who is there that holdeth the truth without any mixture or alloy of error? They denied the infallibility of the pope, and they could not well pretend to be infallible themselves.

¹ Walsingham, Stow, Spelman, Collier's Eccles. Hist. B. vi. p. 596, &c.

Two things contributed much to the revival of learning in the fifteenth century, the Greeks flying with their books from Constantinople, which the Turks had taken, and the invention of printing. As learning more revived, so the truth prevailed more; and the more the truth prevailed, the fury of persecution increased in proportion. Wickliff himself had been permitted to die in peace; but after his death¹ his doctrines were condemned, his books were burnt, his very body was dug up and burnt too, by a decree of the council of Constance, and the command of pope Martin V., executed by Richard Fleming, bishop of Lincoln. His followers, however, were not discouraged, and many of them witnessed a good confession even unto death. William Sawtre, parish priest of St. Osith, in London,² hath the honour of being the first who was burnt for heresy in England; which was done in the reign of Henry IV. at the beginning of this century. A few years afterwards Thomas Badby³ was convicted of heresy, and ordered also to be burnt in Smithfield. Henry prince of Wales was present at his execution: and the poor man showing very sensible signs of the torment he endured, the prince, out of compassion, commanded the fire to be removed, and promised him pardon, and a pension for life, provided he would retract his errors. But Badby being come to himself, resolutely rejected this offer; he chose rather to die with a good, than to live with an evil conscience; and so the fire was kindled again, and he was consumed to ashes. In the next reign Sir John Oldcastle, baron of Cobham,⁴ was prosecuted for being the principal patron and abettor of the Lollards. Being examined before the archbishop of Canterbury, he declared against transubstantiation, penances, the worshipping of the cross, the power of the keys; and asserted that the pope was Antichrist, and the head of that body, the bishops were the members, and the friars the hinder parts of the antichristian society. He was therefore pronounced a heretic convict, and delivered over to the secular power. But before the day fixed for his execution he escaped out of prison; and being charged by his enemies with endeavouring to make an insurrection, he was outlawed for high treason: and being taken afterwards, he was hanged as a traitor, and burnt hanging as a heretic, being the first nobleman in England who suffered death for the cause of religion. It was the great blot and stain of Henry the fifth's reign and character, that while he was carrying the glory of the English arms abroad, he was still persecuting the poor Lollards

¹ Balæi Script. Brit. Cent. vi. No. i. H. Wharton in Append. ad Cave, p. 63. Dupin, Collier, Tanner, &c.

² Fox, Burnet's Hist. of the Ref. B. i. Collier's Eccles. Hist. B. vii. p. 617, &c. Rapin, &c.

³ Walsingham, Rapin, Collier, ibid. p. 629, &c. &c.

⁴ Walsingham, Rapin, Collier, ibid. p. 632, &c. &c.

at home. But notwithstanding these persecutions, and the severest laws and proclamations against them, their numbers still increased, not only among the people, but even in parliament, not only in England, but even in foreign countries, and especially in Bohemia. For there ¹ John Huss, and Jerome of Prague, having received Wickliff's books, advanced and propagated the same doctrines; for which they were both condemned to the flames, and suffered death with the most heroic fortitude. It was a most unjust sentence, contrary to all faith and the solemn engagement of a safe conduct, and drew after it the most fatal consequences. For out of their ashes a civil war was kindled; the Bohemians revolted against the emperor, and maintained and defended their opinions by arms as well as by arguments. What the opinions generally received among the Bohemians were, we may learn with some exactness from one, who had opportunities of being well informed by living and conversing some time among them, and was far from being prejudiced in their favour, Æneas Sylvius, who being afterwards chosen pope, assumed the name of Pius II. These then were ² their opinions according to

¹ Spanhemii Hist. Christian. Sæc. xv. cap. vi. et vii. Dupin, Siècle xv. chap. vii. Lénfant. Hist. Conc. Pis. et Constance.

² Usser. de Christian. Eccles. successionem et statu, cap. vi. sect. xvi. Allix's Remarks upon the ancient church of Piedmont, chap. xxii. Æneas Sylv. Hist. Bohem. cap. xxxv.

Romanum præsulem reliquis episcopis parem esse.

Inter sacerdotes nullum discrimen; presbyterum non dignitatem, sed vitæ meritum efficere potiorum.

Animas e corporibus excedentes, aut in æternas e vestigio pœnas mergi, aut perpetua consequi gaudia.

Purgatorium ignem nullum inveniri.

Vanum esse orare pro mortuis, et avaritiæ sacerdotalis inventum.

Dei et sanctorum imagines delendas.

Aquarum palmarumque benedictiones irridendas.

Mendicantium religiones malos dæmonas invenisse.

Sacerdotes pauperes esse debere, solâ contentos eleemosynâ.

Liberam cuique prædicationem verbi Dei patere.

Nullum capitale peccatum, quantumvis majoris mali vitandi gratiâ, tolerandum.

Qui mortalis culpæ reus sit eum neque seculari, neque ecclesiasticâ dignitate potiri, neque parendum ei.

Confirmationem, quam chrismate pontifices inducunt, et extremam unctionem inter ecclesiæ sacramenta minimè contineri.

Auricularem confessionem nugacem esse; sufficere sua quemque Deo in cubili suo conqueri peccata.

Baptisma fluvialis undæ, nullâ interjectâ sacri olei mixturâ recipiendum.

Cœmiteriorum inanem usum, quæstûs causâ repertum; quâcunque tegantur tellure humana corpora, nihil distare.

Templum Dei latè patentis ipsum mundum esse; coarctare majestatem ejus, qui ecclesiâs, monasteria, oratoriaque construunt, tanquam propitiis in eis divina bonitas inveniantur.

Sacerdotales vestes, altarium ornamenta, pallas, corporalia, calices, patinas, vasaque hujusmodi nil habere momenti.

Sacerdotem quocunque loco, quocunque tempore sacrum Christi corpus conficere posse, petentibusque ministrare; sufficere, si verba sacramentalia tantum dicat.

Suffragia sanctorum in cœlis cum Christo regnantium frustra impetrari, quæ juvare non possunt.

In canonicis horis cantandis dicendisque frustra tempus teri.

Nullâ die ab opere cessandum, nisi quæ Dominica nunc appellatur.

Celebritates sanctorum prorsus rejiciendas.

Jejunia quoque ab ecclesiis instituta, nihil inesse meriti. [Translated in the text.]

him, who, we may be certain, would not represent them better, if he would not represent them worse, than they were in reality.

“ The pope of Rome is equal with other bishops.

“ Among priests there is no difference; not dignity, but merit, giveth the preference.

“ Souls departing out of bodies, are immediately either plunged into eternal punishments, or attain eternal joys.

“ There is no purgatory fire.

“ It is in vain to pray for the dead, and an invention of priestly covetousness.

“ The images of God and the saints ought to be destroyed.

“ The blessing of water and palm branches is ridiculous.

“ The religion of the mendicants was invented by evil dæmons.

“ Priests ought to be poor, content with alms alone.

“ Every one hath free liberty to preach the word of God.

“ No capital sin ought to be tolerated, although for the sake of avoiding a greater evil.

“ He who is guilty of mortal sin ought not to enjoy any secular or ecclesiastical dignity, nor is he to be obeyed.

“ Confirmation, which the bishops celebrate with anointing, and extreme unction, are by no means contained among the sacraments of the church.

“ Auricular confession is trifling; it is sufficient for every one in his chamber to confess his sins unto God.

“ Baptism ought to be celebrated without any mixture of holy oil.

“ The use of church-yards is vain, invented for the sake of gain; in whatsoever ground human bodies are buried, it maketh no difference.

“ The temple of the great God is the whole world; they confine his majesty, who build churches, monasteries, and oratories, as if the divine goodness would be found more propitious in them.

“ Sacerdotal vestments, ornaments of altars, palls, corporals, chalices, patins, and vessels of this sort are of no moment.

“ A priest in any place, at any time, can consecrate the body of Christ, and administer it to those who desire it; it is sufficient, if he repeat only the sacramental words.

“ The suffrages of the saints reigning with Christ in heaven are implored in vain, forasmuch as they cannot help us.

“ The time is consumed in vain in singing and saying the canonical hours.

“ We should cease from work on no day, except that which is now called the Lord's day.

“ The festivals of saints are altogether to be rejected.

“ The fasts also instituted by the church have no merit in them.”

These were the opinions of the Bohemians, or Hussites, for which they fought as well as disputed against the pope and emperor. At first they were victorious under the conduct of the famous John

Ziska; and when they were beaten at last, they retired into the mountains and caves, where they continued, distinguished by the name of the Bohemian brethren, till the time of the Reformation. Even in the bosom of the church of Rome there were many good men, who called aloud for a reformation in faith as well as in morals, in doctrine as well as in discipline. One instance is more particularly worthy of our attention. Jeronimo Savonarola ¹ was a Dominican, celebrated in all Italy, and especially in Florence, for the great purity and strictness of his life and doctrine. He preached freely against the vices of the age, the luxury, avarice, and debauchery of the Roman clergy in general, and the tyranny and wickedness in particular of pope Alexander VI., and his son, Cæsar Borgia. In his discourses, sermons, and writings, he pressed the necessity of holding a general council, and of making a general reformation: and he wrote particularly a treatise, ² entitled The lamentation of the spouse of Christ against false Apostles, or an exhortation to the faithful that they would pray unto the Lord for the renovation of the church. But what was the fruit and consequence of all his pious zeal? He was excommunicated, he was imprisoned, he was tortured, he was burnt; which he suffered with all possible constancy on the 23d of May, 1498, and in the 46th year of his age. All persons of any note or eminence bear a double character in the world, and so doth Savonarola, his admirers extolling him as the best of men and the prophet of God, his enemies reviling him as the worst of impostors and hypocrites; but if his works may speak for him, they are, in the ³ opinion of Dupin, “full of grace and maxims of piety; he speaketh freely there against the vices, and teacheth the most pure and the most exalted morality.”

We are now arrived at the sixteenth century, sæculum reformatum, as it hath been called, or the age of reformation. The materials had in great measure been collected, and the foundations had been laid deep before, but this age had the happiness of seeing the superstructure raised and completed. All the Christian world almost had groaned earnestly for a reformation: and pope Adrian himself ⁴ acknowledged the necessity of it, and promised to begin with reforming the court of Rome, as the source and origin of evil. Erasmus and others led the way; and Luther began ⁵ publicly to preach against the pope's indulgences in the year 1517, which is

¹ Spanhem. ibid. cap. v. sect. iii. H. Wharton in Append. ad Cave, p. 198, &c. Guicciardin. B. iii. toward the end. Phil. de Comines, B. viii. chap. xix. Dupin, ibid. chap. iv. Bayle's Dict. &c. &c.

² Lamentatio Christi sponsæ adversus Pseudapostolos, sive exhortatio ad fideles, ut precentur Dominum pro renovatione ecclesiæ. [Translated in the text.] Venet. 1537. et cum vitâ Savonarolæ, Paris, 1674. 8vo. Wharton, ibid.

³ Les ouvrages de cet auteur sont pleins d'onction et de maximes de piété; il y parle librement contre les vices, et y enseigne la morale la plus pure et la plus relevée. [Translated in the text.] Dupin, ibid.

⁴ Sleidan's Hist. of the Reformation, B. iv. Father Paul's Hist. of the Council of Trent, B. i. sect. lx.

⁵ Sleidan, B. i. Father Paul, B. i. sect. 18, &c.

usually reckoned the æra of the Reformation. So that during all the dark ages of popery, from the first rise of the beast down to the Reformation, there have constantly been some true and faithful witnesses of Jesus Christ, who, though they may have fallen into some errors and mistakes, (as indeed who is altogether free from them?) yet it may charitably be presumed, held none which are contrary to the fundamentals of the Christian faith, and destructive of salvation. Many more there were without doubt than have come to our knowledge; many more might have been collected, and this deduction drawn out into a greater length: but I have studied brevity as much as I well could: and they who are desirous of seeing a larger and more particular account of the witnesses may find it in ¹ Flaccius Illyricus, in the Centuriators of Magdeburg, in Usher, in Allix, in Spanheim, and other authors. Here only some of the principal instances are selected; but this deduction, short and defective as it is, evidently demonstrates, however, that there hath not been that uninterrupted union and harmony, which the members of the church of Rome pretend and boast to have been before the Reformation: and at the same time it plainly evinces, that they betray great ignorance, as well as impertinence, in asking the question, Where was your religion before Luther? Our religion, we see, was in the hearts and lives of many faithful witnesses; but it is sufficient, if it was no where else, that it was always in the Bible. “The Bible,” as Chillingworth ² says, “the Bible only is the religion of Protestants.”

15 And the seventh angel sounded, and there were great voices in heaven, saying, The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Christ, and he shall reign for ever and ever.

16 And the four and twenty elders which sat before God on their seats, fell upon their faces and worshipped God.

17 Saying, We give thee thanks, O Lord God Almighty, which art and wast, and art to come; because thou hast taken to thee thy great power, and hast reigned.

18 And the nations were angry, and thy wrath is come, and the time of the dead that they should be judged, and that thou shouldst give reward unto thy servants the prophets, and to the saints, and them that fear thy name, small and great, and shouldst destroy them which destroy the earth.

We are now come to the seventh and last trumpet, or the third woe-trumpet, and the seventh trumpet as well as all the trumpets being comprehended under the seventh seal, and the seventh seal and all the seals being constituent parts or members of the sealed book, it is evident that the seventh trumpet cannot any way belong to the little open book, but is plainly distinct from it, the little book being no more than an appendage to the sixth trumpet, and the contents all comprehended under it, or at least ending with it. The forty and two months of the Gentiles treading the holy city under foot, and the 1260 days of the witnesses prophesying in sack-cloth are 1260 synchronical years, and terminate at the same time with the fall of the Othman empire, or the end of the sixth trumpet or second woe-trumpet. And when the second woe is past, it is said (xi. 14.) behold, the third woe cometh quickly. At the sounding of the seventh trumpet (ver. 15.) the third woe commenceth, which is rather implied than expressed, as it will be described more fully hereafter. The third woe brought on the inhabitants of the earth is the ruin and downfall of the Antichristian kingdom: and then, and not till then, according to the heavenly chorus, the kingdoms of this world will become the kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ, and he shall reign for ever and ever. St. John is rapt and hurried away, as it were, to a view of the happy millenium, without considering the steps preceding and conducting to it. At the same time the four and twenty elders, or the ministers of the church, (ver. 16—18.) are represented as praising and glorifying God for manifesting his power and kingdom more than he had done before; and give likewise an intimation of some succeeding events, as the anger of the nations, Gog and Magog, (xx. 8.) and the wrath of God, displayed in their destruction, (xx. 9.) and the judging of the dead, or the general judgment, (xx. 12.) and the rewarding of all the good, small and great, as well as the punishing of the wicked. Here we have only a summary account of the circumstances and occurrences of the seventh trumpet, but the particulars will be dilated and enlarged upon hereafter.

¹ Matthias Flaccius in Catalogo testium veritatis. Hist. Ecclesiast. Magdeburg. Usher de Christian. Eccles. successionem et statu. Allix's Remarks upon the ancient church of Piedmont, and the ancient churches of the Albigenses. Frederici Spanhemii Hist. Christiana et Hist. Imaginum.

² Chillingworth's Religion of Protestants, chap. vi. sect. 56.

And thus are we arrived at the consummation of all things, through a series of prophecies extending from the apostles' days to the end of the world. It is this series which has been our clue to conduct us in our interpretation of these prophecies: and though some of them may be dark and obscure, considered in themselves, yet they receive light and illustration from others preceding and following. All together they are as it were a chain of prophecies, whereof one link depends on, and supports another. If any parts remain yet obscure and unsatisfactory, they may perhaps be cleared up by what the apostle himself hath added by way of explanation.

XXV.

AN ANALYSIS OF THE REVELATION.

PART II.

MOST of the best commentators divide the Apocalypse or Revelation into two parts, the book, βιβλίον, sealed with seven seals, and the little book, βιβλαρίδιον, as it is called several times. But it happens unluckily, that according to their division the lesser book is made to contain as much or more than the larger; whereas in truth the little book is nothing more than a part of the sealed book, and is added as a codicil or appendix to it. If we were to divide the Revelation, as they would have it divided, into two parts, the former ending with chap. ix., and the latter beginning with chap. x., the whole frame of the book would be disjointed, and things would be separated, which are plainly connected together and dependent upon one another. The former part, as they agree, comprehends the book sealed with seven seals, which are all opened in order; but the seventh seal consists of the seven trumpets, and of the seven trumpets the three last are distinguished by the name of the three woe trumpets; so that the seven trumpets, as well as the seven seals, all belong properly to the former part. Whereas if we were to follow the other division, the trumpets would be divided, the three last trumpets would be divided from each other, the sixth trumpet itself would be divided, would begin in the former part of the book, and end in the latter, and the seventh trumpet would remain separated from the rest, which would be a strange interruption of the series and order of the prophecies, and greatly disturb and confound the course of events. The former part, instead of closing with the seventh trumpet, would then break off in the middle of the sixth trumpet; the latter part would then commence under the sixth trumpet, and after that would follow the seventh and last trumpet, and after this the general subject of the Revelation would be resumed from the beginning of the Christian æra, which instead of coming in after so many events posterior in point of time, ought certainly to be the beginning of the latter part. For we would also divide the Revelation into two parts, or rather the book so divides itself. For the former part proceeds, as we have seen, in a regular and successive series from the apostle's days to the consummation of all things. Nothing can be added, but it must fall some where or other within the compass of this period; it must in some measure be a resumption of the same subjects, and this latter part may most properly be considered as an enlargement and illustration of the former. Several things, which were only touched upon, and delivered in dark hints before, require to be more copiously handled, and placed in a stronger light. It was said that the beast should make war against the witnesses, and overcome them; but who or what the beast is we may reasonably conjecture indeed, but the apostle himself will more surely explain. The transactions of the seventh trumpet are all summed up and comprised in a few verses, but we shall see the particulars branched out and enlarged into as many chapters. In short, this latter part is designed as a supplement to the former, to complete what was deficient, to explain what was dubious, to illustrate what was obscure; and as the former described more the destinies of the Roman empire, so this latter relates more to the fates of the Christian church.

19 And the temple of God was opened in heaven, and there was seen in his temple the ark of his testament; and there were lightnings, and voices, and thunderings, and an earthquake, and great hail.

This last verse of the eleventh chapter, in my opinion, should have been made the first verse of the twelfth chapter, for it appears to be the beginning of a new subject. It is somewhat like the beginning of Isaiah's vision; (vi. 1.) I saw the Lord sitting upon a throne (the ark), high and lifted up, and his train filled the temple. It is somewhat like the beginning of St. John's prophetic visions; (iv. 1, 2.) I looked, and behold, a door was opened in heaven; and behold, a throne was set in heaven, and one sat on the throne. This is much in the same spirit: And the temple of God was opened in heaven, and there was seen in his temple the ark of his testament; that is, more open discoveries were now made, and the mystery of God was revealed to the prophet. Lightnings, and voices, and thunderings, and an earthquake, and great hail, are the usual concomitants and attendants of the Divine presence, and especially at the giving of new laws and new revelations. So at Mount Sinai (Exod. xx. 16, &c.) there were thunders, and lightnings, and a thick cloud upon the mount, and the voice of the trumpet exceeding loud, and the whole mount quaked greatly. So likewise in this very book of the Apocalypse, before the opening of the seven seals, (iv. 5.) there were lightnings, and thunderings, and voices. So again before the sounding of the seven trumpets, (viii. 5.) there were voices, and thunderings, and lightnings, and an earthquake: and with as much reason they are made in this place the signs and preludes of the revelations and judgments which are to follow. It is no just objection, that a new subject is supposed to begin with the conjunction and, for this is frequent in the style of the Hebrews; some books, as Numbers, Joshua, the two books of Samuel, and others, begin with Vau or and; and the same objection would hold equally against beginning the division with the first verse of the next chapter.

CHAPTER XII.

1 AND there appeared a great wonder in heaven, a woman clothed with the sun, and the moon under her feet, and upon her head a crown of twelve stars :

2 And she being with child, cried, travailing in birth, and pained to be delivered.

3 And there appeared another wonder in heaven, and behold, a great red dragon, having seven heads, and ten horns, and seven crowns upon his heads.

4 And his tail drew the third part of the stars of heaven, and did cast them to the earth; and the dragon stood before the woman which was ready to be delivered, for to devour her child as soon as it was born.

5 And she brought forth a man-child, who was to rule all nations with a rod of iron; and her child was caught up unto God, and to his throne.

6 And the woman fled into the wilderness, where she hath a place prepared of God, that they should feed her there a thousand two hundred and threescore days.

St. John resumes his subject from the beginning, and represents the church (ver. 1, 2.) as a woman, and a mother bearing children unto Christ. She is clothed by the sun, invested with the rays of Jesus Christ the sun of righteousness; having the moon, the ¹ Jewish new-moons and festivals as well as all sublunary things, under her feet, and upon her head a crown of twelve stars, an emblem of her being under the light and guidance of the twelve apostles. And she being with child, cried, travailing in birth, and pained to be delivered. St. Paul hath made use of the same metaphor, and applied it to his preaching and propagating of the Gospel in the midst of tribulation and persecution; (Gal. iv. 19.) My little children of whom I travail in birth again, until Christ be formed in you. But the words of St. John are much stronger, and more emphatically express the pangs, and struggles, and torments, which the church endured from the first publication of the Gospel to the time of Constantine the Great, when she was in some measure eased of her pains, and brought forth a deliverer. Mr. Whiston carries the comparison farther. (Essay on the Revelation, Part iii. Vision 3.) “For as the time of gestation from the conception to the birth in women with child is known to be forty weeks, or two hundred and eighty days, so it is as well known, that from the first rise of our Saviour’s kingdom at his resurrection and ascension, A.D. 33, till the famous proclamation and edict, for the universal liberty and advancement of Christianity by Constantine and Licinius, A.D. 313, which put an end to the pangs of birth in the heaviest persecution that ever was then known, was exactly two hundred and eighty years," reckoning according to the prophetic account a day for a year. At the same time there appeared (ver. 3.) a great dragon; which is the well known sign or symbol of the devil and Satan, and of his agents and instruments. We find the kings and people of Egypt, who were the great persecutors of the primitive church of Israel, distinguished by this title in several places of the Old Testament: (Psalm lxxiv. 13. Isa. li. 9. Ezek. xxix. 3.) and with as much reason and propriety may the people and emperors of Rome, who were the great persecutors of the primitive church of Christ, be called by the same name, as they were actuated by the same principle. For that the Roman empire was here figured, the characters and attributes of the dragon plainly evince. He is a great red dragon; and purple or scarlet was the distinguishing colour of the Roman emperors, consuls, and generals; as it hath been since of the popes and cardinals. His seven heads, as the angel afterwards (xvii. 9, 10.) explains the vision, allude to the seven mountains upon which Rome was built, and to the seven forms of government, which successively prevailed there. His ten horns typify the ten kingdoms, into which the Roman empire was divided; and the seven crowns upon his heads denote, that at this time the imperial power was in Rome, the high city, as Propertius¹ describes it, seated on seven hills, which presides over the whole world. His tail also (ver. 4.) drew the third part of the stars of heaven, and did cast them to the earth: that is, he subjected the third part of the princes and potentates of the earth: and the Roman empire, as we have seen before, is represented as the third part of the world. He stood before the woman, which was ready to be delivered, for to devour her child as soon as it was born: and the Roman emperors and magistrates kept a jealous watchful eye over the Christians from the beginning. As Pharaoh laid snares for the male children of the Hebrews, and Herod for the infant Christ, the son of Mary; so did the Roman dragon for the mystic Christ, the son of the church, that he might destroy him even in his infancy. But notwithstanding the jealousy and envy of the Romans, the Gospel was widely diffused and propagated, and the church brought many children unto Christ, and in time such as were promoted to the empire. She brought forth a man-child, who was to rule all nations with a rod of iron, (ver. 5.) It was predicted, that Christ should rule over the nations, (Psalm ii. 9.) Thou shalt break them with a rod of iron, thou shalt dash them in pieces like a potter's vessel: but Christ, who is himself invisible in the heavens, ruleth visibly in Christian magistrates, princes, and emperors. It was therefore promised before to Christians in general, (ii. 26, 27.)

¹ A learned correspondent observes, that the Jewish religion is aptly compared to the moon, as its light is not its own, but furnished by the Christian religion, to which it relates, and wherein its types are accomplished.

¹ Septem urbs alta jugis, toti quæ præsidet orbi. [Translated in the text.] Propert. Lib. iii. El. xi. ver. 57.

He that overcometh, and keepeth my works unto the end, to him will I give power over the nations, (And he shall rule them with a rod of iron; as the vessels of a potter shall they be broken to shivers) even as I received of my Father. But it should seem that Constantine was here particularly intended, for whose life ¹ the dragon Galerius laid many snares, but he providentially escaped them all; and notwithstanding all opposition, was caught up unto the throne of God, was not only secured by the divine protection, but was advanced to the imperial throne, called the throne of God, for (Rom. xiii. 1.) there is no power but of God; the powers that be, are ordained of God. He too ruled all nations with a rod of iron; for he had not only the Romans, who before had persecuted the church, under his dominion, but also ² subdued the Scythians, Sarmatians, and other barbarous nations, who had never before been subject to the Roman empire: and as the learned ³ Spanheim informs us, there are still extant medals and coins of his with these inscriptions, the subduer of the barbarous nations, the conqueror of all nations, every where a conqueror, and the like. What is added (ver. 6.) of the woman's flying into the wilderness for a thousand two hundred and threescore days is said by way of prolepsis or anticipation. For the war in heaven between Michael and the dragon, and other subsequent events, are prior in order of time to the flight of the woman into the wilderness: but before the prophet passeth on to a new subject, he giveth a general account of what happened to the woman afterwards, and entereth more into the particulars in their proper place.

7 And there was war in heaven; Michael and his angels fought against the dragon, and the dragon fought and his angels:

8 And prevailed not, neither was their place found any more in heaven.

9 And the great dragon was cast out, that old serpent, called the Devil and Satan, which deceiveth the whole world: he was cast out into the earth, and his angels were cast out with him.

10 And I heard a loud voice, saying in heaven, Now is come salvation, and strength, and the kingdom of our God, and the power of his Christ: for the accuser of our brethren is cast down, which accuseth them before our God day and night.

11 And they overcame him by the blood of the Lamb, and by the word of their testimony; and they loved not their lives unto the death.

12 Therefore rejoice, ye heavens, and ye that dwell in them. Woe to the inhabitants of the earth, and of the sea: for the devil is come down unto you, having great wrath, because he knoweth that he hath but a short time.

¹ Euseb. de Vita Constant. Lib. i. cap. xx. Lactant. de Mort. Persecut. cap. xxiv. Auctor ignotus ad calcem Amm. Marcellini, p. 656. Edit. Valesii, Paris. 1681.

² Euseb. de Vita Constant. Lib. iv. cap. v. &c.

³ Spanhem. Dissert. Decima Tertia de Præstantiâ et Usu Numism. Antiq. p. 636. 638. Observat. ad Juliani Imp. Orat. i. in laudem Constantii, p. 66.

It might reasonably be presumed, that all the powers of idolatry would be strenuously exerted against the establishment of Christianity, and especially against the establishment of a Christian on the imperial throne: and these struggles and contentions between the Heathen and the Christian religions are represented (ver. 7.) by war in heaven between the angels of darkness and angels of light. Michael was (Dan. x. 21; xii. 1.) the tutelar angel and protector of the Jewish church. He performs here the same office of champion for the Christian church. He and the good angels, who are sent forth (Heb. i. 14.) to minister to the heirs of salvation, were the invisible agents on one side, as the devil and his evil angels were on the other. The visible actors in the cause of Christianity were the believing emperors and ministers of the word, the martyrs and confessors; and in support of idolatry were the persecuting emperors and heathen magistrates together with the whole train of priests and sophists. This contest lasted several years, and the final issue of it was (ver. 8, 9.) that the Christian prevailed over the Heathen religion; the Heathens were deposed from all rule and authority, and the Christians were advanced to dominion and empire in their stead. Our Saviour said unto his disciples, casting devils out of the bodies of men, (Luke x. 18.) I beheld Satan, as lightning, fall from heaven. In the same figure Satan fell from heaven, and was cast out into the earth, when he was thrust out of the imperial throne, and his angels were cast out with him, not only all the heathen priests and officers civil and military were cashiered, but their very gods and dæmons, who before were adored for their divinity, became the subjects of contempt and execration. It is very remarkable, that Constantine himself and the Christians of his time describe his conquests under the same image, as if they had understood that this prophecy had received its accomplishment in him. Constantine himself,¹ in his epistle to Eusebius and other bishops concerning the re-edifying and repairing of churches, saith, that “liberty being now restored, and that dragon being removed from the administration of public affairs, by the providence of the great God; and by my ministry, I esteem the great power of God to have been made manifest even to all.” Moreover² a picture of Constantine was set up over the palace gate, with the cross over his head, and under his feet the great enemy of mankind, who persecuted the church by the means of impious tyrants, in the form of a dragon, transfixed with a dart through the midst of his body, and falling headlong into the depth of the sea; in allusion, it is said expressly, to the divine oracles in the books of the prophets, where that evil spirit is called the dragon and the crooked serpent. Upon this victory of the church, there is introduced (ver. 10.) a triumphant hymn of thanksgiving for the depression of idolatry, and exaltation of true religion: for now it was no longer in the power of the heathen persecutors, as Satan accused holy Job before God, to accuse the innocent Christians before the Roman governors, as the perpetrators of all crimes, and the causers of all calamities. It was not by temporal means or arms, that the Christians obtained this victory, (ver. 11.) but by spiritual, by the merits and death of their Redeemer, by their constant profession of the truth, and by their patient suffering of all kinds of tortures even unto death: and the blood of the martyrs hath been often called the seed of the church. This victory was indeed (ver. 12.) matter of joy and triumph to the blessed angels and glorified saints in heaven, by whose sufferings it was in great measure obtained; but still new woes are threatened to the inhabitants of the earth; for though the dragon was deposed, yet was he not destroyed; though idolatry was depressed, yet was it not wholly suppressed: there were still many Pagans intermixed with the Christians, and the devil would incite fresh troubles and disturbances on earth, because he knoweth that he hath but a short time, it would not be long before the Pagan religion should be totally abolished, and the Christian religion prevail in all the Roman empire.

¹ Νυνὶ δὲ τῆς ἐλευθερίας ἀποδοθείσης, καὶ τοῦ δράκοντος ἐκείνου ἀπὸ τῆς τῶν κοινῶν διοικήσεως, τοῦ Θεοῦ τοῦ μεγίστου προνοίᾳ, ἡμετέρα δ' ὑπηρεσίᾳ ἐκδιωχθέντος, ἡγοῦμαι καὶ πᾶσι φανεράν γεγενῆσθαι τὴν θείαν δύναμιν, κ. τ. λ. Nunc vero cum libertas restituta sit, et draco ille providentiâ quidem Dei optimi maximi, ministerio autem nostro a reipublicæ administratione submotus; equidem existimo divinam potentiam omnibus clarissimè innotuisse, &c. [Translated in the text.] Euseb. de Vita Constant. Lib. ii. cap. xlv. Socratis Hist. Eccles. Lib. i. cap. ix. Theodoret, Lib. i. cap. xv.

² Euseb. de Vita Constant. Lib. iii. cap. iii. τὸν δὲ ἐχθρὸν καὶ πολέμιον θῆρα, τὸν τὴν ἐκκλησίαν τοῦ Θεοῦ διὰ τῆς τῶν ἀθέων πολιορκήσαντα τυραννίδος, — ἐν δράκοντος μορφῇ. hostem illum et inimicum generis humani, qui impiorum tyrannorum operâ ecclesiâ Dei oppugnaverāt, sub draconis formâ. [Translated in the text.]

13 And when the dragon saw that he was cast unto the earth, he persecuted the woman which brought forth the man-child.

14 And to the woman were given two wings of a great eagle, that she might fly into the wilderness, into her place; where she is nourished for a time, and times, and half a time, from the face of the serpent.

15 And the serpent cast out of his mouth water as a flood, after the woman; that he might cause her to be carried away of the flood.

16 And the earth helped the woman, and the earth opened her mouth, and swallowed up the flood, which the dragon cast out of his mouth.

17 And the dragon was wroth with the woman, and went to make war with the remnant of her seed, which kept the commandments of God, and have the testimony of Jesus Christ.

When the dragon was thus deposed from the imperial throne, and cast unto the earth, (ver. 13.) he still continued to persecute the church with equal malice, though not with equal power. He made several attempts to restore the Pagan idolatry in the reign of Constantine, and afterwards in the reign of Julian; he traduced and abused the Christian religion by such writers as Hierocles, Libanius, Eunapius, and others of the same stamp and character; he rent and troubled the church with heresies and schisms; he stirred up the favourers of the Arians, and especially the kings of the Vandals in Africa, to persecute and destroy the orthodox Christians. These things, as ¹ Eusebius saith upon one of these occasions, some malicious and wicked dæmon, envying the prosperity of the church, effected. But the church was still under the protection of the empire, (ver. 14.) and to the woman were given two wings of a great eagle. As God said to the children of Israel, (Exod. xix. 4.) Ye have seen what I did unto the Egyptians, and how I bare you on eagles' wings, and brought you unto myself; so the church was supported and carried as it were on eagles' wings: but the similitude is the more proper in this case, an eagle being the Roman ensign, and the two wings alluding probably to the division that was then made of the eastern and the western empire. In this manner was the church protected, and these wings were given, that she might fly into the wilderness, into a place of retirement and security, from the face of the serpent. Not that she fled into the wilderness at this time, but several years afterwards; and there she is nourished for a time and times and half a time, that is, three prophetic years and a half, which is the same period with the thousand two hundred and threescore days or years before-mentioned. So long the church is to remain in a desolate and afflicted state, during the reign of Antichrist; as Elijah, (1 Kings xvii. xviii. Luke iv. 25, 26.) while idolatry and famine prevailed in Israel, was secretly fed and nourished three years and six months in the wilderness. But before the woman fled into the wilderness, the serpent cast out of his mouth water as a flood, (ver. 15.) with intent to wash her away. Waters in the style of the Apocalypse (xvii. 16.) signify peoples and nations; so that here was a great inundation of various nations, excited by the dragon or the friends and patrons of the old idolatry, to oppress and overwhelm the Christian religion. Such appeared plainly to have been the design of the dragon, when ² Stilicho, prime minister

¹ Ταῦτα μὲν οὖν φόβος [forsan φοβερὸς] τις καὶ πονηρὸς δαίμων, τοῖς τῆς ἐκκλησίας βασκαίνων ἀγαθοῖς κατεργάζετο. Hæc livor invidiæ, et malignus dæmon ecclesiæ felicitatem semper ægre ferens, in nostram perniciem machinatus est. [Translated in the text.] Euseb. de Vita Constant. Lib. ii. cap. lxxiii.

² Interea comes Stilicho, Vandalorum imbellis, avaræ, perfidiæ et dolosæ gentis genere editus, parvipendens quod sub imperatore imperabat, Eucherium filium suum, sicut a plebisque traditur, jam inde Christianorum persecutionem a puero privatoque meditantem, in imperium quoquo modo sustinere nitebatur. Quamobrem Alaricum, cunctamque Gothorum gentem, &c.—Eucherius, qui ad conciliandum sibi favorem Paganorum, restitutione templorum et eversione ecclesiarum imbuturum se regni primordia minabatur, &c. [In the mean time Stilicho, his prime minister, descended from the cowardly, avaricious, perfidious, and crafty nation of the Vandals, not duly valuing the authority which he had under the emperor, endeavoured by every means in his power to raise his son Eucherius to the empire, who, as many have told us, from his earliest years, and even when a private person, designed the persecution of the Christians. For this reason he invited of the emperor Honorius, first invited the barbarous heathen nations, the Goths, Alans, Sueves, and Vandals, to invade the Roman empire, hoping by their means to raise his son Eucherius to the throne, who from a boy was an enemy to the Christians, and threatened to signalize the beginning of his reign with the restoration of the Pagan, and abolition of the Christian religion. Nothing indeed was more likely to produce the ruin and utter subversion of the Christian church, than the eruptions of so many barbarous Heathen nations into the Roman empire. But the event proved contrary to human appearance and expectation; the earth swallowed up the flood; (ver. 16.) the Barbarians were rather swallowed up by the Romans, than the Romans by the Barbarians; the Heathen conquerors, instead of imposing their own, submitted to the religion of the conquered Christians; and they not only embraced the religion, but affected even the laws, the manners, the customs, the language, and the very name of Romans, so that the victors were in a manner absorbed and lost among the vanquished. This course not succeeding according to probable expectation, the dragon did not therefore desist from his purpose, (ver. 17.) but only took another method of persecuting the true sons of the church, as we shall see in the next chapter. It is said that he went to make war with the remnant of her seed who kept the commandments of God, and have the testimony of Jesus; which implies that at this time there was only a remnant, that corruptions were greatly increased, and the faithful were diminished from among the children of men.

CHAPTER XIII.

1 AND I stood upon the sand of the sea, and saw a beast rise up out of the sea, having seven heads, and ten horns, and upon his horns ten crowns, and upon his heads the name of blasphemy.

2 And the beast which I saw was like unto a leopard, and his feet were as the feet of a bear, and his mouth as the mouth of a lion: and the dragon gave him his power, and his seat, and great authority.

3 And I saw one of his heads, as it were wounded to death; and his deadly wound was healed: and all the world wondered after the beast.

4 And they worshipped the dragon which gave power unto the beast: and they worshipped the beast, saying, Who is like unto the beast? who is able to make war with him?

5 And there was given unto him a mouth speaking great Alaric and the whole nation of the Goths, &c. Eucherius, who, to procure to himself the favour of the Pagans, threatened to signalize the commencement of his reign with the restoration of Paganism, and the destruction of Christianity, &c.] Orosii Hist. Lib. vii. cap. xxxviii. p. 571. Edit. Havercamp. Vide etiam Jornandem de Rebus Geticis et de Regn. Success. et Paulum Diaconum, Lib. xiii.

things, and blasphemies; and power was given unto him to continue forty and two months.

6 And he opened his mouth in blasphemy against God, to blaspheme his name, and his tabernacle, and them that dwell in heaven.

7 And it was given unto him to make war with the saints, and to overcome them: and power was given him over all kindreds, and tongues, and nations.

8 And all that dwell upon the earth shall worship him, whose names are not written in the book of life of the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world.

9 If any man have an ear, let him hear.

10 He that leadeth into captivity, shall go into captivity: He that killeth with the sword, must be killed with the sword. Here is the patience and the faith of the saints.

Here the beast is described at large, who was only mentioned before: (xi. 7.) and a beast in the prophetic style is a tyrannical idolatrous empire. The kingdom of God and of Christ is never represented under the image of a beast. As Daniel (vii. 2, 3.) beheld four great beasts, representing the four great empires, come up from a stormy sea, that is, from the commotions of the world; so St. John (ver. 1.) saw this beast in like manner rise up out of the sea. He was said before (xi. 7.) to ascend, ἐκ τῆς ἀβύσσου, out of the abyss or bottomless pit, and it is said afterwards (xvii. 8.) that he shall ascend ἐκ τῆς ἀβύσσου, out of the abyss or bottomless pit; and here is said to ascend ἐκ τῆς θαλάσσης, out of the sea; so that the sea and abyss or bottomless pit are in these passages the same. No doubt is to be made, that this beast was designed to represent the Roman empire; for thus far both ancients and moderns, Papists and Protestants are agreed: the only doubt and controversy is, whether it was Rome Pagan or Christian, imperial or papal, which may perhaps be fully and clearly determined in the sequel.

St. John saw this beast rising out of the sea, but the Roman empire was risen and established long before St. John's time; and therefore this must be the Roman empire, not in its then present, but in some future shape and form; and it arose in another shape and form, after it was broken to pieces by the incursions of the northern nations. The beast hath seven heads and ten horns, which are the well known marks and signals of the Roman empire, the seven heads alluding to the seven mountains whereon Rome was situated, and to the seven forms of government which successively prevailed there, and the ten horns signifying the ten kingdoms into which the Roman empire was divided. It is remarkable, that the dragon had seven crowns upon his heads, but the beast hath upon his horns ten crowns; so that there had been in the meanwhile a revolution of power from the heads of the dragon to the horns of the beast, and the sovereignty, which before was exercised by Rome alone, was now transferred and divided among ten kingdoms: but the Roman empire was not divided into ten kingdoms till after it was become Christian. Although the heads had lost their crowns, yet they still retained the name of blasphemy. In all its heads, in all its forms of government, Rome was still guilty of idolatry and blasphemy. Imperial Rome was called, and delighted to be called, the eternal city, the heavenly city, the goddess of the earth, the goddess; and had her temples and altars with incense and sacrifices offered up to her: and how the papal Rome likewise hath arrogated to herself divine titles and honours, there will be a fitter occasion of showing in the following part of this description.

As Daniel's fourth beast (vii. 7.) was without a name, and devoured and brake in pieces the three former: so this beast (ver. 2.) is also without a name, and partakes of the nature and qualities of the three former, having the body of a leopard, which was the third beast or Grecian empire, and the feet of a bear, which was the second beast or Persian empire, and the mouth of a lion, which was the first beast or Babylonian empire: and consequently this must be the same as Daniel's fourth beast, or the Roman empire. But still it is not the same beast, the same empire entirely, but with some variation; and ² the dragon gave him his power, δύναμιν, or his

¹ Urbem æternam [the eternal city] Ammian. Marcell. Lib. xiv. cap. vi. p. 19. Edit. Valesii, Paris. 1681. Urbis ab æternæ, &c. [of the eternal city.] Ausonii Epigram. iii. de Fastis. οὐρανοπόλει Ῥώμῃ [Rome, the heavenly city.] Athenæi Lib. i. p. 20. Edit. Casaubon. Terrarum dea, gentiumque Roma. Cui par est nihil, et nihil secundum [Rome, the goddess of the earth, and of all nations, to which nothing is similar, nor cometh near.] Martial, Lib. xii. Epigram viii. Ita Romam, orbis caput, tanquam cœleste aliquod numen, seu terrarum deam gentiumque a Bilbilitano vate dictam, divinis honoribus, templis, sacerdotibus, ædituis, ipsa ΘΕΑΣ ΡΩΜΗΣ appellatione, quod plures Græcarum illarum civitatem nummi ostendunt, sibi condecorandam existimarunt. Quo autem referendum mihi videtur illud nomen blasphemiae, quod septem capitibus inscriptum gestasse legitur bestia in sacro Revelationum libro, et quod Hieronymus ac Prosper ad urbis æternæ appellationem retulerunt, Romæ cum alibi, tum in nummis ejus itidem familiarem. [Thus, as the coins of many of those Greek cities show, they thought that Rome, the metropolis of the world, as she had been called by the poet Martial, as some heavenly divinity, or the goddess of the earth and of all nations, was to be dignified with divine honours, temples, priests, ministers, and the very title of THE GODDESS ROME. To all which it seems to me we are to refer that name of blasphemy which in the sacred book of the Revelation the beast is said to have inscribed on her "seven heads," and which Jerome and Prosper have referred to her being called "the eternal city," a name frequently given to Rome both in coins and otherwise.] Spanhemii Dissert. Tertia de Præstant. et Usu Numm. Ant. sect. iii. p. 138. Vol. I.

² Imperium Romano-Papale tunc natum videtur, quum papam omnium ecclesiarum caput esse dixit Justinianus. V. Cod. L. i. T. i. A.D. 533, et 534. idque non verbo tantum significavit, sed missis ad eum episcopis, quasi legatis. Id Gregorius I. in fine sæculi sexti in episcopos Hispaniæ, Galliæ, &c. satis superbe exercuit; successores sæculi septimi multo etiam magis. In utroque seculo, faventibus papis, invalere imaginum cultus, et sanctorum invocatio: nam hic ipse Gregorius litanis inseruit nomen beatæ virginis Mariæ. En igitur blasphemias. Sæculo octavo A.D. 727. imperium civile Romæ, et ducatus Romani, excommunicato pulsoque imperatore Græco, arripuit papa (teste Anastasio et Sigonio de Regno Italiæ L. iii.) Gregorius II. Interea non orthodoxi, i. e. papis dissentientes, infames, extorres, instabiles, imp. legibus facti sunt. V. Cod. in quo canones æquantur legibus, &c. Nonne hæc omnia satis clare præstant magnam illam bestiam jam ortæ potestatem a dracone traditam, &c. [The Roman Papal empire seems then to have arisen, when Justinian called the pope the head of all churches, and this he did not in word only, but by sending bishops to him as ambassadors. Gregory I. at the end of the sixth cen-armies, and his seat, θρόνον, or his imperial throne, and great authority or jurisdiction over all the parts of his empire. The beast, therefore, is the successor and substitute of the dragon, or of the idolatrous heathen Roman empire: and what other idolatrous power hath succeeded to the heathen emperors in Rome, all the world is a judge and a witness. The dragon having failed in his purpose of restoring the old heathen idolatry, delegates his power to the beast, and thereby introduces a new species of idolatry, nominally different, but essentially the same, the worship of angels and saints instead of the gods and demigods of antiquity.

Another mark, whereby the beast was peculiarly distinguished, was (ver. 3.) one of his heads as it were wounded to death. It will appear hereafter, that this head was the sixth head, for five were fallen (xvii. 10.) before St. John's time: and the sixth head was that of the Cæsars or emperors, there having been before kings, and consuls, and dictators, and decemvirs, and military tribunes with consular authority. The sixth head was as it were wounded to death, when the Roman empire was overturned by the northern nations, and an end was put to the very name of emperor in Momyllus Augustulus: or rather, as the government of the Gothic kings was much the same as that of the emperors with only a change of the name, this head was more effectually wounded to death, when Rome was reduced to a poor dukedom, and made tributary to the exarchate of Ravenna: and Sigonius, who hath written the best of these times and of these affairs, includes the history of the Gothic kings in his history of the western empire. But not only one of his heads was as it were wounded to death, but his deadly wound was healed. If it was the sixth head which was wounded, that wound could not be healed by the rising of the seventh head, as interpreters commonly conceive; the same head which was wounded must be healed: and this was effected by the pope and people of Rome revolting from the exarch of Ravenna, and proclaiming Charles the Great Augustus and emperor of the Romans. Here the wounded imperial head was healed again, and hath subsisted ever since. At this time, partly through the pope, and partly through the emperor, support-tury abused this concession, by treating in a very insolent manner the bishops of Spain, France, &c. and his successors in the seventh century still more. In both these centuries, by the countenance of the popes, the worshipping of images and the invocation of saints much prevailed. For this very Gregory inserted the name of the blessed Virgin Mary in the Litany. Behold then the blasphemies. In the eighth century, A.D. 727, Gregory II. seized the civil liberty of the city and duchy of Rome, having excommunicated and expelled the Greek emperor, (as Anastasius and also Sigonius concerning the kingdom of Italy, B. iii. testify.) In the mean time the orthodox, that is, they who resisted the popes, were declared outlaws, infamous, aliens, and incapable of appearing as witnesses. See the Codex, in which the canons of the church are put upon an equal footing with the laws of the empire, &c. Do not all these things sufficiently show that great power was given by the dragon to the beast who was now risen, &c.] Mr. Mann's MS.

¹ — regnum veteris imperii ex omni parte simillimum. [The government was in every respect very similar to that under the ancient empire.] Sigonius de Occidentali Imperio, Lib. xvi. Ann. 494.

ing and strengthening each other, the Roman name again became formidable : and all the world wondered after the beast, and (ver. 4.) they worshipped the dragon which gave power unto the beast, and they worshipped the beast, saying : Who is like unto the beast ? Who is able to make war with him ? No kingdom or empire was like that of the beast, it had not a parallel upon earth, and it was in vain for any to resist or oppose it, it prevailed and triumphed over all ; and all the world, in submitting thus to the religion of the beast, did in effect submit again to the religion of the dragon, it being the old idolatry with only new names. The worshipping of dæmons and idols is in effect the worshipping of devils.

Wonderful as the beast was, his words and actions (ver. 5—8.) are no less wonderful. He perfectly resembles the little horn in Daniel. As the little horn (Dan. vii. 8. 25.) had a mouth speaking great things, and spake great words against the Most High ; so there was given unto the beast a mouth speaking great things, and he opened his mouth in blasphemy against God. As the little horn (Dan. vii. 21.) made war with the saints, and prevailed against them ; so it was given unto the beast to make war with the saints and to overcome them. As the little horn prospered (Dan. vii. 25.) until a time, and times, and the dividing of time, that is, three prophetic years and a half ; so power was given unto the beast to continue, to practise and prosper, forty and two months, which is exactly the same portion of time as three years and a half. We see that not only the same images, but almost the same words are employed ; and the portraits being so perfectly alike, it might fairly be presumed, if there was no other argument, that they were both drawn for the same person : and having before clearly discovered who sat for the one, we cannot now be at any loss to determine who sat for the other. It is the Roman beast in his last state or under his seventh head : and he hath a mouth speaking great things and blasphemies ; and what can be greater things and blasphemies, than the ¹claims of universal bishop, infallible judge of all controversies, sovereign of kings, and disposer of kingdoms, vicegerent of Christ, and God upon earth ! He hath also power ποιῆσαι, to continue, or rather to practise, to prevail, and prosper, forty and two months. Some read ποιῆσαι πόλεμον, to make war, not rightly understanding, I suppose, what was meant by ποιῆσαι alone ; but it signifies to practise, to prevail, and prosper, as the words עשה and ποιῆσαι are ²used by Daniel and the Greek translators. It doth not therefore follow, that the beast is to continue to exist for no longer a term, but he is to practise, to prosper, and prevail forty and two months; as the holy city (xi. 2.) is to be trodden under foot of the Gentiles forty and two months, which are the 1260 days or years of the reign of Antichrist. But if by the beast be understood the heathen Roman empire, instead of subsisting 1260, it did not subsist 400 years after the date of this prophecy.

¹ See the Introduction to Barrow's Treatise on the Pope's Supremacy.

² והצליח ועשה, καὶ ἐποίησε, καὶ εὐδῶθη, et faciet, et prosperabitur, and it practised, and prospered. Dan. viii. 12. והצליח ועשה, καὶ κατερθύνει, καὶ ποιήσει, et prosperabitur, et faciet, and shall prosper, and practise, ver. 24. ועשה בהם ורחוק, καὶ ποιήσει ἐν αὐτοῖς, καὶ κατισχύσει, et faciet in eis, et confortabitur, and shall deal against them, and shall prevail. Dan. xi. 7. ועשה, καὶ ποιήσει, et faciet, and he shall do exploits, ver. 28. See also ver. 30.

After this general account of the blasphemies and exploits of the beast, there follows a specification of the particulars. He opened his mouth in blasphemy against God. Blasphemy against God may be said to be of two kinds, not only speaking dishonourably of the supreme Being, but likewise attributing to the creature what belongs to the Creator, as in idolatry; which is often the sense of the word in Scripture, as in Isaiah (lxv. 7.) They have burnt incense upon the mountains, and blasphemed me upon the hills; and in several other places. He blasphemes the name of God by assuming the divine titles and honours to himself, and as it is expressed in the Wisdom of Solomon, (xiv. 21.) by ascribing unto stones and stocks the incommunicable name. He blasphemes the tabernacle of God, his temple and his church, by calling true Christians, who are the house of God, schismatics and heretics, and anathematizing them accordingly: or as you may understand it, by perverting the places dedicated to the worship of saints and angels. He blasphemes them that dwell in heaven, angels and glorified saints, by idolatrous worship and impious adoration; and disgraces their acts, and vilifies their memories, by fabulous legends and lying miracles.

So much for his blasphemies; nor are his exploits less extraordinary. It was given unto him to make war with the saints and to overcome them: and who can make any computation, or even frame any conception of the numbers of pious Christians who have fallen a sacrifice to the bigotry and cruelty of Rome? Mede upon the place ¹ hath observed from good authorities, that in the war with the Albigenses and Waldenses there perished of these poor creatures in France alone a million. From the first institution of the Jesuits to the year 1480, that is, in little more than thirty years, nine hundred thousand orthodox Christians were slain. In the Netherlands alone the duke of Alva boasted, that within a few years he had dispatched to the amount of thirty-six thousand souls, and those all by the hand of the common executioner. In the space of scarce thirty years, the Inquisition destroyed, by various kinds of tortures, a hundred and fifty thousand Christians. Sanders himself confesses, that an innumerable multitude of Lollards and Sacramentarians were burnt throughout all Europe, who yet, he says, were not put to death by the pope and bishops, but by the civil magistrates, which perfectly agrees with this prophecy, for of the secular beast it is said, that he should make war with the saints and overcome them. No wonder that by these means he should obtain an universal authority over all kindreds, and tongues, and nations, and establish his dominion in all the countries of the western Roman empire; and that they should not only submit to his decrees, but even adore his person, except the faithful few, whose names, as citizens of heaven, were enrolled in the registers of life. Let the Romanists boast, therefore, that theirs is the catholic church and universal empire; this is so far from being any evidence of the truth, that it is the very brand infixed by the spirit of prophecy.

¹ Prima ejus expeditio incubuit in Albigenses et Waldenses, et si quo alio nomine tunc appellati sint veri Christi cultores: quorum tanta strages edita fuit ut per Galliam solam, si P. Perionius in ejus belli historiâ rectè calculum inierit, occisa sint ad decies centena hominum millia.—Ab origine Jesuitarum, ad annum 1480, hoc est, paulo pluribus quam 30 annis, orthodoxorum nongenta fere millia fuisse trucidata, notat Balduinus de Antichristo. In Belgio solo, idque manu solum carnificis, sævus ille pugil Romanæ sedis dux Albanus, ad 36 animarum millia, se authore, intra paucos annos sublata gloriatus est. Testatur Vergerius, qui optime novit, Inquisitionem, ut vocant, hæreticæ pravitatis vix triginta annorum spatio, centum quinquaginta Christianorum millia diversis afflictionum generibus consumpsisse. Fatetur Sanderus infinitos Lolhardos et Sacramentarios in totâ Europâ ignibus traditos fuisse; quos tamen ait ille non a papâ et episcopis, sed a politicis magistratibus neci datos fuisse. Nimirum sic juxta prophetiam rem gerî oportuit: nam de seculari bestiâ dicitur, quod sanctis bellum faceret, eosque vinceret. [His first expedition was directed against the Albigenses and Waldenses, and against the true worshippers of Christ, by whatever other name they were called: of whom so dreadful a slaughter was made, that in France alone, if P. Perionius, in his history of this war, has made a correct calculation, there perished ten hundred thousand.—Baldwin, in his treatise concerning Antichrist, observes, that from the first institution of the Jesuits to the year 1480, that is, in little more than thirty years, nearly nine hundred thousand of the orthodox were slain. In the Netherlands alone, that barbarous defender of the Roman see, the duke of Alva,

It was customary with our Saviour, when he would have his auditors pay a particular attention to what he had been saying, to add, He who hath ears to hear, let him hear. St. John repeats the same admonition at the end of each of the seven epistles to the seven churches of Asia, and here in the conclusion of his description of the beast, (ver. 9.) If any man have an ear, let him hear: and certainly the description of the beast is deserving of the highest attention upon many accounts, and particularly because the right interpretation of the Apocalypse turneth upon it, as one of its main hinges. It is added, by way of consolation to the church, that these enemies of God and of Christ, represented under the character of the beast, shall suffer the law of retaliation, and be as remarkably punished and tormented themselves, as they punished and tormented others, (ver. 10.) He who leadeth into captivity, shall go into captivity; he who killeth with the sword, must be killed with the sword. Such a promise might administer some comfort; and boasted, that within a few years he had caused to be cut off to the amount of thirty-six thousand souls, and that by the hand of the common executioner alone. Vergier, who was well acquainted with the subject, affirms, that the Inquisition of heretical depravity, as they style themselves, had destroyed, by various kinds of torture, within the space of thirty years, a hundred and fifty thousand Christians. Sanders confesses that an infinite number of Lollards and Sacramentarians were delivered to the flames throughout Europe, who, however, he declares, were not put to death by the pope and bishops, but the civil magistrates. And thus indeed, according to the prophecy, was the event to be; for of the secular beast it is said that he should make war against the saints, and should overcome them.] Mede, p. 503, 504.

indeed it would be wanted; for the patience and the faith of the saints would be tried to the utmost during the reign of the beast. Here is the patience and the faith of the saints. Of all the trials and persecutions of the church this would be the most severe, and exceed those of the primitive times both in degree and in duration.

11 And I beheld another beast coming up out of the earth, and he had two horns like a lamb, and he spake as a dragon.

12 And he exerciseth all the power of the first beast before him, and causeth the earth, and them which dwell therein, to worship the first beast, whose deadly wound was healed.

13 And he doeth great wonders, so that he maketh fire come down from heaven on the earth in the sight of men.

14 And deceiveth them that dwell on the earth by the means of those miracles which he had power to do in the sight of the beast, saying to them that dwell on the earth, that they should make an image to the beast which had the wound by a sword, and did live.

15 And he had power to give life unto the image of the beast, that the image of the beast should both speak, and cause that as many as would not worship the image of the beast should be killed.

16 And he causeth all, both small and great, rich and poor, free and bond, to receive a mark in their right hand, or in their foreheads:

17 And that no man might buy or sell, save he that had the mark, or the name of the beast, or the number of his name.

18 Here is wisdom. Let him that hath understanding count the number of the beast: for it is the number of a man; and his number is six hundred threescore and six.

From the description of the ten horned beast, or Roman state in general, the prophet passeth to that of the two-horned beast, or Roman church in particular. The beast with ten crowned horns is the Roman empire, as divided into ten kingdoms; the beast with two horns like a lamb is the Roman hierarchy, or body of the clergy, regular and secular. This beast is otherwise called the false prophet, as we shall see in several instances; than which there cannot be a stronger or plainer argument to prove that false doctors or teachers were particularly designed. For the false prophet no more than the beast is a single man, but a body or succession of men propagating false doctrines, and teaching lies for sacred truths. As the first beast rose up out of the sea, that is, out of the wars and tumults of the world, so this beast (ver. 11.) groweth up out of the earth like plants, silently and without noise; and the greatest prelates have often been raised from monks and men of the lowest birth and parentage. He had two horns like a lamb; he had, both regular and secular, the appearance of a lamb; he derived his powers from the lamb, and pretended to be like the lamb all meekness and mildness. But he spake as a dragon, he had a voice of terror like the dragon or Roman emperors in usurping divine titles and honours, in commanding idolatry, and in persecuting and slaying the true worshippers of God and faithful servants of Jesus Christ. He is an ecclesiastical person, but intermixeth himself much in civil affairs. He is the prime minister, adviser, and mover of the first beast, or the beast before mentioned, (ver. 12.) He exerciseth all the power of the first beast before him. He holdeth imperium in imperio, an empire within an empire; claimeth a temporal authority as well as a spiritual; hath not only the principal direction of the temporal powers, but often engageth them in his service, and enforceth his canons and decrees with the sword of the civil magistrate. As the first beast concurs to maintain his authority, so he in return confirms and maintains the sovereignty and dominion of the first beast over his subjects; and causeth the earth, and them who dwell therein, to worship the first beast, whose deadly wound was healed. He supports tyranny, as he is by tyranny supported. He enslaves the consciences, as the first beast subjugates the bodies of men. As Mr. Whiston well ¹ observes, “He is the common centre and cement which unites all the distinct kingdoms of the Roman empire; and by joining with them procures them a blind obedience from their subjects: and so he is the occasion of the preservation of the old Roman empire in some kind of unity, and name, and strength; which otherwise had been quite dissolved by the inundations and wars succeeding the settlement of the barbarous nations in that empire.”

Such is the power and authority of the beast, and now we shall see what courses he pursues to confirm and establish it. He pretends, like other false prophets, (ver. 13.) to show great signs and wonders, and even to call for fire from heaven, as Elias did. His impostures too are so successful, that (ver. 14.) he deceiveth them that dwell on the earth, by the means of those miracles which he hath power to do. In this respect he perfectly resembles St. Paul’s man of sin, (2 Thess. ii. 9.) whose coming is after the working of Satan, with all power, and signs, and lying wonders, and with all deceivableness of unrighteousness: or rather they are one and the same character represented in different lights, and under different names. It is farther observable, that he is said to perform his miracles in the sight of men in order to deceive them, and in the sight of the beast in order to serve him; but not in the sight of God to serve his cause, or promote his religion. Now miracles, visions, and revelations, are the mighty boast of the church of Rome; the contrivances of an artful cunning clergy to impose upon an ignorant credulous laity. Even fire is pretended to come down from heaven, as in the case of

¹ Whiston’s Essay on the Rev. Part iii. Vision v.

St. Anthony's fire, and other instances cited by ¹Brightman and other writers on the Revelation; and in solemn excommunications, which are called the thunders of the church, and are performed with the ceremony of casting down burning torches from on high, as symbols and emblems of fire from heaven. Miracles are thought so necessary and essential, that they are reckoned among the notes of the catholic church; and they are alleged principally in support of purgatory prayers for the dead, the worship of saints, images, and relics, and the like (as they are called) catholic doctrines. But if these miracles were all real, we learn from hence what opinion we ought to frame of them; and what then shall we say, if they are all fictions and counterfeits? They are indeed so far from being any proofs of the true church, that they are rather a proof of a false one; they are, as we see, the distinguishing mark of Antichrist.

The influence of the two-horned beast or corrupted clergy is farther seen in persuading and inducing mankind (ver. 14.) to make an image to the beast, which had the wound by a sword and did live; that is an image and representative of the Roman empire, which was wounded by the sword of the barbarous nations, and revived in the revival of a new emperor of the west. He had also power (ver. 15.) to give life and activity unto the image of the beast. It should not be a dumb and lifeless idol, but should speak and deliver oracles, as the statues of the heathen gods were feigned to do, and should cause to be killed as many as would not worship and obey it. Some by this image of the beast ²understand "the rise of the new empire of Charlemagne, which was an image of the old Roman empire, and is now become the empire of Germany;" but this is the beast himself, who had the wound by a sword and did live, and not the image of the beast; the rise of this new empire was the healing of his deadly wound, by which he lived again. Others more probably ³conceive, that this image of the beast is "the office of inquisition, which was introduced among the blind vulgar, as a popular scheme, and warmly recommended by the Dominican and Franciscan monks, at first without any voice of command, or power of execution; till courts were erected independent of bishops, and judges, officers, familiars, prisons, and tormentors were appointed, who should put to exquisite punishments, and deliver over to a cruel death all that would not submit with an implicit obedience;" but the office of inquisition is established only in some particularly popish countries, and this belongs and extends to all in general. As many as would not worship the image of the beast, the image of the beast should cause to be killed; but there are many papists who do not receive and own the authority of the inquisition, and yet the inquisition doth not attempt to destroy and extirpate all such papists. What appears most probable is, that this image and representative of the beast is the pope. He is properly the idol of the church. He represents in himself the whole power of the beast, and is the head of all authority, temporal as well as spiritual. He is nothing more than a private person without power and without authority, till the two-horned beast or the corrupted clergy, by choosing him pope, give life unto him, and enable him to speak and utter his decrees, and to persecute even to death as many as refuse to submit to him and to worship him. As soon as he is chosen pope, he is clothed with the pontifical robes, and crowned and placed upon the altar, and the cardinals come and kiss his feet, which ceremony is called adoration. They first elect, and then they worship him, as in the ¹ medals of Martin V., where two are represented crowning the pope, and two kneeling before him, with this inscription, Quem creant adorant, Whom they create they adore. He is the principle of unity to the ten kingdoms of the beast, and causeth, as far as he is able, all who will not acknowledge his supremacy to be put to death. In short, he is the most perfect likeness and resemblance of the ancient Roman emperors, is as great a tyrant in the Christian world as they were in the heathen world, presides in the same city, usurps the same powers, affects the same titles, and requires the same universal homage and adoration. So that the prophecy descends more and more into particulars, from the Roman state or ten kingdoms in general, to the Roman church or clergy in particular, and still more particularly to the person of the pope, the head of the state as well as of the church, the king of kings, as well as bishop of bishops.

¹ Vide Brightman, et Poli Synops. in locum.

² Limborch. Theol. Christ. Lib. vii. cap. xi. sect. xvi. Lord Napier in locum. Whiston's Essay on the Rev. Part iii. Vision vi.

³ Vitring. in locum. Mann's Critical Notes on some Passages of Scripture, p. 121.

Other offices the false prophet performs to the beast, in subjecting all sorts of people to his obedience, by imposing certain terms of communion, and excommunicating all who dare in the least article to dissent from them, (ver. 16, 17.) He causeth all, both small and great, rich and poor, free and bond, of whatsoever rank and condition they be, to receive a mark in their right hand, or in their foreheads; and he will not permit any man to buy or sell, or partake of the common intercourses of life, who hath not the mark, or the name of the beast, or the number of his name. We must understand that it was ² customary among the ancients for servants to receive the mark of their master, and soldiers of their general, and those who were devoted to any particular deity, of the particular deity to whom they were devoted. These marks were usually impressed on their right hand or on their foreheads, and consisted of some hieroglyphic characters, or of the name expressed in vulgar letters, or of the name disguised in numerical letters, according to the fancy of the imposer. It is in allusion to this ancient practice and custom, that the symbol and profession of faith in the church of Rome, as subserving to superstition, idolatry, and tyranny, is called the mark or character of the beast; which character is said to be received in their forehead, when they make open and public declaration of their faith, and in their right hand, when they live and act in conformity to it. If any dissent from the stated and authorised forms, they are condemned and excommunicated as heretics, and in consequence of that they are no longer suffered to buy or sell; they are interdicted from traffic and commerce, and all the benefits of civil society. So Roger Hoveden¹ relates of William the Conqueror, that he was so dutiful to the pope, that "he would not permit any one in his power to buy or sell any thing, whom he found disobedient to the apostolic see." So the canon of the council of Lateran, under pope Alexander the Third, made against the Waldenses and Albigenses,² enjoins, upon pain of anathema, that "no man presume to entertain or cherish them in his house or land, or exercise traffic with them." The synod of Tours in France, under the same pope,³ orders under the like intermination, that "no man should presume to receive or assist them, no not so much as to hold any communion with them in selling or buying, that being deprived of the comfort of humanity, they may be compelled to repent of the error of their way." Pope Martin V., in his bull, set out after the council of Constance,⁴ commands in like manner, that "they permit not the heretics to have houses in their districts, or enter into contracts, or carry on commerce, or enjoy the comforts of humanity with Christians." In this respect, as Mede⁵ observes, the false prophet spake as the dragon. For the dragon Diocletian published a like edict, that no one should sell or administer any thing to the Christians, unless

¹ Bonanni Numismat. Pontific. Romanor. Daubuz, p. 582.

² Vide Grot. in locum. Cleric. in Levit. xix. 28. et supra omnes Spencerum de Legibus Hebræorum Ritualibus, Lib. ii. cap. xx. sect. i. iii. iv.

¹ Ut neminem in sua potestate aliquid emere aut vendere permiserit, quem apostolicæ sedi deprehenderit inobedientem. [Translated in the text.] Ex Usserio de success. Eccles. cap. vii. sect. vii. apud Vitring. p. 624. et apud Daubuz, p. 599.

² Ne quis eos in domo vel in terrâ suâ tenere, vel fovere, vel negotiationem cum iis exercere præsumat. [Translated in the text.] Ex Tom. IV. Concil. Edit. Rom. A. 1612, p. 37. apud Medum, p. 509. apud Vitrin. p. 624. et apud Daubuz, p. 598.

³ Ne ubi cogniti fuerint illius hæreseos sectatores, receptaculum iis quisquam in terrâ suâ præbere, aut præsidium impertiri præsumat; sed nec in venditione aut emptione aliquâ cum iis communio habeatur, ut solatio saltem humanitatis amisso, ab errore viæ suæ respiscere cogantur. [Translated in the text.] Ex Usserio de success. Eccles. cap. viii. sect. xxvi. apud Medum et Vitring. et Daubuz, ibid.

⁴ Ne hæreticos in suis districtibus domicilia tenere, contractus inire, negotiationes exercere, aut humanitatis solatia cum Christianis habere permittant. [Translated in the text.] Ex Pareo apud Daubuz, p. 598.

⁵ Et quid? nonne hic quoque loquitur pseudopropheta ut draco? Draco enim Diocletianus simile edictum edidit, ne quis quidquam Christianis venderet aut subministraret, nisi prius thura diis adolevisset: de quo in hymno Justinii Martyris ita canit:

Non illis emendi quidquam
Aut vendendi copia:
Nec ipsam haurire aquam
Dabatur licentia,
Antequam thurificarent
Detestandis idolis.

[Translated in the text.] Mede, p. 509.

they had first burnt incense to the gods, as Bede also rehearseth in the hymn of Justin Martyr; "They had not the power of buying or selling any thing, nor were they allowed the liberty of drawing water itself, before they had offered incense to detestable idols." Popish excommunications are therefore like heathen persecutions; and how large a share the corrupted clergy, and especially the monks of former, and the Jesuits of later times, have had in framing and enforcing such cruel interdicts, and in reducing all orders and degrees to so servile a state of subjection, no man of the least reading can want to be informed.

Mention having been made of the number of the beast, or the number of his name, (for they are both the same,) the prophet proceeds to inform us what that number is, leaving us from the number to collect the name, (ver. 18.) Here is wisdom. Let him that hath understanding count the number of the beast. It is not therefore a vain and ridiculous attempt to search into this mystery, but, on the contrary, is recommended to us upon the authority of an apostle. For it is the number of a man; it is a method of numbering practised among men; as the measure of a man (xxi. 17.) is such a measure as men commonly make use of in measuring. It was a method practised among the ancients to denote names by numbers; as the ¹name of Thouth, or the Egyptian Mercury, was signified by the number 1218; the name of Jupiter, as 'H 'Αρχή, or the beginning of things, by the number 717; and the name of the sun, as ἡλιος good, or ὕψις the author of rain, by the number 608. St. Barnabas, the companion of St. Paul, in his ²epistle, discovers in like manner the name of Jesus crucified in the number 318; and other instances might be produced, if there was occasion. It hath been the usual method, in all God's dispensations, for the Holy Spirit to accommodate his expressions to the customs, fashions, and manners of the several ages. Since then this art and mystery of numbers was so much used among the ancients, it is less wonderful that the beast also should have his number, and his number is six hundred and sixty-six. Here only the number is specified, and from the num-

¹ Vide Martiani Capellæ de Nuptiis Philologiæ et Mercurii, Lib. ii. et vii. in init. Dabuz, p. 605. Selden's Works, Vol. III. Part ii. col. 1402. Of the number 666.

Θ—9	H—8	η—8
ω—800	A—1	υ—400
υ—400	ρ—100	ς—200
θ—9	χ—600
	η—8	608
1280

717

² Vide S. Barnabæ Epist. cap. ix. Edit. Cotelerii et Clerici. The name of Jesus was wrote thus abbreviated IHT, IH the two first letters of the name, and T as the mark of his cross.

I—	10
H—	8
T—	300
	318

ber we must, as well as we can, collect the name. Several names possibly might be cited which contain this number, but it is evident that it must be some Greek or Hebrew name, and with the name also the other qualities and properties of the beast must all agree. The name alone will not constitute an agreement; all other particulars must be perfectly applicable; and the name also must comprehend the precise number of 666. No name appears more proper and suitable than that famous one mentioned by Irenæus, who lived not long after St. John's time, and was the disciple of Polycarp, the disciple of John. He¹ saith, that "the name Lateinos contains the number of 666, and it is very likely, because the last kingdom is so called, for they are Latins who now reign; but in this we will not glory;" that is, as it becomes a modest and pious man in a point of such difficulty, he will not be too confident of his explication. Lateinos with ei is the true orthography, as the Greeks wrote the long i of the Latins, and as the Latins themselves² wrote in former times. No objection, therefore, can be drawn from the spelling of the name, and the thing agrees to admiration. For after the division of the empire, the Greeks and other orientals called the people of the western church, or church of Rome, Latins; and, as Dr. Henry Moore³ expresseth it, they latinize in every thing. Mass, prayers, hymns, litanies, canons, decretals, bulls, are conceived in Latin. The papal councils speak in Latin. Women themselves pray in Latin. Nor is the Scripture read in any other language under popery, than Latin. Wherefore the council of Trent commanded the vulgar Latin to be the only authentic version. Nor do their doctors doubt to prefer it to the Hebrew and Greek text itself, which was written by the prophets and apostles. In short, all things are Latin; the pope having communicated his language to the people under his dominion, as the mark and character of his empire. They themselves indeed chose rather to be called Romans, and more absurdly still, Roman Catholics: and probably the apostle, as he hath made use of some Hebrew names in this book, as Abaddon (ix. 11.) and Armageddon (xvi. 16.) so might in this place likewise allude to the name in the

¹ Sed et LATEINOS nomen habet sexcentorum sexaginta sex numerum: et valde verisimile est, quoniam novissimum regnum hoc habet vocabulum. Latini enim sunt qui nunc regnant: sed non in hoc nos gloriabimur. [Translated in the text.] Iren. Lib. v. cap. xxx. p. 449. Edit. Grabe.

² So Ennius, Lib. vi. 26.

Quorum virtutei bellei fortuna pepercit,
Horundem me leibertatei parcere certum est:

and there are infinite examples besides.

³ Moore's Mystery of Iniquity, Part ii. B. i. chap. xv. sect. i. et Petri Molinæi Vates p. 500, &c. Missa, preces, hymni, litanie, canones, decreta, bullæ, Latine conceptæ sunt. Concilia papalia Latine loquuntur. Ipsæ Mulierculæ precantur Latine. Nec alio sermone scriptura legitur sub papismo quam Latino. Quapropter Concilium Tridentinum jussit solam versionem vulgatam Latinam esse authenticam. Nec dubitant doctores eam præferre ipsi textui Hebraico et Græco ab ipsis apostolis et prophetis exarato. Denique sunt omnia Latina; nempe Papa populis a se subactis dedit suam linguam, ut sui imperii notam et characterem. [Translated in the text.]

Hebrew language. Now Romiith is the ¹ Hebrew name for the Roman beast or Roman kingdom: and this word, as well as the former word Lateinos, contains the just and exact number of 666. It is really surprising that there should be such a fatal coincidence in both names in both languages. Mr. Pyle ² asserts, and I believe he may assert very truly, that no other word, in any language whatever, can be found to express both the same number and the same thing."

CHAPTER XIV.

1 AND I looked, and lo, a Lamb stood on the Mount Sion, and with him an hundred forty and four thousand, having his Father's name written in their foreheads.

2 And I heard a voice from heaven, as the voice of many waters, and as the voice of a great thunder; and I heard the voice of harpers harping with their harps;

3 And they sung as it were a new song before the throne, and before the four beasts, and the elders; and no man could learn that song, but the hundred and forty and four thousand, which were redeemed from the earth.

4 These are they which were not defiled with women; for they are virgins: these are they which follow the Lamb whithersoever he goeth: these were redeemed from among men, being the first fruits unto God, and to the Lamb.

5 And in their mouth was found no guile; for they are without fault before the throne of God.

After this melancholy account of the rise and reign of the beast, the Spirit of prophecy delineates, by way of opposition, the state of the true church during the same period, its struggles and contests with the beast, and the judgments of God upon its enemies. Our Saviour is seen (ver. 1.) as the true Lamb of God, not only with horns like a lamb, standing on the mount Sion, the place of God's true worship; and with him an hundred forty and four thousand, the same select number that was mentioned before, (vii. 4.) the

¹ רומי, Romi, masc. רומיית, Romiith, fem. to agree with חיה, beast, or מלכות, kingdom.

A	—	30	ר	—	200
A	—	1	ו	—	6
T	—	300	מ	—	40
E	—	5	י	—	10
I	—	10	י	—	10
N	—	50	ת	—	400
O	—	70
Σ	—	200			666

² See Pyle's Paraphrase, p. 104.

genuine offspring of the twelve apostles apostolically multiplied, and therefore the number of the church, as 666, is the number of the beast; and as the followers of the beast have the name of the beast, so these have the name of God, and, as some copies add, of Christ, written in their foreheads, being his professed servants, and the same as the witnesses, only represented under different figures. The angels and heavenly quire (ver. 2, 3.) with loud voices and instruments of music sing the same new song or Christian song that they sung before; (chap. v.) and no man could learn that song, but the hundred and forty and four thousand; they alone are the worshippers of the one true God through the one true Mediator Jesus Christ; all the rest of mankind offer up their devotions to other objects, and through other mediators. These are they which were not defiled with women; for they are virgins; (ver. 4.) they are pure from all the stains and pollutions of spiritual whoredom or idolatry, with which the other parts of the world are miserably debauched and corrupted. These are they which follow the Lamb whithersoever he goeth; they adhere constantly to the religion of Christ in all conditions and in all places, whether in adversity or prosperity, whether in conventicles or deserts, or in churches or cities. These were redeemed from among men, rescued from the corruptions of the world, and are consecrated as the first fruits unto God and the Lamb, an earnest and assurance of a more plentiful harvest in succeeding times. And in their mouth was found no guile; (ver. 5.) they handle not the word of God deceitfully, they preach the sincere doctrine of Christ, they are as free from hypocrisy as from idolatry; for they are without fault before the throne of God, they resemble their blessed Redeemer, who (1 Pet. ii. 22.) did no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth; and are, as the apostle requires Christians to be, (Philip. ii. 15.) blameless and harmless, the sons of God, without rebuke in the midst of a crooked and perverse nation. But possibly it may be asked, Where did such a church ever exist, especially before the Reformation; and it may be replied that it hath not existed only in idea. History demonstrates, as it hath been before evinced, that there have in every age been some true worshippers of God, and faithful servants of Jesus Christ; and as Elijah did not know the seven thousand men who had never bowed the knee to Baal, so there may have been more true Christians than were always visible.

6 And I saw another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting Gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people,

7 Saying with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him, for the hour of his judgment is come: and worship him that made heaven and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters.

Such is the nature and character of the true Christian church in Hebrew language. Now Romiith is the ¹ Hebrew name for the Roman beast or Roman kingdom: and this word, as well as the former word Lateinos, contains the just and exact number of 666. It is really surprising that there should be such a fatal coincidence in both names in both languages. Mr. Pyle ² asserts, and I believe he may assert very truly, that no other word, in any language whatever, can be found to express both the same number and the same thing."

CHAPTER XIV.

1 AND I looked, and lo, a Lamb stood on the Mount Sion, and with him an hundred forty and four thousand, having his Father's name written in their foreheads.

2 And I heard a voice from heaven, as the voice of many waters, and as the voice of a great thunder; and I heard the voice of harpers harping with their harps;

3 And they sung as it were a new song before the throne, and before the four beasts, and the elders; and no man could learn that song, but the hundred and forty and four thousand, which were redeemed from the earth.

4 These are they which were not defiled with women; for they are virgins: these are they which follow the Lamb whithersoever he goeth: these were redeemed from among men, being the first fruits unto God, and to the Lamb.

5 And in their mouth was found no guile; for they are without fault before the throne of God.

After this melancholy account of the rise and reign of the beast, the Spirit of prophecy delineates, by way of opposition, the state of the true church during the same period, its struggles and contests with the beast, and the judgments of God upon its enemies. Our Saviour is seen (ver. 1.) as the true Lamb of God, not only with horns like a lamb, standing on the mount Sion, the place of God's true worship; and with him an hundred forty and four thousand, the same select number that was mentioned before, (vii. 4.) the

¹ רומי, Romi, masc. רומיית, Romiith, fem. to agree with חיה, beast, or מלכות, kingdom.

A	—	30	ר	—	200
A	—	1	ו	—	6
T	—	300	נ	—	40
E	—	5	י	—	10
I	—	10	י	—	10
N	—	50	ת	—	400
O	—	70
Σ	—	200			666

² See Pyle's Paraphrase, p. 104.

genuine offspring of the twelve apostles apostolically multiplied, and therefore the number of the church, as 666, is the number of the beast; and as the followers of the beast have the name of the beast, so these have the name of God, and, as some copies add, of Christ, written in their foreheads, being his professed servants, and the same as the witnesses, only represented under different figures. The angels and heavenly quire (ver. 2, 3.) with loud voices and instruments of music sing the same new song or Christian song that they sung before; (chap. v.) and no man could learn that song, but the hundred and forty and four thousand; they alone are the worshippers of the one true God through the one true Mediator Jesus Christ; all the rest of mankind offer up their devotions to other objects, and through other mediators. These are they which were not defiled with women; for they are virgins; (ver. 4.) they are pure from all the stains and pollutions of spiritual whoredom or idolatry, with which the other parts of the world are miserably debauched and corrupted. These are they which follow the Lamb whithersoever he goeth; they adhere constantly to the religion of Christ in all conditions and in all places, whether in adversity or prosperity, whether in conventicles or deserts, or in churches or cities. These were redeemed from among men, rescued from the corruptions of the world, and are consecrated as the first fruits unto God and the Lamb, an earnest and assurance of a more plentiful harvest in succeeding times. And in their mouth was found no guile; (ver. 5.) they handle not the word of God deceitfully, they preach the sincere doctrine of Christ, they are as free from hypocrisy as from idolatry; for they are without fault before the throne of God, they resemble their blessed Redeemer, who (1 Pet. ii. 22.) did no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth; and are, as the apostle requires Christians to be, (Philip. ii. 15.) blameless and harmless, the sons of God, without rebuke in the midst of a crooked and perverse nation. But possibly it may be asked, Where did such a church ever exist, especially before the Reformation; and it may be replied that it hath not existed only in idea. History demonstrates, as it hath been before evinced, that there have in every age been some true worshippers of God, and faithful servants of Jesus Christ; and as Elijah did not know the seven thousand men who had never bowed the knee to Baal, so there may have been more true Christians than were always visible.

6 And I saw another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting Gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people,

7 Saying with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him, for the hour of his judgment is come: and worship him that made heaven and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters.

Such is the nature and character of the true Christian church in opposition to the wicked Antichristian kingdom; and three principal efforts have been made towards a reformation at three different times, represented by three angels appearing one after another. Another angel, (ver. 9.) besides those who were employed in singing, (ver. 3.) is seen flying in the midst of heaven, and having the everlasting Gospel to preach unto every nation and people: so that during this period the Gospel should still be preached, which is styled the everlasting Gospel, being like its divine Author (Heb. xiii. 8.) the same yesterday, and to-day, and for ever, in opposition to the novel doctrines of the beast and the false prophet, which (Matt. xv. 13.) should be rooted up as plants not of the heavenly Father's planting. This angel is farther represented (ver. 7.) saying with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him, for the hour of his judgment is come. Prophecy mentions things as come, which will certainly come: and so our Saviour said (John xii. 31.) Now is the judgment of this world: it is denounced with certainty now, and in due time will be fully executed. But what this angel more particularly recommends, is the worship of the great Creator of the universe; Worship him that made heaven and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters. It is a solemn and emphatic exhortation to forsake the reigning idolatry and superstition, and such exhortations were made even in the first and earliest times of the beast. Besides several of the Greek emperors who strenuously opposed the worship of images, Charlemagne himself ¹ held a council at Francfort, in the year 794, consisting of about 300 French, and German, and Italian, and Spanish, and British bishops, who condemned all sort of adoration or worship of images, and rejected the second council of Nice, which had authorized and established it. At the same time the Carolin books, as they are called, four books written by Charles himself or by his authority, proving the worship of images to be contrary to the Scripture and to the doctrine and practice of antiquity, were approved by the council and transmitted to the pope. Lewis the pious, the son and successor of Charles ², held a council at Paris in the year 824, which ratified the acts of the council of Francfort, and the Carolin books, and affirmed that, according to the Scripture and the fathers, adoration was due to God alone. Several private persons also taught and asserted the same scriptural doctrines. Claude, bishop of Turin, ³ declares that “we are not commanded to go to the creature, that we may be made happy, but to the Creator himself: and therefore we should not worship dead men; they are to be imitated, not to be adored; let us, together with the angels, worship one God." Agobard, archbishop of Lyons, ¹wrote a whole book against images, and says that "angels or saints may be loved and honoured, but not be served and worshipped: let us not put our trust in man, but in God, lest that prophetic denunciation should redound on us, Cursed is the man who trusteth in man." Many other ²bishops and writers of Britain, Spain, Italy, Germany, and France, professed the same sentiments; and this public opposition of emperors and bishops to the worship of saints and images in the eighth and ninth centuries appears to be meant particularly by the loud voice of this first angel flying aloft, and calling upon the world to worship God. In another respect too these emperors and bishops resemble this angel having the everlasting Gospel to preach unto every nation; for in their time, and greatly by their means, ³ the Christian religion was propagated and established among the Saxons, Danes, Swedes, and many other northern nations.

¹ Fred. Spanhem. Hist. Christian. Sæc. viii. cap. vii. et ix. Dupin, Bib. Ecclesiast. Tom. VI. passim. Voltaire's Annals of the Empire, ann. 794.

² Spanhem. ibid. Sæc. ix. cap. xii. sect. ii. et Hist. Imag. Rest. sect. ix. Dupin, ibid. Tom. VII. chap. i.

³ Non jubemur ad creaturam tendere ut efficiamur beati, sed ad ipsum creatorem. Et ideo non sit nobis religio cultus hominum mortuorum; honorandi sunt propter imitationem, non adorandi propter religionem: Unum cum angelis colamus Deum. [Translated in the text.] Apud Spanhem. ibid. sæc. ix. cap. ix. sect. vii. Vide etiam Dupin, ibid. et Cave, Hist. Litt. ad Ann. 820.

8 And there followed another angel, saying, Babylon is fallen, is fallen, that great city, because she made all nations drink of the wine of the wrath of her fornication.

As the admonitions of the first angel had not the proper effect upon the kingdom of the beast, the second angel is commissioned to proclaim the fall of the capital city, (ver. 8.) And there followed another angel, saying, Babylon is fallen, is fallen, that great city. By Babylon was meant Rome, as all authors of all ages and countries agree: but it was not prudent to denounce the destruction of Rome in open and direct terms: it was for many wise reasons done covertly under the name of Babylon, which was the great idolatress of the earth, and enemy of the people of God in former, as Rome hath been in later times. By the same figure of speech, that the first angel cried that the hour of his judgment is come, this second angel proclaims that Babylon is fallen; the sentence is as certain, as if it was already executed. For greater certainty too it is repeated twice, Babylon is fallen, is fallen; as Joseph said (Gen. xii. 32.) that the dream was doubled unto Pharaoh twice, because the thing is established by God, and God will shortly bring it to pass. The reason then is added of this sentence against Babylon, because she made all nations drink of the wine of her wrath, or rather of the inflaming wine of her fornication. Her's was a kind of Circean cup, with poisoned liquor, to intoxicate and inflame mankind to spiritual fornication. St. John in these figures copies the ancient prophets. In the same manner, and in the same words, did Isaiah foretel the fate of ancient Babylon, (xxi. 9.) Babylon is fallen, is fallen; and Jeremiah hath assigned much the same reason for her destruction, (li. 7.) Babylon hath been a golden cup in the Lord's hand, that made all the earth drunken: the nations have drunken of her wine: therefore the nations are mad. As by the first angel calling upon men to worship God, we understand the opposers of the worship of images in the eighth and ninth centuries, so by this second angel proclaiming the fall of mystic Babylon or Rome, we understand particularly ¹ Peter Valdo, and those who concurred with him, the Waldenses and Albigenes; who were the first heralds, as I may say, of this proclamation, as they first of all, in the twelfth century, pronounced the church of Rome to be the apocalyptic Babylon, the mother of harlots and abominations of the earth; and for this cause not only departed from her communion themselves, but engaged great numbers also to follow their example, and laid the first foundation of the Reformation. Rome then began to fall; and as the ruin of Babylon was completed by degrees, so likewise will that of Rome; and these holy confessors and martyrs first paved the way to it.

¹ Angeli, vel homines sancti, amentur, honorentur charitate, non servitute, non ponamus spem nostram in homine, sed in Deo, ne forte redundet in nos illum propheticum, Maledictus homo qui confidit in homine. [Translated in the text.] Lib. de Imag. cap. xxx. apud Spanhem. ibid. Vide etiam Dupin, ibid. Cave, ibid. ad Ann. 813.

² Spanhem. ibid. sect. iii. Usserius de Eccles. Christian. successione et statu, cap. ii. Allix's Remarks upon the ancient churches of the Albigenses, cap. viii. et ix.

³ Spanhem. ibid. cap. ii.

9 And the third angel followed them, saying with a loud voice, If any man worship the beast and his image, and receive his mark in his forehead, or in his hand,

10 The same shall drink of the wine of the wrath of God, which is poured out without mixture into the cup of his indignation; and he shall be tormented with fire and brimstone, in the presence of the holy angels, and in the presence of the Lamb:

11 And the smoke of their torment ascendeth up for ever and ever, and they have no rest day nor night, who worship the beast and his image, and whosoever receiveth the mark of his name, 12 Here is the patience of the saints: here are they that keep the commandments of God and the faith of Jesus.

13 And I heard a voice from heaven, saying unto me, Write, Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord, from henceforth: Yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labours, and their works do follow them.

¹ Mede, p. 517. 722, &c. Fred. Spanhem. Hist. Christian. sæc. xii. cap. vi.—recessisse a doctrinâ et praxi receptâ Romanæ ecclesiæ, nuncupasse eam Babylonem, ac confusionis omnis matrem, &c. [That they had withdrawn from the established doctrine and practice of the Roman church, and had given to her the name of Babylon, and the mother of all confusion, &c.] Sect. iv. Thuani Hist. Lib. vi. cap. xvi. Eorum hæc dogmata ferebantur; Ecclesiam Romanam, quoniam veræ Christi fidei renunciaverit, Babylonicam meretricem esse, &c. [These were reported to be their opinions, that the Roman church, because she had renounced the true faith of Christ, was the whore of Babylon, &c.] P. 221. Edit. Buckley.

But not only the capital city, not only the principal agents and promoters of idolatry shall be destroyed; the commission of the third angel reached farther, and extends to all the subjects of the beast, whom he consigns over to everlasting punishment, (ver. 9—11.) And the third angel followed them, saying with a loud voice, If any man worship the beast and his image, and receive his mark in his forehead or in his hand, if any man embrace and profess the religion of the beast, or what is the same, the religion of the pope; the same shall drink of the wine of the wrath of God, or rather of the poisonous wine of God. His punishment shall correspond with his crime. As he drank of the poisonous wine of Babylon, so he shall be made to drink of the poisonous wine of God, τοῦ κεκρασμένου ἀκράτου, which is poured out without mixture, or rather which is mixt unmixt, the poisonous ingredients being stronger when mixt with mere or unmixt wine, in the cup of his indignation; and he shall be tormented day and night for ever and ever. By this third angel following the others with a loud voice, we understand principally Martin Luther and his fellow-reformers, who with a loud voice protested against all the corruptions of the church of Rome, and declared them to be destructive of salvation to all who still obstinately continue in the practice and profession of them. This would be a time of great trial, (ver. 12.) Here is the patience of the saints; here are they who keep the commandments of God, and the faith of Jesus. And it is very well known, that this was a time of great trial and persecution; the Reformation was not introduced and established without much bloodshed; there were many martyrs in every country. But they are comforted with a solemn declaration from heaven, (ver. 13.) And I heard a voice from heaven saying unto me, Write, Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord, from henceforth, if they die in the faith and obedience of Christ, and more especially if they die martyrs for his sake: Yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labours, for immediately upon their deaths they enter into rest; and their works do follow them, they enjoy now some recompence, and in due time, at the day of judgment, they shall receive the full reward of their good works. It is most probable that St. John alluded to a passage in Isaiah, where the Spirit hath made the like declaration; (lvii. 1, 2.) The righteous perisheth, and no man layeth it to heart; and merciful men are taken away, none considering that the righteous is taken away from the evil to come: he shall enter into peace; they shall rest in their beds, each one walking in his uprightness. But the greatest difficulty of all is to account for the words from henceforth; for why should the blessedness of the dead who die in the Lord be restrained to this time, and commence from this period rather than from any other, when they are at all times and in all periods equally blessed, and not more since this time than before? Commentators here are very much at a loss, and offer little or nothing that is satisfactory: but the difficulty in great measure ceases, if we apply this prophecy, as I think it should be applied, to the Reformation. For from that time, though the blessedness of the dead who die in the Lord hath not been enlarged, yet it hath been much better understood, more clearly written and promulgated than it was before, and the contrary doctrine of purgatory hath been exploded and banished from the belief of all reasonable men. This truth was, moreover, one of the leading principles of the Reformation. What first provoked Luther's spirit was the scandalous sale of indulgences; and the doctrine of indulgences having a close connexion with the doctrine of purgatory, the refutation of the one naturally led him to the refutation of the other; and his ¹ first work of reformation was his ninety-five theses, or positions, against indulgences, purgatory, and the dependent doctrines. So that he may be said literally to have fulfilled the command from heaven, of writing, Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord, from henceforth: and from that time to this the truth hath been so clearly asserted, and so solidly established, that it is likely to prevail for ever.

A learned and ingenious friend refers these three proclamations of the three angels to later times, and supposes that they are an immediate prelude to the fall of Antichrist, and the millennium. But the clue that has principally conducted me through both parts of the Revelation, is following the series of history and the successive order of events. After the description of the two beasts, secular and ecclesiastical, whose power was established, according to my hypothesis, in the eighth century, but according to most commentators much sooner, there would be a very large chasm without the prediction of any memorable events, if these prophecies relate to the time immediately preceding the fall of Antichrist, and the millennium. What a long interval would that be without any prophecy? and how thick would the events follow afterward? for all the particulars not only of this fourteenth, but likewise of the sixteenth, eighteenth, and nineteenth chapters, must be fulfilled before the commencement of the millennium. I can hardly frame, even in imagination, any events which can answer more exactly to these proclamations of the three angels, than the three principal efforts towards a reformation. Charlemagne, Valdo, Luther, and their followers, certainly deserve as exalted characters as are here given them: and it would be very strange that there should be so many prophecies relating to the downfall of popery, and none concerning the Reformation. He conceives that the church cannot be represented in such an attitude of triumph and jubilation, as it is in the former part of this chapter, while it is afflicted and persecuted during the reign of the beast. But the church of this period is not drawn in such an attitude of triumph and jubilation as he imagines; there are some intimations of its suffering persecution in this very chapter; and if it was as he imagines, yet why may not the true church be represented like the apostles and primitive Christians, as sorrowful yet always rejoicing, as rejoicing in tribulation, as exceedingly joyful in tribulation, &c.? He farther conceives, that the dead are blessed from henceforth, because they will remain a shorter time in the separate state, and be sooner raised again. But why then is not that reason assigned, but quite different ones, that they may rest from their labours, and their works do follow them? These are reasons which hold equally good at all times, and cannot be restrained and limited to any particular time: and therefore I conceive that the words from henceforth relate not so much to the blessedness of the dead, which is always the same, as to the writing and promulgating of this doctrine by Luther and the protestant reformers.

¹ Sleidan's Hist. of the Reform. B. i. ann. 1517. Father Paul's Hist. of the Council of Trent, B. i. sect. xviii. Spanhem. Hist. Christian. Sæc. xvi. cap. vi. sect. i.

14 And I looked, and behold, a white cloud, and upon the cloud one sat, like unto the Son of man, having on his head a golden crown, and in his hand a sharp sickle.

15 And another angel came out of the temple, crying with a loud voice to him that sat on the cloud, Thrust in thy sickle, and reap: for the time is come for thee to reap; for the harvest of the earth is ripe.

16 And he that sat on the cloud thrust in his sickle on the earth; and the earth was reaped.

17 And another angel came out of the temple which is in heaven, he also having a sharp sickle.

18 And another angel came out from the altar, which had power over fire; and cried with a loud cry to him that had the sharp sickle, saying, Thrust in thy sharp sickle, and gather the clusters of the vine of the earth; for her grapes are fully ripe.

19 And the angel thrust in his sickle into the earth, and gathered the vine of the earth, and cast it into the great wine-press of the wrath of God.

20 And the wine-press was trodden without the city, and blood came out of the wine-press, even unto the horse-bridles, by the space of a thousand and six hundred furlongs.

But still the voices of these three warning angels not having their due influence and effect, the judgments of God will overtake the followers and adherents of the beast, which judgments are represented under the figures of harvest and vintage, (ver. 14—20.) figures not unusual in the prophets, and copied particularly from the prophet Joel, who denounced God's judgments against the enemies of his people in the like terms; (iii. 13.) Put ye in the sickle, for the harvest is ripe; come, get you down, for the press is full, the fats overflow, for their wickedness is great. What particular events are signified by this harvest and vintage, it appears impossible for any man to determine, time alone can with certainty discover, for these things are yet in futurity. Only it may be observed, that these two signal judgments will as certainly come, as harvest and vintage succeed in their season; and in the course of providence the one will precede the other, as in the course of nature the harvest is before the vintage; and the latter will greatly surpass the former, and be attended with a more terrible destruction of God's enemies. It is said (ver. 20.) that the blood came even unto the horse-bridles, which is a strong hyperbolical way of speaking to express vast slaughter and effusion of blood; a way of speaking not unknown to the Jews, for ¹ the Jerusalem Talmud, describing the woeful slaughter which the Roman emperor Adrian made of the Jews at the destruction of the city of Bitter, saith that the horses waded in blood up to the nostrils. Nor are similar examples wanting even in the classic authors: for ² Silius Italicus, speaking of Annibal's descent into Italy, useth a like expression of the bridles flowing with much blood. The stage where this bloody tragedy is acted, is without the city, by the space of a thousand and six hundred furlongs, which, as Mr. Mede ³ ingeniously observes, is the measure of stato della chiesa, or the state of the Roman church, or St. Peter's patrimony, which reaching from the walls of Rome unto the river Po and the marshes of Verona, contains the space of two hundred Italian miles, which make exactly sixteen hundred furlongs.

CHAPTER XV.

1 AND I saw another sign in heaven, great and marvellous, seven angels having the seven last plagues, for in them is filled up the wrath of God.

2 And I saw as it were a sea of glass, mingled with fire; and them that had gotten the victory over the beast, and over his image, and over his mark, and over the number of his name, stand on the sea of glass, having the harps of God.

3 And they sing the songs of Moses the servant of God, and the song of the Lamb, saying, Great and marvellous are thy works, Lord God Almighty; just and true are thy ways, thou king of saints.

¹ In Taanith, fol. 69. col. 1. Lightfoot's Harmony of the New Testament in locum. Vide etiam Echa R. ii. 2. Tribus annis cum dimidio obsedit Adrianus Bitterem, nec cesarunt in eâ interficientes, donec mergeretur equus in sanguine usque ad os, &c. [Adrian besieged the city of Bitter during three years and a half. The slaughter did not cease in it till a horse might have waded in blood up to the nostrils, &c.] Apud Wetsstein in locum.

² Sil. Ital. iii. 705.

— multoque fluentia sanguine lora. [Translated in the text.]

³ In vicino item locus est cui dictus stadiorum numerus perinde convenit: puta stato della chiesa, seu ecclesiæ Romanæ latifundium, quod ab urbe Româ usque ad ultimum Padi ostium et Paludes Veronnenses porrigitur spatio milliarium Italicorum ducentorum, id est, stadiorum 1600. [There is at hand a place, whose measurement exactly agrees with the number of furlongs here mentioned, and that is stato della chiesa, or the state of the Roman church, which stretching from the city of Rome, to the farthest mouth of the Po and the marshes of Verona, extends for the space of two hundred Italian miles, or sixteen hundred furlongs.] Mede, p. 522.

4 Who shall not fear thee, O Lord, and glorify thy name? for thou only art holy: for all nations shall come and worship before thee: for thy judgments are made manifest.

5 And after that I looked, and behold, the temple of the tabernacle of the testimony in heaven was opened:

6 And the seven angels came out of the temple, having the seven plagues, clothed in pure and white linen, and having their breasts girded with golden girdles.

7 And one of the four beasts gave unto the seven angels seven golden vials full of the wrath of God, who liveth for ever and ever.

8 And the temple was filled with smoke from the glory of God, and from his power, and no man was able to enter into the temple, till the seven plagues of the seven angels were fulfilled.

God's judgments upon the kingdom of the beast, or Antichristian empire, are hitherto denounced, and described in general terms under the figures of harvest and vintage. A more particular account of them follows under the emblem of seven vials, which are called (ver. 1.) the seven last plagues, for in them is filled up the wrath of God. These seven last plagues must necessarily fall under the seventh and last trumpet, or the third and last woe-trumpet; so that as the seventh seal contained the seven trumpets, the seventh trumpet comprehends the seven vials. Not only the concinnity of the prophecy requires this order; for otherwise there would be great confusion, and the vials would interfere with the trumpets, some falling under one trumpet, and some under another: but moreover, if these seven last plagues and the consequent destruction of Babylon be not the subject of the third woe, the third woe is no where described particularly as are the two former woes. When four of the seven trumpets had sounded, it was declared, (viii. 13.) Woe, woe, woe to the inhabitants of the earth, by reason of the other voices of the trumpet of the three angels which are yet to sound. Accordingly at the sounding of the fifth trumpet (ix. 1.) commences the woe of the Saracen or Arabian locusts; and in the conclusion is added, (ver. 12.) One woe is past, and behold, there come two woes more hereafter. At the sounding of the sixth trumpet (ix. 13.) begins the plague of the Euphratean horsemen, or Turks; and in the conclusion is added, (xi. 14.) The second woe is past, and behold, the third woe cometh quickly. At the sounding of the seventh trumpet, therefore, (xi. 15, &c.) one would naturally expect the description of the third woe to succeed: but, as it was before observed, there follows only a short and summary account of the seventh trumpet, and of the joyful rather than of the woeful part of it. A general intimation, indeed, is given of God's taking unto him his great power, and destroying them who destroy the earth: but the particulars are reserved for this place; and if these last plagues coincide not with the last woe, there are other plagues and other woes after the last ; and how can it be said that the wrath of God is filled up in them, if there are others besides them? If then these seven last plagues synchronize with the seventh and last trumpet, they are all yet to come ; for the sixth trumpet is not yet past, nor the woe of the Turkish or Othman empire yet ended : and consequently there is no possibility of explaining them in such a manner as when the prophecies may be parallel with histories, or evinced by ocular demonstration. The many fruitless attempts which have hitherto been made to explain them, are a farther proof that they cannot well be explained, the best interpreters having failed and floundered in this part more than any other. But before the vials are poured out, the scene opens with a preparatory vision, which is the subject of this chapter.

As seven angels sounded the seven trumpets, so seven angels are appointed to pour out the seven vials, angels being always the ministers of Providence ; and in order to show that these judgments are to fall upon the kingdom of the beast, the true worshippers of God and faithful servants of Jesus, who had escaped victors from the beast, νικῶντες ἐκ τοῦ θηρίου, and had never submitted to his tyranny or religion, are described (ver. 2—4.) like unto the children of Israel after their deliverance and escape out of Egypt. For as the children of Israel (Exod. xv.) having passed through the Red Sea, stood on the shore, and seeing their enemies overwhelmed with the waters, sung the triumphant song of Moses : so these having passed through the fiery trials of this world, stand on the sea of glass mingled with fire, which was mentioned before, (iv. 6.) and seeing the vials ready to be poured out upon their enemies, sing a song of triumph for the manifestation of the divine judgments ; which is called the song of Moses and the song of the Lamb, the words in great measure being taken from the song of Moses and other parts of the Old Testament, and applied in a Christian sense. After this the most holy place of the temple is opened, (ver. 5.) and the seven angels come out of the temple, (ver. 6.) to denote that their commission is immediately from God, clothed like the high priest, but in a more august manner, in pure and white linen, to signify the righteousness of these judgments, and having their breasts girded, to show their readiness to execute the Divine commands, with golden girdles, as emblems of their power and majesty. A vial then is given unto each of the seven angels (ver. 7.) by one of the four living creatures, the representatives of the church ; by which it is intimated, that it is in vindication of the church and true religion that these plagues are inflicted. Moreover the temple is filled with smoke from the glory of God and from his power, so that no man is able to enter into it, (ver. 8.) in the same manner as the tabernacle, when it was consecrated by Moses, and the temple when it was dedicated by Solomon, (Exod. xl. 34, 35 ; 1 Kings viii. 10, 11.) were both filled with a cloud and the glory of the Lord, so that neither Moses nor the priests could enter therein : a farther proof of the majestic presence and extraordinary interposition of God in the execution of these judgments.

CHAPTER XVI.

1 And I heard a great voice out of the temple, saying to the seven angels, Go your ways, and pour out the vials of the wrath of God upon the earth.

In obedience to the Divine command (ver. 1.) the seven angels come forth to pour out the vials of the wrath of God upon the earth: and as the trumpets were so many steps and degrees of the ruin of the Roman empire, so the vials are of the ruin of the Roman church. The one in polity and government is the image of the other; the one is compared to the system of the world, and hath her earth, and sea, and rivers, and sun, as well as the other; and this is the reason of the similitude and resemblance of the judgments in both cases. Some resemblance too there is between these plagues and those of Egypt. Rome papal hath already (xi. 8.) been distinguished by the title of spiritual Egypt, and resembles Egypt in her punishments as well as in her crimes, tyranny, idolatry, and wickedness.

2 And the first went, and poured out his vial upon the earth; and there fell a noisome and grievous sore upon the men which had the mark of the beast, and upon them which worshipped his image.

Vial the first (ver. 2.) is poured out upon the earth; and so the hail and fire of the first trumpet (viii. 7.) were cast upon the earth. It produceth a noisome and grievous sore; and in this respect resembleth the sixth plague of Egypt, (Exod. ix. 10.) which was boils breaking forth with blains. This plague is inflicted upon the men who had the mark of the beast, and upon them who worshipped his image; which is to be understood of the others also, where it is not expressed. Whether these sores and ulcers are natural or moral, the event must show.

3 And the second angel poured out his vial upon the sea; and it became as the blood of a dead man: and every living soul died in the sea.

4 And the third angel poured out his vial upon the rivers and fountains of waters; and they became blood.

5 And I heard the angel of the waters say, Thou art righteous, O Lord, which art, and wast, and shalt be, because thou hast judged thus:

6 For they have shed the blood of saints and prophets, and thou hast given them blood to drink: for they are worthy.

7 And I heard another out of the altar say, Even so, Lord God Almighty, true and righteous are thy judgments.

Vial the second (ver. 3.) is poured out upon the sea, and the sea becomes as the blood of a dead man, or as congealed blood: and in like manner under the second trumpet (viii. 8.) the burning mountain was cast into the sea, and the sea became blood. Vial the third (ver. 4.) is poured out upon the rivers and fountains of waters, and they became blood: and in like manner under the third trumpet (viii. 10.) the burning star fell upon the rivers and fountains of waters. There is a close connexion between these two vials; and the effects are similar to the first plague of Egypt, (Exod. vii. 19.) when the waters of Egypt, and their streams, and their rivers, and their ponds, and their pools of water became blood. Seas and rivers of blood manifestly denote great slaughter and devastation: and hereupon (ver. 5, 6.) the angel of the waters, for it was a prevailing opinion in the east, that a ¹particular angel presided over the waters, as others did over other elements and parts of nature, and mention was made before (xiv. 18.) of the angel who had power over fire; this angel of the waters celebrates the righteous judgments of God in adapting and proportioning the punishments of the followers of the beast to their crime; for no law is more just and equitable, than that they who have been guilty of shedding the blood of saints and prophets, should be punished in the effusion of their own blood. Another angel out of the altar (ver. 7.) for (vi. 9.) under the altar were the souls of them who were slain for the word of God, and for the testimony which they held, declares his assent in the most solemn manner, Even so, Lord God Almighty, true and righteous are thy judgments.

8 And the fourth angel poured out his vial upon the sun; and power was given unto him to scorch men with fire.

9 And men were scorched with great heat, and blasphemed the name of God, which hath power over these plagues; and they repented not to give him glory.

As the fourth trumpet affected the sun, (viii. 12.) so likewise the fourth vial (ver. 8, 9.) is poured out upon the sun. An intense heat ensues; and men blaspheme the name of God, and repent not to give him glory. Whether by this intense heat of the sun, be meant literally, uncommon sultry seasons, scorching and withering the fruits of the earth, and producing pestilential fevers and inflammations; or figuratively, a most tyrannical and exorbitant exercise of arbitrary power by those who may be called the sun in the firmament of the beast, the pope or emperor; time must discover. Men shall be tormented, and complain grievously; they shall, like the rebellious Jews, (Isa. viii. 21.) fret themselves, and curse their king, and their God, and look upward, look upward, not to pray but only to blaspheme; they shall not have the sense or courage to repent, and forsake their idolatry and wickedness. When the events shall take place, and these things shall all be fulfilled, not only these prophecies of the vials shall be better understood, but also those of the trumpets, to which they bear some analogy and resemblance.

¹ Imò Persæ existimant peculiari angelo demandatum esse tueri aquas, &c. [The Persians think that a peculiar angel is commissioned to take care of the waters.] Hyde de Relig. Vet. Persarum, cap. vi. p. 139. Vide etiam, cap. xix.

10 And the fifth angel poured out his vial upon the seat of the beast; and his kingdom was full of darkness, and they gnawed their tongues for pain, 11 And blasphemed the God of heaven, because of their pains and their sores, and repented not of their deeds.

Vial the fifth (ver. 10, 11.) is poured out upon the seat or throne of the beast, and his kingdom becomes full of darkness, as Egypt did (Exod. x. 21.) under her ninth plague. This is some great calamity which shall fall upon Rome itself, and shall darken and confound the whole Antichristian empire. But still the consequences of this plague are much the same as those of the foregoing one; for the sufferers, instead of repenting of their deeds, are hardened like Pharaoh, and still persist in their blasphemy and idolatry, and obstinately withstand all attempts of reformation.

12 And the sixth angel poured out his vial upon the great river Euphrates; and the water thereof was dried up, that the way of the kings of the east might be prepared.

13 And I saw three unclean spirits like frogs come out of the mouth of the dragon, and out of the mouth of the beast, and out of the mouth of the false prophet.

14 For they are the spirits of devils, working miracles, which go forth unto the kings of the earth, and of the whole world, to gather them to the battle of that great day of God Almighty.

15 Behold, I come as a thief. Blessed is he that watcheth and keepeth his garments, lest he walk naked, and they see his shame.

16 And he gathered them together into a place called in the Hebrew tongue, Armageddon.

Vial the sixth (ver. 12.) is poured out upon the great river Euphrates, and the water thereof is dried up, to prepare a passage for the kings of the east. Whether by Euphrates be meant the river so called, or only a mystic Euphrates, as Rome is mystic Babylon, and whether by the kings of the east be meant the Jews in particular, or any eastern potentates in general, can be matters only of conjecture, and not of certainty and assurance, till the event shall make the determination. Whoever they be, they appear to threaten the ruin and destruction of the kingdom of the beast; and therefore ¹ the agents and emissaries of popery, (ver. 13, 14.) of the dragon, the representative of the devil, and of the beast, the representative of the antichristian empire, and of the false prophet, the representative of the antichristian church, as disagreeable, as loquacious, as sordid, as impudent ² as frogs, are employed to oppose them, and stir up the princes and potentates of their communion to make their united and last effort in a religious war. Of necessity these must be times of great trouble and affliction, so that an exhortation is inserted (ver. 15.) by way of parenthesis, of the suddenness of these judgments, and of the blessedness of watching, and of being clothed and prepared for all events. Beza conceives that this verse was transferred hither from the third chapter, where it should be subjoined to the eighteenth verse; but the third chapter and the sixteenth chapter are at too great a distance for such a transposition to be made. However, it is certain that this insertion hath in some measure disturbed the sense, and broken the connexion of the discourse; for our translators, as well as several others, render the following words (ver. 16.) And he gathered them together, when the true construction is, And they gathered them together, the evil spirits and agents before-mentioned gather all the forces of the popish princes together, into a place called in the Hebrew tongue Armageddon, that is, the mountain of destruction.

17 And the seventh angel poured out his vial into the air; and there came a great voice out of the temple of heaven, from the throne, saying, It is done.

18 And there were voices, and thunders, and lightnings; and there was a great earthquake, such as was not since men were upon the earth, so mighty an earthquake and so great.

19 And the great city was divided into three parts, and the cities of the nations fell; and great Babylon came in remembrance before God, to give unto her the cup of the wine of the fierceness of his wrath.

20 And every island fled away, and the mountains were not found.

21 And there fell upon men a great hail out of heaven, every stone about the weight of a talent; and men blasphemed God because of the plague of the hail; for the plague thereof was exceeding great.

Vial the seventh (ver. 17.) is poured out into the air, the seat of Satan's residence, who is emphatically styled (Eph. ii. 2.) the prince of the power of the air, and is represented (ver. 13.) as a principal actor in these latter scenes; so that this last period will not only complete the ruin of the kingdom of the beast, but will also shake the kingdom of Satan every where. Upon the pouring out of this vial a solemn proclamation is made from the throne of God himself, It is done; in the same sense as the angel before affirmed, (x. 7.) that in the days of the seventh trumpet the mystery of God should be finished. Of this vial, as indeed of all the former, the completion is gradual; and the immediate effects and consequences are (ver. 18—21.) voices, and thunders, and lightnings, and an earthquake, and great hail. These portend great calamities. Voices, and thunders, and lightnings, are the usual attendants of the Deity, especially in his judgments. Great earthquakes in prophetic language signify great changes and revolutions, and this is such an one as men never felt and experienced before, such as was not since men were upon the earth. Not only the great city is divided into three parts or factions, but the cities of the nations fall from their obedience to her. Her sins are remembered before God, and like another Babylon she will soon be made to drink of the bitter cup of his anger. Nay, not only the works of men, the cities fall; but even the works of nature, the islands fly away, and the mountains are not found; which is more than was said before, (vi. 14.) that they were moved out of their places, and can import no less than an utter extirpation of idolatry. Great hail too often signifies the judgments of God, and these are uncommon judgments. Diodorus, a grave historian, ¹ speaketh of hailstones which weighed a pound and more; Philostorgius mentions hail that weighed eight pounds; but these are about the weight of a talent, or about a hundred pounds, a strong figure to denote the greatness and severity of these judgments. But still the men continue obstinate, and blaspheme God because of the plague of the hail; they remain incorrigible under the Divine judgments, and shall be destroyed before they will be reformed.

¹ The three unclean spirits like frogs, Mr. Mann conceives to be the Dominicans, Franciscans, and Jesuits. Dominicani, Franciscani, et Loyalitæ, tres impuros spiritus ranis similes non male referunt. MS.

² Vide Bocharti Hieroz. Part. Post. Lib. v. cap. iv.

CHAPTER XVII.

As the seventh seal and the seventh trumpet contained many more particulars than any of the former seals and former trumpets; so the seventh vial contains more than any of the former vials; and the more you consider, the more admirable you will find the structure of this book in all its parts. The destruction of the Antichristian empire is a subject of such importance and consequence, that the Holy Spirit hath thought fit to represent it under variety of images. Rome hath already been characterized by the names of spiritual Egypt and Babylon: and having seen how her plagues resemble those of Egypt, we shall now see her fall compared to that of Babylon. It was declared before in general (xiv. 8.) Babylon is fallen, is fallen; but this is a catastrophe deserving of a more particular description, both for a warning to some, and for a consolation to others. But before the description of her fall and destruction, there is premised an account of her state and condition, that there may be no mistake in the application. Rome was meant, as all both¹ papists and protestants agree; and I think it appears almost to demonstration, that not pagan but Christian, not imperial but papal Rome, was here intended, and the arguments urged to the contrary by the bishop of Meaux himself, the best and ablest advocate for popery, prove nothing so much as the weakness and badness of the cause which they are brought to defend.

¹ καὶ χαλᾶζης ἀπίστου τὸ μέγεθος· μνααῖαι γὰρ ἐπιπτον, ἔστι δ' ὅτε καὶ μείζους.
Et magnitudinis incredibilis grando: minæ enim pondo, et quandoque majores, deciderant.
[And the hail was of incredible size, for some fell which weighed a pound, and others more.] Diodorus Sic. Lib. xix. de Rhodiorum diluvio, p. 695. Edit. Steph. p. 689. Edit. Rhodomani. Philost. Hist. Eccles. Lib. xi. cap. vii.

1 AND there came one of the seven angels which had the seven vials, and talked with me, saying unto me, Come hither, I will shew unto thee the judgment of the great whore that sitteth upon many waters:

2 With whom the kings of the earth have committed fornication, and the inhabitants of the earth have been made drunk with the wine of her fornication.

3 So he carried me away in the spirit into the wilderness; and I saw a woman sit upon a scarlet-coloured beast, full of names of blasphemy, having seven heads and ten horns.

4 And the woman was arrayed in purple, and scarlet colour, and decked with gold and precious stone and pearls, having a golden cup in her hand, full of abominations and filthiness of her fornication.

5 And upon her forehead was a name, written, MYSTERY, BABYLON THE GREAT, THE MOTHER OF HARLOTS, AND ABOMINATIONS OF THE EARTH.

6 And I saw the woman drunken with the blood of the saints, and with the blood of the martyrs of Jesus; and when I saw her, I wondered with great admiration.

One of the seven angels, who had the seven vials, (ver. 1.) calleth to St. John. Most probably this was the seventh angel, for under the seventh vial great Babylon came in remembrance before God, and now St. John is called upon to see her condemnation and execution. Come hither, I will show unto thee the judgment of the great whore, that sitteth upon many waters. So ancient Babylon, which was seated on the great river Euphrates, is described by Jeremiah (li. 13.) as dwelling upon many waters; and from thence the phrase is borrowed, and signifies, according to the angel's own explanation, (ver. 15.) ruling over many peoples and nations. Neither was this an ordinary prostitute; she was the great whore (ver. 2.) with whom the kings of the earth have committed fornication: as Tyre (Isa. xxiii. 17.) committed fornication with all the kingdoms of the world upon the face of the earth. Nay not only the kings, but inferior persons, the inhabitants of the earth have been made drunk with the wine of her fornication; as it was said of ancient Babylon, (Jer. li. 7.) the nations have drunken of her wine, therefore the nations are mad. Fornication in the usual style of Scripture is idolatry, but if it be taken even literally, it is true that modern Rome openly allows the one, as well as practises the other. Ancient Rome doth in no respect so well answer the character, for she ruled more with a rod of iron, than with the wine of her fornication. What and where were the kings whom she courted and debauched to her communion? What and where were the people whom she inveigled and intoxicated with her idolatry? Her ambition was for extending her empire and not her religion. She permitted even the conquered nations to continue in the religion of their ancestors, and to worship their own gods after their own rituals. She may be said rather to have been corrupted by the importation of foreign vices and superstitions, than to have established her own in other countries.

¹ Certissimum est nomine Babylonis Romam urbem significari. [It is most certain, that by the name of Babylon is signified the city of Rome.] Baronius ad Ann. 45. Johannes in Apocalypsi passim Romam vocat Babylonem.—Et aperte colligitur ex cap. xvii. Apocalypseus. [John every where in the book of the Revelation calls Rome Babylon.—And this is manifest from chap. xvii. of the Revelation.] Bellarmin. de Rom. Pontif. Lib. iii. cap. xiii. &c. &c. &c.

As Ezekiel, while he was a captive in Chaldæa, was conveyed by the spirit to Jerusalem, (Ezek. viii. 3.) so St. John (ver. 3.) is carried away in the spirit into the wilderness; for there the scene is laid, being a scene of desolation. When the woman, the true church, was persecuted and afflicted, she was said (xii. 14.) to fly into the wilderness: and in like manner, when the woman, the false church, is to be destroyed, the vision is presented in the wilderness. For they are by no means, as some have imagined, the same woman under various representations. They are totally distinct and different characters, and drawn in contrast to each other, as appears from their whole attire and behaviour, and particularly from these two circumstances; that during the 1260 years while the woman is fed in the wilderness, the beast and the scarlet whore are reigning and triumphant, and at the latter end, the whore is burnt with fire, when the woman as his wife, hath made herself ready for the marriage of the Lamb. A woman sitting upon a beast is a lively and significative emblem of a church or city directing and governing an empire. In painting and sculpture, as well as in prophetic language, cities are often represented in the form of women; and Rome herself is exhibited¹ in ancient coins as a woman sitting upon a lion. Here the beast is a scarlet-coloured beast, for the same reason as the dragon was (xii. 3.) a red dragon, to denote his cruelty, and in allusion to the distinguishing colour of the Roman emperors and magistrates. The beast is also full of names of blasphemy, having seven heads and ten horns; so that this is the very same beast which was described in the former part of the thirteenth chapter; and the woman in some measure answers to the two-horned beast or false prophet; and consequently the woman is Christian and not pagan Rome, because Rome was become Christian, before the beast had completely seven heads and ten horns, that is, before the Roman empire experienced its last form of government, and was divided into ten kingdoms. The woman is arrayed too (ver. 4.) in purple and scarlet colour, this being the colour of the popes and cardinals, as well as of the emperors and senators of Rome. Nay, the mules and horses, which carry the popes and cardinals, are covered with scarlet cloth, so that they may properly be said to ride upon a scarlet coloured beast. The woman is also decked with gold, and precious stone and pearls: and who can sufficiently describe the pride, and grandeur, and magnificence of the church of Rome in her vestments and ornaments of all kinds? Alexander Donatus¹ hath drawn a comparison between ancient and modern Rome, and asserts the superiority of his own church in the pomp and splendour of religion. You have a remarkable instance in Paul II., of whom² Platina relates, that “in his pontifical vestments, he out-went all his predecessors, especially in his regno or mitre, upon which he had laid out a great deal of money in purchasing at vast rates, diamonds, sapphires, emeralds, chrysoliths, jaspers, unions, and all manner of precious stones, wherewith adorned, like another Aaron, he would appear abroad somewhat more august than a man, delighting to be seen and admired by every one. But lest he alone should seem to differ from the rest, he made a decree, that none but cardinals should under a penalty wear red caps; to whom he had in the first year of his popedom given cloth of that colour, to make horse-cloths or mule-cloths of when they rode.” You have another conspicuous instance in the Lady of Loretto; the riches³ of whose holy image, and house, and treasury; the golden angels, the gold and silver lamps, the vast number, variety, and richness of the jewels, of the vestments for the holy image, and for the priests; with the prodigious treasure of all sorts, are far beyond the reach of description; and as Mr. Addison says, “as much surpassed my expectation as other sights have generally fallen short of it. Silver can scarce find an admission, and gold itself looks but poorly amongst such an incredible number of precious stones.” Moreover the woman, like other harlots, who give philtres and love-potions to inflame their lovers, hath a golden cup in her hand, full of abominations and filthiness of her fornication, to signify the specious and alluring arts wherewith she bewitcheth and inciteth men to idolatry, which is abomination and spiritual fornication. It is an image copied from Jeremiah, (li. 7.) Babylon hath been a golden cup in the Lord's hand, that made all the earth drunken: and in that excellent little moral treatise¹, entitled the Table of Cebes, there is a like picture of deceit or imposture; “a fair, beautiful, and false woman, and having a cup in her hand; she is called Deceit, and seduceth all mankind.” And is not this a much more proper emblem of pontifical than of imperial Rome?

¹ Vitring. p. 757. · Emmeness. ad Virg. Æn. vi. 854.

¹ Vitring. p. 759. Donat. de Urbe Româ, Lib. i. cap. xxix.

² Platina's Lives of the Popes, translated by Sir Paul Rycant, p. 414.

³ See Wright's Travels, p. 123. Addison's Travels, p. 93.

Yet farther to distinguish the woman, she has her name inscribed upon her forehead, (ver. 5.) in allusion to the practice of some notorious prostitutes, who had their names written in a label upon their foreheads, as we may² collect from ancient authors. The inscription is so very particular, that we cannot easily mistake the person; Mystery, Babylon the great, the mother of harlots, or rather of fornications and abominations of the earth. Her name Mystery can imply no less than that she dealeth in mysteries; her religion is a mystery, a mystery of iniquity; and she herself is mystically and spiritually Babylon the Great. But the title of mystery is in no respect proper to ancient Rome, more than any other city; and neither is there any mystery in substituting one heathen, idolatrous, and persecuting city for another; but it is indeed a mystery, that a Christian city, professing and boasting herself to be the city of God, should prove another Babylon in idolatry and cruelty to the people of God. She glories in the name of Roman Catholic, and well therefore may she be called Babylon the Great. She affects the style and title of our holy mother the church, but she is in truth the mother of fornications and abominations of the earth. Neither can this character with any propriety be applied to ancient Rome; for she was rather a learner of foreign superstitions, than the mistress of idolatry to other nations; as appears in various instances, and particularly from³ that solemn form of adjuration, which the Romans used when they laid siege to a city, calling forth the tutelary deities of the place, and promising them temples, and sacrifices, and other solemnities at Rome. It may be concluded, therefore, that this part of the prophecy is sufficiently fulfilled, though there should be reason to question the truth of what is asserted by some writers, that the word mystery was formerly written in letters of gold upon

¹ γυνή πεπλασμένη τῷ εἶδει, καὶ πιθανῇ φαινομένη, καὶ ἐν τῇ χειρὶ ἔχουσα ποτήριον τι—Ἀπάτη καλεῖται, ἡ πάντας τοὺς ἀνθρώπους πλανῶσα. Mulier ficto vultu, argutæque specie, et manu poculum quoddam tenens. Impostura vocatur, quæ omnes homines seducit. [Translated in the text.] Tab. Cebetis non longe ab initio.

² Nomen tuum pendit in fronte: pretia stupri accepisti; &c. [“Thy name hath hung upon thy forehead; thou hast received the reward of thy whoredom,” &c.] Seneca, Lib. i. Controvers. ii. Juvenal. Sat. vi. 122.

tunc nuda papillis

Constitit auratis, titulum mentita Lyciscæ.

[“Then she continued naked with her breasts adorned with gold, falsely assuming the name of Lyciscæ.”]

³ Macrobij Saturnal. Lib. iii. cap. ix.

the forepart of the pope's mitre. Scaliger¹ affirms it upon the authority of the Duke de Montmorency, who received his information from a man of good credit at Rome. Francis le Moyne and Brocardus² confirm it, appealing to ocular inspection; and when king James objected this, Lessius could not deny it. If the thing be true, it is a wonderful coincidence of the event with the letter of the prophecy; but it hath been much controverted, and you may see the authors on both sides in³ Wolfius. It is much more certain, and none of that communion can deny it, that the ancient mitres were usually adorned with inscriptions. One⁴ particularly there is "preserved at Rome as a precious relic of pope Sylvester I. richly but not artfully embroidered with the figure of the Virgin Mary crowned, and holding a little Christ, and these words in large capitals underneath, AVE REGINA CELI, Hail queen of heaven, in the front; of which father Angelo Rocca, keeper of the pope's sacristy, and an eminent antiquary, has given a copper-plate, in the third volume, p. 490, of the works of pope Gregory I. and it seems more probably to have belonged to Gregory; because he is said to have first instituted at Rome the litanies to the Virgin Mary." An inscription this directly contrary to that on the forefront of the high priest's mitre, (Exod. xxviii. 36.) HOLINESS TO THE LORD.

Infamous as the woman is for her idolatry, she is no less detestable for her cruelty, which are the two principal characteristics of the Antichristian empire. She is (ver. 6.) drunken with the blood of the saints, and with the blood of the martyrs of Jesus: which may indeed be applied both to Pagan and to Christian Rome, for both have in their turns cruelly persecuted the saints and martyrs of Jesus: but the latter is more deserving of the character, as she hath far exceeded the former both in the degree and duration of her persecutions. It is very true, as it was hinted before, that if Rome Pagan hath slain her thousands of innocent Christians, Rome

¹ Feu Monsieur de Montmorency étant à Rome du temps qu'on parloit librement et du S. Père et du S. Siège, apprit d'homme digne de foy, qu' à la vérité le tiare pontifical avoit escript au frontal en lettres d'or Mysterium. ["The late Duke de Montmorency being at Rome, at a time when persons spake freely both of St. Peter and of the Holy See, learned from a man worthy of credit, that in truth the pope's mitre had written on the front of it in letters of gold the word mystery."] Scal. in locum apud Critic. Sacr.

² Idem quoque confirmant Franc. le Moyne et Jacobus Brocardus in h. l. ad αἰροψίαν provocantes, non dissimulante Leonardo Lessio. ["The same is also confirmed by Francis le Moyne and James Brocard appealing to ocular inspection, and Leonardus Lessius not denying it."] Wolfius, in locum. In tiarâ, in mitrâ papæ habes hoc verbum Mysterium scriptum: ut non sit tibi opus longius interpretationem querere. ["In the turban or mitre of the pope you have this word mystery written; so that you have no need to seek farther for an interpretation."] Brocard in locum apud Vitring. p. 763. Romanus pontifex, in suâ tiarâ, hoc ipsum nomen inscriptum habuit mysterium, quod αἰροπται ipsi testati sunt: et cum id Jacobus Rex objiceret, Lessius negare non potuit. ["The pope of Rome on his mitre had this very name mystery inscribed, which has been attested by eye-witnesses: and when king James objected this, Lessius could not deny it."] Downam, apud Poli Synops. in locum.

³ Jo. Christophori Wolfii Curæ Philolog. et Criticæ, Tom. V.

⁴ See Mann's Critical Notes on some passages of Scripture, p. 112.

Christian hath slain her ten thousands. For not to mention other outrageous slaughters and barbarities, the croisades against the Waldenses and Albigenses, the murders committed by the duke of Alva in the Netherlands, the massacres in France and Ireland, will probably amount to above ten times the number of all the Christians slain in all the ten persecutions of the Roman emperors put together. St. John's admiration also plainly evinces, that Christian Rome was intended: for it could be no matter of surprise to him, that a heathen city should persecute the Christians, when he himself had seen and suffered the persecutions under Nero; but that a city professedly Christian should wanton and riot in the blood of Christians, was a subject of astonishment indeed; and well might he, as it is emphatically expressed, wonder with great wonder.

7 And the angel said unto me, Wherefore didst thou marvel? I will tell thee the mystery of the woman, and of the beast that carrieth her, which hath the seven heads and ten horns.

8 The beast that thou sawest was, and is not; and shall ascend out of the bottomless pit, and go into perdition: and they that dwell on the earth shall wonder, (whose names were not written in the book of life from the foundation of the world) when they behold the beast that was, and is not, and yet is.

9 And here is the mind which hath wisdom. The seven heads are seven mountains on which the woman sitteth.

10 And there are seven kings: five are fallen, and one is, and the other is not yet come; and when he cometh he must continue a short space.

11 And the beast that was, and is not, even he is the eighth, and is of the seven, and goeth into perdition.

12 And the ten horns which thou sawest are ten kings, which have received no kingdom as yet; but receive power as kings one hour with the beast.

13 These have one mind, and shall give their power and strength unto the beast.

14 These shall make war with the Lamb, and the Lamb shall overcome them: for he is Lord of lords, and King of kings: and they that are with him are called, and chosen, and faithful.

15 And he saith unto me, The waters which thou sawest, where the whore sitteth, are peoples, and multitudes, and nations, and tongues.

16 And the ten horns which thou sawest upon the beast, these shall hate the whore, and shall make her desolate, and naked, and shall eat her flesh, and burn her with fire.

17 For God hath put in their hearts to fulfil his will, and to agree, and give their kingdom unto the beast, until the words of God shall be fulfilled.

18 And the woman which thou sawest is that great city, which reigneth over the kings of the earth.

It was not thought sufficient to represent these things only in vision; and therefore the angel, like the ἄγγελος, nuncius, or messenger in the ancient drama, undertakes to explain (ver. 7.) the mystery, the mystic scene or secret meaning, of the woman, and of the beast that carrieth her: and the angel's interpretation is indeed the best key to the Revelation, the best clue to direct and conduct us through this intricate labyrinth.

The mystery of the beast is first explained; and the beast is considered first in general (ver. 8.) under a threefold state or succession, as existing, and then ceasing to be, and then reviving again, so as to become another and the same. He was, and is not, καίπερ ἔστιν, and yet is, or according to other copies καὶ πάρεσται, and shall come, shall ascend out of the bottomless pit. A beast in the prophetic style, as we before observed, is a tyrannical idolatrous empire; and the Roman empire was idolatrous under the heathen emperors, and then ceased to be so for some time under the Christian emperors, and then became idolatrous again under the Roman pontiffs, and so hath continued ever since. It is the same idolatrous power revived again, but only in another form; and all the corrupt part of mankind, whose names are not enrolled as good citizens in the registers of heaven, are pleased at the revival of it; but in this last form it shall go into perdition; it shall not, as it did before, cease for a time, and revive again, but shall be destroyed for ever.

After this general account of the beast, there follows an explanation of the particular emblems, with a short preface, intimating that they are deserving of the deepest attention, and are a proper exercise and trial of the understanding. Here is the mind which hath wisdom: (ver. 9.) as it was said upon a former occasion, (xiii. 18.) Here is wisdom; let him that hath understanding count, &c. The seven heads have a double signification. They are primarily seven mountains on which the woman sitteth, on which the capital city is seated; which all who have the least tincture of letters know to be the situation of Rome. Historians, geographers, and poets, all speak of the city with seven hills; and passages might be quoted to this purpose without number and without end. It is observed too, that new Rome or Constantinople is situated on seven mountains: but these are very rarely mentioned, and mentioned only by obscure authors, in comparison of the others; and besides the seven mountains, other particulars also must coincide, which cannot be found in Constantinople. It is evident, therefore, that the city seated on seven mountains must be Rome; and a plainer description could not be given of it, without expressing the name, which there might be several wise reasons for concealing.

As the seven heads signify seven mountains, so they also signify seven kings, reigning over the seven mountains, (ver. 10, 11.) Καὶ βασιλεῖς ἐπτά εἰσιν. And they are seven kings, or kingdoms, or forms of government, as the word imports, and hath been shown to import in former instances. Five are fallen, five of these forms of government are already past; and one is, the sixth is now subsisting. The five fallen are kings, and consuls, and dictators, and decemvirs, and military tribunes with consular authority; as they are enumerated and distinguished by those who should best know, the two greatest Roman historians¹, Livy and Tacitus. The sixth is the power of the Cæsars or emperors, which was subsisting at the time of the vision. An end was put to the imperial name² in the year 476, by Odoacer, king of the Heruli, who having taken Rome deposed Momyllus Augustulus, the last emperor of the west. He and his successors the Ostrogoths assumed the title of kings of Italy: but though the name was changed, the power still continued much the same. This therefore cannot well be called a new form of government; it may rather be considered as a continuation of the imperial power, or as a renovation of the kingly authority. Consuls are reckoned but one form of government, though their office was frequently suspended, and after a time restored again; and in the same manner kings may be counted but one form of government, though the name was resumed after an interval of so many years. A new form of government was not erected till Rome fell under the obedience of the eastern emperor, and the emperor's lieutenant, the exarch of Ravenna, dissolved all the former magistracies, and constituted a duke of Rome, to govern the people, and to pay tribute to the exarchate of Ravenna. Rome had never experienced this form of government before: and this I conceive to be the other, which in the apostle's days was not yet come, and when he cometh he must continue a short space. For Rome was reduced to a dukedom tributary to the exarch of Ravenna, by Longinus, who was sent exarch³ in the year 566, according to some accounts, or in the year 568, according to others; and⁴ the city revolted from the eastern emperor to the pope in the year 727, which is a short space in comparison of the imperial power, which preceded, and lasted above five hundred years; and in comparison of the papal power, which fol-

¹ Quæ ab conditâ urbe Româ ad captam eandem urbem Romani sub regibus primum, consulibus deinde ac dictatoribus, decemvirisque ac tribunis consularibus gessere. [The exploits of the Romans, from the time of the building of the city to that of its being taken; first, under kings, then under consuls, and dictators, and decemvirs, and tribunes with consular authority, &c.] Livii Lib. vi. cap. i. Urbem Romam a principio reges habuere. Libertatem et consulatum L. Brutus instituit. Dictaturæ ad tempus sumebantur: neque decemviralis potestas ultra biennium, neque tribunorum militum consulare jus diu valuit. Non Cinnæ, non Sullæ longa dominatio; et Pompeii Crassique potentia, cito in Cæsarem; Lepidi atque Antonii arma, in Augustum cessere: qui cuncta discordiis civilibus fessa, nomine principis sub imperium accepit. ["At first kings possessed the city of Rome. Lucius Brutus brought in liberty and the consulship. The dictatorship was resorted to for a time only, nor did the power of the decemvirs continue beyond two years, nor was the authority of military tribunes of long duration. The dominion of Cinna and of Sylla was but short. The power of Pompey and Crassus quickly fell into the hands of Cæsar. The arms of Lepidus and Antony yielded to Augustus, who received under the title of sovereign the empire wearied out by civil broils."] Tacit. Annal. Lib. i. in initio.

² Sigonius de Occidentali Imperio, Lib. xiv. &c. Petavii Rat. Temp. Partis i. Lib. vi. cap. xviii.

³ Sigonius de Regno Ital. L. i. 1. Petav. Rat. Temp. Par. i. Lib. vii. cap. x.

⁴ Sigon. ibid. Lib. iii.

lowed, and hath now continued about a thousand years. But still possibly you may hesitate, whether this is properly a new form of government, Rome being still subject to the imperial power, by being subject to the Greek emperor's deputy, the exarch of Ravenna: and according as you determine this point, the beast that was and is not, was while idolatrous, and was not while not idolatrous, will appear to be the seventh or eighth. If you reckon this a new form of government, ¹ the beast that now is, is the eighth; if you do not reckon this a new form of government, the beast is of the seven; but whether he be the seventh or eighth, he is the last form of government, and goeth into perdition. It appears evidently that the sixth form of government, which was subsisting in St. John's time, is the imperial; and what form of government hath succeeded to that in Rome, and hath continued for a long space of time, but the papal? The beast, therefore, upon which the woman rideth, is the Roman government in its last form: and this, all must acknowledge, is the papal, and not the imperial.

Having explained the mystery of the seven heads, the angel proceeds to the explanation of the ten horns, (ver. 12—14.) the ten horns are ten kings, who have received no kingdom as yet: and consequently they were not in being at the time of the vision; and indeed the Roman empire was not divided into ten kingdoms till some time after it was become Christian. But they receive power as kings one hour, ² μὴν ὥραν, at the same time, or for the same

¹ Mr. Mann explains the seventh and eighth otherwise. Quis igitur rex septimus erit? Nimirum ipse papa. Nam ex quo A.D. 534, eum ecclesiarum omnium caput declaravit Justinianus, alii omnium judicem, ipsum a nullo judicandum, tantâ reverentiâ et obsequio ab Imp. ipsis cultus est, tantâ autoritate ipsos subinde reprehendit, interdum etiam anathemate percussit, ut non minus dicendus sit regnasse in spiritualibus, quamvis se subditum semper servumque servorum diceret, quam in temporalibus imperatores. Tunc igitur papa e septem illis, id est ex genere atque ordine illorum principum qui præcesserant, esse dicendus erat, donec A.D. 727 Leonis imp. jugum, quem anno superiore excommunicarat, prorsus excussit Gregorius II., Romamque et regiones vicinas sibi subiecit. Ex illo enim tempore papa rex octavus merito haberi potest, cum gladio spirituali temporalem quoque dehinc adeptus. Scio esse, qui pulso Leone imp. negent Romam papæ subjectam fuisse, sed a Pipino A.D. 752. Exarchatum Ravennæ, &c. papæ datum tantum cum aliis urbibus, non ipsam Romam; sed mihi videntur non de re, sed umbrâ tantum certare. ["Who then will be the seventh king? Surely the pope. For from the year A.D. 534, in which Justinian declared him the head of all the churches, and others declared him the judge of all, and to be judged by none, he was treated with so much reverence and respect by the emperors themselves, and he now and then reproved them with so much authority, sometimes even anathematizing them, that he might be said to have reigned no less in spiritual things, while he always called himself the servant of servants, than the emperors in temporal things. At that time the pope might be said to be of these seven, that is, to be of the kind and order of those princes who had gone before him, until in the year 727, Gregory II. shook off altogether the yoke of the emperor Leo, whom he had excommunicated in the preceding year, and brought Rome and the adjoining countries under his dominion. For, from that time, the pope might justly be regarded as the eighth king, since from that time he held the temporal as well as the spiritual sword. I know there are some who deny that Rome became subject to the pope on the expulsion of Leo II., but that this took place after; when in the year A.D. 752 the exarchate of Ravenna was given by Pepin to the pope, together with the cities which it included, and not Rome itself; but these appear to me to contend, not for the thing itself, but for the mere shadow." MS.

² Uno eodemque tempore. [At one and the same time.] Vitring. Malim, ad unum length of time, with the beast. It is true in both senses, they rise and fall together with the beast: and consequently they are not to be reckoned before the rise and establishment of the beast; and accordingly when a catalogue was produced of these ten kings or kingdoms in a dissertation upon Daniel, they were exhibited as they stood in the eighth century, which is the time of the rise and establishment of the beast. Kingdoms they might be before, but they were not before kingdoms or horns of the beast, till they embraced his religion, and submitted to his authority; and the beast strengthened them, as they again strengthened the beast. It is upon the seventh or last head of the beast that the horns are seen growing together; that is, upon the Roman empire in its seventh or last form of government; and they are not, like the heads, successive but contemporary kingdoms. These have one mind, and shall give their power and strength unto the beast; which is easily understood and applied to the princes and states in communion with the church of Rome. However they may differ in other respects, yet they agree in submitting implicitly to the authority of the Roman church, and in defending its rights and prerogatives against all opposers. But where were ever ten kings or kingdoms who were all unanimous in their submissions to the Roman empire, and voluntarily and of their own accord contributed their power and strength, their forces and riches, to support and maintain it? These shall make war with the Lamb, and the Lamb shall overcome them; they persecute the true church of Christ, but the true church shall in the end prevail and triumph over them; which particulars have been fulfilled in part already, and will be more fully accomplished hereafter.

In the former part of this description (ver. 1.) the whore is represented like ancient Babylon, sitting upon many waters: and these waters are here (ver. 15.) said expressly to signify peoples, and multitudes, and nations, and tongues. So many words in the plural number fitly denote the great extensiveness of her power and jurisdiction: and it is a remarkable peculiarity of Rome, different from all other governments in the world, that her authority is not limited to her own immediate subjects, and confined within the bounds of her own dominions, but extends over all kingdoms and countries professing the same religion. She herself glories in the title of the Catholic church, and exults in the number of her votaries as a cer-idemque tempus, ut cum identitate temporis durationem complectatur. ["I would choose rather to say, at one and the same time, in order to comprehend the duration with the identity of time."] Mr. Mann's MS.

¹ Idque hoc loco tanto magis appositè, quod ex populi reverentiâ et favore primo excrevit potestas illa papalis, et per decem aut plura sæcula populi Romani suffragiis creati sunt papæ. [And that in this place is so much the more in point, because from the reverence and kindness of the people, it was that the papal power was first advanced, and during ten centuries or more the popes were elected by the suffrages of the Roman people.] Mr. Mann's MS.

tain proof of the true religion. Cardinal ¹ Bellarmin's first note of the true church is the very name of the Catholic church: and his fourth note is amplitude, or multitude and variety of believers; for the truly Catholic church, says he, ought not only to comprehend all ages, but likewise all places, all nations, all kinds of men. But notwithstanding the general current in her favour, the tide shall turn against her; and the hands which helped to raise her, shall also pull her down, (ver. 16.) The ten horns shall hate the whore; that is, by a common figure of the whole for a part, some of the ten kings, for others (xviii. 9.) shall bewail her, and lament for her, and (xix. 19.) shall fight and perish in the cause of the beast. Some of the kings who formerly loved her, grown sensible of her exorbitant exactions and oppressions, shall hate her, shall strip, and expose, and plunder her, and utterly consume her with fire. Rome, therefore, will finally be destroyed by some of the princes, who are reformed, or shall be reformed from popery; and as the kings of France have contributed greatly to her advancement, it is not impossible nor improbable that some time or other they may also be the principal authors of her destruction. France hath already shown some tendency towards a reformation, and therefore may appear more likely to accomplish it. Nay, even the kings of Spain and Portugal, their most catholic and faithful majesties, as they are styled, have restrained the power of the pope and the inquisition, and have not only banished the Jesuits from their respective kingdoms, but have likewise insisted upon the suppression of that order, which may be considered as leading steps to some farther revolution. Such a revolution may more reasonably be expected, because (ver. 17.) this infatuation of popish princes is permitted by Divine Providence only for a certain period, until the words of God shall be fulfilled, and particularly the words of the prophet Daniel, (vii. 25; 26.) They shall be given into his hand, until a time, and times, and the dividing of times: but then, as it immediately follows, the judgment shall sit, and they shall take away his dominion, to consume, and to destroy it unto the end.

Little doubt can remain after this, what idolatrous church was meant by the whore of Babylon: But for the greater assuredness it is added by the angel, (ver. 18.) The woman which thou sawest is that great city. The angel had undertaken to tell the mystery of the woman, and of the beast. He hath explained the mystery of the beast, and of his seven heads and ten horns; and his explanation of the mystery of the woman is that great city, which reigneth over the kings of the earth. And what city at the time of the vision reigned over the kings of the earth, but Rome? She hath too, ever since, reigned over the kings of the earth, if not with temporal, yet at least with spiritual, authority. In the arts of government she hath far exceeded all the cities both of ancient and of modern times: as if she had constantly remembered and put in practice the advice of the poet,

¹ Prima Nota, est ipsum Catholicæ Ecclesiæ et Christianorum nomen. [Translated in the text.] Bellar. de Notis Ecclesiæ, Lib. iv. cap. iv. Quarta Nota, est amplitudo, sive multitudo et varietas credentium. Ecclesia enim vere catholica, non solum debet amplecti omnia tempora, sed etiam omnia loca, omnes nationes, omnium hominum genera. [Translated in the text.] Ibid. cap. vii.

Tu regere imperio populos, Romane, memento :
Hæ tibi erunt artes.

VIRGIL.

Rome, therefore, is evidently and undeniably this great city; and that Christian and not Heathen, papal and not imperial Rome was meant, hath appeared in several instances, and will appear in several more.

CHAPTER XVIII.

1 AND after these things I saw another angel come down from heaven, having great power: and the earth was lightened with his glory.

2 And he cried mightily with a strong voice, saying, Babylon the great is fallen, is fallen, and is become the habitation of devils, and the hold of every foul spirit, and a cage of every unclean and hateful bird.

3 For all nations have drunk of the wine of the wrath of her fornication, and the kings of the earth have committed fornication with her, and the merchants of the earth are waxed rich through the abundance of her delicacies.

4 And I heard another voice from heaven, saying, Come out of her, my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues:

5 For her sins have reached unto heaven, and God hath remembered her iniquities.

6 Reward her even as she rewarded you, and double unto her double, according to her works: in the cup which she hath filled, fill to her double.

7 How much she hath glorified herself, and lived deliciously, so much torment and sorrow give her: for she saith in her heart, I sit a queen, and am no widow, and shall see no sorrow.

8 Therefore shall her plagues come in one day, death, and mourning, and famine; and she shall be utterly burnt with fire: for strong is the Lord God who judgeth her.

After this account of the state and condition of spiritual Babylon, there follows a description of her fall and destruction, in the same sublime and figurative style as Isaiah, Jeremiah, and Ezekiel have foretold the fall of ancient Babylon and Tyre, the types and emblems of the spiritual Babylon. A mighty and glorious angel descends from heaven, (ver. 1—3.) and proclaims as before, (xiv. 8.) the fall of Babylon, and together with her punishment, the crimes which deserved it, her idolatry and wickedness. It is farther added, that after her fall she shall be made a scene of desolation, and become the habitation of hateful birds and beasts of prey; as Isaiah also predicted concerning ancient Babylon, (xiii. 21.) Wild beasts of the desert shall lie there, and their houses shall be full of doleful creatures, and owls shall dwell there, and satyrs shall dance there: where the word that we translate satyrs, the Seventy translate δαιμόνια, dæmons or devils, who ¹ were supposed sometimes to take the shape of goats or satyrs, and to haunt forlorn and desolate places: and it is from the translation of the Seventy that the apostle hath borrowed his images and expressions. But if this fall of Babylon was effected by Totilas, king of the Ostrogoths, as Grotius affirms, or by Alaric, king of the Visigoths, as the bishop of Meaux contends, how can Rome be said ever since to have been the habitation of devils, and the hold of every foul spirit, and a cage of every unclean and hateful bird, unless they will allow the popes and cardinals to merit these appellations?

Another voice is also heard from heaven, (ver. 4—8.) exhorting all Christians to forsake the communion of so corrupt a church, lest they should be partakers of her sins and of her plagues, and at the same time denouncing that her punishment shall be great and extraordinary, in proportion to her crimes. But was there any such necessity of forsaking the church of Rome in the days of Alaric or Totilas, before she had yet degenerated again into idolatry? or what were then her notorious crimes, deserving of such exemplary punishment, unless Rome Christian was to suffer for the sins of Rome Pagan? She saith in her heart, like ancient Babylon, (Is. xlvii. 7, 8.) I sit a queen, and am no widow, and shall see no sorrow; she glories like ancient Rome, in the name ² of the eternal city: but notwithstanding she shall be utterly burnt with fire; for strong is the Lord God who judgeth her. These expressions can imply no less than a total destruction by fire; but Rome hath never yet been totally destroyed by fire. The most that ³ Alaric and ⁴ Totilas did, was

¹ Vide Bocharti Hieroz. Part. Prior. Lib. ii. cap. liii. col. 643.

² It is to be found in the very title of Kircher's Obeliscus Pamphilus: in urbis æternæ ornamentum erexit Innocentius X. Pont. Max. [Innocent X. the supreme Pontiff, erected it as an ornament of the eternal city.] Apud Daubuz, p. 812.

³ Tertia die barbari, quam ingressi fuerant urbem, sponte discedunt, facto quidem aliquantarum ædium incendio, &c. [On the third day the barbarians, of their own accord, departed from the city into which they had entered, after having set fire to some houses, &c.] Oros. Hist. Lib. vii. cap. xxxix. Edit. Havercam. Alaricus trepidam urbem Romani invasit, partemque ejus cremavit incendio, &c. [Alaric attacked the city of Rome, which was now thrown into consternation, and burnt a part of it with fire, &c.] Marcellini Chron. Indict. viii. p. 38. Edit. Scaligeri. Quinetiam ædificia quædam incensa, aliâque opera temerè furore barbarico deturbata sunt. [Moreover some houses were set on fire, and some works thrown down by the fury of the barbarians.] Sigonii Hist. de Occidentali Imperio, Lib. x. in fine.

⁴ Procop. de Bell. Goth. Lib. iii. cap. xxii. Ῥώμην δὲ οὔτε καθελεῖν οὔτε ἀπολιπεῖν burning some parts of the city; but if only some parts of the city were burnt, it was not an event important enough to be ascribed to the Lord God particularly, and to be considered as a strong exertion of his judgment.

9 And the kings of the earth, who have committed fornication, and lived deliciously with her, shall bewail her, and lament for her, when they shall see the smoke of her burning.

10 Standing afar off for the fear of her torment, saying, Alas, alas, that great city Babylon, that mighty city! for in one hour is thy judgment come.

11 And the merchants of the earth shall weep and mourn over her, for no man buyeth her merchandise any more:

12 The merchandise of gold and silver, and precious stones, and of pearls, and fine linen, and purple, and silk, and scarlet, and all thyine wood, and all manner vessels of ivory, and all manner vessels of most precious wood, and of brass, and iron, and marble.

13 And cinnamon, and odours, and ointments, and frankincense, and wine, and oil, and fine flour, and wheat, and beasts, and sheep, and horses, and chariots, and slaves, and souls of men.

14 And the fruits that thy soul lusted after, are departed from thee, and all things which were dainty and goodly, are departed from thee, and thou shalt find them no more at all.

15 The merchants of these things, which were made rich by her, shall stand afar off, for the fear of her torment, weeping and wailing,

16 And saying, Alas, alas, that great city, that was clothed in fine linen, and purple, and scarlet, and decked with gold, and precious stones, and pearls! for in one hour so great riches is come to nought.

17 And every ship-master, and all the company in ships, and sailors, and as many as trade by sea, stood afar off, 18 And cried, when they saw the smoke of her burning, saying, What city is like unto this great city?

19 And they cast dust on their heads, and cried, weeping and wailing, saying, Alas, alas, that great city, wherein were made rich all that had ships in the sea, by reason of her costliness! for in one hour is she made desolate.

20 Rejoice over her, thou heaven, and ye holy apostles and prophets, for God hath avenged you on her.

τολοιπὸν Τωριλὰς ἤθελεν. Porro Totilas Romam nec delere, nec relinquere amplius voluit. [But Totilas would neither destroy, nor for the future leave the city of Rome.] Ibid. cap. xxxvi. ibid. Lib. iv. cap. xxii. Totilas dolo Isaurorum ingreditur Romam die XVI. Kal. Jan. ac evertit muros, domos aliquantas igni comburens, &c. [Totilas by a stratagem of the Isaurians enters into Rome, on the sixteenth of the calends of January, and pulls down the walls, and burns a few houses with fire, &c.] Marcellini Chron. p. 54. ibid. Sigonius ibid. Lib. xix.

In this solemn manner, by an angel and by a voice from heaven, is declared the fall of Rome, and her destruction by fire : and then are set forth the consequences of her fall, the lamentations of some, and the rejoicings of others. The kings of her communion, who have committed fornication, and lived deliciously with her, bewail and lament for her : (ver. 9, 10.) but what kings were they who lived deliciously with old Rome, and had reason to lament her fall? The merchants of the earth weep and mourn over her ; (ver. 11—17.) for there is an end of all traffic and commerce with her, whether spiritual or temporal; for it is intimated, (ver. 13.) that they make merchandise of the souls as well as of the bodies of men. The ship-masters, and sailors, and as many as trade by sea, weep and wail : (ver. 17—19.) for they can now no longer import or export commodities for her, or convey strangers to and fro; for there is an end of all her costliness. These lamentations are copied from the like lamentations over Tyre, in the 26th and 27th chapters of Ezekiel; and are equal to the most mournful strains of the Greek tragedians over Thebes or Troy. In all they stand afar off, (ver. 10. 15. 17.) as if they were unable or afraid to help and assist her. In all they cry οὐαὶ, οὐαὶ, alas, alas, (ver. 10. 16. 19.) which is the third woe, οὐαὶ, before mentioned; (viii. 13. xi. 14.) for as the fall of the Othman empire is the end of the second woe, so the fall of Rome is the completion of the third woe. In all they lament the suddenness of her fall; (ver. 10. 17. 19.) for in one hour is her destruction come. At the same time her destruction is matter of joy and triumph (ver. 20.) to the holy apostles and prophets, for God hath avenged them on her ; but what reason had the Christians to rejoice over the calamities brought on Rome by Alaric or Totilas, in which they themselves were the principal sufferers? and how were these calamities any vindication of their cause, or of the cause of true religion?

21 And a mighty angel took up a stone like a great millstone, and cast it into the sea, saying, Thus with violence shall that great city Babylon be thrown down, and shall be found no more at all.

22 And the voice of harpers, and musicians, and of pipers, and trumpeters, shall be heard no more at all in thee : and no craftsmen, of whatsoever craft he be, shall be found any more in thee ; and the sound of a millstone shall be heard no more at all in thee :

23 And the light of a candle shall shine no more at all in thee ; and the voice of the bridegroom and of the bride shall be heard no more at all in thee : for thy merchants were the great men of the earth ; for by thy sorceries were all nations deceived ;

24 And in her was found the blood of prophets, and of saints, and of all that were slain upon the earth.

Yet farther to confirm the sudden fall and irrecoverable destruction of Rome, an emblem is copied and improved from Jeremiah, (li. 63, 64.) a mighty angel (ver. 21.) casteth a millstone into the sea, declaring that with the same violence this great city shall be thrown down, and shall never rise again. Her utter desolation is farther described (ver. 22, 23.) in phrases and expressions borrowed from the ancient prophets. (Isa. xxiv. 8. Jer. vii. 34; xvi. 9; xxv. 10; Ezek. xxvi. 13.) There shall be no more musicians for the entertainment of the rich and great; no more tradesmen or artificers to furnish the conveniences of life; no more servants or slaves to grind at the mill, and supply the necessaries of life. Nay, there shall be no more lights, no more bridal songs; the city shall never be peopled again by new marriages, but shall remain depopulated for ever. For which utter desolation there are assigned these reasons, (ver. 23, 24.) her pride and luxury, her superstition and idolatry, her tyranny and cruelty. Her punishment shall be as severe and exemplary, as if she had been guilty of all the persecutions that ever were upon account of religion; for by her conduct she hath approved, and imitated, and surpassed them all. But Rome hath never yet been depopulated and desolated in this manner. She hath been taken indeed and plundered ¹ by Alaric, king of the Visigoths, in the year 410, by Genseric, king of the Vandals, in the year 455, by Totilas, king of the Ostrogoths, in the year 546, and by others since that time: but yet she is still standing and flourishing, and is honoured by many nations as the metropolis of the Christian world; she still resounds with singers and musicians; she still excels in arts which serve to pomp and luxury; she still abounds with candles, and lamps, and torches, burning even by day as well as by night: and consequently this prophecy hath not yet been, but remains yet to be fulfilled.

CHAPTER XIX.

1 AND after these things I heard a great voice of much people in heaven, saying, Alleluia: Salvation, and glory, and honour, and power unto the Lord our God;

2 For true and righteous are his judgments; for he hath judged the great whore, which did corrupt the earth with her fornication, and hath avenged the blood of his servants at her hand.

3 And again they said, Alleluia. And her smoke rose up for ever and ever.

4 And the four and twenty elders, and the four beasts fell down and worshipped God that sat on the throne, saying, Amen; Alleluia.

5 And a voice came out of the throne, saying, Praise our God, all ye his servants, and ye that fear him, both small and great.

6 And I heard as it were the voice of a great multitude, and as the voice of many waters, and as the voice of mighty thunders, saying, Alleluia: for the Lord God omnipotent reigneth.

¹ See Petav. Rav. Temp. and Blair's Chron. Tables.

7 Let us be glad and rejoice, and give honour to him: for the marriage of the Lamb is come, and his wife hath made herself ready.

8 And to her was granted, that she should be arrayed in fine linen, clean and white: for the fine linen is the righteousness of saints.

9 And he saith unto me, Write, Blessed are they which are called unto the marriage-supper of the Lamb. And he saith unto me, These are the true sayings of God.

10 And I fell at his feet to worship him: and he said unto me, See thou do it not: I am thy fellow-servant, and of thy brethren that have the testimony of Jesus: worship God: for the testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy.

Hereupon the whole church, (ver. 1—4.) agreeably to the exhortation of the angel, (xviii. 20.) join in praises and thanksgivings to Almighty God for his truth and righteousness in judging this idolatrous city, his truth in fulfilling his promises and threatenings, and his righteousness in proportioning her punishment to her crimes. And her smoke rose up for ever and ever; which intimates that she should be made as signal a monument of divine vengeance as Sodom and Gomorrah. It is taken from Isaiah, who hath said much the same thing of Edom, and by Edom¹ the Jews understand Rome. (Isaiah xxxiv. 9, 10.) And the streams thereof shall be turned into pitch; in the genuine² editions of the Chaldee paraphrase it is, And the rivers of Rome shall be turned into pitch, and the dust thereof into brimstone, and the land thereof shall become burning pitch. It shall not be quenched night nor day; the smoke thereof shall go up for ever. This tradition of the rabbins may receive some confirmation from these words of the apostle: and such an event may appear the more probable, because the adjacent countries are known to be of a sulphureous and bituminous soil; there have even at Rome been³ eruptions of subterraneous fire, which have consumed several buildings; so that the fuel seemeth to be prepared, and waiteth only for the breath of the Lord to kindle it. But God is praised not only for the destruction of the great seat of idolatry, but also

¹ R. David in principio Obadiæ. Quod autem dicunt prophetæ de vastatione Edom in extremitate dierum, de Româ dixerunt. [Rabbi David, at the beginning of Obadiah, "but what the prophets say of the destruction of Edom in the last days, they have spoken concerning Rome."] Buxtorf. Chald. Lex. in voce רומא.

² Et convertentur flumina Romæ in picem, &c. Posteriores editiones vocem Romæ omiserunt. ["And the rivers of Rome shall be turned into pitch, &c. The later editions have omitted the word Rome."] Buxtorf. ibid.

³ Vide Dionis Hist. Lib. lxvi. in Tito, πῦρ δὲ δὴ ἕτερον ἐπίγειον τῷ ἐξῆς ἔτει πολλὰ πάντων τῆς Ῥώμης ἐπενείματο. κ. τ. λ. Ignis autem alius supra terram exortus anno insequenti magnam admodum Romæ partem absumsit, &c. [But another fire bursting forth upon the earth, in the following year, consumed a very great part of Rome, &c.] P. 756. Edit. Leunclav.

(ver. 5—8.) for the manifestation of his kingdom, as before, (xi. 17.) and for the happy and glorious state of the reformed Christian church. She is no harlot tainted with idolatry, but a spouse prepared for her Lord Christ: she is not arrayed like an harlot in purple and scarlet colour, but like a decent bride, in fine linen, clean and white, as the properest emblem of her purity and sanctity. Christ hath now, as St. Paul expresseth it, (Eph. v. 26, 27.) sanctified and cleansed his church with the washing of water, by the word, that he might present it to himself a glorious church, not having spot or wrinkle or any such thing, but that it should be holy, and without blemish. So great is the felicity of this period, that the angel orders it (ver. 9.) to be particularly noted: and blessed and happy are they who shall be living at this time, and be worthy to partake of this marriage feast. It is a matter of consolation to all good Christians, and they may assuredly depend upon it, as the never-failing word of God. St. John was in such rapture and ecstasy at these discoveries, that (ver. 10.) not knowing or not considering what he did, he fell down at the angel's feet to worship him: but the angel prohibits all manner of worship, for he was no more than a fellow-servant of the apostle's, and of all true prophets, of all who have the testimony of Jesus, and the testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy. Worship not me, then, says the angel, but God, whose servants we both are, and who inspires us both with the same spirit of prophecy.

11 And I saw heaven opened, and behold a white horse; and he that sat upon him was called faithful and true, and in righteousness he doth judge and make war.

12 His eyes were as a flame of fire, and on his head were many crowns; and he had a name written that no man knew but he himself:

13 And he was clothed with a vesture dipt in blood: and his name is called, The Word of God.

14 And the armies which were in heaven followed him upon white horses, clothed in fine linen, white and clean.

15 And out of his mouth goeth a sharp sword, that with it he should smite the nations: and he shall rule them with a rod of iron: and he treadeth the wine-press of the fierceness and wrath of Almighty God.

16 And he hath on his vesture and on his thigh a name written, KING OF KINGS, AND LORD OF LORDS.

17 And I saw an angel standing in the sun; and he cried with a loud voice, saying to all the fowls that fly in the midst of heaven, Come and gather yourselves together unto the supper of the great God;

18 That ye may eat the flesh of kings, and the flesh of captains, and the flesh of mighty men, and the flesh of horses, and of them that sit on them, and the flesh of all men, both free and bond, both small and great.

19 And I saw the beast and the kings of the earth, and their armies gathered together to make war against him that sat on the horse, and against his army.

20 And the beast was taken, and with him the false prophet that wrought miracles before him, with which he deceived them that had received the mark of the beast, and them that worshipped his image. These both were cast alive into a lake of fire burning with brimstone.

21 And the remnant were slain with the sword of him that sat upon the horse, which sword proceeded out of his mouth: and all the fowls were filled with their flesh.

It was said by the angel, speaking of the kings subject to the beast, (xvii. 14.) These shall make war with the Lamb, and the Lamb shall overcome them: for he is Lord of lords and King of kings; and they that are with him, are called, and chosen, and faithful: and this vision (ver. 11—21.) is added by way of enlargement and explanation of that great event. Heaven is opened, and our Saviour cometh forth riding upon a white horse, as a token of his victory and triumph over his enemies. He is described in such characters as are appropriated to him in this book, and in the ancient prophets. On his head also were many crowns, to denote his numerous conquests and kingdoms, which were now (xi. 15.) become the kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ, and he shall reign for ever and ever. As the Jewish high-priest wore the ineffable name of Jehovah on his forehead, so he had a name written, which none could perfectly comprehend but himself; and his name is called The Word of God. He had likewise another name written on that part of his vesture which covered his thigh, King of kings, and Lord of lords; a title much affected by the ¹ eastern monarchs, and by Antichrist himself. The pope is ² styled King of kings, and Lord of lords; but what he is only in pretence, Christ is in reality. His armies are mounted upon white horses, as well as himself, and are clothed in fine linen, white and clean, as emblems of their victory and sanctity. An angel standing in the sun, and so conspicuous to all, in lofty strains copied from the ancient prophets, and particularly from Ezekiel, (xxxix. 17, 18.) calleth the fowls to the great slaughter of Christ's enemies. These enemies are the beast and the false prophet, the Antichristian powers civil and ecclesiastical, with their armies gathered together, their adherents and followers combined and determined to support idolatry, and oppose all reformation. But the principals, as deserving of the greatest punishment, are taken, and cast alive into a lake of fire burning with brimstone: and their followers are slain with the word of Christ, the sword which proceeded out of his mouth; and all the fowls are filled with their flesh; their substance is seized for other persons, and for other uses. In a word, the design of this sublime and figurative description is to show the downfall of Popery, and the triumph of Christianity: the true word of God will prevail over superstition and idolatry; all the powers of Antichrist shall be completely subdued; and the religion of Rome, as well as Rome herself, be totally destroyed.

¹ Artaxerxes, king of kings, Ezra vii. 12. Rex regum Sapor. [Sapor, king of kings.] Amm. Marcell. Lib. xvii. cap. v. p. 163. Edit. Valesii, Paris. 1681. βασιλεὺς βασιλέων καὶ δεσπότης δεσπότων Σεσωΐσις. Rex regum, et dominus dominorum Sesosis, vel Sesostris. [Sesosis, king of kings, and lord of lords.] Diod. Sic. Lib. i. p. 35. Edit. Steph. p. 51. Edit. Rhodomani.

² See Jewel's Defence of his Apology, Part v. and Barrow's Introduction to his Treatise of the Pope's Supremacy.

CHAPTER XX.

1 AND I saw an angel come down from heaven, having the key of the bottomless pit, and a great chain in his hand.

2 And he laid hold on the dragon, that old serpent, which is the devil and Satan, and bound him a thousand years.

3 And cast him into the bottomless pit, and shut him up, and set a seal upon him, that he should deceive the nations no more, till the thousand years should be fulfilled: and after that, he must be loosed a little season.

4 And I saw thrones, and they sat upon them, and judgment was given unto them: and I saw the souls of them that were beheaded for the witness of Jesus, and for the word of God, and which had not worshipped the beast, neither his image, neither had received his mark upon their foreheads, or in their hands; and they lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years.

5 But the rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished. This is the first resurrection.

6 Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection: on such the second death hath no power, but they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with him a thousand years.

After the destruction of the beast and of the false prophet, there still remains the dragon, who had delegated his power to them, that old serpent, which is the devil and Satan: but he is bound by an angel, an especial minister of Providence; and the famous millennium commences, or the reign of the saints upon earth for a thousand years, (ver. 1—6.) Binding him with a great chain, casting him into the bottomless pit, shutting him up, and setting a seal upon him, are strong figures to show the strict and severe restraint which he should be laid under, that he might deceive the nations no more during this whole period. Wickedness being restrained, the reign of righteousness succeeds, and the administration of justice and judgment is given to the saints of the Most High: and the martyrs and confessors of Jesus, not only those who were beheaded or suffered any kind of death under the heathen emperors, but also those who refused to comply with the idolatrous worship of the beast and of his image, are raised from the dead, and have the principal share in the felicities of Christ's kingdom upon earth. But the rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished; so that it was a peculiar prerogative of the martyrs and confessors above the rest of mankind. This is the first resurrection, a particular resurrection, preceding the general one at least a thousand years. Blessed and holy too is he who hath part in the first resurrection; he is holy in all the senses of the word, holy as separated from the common lot of mankind, holy as endowed with all virtuous qualifications, and none but such are admitted to partake of this blessed state. On such the second death hath no power. The second death is a Jewish phrase for the punishment of the wicked after death. So the ¹Chaldee paraphrase of Onkelos upon that text in Deuteronomy (xxxiii. 6.) Let Reuben live, and not die, hath, Let him not die the second death; and the other paraphrases of Jonathan Ben Uzziel and of Jerusalem have, Let him not die the second death, by which the wicked die in the world to come. It is a familiar phrase in the Chaldee paraphrases and Jewish writings, and in this very book (xx. 14; xxi. 8.) it is declared to be the same as the lake burning with fire and brimstone. The sons of the resurrection, therefore, shall not die again, but shall live in eternal bliss, as well as enjoy all the glories of the millennium, be priests of God and of Christ, and reign with him a thousand years.

Nothing is more evident than that this prophecy of the millennium, and of the first resurrection, hath not yet been fulfilled, even though the resurrection be taken in a figurative sense. For reckon the thousand years with Usher from the time of Christ, or reckon them with Grotius from the time of Constantine, yet neither of these periods, nor indeed any other, will answer the description and character of the millennium, the purity and peace, the holiness and happiness of that blessed state. Before Constantine, indeed, the church was in greater purity, but was groaning under the persecutions of the heathen emperors. After Constantine the church was in greater prosperity, but was soon shaken and disturbed by heresies and schisms, by the incursions and devastations of the northern nations, by the conquering arms and prevailing imposture of the Saracens, and afterwards of the Turks, by the corruption, idolatry, and wickedness, the usurpation, tyranny, and cruelty of the church of Rome. If Satan was then bound, when can he be said to be loosed? Or how could the saints and the beast, Christ and Antichrist, reign at the same period? This prophecy therefore remains yet to be fulfilled, even though the resurrection be taken only for an allegory, which yet the text cannot admit without the greatest torture and violence. For with what propriety can it be said, that some of the dead who were beheaded lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years, but the rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished, unless the dying and living again be the same in both places, a proper death and resurrection? Indeed the death and resurrection of the witnesses before mentioned (chap. xi.) appears from the concurrent circumstances of the vision to be figurative, but the death and resurrection here mentioned must for the very same reasons be concluded to be real. If the martyrs rise only in a spiritual sense, then the rest of the dead rise only in a spiritual sense; but if the rest of the dead really rise, the martyrs rise in the same manner. There is no difference between them; and we should be cautious and tender of making the first resurrection an allegory, lest others should reduce the second into an allegory too, like those whom St. Paul mentions (2 Tim. ii. 17, 18.) Hy-meneus and Philetus, who concerning the truth have erred, saying that the resurrection is past already, and overthrow the faith of some. It is to this first resurrection that St. Paul alludes, when he affirms (1 Thess. iv. 16.) that the dead in Christ shall rise first, and (1 Cor. xv. 23.) that every man shall be made alive in his own order, Christ the first fruits, afterward they that are Christ's at his coming, and then cometh the end, after the general resurrection.

¹ Non moriatur morte secundâ. Onk. Nec moriatur morte quâ morientur improbi in futuro seculo. Jonath. Neque moriatur morte secundâ quâ morientur improbi in futuro seculo. Hieros. [Translated in the text.]

In the general that there shall be such a happy period as the millennium, that the kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, (Dan. vii. 27.) that Christ shall have the heathen for his inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for his possession, (Psal. ii. 8.) that the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea, (Isa. xi. 9.) that the fulness of the Gentiles shall come in, and all Israel shall be saved, (Rom. xi. 25, 26.) in a word, that the kingdom of heaven shall be established upon earth, is the plain and express doctrine of Daniel and all the prophets as well as of St. John: and we daily pray for the accomplishment of it in praying, Thy kingdom come. But of all the prophets St. John is the only one who hath declared particularly and in express terms, that the martyrs shall rise to partake of the felicities of this kingdom, and that it shall continue upon earth a thousand years: and the Jewish church before him, and the Christian church after him, have farther believed and taught, that these thousand years will be the seventh millenary of the world. A pompous heap of quotations might be produced to this purpose both from Jewish and Christian writers: but I choose to select only a few of the most material of each sort; you may find a great number ¹ in Dr. Burnet and other authors who have treated of this subject.

¹ Burnet's Theory, B. iii. chap. v. B. iv. chap. vi. Mede Placita Doctorum Hebræorum de Magno die Judicii, p. 535. B. v. chap. iii. p. 892, &c. &c.

Of the Jewish writers ¹ Rabbi Ketina, as cited in the Gemara or gloss of their Talmud, said that “the world endures six thousand years, and one thousand it shall be laid waste, (that is, the enemies of God shall be destroyed) whereof it is said, (Isai. ii. 11.) The Lord alone shall be exalted in that day. Tradition assents to Rabbi Ketina: as out of seven years every seventh is the year of remission, so out of the seven thousand years of the world the seventh millenary shall be the millenary of remission, that God alone may be exalted in that day.” It was ² the tradition of the house of Elias, who lived two hundred years or thereabouts before Christ, and the tradition might perhaps be derived from Elias the Tishbite, that “the world endures six thousand years, two thousand before the Law, two thousand under the Law, and two thousand under the Messiah.” It was also ³ the tradition of the house of Elias, that “the just whom God shall raise up (meaning in the first resurrection) shall not be turned again into dust. Now if you inquire how it shall be with the just in those thousand years wherein the holy blessed God shall renew his world, whereof it is said, And the Lord alone shall be exalted in that day; you must know that the holy blessed God will give them the wings as it were of eagles, that they may fly upon the face of the waters; whence it is said (Psal. xlv. 2.) Therefore will we not fear when the earth shall be changed. But perhaps you will say, it shall be a pain and affliction to them. Not at all, for it is said (Isai. xl. 31.) They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength, they shall mount up with wings as eagles.”

Of the Christian writers St. Barnabas, in the first century, ⁴ thus

¹ Dixit Rabbi Ketina, Sex annorum millibus stat mundus, et uno (millenario) vastabitur; de quo dicitur, Et exaltabitur Dominus solus die illo. Traditio adstipulatur R. Ketina: sicut ex septenis annis septimus quisque annus remissionis est, ita ex septem millibus annorum mundi septimus millenarius remissionis erit, ut Dominus solus exaltetur in die illo. [Translated in the text.] In Gemara Sanhedrim, apud Mede, p. 535 et 893.

² Traditio domus Eliæ: Sex mille annos durat mundus: bis mille annis inanitas; bis mille annis Lex; denique bis mille annis dies Christi. [Translated in the text.] Apud Mede, p. 536 et 894. Burnet's Theory, B. iii. chap. v.

³ Traditio domus Eliæ: Justi quos resuscitabit Deus non redigentur iterum in pulverem. Si quæras autem, Mille annis istis quibus Deus sanctus benedictus renovaturus est mundum suum, de quibus dicitur Et exaltabitur Dominus solus in die illo, quid justis futurum sit; sciendum, quod Deus sanctus benedictus dabit illis alas quasi aquilarum, ut volent super facie aquarum; unde dicitur (Psal. xlv. 2.) Propterea non timebimus, cum mutabitur terra. At forte (inquies) erit ipsis dolori seu afflictioni. Sed occurrit illud (Isa. xl. 31.) Expectantibus Dominum innovabuntur vires, efferentur alæ instar aquilarum. [Translated in the text.] Apud Mede, p. 776.

⁴ Καὶ ἐποίησεν ὁ Θεὸς ἐν ἑξ ἡμέραις τὰ ἔργα τῶν χειρῶν αὐτοῦ, καὶ συνετέλεσεν ἐν τῇ ἡμέρᾳ τῇ ἑβδόμῃ, καὶ κατέπανσεν ἐν αὐτῇ, καὶ ἡγίασεν αὐτήν. Προσέχετε, τέκνα, τί λέγει, τὸ συνετέλεσεν ἐν ἑξ ἡμέραις· τοῦτο λέγει, ὅτι συνετελεῖ ὁ Θεὸς κύριος ἐν ἑξακισχιλίοις ἔτεσι τὰ πάντα. Ἡ γὰρ ἡμέρα πᾶρ αὐτῷ χίλια ἔτη, αὐτὸς δὲ μαρτυρεῖ, λέγων, ἰδοὺ σήμερον ἡμέρα ἔσται ὡς χίλια ἔτη. Οὐκοῦν, τέκνα, ἐν ἑξ ἡμέραις, ἐν τοῖς ἑξακισχιλίοις ἔτεσι συνετελεσθήσεται τὰ πάντα. Καὶ κατέπανσε τῇ ἡμέρᾳ τῇ ἑβδόμῃ· τοῦτο λέγει, ὅταν ἰλθὼν ὁ υἱὸς αὐτοῦ, καὶ καταργήσῃ τὸν καιρὸν ἀνόμου, καὶ κρινεῖ τοὺς ἀσεβεῖς, καὶ ἀλλάξῃ τὸν ἥλιον, καὶ τὴν σελήνην, καὶ τοὺς ἀστέρας, τότε καλῶς καταπαύσεται ἐν τῇ ἡμέρᾳ τῇ ἑβδόμῃ. Fecitque Deus in sex diebus opera manuum suarum, et consummavit in die septimā, et in eā requievit, et sanctificavit eam. Advertite, filii, quid dicat; consummavit in sex diebus: id ait; omnia consummabit Dominus Deus in sex millibus annorum. Nam apud illum dies æquiparatur mille annis, ut ipsemet testatur comments upon those words of Moses, "And God made in six days the works of his hands, and he finished them on the seventh day, and he rested in it, and sanctified it. Consider, children, what that signifies, he finished them in six days. This it signifies, that the Lord God will finish all things in six thousand years. For a day with him is a thousand years; as he himself testifieth saying, Behold this day shall be as a thousand years. Therefore, children, in six days, that is, in six thousand years, shall all things be consummated. And he rested the seventh day: this signifies that when his Son shall come, and shall abolish the season of the wicked one, and shall judge the ungodly, and shall change the sun, and the moon, and the stars, then he shall rest gloriously in that seventh day." Justin Martyr, in the second century, ¹ declares the millennium to be the catholic doctrine of his time. "I, and as many as are orthodox Christians in all respects, do acknowledge that there shall be a resurrection of the flesh, (meaning the first resurrection) and a thousand years in Jerusalem rebuilt, and adorned, and enlarged, (that is, in the new Jerusalem) as the prophets Ezekiel, and Isaiah, and others unanimously attest." Afterwards he subjoins, "A certain man among us, whose name was John, one of the apostles of Christ, in a revelation made to him did prophesy, that the faithful believers in Christ should live a thousand years in the new Jerusalem, and after these should be the general resurrection and judgment:" which is an early attestation to the genuineness and authenticity of the book of the Revelation; for Justin was converted to Christianity about thirty years after the death of St. John, at which time probably many were alive, who had known and remembered the apostle. Dr. Middleton, in his Inquiry into the Miraculous Powers, &c. has done great injustice to Justin Martyr, as well as to several of the fathers. In treating of the millennium (p. 26.) he represents Justin as saying, "that all the saints should be raised in the flesh, and reign with Christ in Jerusalem, enlarged and beautified in a dicens, Ecce hodiernus dies erit tanquam mille anni. Itaque, filii, in sex diebus, hoc est, in sex annorum millibus consummabuntur universa. Et requievit die septimâ: hoc ait; quando veniens ejus filius tempus iniqui abolebit, ac judicabit impios, et mutabit solem ac lunam, stellasque, tunc pulchre requiescet in die septimâ. [Translated in the text.] S. Barnabæ Epist. cap. xv. Edit. Cotelerii, et Clerici.

¹ Ἐγὼ δὲ, καὶ εἰ τινὲς εἰσὶν ὀρθογνώμονες κατὰ πάντα χριστιανοὶ, καὶ σαρκὸς ἀνάστασιν γενήσεσθαι ἐπιστάμεθα, καὶ χίλια ἔτη ἐν Ἱερουσαλὴμ οἰκοδομηθεῖσθ, καὶ κοσμηθεῖσθ, καὶ πλατυνθεῖσθ, [ὥς] οἱ πρόφηται Ἰεζεκιὴλ, καὶ Ἡσαΐας, καὶ οἱ ἄλλοι ὁμολογοῦσιν. Ego autem, et si qui rectæ per omnia sententiæ Christiani sunt, et carnis resurrectionem futuram novimus, et mille annos in Hierusalem instauratâ, et exornatâ, et dilatatâ, sicut prophete, Ezechiel, et Esaias, et alii promulgant. [Translated in the text.] Καὶ ἐπειδὴ καὶ παρ' ἡμῖν ἀνὴρ τις, ᾧ ὄνομα Ἰωάννης, εἰς τῶν ἀποστόλων τοῦ Χριστοῦ, ἐν ἀποκαλύψει γενομένη αὐτῷ χίλια ἔτη ποιήσειεν ἐν Ἱερουσαλὴμ τοὺς τῷ ἡμετέρῳ Χριστῷ πιστέσαντας προσέφητευσε, καὶ μετὰ ταῦτα τὴν καθολικὴν καὶ, συνελόντι φάναι, αἰωνίαν ὁμοθυμαδὸν ἡμᾶ πάντων ἀνάστασιν γενήσεσθαι καὶ κρίσιν. Et vir apud nos quidam, cui nomen erat Joannes, e duodecim apostolis Christi unus, in eâ quæ illi exhibitæ est revelatione, Christi fideles nostri annos mille Hierosolymis peracturos esse prælocutus est, et postea universalem et (ut semel dicam) sempiternam omnium unanimiter simul resurrectionem et judicium futurum. [Translated in the text.] Just. Mart. Dial. cum Tryphone Pars Secunda, p. 307 et 308. Edit. Paris. p. 313 et 315. Edit. Thirlbii.

wonderful manner for their reception in the enjoyment of all sensual pleasures, for a thousand years before the general resurrection." But in the original there is no such clause as that, in the enjoyment of all sensual pleasures; it is an addition and interpolation of the Doctor's own, in order to depreciate the venerable father: and he could not possibly have made it by mistake, he must have done it designedly, for he has cited the original as far as to that clause, and there stopping short has concealed the rest with an &c. If he had fairly cited the whole sentence (as I have done above) he was sensible that every scholar must have detected the imposition. It is seriously to be lamented, that so learned and ingenious a man, and so very fine a writer as Dr. Middleton was, should in support of any argument have been guilty of so many false quotations as he has been, more than any author I know. Forgery should be deemed a capital offence in literary as well as in civil affairs. It has been the fate of Justin to have his sense misrepresented by others as well as by Dr. Middleton. For he has been made to say that the doctrine of the millennium had not, even in his time, obtained universal reception, but that many Christians of pure and pious principles rejected it? it should have been said, did not acknowledge it, τοῦτο μὴ γνωρίζειν. But Justin could not so palpably contradict himself. The whole context evidently demonstrates, that we should read, with Mede and Tillotson, the passage with a negative, οὐ τῆς καθαρᾶς καὶ ἐνσεβοῦς, that many not of pure and pious principles did not acknowledge it. For some, says he, are called Christians, but are atheistical and ungodly heretics, τοὺς γὰρ λεγομένους μὲν χριστιανούς, ὄντας δὲ ἀθέους καὶ ἀσεβεῖς αἰρεσιώτας. A manifest proof that they were men not of pure and godly principles. A little after he subjoins, that some are called Christians, and do not confess this, and deny the resurrection of the dead; τισὶ λεγομένοις χριστιανοῖς, καὶ τοῦτο μὴ ὁμολογοῦσιν, καὶ λέγουσι μὴ εἶναι νεκρῶν ἀνάστασιν. And then after all follows what was cited before, "But I, and as many as are orthodox Christians in all respects, do acknowledge that there shall be a resurrection of the flesh and a thousand years in Jerusalem," &c. He thought the doctrine of the millennium of such consequence that he has joined it all along with that of the resurrection of the dead. It is evident, therefore, that he never meant to say, that they who rejected this doctrine were Christians of pure and pious principles, but the contrary. Tertullian, at the beginning of the third century, ¹professeth his belief of the kingdom promised to the saints upon earth, of their resurrection for a thousand years, of their living in the new Jerusalem, and therein enjoying all spiritual delights, and of the destruction of the world and the general judgment after the thousand years; and his books of Paradise and of the Hope of the Faithful, if they had not been lost or suppressed, might have afforded ampler proofs of all these particulars. Lactantius, at the beginning of the fourth century,¹ is very copious upon this subject, in the seventh book of his Divine Institutions. He saith, "Because all the works of God were finished in six days, it is necessary that the world should remain in this state six ages, that is, six thousand years." And again, "because having finished the works he rested on the seventh day, and blessed it; it is necessary that at the end of the sixth thousandth year all wickedness should be abolished out of the earth, and justice should reign for a thousand years." He saith, "When the Son of God shall have destroyed injustice, and shall have restored the just to life, he shall be conversant among men a thousand years, and shall rule them with most just government. At the same time the prince of devils shall be bound with chains, and shall be in custody the thousand years of the heavenly kingdom, while justice shall reign in the world, lest he should attempt any evil against the people of God." He saith, "When the thousand years of the kingdom, that is, seven thousand years shall draw towards a conclusion, Satan shall be loosed again: and when the thousand years shall be completed, then shall be that second and public resurrection of all, wherein the unjust shall be raised to everlasting torments." And having enlarged upon these topics he concludes, "This is the doctrine of the holy prophets which we Christians follow; this is our wisdom." In short, the doctrine of the millennium was generally believed in the three first and purest ages; and this belief, as the² learned Dodwell hath justly observed, was one principal cause of the fortitude of the primitive Christians; they even coveted martyrdom, in hopes of being partakers of the privileges and glories of the martyrs in the first resurrection.

¹ Nam et confitemur in terrâ nobis regnum repromissum, &c. [For we also profess our belief of a kingdom upon earth which has been promised to us, &c.] Tertull. advers. Marcion. Lib. iii. cap. xxiv. Edit. Rigaltii, Paris. 1675.

¹ Quoniam sex diebus cuncta Dei opera perfecta sunt; per sæcula sex, id est annorum sex millia manere hoc statu mundum necesse est.—Et rursus, quoniam perfectis operibus requievit die septimo, eumque benedixit; necesse est, ut in fine sexti millesimi anni militia omnis aboleatur à terrâ, et regnet per annos mille justitia. [Translated in the text.] Cap. xiv. Verum ille, cum deleverit injustitiam—ac justos, qui a principio fuerunt, ad vitam restauraverit, mille annis inter homines versabitur, eosque justissimo imperio reget.—Sub idem tempus etiam princeps dæmonum—catenis vincietur, et erit in custodiâ mille annis cælestis imperii, quo justitia in orbe regnabit, ne quod malum adversus populum Dei moliat. [Translated in the text.] Cap. xxiv. Sed idem, cum mille anni regni, hoc est septem millia cœperint terminari; solvetur denuo, &c. Cum vero completi fuerint mille anni,—fiat secunda illa et publica omnium resurrectio, in quâ excitabuntur injusti ad cruciatus sempiternos.—Hæc est doctrina sanctorum prophetarum, quam Christiani sequimur; hæc nostra sapientia. [Translated in the text.] Cap. xxvi.

² Jam in millennii regno primam fore resurrectionem corporum crediderunt primævi Christiani. Et ut justorum propriam eam crediderunt resurrectionem, ita martyrum in eâ portionem longe esse præcipuam.—Hæc cum ita crederentur, dici nequit quantum martyres illius ætatis martyrii studio inflammarent. [The primitive Christians believed, that the first resurrection of their bodies would be in the kingdom of the Millennium. And as they believed that that resurrection would be peculiar to the righteous, so they believed that such as were martyrs would have the principal share in it. Since these things were thus believed, it is impossible to describe the influence it had upon the confessors of that age to covet martyrdom.] Dodwelli Dissert. Cyprian. xii. De Martyrum fortitudine, sect. xx. xxi.

Afterwards the doctrine grew into disrepute for various reasons. Some both Jewish and Christian writers have debased it with a mixture of fables; they have described the kingdom more like a sensual than a spiritual kingdom, and thereby they have not only exposed themselves, but, what is infinitely worse, the doctrine itself, to contempt and ridicule. It hath suffered by the misrepresentations of its enemies, as well as by the indiscretions of its friends; many, like ¹Jerome, have charged the millennarians with absurd and impious opinions which they never held; and rather than they would admit the truth of the doctrine, they have not scrupled to call in question the genuineness of the book of the Revelation. It hath been abused even to worse purposes; it hath been made an engine of faction; and turbulent fanatics, under the pretence of saints, have aspired to dominion, and disturbed the peace of civil society. Besides, wherever the influence and authority of the church of Rome have extended, she hath endeavoured by all means to discredit this doctrine; and indeed not without sufficient reason, this kingdom of Christ being founded on the ruins of the kingdom of Antichrist. No wonder, therefore, that this doctrine lay depressed for many ages, but it sprang up again at the Reformation, and will flourish together with the study of the Revelation. All the danger is, on one side, of pruning and lopping it too short, and on the other, of suffering it to grow too wild and luxuriant. Great caution, soberness, and judgment are required to keep the middle course. We should neither with some interpret it into an allegory, nor depart from the literal sense of Scripture without absolute necessity for so doing. Neither should we, with others, indulge an extravagant fancy, nor explain too curiously the manner and circumstances of this future state. It is safest and best faithfully to adhere to the words of Scripture, or to fair deductions from Scripture; and to rest contented with the general account, till time shall accomplish and eclaireise all the particulars.

7 And when the thousand years are expired, Satan shall be loosed out of his prison.

8 And shall go out to deceive the nations which are in the four quarters of the earth, Gog and Magog, to gather them together to battle; the number of whom is as the sand of the sea.

9 And they went up on the breadth of the earth, and compassed the camp of the saints about, and the beloved city; and fire came down from God out of heaven, and devoured them.

10 And the devil that deceived them was cast into the lake of fire and brimstone, where the beast and the false prophet are, and shall be tormented day and night for ever and ever.

¹ See Mede's Works, B. v. chap. v. D. Hieronymi Procunctata de Dogmate millenariorum, p. 897.

At the expiration of the thousand years (ver. 7—10.) the restraint shall be taken off from wickedness, and for a little season, as was said before, (ver. 3.) Satan shall be loosed out of his prison, and make one effort more to re-establish his kingdom. As he deceived our first parents in the paradisiacal state, so he shall have the artifice to deceive the nations in this millennial kingdom, to show that no state or condition upon earth is exempted and secured from sinning. The nations whom he shall deceive, are described as living in the remotest parts of the world; in the four quarters of the earth, ἐν ταῖς τέσσαρσι γωνίαις τῆς γῆς, in the four angles, or corners of the earth; and they are distinguished by the name of Gog and Magog, and are said to be as numerous as the sand of the sea. Gog and Magog seem to have been formerly the general name of the northern nations of Europe and Asia, as the Scythians have been since, and the Tartars are at present. In Ezekiel there is a famous prophecy concerning Gog and Magog, and this prophecy alludes to that in many particulars. Both that of Ezekiel and this of St. John remain yet to be fulfilled; and therefore we cannot be absolutely certain that they may not both relate to the same event, but it appears more probable that they relate to different events. The one is expected to take effect before, but the other will not take effect till after, the millennium. Gog and Magog, in Ezekiel, are said expressly (xxxviii. 6. 15; xxxix. 2.) to come from the north quarters, and the north parts, but in St. John they come from the four quarters, or corners of the earth. Gog and Magog, in Ezekiel, bend their forces against the Jews resettled in their own land, but in St. John they march up against the saints and church of God in general. Gog and Magog, in Ezekiel, are with very good reason supposed to be the Turks, but the Turks are the authors of the second woe, and the second woe (xi. 14.) is past before the third woe, and the third woe long precedes the time here treated of. Ezekiel's prophecy apparently coincides with the latter part of the eleventh chapter of Daniel, and presignifies the destruction of the Othman empire, which includes Gomer, and many European, as well as Ethiopia, Libya, and other nations. If Gog and Magog, in St. John, are the same with those in Ezekiel, then we must suppose the Othman empire to subsist throughout the millennium, which can hardly be believed, as it can hardly be reconciled with other prophecies. It may therefore be concluded that Gog and Magog, as well as Sodom, and Egypt, and Babylon, are mystic names in this book; and the last enemies of the Christian church are so denominated, because Gog and Magog appear to be the last enemies of the Jewish nation. Who they shall be, we cannot pretend to say with any the least degree of certainty. It is a strange, whimsical, absurd paradox of¹ Dr. Burnet, but his hypothesis betrayed him into it, that they shall be "sons of the earth, generated from the slime of the ground and the heat of the sun, as brute creatures were at first." Mr. Mede's ¹ conjecture is much more rational, that they shall be the nations of America, the nations of America being in all probability colonies or descendants from the Scythians, that is, from Gog and Magog. Whoever they shall be, they shall come up from the four corners of the earth on the breadth of the earth, and shall compass the camp of the saints about, and the beloved city, the new Jerusalem, with the saints encamped around it, as the Israelites encamped around the tabernacle in the wilderness. But they shall not succeed and prosper in their attempts; they shall not be able to hurt the church and city of God, but shall be destroyed, in an extraordinary manner, by fire from heaven: and the devil himself, the promoter and leader of this new apostacy and rebellion against God and his Christ, shall not only be confined as before, but shall be cast into the lake of fire and brimstone, where he shall be punished together with the beast and the false prophet, who were cast in before him, and shall be tormented day and night for ever and ever.

¹ Burnet's Theory, B. iv. chap. x.

11 And I saw a great white throne, and him that sat on it, from whose face the earth and the heaven fled away, and there was found no place for them.

12 And I saw the dead, small and great, stand before God: and the books were opened: and another book was opened, which is the book of life; and the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books, according to their works.

13 And the sea gave up the dead which were in it; and death and hell delivered up the dead which were in them: and they were judged every man according to their works.

14 And death and hell were cast into the lake of fire. This is the second death.

15 And whosoever was not found written in the book of life, was cast into the lake of fire.

After this last conflict and the final defeat of Satan, there follows (ver. 11—15.) the general resurrection and judgment, represented in a vision of a great white throne; great, to show the largeness and extent, white, to show the justice and equity of the judgment, and one sitting on it, who can be none other than the Son of God, for (John v. 22.) the Father hath committed all judgment unto the Son; from whose face the earth and the heaven fled away, and there was found no place for them, so that this is properly the end of the world. The dead, both small and great, of all ranks and degrees, as well those who perished at sea and were buried in the waters, as those who died at land, and were buried in graves, are all raised, and stand before the judgment-seat of God, where they are judged every man according to their works, as exactly as if all their actions had been recorded in books. They who are found not worthy to be enrolled in the registers of heaven, are cast into the lake of fire; whither also were cast death and hell, or the grave, who are here personified, as they are likewise in other places of holy Scripture. It may seem strange that death should be cast into the lake of fire, which is the second death; but the meaning is, that temporal death, which hitherto had exercised dominion over the race of men, shall be totally abolished, and with respect to the wicked, be converted into eternal death. Then, as St. Paul saith, (1 Cor. xv. 54. 26.) shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory: for the last enemy that shall be destroyed is death.

¹ De Gogo et Magogo in Apocalypsi Conjectura, in Mede's Works, B. iii. p. 574. Fulleri Miscell. Sacra, Lib. ii. cap. iv. in fine.

CHAPTER XXI.

1 AND I saw a new heaven and a new earth: for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away; and there was no more sea.

2 And I, John, saw the holy city, new Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband.

3 And I heard a great voice out of heaven, saying, Behold the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God.

4 And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away.

5 And he that sat upon the throne said, Behold, I make all things new. And he said unto me, Write: for these words are true and faithful.

6 And he said unto me, It is done. I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end: I will give unto him that is athirst of the fountain of the water of life freely.

7 He that overcometh shall inherit all things, and I will be his God, and he shall be my son.

8 But the fearful, and unbelieving, and the abominable, and murderers, and whoremongers, and sorcerers, and idolaters, and all liars, shall have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone: which is the second death.

A new heaven and a new earth (ver. 1.) succeeded in the room of the first heaven and the first earth, which passed away (xx. 11.) at the general judgment. In the new earth there is this remarkable property, that there is no more sea, which, whether it shall be effected by the means which ¹ the theorists of the earth have prescribed, or by any other, time must discover: but it is evident from hence, that this new heaven and earth are not designed to take place till after the general judgment, for at the general judgment (xx. 13.) the sea gave up the dead which were in it. Many understand the expression figuratively, that there shall be no troubles or commotions in this new world. In this new world too the new Jerusalem appears (ver. 2.) in full glory and splendour. It is described as coming down from God out of heaven; it is a city, whose builder and maker is God; and is adorned as the bride for the Lamb, the true church of Christ; and the new Jerusalem, the true church of Christ, subsists as well during the millennial kingdom as after it. At the commencement of the millennium it was said (xix. 7.) The marriage of the Lamb is come, and his wife hath made herself ready. At the conclusion of the millennium Gog and Magog went up (xx. 9.) against the beloved city: and here it is represented as the metropolis of the new heaven and the new earth. The new Jerusalem shall be the habitation of the saints of the first resurrection, and it shall also be the habitation of the saints of the general resurrection. The church of Christ shall endure through all times and changes in this world, and likewise in the world to come; it shall be glorious upon earth during the millennium, and shall be more glorious still in the new earth after the millennium, to all eternity. Earth shall then become as heaven, or rather it shall be a heaven upon earth, (ver. 3.) God dwelling visibly among men: and (ver. 4.) there shall be no more death, which cannot come to pass, till death shall be totally abolished, (xx. 14.) by being cast into the lake of fire, and till the former things, the first heaven and the first earth, are passed away. He who sat upon the throne as judge of the world (xx. 11.) declares (ver. 5.) Behold, I make all things new: He is the author of this second, as well as of the first creation, and he commands these things to be written for the edification and consolation of his church with a firm assurance of their truth and certainty. He pronounces this period (ver. 6—8.) to be the consummation of all things, when the promises of God, and the desires of his faithful servants shall all be fully accomplished, the righteous shall inherit all things, but the profligate and immoral shall have their portion in the lake of fire and brimstone; which is a farther demonstration, that these things cannot take effect till after the general judgment.

¹ Burnet's Theory, B. iv. chap. ii. Whiston's Theory, B. iv. chap. v.

Many, I know, both ancients and moderns, make the millennium synchronize with the new heaven and the new earth; and some latitude of interpretation may be well allowed in these mysterious points of futurity; but this order of things, and this interpretation of the words, appear to me most natural, and most agreeable to the context. Gog and Magog, the nations in the four corners of the earth, are deceived by Satan after the expiration of the millennium; but Gog and Magog are not inhabitants of the new heaven and the new earth. It is not our business to frame theories and invent hypotheses, but faithfully to follow the word of God as our surest guide, without regarding much the authority of men. Not but various authorities might be cited to show that this is no novel opinion. As St. Barnabas¹ says, "When the Lord shall make all things new, then shall be the beginning of the eighth day, which is the beginning of another world:" allowing six thousand years to the duration of this world, the seventh thousand to the millennium, and the eighth thousand to the beginning of a blessed eternity: and you may find many more testimonies alleged to this purpose in the notes of Cotelerius and other critics upon this passage of St. Barnabas. Lactantius² affirms, that "when the thousand years shall be completed, the world shall be renewed by God, and the heavens shall be folded up, and the earth shall be changed; and God shall transform men into the similitude of angels; and they shall be white as snow, and shall be always conversant in the sight of the Almighty, and shall sacrifice to their Lord, and serve him for ever." St. Austin also³ declares, that "the judgment being finished, then this heaven and this earth shall cease to be, when the new heaven and the new earth shall begin to be. For by a mutation of things this world will pass away, not by an utter extinction. Whence also the apostle says, (1 Cor. vii. 31.) that the fashion of this world passeth away." And indeed why should the new heaven and the new earth be destroyed, when there shall be no more sin, when there shall be no more curse, when there shall be no more death? The heaven and the earth of old (2 Pet. iii. 5.) for the wickedness of man perished by water: the heaven and the earth which are now, are reserved unto fire against the day of judgment, and perdition of ungodly men; but why should not the new heaven and the new earth be preserved, wherein dwelleth righteousness?

9 And there came unto me one of the seven angels, which had the seven vials full of the seven last plagues, and talked with me, saying, Come hither, I will shew thee the bride, the Lamb's wife.

10 And he carried me away in the spirit to a great and high mountain, and shewed me that great city, the holy Jerusalem, descending out of heaven from God,

¹ γεγονότων δὲ καινῶν πάντων ὑπὸ κυρίου——ἀρχὴν ἡμέρας ὀγδόης, ὅ ἐστιν ἄλλον κόσμον ἀρχήν. Novatis vero cunctis a Domino——octavi diei initium, hoc est initium alterius mundi. [Translated in the text.] Sancti Barnab. Epist. cap. xv. Vide etiam Notas Cotelerii, &c.

² Cum vero completi fuerint mille anni, renovabitur mundus a Deo, et cælum compliabitur, et terra mutabitur; et transformabit Deus homines in similitudinem angelorum; et erunt candidi, sicut nix; et versabuntur semper in conspectu omnipotentis, et domino suo sacrificabunt, et servient in æternam. [Translated in the text.] Lactant. Lib. vii. cap. xxvi.

³ Peracto quippe judicio tunc esse desinet hoc cælum et hæc terra, quando incipiet esse cælum novum et terra nova. Mutatione namque rerum, non omnimodo interitu transibit hic mundus. Unde et Apostolus ait; Præterit enim figura hujus mundi. [Translated in the text.] S. August. de Civitate Dei, Lib. xix. cap. xiv. p. 447. Tom. vii. Edit. Benedict. Antwerp.

11 Having the glory of God: and her light was like unto a stone most precious, even like a jasper-stone, clear as crystal;

12 And had a wall great and high, and had twelve gates, and at the gates twelve angels, and names written thereon, which are the names of the twelve tribes of the children of Israel.

13 On the east, three gates; on the north, three gates; on the south, three gates; and on the west, three gates.

14 And the wall of the city had twelve foundations, and in them the names of the twelve apostles of the Lamb.

15 And he that talked with me had a golden reed to measure the city, and the gates thereof, and the wall thereof.

16 And the city lieth four-square, and the length is as large as the breadth: and he measured the city with the reed, twelve thousand furlongs: the length, and the breadth, and the height of it are equal.

17 And he measured the wall thereof, an hundred and forty and four cubits, according to the measure of a man, that is, of the angel.

18 And the building of the wall of it was of jasper; and the city was pure gold, like unto clear glass.

19 And the foundations of the wall of the city were garnished with all manner of precious stones. The first foundation was jasper; the second, sapphire; the third, a chalcedony; the fourth, an emerald;

20 The fifth, sardonyx; the sixth, sardius; the seventh, chrysolyte; the eighth, beryl; the ninth, a topaz: the tenth, a chryso-prasus; the eleventh, a jacinth; the twelfth, an amethyst.

21 And the twelve gates were twelve pearls; every several gate was of one pearl; and the street of the city was pure gold, as it were transparent glass.

22 And I saw no temple therein: for the Lord God Almighty, and the Lamb, are the temple of it.

23 And the city had no need of the sun, neither of the moon to shine in it; for the glory of God did lighten it, and the Lamb is the light thereof.

24 And the nations of them which are saved shall walk in the light of it: and the kings of the earth do bring their glory and honour into it.

25 And the gates of it shall not be shut at all by day: for there shall be no night there.

26 And they shall bring the glory and honour of the nations into it.

27 And there shall in no wise enter into it any thing that defileth, neither whatsoever worketh abomination, or maketh a lie; but they which are written in the Lamb's book of life.

A more particular description is afterwards given of the new Jerusalem. One of the seven angels who had the seven vials, (ver. 9.)

and most probably the same angel, who before had shewed to St. John (xvii. 1, &c.) the mystic Babylon and her destruction, now sheweth by way of contrast the new Jerusalem and her glory. For this purpose (ver. 10.) he carrieth him away in the spirit to a great and high mountain; in the same manner as Ezekiel (xl. 2.) was brought in the visions of God, and set upon a very high mountain, to see the frame of the city and temple: and this description of the new Jerusalem is an assemblage of the sublimest richest imagery of Ezekiel and other ancient prophets. The glory of God, or the divine Shechinah, (ver. 11.) illuminates the city. It hath (ver. 12—14.) a wall great and high, to show its strength and security; and twelve gates with angels for guards, three on the east, three on the north, three on the south, and three on the west, to show that people of all climates and nations may have access to it. On the twelve gates are written the names of the twelve tribes of the children of Israel, as on the twelve foundations are inscribed the names of the twelve apostles of the Lamb, to signify that the Jewish and the Christian church are now united, and (Eph. ii. 20.) built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner-stone. The angel hath (ver. 15—17.) a measuring reed, as the angel had likewise in Ezekiel; (xl. 3.) and the measures of the city and of the walls are formed by the multiplication of twelve, the number of the apostles. The city lieth four-square, the length as large as the breadth, according to the pattern of Jerusalem in Ezekiel, (xlviii. 16.) and the length and breadth and height of the walls and building are every where of the same beauty, strength, and proportion. It is built and garnished with gold and all manner of precious stones, (ver. 18—21.) as the richest emblems of eastern wealth and magnificence; the stones resembling those on Aaron's breast-plate, to denote that the Urim and Thummim, the light and perfection of God's oracle, are there. It hath one remarkable peculiarity (ver. 22.) that there is no temple therein; for the whole is the temple of God and of the Lamb. The glory of God and the Lamb (ver. 23.) shine in it with a lustre superior to the sun and moon. All they who are saved (ver. 24—27.) walk continually in the light of it; for the gates are never shut, and no night is there. It is the centre of glory and honour; all the wicked are excluded, and only good Christians are admitted, they who are written in the Lamb's book of life.

CHAPTER XXII.

1 AND he shewed me^a a pure river of water of life, clear as crystal, proceeding out of the throne of God, and of the Lamb.

2 In the midst of the street of it, and on either side of the river, was there the tree of life, which bare twelve manner of fruits, and yielded her fruit every month : and the leaves of the trees were for the healing of the nations.

3 And there shall be no more curse : but the throne of God and of the Lamb shall be in it ; and his servants shall serve him.

4 And they shall see his face ; and his name shall be in their foreheads.

5 And there shall be no night there, and they need no candle, neither light of the sun ; for the Lord God giveth them light : and they shall reign for ever and ever.

The five first verses of this chapter are a continuation of the description of the new Jerusalem. It is farther described with the river of life and the tree of life, as if paradise was restored and improved. A river flowing through the midst of the streets, and trees growing on either side of the river, are wonderfully pleasing and agreeable objects, especially in the hot eastern countries. Of the fruits there is such plenty and abundance, that all may freely partake of them at all seasons ; and the very leaves are for the healing of the nations ; by all which is signified the blessedness of immortality without any infirmities. Then too there shall be no more curse, as there is in this present world ever since the fall of man : but the blessed inhabitants shall enjoy the so much talked of beatific vision, shall live in the light of God's countenance, and serve him, and reign for ever and ever.

6 And he said unto me, These sayings are faithful and true. And the Lord God of the holy prophets sent his angel to show unto his servants the things which must shortly be done.

7 Behold, I come quickly : blessed is he that keepeth the sayings of the prophecy of this book.

In the conclusion the angel (ver. 6, 7.) ratifies and confirms all these particulars by a repetition of the same solemn assurance which he had before given, (xix. 9 ; xx. 5.) that these sayings are faithful and true : and he was commissioned by the same God, who had inspired the ancient prophets, to show the things which must shortly be done, which would very soon begin in part to be fulfilled, and in process of time would all be completed. Behold I come quickly, saith he ; for we may observe that the angel speaketh sometimes in his own person, and sometimes in the person and character of Christ, whose ambassador and representative he was. Christ is said to come upon any notable and illustrious manifestation of his providence ; and all these are but so many steps to prepare the way for his last coming to judgment. A blessing too is pronounced, as in the beginning, (i. 3.) upon those who keep the sayings of the prophecy of this book : and as good Vitringa ¹ devoutly wisheth, May the Lord bestow this grace and favour on us, who have employed some time and pains in the study and explication of this book, that some part of this blessing also may descend to us.

¹ Præstet nobis hanc gratiam Dominus, qui operam aliquam in illius meditatione collocavimus, et aliqua etiam nobis hujus beatitatis pars obtingat. [Translated in the text.] Vitring. p. 909.

8 And I John saw these things, and heard them. And when I had heard and seen, I fell down to worship before the feet of the angel, which showed me these things.

9 Then saith he unto me, See thou do it not: for I am thy fellow-servant, and of thy brethren the prophets, and of them which keep the sayings of this book: worship God.

10 And he saith unto me, Seal not the sayings of the prophecy of this book: for the time is at hand.

11 He that is unjust, let him be unjust still: and he which is filthy, let him be filthy still: and he that is righteous, let him be righteous still: and he that is holy, let him be holy still.

12 And behold, I come quickly; and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be.

13 I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end, the first and the last.

14 Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city.

15 For without are dogs, and sorcerers, and whoremongers, and murderers, and idolaters, and whosoever loveth and maketh a lie.

16 I Jesus have sent mine angel to testify unto you these things in the churches. I am the root and the offspring of David, and the bright and morning star.

17 And the Spirit and the bride say, Come. And let him that heareth say, Come. And let him that is athirst, come: and whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely.

18 For I testify unto every man that heareth the words of the prophecy of this book, If any man shall add unto these things, God shall add unto him the plagues that are written in this book:

19 And if any man shall take away from the words of the book of this prophecy, God shall take away his part out of the book of life, and out of the holy city, and from the things which are written in this book.

20 He which testifieth these things saith, Surely I come quickly. Amen. Even so, Come, Lord Jesus.

21 The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen.

St. John (ver. 8, 9.) testifieth himself to be the person who saw and heard these things: and in his ecstasy falling into the same mistake that he had committed before, (xix. 10.) he is gently corrected in the same manner by the angel: who ordereth him (ver. 10.) not to seal up this prophecy, as Daniel's was, (xii. 4. 9.) for the time is at hand, some of the particulars would very soon be accomplished, as indeed all would in their due season and order : which he farther enforceth (ver. 11—15.) with promises and threatenings, of rewards to the righteous, and of vengeance on the wicked. It was not thought sufficient to represent the angel speaking in the person of Christ, but Christ himself also is introduced (ver. 16.) speaking in his own person, and confirming the Divine authority of this book, and attesting it to be properly his revelation. The spirit and the bride, (ver. 17.) that is, the spiritual bride, the true church of Christ, therefore receives it, and ardently wisheth and prayeth for its completion. The book being of this importance and authority, a solemn adjuration is added by Christ himself, that no man presume to add any thing to it, or take away any thing from it, (ver. 18, 19.) For I testify unto every man that heareth the words of the prophecy of this book, If any man shall add unto these things, God shall add unto him the plagues that are written in this book. And if any man shall take away from the words of the book of this prophecy, God shall take away his part out of the book of life, and out of the holy city, and from the things which are written in this book : which ought to be seriously considered by all visionaries and enthusiasts on the one hand, who boast their own inventions as Divine revelations, and by all sceptics and infidels on the other, who depreciate the value and authority of these predictions. He who testifieth these things, saith, Surely I come quickly ; (ver. 20.) he not only attesteth them to be true, but will also come speedily to accomplish them : to which St. John answers, and in him the whole church, Amen. Even so, Come, Lord Jesus. He closeth all with the usual apostolical benediction, (ver. 21.) wishing the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ to the churches of Asia in particular, and to all Christians in general. The conclusion is truly excellent, as well as all other parts of this book : and nothing could be contrived to leave these things with a stronger impression upon the mind of the readers. In the whole, from first to last, appears the majesty of the Divine Revealer, the Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end, the author and finisher of every good work, and of this more especially.

This (as Sir Isaac Newton¹ hath hinted, and as Dr. Warburton hath fully proved in some discourses, which it is hoped will be printed at one time or other for the benefit of the public,) is that sure word of prophecy, whereunto Christians, as St. Peter saith, do well to take heed and attend. St. Peter (2 Pet. i. 16, &c.) is asserting and establishing the truth of Christ's second coming in power and great glory. For we have not followed cunningly devised fables, when we made known unto you the power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, but were eye-witnesses of his majesty. One illustrious proof of his coming in power and glory was his appearing in glory and majesty at his transfiguration, (ver. 17, 18.) For he received from God the Father honour and glory, when there came such a voice to him from the excellent glory, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased. And this voice which came from heaven we heard, when we were with him in the holy mount. His appearing once in power and great glory is a good argument, that he may appear again in like manner: and that he not only may, but will, we have the farther assurance of prophecy, (ver. 19.) We have also a more sure word of prophecy; whereunto ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place, until the day dawn, and the day-star arise in your hearts. St. Peter might mean the prophecies in general which treat of the second coming of Christ, but it appears that the Revelation was principally in his thoughts and intentions. Christ's second coming in power and glory is one principal topic of the Revelation. With this it begins, (i. 7.) Behold, he cometh with clouds: and every eye shall see him. With this it also concludes, (xxii. 20.) He who testifieth these things, saith, Surely I come quickly. Nothing can better answer the character of the Revelation, especially in St. Peter's time, when as yet scarce any part of it was fulfilled, than a light shining in a dark place, until the day dawn, and the day-star arise in your hearts. It openeth more and more like the dawning of the day; and the more it is fulfilled the better it is understood. Afterwards St. Peter proceeds, in the second chapter, to describe, out of this sure word of prophecy, the false prophets and false teachers, who should infest the church; and in the third chapter, the certainty of Christ's coming to judgment, the conflagration of the present heavens and earth, and the structure of the new heavens and earth: and all agreeably to the Revelation. Attention, therefore, to this book is recommended to us, upon the authority of St. Peter as well as of the writer St. John: and a double blessing, as we have seen in the book itself, is pronounced upon those who shall study and observe it; first in the beginning, (i. 3.) Blessed is he that readeth, and they that hear the words of this prophecy, and keep those things which are written therein; and here again in the end, (xxii. 7.) Blessed is he that keepeth the sayings of the prophecy of this book. Emboldened by which blessings, I would humbly pray with Nehemiah, (Nehem. xiii. 22.) Remember me, O my God, concerning this also, and spare me, according to the greatness of thy mercy.

¹ Sir Isaac Newton's Observ. upon the Apoc. cap. i. p. 240. The bishop has since published a discourse upon this subject in the third vol. of his sermons ; but his second lecturer (Dr. Halifax) contradicts him herein, and maintains the Revelation to be written after the death of St. Peter, in the reign of Domitian.

XXVI.

RECAPITULATION OF THE PROPHECIES RELATING TO POPERY.

UPON the whole it appears that the prophecies relating to popery are the greatest, the most essential, and the most striking part of the Revelation. Whatever difficulty and perplexity there may be in other passages, yet here the application is obvious and easy. Popery being the great corruption of Christianity, there are indeed more prophecies relating to that than to almost any other distant event. It is a great object of Daniel's and the principal object of St. Paul's, as well as of St. John's prophecies; and these, considered and compared together, will mutually receive and reflect light from and upon each other. It will appear to be clearly foretold, that such a power as that of the pope should be exercised in the Christian church, and should authorize and establish such doctrines and practices, as are publicly taught and approved in the church of Rome. It is not only foretold that such a power should be exercised, but the place and the persons likewise are pointed out, where and by whom it should be exercised. Besides the place and the persons, the time also is signified when it should prevail, and how long it should prevail; and at last, upon the expiration of this term, it shall be destroyed for evermore. It is thought proper to represent the prophecies relating to popery in one view, that, like the rays of the sun collected in a glass, they may appear with the greater lustre, and have the stronger effect.

I. I say, the spirit of prophecy hath signified beforehand, that there should be such a power as that of the pope and church of Rome usurped in the Christian world: and these predictions are so plain and express, that, was not the contrary evident and undeniable, they might seem to be penned after the event, and to describe things past rather than to foretel things to come. For instance, hath there now for many ages subsisted, and doth there still subsist, a tyrannical, and idolatrous, and blasphemous power, in pretence Christian, but in reality Antichristian? It is the very same power that is pourtrayed in the little horn and the blasphemous king by Daniel, in the man of sin, the son of perdition by St. Paul, and in the ten-horned beast and the two-horned beast or the false prophet by St. John. Hath the church apostatized or departed greatly from the purity of Christian faith and worship? It is the very same thing that St. Paul hath foretold, (2 Thess. ii. 3.) The day of the Lord shall not come, except there come a falling away or the apostacy first: and he saith moreover in another place, (1 Tim. iv. 1.) that the spirit of prophecy (meaning Daniel) had in express words testified the same thing before: Now the Spirit speaketh expressly, that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, or rather apostatize from the faith: and St. John foresaw the church so far degenerated as to become (Rev. xvii. 5.) the mother of harlots or whoredoms, and abominations of the earth. Doth this apostacy consist chiefly in the worshipping of dæmons, angels, and departed saints, and in honouring them with costly shrines and rich offerings, instead of the worship of the one true God through the one true mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus? Nothing can better agree with the prophecy of St. Paul, (1 Tim. iv. 1.)

Some shall apostatize from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines concerning dæmons; and with the prophecy of Daniel, that the blasphemous king (xi. 38.) in his estate shall honour Mahuzzim, Gods-protectors or saints-protectors, and a god whom his fathers knew not, shall he honour with gold, and silver, and with precious stones, and pleasant things. Is the same church that is guilty of this idolatry, notorious also for enjoining celibacy to her clergy, and engaging her nuns to enter into vows of leading a single life? doth she make a vain distinction of meats, and command and institute certain times and days of fasting, wherein to taste flesh is judged a mortal sin? Nothing can more fully accomplish the prediction of Daniel, (xi. 37.) that the blasphemous king, who shall worship Mahuzzim, shall also not regard the desire of wives; and the prediction of St. Paul, (1 Tim. iv. 3.) that those who shall apostatize from the faith by worshipping of dæmons, shall no less distinguish themselves by forbidding to marry, and commanding to abstain from meats, which God hath created to be received with thanksgiving of them who believe and know the truth. Doth the pope make himself equal and even superior to God, in affecting Divine titles, attributes, and honours; in assuming a power of dispensing with the immutable laws of nature and the Gospel; in substituting for the commandments of God the traditions of men; in treading upon the altar of God at his inauguration, and making the table of the Lord his footstool, and in that posture receiving the adoration of his cardinals? It is foretold by Daniel, (vii. 25.) that the little horn shall speak great words against the Most High, and think to change times and laws; and (xi. 36.) the king shall do according to his will, and he shall exalt himself, and magnify himself above every god, and speak marvellous things against the God of gods; and in like manner by St. Paul, (2 Thess. ii. 3, 4.) The man of sin shall be revealed, the son of perdition; who opposeth and exalteth himself above all that is called God, or that is worshipped, so that he as God sitteth in the temple of God, showing himself that he is God. Have the bishops of Rome extended their authority and jurisdiction over several countries and nations? have they usurped a supremacy over all other bishops? have they partly by menaces, and partly by flatteries, obtained an entire ascendancy over Christian princes; so as to have them zealous members of their communion, blindly devoted to their interest, and ready upon all occasions to fight their battles? It is nothing more than what was foretold by the prophets; by Daniel when he said (vii. 20.) that the little horn had a mouth speaking very great things, and a look more stout than his fellows; and by St. John when he said (xiii. 7.) that power was given unto the beast over all kindreds, and tongues, and nations; and (xvii. 2.) the kings of the earth have committed fornication, or idolatry, with the whore of Babylon; and (xvii. 13.) have one mind, and shall give their power and strength unto the beast. Hath the church of Rome enlarged the powers of her clergy, both regular and secular, given them an almost absolute authority over the purses and consciences of men, enriched them with sumptuous buildings and noble endowments, and appropriated the choicest of the lands for church lands? This was plainly intimated by Daniel speaking of the blasphemous king, as the passage should be translated, (xi. 39.) Thus shall he do; to the defenders of Mahuzzim, together with the strange god whom he shall acknowledge, he shall multiply honour, and he shall cause them to rule over many, and shall divide the land for gain. Is the church of Rome distinguished above all churches for purple and scarlet colour, by the richness and splendour of her vestments, by the pomp and parade of her ceremonies, inciting and inveigling men with all artifices of ornament and ostentation to join in her communion? This was particularly specified by St. John speaking of the mystic whore of Babylon or the corrupted church, (xvii. 4.) And the woman was arrayed in purple and scarlet colour, and decked with gold and precious stones and pearls, having a golden cup in her hand, full of abominations and filthiness of her fornication. Have the bishops and clergy of Rome in all ages been remarkable for their policy? have they scrupled to promote their religion by all manner of lies and pious frauds? have they allowed of equivocation and mental reservation in oaths and promises, and with the appearance of lambs in meekness and sanctity, acted like ravens, with fury and violence? Daniel hath given the same character of the little horn, (vii. 8.) Behold, in this horn were eyes like the eyes of a man, and a mouth speaking great things; and St. Paul of the apostates in the latter times, (1 Tim. iv. 2.) Speaking lies in hypocrisy, having their conscience seared with a hot iron; and St. John of the two-horned beast, (xiii. 11.) And I beheld another beast coming up out of the earth, and he had two horns like a lamb, and he spake as a dragon. Doth the church of Rome boast of visions and revelations, and make a show of miracles in attestation of her doctrines? do her legends contain as many spurious and pretended wonders, as the Scriptures do genuine and real? From St. Paul we learn, (2 Thess. ii. 9, 10.) that the coming of the man of sin, is after the working of Satan, with all power and signs, and lying wonders, and with all deceivableness of unrighteousness; and from St. John, (xiii. 13, 14.) that the false prophet doeth great wonders in the sight of men, and deceiveth them that dwell on the earth by the means of those miracles which he hath power to do. Doth the church of Rome require an implicit obedience, condemn all who will not readily conform as heretics, and excommunicate and exclude them from the civil intercourses of life? So the false prophet in St. John (xiii. 16, 17.) causeth all, both small and great, rich and poor, free and bond, to receive a mark in their right hand, or in their foreheads; and that no man might buy or sell, save he that had the mark of the beast. Have the Roman pontiffs occasioned the shedding of as much or more Christian blood than the Roman emperors themselves? have they all along maintained their spiritual sovereignty by secret plots and inquisitions, by open dragoonings and massacres, and imprisoned, and tortured, and murdered the true worshippers of God, and the faithful servants of Jesus Christ? This particular, as well as all the rest, exactly answers the predictions of the prophets. For it is affirmed of the little horn in Daniel, (vii. 21. 25.) that he shall make war with the saints, and shall prevail against them; shall speak great words against the Most High, and shall wear out the saints of the Most High: and the woman in the Revelation, Babylon the great, the mother of harlots, (xvii. 6.) is represented as drunken with the blood of the saints, and with the blood of the martyrs of Jesus, and (xviii. 24.) in her was found the blood of prophets, and of saints, and of all that were slain upon the earth.

Besides these plain and direct prophecies of the corruptions and innovations of the church of Rome, there are several secret glances at them, several oblique intendments and intimations of them. Known unto God are all his works from the beginning of the world: (Acts xv. 18.) and when the Holy Spirit dictated to the ancient prophets the prophecies concerning Babylon, Tyre, Egypt, and other tyrannical and corrupt governments, he dictated them in such a manner as plainly evinces that he had a farther view to this last and most tyrannical and corrupt government of all. Babylon, Tyre, Egypt, and the rest, are made the types and emblems of Rome; and many of the particulars predicted concerning the former, are more truly and properly applicable to the latter; and several of them have been applied accordingly by St. John. Jeremiah said concerning ancient Babylon, (li. 7. 45.) Babylon hath been a golden cup in the Lord's hand, that made all the earth drunken; the nations have drunken of her wine, therefore the nations are mad. My people go ye out of the midst of her, and deliver ye every man his soul from the fierce anger of the Lord. But how much more applicable are these expressions, as St. John hath applied them, to mystic Babylon or Rome? (xvii. 4; xviii. 3, 4.) She hath a golden cup in her hand, full of abominations; all nations have drunk of the poisonous wine of her fornication: Come out of her my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues. The prophets themselves might not understand this mystical, and saw perhaps no farther than the literal meaning; but they spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost, (2 Pet. i. 21.) who comprehends all events, the most remote as well as the most immediate. But the intimations of popery, which I particularly meant, are more frequent and more obvious in the New Testament. Why was our blessed Saviour so very cautious in giving honour to the Virgin Mary, that he seemed to regard her less than the least of his disciples? (Matt. xii. 48.) Who is my mother? (John ii. 4.) Woman, what have I to do with thee? (Luke xi. 27, 28.) Blessed is the womb that bare thee; Yea, rather blessed are they who hear the word of God and keep it. Why did he rebuke St. Peter more severely than any other of the apostles, (Matt. xvi. 23.) Get thee behind me,

Satan, thou art an offence unto me, for thou savourest not the things that be of God, but those that be of men; and especially just after giving him that high encomium, (ver. 18.) Thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church? May we not reasonably presume that he spake and acted thus, as foreseeing that Divine worship which would idolatrously be paid to the one, that supremacy which would be tyrannically arrogated to the other, and which that very encomium would impertinently be brought to countenance?—How came it to pass that our Saviour in instituting his holy supper, (Matt. xxvi. 26, 27.) said of the bread only, Take, eat, but of the cup more particularly, Drink ye all of it? May we not probably suppose that it was designed to prevent or obviate their sacrilege, who would have all indeed eat of the bread, but priests only drink of the cup? Why were the vices of the Scribes and Pharisees left so particularly upon record, if not chiefly for the correction and reproof of their natural issue and descendants, the clergy of the church of Rome? Read the whole twenty-third chapter of St. Matthew, and you will find that there is not a single woe denounced against the former, but as properly belongs, and is as strictly applicable to the latter. Binding heavy burdens, and grievous to be borne, and laying them on men's shoulders; doing all their works for to be seen of men; shutting up the kingdom of heaven against men, neither going in themselves, neither suffering them who are entering to go in; devouring widows' houses, and for a pretence making long prayers; compassing sea and land to make one proselyte, and when he is made, making him twofold more the child of hell than themselves; making useless and frivolous distinctions of oaths; observing positive duties, and omitting the weightier matters of the law, judgment, mercy, and faith; making clean the outside, but within being full of extortion and excess; outwardly appearing righteous unto men, but within being full of hypocrisy and iniquity; building the tombs of the prophets, and garnishing the sepulchres of the righteous, honouring the dead saints, and at the same time persecuting the living; are as strong marks and characters of the one sect as they were of the other.—Do not forbidding implicit faith and obedience to men, (Matt. xxiii. 9.) Call no man your father upon the earth, for one is your Father which is in heaven; forbidding the worship of angels, (Col. ii. 18.) Let no man beguile you of your reward, in a voluntary humility, and worshipping of angels; forbidding all pretences to works of merit and supererogation, (Luke xvii. 10.) When ye shall have done all those things which are commanded you, say, We are unprofitable servants, we have done that which was our duty to do; forbidding the clergy to lord it over God's heritage, (1 Pet. iv. 3.) Neither as being lords over God's heritage, but being ensamples to the flock; forbidding the service of God in an unknown tongue, as St. Paul hath done at large in the fourteenth chapter of his first epistle to the Corinthians: Do not all these and such like prohibitions, I say, necessarily suppose and imply, that one time or other these particular errors and abuses would creep into the church? and in what church they are publicly taught and practised, no man can be insensible. Such texts of Scripture are as much predictions that these things would be, as they are arguments that they should not be. For laws divine and human are not levelled against chimerical and mere imaginary vices, such as never are, never will be brought into practice; but are enacted by reason of those enormities, which men either have committed, or are likely to commit, and which the lawgivers wisely foreseeing, are therefore willing to prevent.—Why doth St. Paul admonish the Romans particularly to beware of apostacy? (Rom. xi. 20. 22.) Be not high-minded, but fear;—otherwise thou also shalt be cut off. Surely this is a strange way of addressing the Romans, if the church of Rome was designed to be the infallible judge of controversies, the centre of unity, and director of all religion.—View the picture that both St. Peter and St. Jude have drawn of false teachers, and consider whom it most resembles in all its features, (2 Pet. ii. 1, &c.) But there were false prophets also among the people, even as there shall be false teachers among you, who privily shall bring in damnable heresies, even denying the Lord that bought them; and many shall follow their pernicious ways, by reason of whom the way of truth shall be evil spoken of; and through covetousness shall they with feigned words make merchandise of you, &c. (Jude 4, &c.) Ungodly men, turning the grace of our God into lasciviousness, and denying the only Lord God and our Lord Jesus Christ; these filthy dreamers defile the flesh, despise dominion, and speak evil of dignities; these be they who separate themselves, sensual, having not the spirit, &c. What St. Paul hath predicted concerning the corruption of the last days, is too much the character of all sects of Christians, but the application more properly belongs to the members of the church of Rome, (2 Tim. iii. 1, &c.) This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come: for men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy; without natural affection, truce-breakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good; traitors, heady, high-minded, lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God; having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof. Such are the direct prophecies, and such the general intimations of popery; and we have the better right to make this application of the general intimations, as the direct prophecies are so plain and particular.

II. It is not only foretold, that such a power as that of the pope and church of Rome should be exercised in the Christian world; but to prevent any mistake in the application of these prophecies, the place and the persons likewise are pointed out, where and by whom it should be exercised. The prophet Daniel (chap. vii.) hath described four beasts, or four kingdoms: and out of the fourth beast or kingdom, he saith, shall arise ten horns or ten kings, or kingdoms; and among them or after them shall come up another little horn; and he shall be diverse from the rest ; and he shall have eyes like the eyes of a man, and a mouth speaking great things, and a look more stout than his fellows ; and he shall subdue and pluck up by the roots three of the first horns or kings ; and shall speak great words against the Most High, and shall wear out the saints of the Most High, and think to change times and laws. Daniel's first kingdom is the Babylonian, the second is the Persian, the third is the Macedonian or Grecian, and the fourth can be none other than the Roman ; and the Roman empire upon its dissolution, was divided into ten kings or kingdoms. It is in the western or Latin empire that these ten kings or kingdoms are to be sought and found : for this was properly the body of the fourth beast, the Greek or eastern empire belonged to the body of the third beast : and out of the western Roman empire, by the incursions of the northern nations, arose ten kings or kingdoms ; of whom having mentioned the names before, we need not repeat them here. Now who is the little horn that was to spring up among these or after these ; who as a politico-ecclesiastical power differeth from the other ten powers ; who hath eyes like the eyes of a man, that is, ¹ a seer, as Sir Isaac Newton says, ἐπίσκοπος, or bishop, in the literal sense of the word ; who hath a mouth speaking great things, bulls and anathemas, interdicts and excommunications ; who hath a look more stout than his fellows, assuming a supremacy not only over other bishops, but even a superiority over kings and emperors themselves ; who hath plucked up by the roots three of the first horns, the exarchate of Ravenna, the kingdom of the Lombards, and the state of Rome, and is distinguished by the triple crown ; who speaketh great words against the Most High, setting up himself above all laws, divine as well as human ; who weareth out the saints of the Most High, by wars and massacres, inquisitions, and persecutions ; who changeth times and laws, instituting new religions, and teaching for doctrines the commandments of men ; are questions which I think cannot admit of much dispute ; there is only one person in the world who can fully answer all these characters.

The blasphemous king described in the 11th chapter of Daniel, (ver. 36—39.) who shall do according to his will, and shall exalt himself and magnify himself above every god, and shall speak marvellous things against the God of gods, and shall prosper till the indignation be accomplished, who shall not regard the God of his fathers, nor the desire of wives, but in his estate shall honour Mahuzzim, and the defenders of Mahuzzim shall increase with glory, and shall cause them to rule over many, and shall divide the land for gain : is indeed a more general character, comprehending the tyrannical and corrupt power of the eastern church as well as of the western. But when we consider how much and how far the Latin hath prevailed above the Greek church ; how the supremacy, which was first claimed by the patriarch of Constantinople, hath been fully established in the bishop of Rome; how much more absolute the will of the Roman pontiff hath been than that of the Byzantine emperor; how the pope hath exalted himself and magnified himself as a god upon earth; how much more the Latins have degenerated from the religion of their fathers than the Greeks; how the desire of single life and the worship of the dead, which first began in the eastern parts, have been carried to the greatest height in the western empire; how much the jurisdiction and authority, the lands and revenues of the Roman clergy have exceeded those of the Greeks; how, while the Greek church hath lain oppressed for several centuries, the Roman hath still prospered, and in all probability still may prosper till God's indignation against the Jews be accomplished; in short, when we consider how entirely this character agrees with that of the little horn, and how much better it agrees with the head of the Roman than with the head of the Greek church, the particular application of it to the bishop of Rome may well be justified, especially since St. Paul himself hath applied it in the same manner.

¹ Sir Isaac Newton's Observ. on Daniel, chap. vii. p. 75.

St. Paul hath drawn the man of sin, the son of perdition, (2 Thess. ii.) an exact copy and resemblance of the little horn and the blasphemous king in Daniel: and this man of sin must necessarily be a Christian, and not a Heathen or Infidel power, because he is represented as God sitting in the temple of God. He is described too as the head of the apostacy or the falling away from the faith; and this apostacy is afterwards (1 Tim. iv. 1.) defined by St. Paul to consist in worshipping of demons, angels, and deceased saints: and no man surely can have any reason to doubt, who is the head and leader of this apostacy, the patron and authorizer of this worship. The apostle hath communicated to the Thessalonians what it was that hindered his appearing, (ver. 5, 6.) Remember ye not that when I was yet with you, I told you these things? And now ye know what withholdeth that he might be revealed in his time. What this was the apostle hath no where expressly informed us; but if tradition may be depended upon in any case, it may certainly in this. For it is the constant and current tradition of the fathers, that what withholdeth is the Roman empire; and therefore the primitive Christians in the public offices of the church prayed for its peace and welfare, as knowing that when the Roman empire should be broken into pieces, the empire of the man of sin would be raised on its ruins. They made no question, they were fully persuaded, that the successor to the Roman emperor in Rome would be the man of sin: and who hath succeeded to the Roman emperor in Rome, let the world judge and determine.

St. John too hath copied after Daniel, and (chap. xiii.) exhibits the Roman empire under the same emblem of a beast with ten horns. It is evident that he designed the same as Daniel's fourth or last beast, because he represents him as a composition of the three former, with the body of a leopard, the feet of a bear, and the mouth of a lion. He describes him too with the qualities and properties of the little horn, speaking the same blasphemies, acting the same cruelties: and having plainly seen what power was intended by the one, we have the less reason to hesitate about the other. But to distinguish him yet more, the number of his name is defined to be six hundred and sixty-six. It was an ancient practice to denote names by numbers; and this number must be resolvable into some Greek or Hebrew name, to which all the characters here given may agree. It is an early tradition derived from ¹ Irenæus, who lived not long after St. John's time, and was a disciple of a disciple of this apostle, that the number 666 includes the Greek name Lateinos or the Latin empire. Or if you prefer a Hebrew name, as St. John hath sometimes made use of Hebrew names, it is no less remarkable that this number comprehends also the Hebrew name Romiith or the Roman empire. For more clearness and sureness still, a woman is shown (chap. xvii.) riding upon this same beast, and her name is Babylon the great; but Babylon was destroyed long before, and by Babylon all agree, was meant Rome. The seven heads of the beast are likewise explained to be seven mountains on which the woman sitteth, which all the world know to be the situation of Rome. The woman herself is also declared to be that great city which reigneth over the kings of the earth; and that can be none other than Rome. Indeed, the papists themselves allow (for they cannot but allow) all this to be said of Rome, but then they argue and maintain it to be said of Heathen Rome. But that cannot be; because it agrees not with several circumstances of the prophecy, and particularly with the woman's sitting upon the beast with ten horns, and upon his horns ten crowns, which must needs typify the Roman empire, after it was divided into ten kingdoms, but the Roman empire was not divided into ten kingdoms till some years after it became Christian. St. John with the eyes of prophecy saw this beast rise up out of the sea, and the angel in his exposition saith that he shall ascend out of the bottomless pit; but Heathen Rome had risen and flourished many years before this time. This beast cannot represent Heathen Rome because he is successor to Heathen Rome, to the great red dragon in his power, and his seat, and great authority. This beast was to continue and prosper forty-two prophetic months, that is, twelve hundred and sixty years; but Heathen Rome did not continue four hundred years after this time. The woman is represented as the mother of idolatry, with her golden cup intoxicating the inhabitants of the earth: but Heathen Rome ruled more with a rod of iron, and was rather an importer of foreign gods and superstitions than an exporter to other nations. St. John wondered with great admiration, when he saw the woman drunken with the blood of the saints, and with the blood of the martyrs of Jesus; but wherefore should he, who had seen and suffered the persecutions under Nero, wonder so much that Heathens should persecute Christians; but that Christians should delight in shedding the blood of Christians, was indeed of all wonders the greatest. The woman rideth upon the beast under his seventh head or last form of government; but the sixth head, which was the imperial form of government, is said to be subsisting in St. John's time, and the sixth was not destroyed, and the seventh, or last form, did not take place till after Rome was become Christian. The ten kings with one mind gave their power and strength unto the beast, and afterwards hate the whore and make her desolate, and burn her with fire; but never did any ten kings unanimously and voluntarily submit to Heathen Rome, and afterwards burn her with fire. Rome, according to the prophecies, is to be utterly burnt with fire, and to be made a desolation for ever and ever; but Rome hath never yet undergone this fate, and consequently Heathen Rome cannot be the subject of these prophecies. In short, from these and all other characters and circumstances, some whereof can never agree with Heathen Rome, and all agree perfectly with Christian Rome, it may and must be concluded, that not Heathen but Christian, not imperial but papal Rome, was intended by these visions.

¹ Iren. Lib. v. cap. xxx. p. 449. Edit. Grabe.

III. Besides the place and the persons, the time also is signified of this tyrannical power, when it should prevail, and how long it should prevail. Daniel mentions these things as being at a very great distance, and indeed they were at a very great distance in his time. It is said (viii. 26; x. 24.) the vision is yet for many days; that it comprehends (viii. 19.) what shall be in the last end of the indignation; that it extends (xi. 35. 40; xii. 4. 9.) even to the time of the end; that when God (xii. 7.) shall have accomplished to scatter the power of the holy people, all these things shall be finished; all which and other passages to the same purpose considered, it appears as unaccountable as strange, that ever any man should imagine, as some both ancients and moderns have imagined, that Daniel's prophecies reached not beyond the time of Antiochus Epiphanes. Daniel hath described four great empires, not contemporary, but successive one to another. The fourth, and last, is represented as the greatest of all, both in extent and in duration. It devoureth the whole earth, and treadeth it down, and breaketh it in pieces. After which it is divided into ten kingdoms, and the little horn groweth not up till after this division. So that this tyrannical power was to arise in the latter days of the Roman empire, after it should be divided into ten kingdoms. From St. Paul too we may collect, that the great power of the Roman empire hindered the appearing of the man of sin: but when that power should be diminished and taken out of the way, then should the man of sin be revealed in his time. St. John also refers these events to the same æra. Not only the general order and the whole series of his prophecies point to this time, but there are besides particular intimations of it. He describes the beast as successor to the great red dragon, in his power, and his seat, and great authority: but if the great red dragon be, as he is generally understood to be, the persecuting power of Heathen Rome, then the persecuting power of Heathen Rome must be removed, before the beast can take his place. The beast hath also ten horns, and upon his horns ten crowns; so that ten complete kingdoms must arise out of the Roman empire before the appearance of the beast. Of his seven heads it is said, Five are fallen, that is, in St. John's time five forms of government were past, one is and the other is not yet come, and the sixth which was then present being the imperial, it necessarily follows that the seventh or last must be some form of government which must arise after the imperial; and as St. John saw the one, we see the other.

It appears, then, that this Antichristian power was to arise in the latter times of the Roman empire, after an end should be put to the imperial power, and after the empire should be divided into ten kingdoms: and it is not only foretold when it should prevail, but moreover how long it should prevail. Here we cannot but observe, that the very same period of time is prefixed for its continuance both by Daniel and by St. John. Wonderful is the consent and harmony between these inspired writers, as in other circumstances of the prophecy, so particularly in this. In Daniel (vii. 25.) the little horn was to wear out the saints of the Most High, and think to change times and laws; and it is said expressly, that they should be given into his hand, until a time, and times, and the dividing of time; or, as the same thing is expressed in another place, (xii. 7.) for a time, times, and a half. In the Revelation it is said of the beast (xiii. 5.) to whom in like manner it was given to make war with the saints, and to overcome them, that power also was given unto him to continue forty and two months: and the holy city (xi. 2.) the Gentiles should tread under foot forty and two months: and the two witnesses (ver. 3.) should prophesy a thousand two hundred and threescore days clothed in sackcloth: and the woman, the true church of Christ, who fled into the wilderness from persecution, (xii. 6. 14.) should be fed and nourished there a thousand two hundred and threescore days, or, as it is otherwise expressed in the same chapter, for a time, and times, and half a time. Now all these numbers you will find upon computation to be the same, and each of them to signify twelve hundred and sixty years. For a time is a year, and a time, and times, and the dividing of the time, or half a time, are three years and a half, and three years and a half are forty-two months, and forty-two months are twelve hundred and sixty days, and twelve hundred and sixty days in the prophetic style are twelve hundred and sixty years. From all these dates and characters it may fairly be concluded, that the time of the church's great affliction and of the reign of Antichrist will be a period of twelve hundred and sixty years.

To fix the time exactly when the twelve hundred and sixty years begin, and consequently when they will end, is a matter of some niceness and difficulty; and perhaps we must see their conclusion before we can precisely ascertain their beginning. However, it appears to be a very great mistake of some very learned men, in dating the commencement of this period too early. This is the capital error of Mr. Mede's scheme; what hath led him, and others who have followed his example, into subsequent errors; and what the event hath plainly refuted. For if the reign of Antichrist had begun, as he reckons, about the year 456, its end would have fallen out about the year 1716. The truth is, these twelve hundred and sixty years are not to be reckoned from the beginning of these corruptions, from the rise of this tyranny, for the mystery of iniquity began to work even in the days of the apostles; but from their full growth and establishment in the world. Of the little horn, who was to wear out the saints of the Most High, and to change times and laws, it is said that they should be given into his hand, which can imply no less than the most absolute power and authority over them, until a time, and times, and the dividing of time. In like manner the holy city, the true church of Christ, was to be trodden under foot, which is the lowest state of subjection; the two witnesses were not only to prophecy, but to prophecy in sackcloth, that is, in mourning and affliction; the woman, the church, was to abide in the wilderness, that is, in a forlorn and desolate condition; and power was given to the beast ποιῆσαι, not merely to continue as it is translated, but to practise and prosper, and to do according to his will; and all for this same period of twelve hundred and sixty years. These twelve hundred and sixty years, therefore, of the reign of Antichrist are not to be computed from his birth, or infancy, or youth; but from his coming to maturity, from his coming to the throne: and in my opinion their beginning cannot be fixed consistent with the truth of history, either sooner or later than in the eighth century. Several memorable events happened in that century. In the ¹ year 727 the pope and people of Rome revolted from the exarch of Ravenna, and shook off their allegiance to the Greek emperor. In the year 755 the pope obtained the exarchate of Ravenna for himself, and thenceforwards acted as an absolute temporal prince. In the year 774 the pope, by the assistance of Charles the Great, became possessed of the kingdom of the Lombards. In the year 787 the worship of images was fully established, and the supremacy of the pope acknowledged by the second council of Nice. From one or other of these transactions it is probable, that the beginning of the reign of Antichrist is to be dated. What appears to be most probable is, that it is to be dated from the year 727, when (as ² Sigonius says) Rome and the Roman dukedom came from the Greeks to the Roman pontiff. Hereby he became in some measure a horn, or temporal prince, though his power was not fully established till some years afterwards: and before he was a horn at all, he could not answer the character of the little horn. If, then, the beginning of the twelve hundred and sixty years of the reign of Antichrist is to be dated from the year 727, their end will fall near the year 2000 after Christ; and at the end of the 6000th year of the world, according to a very early tradition of Jews and Christians, and even of Heathens, great changes and revolutions are expected both in the natural and in the moral world; and there remaineth, according to the words of the apostle, (Heb. iv. 9.) a sabbatism or holy rest to the people of God.

¹ See Sigonius, Spanheim, Dupin, &c. &c.

² Ita Roma, Romanusque ducatus a Græcis ad Romanum pontificem, pervenit. [Translated in the text.] Sigon. Hist. de Regno Ital. Lib. iii. ad Ann. 727.

IV. What Daniel hath described under the character of the little horn, and the blasphemous king; what St. Paul hath described under the character of the man of sin, the son of perdition; what St. John hath described under the character of the beast and the false prophet; that same tyrannical, idolatrous, and blasphemous power, ecclesiastical writers usually denominate Antichrist, and having thus far traced his character and description, his rise, progress, and continuance, let us now proceed to consider his fall, when at the expiration of the prefixed period of 1260 years his kingdom shall be destroyed for evermore. The prophets are not more expressive of his elevation than they are of his destruction. They not only predict his downfall in general terms, but also describe the manner and circumstances of it: and St. John's account being larger, and more circumstantial and particular, will be the best comment and explanation of the others. For my part I cannot pretend to prophesy, which is the common vanity of expositors of the Revelation; I can only represent events in the order wherein according to my apprehension the prophets have placed them. Sobriety and modesty are required in the interpretation of all prophecies, and especially in the explication of things yet future. Only thus much it may be proper to premise, that having seen so many of the prophecies fulfilled, you have the less reason to doubt of the completion of those which are to follow.

At this present time we are living under the sixth trumpet, and the second woe; (Rev. xi.) the Othman empire is still subsisting, the beast is still reigning, and there are protestant witnesses still prophesying in sackcloth: and this sixth trumpet and second woe must end, before the seventh trumpet can sound, or the third woe be poured out, which is to fall upon the kingdom of the beast. But before the end of the second woe it should seem that the papists will make a great and successful effort against the protestant religion. When the witnesses shall have near finished their testimony, that is, towards the conclusion of their 1260 years, the beast shall make war against them, and shall overcome them. They shall lie oppressed and dead, as it were, to the great joy and triumph of their enemies: but they shall rise again after three years and a half, and the protestant religion shall become more glorious than ever, with a considerable diminution of the papal authority. According to the method and order wherein St. John hath arranged these events, they must happen before the end of the second woe, or the fall of the Othman empire. Ezekiel (xxxviii. xxxix.) and Daniel (xi. 44, 45.) have given some intimations, that the Othman empire shall be overthrown in opposing the settlement of Israel in their own land in the latter days. In the conclusion of the book of Daniel there are also some intimations, that the religion of Mohammed shall prevail in the east for as long a period of time as the tyranny of the little horn in the west. Very remarkable too it is, that ¹ Mohammed first contrived his imposture in the year 606, the very same year wherein the tyrant Phocas made a grant of the supremacy to the pope: and this might incline one to think that the 1260 years of the reign of Antichrist are to be dated from this time. But though they might rise together, yet they were not fully established together. The authority of Mohammed might be fully established in the seventh century, but that of the pope was not so till the eighth century; and therefore, as the one was established somewhat sooner, so it may also be subverted somewhat sooner than the other. The pope indeed was established supreme in spirituals in the seventh century, but he became not a temporal horn or beast till the eighth century.

When the Othman empire is overthrown, and the second woe is past, then according to St. John (xi. 14.) the third woe cometh quickly, which comprehends all the severe and terrible judgments of God upon the kingdom of the beast. In like manner when Daniel hath predicted the fall of the king of the north, or of the Othman empire, he subjoins immediately (xii. 1.) that there shall be a time of trouble, such as never was since there was a nation, even to that same time; and at that time thy people shall be delivered, every one that shall be found written in the book; agreeably to which St. John also saith (xx. 15.) that whosoever was not found written in the book of life was cast into the lake of fire. The 1260 years of the reign of the beast, I suppose, end with the 1260 years of the witnesses prophesying in sackcloth; and now the destined time is come for the judgments of God to overtake him; for as he might exist before the 1260 years began, so he may exist likewise after they are finished, in order to be made an eminent example of divine justice. For the greater confirmation and illustration of this subject, and to make the stronger impression upon the minds of the readers, these judgments are displayed under a variety of figures and representations. First they are described in a more general manner, (Rev. xiv.) as the harvest and reaping of the earth, and as the vintage and wine-press of the wrath of God. Then they are represented in a more particular manner (Rev. xv. xvi.) as the seven vials, or the seven last plagues, for in them is filled up the wrath of God; which are so many signal judgments upon the kingdom of the beast, and so many steps and degrees of his ruin. Afterwards the fall of Rome is deli-neated (Rev. xvii. xviii.) as of another Babylon; and it is declared that she shall be destroyed by fire, and her destruction shall be a complete and total destruction, such as hath never yet been the fate of Rome. Some of the princes, who were once of her communion, shall hate her as much as they loved her, and burn her with fire. It is farther intimated that she shall be swallowed up by a subterraneous fire, shall sink like a great millstone in the sea, and her smoke shall rise up for ever and ever: and the soil and situation of Rome and the neighbouring countries greatly favour such a supposition. As St. John saith, (xi. 8.) she spiritually is called Sodom; and she shall resemble Sodom in her punishment as well as in her crimes. After the subversion of the capital city, (Rev. xix.) the beast and the false prophet, the powers civil and ecclesiastical, with those who still adhere to their party, shall make one effort more; but it shall prove as weak and vain, as it is impious; they shall both be taken, and cast alive into a lake of fire burning with brimstone. The destruction of Antichrist, therefore, of himself as well as of his seat, shall be in a terrible manner by fire. Daniel asserts the same thing, (vii. 11.) I beheld then because of the voice of the great words which the horn spake, I beheld even till the beast was slain, and his body destroyed, and given to the burning flame. So likewise saith St. Paul, (2 Thess. i. 7, 8.) The Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels, in flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ: and more particularly (ii. 8.) The Lord shall consume the wicked one, the man of sin, with the spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy him with the brightness of his coming.

¹ See Prideaux's Life of Mahomet.

About the time of the fall of the Othman empire and of the Christian Antichrist, the Jews shall turn to the Lord, and be restored to their own land. Innumerable are the prophecies concerning the conversion and restoration of this people. Hear only what Hosea saith, who prophesied before the captivity of the ten tribes of Israel, (iii. 4, 5.) The children of Israel shall abide many days without a king, and without a prince, and without a sacrifice, and without an image or altar, and without an ephod, and without teraphim or divine manifestations. Afterward shall the children of Israel return, and seek the Lord their God, and David their king, and shall fear the Lord and his goodness in the latter days. Hear also what Ezekiel saith, who prophesied during the captivity of the two tribes of Judah and Benjamin, (xxxvii. 21. 25.) Thus saith the Lord God, Behold, I will take the children of Israel from among the heathen, whither they be gone, and will gather them on every side, and will bring them into their own land. And they shall dwell in the land that I have given unto Jacob my servant, wherein your fathers have dwelt, and they shall dwell therein, even they and their children, and their children's children for ever, and my servant David shall be their prince for ever. (xxxix. 28, 29.) Then shall they know that I am the Lord their God, who caused them to be led into cap- *tivity among the heathen, but I have gathered them unto their own land, and have left none of them any more there. Neither will I hide my face any more from them; for I have poured out my Spirit upon the house of Israel, saith the Lord God. Ye cannot but remember what St. Paul saith upon the same occasion, (Rom. xi. 25.) I would not, brethren, that ye should be ignorant of this mystery, that blindness in part is happened to Israel, until the fulness of the Gentiles be come, and so all Israel shall be saved. Now these, and the like predictions, we suppose, will take effect, and this great revolution be accomplished, about the time of the fall of the Othman empire, and of the Christian Antichrist. Ezekiel's Gog and Magog (xxxviii. xxxix.) we believe to be the Turks or Othmans, and they shall come up against the children of Israel in the latter days, to oppose their resettlement in their own land, and they shall fall in some extraordinary manner upon the mountains of Israel, they and the people that is with them: so the house of Israel shall know that I am the Lord their God, from that day and forward. Daniel too (xi. 45; xii. 1.) predicts the fall of the king of the north upon the glorious holy mountain: and at that time shall Michael stand up, the great prince who standeth for the children of Israel. The restoration of the Jews and the fall of Antichrist shall also happen about the same time. If the sixth vial (Rev. xvi. 12.) which is poured out upon the great river Euphrates, whose waters are dried up to prepare a passage for the kings of the east, is to be understood, as Mr. Mede and others think, of the return of the Jews; then the return of the Jews is one of the seven last plagues of Antichrist. But this notion is expressed more clearly in Daniel, as it more immediately concerned his people, (xi. 36.) He shall prosper till the indignation, that is, God's indignation against the Jews, be accomplished: and again afterwards (xii. 7.) When God shall have accomplished to scatter the power of the holy people, all these things shall be finished. In consequence and conformity to this doctrine, a tradition hath prevailed¹ among the Jews, that the destruction of Rome and the redemption of Israel shall fall out about the same time.*

When these great events shall come to pass, of which we collect from the prophecies this to be the proper order; the protestant witnesses shall be greatly exalted, and the 1260 years of their prophesying in sackcloth and of the tyranny of the beast shall end together: the conversion and restoration of the Jews succeed; then follows the ruin of the Othman empire, and then the total destruction of Rome and of Antichrist. When these great events, I say, shall come to pass, then shall the kingdom of Christ commence, or the reign of the saints upon earth. So Daniel expressly informs us, that the kingdom of Christ and the saints will be raised upon the ruins of the kingdom of Antichrist, (vii. 26, 27.) But the judgment shall sit, and they shall take away his dominion, to consume, and to destroy it unto the end. And the kingdom, and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominion shall serve and obey him. So likewise St. John saith, that upon the final destruction of the beast and the false prophet (Rev. xx.) Satan is bound for a thousand years. And I saw thrones, and they sat upon them, and judgment was given unto them : and I saw the souls of them that were beheaded for the witness of Jesus and for the word of God, and which had not worshipped the beast, neither his image, neither had received his mark upon their foreheads, or in their hands ; and they lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years. But the rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished. This is the first resurrection. It is, I conceive, to these great events, the fall of Antichrist, the re-establishment of the Jews, and the beginning of the glorious millennium, that the three different dates in Daniel of 1260 years, 1290 years, and 1335 years are to be referred : and as Daniel saith, (xii. 12.) Blessed is he that waiteth and cometh to the 1335 years ; so St. John saith, (xx. 6.) Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection. Blessed and happy indeed will be this period : and it is very observable, that the martyrs and confessors of Jesus, in popish as well as in pagan times, will be raised to partake of this felicity. Then shall all those gracious promises in the Old Testament be fulfilled of the amplitude and extent, of the peace and prosperity, of the glory and happiness of the church in the latter days. Then in the full sense of the words (Rev. xi. 15.) shall the kingdoms of this world become the kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ, and he shall reign for ever and ever. According to ¹ tradition these thousand years of the reign of Christ and the saints will be the seventh millennary of the world ; for as God created the world in six days and rested on the seventh, so the world, it is argued, will continue six thousand years, and the seventh thousand will be the great sabbatism or holy rest to the people of God ; one day (2 Pet. iii. 8.) being with the Lord as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day. According to ² tradition too these thousand years of the reign of Christ and the saints are the great day of judgment ; in the morning or beginning whereof shall be the coming of Christ in flaming fire, and the particular judgment of Antichrist, and the first resurrection ; and in the evening or conclusion whereof shall be the general resurrection of the dead, small and great, and they shall be judged every man according to their works.

¹ See Placita Hebræorum Doctorum de Babylonis seu Romæ excidio in Mede's Works, B. v. cap. viii. p. 902.

¹ See Burnet's Theory, B. iii. chap. v. B. iv. chap. vi.

² See Placita Hebræorum Doctorum de Magno die Judici in Mede, p. 535. B. v. chap. iii. p. 892.

Prudence as well as modesty requires, that we should forbear all curious inquiries into the nature and condition of this future kingdom; as how Satan should be bound for a thousand years, and afterwards loosed again; how the raised saints shall cohabit with the living, and judge and govern the world; how Christ shall manifest himself to them, and reign among them; how the new Jerusalem, the city and church of the living God, shall descend from heaven to earth; how Satan shall at last deceive the nations, and what nations they shall be. These are points which the Holy Spirit hath not thought fit to explain; and folly may easily ask more questions about them than wisdom can answer. Wisdom, in the mysterious things of God, and especially in the mysterious things of futurity, will still adhere to the words of Scripture; and having seen the completion of so many particulars, will rest contented with believing that these also shall be, without knowing how they shall be. It is of the nature of most prophecies not to be fully understood till they are fully accomplished, and especially prophecies relating to a state so different from the present as the millennium. Perfectly to comprehend these and all other prophecies may constitute a part of the happiness of that period, for then they will all be fulfilled, and the mystery of God shall be finished. This however is very evident, that wickedness would soon overrun the world, if not restrained by an overruling Providence; for no sooner is Satan loosed again, than the nations which are in the four quarters of the earth come up against the holy city, the number of whom is as the sand of the sea. And therefore at the time appointed, after the general judgment, this world shall be destroyed, (2 Pet. iii. 10.) the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat, the earth also, and the works that are therein, shall be burnt up. Thus (Rev. xxi. 1.) the first heaven and the first earth shall pass away, and a new heaven and a new earth shall succeed, (2 Pet. iii. 13.) wherein dwelleth righteousness; (Rev. xxi. 3, 4.) God himself shall be with men, and be their God; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor pain, for the former things are passed away. (1 Cor. xv. 24, &c.) Then cometh the end, when Christ shall have delivered up the kingdom to God, even the Father: when he shall have put down all rule, and all authority, and power. For he must reign till he hath put all enemies under his feet: the last enemy that shall be destroyed is death. And when all things shall be subdued unto him, then shall the Son also himself be subject unto him that put all things under him, that God may be all in all.

Since then the corruptions of popery are so particularly foretold in Scripture, and make so considerable a part of the ancient prophecies, we have the less reason to be surprised and offended at them. While the papists endeavour to corrupt and adulterate the doctrines of the prophets and apostles, they still accomplish their predictions; while they labour to destroy Christianity in one part, they unwittingly confirm and establish it in another. And since a time is certainly coming, wherein God will avenge himself on these idolaters, and require the blood of his servants at their hands, let us wait with the faith and the patience of saints, till it be accomplished. We have seen the prophecies remarkably fulfilled in their success, and we shall see them as remarkably fulfilled too in their destruction. The power of the pope is nothing near so great now as it was some years ago: it received its death-wound at the Reformation, of which it may languish for a time, but will never entirely recover, though its last struggles and efforts, like those of a dying monster, may be terrible and dangerous. In the end, the Gospel will prevail over all enemies and opposers; (Matt. xxi. 44.) Who-soever shall fall on this stone shall be broken; but on whomsoever it shall fall, it will grind him to powder. We will conclude our discourse with the words of Ezra, so very applicable to us of the reformed religion: (ix. 13, 14.) After all that is come upon us for our evil deeds, and for our great trespass, seeing that thou our God hast punished us less than our iniquities deserve, and hast given us such deliverance as this, a deliverance from the yoke and tyranny of the church of Rome; should we again break thy commandments, and join in affinity with the people of these abominations, wouldst thou not be angry with us till thou hast consumed us, so that there should be no remnant nor escaping?

CONCLUSION.

FROM these instances, which have been produced, of prophecies and their completions, it is hoped this conclusion may fairly be drawn in the words of St. Peter, (2 Pet. i. 20, 21.) that no prophecy of the Scripture is of any private interpretation, or the suggestion of any man's own spirit or fancy; for the prophecy came not in old time by the will of man, but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost. Other instances might have been alleged to the same purpose: but those prophecies which received their full accomplishment in ancient times, and even those which were accomplished in the person and actions of our blessed Saviour, are not here considered; such only as relate to these latter ages, and either in the whole or in part are now fulfilling in the world, are made the subjects of these dissertations. This is proving our religion in some measure by ocular demonstration, is not walking by faith only, but also by sight. For you can have no reason to doubt of the truth of prophecy, and consequently of the truth of revelation, when you see instances of things which could no ways depend upon human conjecture, foretold with the greatest clearness, and fulfilled hundreds of years afterwards with the greatest exactness. Nay, you see prophecies, the latest whereof were delivered about seventeen hundred years ago, and some of them above three thousand years ago, fulfilling at this very time, and cities, countries, and kingdoms in the very same condition, and all brought about in the very same manner, and with the very same circumstances as the prophets had foretold.

You see the descendants of Shem and Japheth ruling and enlarged in Asia and Europe, and perhaps in America, and the curse of servitude still attending the wretched descendants of Ham in Africa. You see the posterity of Ishmael multiplied exceedingly, and become a great nation in the Arabians; yet living like wild men, and shifting from place to place in the wilderness; their hand against every man, and every man's hand against them; and still dwelling an independent and free people, in the presence of all their brethren, and in the presence of all their enemies. You see the family of Esau totally extinct, and that of Jacob subsisting at this day; the sceptre departed from Judah, and the people living no where in authority, every where in subjection: the Jews still dwelling alone among the nations, while the remembrance of Amalek is utterly put out from under heaven. You see the Jews severely punished for their infidelity and disobedience to their great prophet like unto Moses; plucked from off their own land, and removed into all the kingdoms of the earth: oppressed and spoiled evermore, and made a proverb and a by-word among all nations. You see Ephraim so broken as to be no more a people, while the whole nation is comprehended under the name of Judah; the Jews wonderfully preserved as a distinct people, while their great conquerors are every where destroyed; their land lying desolate, and themselves cut off from being the people of God, while the Gentiles are advanced in their room. You see Nineveh so completely destroyed, that the place thereof is not, and cannot be known; Babylon made a desolation for ever, a possession for the bittern, and pools of water; Tyre become like the top of a rock, a place for fishers to spread their nets upon; and Egypt a base kingdom, the basest of the kingdoms, and still tributary and subject to strangers. You see of the four great empires of the world the fourth and last, which was greater and more powerful than any of the former, divided in the western part thereof into ten lesser kingdoms; and among them a power with a triple crown, diverse from the first, with a mouth speaking very great things, and with a look more stout than his fellows, speaking great words against the Most High, wearing out the saints of the Most High, and changing times and laws. You see a power cast down the truth to the ground, and prosper and practise, and destroy the holy people, not regarding the God of his fathers, nor the desire of wives, but honouring Mahuzzim, Gods-protectors, or saints-protectors, and causing the priests of Mahuzzim to rule over many, and to divide the land for gain. You see the Turks stretching forth their hand over the countries, and particularly over the land of Egypt, the Libyans at their steps, and the Arabians still escaping out of their hands. You see the Jews led away captive into all nations, and Jerusalem trodden down of the Gentiles, and likely to continue so until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled, as the Jews are by a constant miracle preserved a distinct people for the completion of other prophecies relating to them. You see one who opposeth and exalteth himself above all laws divine and human, sitting as God in the church of God, and showing himself that he is God, whose coming is after the working of Satan with all power, and signs, and lying wonders, and with all deceivableness of unrighteousness. You see a great apostacy in the Christian church, which consists chiefly in the worship of dæmons, angels, or departed saints, and is promoted through the hypocrisy of liars, forbidding to marry, and commanding to abstain from meats. You see the seven churches of Asia lying in the same forlorn and desolate condition that the angel had signified to St. John, their candlestick removed out of its place, their churches turned into mosques, their worship into superstition. In short, you see the characters of the beast, and the false prophet, and the whore of Babylon, now exemplified in every particular, and in a city that is seated upon seven mountains; so that if the bishop of Rome had sat for his picture, a greater resemblance and likeness could not have been drawn.

As there is a near affinity between this and what Dr. Clarke¹ hath said in the conclusion of his discourse of prophecies, it may be proper to confirm and illustrate the argument with so great an authority: and, indeed, these things are of such importance, and so deserving to be known, that they cannot be inculcated too frequently, nor shown in too many lights.

“ I shall conclude this head with pointing at some particular extraordinary prophecies, which deserve to be carefully considered and compared with the events, whether they could possibly have proceeded from chance or from enthusiasm. Some of them are of such a nature, as that they can only be judged of by persons learned in history; and these I shall but just mention. Others are obvious to the consideration of the whole world; and with those I shall finish what I think proper at this time to offer upon this subject.

“ Concerning Babylon it was particularly foretold, that it should be shut up and besieged by the Medes, Elamites, and Armenians; that the river should be dried up; that the city should be taken in the time of a feast, while her mighty men were drunken; which accordingly came to pass, when Belshazzar and all his thousand princes, who were drunk with him at the feast, were slain by Cyrus’s soldiers. Also it was particularly foretold, that God would make the country of Babylon a possession for the bittern, and pools of water; which was accordingly fulfilled by the overflowing and drowning of it, on the breaking down of the great dam in order to take the city. Could the correspondence of these events with the predictions be the result of chance? But suppose these predictions were forged after the event, can the following ones also have been written after the event? or with any reason be ascribed to chance? The wild beasts of the desert shall dwell there, and the owls shall dwell therein: and it shall be no more inhabited for ever, neither shall it be dwelt in from generation to generation: as God overthrew Sodom and Gomorrah, &c. They shall not take of thee a stone for a corner,—but thou shalt be desolate for ever, saith the Lord:—Babylon shall become heaps, a dwelling-place for dragons, an astonishment and an hissing, without an inhabitant:—it shall sink, and shall not rise from the evil that I will bring upon her. Babylon, the glory of kingdoms,—shall be as when God overthrew Sodom and Gomorrah: it shall never be inhabited, neither shall it be dwelt in from generation to generation: neither shall the Arabian pitch tent there, neither shall the shepherds make their fold there; but wild beasts of the desert shall lie there, and their houses shall be full of doleful creatures, and owls shall dwell there.

“ Concerning Egypt, was the following prediction forged after the event? or can it, with any reason, be ascribed to chance? Egypt shall be a base kingdom: it shall be the basest of kingdoms, neither shall it exalt itself any more above the nations: for I will diminish them, that they shall no more rule over the nations.

¹ Clarke’s Works, Vol. II. The Evidences of Natural and Revealed Religion, p. 720, &c.

“Concerning Tyre, the prediction is no less remarkable: I will make thee like a top of a rock; thou shalt be a place to spread nets upon; thou shalt be built no more.—Thou shalt be no more; the merchants among the people shall hiss at thee, thou shalt be a terror, and never shalt be any more. All they that know thee among the people, shall be astonished at thee.

“The description of the extent of the dominion of that people, who were to possess Judæa in the latter days: was it forged after the event? or can it reasonably be ascribed to chance? He shall come with horsemen, and with many ships, and shall overflow and pass over: he shall enter also into the glorious land, [and shall plant the tabernacles of his palace between the seas in the glorious holy mountain] and many countries shall be overthrown: but these shall escape out of his hand, even Edom and Moab and the chief of the children of Ammon. He shall stretch forth his hand also upon the countries, and the land of Egypt shall not escape. But he shall have power over the treasures of gold and of silver, and over all the precious things of Egypt; and the Libyans and Ethiopians shall be at his steps.

“When Daniel, in the ¹ vision of Nebuchadnezzar’s image, foretold four great successive monarchies; was this written after the event? or can the congruity of his description with the things themselves, reasonably be ascribed to mere chance?

* * * * *

“When the same Daniel foretels a tyrannical power, which should wear out the saints of the Most High, and they shall be given into his hand, until a time and times and the dividing of time; and again for ² a time times and a half: (which can no way be applied to the short persecution of Antiochus, because these prophecies are expressly declared to be for many days; concerning what shall befall thy people in the latter days; for yet the vision is for many days; concerning the time of the end; what shall be in the last end of the indignation; concerning those who shall fall by the sword and by flame, by captivity and by spoil many days; to try them, even to the time of the end, because it is yet for a time appointed; concerning a time of trouble, such as never was since there was a nation; the time when God shall have accomplished to scatter the power of the holy people; the time of the end, till which the words are closed up and sealed; to which the prophet is commanded to shut up his words and seal the book, for many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased; even the end, till which Daniel was to rest, and then stand in his lot at the end of the days.) When Daniel, I say, foretels such a tyrannical power, to continue such a determined period of time: and St. John prophesies, that the Gentiles should tread the holy city under foot forty and two months; which is exactly the same period of time with that of Daniel: and again, that two witnesses, clothed in sackcloth, should prophesy a thousand two hundred and threescore days; which is again exactly the very same period of time: and again, that the woman which fled into the wilderness from persecution, should continue there a thousand two hundred and threescore days; and again, that she should fly into the wilderness, for a time, and times, and half a time; which is still the very same period. And again, that a wild beast, a tyrannical power, to whom it was given to make war with the saints, and to overcome them, was to continue forty and two months, (still the very same period of time) and to have power over all kindreds, and tongues, and nations, so that all that dwell upon the earth should worship him: is it credible or possible that ignorant and enthusiastical writers should by mere chance hit upon such coincidences of [occult] numbers? especially since St. John could not possibly take the numbers from Daniel, if he understood Daniel to mean nothing more than the short persecution of Antiochus. And if he did understand Daniel to mean a much longer and greater and more remote tyranny, which John himself prophesied of as in his time still future; then the wonder is still infinitely greater, that in those early times, when there was not the least footstep in the world of any such power as St. John distinctly describes, (but which now is very conspicuous, as I shall presently observe more particularly) it should ever enter into the heart of man to conceive so much as the possibility of such a power, sitting not upon the pavilion of heathen persecutors, but expressly (2 Thess. ii. 4.) in the temple and upon the seat of God himself.

¹ “The fame of which was so nearly spread; that Ezekiel, who was contemporary with Daniel, plainly alludes to it, when he says of the prince of Tyre, chap. xxviii. 3. Thou art wiser than Daniel; there is no secret that they can hide from thee.”

² “Three years and a half, or 1260 days, is, according to the analogy of all the fore-mentioned numbers, 1260 years.”

“But these prophecies, which either relate to particular places, or depend upon the computation of particular periods of time, are (as I said) of such a nature, as that they cannot be judged of, but by persons skilled in history. There are some others more general, running through the whole Scripture, and obvious to the consideration of the whole world.

¹ “There has prevailed among learned men a very important error, as if the 1260 days (or years) here spoken of, took their beginning from the rise of the tyranny here described. Whereas, on the contrary, the words of Daniel are express, that, not from the time of his rise, but after his having made war with the saints, and from the time of their being given into his hand, should be a time and times and the dividing of time, chap. vii. 24, 25. And St. John no less expressly says, that the time, not of the two witnesses prophesying, (for in part of that time they had great power) but of their prophesying in sackcloth, should be a thousand two hundred and threescore days, Rev. xi. 3. And the persecuted woman, after her flight, was to be actually in the wilderness a thousand two hundred and threescore days, chap. xii. 6. Wherefore also the forty and two months, (the very same period) during which time power was given unto the wild beast to continue, (in the original it is ποιῆσαι, to do what he pleased, Rev. xiii. 3.) evidently ought not to be reckoned from his rise or from the time when the ten kings (chap. xvii. 12.) received power with him; but from the time of his having totally overcome the saints, and of his being worshipped by all that dwell upon the earth, chap. xiii. 7, 8.”

“For instance: It was foretold by Moses, that when the Jews forsook the true God, they should be removed into all the kingdoms of the earth; should be scattered among the Heathen, among the nations, among all people from the one end of the earth even unto the other; should there be left few in number among the Heathen, and pine away in their iniquity in their enemies’ lands; and should become an astonishment, a proverb, and a by-word, among all nations; and that among these nations they should find no ease, neither should the sole of their foot have rest; but the Lord should give them a trembling heart, and failing of eyes, and sorrow of mind; and send a faintness into their hearts in the lands of their enemies; so that the sound of a shaken leaf should chase them. Had any thing like this in Moses’s time ever happened to any nation? Or was there in nature any probability that any such thing should ever happen to any people? that, when they were conquered by their enemies, and led into captivity, they should neither continue in the place of their captivity, nor be swallowed up and lost among their conquerors, but be scattered among all the nations of the world, and hated by all nations for many ages, and yet continue a people? Or could any description of the Jews, written at this day, possibly be a more exact and lively picture of the state they have now been in for many ages; than this prophetic description given by Moses, more than three thousand years ago?

“The very same thing is in like manner continually predicted through all the following prophets; that God would scatter them among the Heathen; that he would cause them to be removed into all the kingdoms of the earth; that he would scatter them into all the winds, and disperse them through the countries of the Heathen; that he would sift them among all nations, like as corn is sifted in a sieve; that in all the kingdoms of the earth, whither they should be driven, they should be a reproach and a proverb, a taunt and a curse, and an astonishment and a hissing; and that they should abide many days without a king, and without a prince, and without a sacrifice, and without an image, and without an ephod, and without teraphim. And here concerning the predictions of Ezekiel it is remarkable in particular, that they being spoken in the very time of the Babylonian captivity, it is therefore evident from the time of his prophesying, as well as from the nature and description of the thing itself, that he needs must be understood of that latter captivity into all places, which was to happen after the fulfilling the time of that age, wherein God was first to bring them again (out of the Babylonian captivity) into the land where they should build a temple, but not like to that which afterwards (after their final return) should be built for ever with a glorious building. The forecited prophecies (I say) must of necessity be understood of that wide and long dispersion, which in the New Testament also is expressly mentioned by our Saviour and by St. Paul.

“ ’Tis also farther, both largely and distinctly predicted, as well by Moses himself, as by all the following prophets, that notwithstanding this unexampled dispersion of God's people, yet for all that, when they be in the land of their enemies, God will not destroy them utterly; but when they shall call to mind among all the nations, whither God has driven them, and shall return unto the Lord, he will turn their captivity, and gather them from all nations, from the outmost parts of heaven, even in the latter days: That though he makes a full end of all other nations, yet he will not make a full end of them; but a remnant of them shall be preserved, and return out of all countries whither God has driven them: That he will sift the house of Israel among all nations, like as corn is sifted in a sieve; yet shall not the least grain fall upon the earth: That the Lord shall set his hand again the second time, to recover the remnant of his people, and shall set up an ensign for the nations, and shall assemble the outcasts of Israel, and gather together the dispersed of Judah, from the four corners of the earth: For I will bring thy seed from the east, saith the Lord, and gather thee from the west; I will say to the north, Give up; and to the south, Keep not back; Bring my sons from far, and my daughters from the ends of the earth: Behold, I will lift up my hand to the Gentiles, and set up my standard to the people, and they shall bring thy sons in their arms, and thy daughters shall be carried upon their shoulders: For a small moment have I forsaken thee, but with great mercy will I gather thee: In a little wrath I hid my face from thee, for a moment; but with everlasting kindness will I have mercy on thee. And that these prophecies might not be applied to the return from the seventy years' captivity in Babylon, (which moreover was not a dispersion into all nations) they are expressly referred to the latter days, not only by Moses but by Hosea, who lived long after, (For the children of Israel shall abide MANY DAYS without a king, and without a prince, and without a sacrifice; AFTERWARD they shall return, and seek the Lord their God, and David their king, and shall fear the Lord and his goodness in the LATTEr DAYS) and by Ezekiel, who lived in the captivity itself; After MANY DAYS [speaking of those who should oppose the return of the Israelites] thou shalt be visited, in the LATTEr YEARS thou shalt come into the land;—upon the people that are gathered out of the nations;—In that day, when my people of Israel dwelleth safely,—thou shalt come up against them,—it shall be in the LATTEr DAYS. These predictions, therefore, necessarily belong to that age, when the times of the Gentiles shall be fulfilled, and the fulness of the Gentiles be come in. And that, through all the changes which have happened in the kingdoms of the earth, from the days of Moses to the present time, which is more than three thousand years; nothing could have happened to prevent the possibility of the accomplishment of these prophecies; but on the contrary, the state of the Jewish and Christian nations at this day, should be such as renders them easily capable, not only of a figurative, but even of a literal, completion in every particular, if the will of God be so; this (I say) is a miracle, which hath nothing parallel to it in the phenomena of nature.

“Another instance, no less extraordinary, is as follows. Daniel foretels a kingdom upon the earth, which shall be diverse from all kingdoms, diverse from all that were before it, exceeding dreadful, and shall devour the whole earth: That, among the powers into which this kingdom shall be divided, there shall arise one power diverse from the rest, who shall subdue unto himself three of the first powers, and he shall have a mouth speaking very great things, and a look more stout than his fellows. He shall make war with the saints, and prevail against them. And he shall speak great words against the Most High, and shall wear out the saints of the Most High, and think to change times and laws; and they shall be given into his hand for a long season; even till the judgment shall sit, and the kingdom under the whole heaven shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High. He shall exalt himself and magnify himself above every god, and shall speak marvellous things against the God of gods;—Neither shall he regard ¹ the God of his fathers, nor ² the desire of women, nor regard any God; for he shall magnify himself above all. And in his estate shall he honour ³ the God of forces, and ⁴ a God whom his fathers knew not, shall he honour.—Thus shall he do in the most strong holds with a strange God, whom he shall acknowledge and increase with glory; and he shall cause them to rule over many, and shall divide the land for gain. Suppose now all this to be spoken by Daniel of nothing more than the short persecution under Antiochus Epiphanes; which that it cannot be, I have shown above. But suppose it were, and that it was all forged after the event; yet this cannot be the case of St. Paul and St. John, who describe exactly a like power, and in like words; speaking of things to come in the latter days, of things still future in their time, and of which there were then no footsteps, no appearance in the world. The day of Christ, saith St. Paul, shall not come, except there come a falling away first, and that man of sin be revealed, the son of perdition: who opposeth and exalteth himself above all that is called God, or that is worshipped: so that he, as God, sitteth ⁵ in the temple of God, showing himself that he is God:—whose coming is after the working of Satan, with all power, and signs, and lying wonders, and with all deceivableness of unrighteousness. Again; The Spirit speaketh expressly, that in

¹ “The God of gods, as in the foregoing verse.”

² “Forbidding to marry, 1 Tim. iv. 3.”

³ “Gods-protectors, as ’tis in the margin of the Bible, or saints-protectors.”

⁴ “Changing times and laws, chap. vii. 25; setting up new religions.”

⁵ “’Tis therefore a Christian (not an Infidel) power, that he here speaks of.”

the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits, and ¹ doctrines of devils;—forbidding to marry, and commanding to abstain from meats, &c.—St. John in like manner prophesies of a wild beast, or tyrannical power, to whom was given great authority, and a mouth speaking great things and blasphemies: and he opened his mouth in blasphemy against God: and it was given unto him to make war with the saints, and to overcome them; and power was given him over all kindreds, and tongues, and nations; and all that dwell upon the earth shall worship him.—And he that exerciseth his power before him—doeth great wonders,—and deceiveth them that dwell upon the earth, by the means of those miracles which he had power to do.—And he causeth that no man might buy or sell, save he that had the mark or the name of the beast;—And the kings of the earth have one mind, and shall give their power and strength unto the beast;—even peoples, and multitudes, and nations, and tongues. For God hath put in their hearts [in the hearts of the kings] to fulfil his will, and to agree, and give their kingdom unto the beast, until the words of God shall be fulfilled. The name of the person, in whose hands the reins or principal direction of the exercise of this power is lodged, is Mystery, Babylon the great, the mother of harlots, and abominations of the earth: with whom the kings of the earth ² have committed fornication, and the inhabitants of the earth have been made drunk with the wine of her fornication. And she herself is drunken with the blood of the saints, and with the blood of the martyrs of Jesus: And by her ³ sorceries are all nations deceived: And in her is found the blood of prophets, and of saints, and of all that are slain upon the earth. And this person [the political person] to whom these titles and characters belong, is that great city (standing upon seven mountains) which reigneth over the kings of the earth.

“If in the days of St. Paul and John there was any footstep of such a sort of power as this in the world; or, if there ever had been any such power in the world: or, if there was then any appearance of probability, that could make it enter into the heart of man to imagine, that there ever could be any such kind of power in the world, much less in the temple or church of God; and, if there be not now such a power actually and conspicuously exercised in the world: and if any picture of this power, drawn after the event, can now describe it more plainly and exactly than it was originally described in the words of the prophecy: then may it with some degree of plausibleness be suggested, that the prophecies are nothing more than enthusiastic imaginations."

¹ “Doctrines concerning dæmons, that is, ghosts or souls of (good or bad) men departed. Epiphanius, citing this text, alleges the following words, as part of the text itself; ἔσονται, γὰρ, φησι, νεκροῖς λατρεύοντες, ὡς καὶ ἐν τῇ Ἰσραὴλ ἐσεβασθησαν. For they shall be, says the apostle, worshippers of the dead, even as the dead were anciently worshipped in Israel. And he applies the whole to the worshippers of the blessed Virgin. Hæres. lxxviii. sect. xxii.”

² “Have been led into idolatrous practices.”

³ “φαρμακεία [σοφοῖς φαρμάκοις] methods of making men religious without virtue.”

For these things you have the attestation of past, and the experience of present times: and you cannot well be deceived, if you will only believe your own eyes and observation. You actually see the completion of many of the prophecies in the state of men and things around you, and you have the prophecies themselves recorded in books, which books have been read in public assemblies these seventeen hundred or two thousand years, have been dispersed into several countries, have been translated into several languages, and quoted and commented upon by different authors of different ages and nations, so that there is no room to suspect so much as a possibility of forgery or illusion.

The prophecies too, though written by different men in different ages, have yet a visible connexion and dependency, an entire harmony and agreement one with another. At the same time that there is such perfect harmony, there is also great variety: and the same things are foretold by different prophets in a different manner and with different circumstances: and the latter usually improve upon the former. They are all excellent in their different kinds; and you may observe the beauty and sublimity of the style and diction of the prophets even from these quotations which have been made from their writings. Indeed they are very well worthy of your serious perusal and meditation, not only considered as prophets, but considered even as authors, for their noble images and descriptions, their bold tropes and figures, their instructive precepts, their pathetical exhortations, and other excellences, which would have been admired in any ancient writers whatever.

Obscurities there are indeed in the prophetic writings, for which many good reasons may be assigned, and this particularly, because prophecies are the only species of writing which is designed more for the instruction of future ages than of the times wherein they are written. If the prophecies had been delivered in plainer terms, some persons might be for hastening their accomplishment, as others might attempt to defeat it; men's actings would not appear so free, nor God's providence so conspicuous in their completion. But though some parts are obscure enough to exercise the church, yet others are sufficiently clear to illuminate it: and the obscure parts, the more they are fulfilled, the better they are understood. In this respect as the world groweth older, it groweth wiser. Time, that detracts something from the evidence of other writers, is still adding something to the credit and authority of the prophets. Future ages will comprehend more than the present, as the present understands more than the past: and the perfect accomplishment will produce a perfect knowledge of all the prophecies.

In any explication of the prophecies you cannot but observe the subserviency of human learning to the study of divinity. One thing is particularly requisite, a competent knowledge of history, sacred and profane, ancient and modern. Prophecy is, as I may say, history anticipated and contracted; history is prophecy accomplished and dilated: and the prophecies of Scripture contain, as you see, the fate of the most considerable nations, and the substance of the most memorable transactions in the world from the earliest to the latest times. Daniel and St. John, with regard to these later times, are more copious and particular than the other prophets. They exhibit a series and succession of the most important events from the first of the four great empires to the consummation of all things. Their prophecies may really be said to be a summary of the history of the world, and the history of the world is the best comment upon their prophecies. I must confess it was my application to history, that first struck me, without thinking of it, with the amazing justness of the Scripture prophecies. I observed the predictions all along to be verified in the course of events: and the more you know of ancient and modern times, and the farther you search into the truth of history, the more you will be satisfied of the truth of prophecy. They are only pretenders to learning and knowledge, who are patrons of infidelity. You have heard, in these discourses, of the two greatest men whom this country, or perhaps the whole world hath produced, the Lord Bacon and Sir Isaac Newton, the one wishing for a history of the several prophecies of Scripture compared with the events, the other writing Observations upon the Prophecies of Daniel and the Apocalypse of St. John: and the testimony of two such (not to mention others) is enough to weigh down the authority of all the infidels who ever lived.

You see what standing monuments the Jews are every where of Divine vengeance for their infidelity; and beware therefore of the like crime, lest the like punishment should follow; for (Rom. xi. 21.) if God spared not the natural branches, take heed lest he also spare not thee. Our infidelity would be worse even than that of the Jews, for they receive and own the prophecies, but do not see and acknowledge their completion in Jesus, whereas our modern infidels reject both the prophecy and the completion together. But what strange disingenuity must it be, when there is all the evidence that history can afford for the prophecy, and in many cases even ocular demonstration for the completion, to be still obstinate and unbelieving? May we not very properly bestow upon such persons that just reproach of our Saviour, (Luke xxiv. 25.) O fools, and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken? But I have good hope and confidence in God, that (Heb. x. 39.) we are not of them who draw back unto perdition, but of them who believe to the saving of the soul.

Indeed if it was once or twice only that the thing had succeeded, and the event had fallen out agreeably to the prediction, we should not so much wonder, we should not lay such a stress upon it; it might be ascribed to a lucky contingency, or owing to rational conjecture: but that so many things, so very unlikely ever to happen, should be so particularly foretold, and so many ages afterwards so punctually fulfilled, transcends without doubt all the skill and power of man, and must be resolved into the omniscience and omnipotence of God. Nothing certainly can be a stronger proof of a person's acting by Divine commission, and speaking by Divine inspiration; and it is assigned in Scripture as the test and criterion between a true and false prophet: (Deut. xviii. 22.) When a prophet speaketh in the name of the Lord, if the thing follow not nor come to pass, that is the thing which the Lord hath not spoken, but the prophet hath spoken it presumptuously; and in another place (Jer. xxviii. 9.) The prophet who prophesieth of peace, when the word of the prophet shall come to pass, then shall the prophet be known that the Lord hath truly sent him. It is so much the peculiar prerogative of God; or of those who are commissioned by him, certainly to foretel future events, that it is made a challenge to all false gods, (Isa. xli. 21. 28.) Produce your cause, saith the Lord; bring forth your strong reasons, saith the king of Jacob; show the things that are to come hereafter, that we may know that ye are gods. Lying oracles have been in the world; but all the wit and malice of men and devils cannot produce any such prophecies as are recorded in Scripture: and what stronger attestations can you require to the truth and divinity of the doctrine? No man can bring with him more authentic credentials of his coming from God: and the more you shall consider and understand them, the more you will be convinced, that (Rev. xix. 10.) the testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy.

If to the prophecies you add the miracles, so salutary and beneficial, so publicly wrought and so credibly attested, above any other matters of fact whatever, by those who were eye-witnesses of them, and sealed the truth of their testimony with their blood; if to these external confirmations you add likewise the internal excellence of Christianity, the goodness of the doctrine itself, so moral, so perfect, so divine, and the purity and perfection of its motives and sanctions, above any other system of morality or religion in the world; if you seriously consider and compare all these things together, it is almost impossible not to feel conviction, and to cry out, as Thomas did after handling our Saviour, (John xx. 28.) My Lord and my God! This is only one argument out of many, that there must be a Divine revelation, if there is any truth in prophecy; and there must be truth in prophecy, as we have shown in several instances, and might show in several more, if there is any dependence upon the testimony of others or upon our own senses, upon what we read in books or upon what we see in the world.

Men are sometimes apt to think, that if they could but see a miracle wrought in favour of religion, they would readily resign all their scruples, believe without doubt, and obey without reserve. The very thing that you desire you have. You have the greatest and most striking of miracles in the series of Scripture prophecies accomplished; accomplished, as we see, in the present state of almost all nations, the Africans, the Egyptians, the Arabians, the Turks, the Jews, the Papists, the Protestants, Nineveh, Babylon, Tyre, the seven churches of Asia, Jerusalem, and Rome. And this is not a transient miracle, ceasing almost as soon as performed : but is permanent, and protracted through the course of many generations. It is not a miracle delivered only upon the report of others, but is subject to your own inspection and examination. It is not a miracle exhibited only before a certain number of witnesses, but is open to the observation and contemplation of all mankind ; and after so many ages is still growing, still improving to future ages. What stronger miracle, therefore, can you require for your conviction ? or what will avail if this be found ineffectual ? Alas, if you reject the evidence of prophecy, neither would you be persuaded though one should rise from the dead. What can be plainer ? You see, or may see with your own eyes, the Scripture prophecies accomplished : and if the Scripture prophecies are accomplished, the Scripture must be the word of God ; and if the Scripture is the word of God, the Christian religion must be true.

It is hoped, therefore, that the same address may be applied to you, which St. Paul made to king Agrippa, (Acts xxvi. 27, 28.) Believest thou the prophets ? I know that thou believest : and God dispose your heart to answer again, Not only almost, but altogether thou persuadest me to be a Christian ! For your encouragement remember, that (Matt. x. 41.) He who receiveth a prophet in the name of a prophet, shall receive a prophet's reward. Wherefore (1 Thess. v. 19, &c.) quench not the Spirit ; despise not prophesyings ; prove all things, hold fast that which is good. The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you. Amen.

GENERAL INDEX.

A.

ABOMINATION of desolation standing in the holy place, the meaning of that expression, 334. why the Roman army is called the abomination, 335.

Abraham, the patriarch of the greatest renown, 17. favoured with several revelations, ibid. those concerning Ishmael considered, 18. the prophecies about Ishmael and his posterity, how fulfilled, ibid. those about the Israelites, how accomplished, 30, &c.

Abstinence from meats, a note and character of the apostasy, 425.

Acilius, the Roman consul, routs Antiochus, and expels him out of Greece, 270.

Aelius Adrian, the Roman emperor, builds Ælia instead of Jerusalem, 358. destroys and disperses the Jews, 359. 452.

Agag, his king shall be higher than Agag, that part of Balaam's prophecy explained, 56, 57.

Agathocles, dissolute and proud in the exercise of his power, 265. the people of Alexandria rise against him, ibid. cause him and his associates to be put to death, ibid.

Alaric and the Goths invade Italy and besiege Rome, 466.

Alexander the Great, his designs against the Arabs prevented by his death, 22. the rapidity of his conquests, 229. the three chief battles he had with the king of Persia, 230, 231. is met by the high-priest in his way to Jerusalem, 232. enters the temple, and the prophecies of Daniel are shown him, 232. characterized in that book, 254. his death, and the miserable end of his family, 236. is succeeded by four of his captains, 237. 256.

Alexander Severus, a just and provident emperor, 454.

Alexandria, after a long siege, taken by the Saracens, 168. the famous library there, when founded and when destroyed, 168, 169.

Alfric in England in the tenth century writes against transubstantiation, 499.

Amalekites, Balaam's prophecy against them, how fulfilled, 62, 63.

Ambrose, his affirmation about Antichrist, 401.

Angel, flying in the midst of heaven and preaching the everlasting Gospel, 542. what meant by saying, The hour of his judgment is come, 542.

Angels, seven, having the seven last plagues, 548. pour out the vials of the wrath of God upon the earth, 551, &c.

Antichrist, what mistaken notions the fathers had in this matter, and how, 204, 205. how long he is to continue, 211. he and the man of sin, one and the same person, 399. the opinion of Justin Martyr, Origen, the reformers, and others about him, 400—404, &c. how the true notion was suppressed, and revived again with the Reformation, 404. how afterwards it became unfashionable, and now grows into repute again 405. the blindness of the Papists in this point, 405. infamous for idolatry and detestable cruelty, 560. all his power shall be completely subdued, and Rome itself destroyed, 584. described by Daniel and the prophets, 606. the prophets describe his downfall, manner, and circumstances of it, ibid.

Antigonus, his attempts against the Arabs not successful, 22.

Antiochus Epiphanes, succeeded his brother Seleucus Philopator, 273. obtains the kingdom by flatteries, 273. the epithet of vile or despicable given him by the prophet Daniel, 274. though frantic and extravagant, yet successful and victorious, 274. prefers Jason to the high priesthood, 275. afterwards advances Menelaus in his room, 275. extravagant in various instances, 276. comes to Joppa and Jerusalem, 277. his great success against Egypt, 277, 278. pretends to take care of the interest of his nephew Philometor, 278. determines to be revenged on the people of Jerusalem for rejoicing at the report of his death, 280. takes that city and acts with great cruelty, 280. sends Apollonius afterwards to Jerusalem, who defiles the city, and sets up the heathen worship, 282. the various opinions about the prophecies of Daniel being accomplished in Antiochus, 284. assigns two cities for

- maintaining his favourite concubine Antiochis, 293. the awful manner of his death, 95, 246.
- Antiochus Magnus, succeeds his brother in the throne of Syria, 261. his army being defeated by Ptolemy, is forced to solicit a peace, 262, 263. kills the rebel Achæus and reduces the eastern parts, 264. acquires great riches, ibid. rises up against young Ptolemy, 265. takes possession of Cœle-Syria and Palestine, 266. defeats Scopas, Ptolemy's general, 267. aspires after more conquest and dominion, 269. marries his daughter Cleopatra to Ptolemy, 269. engages in a war with the Romans, 270. is routed at the Straits of Thermopylæ, 270. the latter end of his life very mean, 271. attempting to plunder the temple of Jupiter Belus is slain, 271.
- Apocalypse. See Revelation.
- Apostacy of the latter times, St. Paul's prophecy about this, 406. the nature of that apostacy, 407. it was general, 408. some particulars of this apostacy about dæmons and worshipping of the dead, 413—416. was to prevail in the latter times, 414. prophesied of by Daniel, 422. by what means to be propagated, 422—425. the notes and characters of this apostacy, 407. 409, 410, 419, 420, 422, 423, 594, &c.
- Arabs, disdain to acknowledge Alexander the Great, 22. his designs prevented against them by his death, ibid. beautiful spots and fruitful valleys in their country, 21. have always maintained their independency against the nations, 21, 22, 25. against the Egyptians and Assyrians, 21. against the Persians, 22. against Alexander and his successors, 22. against the Romans, 23, 24. their state under their prophet Mohammed and afterwards, and now under the Turks, 24—26. what is said of them by late travellers, 25, 26. their retaining the same disposition and manners for so many ages, wonderful, 26, 27. the prophecies concerning this people signally fulfilled in their being preserved and not conquered, 26, 28. the Arabs in some respects resemble the Jews, 28. never yet subdued by the Turks, 303. rob and plunder the Turks as well as other travellers, 303, 304. compared to locusts, 472. the kingdoms and dominions acquired by them, 474. the time assigned for their hurting and tormenting men, 476, 477.
- Arnold of Brescia, in the twelfth century, burnt for preaching against the temporal power of the pope and clergy, 503.
- Ashur. And shall afflict Ashur, what meant by these words in Balaam's prophecy, 66.
- Asia, the seven epistles to the seven churches there, 437—440. why these seven addressed particularly, 440. the excellent form and structure of these epistles, 440. in what sense prophetic, 441. the present state of these once flourishing churches, 441—446. the churches lay in a circular form, 445. the method and order observed in addressing them, ibid. their present state a very strong proof of the truth of prophecy, 446.
- Assyrians terrible enemies both to Israel and Judah, 106. Isaiah's prophecy against them, 107. See Nineveh.
- Attila, with his Huns, lays waste Macedon and Greece, Gaul and Italy, 468. the scourge of God and terror of men, 468.
- Austin, his opinion about Antichrist, 401.
- B.
- Babylon, prophecies concerning it, 119—136. it, as well as Nineveh, an enemy to the people of God, 119. a great and ancient city, 119, 120. considerably improved by Nebuchadnezzar, 120. one of the wonders of the world, 121. its destruction foretold by Isaiah and Jeremiah, 121. prophecies about Cyrus the conqueror of Babylon fulfilled, 122, 123. the time of its reduction foretold, 122. besieged by the Medes and Persians, 123. Armenians and other nations united against it, 124. the Babylonians hide themselves within their walls, ibid. the river dried up, 124. the city taken during a feast, 125. the facts related by Herodotus and Xenophon, and therefore no room for scepticism, 126. the prophets foretold its total desolation, 126, 127. these prophecies fulfilled by degrees, 127. its state under Cyrus, ibid. under Darius, 128. under Xerxes, 129. the accounts of it since that time by Diodorus, 130. by Strabo, 131. by Pliny, ibid. by Pausanias, ibid. by Maximus Tyrius and Lucian, 131. by Jerome, 131, 132. accounts by later authors, 132. by Benjamin of Tudela, ibid. by Texeira, ibid. by Rauwolf, ibid. by Peter della Valle, 133, by Tavernier, 133, 134. by Salmon, 134. by Mr. Hanway, ibid. by these accounts it appears how punctually the prophecies were fulfilled, 134, 135.—the fall and destruction of spiritual Babylon, 543—567. after her fall becomes a scene of desolation, 568, &c. the fall of Roman Babylon and her sudden destruction, 543, 570, 571. the consequences of her fall, the lamentations of some and the rejoicings of others, 571. her irrecoverable and utter desolation, 571. the church joins in praises and thanksgivings to God for his truth and righteousness in judging this idolatrous city, 571, &c. a prophecy about Babylon particularly fulfilled, 615.
- Babylonian, the first of the four empires,

- compared to a lion, 192. with eagles' wings, 193. with a man's heart, ibid.
- Bacon (Lord) wisheth for a history of the prophecies compared with the events, 1. how he would have it written, 430.
- Badby, convicted of heresy and burnt in Smithfield, 512. refuses an offered pardon, and chooses to die with a good conscience, ibid.
- Balaam, the prophet, a heathen and an immoral man, 51. the story of Balaam's ass considered, 52, 53. the style of his prophecies beautiful, 53. his prophecy of the singular character of the Jewish nation, how fulfilled to this day, 55. his prophecy of their victories much the same as Isaac's and Jacob's, 56. that of the king higher than Agag, how fulfilled, 56, 57. his preface to his latter prophecies explained, 57, 58. his prophecy of a star and sceptre to smite the prince of Moab, how fulfilled, 58. who meant by the sons of Sheth, 58, 59. some parts of this prophecy understood of the Messiah and David, 60. his prophecy against the Amalekites, how fulfilled, 62, 63. against the Kenites, and who the Kenites were, 63, 64. his prophecies of the coast of Chittim, of Ashur and Eber, 65—68. what conclusions to be drawn from the prophecies of this wicked man, 68.
- Baronius, his character of the tenth century, 498.
- Basnage, a remarkable passage in his story about the Jews, 85, 86. his reasons for the Jews not dwelling at Jerusalem, 366.
- Beast, with seven heads and ten horns described, 526. denotes a tyrannical idolatrous empire, 527. marks whereby the beast was distinguished, 527—530. his words and actions wonderful, 530. his blasphemies, 530, 531. his making war with the saints, 531. the mystery of the beast that carrieth the woman, 561. the mystery of the beast with the seven heads and ten horns, 562—565. the beast with two horns described, 533, 534. his power and authority, 534. pretends to support it by great signs and wonders, ibid. what meant by the image of the beast, 535. what by his mark or character, 536. those without his mark not suffered to buy or sell, 536, &c. the number of the beast explained, 538, &c. the struggles of the true church with the beast, 540. the ruin and destruction of them who worship the beast, 544. denunciation of judgments against the followers of the beast, 552. the threefold state of the beast, 562. the explication of its seven heads and ten horns, 562—564. the power and strength given the beast, 565.
- Benjamin, this tribe became an appendage to Judah, 49. the prophecy of Jacob concerning them fulfilled, 40, 49.
- Benjamin of Tudela, his travels to Jerusalem, 82. his account of its desolate state, ibid.
- Berengarius, writes against transubstantiation, 501. compelled to burn his writings, ibid. his numerous followers, ibid.
- Berenice, daughter of Ptolemy Philadelphus, married to Antiochus Theus, 258. her father called the dowry-giver, ibid. is murdered by order of Laodice, ibid.
- Bernard, inveighs against the corruption of the clergy and tyranny of the popes, 502.
- Bertram, inscribes his book to the emperor, 496. his opinion against the doctrine of transubstantiation, 497.
- Bohemians, their opinions in religion, 513—515. fight for their religion, and are victorious at first, 514. are defeated, and retire to the mountains and caves, 515.
- Bolingbroke, Lord, censured for his indecent reflections on Noah's prophecy, 15. his ignorance about the Codex Alexandrinus, 16. his blunder about the Roman historians, ibid. his sneer about believers refuted, 16, 17. condemned by himself, ibid. had great talents, but misapplied them, 17.
- Book, vision of the angel with the little book, 484, &c. the contents of it, 486.
- Boyle, Mr. the lecture founded by him, 216. the author appointed to preach that lecture, ibid. the subject agreeable to the design of the founder, 223. his merits and excellence, 224.
- Britain, Christianity planted in it before the destruction of Jerusalem, 332.
- Burden of Egypt, that phrase explained, 154, 155.
- Burnet, (Bishop) his account of Bishop Lloyd's studying the Revelation, 429. his strange notion of Gog and Magog, 583.

C.

- Calvin reputed wise for writing no comment upon the Revelation, 429.
- Canaan, the prophetic curse upon him and his posterity considered, 7, &c. his curse properly a curse upon the Canaanites, 7. their wickedness very great, 8. the curse includes the subjection of his descendants to those of Shem and Japhet, 8, 9. the completion of it from Joshua's time to this day, 9, 10, 139, &c. a different reading proposed about this prophecy, 10, 11. his curse pursued his posterity to the utmost parts of the earth, 144.
- Carolin books, by whom written, 495, 542. prove the worship of images to be contrary to Scripture, 542.
- Century, tenth, wicked and ignorant, 498, &c. the principles and state of the church in that period, 498—500. the eleventh

- much of the same complexion with the tenth, 500. the sixteenth the age of reformation, 515, 516.
- Charlemagne, contributes to the establishment of the power of the pope, 495. 529. opposes the worship of images, 542.
- Chittim, the prophecy of ships from that coast, 65. what to be understood by the land and ships of Chittim, 65, 66, 281.
- Christ, some of his prophecies and of his apostles recorded, 315. a summary of our Saviour's prophecies, 315. none more remarkable than those about the destruction of Jerusalem, which were published several years before that event, 316—318. our Saviour's tenderness in weeping over Jerusalem, 318. denounceth persecution to be the lot of his disciples, 329. his name the Word of God, 574. confirms the authority of the book of Revelation, 593. his second coming one principal topic of that book, 584.
- Christians, greatly persecuted, 329, 330. apostacy and other evils follow, 330. he who endures to the end shall be saved, 331.
- Church, persecuted by the great red dragon, 520—522. represented as a mother bearing children to Christ, 520. in time brought such as were promoted to the empire, 521. her flight afterwards into the wilderness, 522. 525. barbarous nations excited to overwhelm her, but afterwards submit to the Christian church, 526. the state of the true church in opposition to that of the beast, 540, &c.
- Chrysostom, his interpretation of Nebuchadnezzar's dream, 187, 188. his description of Antichrist, 402.
- Clarke (Dr.) his account of some extraordinary prophecies, 615, &c.
- Claude, Bishop of Turin, sows the seeds of the reformation in his diocese in the ninth century, 497.
- Clergy, second marriage at first forbidden them, 294. afterwards restrained from marrying at all, ibid.
- Collins, his eleven objections against Daniel's prophecies considered and refuted, 217—222.
- Constantine the Great, the Christian religion established by him, 460, &c. 522.
- Constantinople, besieged in vain by the Saracens, 473. besieged by Mohammed the second, 482. the city then taken, and an end put to the Grecian empire, 483.
- Constitutions of Clarendon, 502.
- Creatures, to be received with thanksgiving, 427. the ungrateful in this matter rebuked, ibid.
- Croisades or expeditions of the western Christians to the Holy Land, 363. how many perished in these expeditions, 365.
- Cyrus, the conqueror of Babylon, foretold by Isaiah, 121—124. the state of it under him, 127. united the kingdoms of Media and Persia, 227.
- D.
- Daniel, the genuineness of his prophecies vindicated, 173, 174. his credit as a prophet established by prophecies fulfilled at this time, 174. his interpretation of Nebuchadnezzar's dream, his first prophecy, ibid, &c. his vision of the four first empires of the world, 191. the form of Nebuchadnezzar's great image, how represented to Daniel, ibid. his vision of four beasts, ibid. what kingdoms they represent, 192—196. what represented by the fourth beast with ten horns, 197. the opinions of several writers, 198—200. what meant by the little horn, 201, &c. the opinion of some great men in this matter, 202—205. all those kingdoms to be succeeded by that of the Messiah, 212. Daniel's vision and Nebuchadnezzar's compared together, 214, &c. their visions extend to the consummation of all things, 215. will cast light upon subsequent prophecies, and these reflect light upon them again, 215. (See Nebuchadnezzar.)—the languages in which his prophecies were written, 218, &c. his visions, 223. that of a ram and a he-goat, 224. much concerned for the afflictions that were to befall the people of God, 250. the revelation made to him when advanced in years, 252. the prophecy about the Persian empire and four of their kings, 253. that about a mighty king in Greece, 254. his prophecies about the king of the South and the king of the North, 256, &c. a conclusion from the exactness and particularity of the prophecy, 283, 284. other parts of the prophecy, to whom applicable, 284, &c. some parts agree better with Antichrist than Antiochus, 291. 295. a part of his prophecies yet to be fulfilled, 306. some expressions of the last chapter to be applied to the resurrection of the just and the unjust, 310. remarks on the time of accomplishment of Daniel's prophecies, 310—313. his prophecy amazing, and extended to many ages, 313. his prophecies reach beyond the times of Antiochus Epiphanes, 603. some very particularly fulfilled, 603, &c.—his prophecies vindicated against eleven objections of unbelievers, 217. the first relating to his age refuted, 217. the second relating to the mistake of the king's names, and to Nebuchadnezzar's madness, 218. the third relating to Greek words, 218. the fourth about the version of the Seventy, 219. the fifth about clearness of his prophecies, 219. the sixth from his being omitted in the book of Ecclesiasticus, 220. the seventh relating to Jonathan's making no Targum on Daniel, 220. the eighth from the style of his Chaldee, 221. the ninth from the forgeries of the Jews, ibid. the tenth from his uncommon punctuality in fixing the times, 221, 222. the eleventh about his setting forth facts imperfectly, and contrary to other histories, 222. the external and internal evidence for the genuineness of his book, 222, 223.

Daubuz, one of the best interpreters of the Revelation, 431. his hard fate in the world, ibid.

David, some of Balaam's prophecies fulfilled by him, 58—63.

Dead, those blessed who die in the Lord, 545. what meant by being blessed from henceforth, ibid.

Dæmons, the apostacy to consist in worshipping of, 410, &c. were supposed to be middle beings in the theology of the Gentiles, 411. two kinds of dæmons, 411, 412. worship of them in the latter times, 420—425.

Diocletian, the tenth persecution begun by him, 458. more sharp and bloody than any, 458. from thence a memorable æra to the Christians, 459.

Dionysius of Halicarnassus, his account of the superiority of the Roman empire, 198.

Dragon, the church persecuted by the great red, 520, &c. the heathen Roman empire represented by it, 521. his jealousy of the church from the beginning, ibid. the dragon deposed, persecutes the church, 523, 524. attempts to restore the pagan and ruin the Christian religion, 525. takes another method of persecuting the church, 525, 526.

E.

Eber, who meant by Eber, 67. and shall afflict Eber, the meaning of that prophecy, 67, 68.

Edomites, conquered by David, 33. 59. defeated by Judas Maccabeus, and obliged to embrace the Jewish religion, 33. the prophecies of their utter destruction fulfilled, 37.

Egypt, prophecies concerning it, 153—173. famous for its antiquity, 153. no less celebrated for its wisdom, 153. the parent of superstition as well as the mistress of learning, 154. had such connexions with the Jews that it is the subject of several prophecies, 154. the phrase of the burden of Egypt explained, 154, 155. its conquest by Nebuchadnezzar foretold by Jeremiah and Ezekiel, 155. how fulfilled, 156, 157. its conquest by the Persians foretold by Isaiah, and how fulfilled, 157—160. and its conquest by Alexander, and the spreading of the true religion in the land, 160, &c. how fulfilled, 161—164.

the prophecy of Ezekiel that it should be a base tributary kingdom, 164. the truth of it shown from that time to this, 165—171. its state under the Babylonians, 165. under the Persians, 165. 167. under the Macedonians, 167, 168. under the Romans, 168. under the Saracens, with the burning of the Alexandrian library, 168, 169. under the Mamalucs, 169, 170. under the Turks, 171. reflections upon the character of the Egyptians, 171, 172. a prophecy of its being subdued by the Othman emperor, 304. a particular prophecy about it fulfilled, 615.

English kings, not willing to pay homage to the pope, 500.

Ephesus, that church admonished to repent, 441. her candlestick now removed, and the seven churches ruined, 442. the first epistle to the seven churches addressed to them, 441. its former magnificence, but present ruinous condition, 442. the denunciation against it strikingly fulfilled, ibid.

Ephraim, no more a people, 88, &c. 614. now comprehended under the name of Judah, ibid.

Epiphanius, zealous against the worship of images and images, 415. an illustrative passage of his about the doctrine of dæmons, ibid.

Euphrates, what meant by drying up that river, and by the kings of the east, 553. a prophecy of the Euphratæan horsemen, 478—482.

Eusebius, his comparison of Christ and Moses, 72. the same enlarged by a modern author, 73, &c. upon saints, 417.

Ezekiel, his prophecies concerning Tyre, 136, &c. concerning Egypt, 155. 306, &c. Gog and Magog, 583, &c.

F.

Fluentius, bishop of Florence, in the twelfth century, preaches that Antichrist was come, 502.

Fornication, in Scripture, often put for idolatry, 557—559. what meant by drinking the wine of her fornication, ibid.

Franks or Latin Christians march to the Holy Land, and take Jerusalem, 363, 364.

G.

Gallienus, thirty usurpers in his reign, 456. they come to miserable ends, ibid. sword and famine in his reign, ibid.

Gallus and Volusian, pestilence and diseases in their reign, 456.

Gathering of the people, the different constructions of that prophecy, 45—47. the full completion of this prophecy, 46. this an invincible argument that Jesus is the Messiah, 48—50.

- Gauls and other nations, their families not distinguished as those of the Jews, 94.
- Genseric, king of the Vandals in Africa, takes and plunders Rome, 469.
- Gentiles, promises of their calling and obedience, 101—105. this effected by inconsiderable persons and in a short time, 102. what meant by their times being fulfilled, 321, 322.
- Gog and Magog, in Ezekiel, the same as the Turks, 309. 583, &c. the enemies of the Christian church, 583, 584. who they shall be, not easily determined, ibid.
- Goat. See Ram and He-goat.
- Godfrey of Boulogne, chosen king of Jerusalem, 364.
- Gospel published before the destruction of Jerusalem, 331. the propagation of it northward and southward, eastward and westward, 332. its sudden and amazing progress, 333. at what time the four gospels were written, 316, 317. will finally prevail over all enemies and opposers, 612.
- Greek church, its miserable condition among the Turks, 483. chastised by the Saracens, ruined by the Turks, 483. not quite so corrupt as the Latin church, 601.
- Greeks and Romans, conquered the Canaanites, 10.
- Gregory the Great, what he said about Antichrist, 403.
- Gregory VII. denominated Hell-brand, 500. forbids the marriage of the clergy, 501. their expostulations against this prohibition, 502.
- Grosthead, or Greathead, Robert, bishop of Lincoln, for his free sentiments excommunicated by the pope, and appeals to the tribunal of Christ, 509.
- Grotius and Collins, their notion refuted, 201, 202.
- Grotius censured, for his contracted explanation of the prophecies, 180. 576. 383—315. his explanation of the Man of Sin refuted, ibid.
- H.
- Ham, his bad behaviour towards his father, 5. the curse upon him and his posterity, 7, &c.
- Hammond, his hypothesis of the Man of Sin refuted, 385—387.
- Hanway, his account of the Arabians, 26.
- Heathen, a ceremony among them to curse their enemies, 51.
- Heaven opened, and our Saviour cometh riding upon a white horse, 573. a new heaven and a new earth succeed the first, 585, &c.
- Herodotus, relates that the Arabs were never reduced by the Persians, 22. his account and others about the height of the wall of Babylon, 128.
- Homer and other ancients, their opinion of the soul being prophetic near death, 38. what gave rise to that opinion, 39.
- Horns, in prophetic language, kingdoms, 199.
- Horse, white, an account of that vision, 449. vision of the red horse, 451. of a black horse, 453. of a pale horse, 455.
- Hosea, his prophecy of the Jews' return in the latter days, 619.
- Huetius, his account of Tyre, 150.
- Huns, Goths, and other Barbarians, invade the empire after the death of Theodosius, 466.
- Huss, John, and Jerome of Prague, two faithful witnesses, 491. suffer death with fortitude, 513. their sentence contrary to faith and engagement, ibid. the opinions of their followers, 514, 515.
- I and J.
- Jacob and Esau, the prophecies concerning them, not verified in themselves, but in their posterity, 30, 31. the families of Esau and Jacob two different nations, 31. the family of the elder subject to that of the younger, 32, 33. in situation and other temporal advantages much alike, 33, 34. the elder should delight in war, yet be subdued by the younger, 35. but afterwards should shake off the dominion of the younger, 35, 36. the younger superior in spiritual gifts, 36. the happy instrument of conveying these spiritual blessings to all nations, 37. the posterity of Esau utterly destroyed according to the prophecies, 37.
- Jacob, his prophecies concerning his sons, particularly Judah, 37—50. foretold his sons what should befall them in the latter days, 39, 40. bequeaths the temporal inheritance to all his sons, 39, 40. limits the descent of the blessed seed to Judah, 40, 41. adopts the two sons of Joseph, Manasseh, and Ephraim, 40.
- Jason, made high-priest by Antiochus Epiphanes, 275. is deposed, and Menelaus is advanced in his room, 275. marches to Jerusalem, and exercises great cruelties on the citizens, 279, 280.
- Jeremiah, his prophecies concerning the preservation of the Jews, and destruction of their enemies, 93. concerning Babylon, 119, &c. concerning Egypt, 155, &c.
- Jerome, vindicates the genuineness of Daniel's prophecies against Porphyry, 173. interprets the fourth kingdom of the Romans, 182, 183. his notion of the little horn, 204. what he says of Antichrist, 401.
- Jerusalem, the high-priest meets Alexander going thither, 232. that account rejected by some, but sufficiently vindicated by others, 232, 233. the great objections to the credibility of this story answered, 234—236. our Saviour's prophecies relating to its destruction, 316—319. the magnificence of the temple, 318. the prophecies exactly fulfilled by the utter destruction of the city and temple, 319—321. the phrases of the coming of Christ and the end of the world signify the destruction of Jerusalem, 321, 322. the signs of his coming, and of its destruction, 322. the persecutions before its destruction, 322, 333. the great distress and famine at the siege and after it, 336, &c. a horrid story of a woman devouring her own child, 337. the calamities and miseries without a parallel, 338. what to be understood by the days being shortened, 340, 341. its destruction and the dissolution of the Jewish polity, 352. the great numbers that perished during the siege, 355, 356. the number of the captives, 356, 357. never since in the possession of the Jews, 357. first subject to the Romans, afterwards to others, ibid. the desolation of it complete, 358. its condition under Adrian, 358, 359. the attempt of Julian to rebuild it miraculously defeated, 360, 361. state of Jerusalem under succeeding emperors, 361. taken and plundered by the Persians, 362. surrendered to the Saracens, ibid. passes from the Saracens to the Turks, then to the Franks, and afterwards to the Egyptians and others, 363, 364. at present in the hands of the Turks of the Othman race, 365. the prophecies of what was to follow upon its destruction, 366, 367. some passages relating to its destruction, in the gospel explained, 368—372. particularly about the angels, and even the Son, not knowing the time, 370—372. its destruction typical of the end of the world, 372. the exact completion of these prophecies a strong proof of revelation, 372, 373. See Jews.—A description of the new Jerusalem, 587. a continuation of the description, 590. the particulars confirmed by the angel, 590.

Jews and Arabs, resemble each other, 28. the Jews at present very numerous, 30. the xxviiith of Deuteronomy a picture of their present state, 77. a prophecy of their enemies coming from far, how fulfilled, 77, 78. and of the cruelty of their enemies, how fulfilled, 78. the sieges of their cities, ibid. their distress and famine in their sieges, 79. the women eating their own children, 80. their great calamities and slaughters, 81. their being carried into Egypt, and sold for slaves, at a low price, 81, 82. their being plucked from off their own land, 82, 83. their being dispersed into all nations, 83. their still subsisting as a distinct people, ibid. their finding no rest, 83, 84. their being oppressed and spoiled, 84. their children taken from them, 84. their madness and desperation, 85. their serving other gods, 85, 86. their becoming a proverb and by-word, 86. the long continuance of their plagues, 86. the fulfilment of these ancient prophecies very affecting and convincing, 87. prophecies relative to their present state, 87. and about the restoration of the two tribes, and the dissolution of the ten, 87—93. the time of the restoration of the two tribes foretold, 87. fulfilled at three periods, 88. the prophecy about the ten tribes, how fulfilled, 88. where they are at present, 90. vain conjectures of the Jews thereupon, ibid. not all returned with the two tribes, 92. nor swallowed up among the heathen nations, 92, 93. the reason of the distinction between the two tribes and the ten tribes, 93. the prophecy of the Jews' wonderful preservation, and the destruction of their enemies, 93—95. their preservation one of the most illustrious acts of divine Providence, 93. Providence no less signal in the destruction of their enemies, 94. and that not only of nations, but of single persons, 95. the desolation of Judea another instance of the truth of divine prophecy, 95—99. foretold by the prophets, 95. the present state of Judea answerable to the prophecies, 96, &c. no objection from hence of its being a land flowing with milk and honey, 96—99. the ancients, heathens as well as Jews, testify it to have been a good land, 97. an account of it by two modern travellers, 97—99. the prophecies of the infidelity and reprobation of the Jews, how fulfilled, 99—101. the prophecies concerning the Jews and Gentiles have not had their entire completion, 103. what hath been accomplished, a sufficient pledge of what is to come, 103. a dissuasive from the persecution of the Jews, and humanity and charity recommended, 104. prophecies relating to other nations in connexion with the Jews, 105, &c.

Jews, their calamities and miseries without a parallel, 338. the cause of their heavy judgments, 375. some correspondence between their crime and their punishment, ibid. on this occasion a serious application made to Christians, 375, 376. are successful in taking their city from the Romans, 358. are afterwards subdued with most terrible slaughter, 359. are sold like horses, 359. a standing monument of the truth of Christ's predictions, 366. their great sin, and their punishment, 375. many prophecies of their conversion and restoration, 608. See Jerusalem.

Impostors and false Christs, at the siege of Jerusalem, 342—344. an argument of a - true Christ, 346. the difference between those deceivers and Jesus Christ, 348. they were of debauched lives and vicious principles, 348. those deluded by impostors a melancholy instance of the weakness of mankind, 348.

- Infidelity, its patrons only pretenders to learning, 623. modern, worse than that of the Jews, 623.
- Infidels, their objection that prophecies were written after the events, groundless and absurd, 2. must either renounce their senses, or admit the truth of revelation, 3.
- Joachim, abbot of Calabria, in the twelfth century discourses of Antichrist, 503.
- Jonah preaches repentance to Nineveh, 110. the king and people repent at his preaching, ibid. the most ancient of all prophets, ibid. at what time he prophesied, 110, 111.
- Jortin, (Dr.) his comparison of Moses and Christ, 73—75. his remark upon the prodigies preceding the destruction of Jerusalem, 328.
- Josephus, his account of the great slaughter at the siege of Jerusalem, 81. his relation of the signs and prodigies before its destruction, 327, 328. wonderfully preserved for the illustration of the completion of the prophecies, 374. the great use and advantage of his history in this respect, 374, 375.
- Irenæus, his notion of Antichrist, 202, 400. his explication of the number of the beast, 539.
- Isaac, more promises concerning his posterity than of Ishmael, 29. the promise of the blessed seed fulfilled in Isaac's family, ibid.
- Isaiah, his prophecy against the Assyrians, 107. against Babylon, 121, &c. against Tyre, 136, &c. against Egypt, 154, &c.
- Ishmael, his posterity very numerous, 18. the promises about him, how fulfilled, 19, &c.
- Ishmaelites. See Arabians.
- Israelites, their possession of Canaan according to the promise, 29.
- Judah, Jacob's prophecies in blessing this tribe, 41. the sceptre shall not depart from Judah, that prophecy explained, 42—46. its completion, 46—50. continued a tribe till the coming of the Messiah and the destruction of Jerusalem, 46—48. became the general name of the whole nation, 48. this prophecy an invincible argument that Jesus is the Messiah, 50.
- Julian, his hypocrisy, 290. his attempt to rebuild the temple miraculously defeated, 360, 361.
- Jurieu (Peter) his notion of the resurrection of the witnesses, 492, 493.
- Justin Martyr, his notion of the Man of Sin, 400. his account of the millennium, 579, 580.
- Kennicot, his critical remark upon Noah's prophecy, 12.
- Kingdom, the Babylonian, 177, 192. the Medo-Persian, 178, 193, 194. the Macedonian or Grecian, 179, 195. the four kingdoms into which this was divided, 196. the Roman, 181, 182, 196. the ten kingdoms into which this was divided, 198, &c.
- L.
- Lactantius, his notion of Antichrist, 401. of the millennium, 581. and of the time succeeding, 587.
- Laodice, wife of Antiochus Theus, put away, but afterwards recalled, 258. poisons her husband, and causes Berenice to be murdered, ibid. fixes her eldest son Seleucus Callinicus on the throne, ibid. her wickedness did not pass unpunished, 259, 260.
- Laodicea, the terrible doom of that church, 445. now an inhabitation for wild beasts, ibid. its condition a warning to all impenitent and careless sinners, ibid. its former splendid condition, ibid.
- Last times, what denoted thereby, 420, 421.
- Lateinos, that word contains the number of the beast, 539, &c. how it agrees with the church of Rome, 539, 540.
- Latin church, not reclaimed by the ruin of the Greek church, 494.
- Lawgiver from between his feet, that expression explained, 43.
- Le Clerc, an able commentator, but apt to indulge strange fancies, 44. his singular interpretation of Jacob's prophecy, rejected, 45. his hypothesis of the Man of Sin refuted, 387, 388.
- Little book, the contents of it, 485, 486, &c. describes the calamities of the western church, and their period, 486. the contents to be published, ibid. what meant by the measuring of the temple, 487. some true witnesses against the corruptions of religion, 488, 489.
- Little horn, among the ten horns of the western Roman empire, 201, 202. among the four horns of the Grecian empire, 237. whether to be understood of Antiochus Epiphanes or of the Romans, 238, &c. the reason of its appellation, 239, &c.
- Lloyd, (Bishop,) his account of the ten kingdoms into which the Roman empire was divided, 200. a memorable thing of him about the Revelation, 429. his notion of the resurrection of the witnesses, 493.
- Locusts, the Arabians compared to them, 472, &c. their commission, and how fulfilled, 472, 473. not real, but figurative locusts, 474. likened unto horses, ibid. a description of their heads, faces, and

- teeth, 474, 475. like unto scorpions, 476. their king called the destroyer, 476. their hurting men five months, how to be understood, and how exactly fulfilled, 476—478.
- Lollards, preach against the superstitions of the church of Rome, 510. present a remonstrance to the parliament against the doctrines and practices of that church, 511.
- Longinus reduces Rome to a poor dukedom, 470, 471.
- Loretto, the great riches of the image, house, and treasury, 558.
- Luther preaches against the pope's indulgences, 515. that question answered, Where was your religion before Luther? 516. protests against the corruptions of the church of Rome, 545.
- M.
- Maccabees, their great success against the enemies of the Jews, 288, 289.
- Macedonian empire, why compared to a leopard, 195. why described with four wings and four heads, and dominion given to it, 195, 196. why likened to a goat, 228, &c.
- Machiavel, his account of the ten kingdoms into which the Roman empire was divided, 200. points out the little horn, 206. shows how the power of the church of Rome was raised upon the ruins of the empire, 396, &c.
- Mahuzzim, what it means, 294—297. the prophecy expounded, 298, &c.
- Mamaluks, Jerusalem long under their dominion, 365. all their dominions annexed to the Othman empire, 365.
- Man of Sin*, St. Paul's prophecy about him, 377. the sense and meaning of the passage, 377. what meant by the coming of Christ and the day of Christ, 377—379. who is the Man of Sin, 380, 381. what by sitting in the temple of God, 381. what by he who letteth will let, 382. 398, 399, 400. 402. the destruction of the Man of Sin foretold, 383. the opinions of some learned men rejected, 383—391. other opinions about the Man of Sin, 391, 392. applicable to the great apostasy of the church of Rome, 392. the pope the Man of Sin, 393, &c. what the fathers say of the Man of Sin, 400. the evidences that the pope is the Man of Sin, 403, 404. the opinion of the ancient fathers about this point, 400—402. this prophecy an antidote to popery, 405.
- Marriage, an account of its being forbid to the clergy, 422—425. the worshipping of dæmons and prohibition of marriage went together, 425.
- Maundrell, his account of the state of Palestine, 97, 98. his account of Tyre, 151.
- Maximin the emperor, a barbarian in all respects, 455.
- Mede, a most learned and excellent writer, 14. a mistake of that author's corrected, ibid. his account of the ten kingdoms into which the Roman empire was divided, 200. of the three kingdoms which the little horn subverted, 207. his great pains in explaining the prophecies, and fixing the true idea of Antichrist, 404. his excellent treatise of the apostasy of the latter times, 407. one of the best interpreters of the Revelation, 431. his hard fate in the world, 431. his conjectures concerning Gog and Magog, 584.
- Messiah principally intended in Moses' prophecy of a prophet like unto himself, 68—76. expected about the time of our Saviour, 346. and foretold that he should work miracles, 347.
- Mezeray, what that historian says of the Waldenses, 507.
- Millennium commences, and Satan bound and shut up a thousand years, 575, 576. the prophecy not yet fulfilled, 576. this period thought to be the seventh millenary of the world, 577. quotations in proof of this, 577, &c. the reasons of this doctrine growing into disrepute, 582. curiosity into the nature of this future kingdom to be avoided, 611.
- Miracles and prophecies, the great proofs of revelation, 3. how to judge of miracles, 349. what to think of the pagan and popish miracles, 350—352. those of the church of Rome not real but pretended, 534, 535. their pretended miracles a proof of a false church and a distinguishing mark of Antichrist, 535. prophecies accomplished, the greatest of all miracles, 624, 625.
- Mohammed, the time when his new religion was propagated, 362. some contend that he was the Man of Sin, 391. that opinion refuted, 391. the star that opens the bottomless pit, 471, 472.
- Monks, great promoters of celibacy and worshipping of the dead, 425.
- Moses, a faithful historian in recording the failings of the patriarchs, 5. his prophecy of a prophet like himself, 68—76. many proofs that the Messiah was principally intended in that prophecy, 69, 70. the great likeness between Moses and Christ, 72—75. the comparison between them as drawn by one author, and enlarged by another, 72—75. the punishment of the people for their disobedience to this prophet, 75, 76. the prophecies of Moses concerning the Jews, 77, &c. his prophecy of their dispersion exactly fulfilled, 618, 619.

N.

Nahum, the time of his prophesying uncertain, 111. foretold the utter destruction of Nineveh, 111—116. his prophecies of the manner of its destruction exactly fulfilled, 116—118.

Nebuchadnezzar, his dream of the great empires, 174—191. the interpretation of it by Daniel with the occasion of it, 175, &c. the emblems of that dream considered and explained, 176—191.

Newton, Sir Isaac, his account of the ten kingdoms into which the Roman empire was divided, 200. of the three kingdoms, which the little horn subverted, 207, 208. penetrates into Scripture as well as into nature, 238. his account of the little horn in the Grecian empire, 242, &c. his the best interpretation of Dan. xi. 47, &c. 286, &c. his observations about the interpreters of the Revelation, 429, 430.

Nineveh, prophecies concerning this metropolis of the Assyrian empire, 105—119. an ancient and great city, 107. the Scripture account of it confirmed by heathen authors, 108, 109. abounding in wealth and luxury, became very corrupt, 110. the king and people repented at the preaching of Jonah, ibid. their repentance of short continuance, 111. their destruction foretold by Nahum, ibid. this city taken and destroyed by the Medes and Babylonians, 112, 113. the prophecies of the manner of its destruction exactly fulfilled, 114, 115. its great compass, walls, and towers, 116. authors not agreed about its situation, 117. the predictions about it fulfilled according to the accounts of ancients and moderns, 117, 118. the ruins of this city may strongly affect us in this kingdom, 118.

Noah, very few prophecies before his time, 5. his excellent character, ibid. was notwithstanding guilty of drunkenness, 5. the behaviour of his sons at that time, ibid. foretels the different conditions of their families, 6. his extraordinary prophecy wonderfully fulfilled to this day, 14.

O.

Odoacer, king of the Heruli, puts an end to the very name of the western Roman empire, 470. 563.

Omar propagates Mohammed's religion, 362. the many kingdoms he subdued, ibid. invests Jerusalem, and it surrenders, ibid.

Onias, removed by Antiochus Epiphanes from the high priesthood, 275.

Oldcastle, Sir John, prosecuted for being the principal patron of the Lollards, 512.

examined before the archbishop of Canterbury, ibid. his strong declarations against transubstantiation and other doctrines, ibid. asserts the pope to be Antichrist, ibid. suffers death for the cause of religion, 512.

Origen, what that learned writer relates about Antichrist, 401.

Ostrogoths, their kingdom in Italy, 470.

Othmans, or Turks, subdue Egypt, 171, 305. take Jerusalem, 365, 366. their sultanies or kingdoms, 479, 480. their conquests, 481. the Jews to be restored about the time of the fall of this empire, 608. See Turks.

P.

Paris, the massacre of the protestants there, 492. the many thousands slain in a few days, 492.

Paris, Matthew, that historian freely censures the great wickedness of the pope and clergy, 509.

Paschasius Radbertus, in the ninth century, first advances the doctrine of transubstantiation, 496. opposed by many learned men, ibid.

Pergamus, its situation and present state, 442, 443. formerly the throne of Satan, and now in a wretched condition, ibid.

Pella, the Christians remove thither before the destruction of Jerusalem, 335.

Persecution, the spirit of popery, 104. the Jews greatly persecuted in popish countries, ibid. dissuaves from it, ibid. the persecutions of the Christians before the destruction of Jerusalem, 329.

Persian empire, why compared to a bear, 193, 194. its great cruelty, 194. why likened to a ram, 227.

Philadelphia, its beautiful situation, 444. next to Smyrna hath the greatest number of Christians among the former seven churches, ibid.

Pococke (Dr.) his account of the Arabians, 26. of Tyre, 149.

Pope of Rome, the marks of the Man of Sin justify the application of it to him, 393, &c. how his power was at first established, 395—398. the reformers of opinion that the pope was Antichrist, 403, 404. he forbids to speak of the coming of Antichrist, 404. the evidences of the pope being Antichrist, 401—404. the apostacy established by the pope, 421. the pope the image and representation of the beast, 536. is first elected and then worshipped, ibid. as great a tyrant in the Christian world as the Roman emperors in the heathen world, ibid. popish excommunications like heathen persecutions, 537, 538.

Popery prevails in the ninth century, 495.

- the opposition it met with, 495—497. the great corruption of Christianity, 599. many prophecies relating to the prevailing of popery, 594. the predictions represented in one view, ibid. its tyranny and idolatry foretold, ibid. the blasphemy of popery in the pope's making himself equal to, and even superior to God, 595. the power and riches of the popish clergy, 596. the pomp of their ceremonies and vestments, ibid. their policy, lies, and frauds, ibid. their pretended visions and miracles, ibid. intimations of popery in the New Testament, 597, &c. not only foretold, but the place and persons pointed out, 599. instances of this, 603. the time also signified, ibid. when to arise and how long to prevail, 604—606. the tyrannical power often called Antichrist, 606. the corruptions of popery being foretold, we are not to be surprised or offended at them, 611.
- Porphyry and Collins deny the genuineness of Daniel's prophecies, which are sufficiently vindicated, 173, 174. their notions refuted, 198, 202.
- Prophecy, a dissertation on Noah's prophecy, 5—17. the prophecies concerning Ishmael, 17—29. concerning Jacob and Esau, 29—37. Jacob's prophecies concerning his sons, particularly Judah, 37—50. Balaam's prophecies, 50—68. Moses's prophecy of a prophet like unto himself, 68—76. prophecies of Moses concerning the Jews, 77—87. prophecies of other prophets concerning the Jews, 87—105. the prophecies concerning Nineveh, 105—119. the prophecies concerning Babylon, 119—136. the prophecies concerning Tyre, 136—152. the prophecies concerning Egypt, 153—173. Nebuchadnezzar's dream of the great empires, 173—191. Daniel's vision of the same, 191—215. Daniel's vision of the ram and he-goat, 224—251. Daniel's prophecy of the things noted in the Scripture of truth, 252—284. the same subject continued, 284—314. prophecy, a dissertation on our Saviour's prophecies relating to the destruction of Jerusalem, 314—334. the same subject continued, 334—352. the same subject continued, 352—367. the same subject continued, 368—376. St. Paul's prophecy of the Man of Sin, 377—406. St. Paul's prophecy of the apostasy of the latter times, 406—427. on the prophecies of the Revelation, Part I. 428—517. Part II. 518.
- Prophecies relating to popery recapitulated, 594—625. prophecies, one of the strongest proofs of revelation, 1. the consequence from believing prophecies to believing revelation, ibid. the prophecy of Noah not to be understood of particular persons, but of whole nations, 8. the gift of it not always confined to pious men, 50, 51. many prophecies have both a literal and mystical meaning, 52. prophecies, why the Jewish church instructed by prophets, and not the Christian, 314. some prophecies of Christ, concerning himself and the destruction of Jerusalem, 315, 316. a view of the prophecies now fulfilling in the world, 613, 614. instances of prophecies fulfilled, attestations of divine revelation, 623. prophecies, the great difference between them and the Pagan oracles, 312, 313.
- Providence, confirmed by the completion of prophecies, 313. the many absurdities of denying a providence, 314.
- Ptolemy, the first of Egypt, a powerful king, 256.
- Ptolemy Philadelphus, the second king of Egypt, 257. called the dowry giver, 258. his care of his daughter, 259.
- Ptolemy Philometer, the great calamities of his reign, 277, 278. the Alexandrians revolt from him, and proclaim his brother king, 278.
- Ptolemy Philopator, defeats Antiochus, 262, 263. murders his nearest relations, 263. consumes his days in feasting and lewdness, ibid. his vicious conduct and cruelty to the Jews, 264. dies of intemperance and debauchery, 264.
- Pythius, the richest subject in the world, 253. entertains Xerxes, and offers to defray the charges of the war, ibid.

R.

- Rabanus Maurus, in the ninth century, writes against transubstantiation, 496.
- Ram and he-goat, a dissertation on that vision, 224. why the Persian empire is represented by a ram, 227. the exploits of the ram, 228, &c. a goat properly a type of the Grecian empire, 228, &c. the goat invades the ram with great success, 230. the empire of the goat broken to pieces, 236, 254. what arose after it, 237.
- Reuben, Jacob's prophecy concerning that tribe, how fulfilled, 40.
- Redemption, the first promise of that great blessing, 5. that promise may be called the first prophecy and opening of Christianity, ibid.
- Reformation, the first efforts towards it by emperors and bishops, 541, 542. another by the Waldenses and Albigenses, 504—508. a third by Luther and his fellow reformers, 515, 545.
- Reinerius, the Dominican, his remarkable character of the Waldenses, 505.
- Revelation, the prophecies a strong proof of it, 1, 2. the evidence drawn from the prophecy, a growing evidence, 3. the objections made to the book of Revelation by some learned men, 429. difficult to ex-

- plain, yet not to be despised or neglected, 429, 430. the right method of interpreting it, 430. what helps requisite, 431. the three chief interpreters of this book, ibid. the scope and design of it given to St. John at Patmos in Nero's reign, 432—436. his first vision and description of Jesus Christ, 436—440. the dedication to the seven churches of Asia, 432. its solemn preface to show the great authority of the Divine Revealer, 433. the place, the time, and manner of the first vision, 432—440. the seven epistles to the seven churches, 437—446. the vision of the throne set in heaven, 446. of that of the book sealed with seven seals, 448, 449. that the Son of God was only found worthy to open the seals, 449. the visions of the six seals considered, 449—464. the seventh seal opened, 465. it comprehends more events than the former seals, 465. the seven trumpets, 465—486. vision of the great red dragon, 521—526. of the ten-horned beast, 526—532. of the two-horned beast, 533—540. the seven vials, 548—555. the fall of spiritual Babylon or Rome, 556—567. the millennium, 575—582. the general resurrection and judgment, and new heaven and earth, 584—587.
- Roman empire compared to a terrible beast without a name, 196, 197. this beast had ten horns, 198. these ten horns or kingdoms, where to be sought, 201, &c. the opinion of authors about them, 199, 200, &c.
- Rome, that church a surprising mystery of iniquity, 428. its heresies and schisms of long continuance, ibid. the power of the pope of Rome foretold in Scripture, 428, 429. when Rome was governed by the exarch of Ravenna, 471. resembles Egypt in her punishment as well as in her crimes, 551. her fall compared to Babylon, 556. her state and condition, ibid. the character of the great whore of Babylon, more proper to modern than ancient Rome, 557, 558. her sitting upon a scarlet-coloured beast with seven heads and ten horns, ibid. her ornament, 558. her enchanting cup, 557, 558. her inscription upon her forehead, 559, 560. her being drunk with the blood of the saints, 560. what signified by the seven heads and ten horns, 562—565. the prophecies relating to the church of Rome the most essential part of the Revelation, 593. its corruptions and innovations foretold, 594—597. her clergy like the Scribes and Pharisees in several instances, 598. their usurped power foretold, and the place and persons pointed out, 594, 599—603. the time of its power foretold, 603. its destruction will certainly come, 606—612.
- S.
- Saladin, proclaimed sultan in Egypt, 364. besieges and takes Jerusalem, ibid. compels the Christians there to redeem their lives, ibid.
- Saracens descended from Ishmael, 18. 24. as locusts overspread the earth, 472. when they made their greatest conquests, 474, 477. See Arabians.
- Sardis, the capital of Lydia, 444. at present in ruins, ibid. in a deplorable state as to religion, ibid.
- Savonarola, his zealous preaching and writing against the vices of the Roman clergy, 515. endures imprisonment, tortures, and death, with constancy, ibid.
- Sawtre, a parish priest, first burnt for heresy in England, 512.
- Scopas, his great success in Cælo-Syria and Palestine, 266. is afterwards forced to surrender to Antiochus, 267.
- Scotus Johannes, writes upon the Eucharist by the command of the emperor, 497. his opinion against the doctrine of transubstantiation, ibid. invited to England by king Alfred, and preferred, ibid.
- Scriptures, the fulfilment of the prophecies a convincing argument of their divinity, 135. friendly to liberty, 136. and the love of our country, ibid.
- Seals, the book sealed with seven seals, 448. the Son of God only found worthy to open it, 449, 450. the seven seals signify so many periods of prophecy, 449. the first memorable for conquest, 450. the second, its commencement and continuance, 451—453. the third seal for what characterised, 453. the fourth seal for what distinguished, 455. the fifth seal remarkable for the tenth general persecution, 458, 459. the sixth seal for great changes and revolutions, 459. its continuance from Constantine to Theodosius, 462—465. the seventh seal distinguished by the sounding of the seven trumpets, 465. seals foretold the state of the Roman empire before it became Christian, 466.
- Seleucidæ and Lagidæ, not the fourth kingdom mentioned in Daniel, 180, 181.
- Seleucia, renders Babylon desolate, 130. is called Babylon by several authors, ibid.
- Seleucus, the first of Syria, a most potent king, 257.
- Seleucus Ceraunus, his short and inglorious reign, 261.
- Seleucus Callicinus, his sons, and their pompous appellations, 259—261.
- Seleucus Philopator, succeeds his father Antiochus, 272. a raiser of taxes all his days, 272. sends his treasurer to commit sacrilege in the temple of Jerusalem, ibid. is destroyed by him, 273.
- Septimus Severus, a just and provident emperor, 453, 454.

Shalmaneser, carried the ten tribes into captivity, 106.

Shaw (Dr.) his account of the Arabians, 25. of Palestine, 98, 99. of Tyre, 151.

Shem and Japheth, their good behaviour on their father's drunkenness, 5, 6. the blessings promised upon them and their posterity, 12, 13. how fulfilled both in former and latter times, 13, 14. 613. the promises of Japheth's dwelling in the tents of Shem explained and fulfilled, 14.

Sherlock (Bp.) his exposition of Jacob's prophecy chiefly followed, 42, &c.

Shiloh, shown to be the Messiah in the various senses of the word, 44, 45.

Sidon, an ancient city, celebrated by Homer and other poets, 138. 267.

Simeon and Levi, Jacob's prophecy about these two tribes, and how fulfilled, 40, &c.

Smyrna, the second epistle to the seven churches addressed to them, 440, 441. its situation and commerce, 441. its present state as to religion, ibid.

Soul, that it grew prophetic near death, an opinion of great antiquity, 37, 38.

South and North, kings of, who to be understood by them, 256. 300—302.

Star out of Jacob, and a sceptre out of Israel, that prophecy explained, 58—62.

Spirit, the gifts and graces of the Holy Spirit often described by springs of water, 225.

Spon (Dr.) his remark about the church of Philadelphia, 445.

States or nations, seldom ruined without preceding signs, 333. many awful signs from the sins of this nation, 334.

Sulpicius Severus, his exposition of Nebuchadnezzar's dream, 188, 189.

T.

Tacitus, his account of the prodigies before the destruction of Jerusalem, 328.

Tamerlane, his great conquests, 365. visits Jerusalem, ibid.

Tertullian, his opinion of the Man of Sin, 400. of the millennium, 580.

Theodoret, too much promotes the worship of saints, 417—419.

Thuanus, his character of the Waldenses, 507. his account of their sufferings and dispersion, 508.

Thyatira, a Christian church formerly there, this denied by some heretics, 443. its present condition an effect of the Divine judgments for their sins, 444.

Titus, surrounds Jerusalem with a wall, 338. commands the city and temple to be destroyed, 357. his wonderful preservation at the siege, 373.

Toledo, that council ordered the children of the Jews to be taken from them, 84.

Trajan and Severus, their attempts against Arabia repelled in an extraordinary manner, 23, 24. the wars and slaughters in the reigns of Trajan and his successors, 451, 452. the Jews subdued by him, 452.

Trofly, that council's good regulations, 498. differs from the spirit and principles of the council of Trent, ibid.

Trumpets, the seven periods distinguished by the sound of seven trumpets, 465. silence of half an hour previous to their sounding, ibid. foreshow the condition of the Roman empire after it became Christian, 466. the design of the trumpets, ibid. the events at the sounding of the first trumpet, 466, 467. at the sounding of the second, 467, 468. at the sounding of the third, 469. at the sounding of the fourth, 470. the three following distinguished by the name of the woe-trumpets, 471. the events at the sounding of the fifth, 471—478. at the sounding of the sixth trumpet, 479, &c. an account of the seventh trumpet, 516, &c.

Turks, a part of Daniel's prophecy supposed to refer to the destruction of their empire, 305—309. their four kingdoms on the river Euphrates, 479. their numerous armies, especially their cavalry, 482. their delight in scarlet, blue, and yellow, 482. the use of great guns and gunpowder among them, 482, 483. their power to do hurt by their tails, 483. See Othmans.

Tyre, prophecies concerning it, 136. its fall predicted by Isaiah and Ezekiel, 136. the prophecies relate to both old and new Tyre, 137. a very ancient city, 138. the daughter of Sidon, but in time excelled the mother, 139. in a flourishing condition when the prophet foretels her destruction for her wickedness, ibid. the particulars included in the prophecies about it, 140. the city taken and destroyed by Nebuchadnezzar and the Chaldeans, 140—142. the inhabitants to pass over the Mediterranean, but to find no rest, 142—144. the city to be restored after seventy years, 144. to be taken and destroyed again, 145—147. the people to forsake idolatry, and become converts to the true religion, 147—149. the city at last to be totally destroyed, and become a place for fishers to spread their nets upon, 149. these prophecies to be fulfilled by degrees, 149, 150. a short account from the time of Nebuchadnezzar to the present time, 149, 150. the accounts given by three writers, 150, 151. this account concluded with reflections upon trade, 152.

V.

Vials, seven, a preparatory vision to their being poured out, 548—550. these seven plagues or vials belong to the last trumpet, and not yet fulfilled, 549. seven

- angels appointed to pour out the seven vials, 550. the commission to pour them out, 551. the first vial or plague, ibid. the second and third, 551. the fourth, 552. the fifth, 553. the sixth, 553, 554. the seventh and last, 554, 555.
- Vitranga, his opinion about a passage in Balaam's prophecy, 59. a most excellent commentator upon Isaiah, 147. one of the best interpreters of the Revelation, 431.
- Voltaire, his account of the present state of Palestine, 96. an agreeable yet a superficial writer, 429.

W.

- Waldenses and Albigenses, witnesses for the truth in the twelfth century, 503. their rise and opinions, 504—507. testimonies concerning them, 505—508. are very much persecuted, and fly into other countries, 508. pronounce the church of Rome to be apocalyptic Babylon, 544.
- Warburton, his exposition of the star out of Jacob, and sceptre out of Israel, 61. his account of the figurative language used in foretelling the destruction of Jerusalem, 354, &c.
- Wetstein, his explication of the Man of Sin refuted, 389—391. complimented his understanding to cardinal Quirini, 390.
- Wheler, his account of Smyrna, 442. he esteems an English priest an evangelist, ibid. his observation about the judgments on the seven churches of Asia, 446.
- Whitby, his scheme about the Man of Sin perplexed and confused, 388. and refuted, 388, 389. professes not to understand the Revelation, 429.
- White horse, our Saviour cometh forth riding on one, 573. a token of victory over his enemies, 574.
- White throne, the general resurrection and judgment represented by it, 584.
- Wickliff, preaches against the doctrines and lives of the clergy, 510. his books read in the colleges at Oxford, 511. after his death his doctrines condemned, books burnt, and body dug up and burnt, 512. his followers however not discouraged, ibid.
- Witnesses, protest against the corruptions of religion, 488. why said to be two witnesses, ibid. to prophesy in sackcloth during the grand corruption, ibid. the character of these witnesses, and of the power and effect of their preaching, 489. their passion, death, resurrection, and ascension, 489—493. the prophecy about the witnesses applied by some to John Huss and Jerome of Prague, 491. and by others to the Protestants of the league of Smalcald, ibid. also to the massacre of the Protestants in France, 492. others to later events, to the Protestants in the valleys of Piedmont, 493. an historical deduction showing true witnesses against the church of Rome from the seventh century to the Reformation, 494, &c. witnesses in the eighth century, 494. in the ninth, 495—497. in the tenth, 498—500. in the eleventh, 500—502. in the twelfth, 502—507. in the thirteenth, 507—509. in the fourteenth, 509—511. in the fifteenth, 512—515. in the sixteenth, 515, 516. hence an answer to the popish question, Where was your religion before Luther? 516.

- Woman, clothed with the sun and the moon under her feet, 520. what this representation of the church denotes, 520. woman, full of names of blasphemy, sitting on a beast, having seven heads and ten horns, 557, 558. the name written on her forehead, 559. the judgment of the great whore, 557. is arrayed in purple and scarlet colour, 558. hath a golden cup in her hand full of abominations, ibid. the inscription upon her forehead, 559. infamous for idolatry and cruelty, 560, 561. the mystery of the woman, 561—567.
- World, what meant by the phrase of the end of the world, 321, 322. its reference to the destruction of Jerusalem, ibid.

X.

- Xerxes, the richest king of Persia, 253. his memorable expedition into Greece, 253. raises the greatest army that was ever brought into the field, 254.

Z.

- Zebulon, Jacob's prophecy concerning that tribe, and how fulfilled, 40.
- Zephaniah, that prophet foretels the total destruction of Nineveh, 116. the prophecy contrary to all probability, ibid.

THE END.

LONDON :

GILBERT & RIVINGTON, PRINTERS, ST. JOHN'S-SQUARE.

WORKS

PUBLISHED BY

J. & J. J. DEIGHTON,

(AGENTS TO THE UNIVERSITY,)

CAMBRIDGE.

CLASSICAL.

I.

ÆSCHYLUS.

Recensuit JACOBUS SCHOLEFIELD, A.M. Coll. SS. Trin. nuper Socius, et Græcarum Literarum Professor Regius.

Second Edition. 8vo. 12s.

This Edition includes the Seven Tragedies and Fragments, with Notes and Indexes, complete in one volume.

II.

APPENDIX ad Editionem ÆSCHYLI

Cantabrigiensem novissimam.

Confecit JACOBUS SCHOLEFIELD, A.M. &c. 8vo. 1s. 6d.

III.

ÆSCHYLI PROMETHEUS VINCTUS.

The Text of Dindorf, with English Notes, compiled and abridged by JOHN GRIFFITHS, M.A. Fellow of Wadham College, Oxford.

8vo. cloth boards, 5s.

IV.

ÆSCHYLI SEPTEM CONTRA THEBAS.

The Text of Dindorf, with Notes, compiled and abridged by JOHN GRIFFITHS, M.A. Fellow of Wadham College, Oxford.

8vo. cloth boards, 5s.

V.

ARISTOPHANIS COMŒDIÆ,
CUM SCHOLIIS ET VARIETATE LECTIONIS.

Recensuit IMMANUEL BEKKERUS.

Accedunt Versio Latina, Deperditarum Comœdiarum Fragmenta,
Index locupletissimus, Notæque Brunckii, Reisigii, Beckii, Dindorfii, Schutzi, Bentleii, Dobreii, Porsoni, Elmsleii, Hermannii, Fischeri, Hemsterhusii, Kuinoeleii, Hopfneri, Conzii, Wolfii, &c.

5 vols. 8vo. £2. 12s. 6d. Large paper, £5. 5s.

To be had separately:

PLUTUS; NUBES; RANÆ; AVES.

VI.

RICARDI PORSONI NOTÆ IN ARISTOPHANEM,

quibus PLUTUM COMŒDIAM partim ex ejusdem Recensione, partim e Manuscriptis emendatam, et variis Lectionibus instructam præmisit, et Collationum Appendicem adjecit P. P. DOBREE, A.M. Collegii SS.
Trinitatis Socius, et Græcarum Literarum apud Cantab. Professor Regius.

In one large vol. 8vo. 10s. 6d.

A few copies are printed on large paper, £1. 1s.

VII.

CAMBRIDGE CLASSICAL EXAMINATIONS.

A Collection of Extracts and of Miscellaneous Questions proposed to Candidates for Classical Honours in the University, from the year 1810 to 1823.

By a late REGIUS PROFESSOR of GREEK.

Second Edition, 8vo. 4s. 6d.

VIII.

TABLE OF GREEK VERBS.

An Engraved Table, with a Description, in letter-press, for finding the Commencements, Characteristics, and Regular Inflexions of Greek Verbs.
To which is added, a comprehensive List of the Inflexions common and peculiar to Verbs Regular, Verbs in μ , and Verbs Contracted.

By T. CASTLE, Esq. F.L.S. of Trinity College. 3s. 6d.

IX.

DAWESII MISCELLANEA CRITICA.

Typis quinquies excusa prodeunt ex recensione et cum Notis aliquanto auctoribus, THOMÆ KIDD, A.M. e Coll. SS. Trin. &c.

8vo. Edit. Secunda. 6s.

X.

PETRI PAULI DOBREE, A.M.

Græcarum Literarum nuper Professoris Regii, ADVERSARIA,

edente JACOBO SCHOLEFIELD, A.M. Tomi primi pars prior, 8vo. 7s.
tomi primi pars posterior, 6s. 6d.; tomus posterior, 8vo. 10s.

XI.

LEXICON RHETORICUM CANTABRIGIENSE, e Margine MS. Harpocratonis, Bibl. Publ. Cantab. D.D. 4. 63.

Exscripsit eo consilio ut ederetur, P. P. DOBREE, A.M. Græcarum Literarum nuper Professor Regius. 8vo. sewed, 1s. 6d.

XII.

MISCELLANEOUS NOTES ON INSCRIPTIONS.

By the late PROFESSOR DOBREE, with some Addenda to his Adversaria. 8vo. sewed, 4s.

XIII.

ELMSLEIANA CRITICA,

sive Annotationes, Scenicorum linguam ususque quantum attinet, in Fabulis Græcis à P. Elmsleio olim editis obviæ; selegit, suisque et aliorum Notis illustravit F. E. GRETTON, M.A. Coll. Div. Joh. Socius, et in Ludo Oakhamiensi alter e Præceptoribus. Pars Prior.

Notas in Euripidis Heracleidas, Medeam, et Bacchas continens.

7s. 6d.

XIV.

EURIPIDIS TRAGÆDIÆ,

priores quatuor, ad fidem Manuscriptorum emendatæ et brevibus Notis emendationum potissimum rationes reddentibus instructæ, edidit R. PORSON, A.M. &c.

Recensuit suasque Notulas subjecit JACOBUS SCHOLEFIELD,

8vo. Edit. Secunda. 14s.

XV.

HERODOTI HALICARNASSEI HISTORIARUM,

Libri IX. codicem Sanscrofti Manuscriptum denuo contulit, necnon reliquam lectionis varietatem commodius digessit Annotationes variorum adjecit

THOMAS GAISFORD, A.M. Gr. Ling. Prof. Reg. Oxon.

4 vols. 8vo. Second Edition, £2. 12s. 6d.

The Text may be had separately in two vols. £1. 4s.

XVI.

Q. HORATHI FLACCI OPERA

ad exemplar recens. Benteleianæ plerumque emendata et brevibus notis instructa.

Edidit THOM. KIDD, A.M. e coll. SS. Trin. Cant.

Small 8vo. 7s. 6d.; Large paper, 15s.

XVII.

The TWENTY-FIRST BOOK of TITUS LIVIUS, from the Text of Drakenborch; with Notes, original and selected, a Literal Translation, and an Appendix of illustrative matter.

To the whole is prefixed an account of the Life and Writings of the Author.

By a GRADUATE. 8vo. 9s.

XVIII.

A NEW AND COMPLETE GREEK GRADUS, OR, POETICAL LEXICON OF THE GREEK LANGUAGE, with a Latin and English Translation; an English Vocabulary; and a Treatise on some of the Principal Rules for ascertaining the Quantity of Syllables, and on the most popular Greek Metres.

By EDWARD MALTBY, D.D. F.R.S. F.S.A. 8vo. £1. 4s.

XIX.

THE PHILOLOGICAL MUSEUM.

Nos. I. II. III. IV. V. and VI. 5s. each.

XX.

SEALE'S ANALYSIS of the GREEK METRES.

Ninth Edition, corrected and improved. 8vo. 3s. 6d.

XXI.

C. CORNELII TACITI HISTORIÆ, ex edit. GABRIELIS BROTIER.

Locis Annalium, et Germaniæ, ab eo citatis, selectis, et additis; quibusdam etiam notis subjunctis ab edit. R. RELHAN, A.M. &c. 8vo. 12s.

XXII.

TACITUS de MORIBUS GERMANORUM, et de VITA AGRICOLÆ, ex edit. G. BROTIER.

Locis Annalium et Historiarum ab eo citatis, selectis, et additis curâ RICARDI RELHAN, A.M. &c.

A New Edition, considerably enlarged and improved, with Maps of Ancient Germany and Britain. 12mo. 5s. 6d.

XXIII.

THE THEATRE OF THE GREEKS.

A series of Papers relating to the HISTORY AND CRITICISM OF THE GREEK DRAMA.

Fourth Edit. with a new Introduction and other alterations.

By JOHN WILLIAM DONALDSON, M.A. Fellow of Trinity College.

8vo. 15s.

XXIV.

THEOCRITUS, GR. ET LAT.

ed. THEOPH. KIESSLING.

Accedunt præter Argumenta, Scholia, et Indices in THEOCRITUM, BIONIS, et MOSCHI CARMINA, Gr. et Lat., edidit HEINDORF; necnon M. Æmil. Porti Dictionarium Doricum Græco-Latinum totius Theocriti, Bionis, et Moschi, variorum opusculorum Interpretationum continens.

2 vols. 8vo. 10s. Large paper, £1. 1s.

XXV.

THUCYDIDES,

The Text according to Bekker's edition, with some Alterations, Illustrated by Maps taken from actual Surveys.

With English Notes, chiefly Historical and Geographical,

By THOMAS ARNOLD, D.D. Head Master of Rugby School, and late Fellow of Oriel College, Oxford. 3 vols. 8vo. £2. 8s.

XXVI.

THUCYDIDES,

de Bello Peloponnesiaco, Libri Octo. Ex recensione IMMANUELIS BEKKERI.
8vo. 12s.

XXVII.

ILLUSTRATIVE ESSAYS ON THE EUMENIDES of ÆSCHYLUS.

Translated from the German of C. O. MÜLLER. 8vo. 9s. 6d.

XXVIII.

SCHLEIERMACHER'S

INTRODUCTIONS TO THE DIALOGUES OF PLATO.

Translated from the German, by WILLIAM DOBSON, M.A. Fellow of Trinity College. 8vo. 12s. 6d.

XXIX.

M. A. PLAUTI MENÆCHMEI, cum Notis ac Glossario, ad textum præcipue Bothii, edidit JACOBUS HILDYARD, A.B. Coll. Christi Soc.

8vo. 5s.

XXX.

THE ELEMENTS OF SYRIAC GRAMMAR.

By the Rev. G. PHILLIPS, M.A. Fellow and Tutor of Queens' College, Cambridge.

8vo. 10s.

THEOLOGICAL.

XXXI.

THE GREEK TESTAMENT.

With English Notes, Critical, Philological and Exegetical.

By the Rev. S. T. BLOOMFIELD, D.D. F.S.A. Vicar of Bisbrooke, Rutland.

Second Edition, corrected, greatly enlarged, and considerably improved.

2 vols. 8vo. 2l.

XXXII.

THE GREEK TESTAMENT.

With English Notes.* By the late Rev. EDWARD BURTON, D.D. Canon of Christ Church, and Regius Professor of Divinity.

2 vols. 8vo. £1. 4s.

XXXIII.

NOVUM LEXICON Græco-Lat. in NOVUM TESTAMENTUM.

Congessit et variis Observationibus Philologicis illustravit

JOH. FRIED. SCHLEUSNER.

4to. £1. 1s.

XXXIV.

DISCOURSES ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS, and CHARGES delivered to the Clergy of the Archdeaconry of Winchester.

To which are added several never before published.

With Advice to an Unmarried Lady. By THOMAS BALGUY, D.D.

Edited by the Rev. JAMES DRAKE, M.A.

2 vols. 8vo. 12s.

XXXV.

AN INTRODUCTION

TO THE STUDY OF THE HOLY SCRIPTURES.

By E. BUSHBY, B.D. Fellow and Tutor of St. John's College.

12mo. 3s. 6d.

XXXVI.

THE ANALOGY OF RELIGION,

NATURAL AND REVEALED,

TO THE CONSTITUTION AND COURSE OF NATURE.

By BISHOP BUTLER.

With a Summary of the Arguments, and the style in some parts simplified.

By E. BUSHBY, B.D. Fellow and Tutor of St. John's College.

8vo. 6s.

XXXVII.

ESSAY ON THE HUMAN MIND.

By the Rev. E. BUSHBY, B.D. Fellow and Tutor of St. John's College.

Third Edition, enlarged, 4s. 6d.

XXXVIII.

EXAMINATION QUESTIONS

ON BUTLER'S ANALOGY OF NATURAL AND REVEALED RELIGION
TO THE CONSTITUTION AND COURSE OF NATURE,

As abridged and arranged in Hobart's Analysis.

Together with Brief Answers to the Questions, and a Summary View of the whole Subject, selected and compiled for the use of Students.

By GEORGE W. CRAUFURD, M.A. Fellow of King's College, Cambridge.

12mo. Second Edition, sewed, 2s. 6d.

XXXIX.

A TRANSLATION of the EPISTLES

OF CLEMENT OF ROME, POLYCARP, AND IGNATIUS; AND OF THE APOLOGIES OF JUSTIN MARTYR AND TERTULLIAN:

With an Introduction and brief Notes illustrative of the Ecclesiastical History of the first Two Centuries.

By the Rev. TEMPLE CHEVALLIER, B.D. late Fellow and Tutor of Cath. Hall.
8vo. 14s.

XL.

TWENTY DISCOURSES

Preached before the University of Cambridge,

in the year 1826, at the Lecture founded by the Rev. JOHN HULSE.

By the Rev. TEMPLE CHEVALLIER, B.D. late Fellow and Tutor of Cath. Hall.
8vo. 12s.

XLI.

TWENTY DISCOURSES

Preached before the University of Cambridge,

in the year 1827, at the Lecture founded by the Rev. JOHN HULSE.

By the Rev. TEMPLE CHEVALLIER, B.D. late Fellow and Tutor of Cath. Hall.
8vo. 12s.

XLII.

SERMONS

Preached before the University of Cambridge, during the month of February, 1836;

to which are added, TWO SERMONS, preached in Great St. Mary's Church, at the Evening Lecture.

By HENRY MELVILL, M.A. Minister of Camden Chapel, Camberwell, and late Fellow and Tutor of St. Peter's College, Cambridge.
Fourth Edition, 8vo. 5s.

XLIII.

SERMONS

Preached before the University of Cambridge, during the month of February, 1837;

to which are added, TWO SERMONS, preached in Great St. Mary's Church,
at the Evening Lecture.

By HENRY MELVILL, B.D. Minister of Camden Chapel, Camberwell, and late Fellow and Tutor of St. Peter's College, Cambridge.
Second Edition, 8vo. 5s.

XLIV.

A SKETCH of the CHURCH of the TWO FIRST CENTURIES
AFTER CHRIST,

drawn from the writings of the Fathers down to Clemens Alexandrinus, inclusive: in a COURSE of SERMONS delivered before the University of Cambridge.

By the Rev. JOHN J. BLUNT, B.D. late Fellow of St. John's College.
Foolscap 8vo. 6s. 6d.

XLV.

HEY'S LECTURES IN DIVINITY,

delivered in the University of Cambridge.

A New Edition, with a MEMOIR of the AUTHOR, and a SYLLABUS of the LECTURES.

4 vols. 8vo. £1. 16s.

XLVI.

An HISTORICAL ACCOUNT of the XXXIX. ARTICLES, from their first Promulgation, in 1553, to their final establishment in 1571,with a Copy of the Articles as put forth by King Edward in 1553, &c. &c.

from the Copies formerly belonging to Archbishop Parker.

By JOHN LAMB, D.D. Master of Corpus Christi College.

4to. £1. 5s.

XLVII.

ROBERTI LEIGHTON (Archiepiscopi Glasguensis)
PRÆLECTIONES THEOLOGICÆ, PARÆNESES, et MEDITATIONES, in PSALMOS IV. XXXII. CXXX. Ethico-Criticæ.

Editio Nova, ex recensione JACOBI SCHOLEFIELD, A.M. &c.

8vo. 8s. 6d.

XLVIII.

FISK'S (Rev. George) SERMONS,

Preached in the Parish Church of St. Botolph, Cambridge.

8vo. 10s. 6d.

XLIX.

THE ECCLESIASTICAL
HISTORY of the SECOND and THIRD CENTURIES;

illustrated from the Writings of TERTULLIAN.

By JOHN, BISHOP of LINCOLN, late Master of Christ's College, and Regius
Professor of Divinity in the University of Cambridge.Second Edition. 8vo. 13s.

L.

The DOCTRINE of the GREEK ARTICLE

Applied to the Criticism and Illustration of the New Testament.

By the Right Rev. THOMAS FANSHAW MIDDLETON, late Bishop of Calcutta.

Third Edition, with considerable Additions.

By the Rev. H. J. ROSE, B.D. Dean of Boocking.

8vo. 14s.

LI.

A DISCOURSE on the STUDIES of the UNIVERSITY,

by ADAM SEDGWICK, M.A. F.R.S., &c.

Woodwardian Professor, and Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge.

Fourth Edition, 8vo. 4s.

LII.

The TRUTH and OBLIGATION of REVEALED RELIGION, considered with Reference to prevailing opinions.

EIGHT DISCOURSES

Preached before the University of Cambridge, 1835, at the Lecture founded by the Rev. J. HULSE.

By the Rev. HENRY HOWARTH, B.D. late Fellow of St. John's College.

8vo. 5s. 6d.

LIII.

JESUS of NAZARETH, The CHRIST of GOD.

EIGHT DISCOURSES

Preached before the University of Cambridge, 1836, at the Lecture founded by the Rev. J. HULSE.

By the Rev. HENRY HOWARTH, B.D. late Fellow of St. John's College.

8vo. 5s. 6d.

LIV.

FOUR SERMONS,

Preached before the University of Cambridge.

By JOHN GIBSON, B.D. late Fellow and Tutor of Sidney Sussex College, and Curate of St. John's, Stratford, Essex.

8vo. sewed, 2s. 6d.

LV.

THE HISTORY OF THE RISE AND EARLY PROGRESS OF CHRISTIANITY.

Comprising an Inquiry into its True Character and Design.

By the Rev. SAMUEL HINDS, M.A. of Queens' College, and Vice-Principal of St. Alban's Hall, Oxford.

2 vols. 8vo., 17. 1s.

LVI.

EXAMINATION QUESTIONS
ON PALEY'S EVIDENCES OF CHRISTIANITY.

12mo. 2s. 6d.

LVII.

AN ANALYSIS OF PALEY'S EVIDENCES of CHRISTIANITY;

In the way of Question and Answer.

Designed for the use of Undergraduates of the University, and Students in Divinity in general.

By SAMUEL FENNELL, B.D. Fellow and Tutor of Queens' College.

Second edition, altered and enlarged, 2s. 6d.

LVIII.

A VINDICATION OF THE LITERARY CHARACTER of the late PROFESSOR PORSON,

From the Animadversions of the Rt. Rev. THOS. BURGESS, D.D. F.R.S. F.A.S. P.R.S.L. Lord Bp. of Salisbury. in various Publications, on 1 JOHN v. 7.
By CRITO CANTABRIGIENSIS.

8vo. 11s.

LIX.

NATURAL THEOLOGY

considered with reference to LORD BROUGHAM'S DISCOURSE on that Subject.
By THOMAS TURTON, D.D. Regius Professor of Divinity in the University of Cambridge, and Dean of Peterborough.
Foolscap 8vo. second edition, 8s.

LX.

The TEXT of the ENGLISH BIBLE, as now printed at the Universities, considered with reference to a Report by a Sub-Committee of Dissenting Ministers.

By THOMAS TURTON, D.D. Regius Professor of Divinity in the University of Cambridge, and Dean of Peterborough.
Second edition, corrected and greatly enlarged. 8vo. boards. 3s. 6d.

LXI.

A REVIEW OF

The PRINCIPAL DISSENTING COLLEGES in ENGLAND

during the last Century ; being a second and enlarged edition of the Author's Work on the ADMISSION of PERSONS, without regard to their Religious Opinions, to certain Degrees in the UNIVERSITIES of ENGLAND.
By the Rev. THOMAS TURTON, D.D. Regius Professor of Divinity, Cambridge, and Dean of Peterborough.
8vo. 4s.

LXII.

QUESTIONS

On the FOUR GOSPELS and the ACTS of the APOSTLES, Critical, Historical, and Geographical.

With reference to the respective Authors where the Answers may be found.
By a GRADUATE of the University of Cambridge.

12mo. 3s. 6d.

LXIII.

The STATE of the PROTESTANT RELIGION in GERMANY;

in a series of Discourses preached before the University of Cambridge.
By the Rev. HUGH JAMES ROSE, B.D. of Trinity College, and Vicar of Horsham, Sussex.

Second Edition, with Appendix, 8vo. 14s.The Appendix may be had separately, price 3s. 6d.

LXIV.

EIGHT SERMONS,

Preached before the University of Cambridge in the years 1830 and 1831.

By HUGH JAMES ROSE, B.D. of Trinity College, Christian Advocate, and Dean of Bocking.

Second Edition, 8vo. 7s. 6d.

LXV.

The COMMISSION and CONSEQUENT DUTIES of the CLERGY;

in a series of Discourses, preached before the University of Cambridge, in April, 1826.

By HUGH JAMES ROSE, B.D. &c.

Second Edition, enlarged. 8vo. 9s.

LXVI.

CHRISTIANITY ALWAYS PROGRESSIVE,

Being the Christian Advocate's Publication for the year 1829,

By HUGH JAMES ROSE, B.D. Christian Advocate in the University of Cambridge.

8vo. 8s. 6d.

LXVII.

The ROMAN CATHOLIC DOCTRINE of the EUCHARIST.

The Scriptural Argument considered, in reply to Dr. Wiseman.

By THOMAS TURTON, D.D. Regius Professor of Divinity in the University of Cambridge, and Dean of Peterborough.

8vo. 8s. 6d.

LXVIII.

ON THE FOUNDATIONS OF MORALS.

FOUR SERMONS

Preached before the University of Cambridge, Nov. 1837.

By the Rev. W. WHEWELL, M.A. Fellow and Tutor of Trinity College.

8vo. 3s.

LXIX.

HINTS FOR AN

IMPROVED TRANSLATION of the NEW TESTAMENT.

By the Rev. PROFESSOR SCHOLEFIELD, M.A.

Second Edition, with large Additions. 8vo. 4s.

LXX.

ARCHBISHOP USHER'S ANSWER to a JESUIT.

With other Tracts on Popery.

8vo. 13s. 6d.

LXXI.

S E R M O N S,

Preached before the University of Cambridge, and elsewhere.
By the Rev. T. THORP, M.A. Fellow and Tutor of Trinity College.
8vo. 5s.

LXXII.

SEVEN LETTERS ON NATIONAL RELIGION,

Addressed to the Rev. HENRY MELVILL, M.A. late Fellow and Tutor of St. Peter's College, Cambridge.

CONTENTS:—I. On the Principle of National Religion.—II. Exemplified in the Gentile State of Britain.—III. The Effect of the Apostolical Accession of the Church of Christ.—IV. The Operation of the Papacy.—V. The Principle of Protestantism with respect to the Papacy.—VI. The Principle of Protestantism with respect to Dissent.—VII. These Subjects in Connexion with the present Crisis.

By CHARLES SMITH, B.D.
Fellow and Tutor of St. Peter's College, Cambridge.
8vo. 7s. 6d.

LXXIII.

BRIANI WALTONI, S.T.P. in BIBLIA POLYGLOTTA

Prolegomena Specialia recognovit Dathianisque et Variorum Notis suas immiscuit FRANCISCUS WRANGHAM, M.A. F.R.S. Clevelandiæ Archidiaconus.
2 vols. 8vo. 1l. 8s.

LXXIV.

ARTICULI ECCLESIE ANGLICANÆ.

Textibus Scripturæ Patrum Testimoniis, brevibusque notis illustrati, Auctore EDV. WELCHMAN.
Huic Novæ Editioni Appendicis loco adjiciuntur Edvardi Sexti atque Articuli,
A.D. 1552, approbati.
8vo. 6s. 6d.

LXXV.

QUESTIONS on the GOSPELS

Of ST. MATTHEW, ST. MARK, ST. LUKE, and ST. JOHN; and on the ACTS of the APOSTLES;
Critical and Historical, according to Chapter and Verse; with numerous references, intended chiefly to direct the attention of Students in Theology.
By the Rev. RICHARD WILSON, M.A. late Fellow of St. John's College.
1 vol. 17s. 6d.
The Questions on the Gospels and on the Acts may be had separately, 3s. 6d. each.

MATHEMATICAL.

LXXVI.

AIRY's (Prof.) MATHEMATICAL TRACTS:

- | | |
|---|---------------------------|
| 1 Lunar and Planetary Theories. | 2 Figure of the Earth. |
| 3 Precession and Nutation. | 4 Calculus of Variations. |
| 5 Undulatory Theories of Optics and Theory of Polarization. | |

Designed for the Use of Students in the University.

Second edition, 8vo. 15s.

LXXVII.

ASTRONOMICAL OBSERVATIONS, made at the Observatory of Cambridge.

By Professor AIRY.

Vol. I. for the year 1828,	4to. 12s.
Vol. II. 1829,	12s.
Vol. III. 1830,	14s. 6d.
Vol. IV. 1831,	14s. 6d.
Vol. V. 1832,	15s.
Vol. VI. 1833,	15s.
Vol. VII. 1834,	15s.
Vol. VIII... .. 1835,	15s.

By Professor CHALLIS.

Vol. IX. for the year 1836, 4to. 1l. 5s.

LXXVIII.

BLAND's (Dr.) ALGEBRAICAL PROBLEMS.

8vo. Fifth edition, 10s. 6d.

LXXIX.

BLAND's (Dr.) GEOMETRICAL PROBLEMS.

To which is added,

The ELEMENTS of PLANE TRIGONOMETRY.

8vo. Second edition, 12s.

LXXX.

BLAND's (Dr.) TREATISE on HYDROSTATICS.

8vo. Second edition, 12s.

LXXXI.

BROOKES's SYNOPSIS of the PRINCIPAL FORMULÆ and RESULTS of PURE MATHEMATICS.

8vo. 15s.

LXXXII.

BROWNE's SHORT VIEW of the FIRST PRINCIPLES of the DIFFERENTIAL CALCULUS. 8vo. 9s.

LXXXIII.

CARNOT's REFLECTIONS on the METAPHYSICAL PRINCIPLES of INFINITESIMAL ANALYSIS.
Translated by the Rev. W. R. BROWELL, M.A. Fellow of Pembroke College, Oxford. 5s.

LXXXIV.

CODDINGTON's TREATISE
ON THE REFLEXION AND REFRACTION OF LIGHT.
Being Part I. of a SYSTEM of OPTICS. 8vo. plates, 15s.

LXXXV.

CODDINGTON's TREATISE on the EYE, and on OPTICAL INSTRUMENTS.
Being Part II. of a SYSTEM of OPTICS. 8vo. plates, 5s.

LXXXVI.

CODDINGTON's INTRODUCTION TO THE DIFFERENTIAL CALCULUS, ON ALGEBRAIC PRINCIPLES.
8vo. 2s. 6d.

LXXXVII.

CONIC SECTIONS.
The ELEMENTS of the CONIC SECTIONS, with the SECTIONS of the CONOIDS. 8vo. Third Edition. 4s. 6d.

LXXXVIII.

CRESSWELL's (Dr.) TREATISE of GEOMETRY, containing the first Six books of Euclid's Elements, methodically arranged, and concisely demonstrated; together with the Elements of Solid Geometry.
8vo. 14s.

LXXXIX.

CRESSWELL's (Dr.) PROBLEMS in GEOMETRY.
Second Edition, corrected and enlarged. 8vo. 12s.

XC.

CRESSWELL's (Dr.) ELEMENTARY TREATISE
ON MAXIMA and MINIMA.

To which is added, 2 PLATES
A Selection of Propositions deducible from Euclid's Elements.
8vo. Second edition, 12s.

XCI.

CRESSWELL's (Dr.) TRANSLATION of VENTUROLI's ELEMENTS of PRACTICAL MECHANICS.
With a Treatise upon the Principle of Vertical Velocities, and its uses in Mechanics. 8vo. plates, 8s.

XCII.

CRESSWELL's (Dr.) ELEMENTS of LINEAR PERSPECTIVE.
8vo. 6s.

XCIII.

CUMMING's (Prof.) MANUAL of ELECTRO-DYNAMICS, chiefly translated from the French of J. F. DEMONFERRAND, with Alterations and Additions, comprehending the latest Discoveries and Improvements.
8vo. plates, 12s.

XCIV.

EARNSHAW's DYNAMICS;
Or, An ELEMENTARY TREATISE ON MOTION; with a great variety of Examples, illustrative of the general Principles and Formulæ. To which is added, a Short Treatise on Attractions.
8vo. 8s.

XCV.

EARNSHAW's DIFFERENTIAL CALCULUS.
Observations on the Notation of Differential Calculus:
containing a new Exposition of the First Principles of the Calculus of Differential Coefficients, and of the Calculus of Differentials.
8vo. 1s. 6d.

XCVI.

EARNSHAW's Comprehensive TREATISE on STATICS, with numerous Examples illustrative of the general Principles and Theorems of the Science. 8vo. 14s.

XCVII.

EUCLID's ELEMENTS.
viz. the first Six Books, together with the Eleventh and Twelfth:
also the book of Euclid's Data, by ROBERT SIMSON, M.D. 8vo. 8s.; 12mo. 6s.

XCVIII.

The ELEMENTS of EUCLID,
the first Six Books, and the Eleventh and Twelfth, from the Text of ROBERT SIMSON, M.D.
edited in the Symbolical Form, by R. BLAKELOCK, M.A.
Fellow of Catharine Hall, Cambridge. 12mo. 7s.

XCIX.

A LECTURE-ROOM EDITION of the ABOVE, interleaved for Notes. 12mo. cloth boards, 10s. 6d.

C.

A COMPANION to EUCLID:

being a help to the understanding and remembering of the first Four Books, with a set of improved Figures.

And an ORIGINAL DEMONSTRATION of the PROPOSITION called in EUCLID the TWELFTH AXIOM. By a GRADUATE. 12mo., cloth boards, 4s.

CI.

FENNELL's Elementary TREATISE on ALGEBRA, designed to facilitate the Acquirement of the first Principles of the Science.

8vo. 9s.

CII.

HAMILTON's PRINCIPLES of ANALYTICAL GEOMETRY.

8vo. plates, 14s.

CIII.

HAMILTON's ANALYTICAL SYSTEM of CONIC SECTIONS.

Fourth Edition, improved and enlarged. 8vo.

CIV.

HIND'S ELEMENTS of ALGEBRA;
designed for the Use of Students in the University.

Third Edition.

CV.

HIND's

ELEMENTS of PLANE and SPHERICAL TRIGONOMETRY; with the Nature and Properties of Logarithms, and the Construction and Use of Mathematical Tables.

Designed for the Use of Students in the University.

Third Edition, 12mo. 7s. 6d.

CVI.

HYMERS's TREATISE on ANALYTICAL GEOMETRY of THREE DIMENSIONS, containing the Theory of Curve Surfaces, and of Curves of Double Curvature.

Second Edition, altered and enlarged. 8vo. plates, 10s. 6d.

CVII.

HYMERS's TREATISE on the INTEGRAL CALCULUS.

Part I. containing the Integration of Explicit Functions of one Variable; together with the Theory of Definite Integrals and of Elliptic Functions.

8vo. Second edition, enlarged, 10s.

CVIII.

HYMERS'S TREATISE on the THEORY of ALGEBRAICAL EQUATIONS. 8vo. 8s. 6d.

CIX.

HYMERS'S TREATISE on PLANE TRIGONOMETRY, and on TRIGONOMETRICAL TABLES and LOGARITHMS.

8vo. 5s.

CX.

A COLLECTION of EXAMPLES on the INTEGRAL CALCULUS.

In which every operation of such Example is completely effected ;
by a Member of the University. 8vo. 5s. 6d.

CXI.

JARRETT'S (Prof.)
ESSAY ON ALGEBRAICAL DEVELOPMENT.

8vo. 8s. 6d.

CXII.

KELLAND'S MATHEMATICAL THEORY of HEAT.

CXIII.

LA CROIX'S ELEMENTARY TREATISE on the MATHEMATICAL PRINCIPLES of ARITHMETIC.

Translated from the French. 8vo. 5s.

CXIV.

MADDY'S PLANE ASTRONOMY.

Second edition, corrected and enlarged.

By J. HYMERS, M.A. Fellow of St. John's College. 8vo. 14s.

CXV.

MILLER'S TREATISE on the DIFFERENTIAL CALCULUS.

Second edition, enlarged, 8vo. 6s.

CXVI.

MILLER'S ELEMENTS of HYDROSTATICS and HYDRODYNAMICS.

Second edition, enlarged. 8vo. 6s.

CXVII.

MURPHY'S ELEMENTARY PRINCIPLES of the THEORY of ELECTRICITY.

Designed for Students in the University. 8vo. 7s. 6d.

CXVIII.

MYERS'S ELEMENTARY
TREATISE on the DIFFERENTIAL CALCULUS.
8vo. 2s. 6d.

CXIX.

A SYLLABUS OF A COURSE of LECTURES upon TRIGONOMETRY, and the Application of ALGEBRA and GEOMETRY.
Second Edition, considerably altered.
8vo. 7s. 6d.

CXX.

PRATT'S MATHEMATICAL PRINCIPLES OF MECHANICAL PHILOSOPHY, and their Application to the Theory of Universal Gravitation.
8vo. plates, £1. 1s.

CXXI.

STEVENSON'S THEORY of ALGEBRAIC EQUATIONS.
Containing the Principal Theorems of Fourier's Treatise on that Subject.
Second Edition. 8vo. 6s. 6d.

CXXII.

NEWTON'S LUNAR THEORY Exhibited ANALYTICALLY.
By RICHARD STEVENSON, B.A. Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge.
8vo. 3s.

CXXIII.

TATTERSHALL'S ELEMENTARY TREATISE
On the DIFFERENTIAL and INTEGRAL CALCULUS.
8vo. 10s. 6d.

CXXIV.

TRANSACTIONS Of the CAMBRIDGE PHILOSOPHICAL SOCIETY.

4to. with plates.

Vol. I. Part 1, 17.	Vol. IV. Part 1, 15s.
Vol. I. Part 2, 17. 10s.	Vol. IV. Part 2, 17. 1s.
Vol. II. Part 1, 18s.	Vol. IV. Part 3, 12s.
Vol. II. Part 2, 18s.	Vol. V. Part 1, 10s.
Vol. III. Part 1, 17. 11s. 6d.	Vol. V. Part 2, 14s.
Vol. III. Part 2, 2s. 6d.	Vol. V. Part 3, 12s.
Vol. III. Part 3, 3s.	Vol. VI. Part 1, 13s.
	Vol. VI. Part 2, 13s.

CXXV.

WAUD'S (S. W.)
TREATISE on ALGEBRAICAL GEOMETRY.

8vo. 5s. 6d.

CXXVI.

WEBSTER'S PRINCIPLES of HYDROSTATICS,

With their Practical Applications.
Designed for the use of Students in the University.

8vo. 9s.

CXXVII.

WEBSTER'S THEORY
Of the EQUILIBRIUM and MOTION of FLUIDS.

8vo. 9s.

CXXVIII.

WHEWELL'S ELEMENTARY TREATISE on MECHANICS.

Designed for the use of Students in the University.

8vo. Fifth Edition, plates, 10s. 6d.

CXXIX.

WHEWELL'S DYNAMICS on

The FREE MOTION of POINTS AND ON UNIVERSAL GRAVITATION, including the Principal Propositions of Books I. and III.

of the PRINCIPIA ;

The first part of a New Edition of a Treatise on Dynamics.

Third Edition, 8vo. 10s. 6d.

CXXX.

WHEWELL

on the CONSTRAINED and RESISTED MOTION of POINTS, and on the MOTION of a RIGID BODY.

The second part of a New Edition of Dynamics.

8vo. 12s. 6d.

CXXXI.

WHEWELL'S INTRODUCTION to DYNAMICS.

Containing the Laws of Motion and the first Three Sections of the Principia.

8vo. 4s. 6d.

CXXXII.

WHEWELL'S ANALYTICAL STATICS, being the Supplement to the Fourth Edition of AN ELEMENTARY TREATISE ON MECHANICS.

8vo. 7s. 6d.

CXXXIII.

WHEWELL's DOCTRINE of LIMITS, with its Applications; namely, The First Three Sections of Newton—Conic Sections—The Differential Calculus.

8vo. 9s.

CXXXIV.

WHEWELL's MECHANICAL EUCLID, containing the ELEMENTS of MECHANICS and HYDROSTATICS, demonstrated after the manner of the ELEMENTS of GEOMETRY, and including the Propositions recently fixed upon by the University, as requisite for the B.A. Degree.
Designed for the use of Universities.

Second Edition, 5s. 6d.

CXXXV.

WILSON'S
SYSTEM of PLANE and SPHERICAL TRIGONOMETRY.
To which is added, A TREATISE ON LOGARITHMS.

8vo. 10s. 6d.

CXXXVI.

WOOD's (Dr.) ELEMENTS of ALGEBRA.

8vo. Tenth Edition, 7s.

CXXXVII.

WOOD's (Dr.) PRINCIPLES of MECHANICS.

8vo. Sixth Edition, 5s.

CXXXVIII.

WOOD's (Dr.) ELEMENTS of OPTICS.

8vo. Fifth Edition, 6s.

CXXXIX.

WOODHOUSE's (Prof.) TREATISE on ASTRONOMY, Theoretical and Practical.

2 vols. 8vo. Second Edition, 1l. 10s.

CXI.

WOODHOUSE'S (Prof.)
TREATISE on PLANE and SPHERICAL TRIGONOMETRY.

8vo. Fifth Edition, considerably enlarged, 12s.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CXLI.

AN ESSAY ON THE ARCHITECTURE OF THE MIDDLE AGES, particularly of ITALY, with fifteen Plates.

By R. WILLIS, F.R.S. &c., and late Fellow of Caius College.

Demy 8vo. Price 10s. 6d.

A few copies are printed, royal 8vo. with Proof Impressions of the Plates on India Paper, price 1l. 1s.

CXLII.

ARCHITECTURAL NOTES on GERMAN CHURCHES.

A New Edition. To which is now added,

ARCHITECTURAL NOTES, written during a Tour in Picardy and Normandy.

By W. WHEWELL, M.A. F.A.S., Fellow of Trinity College.

8vo. 10s. 6d.

CXLIII.

A HISTORY of the INDUCTIVE SCIENCES,

From the EARLIEST TIMES to the PRESENT.

By the Rev. WILLIAM WHEWELL, M.A. F.R.S. &c. Fellow and Tutor of Trinity College, Cambridge.

3 vols. 8vo. 2l. 2s.

CXLIV.

ON THE PRINCIPLES Of ENGLISH UNIVERSITY EDUCATION;

By the Rev. WILLIAM WHEWELL, M.A. F.R.S. &c. Fellow and Tutor of Trinity College, Cambridge.

8vo. 5s.

CXLV.

The SCHOOL of the HEART, and other POEMS.

By HENRY ALFORD, Curate of Ampton, Suffolk, and Fellow of Trinity College.

2 vols. small 8vo. 8s.

CXLVI.

The CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY CALENDAR,

For the Year 1838. 6s. Continued Annually.

CXLVII.

The CAMBRIDGE GUIDE,

Including Historical and Architectural Notices of the Public Buildings, and a Concise Account of the Customs and Ceremonies of the University, with a Sketch of the Places most worthy of Remark in the County.

A New Edition, illustrated by Thirty-two beautiful engravings, from Drawings by Mackenzie.

CXLVIII.

CAMBRIDGE PRIZE POEMS.

A complete Collection of such English Poems as have obtained the Annual Premium instituted in the University of Cambridge, by the Rev. T. SEATON, M.A.

2 vols. small 8vo. 12s.

CXLIX.

THIRTY-EIGHT VIEWS of the PRINCIPAL PUBLIC BUILDINGS in the UNIVERSITY of CAMBRIDGE,

Taken expressly for the Cambridge University Almanack, 11in. by 17.

CL.

CANTABRIGIA ILLUSTRATA:

A series of Forty-four VIEWS of the PRINCIPAL BUILDINGS of the UNIVERSITY and TOWN of CAMBRIDGE, with brief Historical and Descriptive Notices.

8vo. cloth boards, lettered, 1l. 11s. 6d. 4to. 2l. 12s. 6d. 4to. with Proof Impressions on India Paper, 3l. 13s. 6d.

CLI.

FLORA CANTABRIGIENSIS.

Exhibens Plantas Agri Cantabrigiensis indigenas, secundum systema sexuale digestas, cum characteribus genericis, diagnosi Specierum, synonymis selectis, nominibus trivialibus, loco natali, tempore inflorescentiæ, a RICARDO RELHAN, A.M., &c.

Third Edition; 8vo. plates, 12s.

CLII.

GRADUATI CANTABRIGIENSIS:

Sive Catalogus, exhibens nomina eorum quos, ab anno 1659, usque ad decimum diem Octobris 1823; Gradu quocunque ornavit Academia Cantabrigiensis:
e Libris Subscriptionum desumptus, atque ordine Alphabetico compositus. 8vo. 12s.

CLIII.

A CATALOGUE of the LIBRARY of QUEENS' COLLEGE, in the University of Cambridge, methodically arranged.

By THOMAS HARTWELL HORNE.

2 large vols. royal 8vo. 3l. 3s. boards.

The Impression was limited to Two Hundred and Fifty Copies, of which ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY only were for sale.

CLIV.

THE BOOK RARITIES of the UNIVERSITY of CAMBRIDGE.

Illustrated by Original Letters and Notes, Biographical, Literary, and Antiquarian.

By the Rev. C. H. HARTSHORNE, M.A. 8vo. numerous plates, 10s. 6d.

CLV.

A MANUAL of BRITISH VERTEBRATE ANIMALS;

Or, Descriptions of all the Animals belonging to the classes Mammalia, Aves, Reptilia, Amphibia, and Pisces, which have been hitherto observed in the British Islands: including the domesticated, naturalized, and extirpated species: the whole systematically arranged.

By the Rev. LEONARD JENYNS, M.A.

Fellow of the Linnean, Zoological, and Entomological Societies of London; and of the Cambridge Philosophical Society. 8vo. 13s.

CLVI.

ENCYCLOPÆDIA METROPOLITANA.

PARTS I. to XLVI.

CONDITIONS.

This Work will consist of Twenty-five Volumes, or Fifty parts, quarto, in four principal Divisions:—1. Philosophy. 2. Science. 3. Biography, political and literary, arranged Chronologically. 4. Miscellaneous Knowledge. The Twenty-fifth being a volume of Index to the whole Work, which will, from the nature of the arrangement, contain many words not found in the Miscellaneous Division.

The price of each Part, in boards, 1l. 1s., and on superfine royal paper, with proof impressions of the plates, 1l. 16s.

CLVII.

THE SPIRIT OF THE LAWS.

By the BARON DE MONTESQUIEU.

Translated from the French, by THOMAS NUGENT, LL.D.

A New Edition.

To which is prefixed, a Life of the Author, by M. D'ALEMBERT.
2 vols. 8vo. 12s.

CLVIII.

An ANALYSIS of PALEY's PRINCIPLES of MORAL and POLITICAL PHILOSOPHY.

By SAMUEL FENNELL, M.A. Fellow of Queens' College. 2s. 6d.

CLIX.

BROOKES' and WALKER's GAZETTEER United;

Edited by COLONEL LANDMANN. 8vo. 16s.

CLX.

WALKER REMODELLED.A New Critical Pronouncing Dictionary of the English Language, adapted to the Present State of Literature and Science: embodying the original Stores of Johnson, and the Additions of Todd and Webster, &c.

By B. H. SMART. 8vo. 15s.

